

COLLECTED LETTERS OF WILKIE COLLINS
DIGITAL EDITION 2024
PREFATORY MATERIAL

Abbreviations
Introduction
Chronology
Editorial Principles
Acknowledgements
Appendix: Tabular Data

ABBREVIATIONS

1. People

CAC	Charles Allston Collins, the author's brother
CD	Charles Dickens
HC	Harriet Collins, the author's mother
WC	Wilkie Collins
WmC	William Collins, the author's father

2. Manuscript Sources

Abbreviation	Location
Arents	Arents Collection, New York Public Library
Baylor	Armstrong Browning Library, Baylor University, Waco, Texas
Beccles	Beccles and District Museum, Suffolk
Benjamin	Private ownership (Mike Benjamin)
Berg	Henry W. & Albert A. Berg Collection, New York Public Library
Bergen	Universitetsbiblioteket i Bergen (University of Bergen Library), Norway
Berlin	Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin, Preußischer Kulturbesitz Handschriftenabteilung
Bigelow	Bigelow Family Papers, New York Public Library
Birmingham CA	Birmingham City Archives
Birmingham UL	Birmingham University Library
BL	British Library, London
BNF	Bibliothèque Nationale de France, Paris
Bodleian	The Bodleian Library, Oxford
Bolton	Bolton Central Library, Bolton, Lancashire
Boston	Boston Public Library, Boston, Massachusetts
Boston Ath	Boston Athenæum, Massachusetts
Bowker	Richard Rogers Bowker Collection, New York Public Library
Brigham Young	L. Tom Perry Special Collections, Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah.
Buffalo	The Poetry Collection, University of Buffalo, New York
Buffalo HS	Buffalo and Erie County Historical Society, New York
Cadbury	Cadbury Research Library, University of Birmingham
Cambridge	Cambridge University Library
Canterbury	Sir Hugh Walpole Collection, The King's School, Canterbury
CDM	Charles Dickens Museum, London
CF	Comédie Française, Paris
Chicago	University of Chicago Library
Clarke Collection	Private ownership (Mrs Faith Clarke)
Collamer	The Collamer Miscellaneous Papers, New York Public Library
Collis	Private ownership (David Collis)
Columbia	Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Columbia University, New York
Congress	Library of Congress, Washington D.C.
Copenhagen	Det Kongelige Bibliotek (Royal Danish Library), Copenhagen
Cornell	Cornell University Law Library, Ithaca, New York
Coutts	Coutts Archives, Coutts & Co, London
Dartmouth	MacKaye Family Papers, Rauner Special Collections Library, Dartmouth College, Hanover, New Hampshire
De Coursey Fales	De Coursey Fales Papers, New York Public Library
Duke	William R. Perkins Library, Duke University, Durham, North Carolina
Dunedin	Heritage Collection, Dunedin Public Libraries, Otago, New Zealand
Edison	Edison Archives, Edison Papers, Rutgers University

Fales	The Fales Collection, New York University
Fitzwilliam	The Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge
Folger	Folger Shakespeare Library, Washington D.C.
Garnett	Private ownership (Richard Garnett)
Garrick	The Garrick Club, London
Georgia	Special Collections, University of Georgia Libraries
Girton	Girton College, Cambridge
Glasgow	The Mitchell Collection, Glasgow Public Library
Graham Heath	Private ownership (Graham Heath)
Hanes	Private ownership (Susan R. Hanes)
Harkness	Mary Stilman Harkness Papers, New York Public Library
Harrowby	Harrowby Manuscripts Trust, Sandon, Staffordshire
Häusser	Private ownership (Professor Robert Häusser, Mannheim)
Hertford	Hertfordshire Record Office, County Hall, Hertford
Holborn	Camden Local Studies and Archives Centre, Holborn Library, London
Houghton	The Houghton Library, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts
HSP	Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia
Huntington	The Henry E. Huntington Library, San Marino, California
Illinois	Rare Book & Special Collections Library, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign
Indiana	Lilly Library, Indiana University, Bloomington
Iowa	Manuscript Letters Collection, University of Iowa Libraries
Isserlis	Private ownership (Steven Isserlis)
Johns Hopkins	John Work Garrett Library, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland
Kansas	University of Kansas, Lawrence
Kentucky	Kentucky State University, Frankfort
Kraków	Jagiellonian University, Kraków
Le Kohns	Le Kohns Memorial Collection, New York Public Library
Leeds	Special Collections, Brotherton Library, University of Leeds
Lehigh	Special Collections, Lehigh University Libraries, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania
Leighton	Leighton Archive, Kensington Central Library, London
Lewis Collection	Private ownership (Paul Lewis)
Lincolnshire	Tennyson Research Centre, Lincolnshire Archives
Liverpool	Hornby Collection, Liverpool Central Library
LRO	Liverpool Record Office, Lancashire
Maine HS	Maine Historical Society, Portland
Manchester	Manchester Central Library, Manchester
Manx	Manx National Heritage, Archives and Public Library, Douglas, Isle of Man
Massachusetts HS	Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston
Melbourne	State Library of Victoria, Melbourne
Montague	Montague Collection, New York Public Library
Morgan	Morgan Library and Museum, New York
Morrab	Morrab Library, Penzance, Cornwall
Morris	Morris Collection, Princeton University Library, New Jersey
NA	National Archives, Kew, Richmond, Surrey
NAL	National Art Library, Victoria and Albert Museum, London
NAS	National Archives of Scotland, Edinburgh
Navarro	Private ownership (Michael de Navarro)
New Bedford	New Bedford Whaling Museum Archives, Massachusetts
NLS	National Library of Scotland, Edinburgh
Noel	Private ownership (Juliet Noel)
Norfolk	Norfolk Record Office, Norwich
Northumberland	Society of Antiquaries of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Northumberland Record Office
Nottingham	Nottinghamshire Archives Record Office, Nottingham
NYPL	Manuscripts and Archives Division, New York Public Library

Open University	Open University Archive, Open University, Walton Hall, Milton Keynes, MK7 6AA
Parrish	Morris L. Parrish Collection, Princeton University Library, New Jersey
Patterson	Judge John M. Patterson Archive, maintained by Ralph Jay Crawford, Jnr, and Bruce Jay Crawford, Secretary of the Grolier Club, New York
Pembroke	Pembroke College, Cambridge
Penn State	Mortlake Collection, Special Collections Library, Pennsylvania State University
Philadelphia	Rare Book Department, The Free Library of Philadelphia
Pike	Private ownership (Barry Pike)
Pocock	Private ownership (Tom Pocock)
Portsmouth	Central Library, Portsmouth, Hampshire
Preston	Harris Museum and Art Gallery, Lancashire Record Office, Preston
Private	Private ownership (undisclosed)
Putnam	Putnam Collection, Princeton University Library, New Jersey
Queensland	Edmund Yates Papers, Fryer Library, University of Queensland
Raine	Private ownership (Joseph Raine)
Reading	Chatto & Windus Archive, University of Reading
RLF	Royal Literary Fund Archive, British Library, London
Rochester	University of Rochester, New York
Ross	Private ownership (Steven P. Ross)
Rylands	John Rylands Library, University of Manchester
Sala	G. A. Sala Correspondence, Princeton University Library, New Jersey
Salomons	David Salomons's House, Southborough, Tunbridge Wells, Kent
Schiller	Deutsches Literaturarchiv, Schiller-Nationalmuseum, Marbach am Neckar
Shakespeare	Shakespeare Centre Library, Stratford-upon-Avon
Stanford	Stanford University Library, California
Swarthmore	Friends Historical Library, Swarthmore College, PA 19081
Sydney	State Library, Sydney, New South Wales
Syracuse	SCRC, Bird Library, Syracuse University, New York
Taylor	Taylor Collection, Princeton University Library, New Jersey
Texas	Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, University of Texas at Austin
Times	Times Archive, London
Toledo	Canaday Center, University of Toledo, Ohio
TPC	Theatre and Performance Collection, Blythe House, V&A, London
Trinity	Trinity College Library, Cambridge
UCLA	University of California at Los Angeles
UNC	Wilson Library, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Unknown	Manuscript untraced (Other source given: published version, facsimile, transcript, etc.)
UPenn	Rare Books and Manuscripts, Van Pelt-Detrich Library Center, University of Pennsylvania
Whitton Collection	Private ownership (Donald C. Whitton)
Wisbech	The Wisbech & Fenland Museum, Cambridgeshire
Wolff Collection	Robert Lee Wolff Collection, HRC, University of Texas at Austin
Worcester	Worcester College Archives, Worcester College, Oxford
Yale	Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Yale University

3. Published Letter Sources (*) and Other Works Frequently Cited

- * A&C The Collected Letters of Wilkie Collins: Addenda and Corrigenda, 1-11, London: Wilkie Collins Society, 2005-2017 (nos 1-3 in WCSJ, NS 8-10).
- Allen Vivien Allen, Hall Caine: Portrait of a Victorian Novelist, Sheffield: Sheffield Academic, c.1997.
- Altick Richard Altick, The English Common Reader, Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1957.
- ANB* American National Biography, ed. John A. Garraty and Mark C. Carnes, 24 vols, New York: Oxford University Press, 1999.
- * Anderson Mary Anderson, A Few Memories, London: Osgood, McIlvaine, 1896.
- * Archer Frank Archer, An Actor's Notebooks, London: Stanley Paul, [1912].
- * Bachman & Cox Wilkie Collins, Blind Love, ed. Maria K. Bachman and Don Richard Cox, Peterborough, Ontario: Broadview Press, 2004.
- * Bainton George Bainton, The Art of Authorship, London: J. Clarke & Co., 1890.
- * Baker 2001 William Baker, 'Wilkie Collins in the Parrish Collection', Princeton University Library Chronicle 62:3 (Spring 2001), pp. 501-518.
- * Baker 2002 William Baker, Wilkie Collins's Library: A Reconstruction, Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2002.
- * Bancroft 1888 Squire and Marie Bancroft, Mr and Mrs Bancroft On and Off the Stage, London: Bentley, 1888.
- * Bancroft 1909 Squire and Marie Bancroft, The Bancrofts: Recollections of Sixty Years, London: Murray 1909.
- * B&C The Letters of Wilkie Collins, ed. William Baker and William Clarke, 2 vols, London: Macmillan, London, 1999.
- * Bass Michael T. Bass, Street Music in the Metropolis: Correspondence and Observations on the Existing Law, and Proposed Amendments, London: Murray, 1864.
- * Beard Nathaniel Beard, 'Some Recollections of Yesterday', Temple Bar 102 (July 1894), pp. 315-339.
- * Beetz Kirk H. Beetz, 'Wilkie Collins and The Leader', Victorian Periodicals Review, 15:1 (Spring, 1982), pp. 20-29.
- * Bender J. Terry Bender, Six Letters of Wilkie Collins from the Charlotte Ashley Felton Memorial Library at Stanford University, San Francisco: Wood, 1957.
- * BGLL The Public Face of Wilkie Collins: The Collected Letters, ed. William Baker, Andrew Gasson, Graham Law, Paul Lewis, 4 vols, London: Pickering & Chatto, 2005.
- * Bigelow 1913 John Bigelow, Retrospections of an Active Life, vols IV-V, [ed. John Bigelow Jr], New York: Doubleday, Page, 1913.
- * Blain Virginia Blain, 'The Naming of No Name', WCSJ 4 (1984), pp. 25-29.
- Boase Frederic Boase, Modern English Biography, 6 vols, Truro: Netherton, 1892-1921.
- Bonham-Carter Victor Bonham-Carter, Authors by Profession: Vol.1. From the Introduction of Printing until the Copyright Act 1911, London: Society of Authors, 1978.
- * Bredsdorff Elias Bredsdorff, Hans Andersen and Charles Dickens, Cambridge: Heffer, 1956.
- * Brussel I. R. Brussel, Anglo-American First Editions, 1826-1900: East to West, London: Constable, 1935.
- * Caine Hall Caine, My Story, London: Heinemann, 1908.
- * Clareson Thomas D. Clareson, 'Wilkie Collins to Charles Reade; Some Unpublished Letters', in Victorian Essays: A Symposium, ed. Warren D. Anderson and Thomas D. Clareson, Kent, Ohio: Kent State University Press, 1966, pp. 107-124.
- * Clarke William M. Clarke, The Secret Life of Wilkie Collins, London: Alison & Busby, 1988.
- * Cobbe Francis Power Cobbe, Life of Frances Power Cobbe as Told by Herself, 2 vols, London: Bentley, 1894.
- * Coleman W.R. Coleman, The University of Texas Collection of the Letters of Wilkie Collins, Ph.D. Dissertation, University of Texas at Austin, 1975.

- * Compton-Rickett Arthur Compton-Rickett, 'Wilkie Collins', (London) Bookman 42 (June 1912), pp. 107–122.
- Cook Edward Dutton Cook, Nights at the Play: A View of the English Stage, London: Chatto & Windus, 1883.
- Copinger W. A. Copinger et al., The Law of Copyright (London: Stevens & Haynes, 2nd edition, 1881 / 3rd edition, 1893 / 4th Edition, 1904 / 5th Edition, 1915).
- Crockford* Crockford's Clerical Directory, London: 1858- (irregularly).
- DAB* Dictionary of American Biography, ed. Allen Johnson at al., 10 vols, New York: Scribner, 1928-58.
- Daly J. F. Daly, The Life of Augustin Daly, New York: 1917.
- * Davis Nuel Pharr Davis, The Life of Wilkie Collins, Urbana: University of Illinois Press: 1956.
- * Dawick John Dawick, Pinero, A Theatrical Life, Boulder: UP of Colorado, Colorado, 1993.
- * 'Death' 'Death of Mr. Wilkie Collins', Daily Telegraph (24 September 1889), p. 3a-b.
- * Dunkel Wilbur Dwight Dunkel, Sir Arthur Pinero: A Critical Biography with Letters (Chicago: U. of Chicago Press, [1941]).
- * Ellis S. M. Ellis, Wilkie Collins, Le Fanu and Others, London: Constable, 1931.
- * Farmer 1996 Steve Farmer, ed, Heart and Science by Wilkie Collins, Peterborough, Ontario: Broadview Press, 1996.
- * Farmer 1999 Steve Farmer, ed, The Moonstone by Wilkie Collins, Peterborough, Ontario: Broadview Press, 1999.
- Field Kate Field, Charles Albert Fechter, Boston: James R. Osgood & Co., 1882.
- Fleming Gordon H. Fleming, John Everett Millais: A Biography, London: Constable, 1998.
- * Flower Desmond Flower, 'Authors and Copyright in the Nineteenth Century, with Unpublished Letters from Wilkie Collins', The Book-Collector's Quarterly 7 (July-Sep. 1932) pp. 1-35.
- Gasson Andrew Gasson, Wilkie Collins: An Illustrated Guide, Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1998.
- Gasson & Baker 'Forgotten Terrain: Wilkie Collins's Jewish Explorations', Jewish Historical Studies 48 (2016), pp. 177-199.
- Gettmann Royal A. Gettmann, A Victorian Publisher: A Study of the Bentley Papers, Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1960.
- * Griest Guinevere L. Griest, Mudie's Circulating Library and the Victorian Novel, Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1970.
- GV* Hilmar Schmuck and Willi Gorzny, Gesamtverzeichnis des Deutschsprachigen Schrifttums (GV): 1700-1910, 25 vols, Munich: K. G. Saur, 1981.
- Haight The George Eliot Letters, ed. Gordon S. Haight, 9 vols, New Haven, CT: Yale UP, 1954-1978.
- * Hall The Letters of Anthony Trollope, ed. N. John Hall, 2 vols, Stanford, CAL: Stanford University Press, 1983.
- Hanes 2008 Susan R. Hanes, Wilkie Collins's American Tour, 1873-4, London: Pickering & Chatto, 2008.
- * Hayne William H. Hayne, 'Some Unpublished Letters of Wilkie Collins', (New York) Bookman 27 (March 1913), pp. 66-70.
- * Hogarth & Dickens The Letters of Charles Dickens, edited by his Sister-in-law and his Eldest Daughter, 2 vols, London: Chapman & Hall, 1880.
- * Hollingshead John Hollingshead, My Lifetime, 2 vols, London: Sampson Low, 1895.
- * Homewood Bill Homewood, Theatrical Letters, London: Marginalia Press, 1995.
- Hunt William Holman Hunt, Pre-Raphaelitism and the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, 2 vols, London: Macmillan, 1905.
- * Hutton Letters of Charles Dickens to Wilkie Collins, 1851-1870, ed. Lawrence Hutton, London: Osgood, McIlvaine, 1892.
- * Hyder Clyde K. Hyder, 'Wilkie Collins in America', Studies in English, in Honor of Raphael Dorman O'Leary and Selden Lincoln Whitcomb, Lawrence, Kansas: University of Kansas, 1940, pp. 50-58.

- Johanningsmeier Charles Johanningsmeier, Fiction and the American Literary Marketplace, Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1997.
- Johnson-Woods Toni Johnson-Woods, Index to Serials in Australian Periodicals and Newspapers: Nineteenth Century, Canberra: Mulini Press, 2001.
- * Joline A. H. Joline, Meditations of an Autograph Hunter, New York: Harper & Bros, 1902.
- * Kitton Frederic G. Kitton, The Minor Writings of Charles Dickens, London: Elliot Stock, 1900.
- Law Graham Law, Serializing Fiction in the Victorian Press, New York: Palgrave, 2000.
- * Lawrence Keith Lawrence, 'The Religion of Wilkie Collins: Three Unpublished Documents,' Huntington Library Quarterly 52:3 (Summer 1989) pp. 389-402.
- * Layard George Somes Layard, Shirley Brooks of Punch: His Life, Letters, and Diaries, New York: Holt, 1907.
- * Lehmann R.C. Lehmann, Memories of Half a Century, London: Smith, Elder, 1908.
- * Lewis Paul Lewis, 'Images of Wilkie', The Wilkie Collins Pages, URL: <www.web40571.clarahost.co.uk/wilkie/wilkieimages/wcimages.htm>.
- Lohrli Anne Lohrli, Household Words: Table of contents, List of Contributors and their Contributions, Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1973.
- * Lycett Andrew Lycett, Wilkie Collins: A Life of Sensation, London: Hutchinson, 2013.
- * MacKaye Percy MacKaye, Epoch: The Life of Steele MacKaye, 2 vols, New York: Boni & Liveright, 1927.
- * Marks & Löwy David Woolf Marks and Albert Löwy, Memoir of Sir Francis Henry Goldsmid, Bart., Q.C., M.P., London: Paul, Trench, 1879.
- * Marston Edward Marston, After Work: Fragments from the Workshop of an Old Publisher, London: Heinemann, 1904.
- * Meyler Bernadette A. Meyler, 'Wilkie Collins' Law Books: Law, Literature, and Factual Precedent', in Secrets of Law, ed. Austin Sarat et al., Stanford: Stanford UP, 2007, pp. 135-170.
- * Millais John Guille Millais, The Life and Letters of Sir John Everett Millais, 2 vols, London: Methuen, 1899.
- * Moore A Man of Letters in the Nineteenth-Century South: Selected Letters of Paul Hamilton Hayne, ed. Rayburn S. Moore, Baton Rouge: Louisiana State University Press, 1982.
- Morley Henry Morley, Journal of a London Playgoer, 1851-1866, London: Routledge, 1891.
- Nicoll Allardyce Nicoll, A History of Late Nineteenth Century Drama, 1850-1900, 2 vols, Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1946.
- * Noakes Vivien Noakes, Edward Lear 1812-1888, London: Royal Academy of Arts, with Wiedenfeld & Nicholson, 1985.
- Nowell-Smith Simon Nowell-Smith, International Copyright Law and the Publisher in the Reign of Queen Victoria, Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1968.
- ODNB Oxford Dictionary of National Biography, Oxford University Press Online edition: <www.oxforddnb.com>
- * Otto Der Verlag Bernhard Tauchnitz 1837-1912, ed. Kurt Otto, Leipzig: Tauchnitz, 1912.
- Page Wilkie Collins: The Critical Heritage, ed. Norman Page, London: Routledge, 1974.
- * Parrish & Miller M. L. Parrish with E. V. Miller, Wilkie Collins and Charles Reade: First Editions Described with Notes, London: Constable, 1940.
- * Patten Robert L. Patten, Charles Dickens and His Publishers, Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1978.
- * Payn & Collins 1870 [James Payn and Wilkie Collins], 'A National Wrong', Chambers's Journal, 47:320 (12 February 1870), pp. 107-110.
- * Payn & Collins 2004 James Payn and Wilkie Collins, A National Wrong, ed. Andrew Gasson, Graham Law and Paul Lewis, London: Wilkie Collins Society, 2004.
- * Peters Catherine Peters, The King of Inventors, London: Secker & Warburg, 1991.
- Picker John Picker, Victorian Soundscapes, Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2003.
- * Pilgrim The Letters of Charles Dickens (Pilgrim Edition), ed. Madeline House, Graham Storey, et al., 12 vols, Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1965-2002.
- * Priestley Eliza Chambers Priestley, The Story of a Lifetime, London: Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner, 1908.
- * Pudney John Pudney, The Smallest Room, London: Michael Joseph, 1954.

- * Pym Horace Noble Pym, A Tour Round My Bookshelves, Edinburgh: privately printed, 1891.
- * Reade Alfred Arthur Reade, Study and Stimulants: or, The Use of Intoxicants and Narcotics in Relation to Intellectual Life, Manchester: Heywood, 1883.
- * Reade & Reade Charles L. Reade and Compton Reade, Charles Reade, Dramatist, Novelist, Journalist: A Memoir, 2 vols, London: Chapman & Hall, 1887.
- * Reeve 1889 Wybert Reeve, 'Personal Recollections of Wilkie Collins', (Melbourne) Argus, 12 October 1889, p. 4d-g.
- * Reeve 1891 Wybert Reeve, 'Personal Recollections of Wilkie Collins', From Life (Melbourne: George Robertson, 1891; London: F.V. White, 1892), pp. 105-119.
- * Reeve 1906 Wybert Reeve, 'Recollections of Wilkie Collins', Chambers Journal, 16 June 1906, pp. 458-461.
- * Reid T. Wemyss Reid, The Life, Letters, and Friendships of Richard Monckton Milnes, 2 vols, London: Cassell, 1890.
- * Robinson 1893 Charles Robinson, 'The Confessions of an Autograph-Hunter', Cosmopolitan (January 1893), pp. 305-313.
- * Robinson 1951 Kenneth Robinson, Wilkie Collins: A Biography, London: Bodley Head, 1951.
- Sadleir 1922 Michael Sadleir, Excursions in Victorian Bibliography, London: Chaundy & Cox, 1922.
- * Sadleir 1948 Michael Sadleir, 'The Camel's Back', in Essays Mainly on the Nineteenth Century, ed. G. F. G. Cumberledge, Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1948, pp. 127-149.
- Sadleir 1951 Michael Sadleir, XIX Century Fiction: Passages from the Autobiography of a Bibliomaniac, 2 vols, London: Constable, 1951.
- * Sayers Dorothy L. Sayers, Wilkie Collins: A Critical and Biographical Study, ed. E. R. Gregory, Toledo, Ohio: Friends of the University of Toledo Libraries, 1977.
- * Sherbo 1992 Arthur Sherbo, 'Further Matters English in The Critic (1881-1906)', Review of English Studies 43:170 (May 1992), pp. 194-226.
- * Sherbo 1993 Arthur Sherbo, 'From The Bookman of London', Studies in Bibliography 46 (1993) pp. 349-357.
- * Shore W. Teignmouth Shore, Charles Dickens and his Friends, London: Cassell, 1909.
- * Smith & Terry Wilkie Collins to the Forefront: Some Reassessments, ed. Nelson Smith and R.C. Terry, New York: AMS Press, 1995.
- Stephens John Russell Stephens, The Profession of the Playwright: British Theatre 1800-1900, Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1992.
- Storey Gladys Storey, Dickens and Daughter, London: Frederick Muller, 1939.
- * Story Alfred Thomas Story, The Life of John Linnell, 2 vols, London: Bentley, London, 1892.
- * Sucksmith Wilkie Collins, The Woman in White, ed. Harvey P. Sucksmith, Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1975.
- Sutherland John Sutherland, The Stanford Companion to Victorian Fiction, Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press, 1989.
- * Taylor Wilkie Collins, The Law and the Lady, ed. Jenny Bourne Taylor, Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1992.
- Thompson Wilkie Collins: The Complete Shorter Fiction, ed. Julian Thompson, London: Robinson, 1995.
- Todd & Bowden William B. Todd and Ann Bowden, Tauchnitz International Editions in English, 1841-1955: A Bibliographical History, New York: Bibliographical Society of America, 1988.
- Topp Chester Topp, Victorian Yellowbacks and Paperbacks, 1849-1905, 7 vols, Denver, Colo.: Hermitage Antiquarian Bookshop, 1993-2003.
- VFRG Victorian Fiction Research Guides, 1-36, Victorian Fiction Research Unit, University of Queensland, 1979-2012, URL: <www.victoriansecrets.co.uk/category/vfrgs/>.
- * Ward Mrs E. M. [Henrietta] Ward. Memories of Ninety Years, ed. Isabel G. McAllister, London: Hutchinson, 1924.
- Waterloo Waterloo Directory of English Newspapers and Periodicals, ed. John S. North, 10 vols, Waterloo, Ontario: North Waterloo Academic Press, 1997.
- * Watt Letters Addressed to A. P. Watt, London: A. P. Watt, 1894.
- WCSJ Wilkie Collins Society Journal (annual, 1-, 1981-; NS 1-, 1998-).

- Weedon Alexis Weedon, 'Watch This Space: Wilkie Collins and New Strategies in Victorian Publishing in the 1890s', Victorian Identities, ed. R. Robbins & J. Wolfreys, London: Macmillan, 1996, pp. 163-183.
- * Whiting Lilian Whiting, Kate Field: A Record, London: S. Low, 1899.
- * Whitton Donald C. Whitton, The Grays of Salisbury, San Francisco: East Wind Publishers, 1976.
- * Winter 1909 William Winter, Old Friends: Being Literary Recollections of Other Days, New York: Moffat, Yard, 1909.
- Winter 1913 William Winter, The Wallet of Time: Containing Personal, Biographical, and Critical Reminiscence of the American Theatre, 2 vols, New York: Moffat, Yard, 1913.
- * Wolff Robert Lee Wolff, Nineteenth Century Fiction: A Bibliographical Catalogue, Volume I, New York: Garland Publishing, 1981.
- Wood Christopher Wood, Dictionary of Victorian Painters, 2 vols, Woodbridge: Antique Collectors Club, 1995.
- * Wolzogen Ernst von Wolzogen, Wilkie Collins: Ein Biographisch-kritischer Versuch, Leipzig: Unflad, 1885.

INTRODUCTION

This digital edition of the collected correspondence of Wilkie Collins incorporates and updates two earlier series by the same editors: the just under 3,000 letters included in the four volumes of The Public Face of Wilkie Collins: The Collected Letters (Pickering & Chatto, 2005); and the over 350 letters gradually added between 2005 and 2017 in the eleven numbers of The Collected Letters of Wilkie Collins: Addenda and Corrigenda issued by the Wilkie Collins Society, initially in the pages of the Wilkie Collins Society Journal. The process of updating includes a large number of corrections and revisions to both the letter transcripts and the accompanying editorial material, including in not a few cases changes involving the recipient and/or the dating. This is particularly so with the selection of nearly 600 letters initially published almost twenty years ago in The Letters of Wilkie Collins (2 vols; Macmillan, 1999), edited by William Baker and William M. Clarke. With few exceptions, these appeared in The Public Face of Wilkie Collins only in summary form, but here all appear complete within the sequence, while the transcriptions and annotations alike have now been thoroughly revised.

An important element of the updating process has been to allocate to each letter a permanent, unique number, in order to facilitate identification and cross-referencing. The numbers run in ascending order as the letters have been published. So the 2987 letters listed in The Public Face are numbered as published in sequence in those volumes. The numbers then continue sequentially for the new letters in subsequent Addenda and Corrigenda in chronological order. The letters in ‘Last Things’ in Public Face Vol. IV between WC’s relatives and friends during his final illness and after have also been numbered as [X001] to [X011]. One more was added as [X012] in A&C7 and a second [X013] in A&C13.

Any subsequent revisions to dating or deletions of identified letters do not change the assigned number. Hence, as detailed in ‘Deleted Letters’ found at the end of the sequence, the following eleven unique numbers remain as blanks in the series:

- * [0229], [2975], [2977], and [2979], representing four letters identified in The Public Face which were subsequently deleted by A&C3, pp. 62, 65, and 69;
- * [3097] and [3294], single letters identified in earlier ‘Addenda’ issues but deleted respectively by A&C8, p. 25, and A&C11, p. 20;
- * [0100], [3184], and [3198], three further previously identified letters deleted in the course of the preparation of the first digital edition.

* [3223] and [3306] previously published in A&C8 and A&C10 were identified as duplicates and deleted by A&C14, p. 33.

In addition to these deletions a number of previously identified letters have been divided into two or more separate items, resulting in the following five extracted letters introduced in A&C11:

* [3323], [3325], [3326], [3328], and [3333].

The numbering is summarised in the following table.

Publication	Sequence	Pages	Numbers
Public Face I	Chronological	3-335	[1]-[614]
Public Face II	Chronological	3-430	[615]-[1400]
Public Face III	Chronological	3-455	[1401]-[2245]
Public Face IV	Chronological	3-382	[2246]-[2972]
Public Face IV	Letter fragments	383-385	[2973]-[2981]
Public Face IV	Last Things	387-393	[X001]-[X011]
Public Face IV	Addenda	401-404	[2982]-[2987]
'Addenda' (1) 2005	Chronological	WCSJ VIII 48-54	[2988]-[2998]
'Addenda' (2) 2006	Chronological	WCSJ IX 59-68	[2999]-[3016]
'Addenda' (3) 2007	Chronological	WCSJ X 34-61	[3017]-[3076]
'Addenda' (4) 2008	Chronological	2-29	[3077]-[3116]
'Addenda' (5) 2009	Chronological	3-18	[3117]-[3146]
'Addenda' (6) 2010	Chronological	3-16	[3147]-[3171]
'Addenda' (7) 2011	Chronological in 2 sequences	5-36 37-45	[3175]-[3195], [X012] [3172]-[3199]
'Addenda' (8) 2013	Chronological	3-22	[3200]-[3232]
'Addenda' (9) 2014	MacKaye Anderson Others	3-16 17-28 29-33	[3233]-[3248] [3255]-[3270] [3249]-[3271]
'Addenda' (10) 2016	Chronological	3-21	[3272]-[3310]
'Addenda' (11) 2017	Chronological Extracted letters	3-15 16-18	[3311]-[3339] [3323]-[3333]
'Addenda' (12) 2018	Chronological Last Things	3-10	[3340]-[3373] [X013]
'Addenda' (13) 2020	Chronological	3-13	[3351]-[3373]
'Addenda' (14) 2023	Chronological	3-28	[3374]-[3409]

* * * * *

Wilkie Collins's career as an author spans more than four decades, covering all but the opening and closing stages of the reign of Queen Victoria. During that lengthy period his writings offer a crucial witness – second in importance perhaps only to those of his mentor, collaborator, friend and rival Charles Dickens – on the gradual and uneven emergence in Britain of a mass literary culture. In Collins's youth Scott still dominates the fictional firmament, although Dickens is already the rising star; by Collins's declining years, his ascendancy is eclipsed by the likes of Stevenson and Haggard. But in between, Collins's explorations of sensation and suspense, his investigations into the uncanny and the unorthodox, are as important as any in shaping the modern popular genres of mystery and romance. For much of the hundred years following his death in 1889, the only works by Wilkie Collins to receive any sustained attention were the four big sensation novels of the 1860s – The Woman in White, No Name, Armadale and The Moonstone, with the first and last always claiming the lion's share. Writing in 1927, T. S. Eliot was unusual in emphasizing the cultural legacy of the Victorian melodramatic imagination and in insisting that Dickens and Collins should be studied 'side by side'.¹ Today, thanks in large part to our growing fascination with the dark underside of Victorian respectability, all of the twenty-eight longer novels and nearly sixty short tales that Collins produced during his career are now accessible to general readers. However, his journalistic and collaborative writings, plus his works for the theatre – which dwell just as much on abuse, deformity, divorce, insanity, and murder – are by no means always well documented and can still be very difficult to obtain. Clearly a good deal of light is shed on these hidden corners of Collins's career by his extant personal letters, though up to now these have not been made available in a single continuous sequence. While new letters continue to surface, the preparation of the present digital edition indeed demonstrates that just short of three thousand three hundred and fifty items of correspondence have thus far been located in one form or another. While this remains only a fraction of the more than fourteen thousand extant letters written by Dickens, it still represents a substantial body of evidence concerning the hopes and fears of a key Victorian novelist at work and at leisure. Given the availability in digital form of the Pilgrim edition of The Letters of Charles Dickens, the twelfth and final volume of which appeared in book form in 2002, the time seems ripe to provide the means for studying the correspondence of the two side by side.

As a collection, Collins's surviving correspondence ranges from the seven-year old child's letter to his mother away at Brighton in the autumn of 1831 ([0001]) to the dying man's desperate appeal to his old doctor friend in the autumn of 1889 ([2972]). The correspondents themselves are active in an extraordinary range of cultural and social activities, and represent a wide variety of backgrounds and outlooks. The tone veers from the brisk and business-like – as in Collins's tart response to a review of The Queen of Hearts in the Athenaeum (26 October 1859, [0316]), to the painfully private – as in the note of commiseration to his cousin Annie Linsell (née Clunes) on the death of her mother (14 September 1888, [2890]).

¹ T. S. Eliot, 'Wilkie Collins and Dickens,' Times Literary Supplement (4 August 1927) pp. 525-526; reprinted in Selected

There are also, of course, significant gaps and blind spots. For example, there is only a single letter in draft form to the house of Longman ([2999]), which published Wilkie Collins's first book, the life of his father, the artist William Collins, though many of Wilkie's letters soliciting subscriptions from his father's distinguished friends and patrons have been preserved. No letters to the Pre-Raphaelite Brothers Holman Hunt and John Millais before the 1860s have surfaced, though we know that Collins was intimate with both from the late 1840s. With the possible exception of [1378], a farewell telegram as Collins set sail for North America in autumn 1873, still no letters have surfaced to Wilkie's two 'morganatic' partners,² Caroline Graves and Martha Rudd, or to his and Martha's three children, although there is evidence that a number were still in existence well after the author's death.³ The most significant gap, of course, is that only a handful of letters to Dickens himself have been preserved ([0091], [0364], [0293], [0593], [3001-3003]), most in fragmentary form. The rest – and altogether there must have been at least somewhere in the region of the 165 from Dickens to Collins that are recorded in the Pilgrim edition – were presumably among the mountains of correspondence destroyed by Dickens at a stroke in September 1860 and piecemeal thereafter.⁴

As for the blind spots, it must be admitted that Collins can make no claim to be a great intellectual force and there is little in the way of sustained engagement with contemporary debates in religion and science, philosophy or politics. Not infrequently we see him gamely riding hobby horses – for the rights of authors or married women, against the cult of athleticism or the practice of vivisection – but he is never in the vanguard of the active political movement in question. Of course, Collins is always au fait with what is 'in the news'. There are, say, early passing references to the Exposition Universelle in Paris or war in the Crimea, around the 1860s to the American Civil War or the Persian famine, or, in his final decade, to the dispatch of troops to Egypt or the death of Queen Victoria's Highland servant, John Brown. We gather here that he is a regular reader of the Times,

Essays (3rd Edition; London: Faber, 1951) pp. 460-470; here p. 461.

² The term 'morganatic', with its implication of class distinction between the partners, seems to have been that preferred by Collins himself, at least in the case of his relationship with Martha Rudd. It is found in a number of letters to male friends, with the first recorded case occurring in that to Fred Lehmann of 26 April 1876 ([1611]).

³ H. E. (Carrie) Bartley wrote as follows to A. P. Watt on 21 December 1898, more than three years after the death of her mother Caroline Graves: 'May I beg your kind attention for a little of your valuable time? You know I am now poor & naturally desirous of getting a little (or much) money, when I can. May I send you a lot of Mss notes and books of our dear Wilkie's & ask you to help me with your opinion as to whether I may destroy them & if they are worth anything. Do you think the letters he wrote to us during his American Tour, would be of any value – it is so long ago – will you advise me?' (Watt papers, Berg Collection, New York Public Library). In contrast, no specific trace of letters to Martha Rudd has emerged; indeed, we cannot even be certain of her level of literacy when she first encountered Collins.

subscribes to the evening Echo, and passes on literary weeklies like the Athenæum and literary monthlies like the Cornhill to his aged mother. But he consistently avoids the heavy quarterly reviews, whether the Whig Edinburgh, the Tory Quarterly or the Radical Westminster. He smugly advises his mother:

Whatever the critics may say, readers are certainly grateful for a story that interests them. So don't mind what the Quarterly Review, or any Review says. Or rather, do as I do – don't waste your time in reading them.

(to Harriet Collins, 18 June 1863, [0539])

Thus we look in vain in the letters for impassioned discussions of Mill or Carlyle, Darwin or Spencer, Newman or Huxley, Arnold or Morris, never mind Comte and Marx.

For all that, what we do have is evidence – measured in scores of letters – of a sustained dialogue with family members and relatives, with the companions made in youth (and often later with their partners and children), with new friends acquired on trips to Continental Europe or North America, with novelists, poets and painters, with playwrights, actors and theatre managers, with doctors, solicitors, and wine merchants, with publishers, editors, printers, copyists, and literary agents. Predictably, surviving correspondence with this last group is especially prominent. In addition there are hundreds of cases where there are only one or two letters to a single correspondent. Occasionally – as with Dickens – these are merely the fragments of a substantial relationship. More typically they bear witness to the growing fame of a writer who struggles to respond to an army of society hostesses, critical cranks, devoted readers and autograph hunters. Together these documents chart the gradual changes in a specific Victorian social and literary milieu.

⁴ See the companion articles by Paul Lewis in WCSJ, 'My Dear Wilkie: The Letters from Dickens to Collins', 5 (2002) pp. 3-23, and 'My Dear Dickens: The Letters from Collins to Dickens', 9 (2006), pp. 3-42.

CHRONOLOGY OF WILKIE COLLINS

DATE	LIFE EVENTS	PUBLICATIONS AND PERFORMANCES
1820s
1824 8 Jan.	Born at 11 New Cavendish Street, Marylebone
18 Feb.	Christened at St Marylebone Parish Church
1826	Family moves to Pond Street, Hampstead Green
1828 25 Jan.	Brother, Charles Allston Collins born
1829 Summer	Family visits Boulogne
Sep.	Family moves to Hampstead Square
1830s
1830 Summer	Family moves to 30 Porchester Terrace, Bayswater
1835 Jan.	Begins to attend Maida Hill Academy, north of Regent's Park, as a day scholar
1836 Sep.	Family tours France and Italy (until August 1838)
1838 Aug.	Family moves to 20 Avenue Road; WC attends Henry Cole's private boarding school in Highbury Place
1840s
1840 Summer	Family moves to 85 Oxford Terrace, Bayswater
1841 Jan.	Leaves Cole's school; apprenticed to Antrobus & Co., tea merchants
1842 June-July	Visits Scotland with his father, William Collins
1843 June		'Volpurno—or the Student', published in The Monmouthshire Beacon 4 June 1843. His first signed work. Original publication in London probably in May in The London Journal (unconfirmed)
Aug.		'The Last Stage Coachman' in the Illuminated Magazine (first traced London publication)
Late Sep.	Family moves to 1 Devonport Street, Hyde Park Gardens
1844 Aug.-Sep.	Visits France with Charles Ward
1845 Jan.	Finishes Iolani , which is rejected by Longman and later Chapman & Hall

	4 Feb.	Wedding of Charles and Jane Ward, with WC a trustee of the marriage settlement
	Sep.-Oct.	Visits Paris alone
1846	Apr.	Begins writing Antonina
	18 May	Having left Antrobus & Co., enters Lincoln's Inn as law student Visits Belgium with Charles Ward
1847	17 Feb.	Death of WmC; begins preparing his father's memoirs
	Aug.	To France again, with Charles Ward
1848	4 May	Witness to marriage of Ned and Henrietta Ward
	Autumn	Family moves to 38 Blandford Square, Marylebone
	Nov.		Memoirs of the Life of William Collins from Longman (first book, issued by subscription)
1849	19 June		Amateur production of Goldsmith's The Good Natur'd Man at 38 Blandford Square
	Summer	Exhibits 'The Smugglers Retreat' at the Royal Academy
	Sep.	Visits France with Charles Ward

1850s

1850	26 Feb.		Charity performance of A Court Duel! at the Soho Theatre
	28 Feb.		Antonina from Bentley (first novel published)
	July-Aug.	Walking tour of Cornwall with Henry Brandling
	Aug.	Family moves to 17 Hanover Terrace, Regent's Park
1851	30 Jan.		Rambles Beyond Railways from Bentley
	Mar.		'The Twin Sisters' in Bentley's Miscellany (first contribution)
	12 Mar.	WC meets CD for the first time at the house of John Forster
	16 May		Acts with CD in Bulwer Lytton's Not So Bad as We Seem
	27 Sep.		'A Plea for Sunday Reform' in the Leader (first contribution)
	21 Nov.	Called to the Bar
	20 Dec.		'The New Dragon of Wantley' unsigned in the Leader (first and only fiction contribution)
	23 Dec.		Christmas book Mr Wray's Cash-Box , from Bentley
1852	9 Jan.		Second edition of Rambles Beyond Railways from Bentley
	24 Apr.		'A Terribly Strange Bed' in Household Words (first contribution)
	Aug.		'Nine O'Clock' in Bentley's Miscellany (last contribution)
	Sep.	Stays with CD in Dover

	16 Nov.		Basil from Bentley
	25 Nov.	Marriage of Fred and Nina Lehmann
1853	June	Confined by illness, probably the first attack of gout
	July-Sep.	Stays with CD in Boulogne
	Oct.-Dec.	Tours Switzerland and Italy with CD and Augustus Egg
1854	3 June	Elected to the Garrick Club
	6 June		Hide and Seek from Bentley
	12 July	Declines offer to buy back copyrights of Antonina and Basil from Bentley
	July-Sep.	Stays with CD in Boulogne
	Dec.		'A Stolen Letter' in The Seven Poor Travellers , Christmas Number of Household Words
1855	1 Feb.	Attends wedding of Edward Pigott's brother George in Bath
	11-21 Feb.	Illness during trip to Paris with CD
	16 June		The Lighthouse performed at Tavistock House
	3 July	Marriage of Jack and Effie Millais in Scotland
	July-Sep.	Stays with CD at Folkestone, with trip to Boulogne on 6-7 Aug.
	Sep.	Sails with Pigott to the Scilly Isles
	Oct.		Essay on WC by Émile Forgues in the Revue des Deux Mondes
	22 Dec.		'The Cruise of the Tomtit' in Household Words (first non-fiction contribution)
1856		Begins to sign himself 'Wilkie Collins'	First biographical notice, opinionated and error-strewn, in Men of the Time
	Feb.		After Dark from Smith, Elder (first collection of stories)
	Feb.-Apr.	Visits Paris with CD
	April	Takes lodgings at 22 Howland Street, off the Tottenham Court Road
	June	Family moves to 2 Harley Place
	June-July	Sails along the South Coast and to Cherbourg with Pigott
	Aug.		After Dark from Tauchnitz (first in Collection of British Authors)
	Aug.-Sep.	Visits Boulogne with CD
	Oct.	Joins permanent staff of Household Words
	Nov.		'Uncle George; or, The Family Secret' in the National Magazine
1857	3 Jan.		The Dead Secret begins in Household Words (first serial novel)
	6 Jan.		The Frozen Deep performed at Tavistock House
	24 Jan.		The Dead Secret begins in Harper's Weekly (first authorized American serialization)

	June		The Dead Secret from Bradbury & Evans; 'Men of Mark' essay on WC by Edmund Yates in the Train , with poor reproduction of photograph by Herbert Watkins The Lighthouse opens at the Olympic Theatre The Frozen Deep performed in Manchester
	10 Aug.
	21 Aug.
	7-22 Sep.	Walking tour in Cumberland with CD
	3-31 Oct.		'The Lazy Tour of Two Idle Apprentices' (with CD) in Household Words
	Dec.		The Perils of Certain English Prisoners (with CD), Christmas Number of Household Words Le Secret from Hachette (first French translation, of The Dead Secret , by Émile Forgues)
1858
	29. Jan	Death in a lunatic asylum of Edward Pigott's older brother Henry
	Apr.		'Who is the Thief?' ('The Biter Bit') in the Atlantic Monthly
	5 June		Biography and portrait of WC in the Critic
	June	Sailing trip to Wales
	July-Aug.	First visit to Broadstairs, Kent
	Autumn	HC moves to 2 Clarence Terrace, often used by WC as a correspondence address
	11 Oct.		The Red Vial opens at the Olympic
	4 Nov.	Witness to second marriage of Joseph Stringfield
1859	Jan.	By now living with Caroline, at 124, Albany Street, Regents Park
	Apr.	Moves to 2a New Cavendish Street with Caroline
	30 Apr.		'Sure to be Healthy, Wealthy and Wise' in All the Year Round (first contribution in first issue)
	Aug.-Sep.	Stays at Church Hill Cottage, Broadstairs
	1-14 Oct.		The Queen of Hearts from Hurst & Blackett The Woman in White begins in All the Year Round and Harper's Weekly
	26 Nov.
	13 Dec.		'The Ghost in the Cupboard Room' in The Haunted House , Christmas Number of All the Year Round
			1860s
1860	11 Jan.	Negotiates with publishers for The Woman in White in book form
	March	Moves to 12 Harley Street with Caroline
	17 July	CAC marries Kate Dickens
	15-16 Aug.		The Woman in White from Sampson Low and Harper & Brothers
	22 Aug.	Opens bank account at Coutts
	Sep.	Sailing trip from Newport, Wales
	14 Oct.-	To Paris for two weeks

	1 Nov.-	In Devon/Cornwall with CD for a few days
	3 Nov.		Unauthorised The Woman in White opens at the Surrey Theatre
1861	Jan.	HC now living permanently out of London Leases copyrights to Sampson Low; resigns from All the Year Round
	Apr.		Single-volume edition of The Woman in White from Sampson Low
	16 Apr	Elected to the Athenaeum Club
1862	Aug.	Visits Whitby with Caroline Graves
	15 Mar.		Biographical notice, revised by Edward Walford, in new edition of Men of the Time No Name begins in All the Year Round and Harper's Weekly
	July	Stays at Broadstairs
	July-Oct.	Rents the Fort House, Broadstairs
1863	31 Dec.		No Name from Sampson Low
	Jan.	Severe attack of gout in both feet
	26 Mar.	Death of Augustus Egg in Algiers
	Apr.-June	Visits Aix-la-Chapelle and Wildbad for the waters
	Aug.-Sep.	Visits Isle of Man with Caroline and Carrie
	Oct.	Tours France and Italy for six months with Caroline and Carrie
	Oct./Nov.		My Miscellanies from Sampson Low
1864	Apr.	Begins writing Armada
	July	Joins the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, Isle of Wight
	Aug.	Visits Great Yarmouth; meets Martha Rudd (?)
	Nov.		Armada begins in the Cornhill
	Dec.	Moves to 9 Melcombe Place, Dorset Square	Armada begins in Harper's Monthly
1865		Smith, Elder acquire WC's copyrights from Sampson Low
	27 Feb.	Visits Paris for a week with Fred Lehmann
	10 Mar.	Resigns from the Garrick Club over the blackballing of W.H. Wills
	12 Apr.	Takes the chair at the Royal General Theatrical Fund
	Aug.	Becomes a member of the Arts Club
1866	12 Apr.	Finally finishes writing Armada
	Apr.	Visits Paris with Fred Lehmann
	May-June		Armada from Smith, Elder
	July		Revival of The Lighthouse with Palgrave Simpson
	Oct.-Dec.	Tours France and Italy with Edward Pigott
1867	27 Oct.		The Frozen Deep opens at the Olympic
	28 Jan.	Meets John and Jane Bigelow

	Feb.-Mar.	Visits Paris to work with Régnier on dramatic version of Armada , missing the marriage of George Russell on Mar. 5
	28 Aug.	Moves to 90 Gloucester Place, Portman Square
	Autumn	Begins correspondence with Charles Kent
	Sep. -Oct.	Stays with CD at Gad's Hill
	9 Nov.	Sees CD off to America from Liverpool; during his six-month absence WC acts as 'conductor' of All the Year Round
	Dec.		No Thoroughfare (with CD), Christmas Number of All the Year Round
1868	26 Dec.	Martha Rudd now installed at 33 Bolsover Street (as Mrs Dawson) William Tindell now acting as WC's solicitor	No Thoroughfare opens at the Adelphi
	4 Jan.		The Moonstone begins in All the Year Round and Harper's Weekly
	18 Jan.	Called to Tunbridge Wells when HC taken ill
	22 Feb.	Taken ill with gout in Gloucester Place
	19 Mar.	Death of HC
	July		The Moonstone from Tinsley
	Aug.-Sep.	Visits Switzerland with Fred Lehmann
	Sep.	Tries treatment with electric baths
	29 Oct.	Marriage of Caroline Graves and Joseph Clow
1869	Feb.	Attempts morphia treatment to cure addiction to laudanum	Rehearsals for The Woman in White in Paris
	29 Mar.		Black and White opens at the Adelphi
	4 July	Elder daughter, Marian Dawson, born
	July	Stays with the Lehmanns at Highgate while writing Man and Wife
	20 Nov.		Man and Wife begins in Cassell's Magazine
	Nov.	Dispute with Belinfante Brothers in Holland
1870s
1870	5 Jan.	Death of Henry Bullar
	12 Feb.		'A National Wrong' (unsigned, with James Payn) in Chambers's Journal
	9 June	Death of CD
	27 June		Man and Wife from F.S. Ellis
	Summer		Man and Wife from Hunter, Rose (first authorized Canadian edition)
	6 Aug.	First letter to Sebastian Schlessinger
	3 Sep.		George M. Towle's brief life, from WC's own memoir, in (New York) Appleton's Journal
	13 Sep.		Man and Wife staged by Augustin Daly in New York

	Oct.	First of 15 known stays at Ramsgate, this one at Granville Hotel.
1871	25 Mar.		No Thoroughfare revived at the Adelphi
	?Apr.	Caroline returns to Gloucester Place
	30 Apr.	Death by smallpox of Edward Benham
	14 May	Second daughter, Harriet Dawson, born	No Name staged by Augustin Daly in New York
	2 Sep.		Poor Miss Finch begins in Cassell's Magazine
	Autumn	Meets Wybert Reeve at rehearsals of The Woman in White
	9 Oct.		The Woman in White opens at the Olympic
	25 Dec.		Miss or Mrs? in the Graphic Christmas Number
1872	26 Jan.		Poor Miss Finch from Bentley
	Sep. -Oct.	Stays at 14 Nelson Crescent, Ramsgate for the first time
	Oct.		The New Magdalen begins in Temple Bar and Harper's Weekly
	3 Feb.		Biography and caricature of WC in Vanity Fair
1873	Jan.		Miss or Mrs? and Other Stories in Outline from Bentley
	Early Feb.	Martha Rudd moves to 55 Marylebone Road
	22 Feb.		Man and Wife opens at the Prince of Wales's
	9 Apr.	Death of CAC
	Mid-Apr.	Begins writing to Frank Archer
	9 May		The New Magdalen opens at the Globe Theatre, Boston
	17 May		The New Magdalen from Bentley
	19 May		The New Magdalen opens at the Olympic
	July	Visits Boulogne and Paris
	11 Sep.	Makes will, dividing estate between Caroline and Martha
	13 Sep.	Sails from Liverpool on the Algeria for reading tour of North America
	25 Sep.	Arrives in New York
	27 Sep.	Guest of Honour at the Lotos Club in New York
	7 Oct.		First reading at Albany
	17 Oct.		Reading in Philadelphia, while staying with Charles Fechter
	22 Oct.	Breakfast banquet at Union Club, New York, given by William Seaver
	30 Oct.		Reading in Boston
	10 Nov.		The New Magdalen opens at the Broadway Theatre, New York (attended by WC)
	11 Nov.		Reading in New York
	26 Nov.		Reading in Baltimore
	22 Dec.		Reading in Montreal
	26 Dec.		Reading in Toronto
1874	6 Jan.		Reading in Buffalo, after New Year stay
	9 Jan.		Reading in Sandusky, Ohio

16 Jan.		Reading in Chicago
27 Feb.		Farewell reading in Boston
Mar.		Sits for series of photographs (in fur coat) at Napoleon Sarony's New York studio
1 Mar.	Arrives in New York for final visit
3 Mar.	Dinner with Fechter
7 Mar.	Leaves Boston on the Parthia
18 Mar.	Arrives at Liverpool
?April	Moves Martha Rudd to 10 Taunton Place
May-June	On the committee of the 'Bellew Fund'
Aug.		The Frozen Deep begins in Temple Bar
26 Sep.		The Law and the Lady begins in the Graphic
2 Nov.		The Frozen Deep and Other Stories from Bentley
19 Nov.	Leases copyrights to Chatto & Windus, now his main British publishers
25 Dec.	Son, William Charles Collins Dawson, born at 10 Taunton Place
1875 9 Jan.		The New Magdalen revived at Charing Cross Theatre
Jan.-Mar.	Row with the Graphic over censorship of The Law and the Lady
Feb.		The Law and the Lady from Chatto & Windus
Mar.	Spends a week in Paris
Oct.-Nov.	Visits Brussels, Antwerp, and The Hague
9 Dec.		Miss Gwilt opens at the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool
25 Dec.		The Two Destinies begins in Harper's Bazar
1876 Jan.		The Two Destinies begins in Temple Bar
1 Feb.	Death of John Forster
15 Apr.		Miss Gwilt opens at the Globe
Later Jul.	WC 'wandering about the South Coast'
Aug.		The Two Destinies from Chatto & Windus
Sep.-Oct.	Travels via Paris to Switzerland, with Caroline and Carrie
23 Dec.		'The Captain's Last Love' in the New York Spirit of the Times (first of 12 Christmas stories)
1877 2 July		'Mr Percy and the Prophet' in All the Year Round
29 Aug.		E. W. Bramwell's dramatisation of The Dead Secret opens at the Lyceum
17 Sep.		The Moonstone opens at the Olympic
24 Sep.		Black and White revived in Exeter
Sep.-Dec.	Travels to Italy via Brussels, Munich and Paris, with Caroline, his last trip abroad
26 Oct.		No Name opens in Newcastle-on-Tyne in Wybert Reeve's amended version
9 Nov.		The Woman in White revived at the Theatre Royal, Bath
Dec.		My Lady's Money in the Illustrated London News Christmas Number

	26 Dec.		Article on WC in the ‘Celebrities at Home’ series in the World
1878		Henry Bartley now acting as WC’s solicitor in place of William Tindell
	12 Mar.	Marriage of Carrie Graves and Henry Bartley
	Spring	Falling out with Harper’s over Canadian editions
	June		The Haunted Hotel begins in Belgravia
	11 July	Signs contract with Tillotson’s, newspaper syndicators, for a serial novel (Jezebel’s Daughter)
	Nov.		The Haunted Hotel from Chatto & Windus
1879	1 Jan.		The Fallen Leaves begins in the World
	15 Jan.	Death of Ned Ward
	7 Apr.		A Rogue’s Life from Bentley
	July		The Fallen Leaves from Chatto & Windus
	5 Aug.	Death of Charles Fechter in America
	13 Sep.		Jezebel’s Daughter begins newspaper syndication (Tillotson’s)
1880s
1880	4 Jan.	Accused of plagiarism in Detroit Free Press
	Mar.		Jezebel’s Daughter from Chatto & Windus
	Apr.	Sits for portrait by Rudolf Lehmann
	June		‘Considerations on the Copyright Question’ in the International Review
	2 Oct.		The Black Robe begins newspaper syndication (Leader’s)
1881	Apr.		The Black Robe from Chatto & Windus
	5 Dec.	Approaches A. P. Watt, who becomes his literary agent
1882	4 Jan.	Witness at the marriage of Charles and Jane Ward’s daughter Emily
	22 Mar.	Makes his final will
	22 July		Heart and Science begins newspaper syndication (A.P. Watt)
	Aug.		Heart and Science begins in Belgravia
1883	16 Apr.		Heart and Science from Chatto & Windus
	6 June		Article on WC in the ‘Letters to Eminent Persons’ series in the World
	9 June		Rank and Riches opens at the Adelphi Theatre
	25 June	Renews literary association with Harper’s
	1 July	Death of Charles Ward
	Dec.		‘Love’s Random Shot’ in Christmas numbers of Le Figaro Illustré (in French) and the Pictorial World
	22 Dec.		I Say No begins newspaper syndication (A.P. Watt); also in Harper’s Weekly
1884	Jan.		I Say No begins in London Society

	5 Jan.		Revival of The New Magdalen at the Novelty Theatre
	11 Jan.	Charles Reade dies
	Mar.	Begins writing to Mary Anderson
	Oct.		I Say No from Chatto & Windus
	18 Oct.	Founder member of the Society of Authors
1885	June	Begins writing to Nannie Wynne
	28 Aug.	Death of his dog Tommie, hero of My Lady's Money
	26 Sep.		'The Ghost's Touch' begins newspaper syndication (Tillotson's)
	30 Oct.		Copyright performance of The Evil Genius
	11 Dec.		The Evil Genius begins newspaper syndication (Tillotson's)
1886	15 June	Death of Hugh Biers, WC's old friend and agent in Australia
	6 July	Death of Paul Hamilton Hayne in Georgia
	19 Aug.		The Victims of Circumstances begins in the Youth's Companion (first of three tales)
	Sep.		The Evil Genius from Chatto & Windus
	15 Nov.		The Guilty River from Arrowsmith
1887	29 Mar.		Man and Wife revived at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket
	May		Little Novels from Chatto & Windus
	24 Dec.		'The First Officer's Confession' in the Spirit of the Times (last contribution)
1888	17 Feb.		The Legacy of Cain begins newspaper syndication (Tillotson's)
	23 Mar.	Moves from Gloucester Place to 82 Wimpole Street
	Apr.		Harry Quilter's 'A Living Story-Teller' on WC in the Contemporary Review
	June		'Reminiscences of a Storyteller' in the Universal Review
	25 July	Steward at Society of Authors dinner for American writers
	Aug.-Sept.	Last known trip to Ramsgate – this one with his 'morganatic' family.
	Nov.		The Legacy of Cain from Chatto & Windus
1889	19 Jan.	Shaken up in a traffic accident
	5 Feb.	Suffers attack of bronchitis leading to angina
	9 June		'The Only Girl at Overlook' published in the Pittsburgh Dispatch , claimed (in all likelihood, falsely) to be 'From a plot by Wilkie Collins'
	30 June	Suffers a stroke
	6 July		Blind Love begins in the Illustrated London News
	23 Sep.	Dies at Wimpole Street

POST MORTEM

- 1889 27 Sep. Funeral at Kensal Green
6 Oct. 'One August Night in '61' published in the Pittsburgh Dispatch, claimed (in all likelihood, falsely) to be from an 'original sketch' by WC
- 24 Oct. Auction sale by Walter Holcombe
'furniture and effects of the late Wilkie Collins
- 1890 Jan. Blind Love from Chatto & Windus
20 Jan. Auction sale by Puttick and Simpson of 'interesting library of modern books of the late Wilkie Collins'
22 Feb. Auction sale by Christie, Manson and Woods 'pictures, water-colour drawings and engravings of Wilkie Collins'
18 June Auction sale by Sotheby, Wilkinson and Hodge of 'the original mss of Charles Dickens and Wilkie Collins'
The Lazy Tour of Two Idle Apprentices from Chapman & Hall
- 1895 8 June Death of Caroline Graves; buried in the same grave as Wilkie Collins
- 1905 26 Feb. Death of Harriet Elizabeth Bartley (Caroline's daughter)
- 1919 23 April Death of Martha Rudd recorded as Martha Dawson

EDITORIAL PRINCIPLES

Closely following the editorial practices and transcription conventions of The Public Face of Wilkie Collins, this digital edition of the correspondence of Wilkie Collins is governed by two key principles:

1. We have attempted to reproduce in electronic form precisely what Wilkie Collins wrote, except where strict adherence would make the transcriptions markedly inelegant or indigestible.
2. We have concluded that a good deal of editorial assistance is necessary for readers today to appreciate many of the letters, but have tried hard to make our interventions unobtrusive.

* * * * *

Regular departures from ad literam transcription are noted under the following headings:

1. Formatting

The typical letter written by Collins takes the following form: Return Address and Date, ranged right; Heading, flush left or centred; Salutation, flush left; Body, with paragraph indent(s); Valediction and Signature, indented; Postscript(s), flush left; Addressee, flush left. With the exception of the body, all of these elements can be and often are omitted, and even that may be missing in the case of fragmentary manuscripts. We have normally maintained this ordering and formatting even when Collins himself makes minor departures from it. Common examples of these are: placing headings like Private above the address in the top left corner; putting the return address and date at the end of the letter, especially in early correspondence or messages without salutation; locating the addressee line at the foot of the opening page of the letter, especially in early letters; inserting postscripts in any available space (including the margins, the head of the letter, and the flap of the envelope), particularly when the signature occurs at the end of a page or the sheet. These and other variations in format are only preserved when they are essential to convey Collins's intentions, and only noted when of special interest. (Where we have been forced to rely on a typed or printed source for the text of a letter, we have standardized the layout in a similar way, correcting what are clearly misprints without comment.)

Return addresses, dates, salutations, valedictions, and addressees appear precisely as written. There as elsewhere we have retained transparent abbreviations such as St, Janr, Messrs, Vy and Esqre. Superscript characters (as in 7th) are preserved, though without the dot(s) that Collins sometimes places beneath them. No regular attempt has been made to supply a return address where this is omitted by Collins, though cases of significance are discussed in the annotations. We have followed all the major variations in signature and initials that the author employs, but have not attempted to reproduce incidental flourishes created by the use of dots, underlining, elongated letters, etc.

2. Spelling

Collins is in general a careful speller, and we have felt under no pressure to regularize. He consistently uses a number of forms which are now archaic but which were still acceptable variations in his own day, such as ideot, insure (with today's meaning of ensure), negociation, oclock, recal, and to-day. At certain periods (notably when the influence of Dickens is strong, or immediately after his trip to the United States) he prefers the forms favor, theater, etc. to the standard English spellings. Regular misspellings by Collins are agravate, exagerate, expence and suspence, and all these forms have been duly preserved. Irregular misspellings are noted as such.

3. Capitalisation and Punctuation

We have tried to follow the occurrence of capitals in the manuscripts, but Collins tends to make little distinction between initial large and small letters in the case of quite a number of characters, including: a, c, e, k, m, o, p, s, v, and w. We have thus aimed to err consistently on the side of the probable. Thus we transcribe America throughout and Very truly at the beginning of the valediction, even when there is little apparent difference between the capitals in question and the small equivalents found elsewhere in the letter; conversely we give your kind letter even when the k in question seems rather on the large side.

Collins's use of punctuation can be idiosyncratic, but we have tried to follow it as far as possible. We have retained the frequent dashes to which he is addicted, especially in the 1840s and 1850s, and his extremely eccentric use of the apostrophe, but have dispensed with the symbol like an equals sign (=) which he sometimes uses to mark the breaking of a word at the line-end. With the exception of periods lacking at paragraph breaks, we have silently supplied omitted periods and marks of interrogation at the end of what are clearly statements and questions; when Collins forgets to close a quotation or a parenthesis, we have silently inserted the appropriate symbol, unless there is a significant doubt about his intentions. On the few occasions when Collins writes in French, we have silently reproduced his erratic uses of accents.

We have followed Collins's paragraphing, though we have generally been liberal in our interpretation of what is an indent. Page numbers marked by Collins are omitted, and only noted when of special significance.

4. Cancellations and Insertions

Except when pressed for time, Collins characteristically reads through each completed letter carefully and makes a number of corrections and revisions to clarify the sense and improve the style. The result is that many manuscripts reveal quite a number of authorial cancellations and insertions, often in tandem. The cancellations are often partially or totally illegible, while the insertions take a variety of forms, most notably words squeezed in at the end of a line, interlineations flagged by a caret, and marginalia flagged by a dotted saltire (~~✕~~). To have literally reproduced all of these signs of second thought would have rendered many of our transcriptions impenetrable. Thus marks of insertion are regularly omitted within the text of the letters (though cases of special interest are noted), while only substantive legible cancellations are retained (using ~~strikeout~~).

In the case of cancellations apparently not attributable to the author himself, generally to preserve propriety or conceal an identity, we have used every means to hand to recover the obscured text, though by no means always with conspicuous success. Such instances are always indicated. Later annotations clearly by other hands (including receipt stamps and the like) are only recorded when they assist in clarifying the date, recipient, provenance or content of the letter.

5. Emphasis

Collins employs underlining for emphasis with great frequency, and occurrences of single and double underlining have been reproduced throughout in the transcriptions, with the occasional instance of triple or quadruple forms pointed out in the notes. However, he rarely underlines a word or phrase carefully from beginning to end, and when he uses double underlining, the lower line is in general noticeably shorter than the upper. We have made no attempt to reproduce such partial underlining, except where it is clearly significant, as when initial capitals only receive double underlining or a single syllable of a word is given emphasis.

6. Stationery and Bold Type

Over the years, Collins makes use of a wide variety of types of stationery. Many of these are printed or embossed, usually for personal use, but occasionally for other individuals or institutions. We have reproduced in bold type all such printed lettering (usually in the Return Address and Date line), but details of fonts, colours, pictorial devices, sizes, watermarks, etc. are not noted unless they are distinctive or serve as evidence for dating. Quite a number of Collins's letters surviving in manuscript have matching envelopes, almost always held in the same archive. The existence of such envelopes is noted, and details of the delivery address and postmark(s) are supplied whenever relevant or useful.

Bold type is also used in the following two cases:

- In the transcription of other printed matter included in a letter, such as an attached clipping from a proof or newspaper, or the wording in a form which WC has filled in;
- In the transcription of letters entirely written in the third person in the hand of a secretarial agent on WC's behalf, typically Frank Ward (e.g. [1396]) or Carrie Graves (e.g. [1540]).

It should be noted, however, that bold type is NOT used for:

- Letters penned in the hand of an amanuensis, when they are clearly dictated by WC and written in in his name in the first person;
- Letters by WC where our source is a printed version appearing in a periodical or book;
- Letters written by others in the posthumous series numbered [X001] to [X012].

* * * * *

As far as possible, editorial material associated with a particular item of correspondence is confined to a heading and footnotes, both of which are separated from the text of the letter itself by a line of space. To conserve space, however, we have throughout made use of the short forms noted in the lists of Abbreviations. Since Collins consistently uses double quotation marks in the first instance, in our annotations we have preferred to start with single quotes.

Following the identification number ([XXXX]), the heading begins with the recipient and the date, uncertainties and conjectures being indicated by the use of square brackets. Radical uncertainty is recorded respectively by the phrases ‘Unidentified Recipient’ and ‘Unknown Date’. The letters are placed throughout in our understanding of their chronological order. Where dating remains insecure, the item is placed as though it belonged to the latest available date. Where more than one item is assigned to the same date, we have established precedence according to the following sequence: order of composition when there is evidence of this; ease of comprehension for the reader when there is not; and alphabetical order by recipient when no other principle is available. The result is that there is an accumulation at the end of the series of excised autographs or other small fragments about which very little can be discerned regarding either dating or recipient.

Following the heading proper comes the source line, which indicates the copy text of the letter, associated documents such as envelopes, existing published versions, and corrections affecting the existential status of the letter. All letters are transcribed from the original manuscripts unless otherwise stated; a small number have only been found in the form of facsimiles, published versions, typed transcripts, or even summaries. All manuscripts are complete autograph letters with signature unless otherwise noted: a small number are drafts, postcards, notes, or telegrams, are damaged or fragmentary, or are written in whole or in part in the hand of an amanuensis or secretary.

The footnote section is optional, but can often extend to more than half-a-dozen notes, some lengthy. These are most commonly contextual and explanatory, but are also used to discuss textual cruces, issues and idiosyncrasies, as well as to draw attention to non-textual features where they are of significance in securing the date and recipient of the letter.

Our only visible interventions within Collins’s text itself are thus:

1. line break symbols (|) used to conserve space, most typically in the address and date line and the valediction;
2. superscript numerical flags indicating footnotes, numbered according to individual letters and placed wherever possible after marks of punctuation; and
3. square brackets inserted to mark editorial comments (in italics, most typically [sic] or [illegible word]) or uncertain and conjectural readings (in roman type).

Like the vertical rule, interventions of the second kind occur with great frequency: Wilkie Collins’s letters are full of ‘the presence of the present’ in Richard Altick’s happy phrase, and to communicate effectively with his many regular correspondents he does not need to dot his is and cross his ts. (In the literal sense, however, he invariably does so.) Interventions of the third kind are thus something of a rarity: except when writing under the pressure of great haste or emotion, Collins was a careful correspondent who took pains to make his orthography and meaning clear, as well as to avoid casual slips of spelling or syntax.

* * * * *

We have thus done our level best to place those who consult the correspondence of Wilkie Collins collected here ‘in some degree, in the position of persons who knew him, at the time when he wrote the letters’. In doing so, we have been faithful to the advice that our author offered to Dickens’s sister-in-law as she undertook the task of editing the letters of Boz himself (to Georgina Hogarth, 18 March 1879, [1831]). And while we have not followed the lead of the Pilgrim edition of Dickens’s correspondence in every detail, we do acknowledge a major debt to the wise principles and practices developed by its editors.

At the same time we are conscious of working in a new digital age of editorship. Many libraries and private owners generously allowed us to take high-quality digital images of their holdings for research purposes. This not only ensured that almost all transcriptions were checked against the source by more than one editor, but also allowed us to use digital enhancement to help to decipher documents that defied interpretation with the naked eye alone. Access to reference materials newly available in digital form – such as the Times Digital Archive, the Wellesley Index to Victorian Periodicals, the Pilgrim edition of the letters of Charles Dickens, or the Waterloo Directory of English Newspapers and Periodicals – plus frequent recourse to Internet search engines like Google, genealogical resources such as <ancestry.com> and <findmypast.com>, and press archives like <newspapers.com> and <britishnewspaperarchive.co.uk>, enabled us to provide annotations to allusions in the letters that might otherwise have defeated us. And, as always, the members of the VICTORIA, DICKENS-L and SHARP listservs have been most generous in sharing their knowledge and insights.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The comprehensive character of this digital edition of the letters of Wilkie Collins would not have been possible without the generous assistance of many individuals and institutions.

First of all, Faith Clarke (née Dawson), the great-granddaughter of Wilkie Collins and Martha Rudd, has been most generous with permissions, allowing the publication of hitherto unpublished letters and other documents by Collins. Her husband, the late William M. Clarke, author of, amongst other works, The Secret Life of Wilkie Collins (1991; 1996), and co-editor of the two-volume Letters of Wilkie Collins (1999) kindly shared his extensive knowledge of Collins, his circle and his descendants.

* * * * *

We would like to thank the following individuals, libraries and other institutions for their assistance, as well as permission to consult and cite materials in their possession: Andrew Lycett, biographer of WC, who tracked down the letters to Mary Anderson; Dr Caroline Radcliffe of the University of Birmingham, who located the letters to J. Steele MacKaye at Dartmouth College, and helped to interpret them; Jeff Dunnington, who shared his expert knowledge of E.P. Hurlbut; Paul Barlow of Northumbria University, for help with Horace; Beth Palmer, of Trinity College, Oxford, who located WC's letter to Florence Marryat; Alan Bean of Sigmund & Jocelyn Fine Art, Birmingham, for sharing his expert knowledge of the paintings of William Collins; Professor Russell A. Potter, Rhode Island College, for help with material at the New Bedford Whaling Museum; Mike Benjamin, Richard Garnett, Robert Häusser, Michael de Navarro, Joseph Raine, and Donald C. Whitton, who all generously provided access to letters in their private collections; Susan Avery; Rita S. Patteson, Curator of Manuscripts, and the Armstrong Browning Library, Baylor University, Waco, Texas; the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris; Birmingham City Archives; Special Collections, the University of Birmingham, UK; Clive Hurst, Head of Rare Books and Printed Ephemera, Bodleian Library, Oxford; Barry Mills, Local Studies Section, Bolton Central Library; Roberta Zonghi, Curator of Rare Books, Boston Public Library; Dr Sally Brown and Dr Chris Fletcher, Department of Manuscripts, the British Library; Josh Brown for sharing his knowledge of Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper; William H. Loos, Curator, Grosvenor Rare Book Room, Buffalo and Erie County Public Library; University of Buffalo, New York; Beccles and District Museum, Suffolk; University of Bergen

Library, Norway; Royal Danish Library, Copenhagen; Boston Athenæum, Massachusetts; University of Chicago Library; Cornell University Law Library, Ithaca, New York; Dartmouth College, Hanover, New Hampshire; Dunedin Public Libraries, Otago, New Zealand; Special Collections, University of Georgia Libraries; Lilly Library, Indiana University, Bloomington; Leighton Archive, Kensington Central Library, London; Liverpool Record Office, Lancashire; Maine Historical Society, Portland; Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston; Morrab Library, Penzance, Cornwall; National Archives, Kew, Richmond, Surrey; New Bedford Whaling Museum Archives, Massachusetts; Special Collections Library, Pennsylvania State University; University of Rochester, New York; Canaday Center, University of Toledo, Ohio; Rare Books and Manuscripts, Van Pelt-Detrich Library Center, University of Pennsylvania; Alan King, David Salomons House, Canterbury Christ Church University College; Jennifer Carnell; the Central Library, Portsmouth; Florian Schweizer, Charles Dickens Museum; Dr N. Clifton, of Northern Illinois University, for assistance with translations from the French; Jenny Lee, Rare Books and Manuscripts, Columbia University; M. Joæ Hutwohl, Conservateur-archiviste de la Bibliothèque-Musée, la Comédie-Française, Paris; Judith Cooke; Tracey Earl, Archivist, Coutts Archives, Coutts & Co, London; Patricia Englert; Nicholas Robinson, Senior Librarian, Department of Manuscripts, Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge; the Rare Book Department, The Free Library of Philadelphia; Marcus Risdell, The Garrick Club, Covent Garden; Kate Perry, Archivist, Girton College Library, Cambridge; The Mitchell Collection, Glasgow Public Library; Harris Museum and Art Gallery, Lancashire; Leslie A. Morris, Curator of Manuscripts, Jennie Rathburn, Emily C. Walhout, Houghton Library, Harvard University; Susan Hanes, formerly Director of River Forest Public Library; Professor Donald Hawes; Hertfordshire Record Office; Holborn Library; Sara S. Hodson, Curator of Literary Manuscripts, Department of Manuscripts, and Laura Stalker, Henry E. Huntington Library, San Merino, California; Lorna Huett; Kirsten Hüttner; Steven Isserlis; Jagiellonian University, Kraków; Brian Lake, Jarndyce Rare Books, London; Margaret Burri, Curator of Manuscripts, Special Collections & Archives, Milton S. Eisenhower Library, and Judith and Allen Grossman, Johns Hopkins University; Dr Peter Jones; Natalie Kapetanios; Peter Henderson, Walpole Librarian, The King's School, Canterbury; Andrew Thynne, Lancashire Record Office; Brotherton Library, University of Leeds; Susan and George Leonard, Chicago, Illinois; Abby L. Yochelson, Library of Congress; Guy Holborn, Archivist and Jo Hutchings, Librarian, Lincoln's Inn Library, London; the Archivist, Liverpool City Libraries; the Librarian and staff at the London Library; Professor Sue Lonoff; Emma Lynch; Gabrielle Malcolm; Manchester Central Library; Roger Sims, Manx National Heritage, Douglas, Isle of Man; Marianna

Minns; Dr Ian G. Brown and Dr Richard Ovenden, the National Archives of Scotland, Edinburgh; the National Library of Scotland, Edinburgh; Lillian Nayder; John D. Stinson, Archives and Manuscripts Division, Virginia Bartow, Arends Collection, Stephen Cook, Isaac Gerwitz and Phil Milito, Berg Collection, and many other staff at New York Public Library; Special Collections Research Center, Bird Library, Syracuse University, New York, especially Nicole C. Dittrich, Reference Assistant; Marvin S. Taylor, Fales Library, New York University; Juliet Noel, Oxfordshire; the Norfolk Record Office; the Archivist, the Northumberland Record Office, Gosforth; the Nottinghamshire Archives, Nottingham; Carolyn Oulton; Pat Aske, Librarian and Pam Judd, Former Deputy Librarian, Pembroke College Library, Cambridge; the Librarian, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; Catherine Peters; Anna Lou Ashby, Inger Dupont and Robert E. Parks, Pierpont Morgan Library, New York; Portsmouth Central Library; Barry Pike; Adrian J. Pinnington; Tom Pocock; the late Alexander Wainwright, and his successor as Curator Margaret Sherry Rich, Parrish Collection, AnnaLee Pauls, and Don Skemer, Curator of Manuscripts and Curator of the William Seymour Theatre Collection, and other staff at Princeton University Library; John Pym; Cathy Leutenegger, Fryer Library, University of Queensland; Adam Sofianos, Contracts Manager, Random House; Michael Bott, Archivist, Reading University Library; Steven P. Ross, Detroit; Dr Frank A. J. L. James, Reader in the History of Science, Royal Institution, London; Nigel Cross, Archivist, the Royal Literary Fund; Simon Fenwick, Archivist, Royal Watercolour Society; Michael J. Bosson, Manager, Sandon Hall and Park Enterprises, Sandon, Staffordshire; Dr Jochen Meyer, Deutsches Literaturarchiv, Schiller-Nationalmuseum; Marion J. Pringle, Special Collections Librarian, Shakespeare Centre Library, Stratford-upon-Avon; Iris Lorenz, Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin; John E. Mustain, Rare Book Librarian & Classics Bibliographer, Stanford University; Mitchell Library, State Library of New South Wales, Sydney; Gerard Hayes, Australian Manuscripts Collection, State Library of Victoria, Melbourne; David McKitterick, Librarian, and the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge; Andrew Kirk, Theatre Museum, London; Eamon Dyas, The Times Archive, Times Newspapers Limited; William Brockman (now the Pattee Librarian, Penn State University, University Park); Nancy L. Romero, formerly of Rare Books and Special Collections Library, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign; Amy Cooper, Special Collections Librarian, University of Iowa Libraries; Claire McCann, Special Collections and Archives, University of Kentucky; Dr Peter McNiven, John Rylands Library, University of Manchester; Perry Willett, Head of Digital Library, University of Michigan; Richard J. Smith, for help concerning the relatives of Wilkie Collins; Anne Skilton, Research Assistant, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; National Art

Library; Pat Fox, Public Services, John Kirkpatrick, Cline Senior Curator of Modern British Literature, Richard Oram, Associate Director and Hobby Foundation Librarian, Tom Staley, Director, Tara Wenger, Research Librarian, Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, University of Texas at Austin; Victoria & Albert Museum, London; Richard Bowden, Archivist of the Howard de Walden Estate, London; Dr Alexis Weedon; Professor Joseph Wiesenfarth; John Wilson of John Wilson Manuscripts Ltd.; Robert Bell, Wisbech & Fenland Museum, Cambridgeshire; and John Monahan of Public Services and Timothy Young, Assistant Curator of Modern Books and Manuscripts, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Yale University.

Recent additions to the lengthy list are:

Emma Goodrum, Archivist, Worcester College, Oxford; Dr. Erik Petersen, Senior Researcher, Manuscript Collections, and Anders Toftgaard, Det Kongelige Bibliotek (Royal Danish Library) Copenhagen; Dr. Emily Bell, School of English, University of Leeds; Sarah Lindberg, Manuscript Specialist, Bonhams, London; Amanda Saladine, Senior Archive Assistant, University Archive, The Open University, Milton Keynes; Gerard A. Stodolski, Bedford, New Hampshire; Andres Villalba, Research and Information Associate, Swarthmore College Library, Pennsylvania; Dr. Kalika Sands, International Specialist, Sotheby's, New York; Cindy Sughrue, Director, Dickens Museum, London; Mark Williams, Cadbury Research Library, University of Birmingham, Edgbaston; Hector Acosta and Natalie Russell, Reference Services, Huntington Library, California.

Our debts are so many that if we have inadvertently omitted a person or institution, our apologies. We must thank, too, those who have generously shared their knowledge and, in some instances, their possessions, but who prefer to remain anonymous.

APPENDIX

TABULAR DATA

This appendix offers a numerical overview of the database of extant Wilkie Collins letters on which this new digital edition is based up to April 2023. There are 3398 letters recorded plus 13 written at the end of WC's life by relatives and friends – a total of 1411 letters. The following six tables provide a breakdown for key parameters. 'Table 1. MS Sources of Multiple Letters' shows that extant letter MSs are found in 135 different locations, with over half the MSs held in only five archives, and with 55 holding only a single letter. 'Table 2. MS Location by Country' reveals that all but 46 of the extant MSs are located in America and Britain, the two countries hosting 124 out of the 138 known archives. 'Table 3. Number of Letters by Decade' indicates that, inevitably, the bulk of the extant letters date from Collins's later decades: on average, we have rather over one letter per week for the whole of Collins's literate life, but this figure disguises a spread from less than one a year in his first decade to more than two a week in his last. 'Table 4. Composition by Day of the Week' shows little variation from Monday through Thursday but a decline towards the weekend, with under 5% of letters written on Sunday when no mail was delivered. 'Table 5. Number of Correspondents by Number of Known Letters' tabulates the number of correspondents who received large and small numbers of letters. Notably 445 correspondents are known by just a single letter. 'Table 6. Recipients of Multiple Letters' reveals that of the top twenty of the 704 recipients of identified extant letters, four were publishing houses, three were women, and none fellow novelists; the bronze medal goes to WC's legal representative for the decade until 1878, the silver to his mother who died in early 1868, and the gold to his literary agent whom he met only in late 1881. 'Table 7. Correspondents of 20 Years or More' shows the 25 individuals to whom WC wrote over periods of 20 years or more. The three longest are his mother and two lifelong friends, the fifth another friend and the sixth his brother Charles. Notable among the top ten is Edward Lear – only two letters are known yet they span 28 years. That could indicate many others in between which are now lost.

Table 1. MS Sources of Multiple Letters *

Source	No. of Letters
1 Parrish	706	32 Trinity	12	56 BNF		3
2 Pembroke	331	27 Boston	10	57 Brigham Young		3
3 Morgan	275	28 CDM	10	58 Garrick		3
4 Lewis Collection	225	29 Clarke Collectn	10	59 Harvard		3
5 Private (1)	224	30 Coutts	10	60 Iowa		3
6 Texas	220	31 Stanford	9	61 Manchester		3
7 Glasgow	138	33 Folger	8	62 Rylands		3
8 Berg	135	34 Manx	8	63 UNC		3
9 Huntington	135	35 Taylor	8	64 Wisbech		3
10 Houghton	77	36 Columbia	7	65 Bergen		2
11 Illinois	54	37 Congress	7	66 Berlin		2
12 Wolff Collection	52	38 HSP	7	67 Birmingham UL		2
13 Fales	43	39 Kentucky	7	68 Bowker		2
14 Yale	31	40 Mass. HS	6	69 Copenhagen		2
15 Noel	27	41 Salomons	6	70 De Courcey		2
16 Bigelow	22	42 Bolton	5	Fales
17 NLS	22	43 CF	5	71 Holborn		2
18 NAL	21	44 Chicago	5	72 Le Kohns		2
19 Navarro	19	45 Duke	5	73 Leeds		2
20 Melbourne	18	46 Hanes	5	74 Maine HS		2
21 Reading	18	47 Harkness	5	75 Northumberland		2
22 Bodleian	15	48 Johns Hopkins	5	76 Nottingham		2
23 Dartmouth	15	49 Dunedin	4	77 Penn State		2
24 Kansas	15	50 Fitzwilliam	4	78 Private (2)		2
25 BL	14	51 Harrowby	4	79 RLF		2
26 Ross	13	52 Indiana	4	80 Shakespeare		2
		53 Sydney	4	Singletons		55
		54 UCLA	4	Unknown		244
		55 UPenn	4	TOTAL		3411

Sources include four different private owners who do not wish to reveal their identities, including two who are in possession of only a single MS; in the sequence of transcriptions, all such letters are sourced uniformly as 'Private'

* Minimum of two letters at the same source; to avoid double inclusion, where a letter MS is divided between two or more sources, only the main source is counted

Includes four letters whose whereabouts were known but where there is now some doubt.

Table 2. MS Location by Country

Country	No. of MSs	%*	No. of Sources per country
USA	1943	57.01%	63	New Zealand	4	0.12%	1
UK	1178	34.60%	61	Denmark	2	0.06%	1
Australia	23	0.67%	3	Norway	2	0.06%	1
France	8	0.23%	2	Canada	1	0.03%	1
Germany	4	0.12%	3	Japan	1	0.03%	1
				Poland	1	0.03%	1
				Unknown	244	7.04%	-
				Total	3411	100.00%	138

* Sums may not add up due to rounding

Tables 1 and 2 include the thirteen end of life letters written by other people about WC's illness and death.

Tables 3 to 7 only count the 3398 letters written by WC not the thirteen end of life letters written by others.

Table 3. Number of Known Letters by Decade

Decade	Known letters	Average per Year
1830-1839	9	1.0
1840-1849	65	6.5
1850-1859	273	27.3
1860-1869	710	71.0
1870-1879	1104	110.4
1880-1889	1240	123.7
1830-1889	3398	57.6

Table 4. Composition by Day of the Week

Day of Week	Extant letters	%*
Monday	533	15.7%
Tuesday	544	16.1%
Wednesday	513	15.1%
Thursday	535	15.7%
Friday	469	13.8%
Saturday	425	12.5%
Sunday	161	4.7%
Unknown	221	6.4%
Total	3398	100.00%

* Sums may not add up due to rounding

Table 5. Number of Correspondents by Number of Known Letters

Number of known letters	Correspondents receiving that number of letters
200+	1
100 to 199	6
50 to 99	4
25 to 49	11
10 to 24	40
5 to 9	37
4	20
3	49
2	91
1	445
Total correspondents	704

Table 6. Recipients of at least Two Letters*

#	Correspondent	Letters	#	Correspondent	Letters	#	Correspondent	Letters
1	A P Watt	295	59	Henry D Pigott	10	116	Rev George Bainton	4
2	Harriet Collins	171	60	Hugh Biers	10	117	Thomas Woolner	4
3	William F Tindell	126	61	Smith, Elder & Co	10	118	William Gale	4
4	Andrew Chatto	112	62	Augustin Daly	9	119	[Rosa] Bullar	3
5	Charles Ward	110	63	F M Evans	9	120	A Fuller Maitland	3
6	George Bentley	107	64	Herbert Watkins	9	121	Alaric A Watts	3
7	Chatto & Windus	63	65	Paul Hamilton Hayne	9	122	Alfred-Auguste Ernouf	3
8	Edward Pigott	59	66	Anne Benson Procter	8	123	Alice Ward	3
9	Charles Kent	56	67	Bernhard Tauchnitz	8	124	Annabel Milnes	3
10	Harper & Brothers	54	68	Charles Allston Collins	8	125	Anthony Trollope	3
11	Hunter, Rose & Co	46	69	George Russell	8	126	Arthur Locker	3
12	Sebastian Schlesinger	43	70	George Stewart Jr	8	127	Belinfante Brothers	3
13	Cassell, Petter & Galpin	35	71	Hall Caine	8	128	Catherine Dickens	3
14	George Smith	35	72	James Birtles	8	129	Charles E Mudie	3
15	Richard Bentley	32	73	Jane Ward	8	130	Christian Tauchnitz	3
16	Frank Archer	31	74	Thomas D Galpin	8	131	Dion Boucicault	3
17	William Holman Hunt	31	75	William D Booth	8	132	Editor, (Melbourne) Leader	3
18	Anne Wynne	30	76	Charles Dickens	7	133	Editor, The Athenaeum	3
19	Nina Lehmann	28	77	Edmund Yates	7	134	Edward Pritchard	3
20	Frederick Lehmann	27	78	François Joseph Régnier	7	135	Elliott & Fry	3
21	Charles Reade	25	79	John Bonner	7	136	Emil Lehmann	3
22	Francis Carr Beard	24	80	John Hollingshead	7	137	Emily Clunes	3
23	George Maclean Rose	24	81	Sampson Low & Co	7	138	Euphemia Millais	3
24	E M Ward	23	82	Thomas Hyde Hills	7	139	F S Ellis	3
25	Albéric Iserby	22	83	Thomas Satchell	7	140	Florence Marryat	3
26	Jane Bigelow	22	84	James R Osgood	6	141	Frank Marshall	3
27	Mary Anderson	22	85	John Everett Millais	6	142	Fred Charles	3
28	Georgina Hogarth	19	86	Sir James E. merson Tennent	6	143	Frederick Chapman	3
29	Beecheno, Yaxley & Co	18	87	William Moy Thomas	6	144	George Makepeace Towle	3
30	Henrietta Ward	18	88	Ada Cavendish	5	145	Herrn Justizrath Simson	3
31	Isabelle Frith	18	89	Alfred de Stern	5	146	James Fraser Gluck	3
32	Fanny Mitchell	17	90	Benjamin Webster	5	147	John Bigelow	3
33	Frederick Enoch	17	91	Charles Dickens Jnr	5	148	John Forster	3
34	Wybert Reeve	17	92	Edward William Bok	5	149	John Latey	3
35	J Steele MacKaye	16	93	Elizabeth Benzon	5	150	John Linnell	3
36	J T Marsh	16	94	Frances Power Cobbe	5	151	Joseph Hogarth	3
37	James Payn	16	95	John Watkins	5	152	Mark Lemon	3
38	John Palgrave Simpson	16	96	Squire Bancroft	5	153	Miss Goldsmid	3
39	W H Wills	16	97	W S Emden	5	154	Oliver Wendell Holmes	3
40	William Winter	16	98	Williams & Norgate	5	155	R H Dana Snr	3
41	Charles Thomas	15	99	Editor, Cassell's Magazine	4	156	Richard Bentley Jr	3
42	Robert du Pontavice de Heussey	15	100	Eléonore Fechter	4	157	Roma Le Thièrè	3
43	Emily Wynne	14	101	Felix Moscheles	4	158	Rosa Kenney	3
44	Kate Field	13	102	George Fawcett Rowe	4	159	Rudolf Lehmann	3
45	William Powell Frith	13	103	George W Childs	4	160	S C Hall	3
46	Coutts & Co	12	104	Henry Powell Bartley	4	161	Secretary, Garrick Club	3
47	E A Buck	12	105	Isabelle Oppenheim	4	162	Sir Henry Thompson	3
48	Henry Higgins	12	106	James Redpath	4	163	Thomas Allston Brown	3
49	Sampson Low	12	107	John F Phayre	4	164	Trübner & Co	3
50	William A Seaver	12	108	Joseph Charles Parkinson	4	165	W M Laffan	3
51	Carlotta Leclercq	11	109	Joseph Stirling Coyne	4	166	Walter W Jones	3
52	Carrie Bartley	11	110	Joseph W Harper	4	167	William Ralston	3
53	Edward Benham	11	111	Lady Louisa Goldsmid	4	168	[Mary Louisa] Frith	2
54	Harry Quilter	11	112	Napoleon Sarony	4	169	A S Watt	2
55	Henry Herman	11	113	Percy William Bunting	4	170	Alfred Arthur Reade	2
56	Laura Seymour	11	114	Peter Cunningham	4	171	Alfred E Galloway	2
57	Richard Monckton Milnes	11	115	Rev Chauncy Townshend	4	172	Anne Thackeray	2
58	W F Tillotson	11				173	Arthur Cecil Blunt	2
						174	Baroness de Stern	2

175	Bram Stoker	2	203	George Coleman	2	233	Mary Cunliffe	2
176	Charles Alexander Calvert	2	204	George Gregson	2	234	Mayor & Mayoress of Oxford	2
177	Charles Collette	2	205	George H Putnam	2	235	Miss Speed	2
178	Charles Lahure	2	206	George Holsworth	2	236	Mrs Bicknell	2
179	Charles Lamb Kenney	2	207	George Manville Fenn	2	237	Mrs Brinley Richards	2
180	David Stott	2	208	George Richmond	2	238	Mrs Hepworth	2
181	Dennis Powell	2	209	Georgina Steeple	2	239	Octavian Blewitt	2
182	Doris Edith Bartley	2	210	Harry	2	240	Olive Logan Sikes	2
183	Editor, Autographic Mirror	2	211	Henri G de Mussy	2	241	P Senter	2
184	Editor, Spirit of the Times	2	212	Henri Testard	2	242	Paul Jüngling	2
185	Editor, The Critic	2	213	Henry Blackett	2	243	Perry Mason & Co	2
186	Editor, The Echo	2	214	Henry Bullar	2	244	R J Lane	2
187	Edmund Routledge	2	215	Henry Gray	2	245	Rudolph Chambers Lehmann	2
188	Edward Lear	2	216	J A Rosier	2	246	Samuel Sidney McClure	2
189	Edward Marston	2	217	J F Hamilton	2	247	Sir Edwin Landseer	2
190	Edward Walford	2	218	J Wilson Croker	2	248	Sydney Davis	2
191	Edwin de Leon	2	219	James Holden	2	249	Thomas Dixon Spain	2
192	Emile Forgues	2	220	James Stanley Little	2	250	Tillotson & son	2
193	Emma Bouvier Childs	2	221	James T Fields	2	251	W C Macready	2
194	F W Topham	2	222	John Elderkin	2	252	W H Freemantle	2
195	Fanny Davenport	2	223	John Elliott	2	253	W Salter Herrick	2
196	Francis Henry Underwood	2	224	John Murray	2	254	Walter Besant	2
197	Frank Ward	2	225	Joseph Cundall	2	255	William Collins	2
198	Frederick Kitton	2	226	Joseph Tilfor	2	256	William J Bok	2
199	Frederick Locker	2	227	Leader & Sons	2	257	William Lainier Washington	2
200	Frederick Ouvry	2	228	Lillie Langtry	2	258	Wm F Gill	2
201	G H Lewes	2	229	Loretta Sutton Metcalf	2		Singletons	445
202	George Augustus Sala	2	230	Louise Chandler Moulton	2		Unidentified	172
			231	Manager NE Mutual Insurance	2		TOTAL	3398
			232	Mary Anne Benham	2

Table 7. Correspondents of 20 Years or More (172 letters to unknown correspondent are omitted)

	Correspondent	Letters	First	Last	Duration
1	Harriet Collins	171	17 Oct 1831	17 Jan 1868	36yr	3m
2	Edward Pigott	59	11 Nov 1851	10 Dec 1887	36yr	1m
3	Nina Lehmann	28	27 Mar 1852	28 Nov 1887	35yr	8m
4	George Bentley	107	19 Apr 1852	2 Sep 1886	34yr	5m
5	Charles Ward	110	10 Aug 1847	16 Apr 1881	33yr	8m
6	Charles Allston Collins	8	6 Dec 1839	31 Dec 1872	33yr	0m
7	Bernhard Tauchnitz	8	18 Jun 1856	22 Dec 1888	32yr	6m
8	Edmund Yates	7	27 Dec 1855	14 May 1886	30yr	5m
9	Edward Lear	2	9 Jun 1855	25 Aug 1883	28yr	2m
10	William Holman Hunt	31	19 Apr 1860	30 Jun 1888	28yr	2m
11	Frederick Lehmann	27	6 Aug 1860	4 Feb 1888	27yr	6m
12	Jane Ward	8	1 Dec 1858	22 Jul 1884	25yr	7m
13	Harper & Brothers	54	25 Mar 1861	6 Nov 1886	25yr	8m
14	Coutts & Co	12	28 Mar 1864	22 Mar 1889	25yr	0m
15	Williams & Norgate	5	24 Dec 1859	17 Nov 1884	24yr	11m
16	Francis Carr Beard	24	30 Jun 1862	26 Nov 1886	24yr	5m
17	John Palgrave Simpson	16	15 Jul 1857	24 Jun 1881	23yr	11m
18	Joseph Hogarth	3	13 Nov 1844	1 Apr 1867	22yr	5m
19	Charles Reade	25	4 Jun 1861	17 Jul 1883	22yr	1m
20	Henrietta Ward	18	12 Jun 1857	24 Feb 1879	21yr	8m
21	James Payn	16	25 Oct 1867	28 Jan 1889	21yr	3m
22	Felix Moscheles	4	10 Apr 1866	25 Apr 1887	21yr	0m
23	Jane Bigelow	22	28 Jan 1867	5 Oct 1887	20yr	9m
24	E M Ward	23	31 Jul 1852	14 Feb 1873	20yr	7m
25	Charles Kent	56	18 Oct 1867	7 Mar 1888	20yr	5m

THE COLLECTED LETTERS OF WILKIE COLLINS

DIGITAL EDITION 2024

Incorporating and correcting

- The Letters of Wilkie Collins, ed. William Baker and William Clarke, 2 vols, London: Macmillan, 1999.
- The Public Face of Wilkie Collins: The Collected Letters, ed. William Baker, Andrew Gasson, Graham Law, Paul Lewis, 4 vols, London: Pickering & Chatto, 2005.
- The Collected Letters of Wilkie Collins, ed. William Baker, Andrew Gasson, Graham Law, Paul Lewis, online, Charlottesville, Virginia: Intalex Corporation, 2018.
- The Collected Letters of Wilkie Collins: Addenda and Corrigenda, 1-14, ed. William Baker, Andrew Gasson, Graham Law, Paul Lewis, London: Wilkie Collins Society, 2005-2023.

From the first online publication in 2018 each letter has been assigned its own unique four digit number which does not change and can be used to identify it precisely in the citation format [nnnn], Addressee, Date.

THE KNOWN LETTERS IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER

[0001] TO HARRIET COLLINS,¹ 17 OCTOBER 1831

MS: Morgan (MA 3154/22),² folded and directed.³ Published: B&C, I, pp. 14–15 (dated ‘[1842]’); BGLL, I, p. 3.

Monday Morning

My dear Mamma,

We are all going on very well at home.⁴ I have had a letter from my Aunt Christy which was put in one for you, it made us all laugh uncle George putting a message in your letter that he was a monkey.⁵ You are very kind to think of trying to get such baskets for us, it is very pleasant to be as near the chain pier as that, which we were obliged to ride,⁶ I hope you have not the trouble of [paying] that place. Papa and I think of going to Gravesend if the winter does not come too soon. We hope to see you come home quite well and in good health. I am very sorry you do not get any walks on the beach for the rain.

Your most Affectionate son | Will^m W. Colli | ns

1. WC’s mother, Harriet Collins, née Geddes (1790–1868), who had married William John Thomas Collins (1788–1847: ODNB), RA, distinguished landscape painter, at Edinburgh in 1822 (Peters, pp. 3–18).

2. Found on the second page of a letter from WmC to HC dated Monday, 17 October 1831, at Bayswater (reproduced in Memoirs, II, pp. 1–2). The note here is also in WmC’s hand, but signed in a childish script by WC, aged seven. A message follows from WC’s three-year-old brother Charles Allston Collins, signed with ‘his mark’.

3. To: ‘Mrs W. Collins | Dr. Thompson’s | 10 Egremont Place | Brighton’. In the expectation of health benefits from ‘Brighton rides and walks’ (Memoirs, II, p. 1), HC was staying with retired Royal Artillery surgeon John Thompson, MD, and his family. The Thompsons were fellow members of the conservative evangelical set that gathered in London around the Scottish clergyman Edward Irving. (See Lycett, pp. 25–32; Lycett refers throughout to the doctor as James, though official records, such as his marriage certificate to Catherine Agar of 5 April 1817 at Marylebone, confirm that he was named John.)

4. At 30 Porchester Terrace, Bayswater, where the family lived from 1830 to 1838.

5. Here, ‘Aunt Christy’ must refer to HC’s younger sister Mary Christina Geddes (1801–96), then still unmarried and resident with her parents at Aldebury, near Salisbury. However, ‘uncle George’ remains unidentified.

6. 10 Egremont Place, where HC was staying (the house still stands), was about half a mile from the Royal Suspension

Chain Pier, which offered both a landing stage for boats and a number of attractions. Designed by Samuel Brown, it was opened in 1823 and painted by both Constable and Turner soon after completion. Over 1,000 feet long, it was a famous landmark until destroyed in a storm in December 1896.

[0002] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 DECEMBER 1838

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/1).¹ Published: B&C, I, p. 4. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 3.

39 Highbury Place, | December 1st, 1838.

My Dear Mama/

As my last contained the History and Design only of the Æneid of Virgil,² I shall now proceed, as I promised, to give you the Arrangement of that celebrated Poem.

The Arrangement is:

Virgil divides his Poem into twelve books. He begins, like all other Epic poets, by stating, in the first few lines, what the subject of his Poem is, he then mentions the causes of Juno's anger against the Trojans. Then he describes Æneas, in the seventh and last year of his voyage, just about to land on the shores of Italy: when Juno, enraged at this, begs Æolus to raise a storm, by which the fleet of Æneas is dispersed. Neptune stills the tempest, and Æneas, with seven ships out of thirteen, is driven on the coast of Africa.

This is as far as my class have read. I shall give you further descriptions of this great Poem, in future letters.³

M^r Cole⁴ desires me to say, that we separate, for the Christmas Vacation, on Wednesday December the 19th; and return to our studies on Wednesday January the 30th, 1839.

I remain, dear Mama, | Your dutiful son, | William Collins.

1. Letter written in copperplate hand on water-mark paper with a faint crown emblem at the top.

2. This earlier letter has not been traced.

3. Generally on the methodology and ideology of teaching classics in the early Victorian period, see Christopher Stray, Classics Transformed (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1998), pp. 7–82.

4. Rev. Henry Cole, to whose boarding school at 39 Highbury Place WC was sent in the autumn of 1838 after the family returned from more than two years travelling on the Continent.

[0003] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 11 MARCH 1839

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/2), folded and directed.¹ Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 30. Published: B&C, I, pp. 4–5. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 3

39 Highbury Place | March 11th 1839.

My Dear Mama

As I thought you would like to hear from me in about a week after my arrival here, I now sit down to tell all the news I can collect.² I arrived here about 5 minutes before prayer time which was sooner than I expected as we did not get the omnibus directly. We have had several long walks, and some sliding, in the frost wick [sic] began here Thursday morning and has been colder I think than it was in the holidays. Tell Charlie³ with my love that we have made the boat and it sails very well[.] I hope his lessons are not so difficult as they were when I was last at home. I suppose when I see you again at Easter Papa's pictures will be almost ready for the exhibition [sic].⁴ I hope he is not prevented by headaches [sic] from going on with them. The boys here do Themes three times a week and M^r Cole has hinted at the probability of the senior boys of our class beginning after Midsummer holidays. Some of the boys in our class have begun to write down the sermon and I suppose it will not be long before I have to do the same. I suppose Charlie has had some sliding but has I hope had no mis-fortune with his breeks. On Sunday the frost was so severe that the ponds in the neighbourhood were covered with boys sliding. I think I have now exhausted all my news and remain with love to all at home

Dear Mama your affet^e son | William Wilkie Collins

-
1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | Avenue Road | Regents Park’. Franked ‘T.P. | Holloway Rd.’, and postmarked ‘12NM2 | MR12 | 1839’. Both address and direction are written in copperplate hand.
 2. According to the previous letter [0002], the term at Mr Cole’s had begun more than five weeks earlier on Wednesday, 30 January, so WC’s arrival referred to here may have been delayed due to illness or have followed a further visit home.
 3. WC’s younger brother, Charles.
 4. WmC had visited Italy with his family to inspire his painting and exhibited three Italian scenes at the 1839 Royal Academy summer exhibition. WmC had exhibited there every year since 1807, apart from 1837 and 1838 when he was abroad, so the young WC would have been accustomed to his father’s preparations. For a description of WmC’s ‘Italian campaign’ and the pictures he exhibited, see WC’s Memoirs, II, pp. 155–165.

[0004] TO [HARRIET COLLINS], 18 SEPTEMBER 1839

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/3).¹ Published: B&C, I, pp. 5–6. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 4.

39 Highbury Place, | September 18th 1839

Οίχ ἀγαζόν ωολχοιρανίη

Homer

Proposition What a profitable lesson may be drawn from this maxim of the Grecian poet: “The government of many is not good”!²

Reason. Because, different men have different sentiments on systems of government; and if they were all to enforce their own opinions, nothing but confusion and every evil would ensue.

Confirmation How many kingdoms, after having prospered under the government of one, have been exposed to the horrors of anarchy and revolution, through the government of many.

Argument. The happiness of a nation depends on the government of the state; diverse nations require different forms of government; but the most perfect and most happy form of government has generally been found to be a wise and good monarchy.

Comparison. As the calmness of a river is disturbed by its meeting with many and different streams: so is the calmness of a state disturbed by many and various rulers.

Example. When the Roman Empire was attempted to be governed by the great Triumvirate, it was distracted by their destructive dissensions.

Testimony Our poet is supported, in this wise sentiment, by Bias, one of the Seven Sages of Greece, whose maxim was: “Οί πλείους κακοί” Too many are bad.³

Conclusion. Nations, armies, and societies, have most painfully proved the truth of this assertion of the immortal bard.

William Collins

1. In copperplate hand with no recipient indicated, but found among the other letters to HC at Morgan.

2. From Odysseus’s rebuke to the rebellious commoner in Homer’s Iliad, Book II, lines 200–207, as rendered by Henry Cary, The First Six Books of the Iliad of Homer: Literally Translated Into English (Cambridge: 1828), p. 35. The passage as a whole reads: ‘Thou dastardly wretch, sit down quiet and listen to the speech of others, who are thy superiors, since thou art weak and unwarlike, nor ever to be esteemed in war or in council. We Greeks must not all be kings here, for the government of many is not good. Let there be one chief, one king, to whom the son of the crafty Saturn has already given a sceptre, and laws, that by them he may govern.’

3. Bias of Priene (fl. 6th century BC), traditionally recognized as one of the Seven Sages of Greece. The aphorism ‘οι πλείστοι άνθρωποι κακοί (the majority of mankind being bad)’ is attributed to him by Diogenes Laertius in Lives of the Eminent Philosophers, Book I, §87 (translated Robert Drew Hicks, Loeb, 1925).

[0005] TO WILLIAM COLLINS,¹ 28 SEPTEMBER 1839

MS: Morgan (MA 3155/4).² Published: B&C, I, p. 6. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 4.

39. Highbury Place | September 28th 1839

My dear Papa

It is my intention in this letter to commence describing the 2nd Book of the Æneid of Virgil having finished the description of the 1st Book in former letters.³

My last left Æneas feasting with Dido to whom he now relates the fall of Troy and his adventures from that period to the time of his now being in her presence. The Grecians who had been besieging the city for ten years now pretended flight but hid themselves behind the island of Tenedos and left a wooden horse which was internally filled with soldiers in the camp. In the mean time Sinon undertakes to accomplish the stratagem. He presents himself to the Trojans as having escaped from the Greeks and is led into Troy with his hands bound behind him. He relates a false history of his life in order that he might persuade the Trojans to bring into their city the wooden horse by the introduction of which Troy is burnt sacked and finally destroyed.⁴

I remain my dear Papa | Your dutiful son | William Collins

1. William John Thomas Collins (1788–1847: ODNB), R.A., noted landscape and genre painter.
2. Letter written in black ink in copperplate hand on water-marked paper with a faint crown emblem at the top.
3. The only surviving earlier letter concerning Virgil's epic is [0002] to HC of 1 December 1838. A manuscript document found at the National Art Library, Victoria and Albert Museum (MS L125/2:192(i)) sheds a little light on the matter of lost letters from WC's schooldays. This is headed 'M^{rs} Cole's Acc^t | Mast^r Collins' and seems to be a bill for WC's sundry expenses at Henry Cole's boarding school at 39 Highbury Place during Michaelmas (autumn) term 1839. By far the largest item is the undated 'W. Armstrong's Account' at '£4.,15.,0', which might be laundry expenses or the like for the term as a whole. Among other smaller items listed are seven letters at 2d each, the entry dates (Aug. 31, Sep. 18, Oct. 16, Nov. 18, 23, and 26, and Dec. 8) suggesting strongly that these represent letters sent home by WC. Four of these dates (those in September, October, and December, plus the middle date in November) prove a good match with letters home from the fifteen-year-old WC which have survived and are reprinted here as [0004], [0006], [0007], [0008/0009], respectively. It seems then likely that WC may have written now lost letters home on the three other dates where the account was charged, though we should note that that this particular letter ([0005] to WmC) was sent on a date that does not appear on the list. (The twopenny charge is difficult to explain. According to Duncan Campbell-Smith, Masters of the Post: The Authorized History of the Royal Mail (Penguin, 2011), ch. 4.2, Rowland Hill's uniform penny post scheme was launched throughout the postal network only on 10 January 1840, whereas before that postage was paid by the recipient with a minimum charge of 4d per letter. However, the 'T.P. | Holloway Rd.' postmark found on several of the letters confirms that the official government postal service was being used rather than one of the cheaper but illicit alternatives.)
4. WC's summary here covers approximately the first quarter of the 2nd Book of the Æneid (194 out of 804 lines).

[0006] TO HARRIET COLLINS, [15] OCTOBER 1839

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/4), folded and directed.¹ Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 29. Published: B&C (dated 12 October 1839), I, pp. 7–8. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 4 (also dated 12 October).

39 Highbury Place | Oct 1[5]th 1839.²

My dear Mama /

I did not /write/ until I had tasted the cake, as I thought you would like to know that it was most delectably luscious. The whole parcel arrived quite safe, and I am very much pleased with the trowsers, I think they are the nicest pair I ever had.³ You cannot think how delighted I was to hear such a good account of Papa, I [del] suppose when I see you on Saturday the 26th He [sic] will be hard at work making up for lost time as the coachmen say.⁴ I suppose as you ~~are~~ say nothing of yourself and Charles Allston – that you are both quite bobbish; I am happy to say that I have never felt the least ill since I last saw you. I am afraid that I shall not be able to fill this side, as I really have no news at all here and must therefore make a virtue of necessity, and conclude with best love to all at home.

Dear Mama | Yr affec Son | W W Collins

P.S. Charles [sic] letter amused me very much, it looked exactly like the autograph of a great man!!!

1. To: 'Mrs Collins | Avenue Road | Regents Park, with '20' between two lines added to the bottom left. Franked 'T.P. | Holloway Rd.', and postmarked '4 EG 4 | OC16 | 1839'.

2. It is difficult to decipher the second figure in the date at the foot of the letter, but this seems most likely to indicate the 15th given that the letter is postmarked the following day. The appearance of a charge for a letter on the date 'Oct. 16' in 'Mrs Cole's Acct' acts as confirmation.

3. There is a 6d charge for a parcel dated 'Oct. 14' in 'Mrs Cole's Acct', suggesting that, as was then standard, the carriage of the package containing WC's cake and trowsers was paid for by Mrs Cole on delivery.

4. Throughout 1839 WmC ‘was afflicted with one of the most incapacitating maladies that a painter can suffer — inflammation of the eyes’ (Memoirs, II, pp. 165–167). WC suffered from a similar condition which he described as ‘rheumatic gout’ in his eyes. He reports several bouts of it in the Letters – see, for example, [1601] to George Bentley, 15 March 1876, [1692] to Carlota Leclercq, 1 August 1877, [1763] to William Winter, 5 August 1878, [1972] to George Manville Fenn, 2 September 1881, [2014] to William Holman Hunt, 10 February 1882, [2615] to Anne Wynne, 20 September 1886. Archer (p. 303) quotes WC as saying ‘The gout which I have told you I have suffered so much from I suspect that I’ve inherited from my grandfather’.

[0007] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 22 NOVEMBER [1839]

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/6), folded and directed.¹ Published: B&C, I, p. 7 (dated [? September 1839]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 4.

Piazza di Highbury | Vendredi /nella/ mattina.²

Cara mia madre/

Credendo farvi una piacere, vi hó scritto questa biglietta Italiana per mostrarvi che non l’ho dimenticato affatto. Cominciava le mie studie Giovedì, é le mie occhie [del] stanno benissimo ché vi assicuro mi da molto piacere perché era una cosa horrible di aver niente á fare é di sedere tutto il giorno guardendo le piccole ragazzi. Spero ché la povera papa sta assai recovrato e che adesso continua [del] le tavole da lo il mio amore, e dite lo che spero che non dimentica la sua gran parola Italiana, “Comé Sechiamà”! Ero molto dispiaciuto di udir dell novelli tante male di Carlo e spero quando vedrei lei ancora di saper che e recovrato. Elizzabetta veniva, e mi portó delle deliziosissime fiche. Non ho veramente piu dire é colla amore mio a tutto, é la speranza per la saluta di tutti,

Sono La sua affettuosa figlo [sic]. | Gugliegmo [sic] Collini.³

1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | Avenue Road | Regents Park’. Franked ‘T.P. | Holloway Rd.’, with a partly illegible postmark: ‘8 [?? ?] | NO22 | 1[???’].

2. November 22 was a Friday in 1839, thus supporting the tentative dating.

3. Translation:

Highbury Place | Friday morning

My dear Mother,

Believing it will give you pleasure, I have written this note in Italian to show you that I have not at all forgotten it. I started my studies on Thursday and my eyes are fine, which I assure you gives me great pleasure, because it was horrible to have nothing to do and to sit down all day watching the little boys. I hope poor papa is very well recovered and that he is now carrying on with the pictures. Give him my love and tell him that I hope he will not forget his great phrase in Italian “Comé Sechiamà” [what’s-its-name]! I was very sorry to hear such bad news of Charles and I hope when I see him again to know that he has recovered. Elizabeth came and brought me some delicious figs. I have really got no more to say and with my love to all and hopes for everyone’s health,

I am your affectionate son, | William Collins

[0008] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 6 DECEMBER 1839

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/7), folded and directed.¹ Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 30. Published: B&C, I, pp. 9–10. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 4.

Friday aft.²

My dear Mama/

I was very much pleased to receive your letter, as I was exceedingly anxious to know how you all were & particularly as the account I received from Colin Campbell was not very consoling.³ Poor Charlie’s ear ach [sic] was sad news indeed, I tœ know that it is the hardest of all pains to bear, having felt it myself: between them both I really wonder how you keep as well as you do especially with Master Charles to nurse whom [sic] we all know is not very easily [del] /pacified/; but I must not however send any messages to him, as I intend to devote a separate portion of this epistle for his benefit.⁴ When I see you on the 18th which you mention as the day on which we are to meet, I really hope that we I shall see Poor Papa “himself again”, for our holidays would be most miserable if he was as unwell then, as he was last Midsummer. Give him my best love and tell him that I hope he will be able to pass his opinion upon a whole host of works of art, fecit his son. With best wishes for the health of all and earnest wishes for the holidays.

I remain dear Mama | Your affectionate son | W W Collins

1. To: 'Mrs Collins | Avenue Road | Regents Park', with '20' between two lines added to the bottom left. Franked 'T.P. | Holloway Rd.', and postmarked '8N 8 | DC 6 | 1839'. It was clearly sent from WC's school at 39, Highbury Place.
2. December 6th was indeed a Friday in 1839.
3. Campbell remains unidentified.
4. See [0009] to CAC of the same date.

[0009] TO CHARLES COLLINS,¹ 6 DECEMBER 1839

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/7).² Published: B&C, I, p. 9. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 4.

My dear Charlie

You really cannot imagine how vividly I can depicture [sic] your agonising yells "de die de nocte", and also poor Mama's anxiety on your account, which I can judge of as I was a witness of /it/ at Naples,³ when your vocal (I will not say musical powers) were exercised on that memorable night, but I am what the boys here would call bullying you, and therefore will immediately close the subject as /but/ I assure you, notwithstanding all this nonsense, I felt the greatest pity for you. I must now conclude from want of room to expand my ideas!!! &c &c

And remain your affect brother | W W Collins

1. Charles Allston Collins (1828–73: ODNB), WC's younger brother, the future painter and writer who was to marry Dickens's daughter Kate in 1860.
2. Written on the third page of [0008] to HC above.
3. A reference to the events on New Year's Eve, 1837, when Charles's arm was broken in Naples by an English boy called Galway who pushed him off the wall of a villa on to the sand. Although his mother reported that Charles behaved 'like a hero', she added in her usual unpunctuated English, '... his pain increased all the eveng we got to bed soon after eleven but no sleep scarcely all night poor Charlie screaming with pain'. See: Harriet Collins, Manuscript Journal, 1836–37 (MSL/1914/1915), National Art Library, Victoria and Albert Museum; and the account in Clarke, pp. 39–40.

[0010] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 14 OCTOBER [1840]

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/5). Published: B&C, I, pp. 8–9 (dated 14 October [1839]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 4.

Piazza di Highbury | Lé 14th Ottobre¹

Cara mia madre/

Ho avuto da fare quilla pena di "writing out" é cosi non ho potuto scrivere una lettera piu tosto. Non c'è stato niente di nuovo qui con [del] eccetta questa cosa la bella é amabile moglie del governatore di questo castello mi ha detto colla sua propria bocca ché posso dire una bugia! con molta bellezza. E poco sogetta poverina alla colera vi dico piu, quando saro a casa nostra ancora. Spero che il visagio di Carlo sta meglio. Fa i miei complimenti alla piccola gata e comprate una cosa per la colla sua. Avete trovato "The tales for an idler",² spero di si saro inconsolabile se no. Ho scritto questa lettera con un calmajo cattivissimo credo che non é possibile ~~di~~ leggerla. Da [del] la mia amore al padre, spero che non ha preso freddo la sera di Domenica. Non posso da vero dir piu adesso in questo loco maladetto non si puo avere /dei/ novelli – scrivemi presta e credemi

Cara mia madre | tuo figlio amantissimo | Gulielmo [sic] Wilkie Collini³

1. This letter seems very unlikely to date from 1839 given [0006] to HC of [15] October of the same year, while the tone seems too cynical for 1838.
2. This must be Tales for an Idler: First Series (Paris: Galignani, 1836), a 350-page collection of twenty short stories, many Gothic in style, by ‘leading authors of the day’. Perhaps it had been purchased in the French capital in its year of publication on the journey out to Italy, and had travelled around Europe with the Collins family. The most intriguing of the tales is ‘Ozias Hala’ by M.P. Dillon, which must have planted a seed in the author’s mind which came to fruition in Ozias Midwinter, the dark, enigmatic stranger with the uncouth name whose entrance on the scene precipitates the events of Armada.

3. Translation:

Highbury Place | 14th October

My dear Mother,

I have had to do that penalty of “writing out”, so I have not been able to write a letter before now. There has been nothing new here except this: the beautiful and amiable wife of the governor of this fortress told me with her own lips that I can tell a lie! beautifully. She is a bit inclined, poor dear, to anger. I will tell you more when I am at home again. I hope Charles’s face is better. Give my compliments to the little she-cat and buy her something for her neck. Have you found “The Tales for an Idler”, I hope so, otherwise I shall be inconsolable. I have written this letter in terrible ink. I think you will not be able to read it. Give my love to father, I hope he didn’t take cold on Sunday night. I cannot really say any more now. In this cursed place one cannot get any news. Write soon and believe me, dear mother,
your most loving son | William Wilkie Collins

[0016] TO HARRIET COLLINS, SUMMER [1841]¹

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/116). Published: B&C, I, p. 15 (dated [1842]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 8 (dated Summer [1841/1843]).

Southsea | Portsmouth

My dear Mama/

I really do’nt know what to do. On mentioning Brighton to Miss Otter she thought I should be very dull at that place by myself, and thought I had better stop by Southsea, only she was afraid I should find no amusement there. I of course (and with a very safe conscience) declared I had been much entertained during my stay, but was fearful of becoming a bore &c: and there the affair has dropped for the present; and I acknowledge myself perfectly unable to determine what I ought to do; I think I am much better here – but then a month seems a long time to billet myself upon friends.

Tell Charlie I am riding upon a splendid black mare just bought by Mr Otter as fleet as the wind yet withal as gentle as a lamb, rowing in the “dingy” till my arms are almost off whenever the weather permits, and contemplating should the detestable rain and wind now prevailing disappear a tour to the Isle of Wight.

I suppose this will be deemed a most unsatisfactory letter. Probably it is so, but I have stated the facts exactly as they are, and must leave your maturer judgement to determine as it best may.

I am delighted to learn so good an account of the Governor – remember me kindly to all in Oxford Terrace and believe me dear mama

Your undecided son, | William Wilkie Collins

1. The context of a long seaside vacation with the reference to Oxford Terrace limit the dating of the letter to either the summer of 1841 or that of 1843: the summer of 1842 seems to be excluded as, after travelling to Scotland with his father, WC was left alone in London while his parents went to Southsea. The salutation, tone, content, and hand clearly suggest the earlier of the two available years, when WC was 17.

[0011] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 13 JUNE 1842

MS: Pembroke. Published: B&C, I, pp. 10–11 (incomplete); BGLL, I, pp. 5–6.

Tait’s Hotel | Princes Street | Edinburgh | Monday June 13th 1842

My dear Mama,

We set off this morning for Melrose and on Friday (in consequence of information we have this day received from Mr Cadell) depart by steamer for Wick.¹

I think these five lines have put you, or ought to put you, in perfect possession of our plans; so I will proceed at once to tell you through the medium of a bad pen, worse ink, a man covered in perspiration eating a hot breakfast, and a “stuffy” Coffee room, what I think of – “Edina Scotia’s darling seat”²

I am beyond all measure delighted with the Country and the old Town, but tremendously disgusted with the melancholy, grass-grown, ill-paved-covered-all-over-with-large-squares-part-of-the-city, denominated “the New Town.” It is infallibly, and inexpressibly, good for nothing.

I climbed Arthur’s Seat, at the imminent hazard of falling headlong down, in consequence of taking a path of my own to ascend by, instead of the orthodox ~~path~~ mode of progression. View inexpressible on one sheet of paper.

I’ve seen Rizzio’s blood, Queen Mary’s work basket, the Calton Hill, dirty children, filthy fish wives, slovenly men, dropsical women, Salisbury Crags, ill managed drains, Grass market, Presbyterian chapels, sea sick people, a sea “darkly deeply beautifully blue”, a dog (Mr Smith’s) delicious, a fellow traveller dyspeptic, a – pho! I’m out of breath and so will you be if you read this description through once, so just gasp out at the end, if you please “What a deal the boy has seen!”³

and believe me | your affectionate son | William Wilkie Collins⁴

Give my love to Charlie and if Miss Otter is with you pray remember me to her and tell her that we hope to see her brother next week⁵

1. WmC took this trip with his son on commission from the Edinburgh publisher Robert Cadell (1788–1849: ODNB), to create the drawings for five line engravings of Orkney and Shetland to be included in the Abbotsford edition of The Waverley Novels. See WC’s Memoirs, II, pp. 209–223.

2. ‘Edina! Scotia’s darling seat!’, the opening line of Robert Burns’s Address to Edinburgh (1786).

3. ‘A sea darkly, deeply beautifully blue’, from Southey’s Madoc in Wales, I.5, recalled by Byron in Don Juan, IV. 110. The other references are to items of historic interest in Edinburgh. The ‘dog ... delicious’ is a bizarre phrase but we cannot read it any other way.

4. Between WC’s valediction and postscript there is a note to HC added in the hand of WmC:

My dearest darling,

I have nothing to add to Willie’s scrawl but that I think I am mending – not yet strong, but hopeful.

When we return tomorrow I hope to find a letter for me at Mrs Smith’s – I had a long and interesting conversation last night with Miss Smith, the elder. She is full of love for you – so am I

Very faithfully yours ever | W. Collins.

Kind regards to Miss Otter – I have written to her brother in answer to his letter which I found here on our arrival.

Love to Charley and his friends in Herefordshire.

5. The Otters of Southsea were church friends of the Collins family, again with links to the Irvingite community; the two families seem to have met in 1838 when they were neighbours in Avenue Road, Regents Park (Lycett, p. 47).

[0012] TO HARRIET COLLINS, [19] JUNE 1842¹

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/8). Published: B&C, I, p. 11 (dated [before 2 July 1842]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 6 (date 18/19 June 1842).

Thurso | ¼ past 12 | at night

Dear² Mother

I am sorry I can’t be with you³ but I write to you without any candle at mid-night – as light as evening.

We are quite safe and well here and as I want to go to bed I have only time to tell you that we think of going to the Orkneys by the end of this week and when our plans are more settled we will write again –

Best remembrances to Charlie and all at Oxford Terrace⁴ | and believe me

Your luminous | and affectionate son | William Wilkie Collins⁵

1. The tentative dating is from the information in the following letter. They left Thurso on Friday 24 June having stayed there six days, that is, they probably arrived on the 18th when this letter was written late at night, technically on the 19th.
2. The word is pre-printed, the letter being written on paper decorated with a lion in a cage staring at a mouse watching outside.
3. This phrase is also pre-printed.
4. The Collins family resided at 85 Oxford Terrace, near Hyde Park, from 1840 to 1843.
5. WC's letter is followed by a note from his father to HC which begins on the same leaf:

My dearest love

I hope very shortly to have the delight of writing a longer letter, in the mean time, Heaven bless you Tell Charley to write me a long letter & ever send your letters as usual to Mrs Smith's care. Regards to Miss Otter and all friends
 ever yours affectly | W Collins

On the blank verso is written 'Willie's letters'.

[0013] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 23 JUNE 1842

MS: Morgan (MA3154/61). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 6–7

Thurso | 23rd June 1842

My dear Mother

We set off tomorrow to Wick and thence by Steam boat to Lerwick, Shetland where we shall stay a week I think, –¹

When you receive this will you write two letters (to tell us how you are) one to Lerwick, Shetland and the other in case that should not reach us to Wick, Caithness, N. B.²

I rode the other day 36 miles on horseback to John O'Groats House that tenement being indicated by a little rank grass and broken shells – very satisfactory and classical – scenery however worth riding any number of miles to see.³

Remember me to Miss Otter and Charlie and (oh! pardon the awful abruptness of this conclusion) believe me

Your affectionate son, | William Wilkie Collins.⁴

1. On the Scottish expedition, during which WmC was to prepare drawings for The Pirate, Wilkie and his father stayed at the home of Captain Otter in Thurso. WC wrote later in The Memoirs of William Collins:

... the painter and his companion started by steamer for Wick; and, on arriving there, proceeded by land to Captain Otter's at Thurso – their last place of sojourn, ere they set forth for Shetland.

The coast scenery of Thurso and its immediate neighbourhood, though less wild and extensive, was perhaps more varied than the shores of Shetland itself. The view across to the Orkney Islands (from which, one of the illustrations to "The Pirate" was afterwards produced) – the grand dark rocks beyond John O'Groat's house – the harbour and some of the houses of Thurso – presented excellent materials for the sketchbook. The colour, too, of the sea, as deeply and brilliantly blue, on sunny days, as the Mediterranean itself – and the extraordinary northern clearness of the atmosphere, lighted to a late hour of the night by a small dull glow of sunlight lingering in the western hemisphere, especially delighted and surprised the painter. Indeed, so amazingly radiant were the nights at Thurso, that Mr. Collins and his companion wrote letters to London, with the greatest ease, by the bright, pure, northern twilight, which streamed through their bed-room windows at midnight; and which rendered a candle or a lamp an encumbrance rather than an aid.

The great benefit that the painter derived, in his sketching excursions, from the attention of Captain Otter, whose knowledge of the north coast of Scotland was widely extended, may be easily imagined. After six days spent most agreeably at Thurso, it was time for Mr. Collins to resign further study of scenery, which, after his past experience of the softer beauties of Italian nature, presented itself to his eye under a delightful novelty and freshness of aspect, and to proceed at once upon his northward journey. This was accomplished by returning to Wick, and starting thence, by steamer, for Lerwick, the chief town of Shetland. (II, pp. 213–214)

2. For 'North Britain'.

3. That distance is the return journey between Thurso and John O'Groats. This famous most northerly point of mainland Britain is named after the octagonal house of Jan de Groot, a Dutchman who settled there at the end of the fifteenth century and started up the first regular ferry service to the Orkneys. This was on the orders of James IV, in order to tie the islands, previously part of Denmark and Norway, to Scotland. The journey to Wick was about the same distance.

4. On the recto leaf is a letter from WmC to ‘My dearest Harriet’, presumably of the same date. The letter opens:

Willy having furnished you with an account of our wishes respecting the letters we hope to receive I have only to add that I am most anxious to hear from you and that I wish you would write more frequently the last we received is dated Wednesday and an answer to which we wrote the same evening.

[0014] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 2 JULY 1842

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/9), with a note from WmC added.¹ Published: B&C, I, pp. 12–13. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 7.

Lerwick | Shetland | July 2nd 1842

My dear Mother/

Most of the spare moments that I have wanted during our journey have made their appearances here, so that I am able to give you a detailed account of our present proceedings.

“The principal features of this place” (to borrow Mr Pickwick’s phrase)² are, Dutchmen, Peat bogs, Ragged Ponies, Beggars, and Fine Scenery. One of our first excursions here, was on ponies to Scalloway a fishing town about 8 miles from Lerwick, the Governor’s sketch will give you a better idea of the scenery than my pen and I will therefore merely tell you that we were entertained there on politics oatcake and whisky by a shoemaker whose hand nose and mouth are one of the sights of the place my verdict upon them is – monstrous! and dirty.

We have made another tour to Sumburgh Head (mentioned by Scott in the Pirate) it is 30 miles from head quarters. After we had ridden as far as Bigton (20 miles) Mr Bruce who lives there insisted upon our walking in and taking tea with [del] him.³ While discussing fowl and ham and the charms of the scenery it began to rain as if all the water in the world was being emptied on the elevated roof that sheltered us. Mr Bruce declared we must sleep there so sleep we did after talking till 12 o’clock. After breakfast Mr B– accompanied us half the way to Sumburgh and there bade us a hearty adieu. This is the usual practice here and the best bed room in every Zetland House is always kept for the use of strangers. That day we rode 40 miles and “Il padrone” was very tired.⁴

Correct information is a quality undiscoverable in the common people here they have the most lofty disregard of elementary distances and the most extraordinary spirit of inquisitiveness I ever saw. If a common labourer meets you he lingers to [del] converse thus – “Good morning Sir” (a pause). “If you please Sir you’ll just be staying at Lerwick. Where do you come from if you please Sir? Your name is no Henderson is it? You’ll be from London &&[”] – All this without the least idea that this curiosity is at all disagreeable.

The paper I write to you on was purchased of an old gentleman most awfully drunk after wringing both our hands with the tears in eyes asking us to his house and almost falling back with astonishment at the likeness between your caro sposo⁵ and myself he began to talk about you. Taking my hand in both his and detaining me with what the fashionable novels call “a gentle force” he wheezed forth in a sentimental and sickly tone of voice.

“Ha! Ha! Ha! Ho! Ho! Ho! you’ll be able to swear Ha! Ha! that your mother is a most amiable most delightful most accomplished most splendid woman Ha! Ha! Ho! Ho! Ho! Ha –[”] I assured him most devoutly that I could and left him with his hands outstretched for another shake and a sweet smile irradiating his venerable countenance

We start on Monday evening for Wick on our homeward route but of the precise time we shall be “sur le chemin” I am at present ignorant. I hope you have prepared Mr A for our prolonged stay as directed in our last letter. Give my love to Charlie when you write to him. Remember me to Miss Otter. I hope we shall find on our return that you have accompanied her to Portsmouth and believe me

Your affectionate son | William Wilkie Collins⁶

1. Reproduced in Memoirs, II, pp. 224–225.

2. This precise phrase is not in fact found in Dickens’s first novel, where the closest equivalent is in the description of Namby's coffee-room, 'the principal features of which were fresh sand and stale tobacco smoke' (ch. 40).

3. The only Bruce family recorded in Bigtown in the 1841 Census was that of William Bruce (b. 1799), his wife Agnes who was ten years younger, and their four children aged from one to eight. Six other people lived in the house. Bruce can be traced over the next two censuses as a 'farmer' and 'landed proprietor'.

4. For a more detailed account of the Shetland visit in general, and of the excursions to Scalloway and Sumburgh Head in particular, see WC's Memoirs, II, pp. 214–225. For WmC's sketches on Shetland, see the five line engravings in the illustrated Abbotsford edition of The Pirate (Robert Cadell, 1844). These were of the Orkney Islands from Thurso Bay, Scalloway Bay, the Valley of Tingwall on the Road from Scalloway to Lerwick, the Coast of Zetland, and the Coast of Zetland near the Noss.

5. WC's schoolboy Italian for 'dear husband'.

6. The remainder of the paper is taken up with a long letter from WmC to his wife.

[0015] TO WILLIAM COLLINS, 24 AUGUST 1842

MS: Morgan (MA 3155/5), folded and directed.¹ Published: B&C, I, pp. 13–14. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 8.

Strand | 24th August 1842

My dear Father/

True to my agreement, I hasten to tell you that no material change has as yet taken place in the constitutions of Charlie, Margaret, Susan, The House, or your humble servant. Last night, on my return from M^{rs} Grey's,² I marched direct to the front door, bolted, doubled locked & examined it myself, I put a head into the drawing room, a nose into the parlour, and a hand on every available window lock that I came to, and went to bed with a horrible foreboding that something would certainly happen, on account of this my third attempt at universal carefulness. The two former as Mama will recollect proved abortive, but this as far as I have been able to discover, is as effective as you could possibly wish.

Pray write and let me know whether that abominable engine of destruction in which you yesterday ventured yourself, has deposited you uninjured at Southsea. I assure you I am positively nervous this morning, about that, and everything else, in consequence of the conversation at Mrs G's. It turned (it generally somehow does whenever I [del] /am in her company/) upon literature, and I sat with my back to the window, and my hand in my pocket, freezing my horrified auditors by a varied recital of the most terrible portions of the Monk and Frankenstein. Every sentence that fell from my lips, was followed in rapid succession by – "Lor!" "Oh!" "Ah!" "He! He!" "Good Gracious"! &c &c.

None of our country relations I am sure ever encountered in their whole lives before such a hash of diablerie, demonology, & massacre with their Souchong and bread and butter. I intend to give them another [del] course, emphasizing, the Ancient Mariner, Jack the Giant Killer, The Mysteries of Udolpho and an enquiry into the life and actions (when they were little girls) of the witches in Macbeth.

The news this morning is Lord Auckland's arrival in London, and a deluge of attacks upon his government in India.³ The Scotch are speculating upon how cheaply they can dress at the Queen's drawing room in Edinburgh. The ladies – saving creatures! – won't get court dresses, so they go in bonnets; and the gentle citizens, shudder at the idea of all appearing in blue coats and bright buttons, an idea that must have been started by two or three prodigal Englishmen I fear.⁴ There is a little stealing, a little suicide, a little rioting,⁵ a little "dropping down dead suddenly", a little larceny, and a great deal of twaddle in the paper besides⁶ – but nothing worthy of "my grey goose quill" or of your perusal.

My letter, is as usual, rambling and ill written; however the best of it to you, is at the first, and the worst of it, is comprised in the three little capital letters at the end. Give my love to Mama and tell her Charlie caught by the blandishments of Davis is going to have a new pair of⁷ Make my kindest remembrances to Miss Otter, M^{rs} Otter, Miss Musgrave, and any other members of the "Clan", that may be at Gloucester Place,

And believe me | your affectionate Son | W.W.C.

1. To: 'William Collins Esqre R.A. | To the care of Miss Otter | 1. Gloucester Place | Southsea | Portsmouth', with the initials 'W.W.C.' in the lower left corner. There is a barely legible postmark: 'AUG 24 | 1842 | A'.

2. Referring to WC's maternal aunt, Catherine Gray née Geddes (1796–1882).

3. George Eden, Earl of Auckland (1784–1849: ODNB), Whig politician, who was appointed governor-general of India from March 1836 under the Melbourne administration. His governorship aimed to promote administrative reform but was discredited by 'Auckland's Folly' – the sanctioning in October 1838 of British intervention in Afghanistan. This was initially successful but eventually led to the military debacle of the overrunning of the British garrison in November 1841. In February 1842 Auckland was recalled by the recently formed Conservative government under Peel's leadership and replaced by Lord Ellenborough. He arrived in London from Portsmouth Harbour on the morning of 23 August.

4. Referring to discussion of the dress code at the Queen's drawing-room in Holyrood Palace, Edinburgh, on Friday, 2 September, a key event during her forthcoming visit to Scotland.

5. Referring to Chartist disturbances in the manufacturing districts.

6. We have been unable to ascertain to which of the London morning papers WC specifically refers. On the day in question, the columns of most papers were in fact dominated by reports from the manufacturing districts; the Morning Chronicle led with an editorial in praise of Auckland's administrative abilities but did not mention the planned reception at Holyrood, while the Times, Standard, and Morning Post all seem to have largely overlooked Auckland's return.

7. WC draws what appear to be a pair of breeches, 2 cms in length, following the word 'of'.

[3340] TO THE BURSAR OF WORCESTER COLLEGE, 14 OCTOBER 1843

MS: Worcester (WOR/BUR1/22/2/33). Published: A&C12, p. 3.

446, Strand¹ 14th Oct: 1843

RECEIVED of The Bursar of Worcester College

The sum of Nine Pounds - - | as p^r Bill delivered –

FOR Edm^d Antrobus²

W. Wilkie Collins

£9.--.--³

1. On the printed receipt of Edmund Antrobus. With this document in the Worcester archives are the two bills which this receipt acknowledges payment for. They are dated 25 February and 26 May 1843 and both are for 15 lbs of Suchong Tea at 6/= a pound which is £4-10s-0d, hence the final total here of £9. They are on the headed notepaper of 'Edmund Antrobus | TeaMan to Her Majesty | and to | Queen Adelaide | No. 446 Strand West'. These bills could also be in the hand of WC but are not signed. Two other bills to Worcester College of 1841 and 1842 are also in the archive. They do not seem to be in WC's hand.

2. Edmund Edward Antrobus (1806–86) was a prominent tea-merchant, whose children had been painted by WmC. As a friend of the family he gave Wilkie his first job at his office, close to Coutts & Co. at the western end of the Strand. There is more on his business at www.antrobuspages.co.uk where similar documents in other hands can be seen. WC worked as a clerk for the tea merchant from 1841 to 1845 but little evidence of his work there has hitherto emerged in his letters. This receipt and the documents associated with it show that WC did at least attend to some of his duties as a clerk. See also [3147] to [Charles Ward] of [1841–1845] and [0022] and [0026] to Harriet Collins of 4, 5 September and of 13 September 1844.

3. The total is written in a box beneath an engraved drawing of the shop.

[0018] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 13 JANUARY 1844

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, I, p. 16. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 8–9. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 8.

Strand | Jany 13/44

My dear mother /

I've been in such a halo of Commercial Enterprise since I received your letter of "advice gratis" that this is my first opportunity of telling you that I feel the spirit of "maturity" strong upon me, having been in "a state of grace" ever since the 8th of this month as regards my mental faculties;¹ and in a state of deplorable feebleness as regards my bodily. The parties have knocked me up – I've made two speeches at supper and drunk so much of the juice of the grape that (to use the impassioned language of Elihu the Buzzite a comforter of Job) – "My belly is as wine". We got home after one of the festive scenes at 10 minutes past 4 A.M. Charlie was so horrified at hearing the cock crow that he showed a disposition to whimper and said that people out so late as we, were not in a fit state to die.

We've had some curiously bad dinners and Christy has made some ponderously heavy bread stuff² – in substance, like putty and sugar enclosed in boiled mahogany. Your husband being an imaginative person says tis home-made bread!!! So we eat it, and I make a mental apology to my stomach for every morsel I put into my mouth.

D'ont hurry your departure – work out the Doctors Bill in sea air. Do'nt eat any rumpsteaks. Give me your opinion of the Portsmouth Tarts (mine is favourable) and mourn for W^m Collins Esqre R.A. who will eat no pudding and swears that everything is poison but mutton and bread. He says he laid my case before the Galens of Southampton.³ If they are to be believed – by the time you return I shall have no stomach at all – Vive la Gastronomie! “which being interpreted” means: Damn Digestion!

I've no particular messages, beyond Loves from Devonport Street – we are all well. I wish I could say the same of Mr Antrobus' family⁴ – Poor little Ellen is laid up on an invalid couch in consequence of a weakness in the hip which Sir B. Brodie seems to think requires great care⁵ – The accounts of her are better this morning.

Make my kindest remembrances to Mrs Otter Miss Smallridge and Miss Otter and any other of my friends at Portsmouth whom you may chance to see. In a terrific hurry.

Yours most affectionately | Wilkie Collins

I have had my usual invitation from the Highbury Pedagogue – going on Friday – Mrs C to be embraced by the scholars at ½ past six precisely⁶ – speeches 8 oclock – Bed at one – w'ont sleep there

1. 8 January 1844, his twentieth birthday.

2. Here, 'Christy' is probably WC's maternal aunt Mary Christina Geddes though this might also be a family servant.

3. Galen was a second-century Greek physician from Pergamon in Asia Minor, whose name became a synonym for the art of medicine in mediaeval Europe. Here WC uses the term with reference to two of the sons of the eminent Southampton schoolmaster, John Bullar Sr (1778–1864: ODNB): Dr Joseph Bullar (1808–69) and Dr William Bullar (1810–1869), both then of the Royal South Hampshire Infirmary. See Henry Dayman, The Beloved Physician: A Memoir of the Late Dr Joseph Bullar (Southampton: Sharland, 1869). The Collins and Bullar families seem to have become acquainted in the early 1840s when the eldest son, barrister John Bullar Jr (1807–67), who became an executor of WmC's will, was a near neighbour in Oxford Terrace, Bayswater (Lycett, pp. 56–57).

4. Edward Antrobus (1806–86) was a prominent tea-merchant, whose children had been painted by WmC. As a friend of the family he gave Wilkie his first job at his office, close to Coutts & Co. at the western end of the Strand.

5. Probably Sir Benjamin Collins Brodie (1783–1862), author of Pathological and Surgical Observations on the Diseases of the Joints (1818).

6. Referring to Mrs Cole, wife of WC's former schoolmaster.

[0019] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 30 JULY 1844

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/11). Published: B&C, I, pp. 17–19. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 9.

44^b Strand West | July 30th 1844

My dear Madam

Charlie is a Scribe and I am a Pharisee: for he pays you real attention, while I only talk about it. However I mean to take my turn at the employment epistolary now; and by way of quieting your anxiety about us, I will begin by assuring you that I am as triumphantly Commercial and Charlie as intensely pictorial as ever.

Miss Thompson¹ arrived yesterday evening – Susan,² Mr Brandling³ & “Brother and self” welcomed her – Currant pie, drawing room sofa and captain's biscuit awaited her – Moral conversation soothed her – Bed and washing-stand refreshed her – Breakfast settled her – She is well – “Saluberrissima est”⁴

An invitation came a few days ago from Leslie for you two and your humble servt⁵ – I went – met Mrs Macready – very nice woman – wish her husband was'nt a Radical.⁶

Tomorrow the Horticultural Society have a fête for those who did not use their tickets in the day when “the hurricanoes spouted”.⁷ I shall go – Six military Bands and the Duke of Devonshires [sic] grounds open.

Charlie goes to day to settle with Hogarth about the pictures being removed.⁸ There is a report that the Academy will allow two rooms to be open for the Art-Unionites to choose pictures from.⁹ For my own part, I don’t believe it. The Exhibition closed as usual on Saturday and I doubt their opening it again for anybody.¹⁰ However, in case of such a thing taking place, would the governor like the much-imposed but unalterably benignant “Patriarch” to take his chance with the rest?¹¹

Mrs Gray made us a present a little while ago of half a bread and butter pudding which we had tasted at dinner at her house, and most delicious it was – strange woman that sister of yours!

No letters of consequence have come. The Newtonian epistle of expostulation Charlie says he sent you a day or two back. Has he told you my having the other night to answer the bell at one o’clock in the morning? Never had such fun in my life – called out “who’s there”? – before I opened the door – Sepulchral voice answered – “Phelps” – Vague thought came across my mind that it was the wretched paper-monger of Edinburgh, who ~~had~~ /having/ failed in Commerce as well as in Engraving had come to sponge upon us – Answered – “no Phelps here” – voice returned – “Susan Greene” “All right” says I, “Susan’s up stairs taking a snooze”. “Shes sleeping with my wife” says he “Good Heavens” says I – [“]She’s got the key of my house[”] says he – “Has she”? says I – “Will you wake her”? says he – “With pleasure” says I – “I’ve been from Putney to Chelsea” says he – “Indeed” says I – “And from Chelsea [to] here” says he –

Well, Madam, I let him in; seeing how it was at last. Martha (not the sister of Mary) had been visiting Susan with her brats – her husband had not come to fetch her as he promised. She had given him up for that night and (taking the key of their house with her) had gone to sleep at a neighbours, not being able to carry the brats to Chelsea by herself. This I did not find out till I had woke Susan.

I knocked at their (the servants’) door, and: –

~~~~~
The virgin, she lept from her bed,
As solemn as usual, (confound her!)
With her nose looking devilish red,
And chemises by dozens around her,
Cries she, “what’s the matter? [”] – Says I,
“Mister Phelps you’re unable to [chousely],”
“In the passage he’s piping his eye,”
“Cause you’ve taken the key of his house [”]
Fol de roll!

~~~~~
“I’ve not got it” says she – “Pon my life [”]
Says I, “you’re o’erdoing the spree”!
“You may cheat the man out of his wife,”
“But damn it Maam! give him his key [”]
“You’ll find him, I think, in the hall; [”]
“I leave you my blessing and candle”;
“Ere you seek him just put on a shawl,”
“Or I swear I w’ont answer for scandal. [”]
Fol de roll!

~~~~~
Well, she went down and sent off the unhappy Phelps without his key. What he did, whether he slept anywhere, or took it out in walking the Streets, I don’t know. Susan, of course looked very foolish and made a good many apologies the next morning. I was not surprised at the mess they had all got into, knowing, as I do, what a set of asses the lower orders are in this country.

If you'll stay till I come back from Paris, I'll visit you at Ventnor. Shall you either of you be ~~up~~ /in London/ before I go?

Now, will you answer this question and the other about the Patriarch? It generally takes three letters to make you answer one interrogatory – witness the difficulty we had to get you to ~~answer~~ /reply to/ us about Caulton The Bigamist.<sup>12</sup>

I've only seen Romeo Ward once, for [~~del~~] the last fortnight.<sup>13</sup> He's so taken up with Juliet Chips that he's as impossible to be seen as a picture in the Octagon Room.<sup>14</sup>

Everybody sends regards and felicitations. The longer you keep Mr Collins in the country the better he'll be. Don't let him come up on our account. We look into rooms in the dark – peep about at bars and fastenings – get up early in the morning – don't drink anything like a glass of wine in a day – and are upon tremendously affable terms with the domestics

Upon taking the effect of this letter at a distance it strikes me as being of Bob: Leslie dimensions,<sup>15</sup> so I pull up for the present in the character of yours, my dear Madam,

Very affectionately | Wilkie Collins

Mrs Collins | Mrs Brasiers | Poplar Cottage | Ventnor | Isle of Wight

Charlie is in great tribulation about what he is to say to Crocker who came for the order to remove the pictures as usual.<sup>16</sup> Why is he cut out by Hogarth?

---

1. Presumably a relative of Dr John Thompson (see [0001] to HC, 17 October 1831), more likely his unmarried sister Amelia, who the Collinses had met in Paris (see Lycett, p. 47), than his daughter Catherine (then aged only around 17).

2. Susan Greene, the maid.

3. Henry Charles Brandling (1823–97), an artist who had entered the Royal Academy Schools along with CAC and who was to illustrate WC's Rambles Beyond Railways (1851).

4. Dog Latin intended to mean, 'she is in excellent health'.

5. Charles Robert Leslie, R.A. (1794–1859: ODNB), painter of historical subjects and friend of WmC (see WC, Memoirs, I, pp. 103–104).

6. Catherine Frances Macready (1803/4–1852), née Atkins, wife of William Charles Macready (1793–1873: ODNB), the great actor-manager who held republican views.

7. The reference is to King Lear during the storm on the heath: 'You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout | Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!' (III ii 4–5).

8. Joseph Hogarth, printseller, print moulder and publisher – see [0024] to him, 13 November 1844.

9. Referring to the Art Union of London founded in 1836, which used its annual subscriptions to purchase contemporary works of art which were distributed to its members by lottery.

10. The Royal Academy Summer Exhibition.

11. The four pictures contributed by WmC to the Royal Academy Summer Exhibition of 1844 were: 'The Catechist', 'Morning – Boulogne', 'Seaford – Sussex', and 'A Patriarch'. The last is described by WC as follows:

"The Patriarch," was an effort by the painter, in a branch of Art hitherto untried by him. It was a life-size study of the head, and part of the body of an old man; treated upon those principles of portraiture, which had so much impressed him in the works of the old masters. Painted upon this plan, the figure is designed with great vigour and singleness of effect: the tone of colour throughout the picture is deep, powerful, and subdued; and eloquently reminds the spectator of the high qualities of the school of Art that it follows. The oriental robe in which "The Patriarch" is dressed, was painted from one brought by Sir David Wilkie from the Holy Land, and presented to Mr. Collins by his sister. The picture is in the possession of the painter's family.

(Memoirs, II, pp. 253–254)

12. Unidentified.

13. The first reference in WC's letters to Charles James Ward (1814–1883), who was to marry WC's favourite cousin, Jane Carpenter, in February 1845. On the staff at Coutts bank, he was the older brother of the artist E.M. Ward who WC had met in Rome.

14. 'The Octagon Room at the Royal Academy was considered the "den" – the worst place to have a picture hung in the annual Exhibition' (Peters, p. 63).

15. Probably referring to the large size of the canvas typically employed by Leslie.

16. Alan Bean has informed us that, in a lavishly extra-illustrated copy of WC's Memoirs created by John Platt (private collection), is a note dated 21 July 1843 by WmC, giving instructions to, presumably, the porters at the Royal Academy to deliver the four paintings he had exhibited there that year to 'J. Crocker', who was presumably a commercial picture hanger. On the other hand, WmC must already have had dealings with Joseph Hogarth for some time, since in his capacity as Royal Academy Librarian, the painter had enquired on 17th December 1840 about the price Hogarth would charge for supplying two volumes for holding large prints (note in Platt's copy of the Memoirs).

[0020] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 8 AUGUST 1844

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, I, pp. 20–21. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 10–11.

Strand | 8th Augst 1844

My dear Madam

I enclose a letter from Robertson the Miniature Painter which I think requires an answer.<sup>1</sup>

With regard to The Carpet Bag, if there is nothing else for me, I suppose I must take it though I hate Carpet Bags with a great and bitter hatred. They don't protect your linen from damp, your brushes from breaking and your waistcoats from crumpling as a Portmanteau does. People sit upon a Carpet Bag because it is soft. Trunks tumble upon it for the same reason. There is not an accident to which Luggage is liable that a Carpet Bag does not fall a victim to. It never was meant for anything but a few shirts and stockings that may be knocked about anyhow. It is the most disagreeable machine to pack – the most troublesome to unpack – the most impracticable to carry that human science ever invented: and yet in spite of all these objections I must take it I suppose because I can't get anything else – “necessity's sharp pinch.”<sup>2</sup> I shall pack it myself. That infernal fool Susan will spoil everything if she attempts it. I lectured her the other day upon inhumanity. In her zeal for science, or for her kitchen, (I don't know which) she attempted to re-introduce by the kitten's nose that which the innocent animal had just previously expelled as worthless from an opposite and inferior portion of its body. Charlie tried rage upon the subject with the cook. I tried philosophy with the housemaid. He failed. I succeeded – Purified is the nose of Snooks.<sup>3</sup>

I am very much obliged for the permission to bleed the Estate. I shall take my money in £5 notes. They change them in Paris at an advantage to the English. Charles Ward will recommend me to the man he employed for this purpose.<sup>4</sup>

I will see that Sir A Callcott is inquired after immediately.<sup>5</sup>

Leigh Hunt's sons [sic] wife has been at it again. Charlie commiserated and that was all.<sup>6</sup> Let me only catch any of these hangers on that Mr Collins's No 12 has brought about the house!<sup>7</sup> They would not trouble us again I suspect till the governor returns. – If that great man Malthus had been attended to we should have had no beggars by this time<sup>8</sup>

No other letters of any importance have come – the Carpenters are at Hampton Court.<sup>9</sup>

I thought you had cut Marshall [Clanton].<sup>10</sup> He'll borrow money of you if you don't mind. MacKay you won't be troubled with long.<sup>11</sup> He's just the man to tumble off a high rock during his geological researches. Or you might frighten him to death by one of your vocal performances. He's easily got rid of – poor Devil! The other fellow must be insulted.

Oh those frescoes! Upon my honor I can fancy the spirit of Raffael wandering round the Hall at night and weeping for shame and sorrow as he looks at them.<sup>12</sup> Maclise is the only man there is any hope of. He seems to understand his material at least.<sup>13</sup>

Of course you have heard that the Queen has Duke of Yorked us.<sup>14</sup> Both mother and son going on perfectly well –

Charlie will write tomorrow or next day. Accept our loves and believe me

Ever yours | For Brother & Self | Wilkie Collins

“The confederate” will lend me his box.<sup>15</sup> Is there any harm in taking that instead of the Carpet Bag?

You do'nt say a word about how you got through your day. What can you possibly do with yourselves?

We are going to follow the footsteps of Sterne – from London to Calais – Calais to Montreuil – &c &c &c<sup>16</sup>

---

1. Andrew Robertson (1777–1845), Scottish portrait painter and miniaturist.

2. ‘Necessity's sharp pinch’, King Lear II.iv.211.

3. Snooks, the Collins family cat.
4. Charles James Ward, employee at Coutts' bank, WC's companion on the trip abroad – see [0039] to him of 10 August 1847.
5. Probably Sir August Ward Callcott (1799–1844: ODNB), RA, landscape painter, who died on 25 November of that year.
6. The son of the poet and critic James Henry Leigh Hunt (1784–1859: ODNB), Thornton Leigh Hunt (1810–73: ODNB), was a bohemian journalist who married Catherine Gliddon in 1834, and eventually had ten children by her. WmC's fame as a painter seems to have encouraged Hunt to seek charity from him following the birth of another child.
7. The allusion escapes us. The reference seems to be to the sale of a painting by WC's father, yet the only picture by him numbered 12 in the catalogue of the Royal Academy seems to have been 'Stirling Castle' back in 1824.
8. A reference to An Essay on Population (1803) by Thomas Robert Malthus (1766–1834).
9. Presumably Margaret and William Carpenter, WC's maternal aunt and uncle, together with their six children.
10. Unidentified.
11. Unidentified.
12. Referring to the exhibition of cartoons and frescoes sponsored by the Commissioners on Fine Art which opened at Westminster Hall on Sunday 30 June – see the article 'Exhibition at Westminster-Hall' in the Times, 1 July 1844, p. 3f–g.
13. Daniel Maclise (c. 1806–70: ODNB), painter, friend of CD, whose fresco 'Knight' was also on display at Westminster Hall, and was praised by the Times as 'the gem of the collection'.
14. Referring to the birth at Windsor on 6 August 1844 of Alfred Ernest Albert, fourth child and second son of Victoria and Albert – see the Times, 7 August 1844, p. 5a–c. The title of Duke of York is traditionally given to the second son of the British monarch, though in this case the title was not conferred and Alfred was created Duke of Edinburgh in 1866.
15. His travelling companion, Charles Ward
16. Referring to Laurence Sterne's A Sentimental Journey through France and Italy (1768).

[0021] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 28 AUGUST 1844

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/12), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, p. 22. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 12.

Hotel de Tours | Place de la Bourse | Paris | Aug<sup>t</sup> 28th 1844

My dear Mother

We have just arrived after a journey of four and twenty consecutive hours at the above house of call for man and beast.<sup>2</sup> I am so horribly hot, tired and hungry that this letter must be merely a warranty that we are both hitherto "sound in wind and limb". The voyage was remarkably calm and the journey by Diligence favoured with the loveliest weather – the situation here is the most "central" in Paris – within a few minutes walk of the Palais Royal The Louvre &&

You shall, in a few days, have a more extended account of our non-adventures and some idea of our future plans. Answer this as soon as possible for I want to know where you are and whether those infernal domestics have got their "governor" or not. Ward sends remembrances – and I love and apologies for the shortness of this letter.

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

Mrs Collins | 1 Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens

---

1. To: 'Mrs Collins | 1 Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | London'. 'Angleterre' is erased and there is a postmark 'L | AU-31 | 1844'. On the back the letter is readdressed in another hand to 'M<sup>rs</sup> Collins | Mrs W<sup>m</sup> Smith | Shedfield Green | Farnham | Han[ts]'.

2. WC and Charles Ward, on the first of four summer trips to the continent together during the 1840s. On this occasion they returned to England in late September.

[0022] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 4, 5 SEPTEMBER 1844<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/13), folded and directed.<sup>2</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 22–24 (dated 4 September 1844). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 12 (dated 4 September 1844).

Hotel de Tours | Place de la Bourse | Sept 4th 1844

My dear Mother

On our return from St Denis where I had been thinking about the death of the kings of France (who are all buried there) I received your intimation of the lives of my relations – a much more satisfactory subject for reflection.

We are now thoroughly settled here – and are dissipating fearfully – gardens, theatres and Cafés being the conglomerate parts of the Parisian Paradise we are most inhabiting. Last Sunday we went to Versailles. Quantity of Pictures there tremendous. Quality exactly the contrary – about half a dozen seemed to me exquisitely beautiful; but the rest (being those pictorial abominations called “Battle pieces”) I could not appreciate. The Louvre we have visited several times. “The Judgment of Brutus” and “The Wreck of the Medusa” are worth the journey to Paris alone.<sup>3</sup> The first I think the very finest historical picture of modern times. The Luxembourg Gallery we have yet to penetrate.

I saw yesterday a glorious subject for Charlie – a dead soldier laid out naked at the Morgue; like an unsaleable cod fish – all by himself upon the slab. He was a fine muscular old fellow who had popped into the water in the night and was ~~laid out~~ /exposed/ to be recognized by his friends.

We breakfast out – dine out – read out and do every thing in fact in the open air but sleeping. Ward was most horribly bebugged on the first night of our sojourn but has changed his room and escaped further nocturnal visitation. I have seen nothing of the kind yet. The exertion of getting into my bed (which is as high as an elephants [sic] back and as soft as the Slough of Despond) being quite sufficient for me without the further trouble of noticing live stock.

Will you write to Mr. Antrobus when he returns (about the middle of this month) to ascertain the utmost extension of leave of absence that he will allow me. I should like to know it before the end of Sept in order to settle my plans. Will he give me the first week in October? or more? or less? or what?<sup>4</sup>

The weather is delicious not too hot by any means. You shall have a further bulletin of our adventures in a few days. While this fine weather lasts, I find great difficulty in giving /saving/ time for anything but sight-seeing. [del] Finishing this letter today is impossible Ward being outrageous for his dinner and I being interrupted by mortality’s most important visitation – clothes from the wash.

12 o’Clock

I have just got home from the Opera (Othello) The music most monotonously dismal and Duprez most grievously hoarse.<sup>5</sup> It is a noble Theatre, however; and its Wardrobe (judging by tonight’s [sic] performance) is superb.

Talking about Wardrobes – M<sup>r</sup> Collins ought to go to Calais. The Costumes of the people are so admirably characteristic. Upon second thoughts, though, I recollect hearing him ~~talk~~ speak about the place himself – so I may as well spare my enthusiasm on this head, as, under existing circumstances, it may turn out a bore.

Our journey to Paris was pleasant enough while it was day; but at night ’twas rather disagreeable. We could only get places in the banquette (a kind of pigeon house among the luggage at the top of the carriage). We were – three dogs and three passengers besides the conductor. The defence [del] against the night air was an ill-fitting glass above, and a leather apron below. What with the fidgetting of the dogs behind me, the howling of the driver to his horses, the melancholy parody upon snoring executed by Ward – the grunting of the fellow passengers and the indefatigable cigar smoking of the conductor I found sleeping impracticable and took it out in nocturnal meditation upon “everything in general and nothing in particular”.

We got to Paris at 12 o’Clock the next day having raced the whole distance with a rival vehicle. The /contending/ drivers [del] swearing “three-volumes-post-octavo” – full of oaths at each other at every opportunity.

I am delighted to hear of Mr Otters [sic] promotion and of the smooth current of affairs at Devonport Street. When /you/ write again let it be to the same direction as before. Ward has gone to bed after desiring his remembrances and I must do the same after sending love to all

ever yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | Let me hear again soon. [del] When all your plans are definitely settled “haste me to know it”, for they will, of course, rather influence mine. You say you will leave Miss Otters [sic] before we come. You had better stay there I think (they are sure to ask you) and we can be stowed away anywhere. Of this, however, here after.

-
1. Internal evidence shows WC resuming the letter after midnight, i.e. on the 5th.
  2. To: ‘Mrs Collins | 1 Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | London’, with ‘Angleterre’ in the lower left corner. This address is erased and on the back the letter is readdressed in another hand to ‘W<sup>m</sup> Collins Esqr | Mr W<sup>m</sup> Smith | Shedfield Green | Farnham | Hants’. There are two largely decipherable postmarks: ‘[RJ] | SP 7 | 1844’ and ‘FAREHAM | SP8 | 1844’.
  3. By Poussin and Géricault respectively – the latter painting being more generally known under the title ‘The Raft of the Medusa’ (Le Radeau de la Méduse).
  4. Gilbert Duprez (1806–1896), French principal tenor at the Opéra de Paris, who performed the part of Rodrigo in Rossini’s Otello (1816).
  5. In the event, WC seems to have returned by the end of September – see [0023] to HC, 21 September 1844.

[0023] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 21 SEPTEMBER 1844

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/14), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 24–25. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 12.

Hotel des Tuileries | Rue de Rivoli | Sept 21/44 | Saturday

My dear Mother

We have at last settled our plans. We start for Rouen on Wednesday next – stay there a day and then proceed to Havre and Southampton: so as to be at Miss Otters either the 28th, 29th, or 30th (on which of these days we shall arrive I cannot say for certain). Thus I shall easily be able to begin my official duties on the morning of October 3rd.

I have just returned from the Tour of the Churches – nothing but weddings going on – great mass of the people here always splice each other on Saturday because the nights [sic] ball does not interfere with the next days [sic] work; when that next day is Sunday. D’ont [sic] take much interest in Matrimony – so c’ant [sic] tell you anything more about the ceremony of marriage here than that the bridegrooms looked foolish and wore ill-cut coats and that the Priests looked sulky and had generally speaking red noses

Going tonight (as a duty) to the Theatre Français – to see Rachel in Les Horaces.<sup>2</sup> Know by bitter experience what a boor it will be – men in buff coloured blankets with fuzzy heads growling about their beloved country through five long acts with porticos ad libitum behind them for scenery. Have taken care to secure comfortable seats with spring cushions, so as to go sleep with dignity. Shall lie furiously about it in England – say it was superb &&& to gain credit for a classical taste

How I shall be able /to/ stand the tea & coffee breakfasts at home I d’ont [sic] know! Lambert<sup>3</sup> and I take to the déjeuner à la fourchette regularly. Oysters and Chablis – omlettes [sic] and radishes much better than that infernal charity-boy-cum-servant-maid-compound commonly called bread and butter. Yesterday we had some fish that literally made Ward bilious to look at it – afraid I shall be as fat as a pig if I stay here much longer – do nothing but eat and drink – very wrong I know – shall repent upon leg of mutton and rice-pudding when I get home

Ward has bought the [hog tools]<sup>4</sup> – he says they are capital. Three dozen is the quantity he has procured.

There will be no time I am afraid for you to write to me again before I leave Paris – your next letter had better be directed to Eastlands.

I was indeed – and am still – very much shocked to hear of poor Mr Tweedell’s death. He was [del] a really clever-fellow and a most admirable companion. [del] It is a most unfortunate commencement for the surveying labours of our friends in the north<sup>5</sup>

The weather with us is breaking fast. For the last two or three days it has been [del] chilly and cloudy and I am afraid our homeward journey will be a very rainy one. However we have no reason to complain. Three weeks of sunshine being enough to satisfy everyone but British Agriculturists.

Give my kindest remembrances to the party at Eastlands and with love to you all believe me yours affectionately
Wilkie Collins

---

1. To: 'Mrs Collins | at Miss Otter's | Eastlands | Southsea | Portsmouth | Hants | Angleterre'. Postmark torn and obscured.
2. The classical French actress Mme Rachel (Élisa Félix, 1820–58), who made her debut at the Théâtre Français on 12 June 1838 as Camille in Corneille's Les Horaces.
3. Unidentified, but see the references to the English visitor Charles/Charley Lambert in two subsequent letters to HC from Paris in 1845: [0026] 13 September and [0029] 30 September.
4. We cannot make better sense of this doubtful phrase.
5. Mr Tweedell remains unidentified, though he may have been a professional connection of WmC's friend Captain Otter, who, when WC accompanied his father to the north of Scotland in the summer of 1842, was 'engaged in surveying the coast of Thurso' (Memoirs, II, p. 209).

[0024] TO JOSEPH HOGARTH,<sup>1</sup> 13 NOVEMBER 1844

MS: Texas (HANLEY II D555Ef, mounted in John Forster, Life of Charles Dickens, extra-illustrated, specially bound edition (1872–4), V). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 12–13 (with recipient unidentified), amended A&C8, p. 23.

Nov 13. 1844 | 1 Devonport S' | Hyde Park

Dear Sir

My father has commissioned me to re-write the descriptive matter for "Rustic Hospitality". My composition accompanies this note.<sup>2</sup> And will I hope prove tolerably satisfactory upon inspection

I remain Dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | My father wishes to know if you have not received from Mc'Queen<sup>3</sup> the proofs of the "Pirate";<sup>4</sup> if so, he will be obliged to you to send them<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Joseph Hogarth (1801–1879; National Portrait Gallery Directory of British Picture Framemakers), printseller, print moulder, and publishers of 60 Portland Street. See [0019] to HC, 30 July 1844, and [3200] to Hogarth, 18 November 1844.

2. WmC's picture Rustic Hospitality was painted in 1834. According to WC's Memoirs, II, p. 42: 'A repetition of it was then produced by the painter, for Mr Hogarth, the printseller; who published a clever and faithful line engraving from it, by Mr Outrim, in "Finden's Gallery of Modern Art"'. In fact it was originally included in Part X (issued 24 June 1842) of the sixteen-part series Finden's Royal Gallery of British Art (1838–49), which was 'Published by J. Hogarth' and 'Printed by Mc'Queen'. A later edition, which we have not been able to trace but which presumably included WC's revised description, appeared under the title Finden's Gallery of Modern Art, described as 'a Series of Highly-finished Steel Engravings, Illustrative of the Character, Beauty, and Costume of Many Lands; with Original Descriptive Tales'.

3. Probably William Benjamin McQueen, copper plate printer of 184 Tottenham Court Road (Post Office London Directory, 1843).

4. Referring to the illustrated Abbotsford edition of The Pirate (1844; vol. 6 out of 12 of the Waverley Novels, issued by Robert Cadell between 1842 and 1847), which had already been published (see Times advertisement, 28 October 1844, p. 12a). WmC was commissioned to make the drawings for five line engravings of Orkney and Shetland for this edition (Memoirs, II, pp. 209–223).

5. There is a line drawn across the page following WC's postscript, and beneath a note from WmC, reading 'My son had, about ten minutes before the arrival of your note, written the enclosed. W. C.'

[3200] TO JOSEPH HOGARTH, 18 NOVEMBER 1844

MS: Unknown. On sale: Myers & Co., 59 High Holborn, London (Auction catalogue, No. 219, 1918), lot 85.<sup>1</sup>
Published: A&C8, p. 3.

...you have fallen into a very strange mistake regarding the description of Rustic Hospitality.... The MS. in question was MY composition and not my father's (W. Collins, R.A.) and he never even SAW it until it had been fairly copied and submitted to my mother's criticism in the first instance.<sup>2</sup>

-
1. In addition to the 1½ pp. manuscript letter, the lot also included an engraved portrait of WC.
  2. See [0024] to Hogarth, 13 November 1844.

[2999] TO A REPRESENTATIVE OF LONGMAN & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 8 MARCH 1845

Draft: BL (Ad. Ms. 42575 f. 158).<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C2, pp. 59–61.

March 8/45

My dear Sir

I am sorry to again /to/ trouble you, but the business between us has suddenly taken so ~~unfortun and un~~ /unexpected and/ to me so unaccountable a turn, that I cannot but express to you my /great/ surprise. When I left the MS with you so long since as the 25 of Jan<sup>y</sup>. you ~~did not~~ gave me ~~every~~ reason to hope that sh<sup>d</sup> the gentleman you were in the habit of consulting approve of the work (although in most cases you did not venture to publish ~~the first work of an author an unknown~~ /at your own risk works of unknown/ authors) that ~~as a favor~~ you might accede to my wishes, and at this and /a/ subsequent ~~interviews~~ meeting, you asked me whether I would object to be responsible for some ~~share~~ part of the expenses, sh<sup>d</sup> the work not have a fav succeed, I did not absolutely decline this proposal but stating that, I /as/ I sh<sup>d</sup> be sorry you sh<sup>d</sup> be a sufferer I had no objection to the your suggestion, to a moderate extent.

Now Sir judge my surprise, when, after the approval of your friend had been obtained and he ~~and all as well as ourselves~~ /all were agreed/ /and all/ agreed on the necessity of no time being lost in the bringing out the work (from the interest the public felt /feel/ at this moment in the local nature of the subject)<sup>3</sup> ~~you d and at I say you~~ /and/ that after the lapse of more than a month, you decline ~~having~~ taking any risk in the publication, and only express your willingness to publish the work for me, why surely if I had intended to do this at my own expense, not a moment need have been lost, no consultations ~~were~~ /would have been/ required ~~but one in the way of business~~ and the book ~~w~~ could have been in the hands of the public at this moment.

I regret that your pressing occupations will not allow you to favor me with a ~~call~~ visit and /that/ my state of health prevents my again calling upon you – ~~but~~ I have no idea of offering it to any other house to meet with ~~more~~ /fresh/ delays and with this very great disadvantage, that I cannot now offer the MS to any other person as I did to you, with the ~~knowl~~ /assurance/ that not one line of it had been read by any other Bookseller publisher – seeing then that there

And now my dear Sir, if upon ~~the review of the~~ consideration of the above circumstances you ~~we~~ are disposed to agree to the your original plan proposal, of publishing the work upon my ~~taking a making myself~~ becoming responsible for a portion of the loss, sh<sup>d</sup> there be any – I am willing to consider myself liable to the amount of one third of the outlay, ~~and~~ /begging/ ~~you will favor me oblige me by~~ /you will oblige me by as early/ an answer as ~~early~~ may suit your convenience, or ~~will~~ /that you will/ favor me ~~with~~ /of/ /with/ a call ~~you will oblige~~

I remain yours [truly] | W. Collins

---

1. Probably either Thomas Longman (1804–79: ODNB) or William Longman (1813–77: ODNB), the brothers then in control of Longman, Brown, Green, and Longmans, the Paternoster Row publishing firm to which the MS of WC's novel 'Ioláni, or Tahiti as it was' was first submitted. The identification of the firm itself derives from an 1887 journal article based on an interview with WC:

While in the tea-merchant's office, I completed a wild extravagant story, the scene of which, I remember, was laid in Tahiti before its discovery by the English. The manuscript of this tale I induced my good father to submit to Messrs Longman, whose reader presently returned it with an intimation that the story was hopelessly bad, and that in his opinion the writer had not the smallest aptitude for romance-writing, and had no possible prospect of succeeding in a literary career. I met the worthy man years after at a dinner party, when 'The Woman in White' was running through Household Words, and I remember that neither of us could forbear from bursting out a-laughing at the rencontre.

Two earlier accounts of the rejection of 'Ioláni', both also based on information from WC, do not specify the publishing house to which the MS of was initially submitted. Compare: 'he wrote a novel of the most wildly impracticable kind, on the subject of savage life in Polynesia, before the discovery of the group of islands composing that country by civilized man. This curious work was offered to all the publishers in London, and, it is needless to say, declined' (Edmund Yates, 'Men of Mark. No. 2 – W. Wilkie Collins', Train 3:18 (June 1857) pp. 352–357); and "'The scene of the story,'" says he [WC], "was laid in the Island of Tahiti, before the period of its discovery by European navigation! My youthful imagination ran riot among the noble savages, in scenes which caused the respectable British publisher to declare that it was impossible to put his name on the title-page of such a novel' ([George M. Towle], 'Wilkie Collins', Appleton's Journal 4:75 (3 September 1870) pp. 278–281). [0026] to HC, 13 September 1845, suggests that the MS was by then in the hands of Chapman and Hall.

2. Though Peters (pp. 64–65 & p. 451 n. 25) assumes that WmC both submitted the novel and wrote the letter, we are convinced that the draft is in the hand of WC, though the signature points towards his father. The contents (notably the reference to 'my state of health') suggest that the initial visit to the publishing house was indeed paid by WmC, but the nature of the revisions suggests that the draft itself was written entirely by WC, though formally on his father's behalf. Given that there are no other extant letters concerning this matter, we have concluded that it is appropriate to include this item in the run of WC's correspondence. These special circumstances also explain why here we have given as full a transcription as possible, including all cancellations and evidence of later insertion.

3. In the mid-1840s, there were many reports and discussions in the British press concerning conflicts between the English and French generally in the South Pacific, and specifically on the island of Tahiti, which had been in the British sphere of influence since the Society Islands were named by Captain Cook in 1769. In 1842, the French military persuaded the ruling monarch, Queen Pomare IV, to accept a French protectorate, and in the following year occupied the island, deposed the Queen, and expelled the acting British Consul, the missionary Rev. George Pritchard. News of these events, of course, took several months to reach Europe. Though disclaiming the act of occupation, the French government declared the protectorate valid. Tahitian resistance to the French presence seems to have continued until 1847, while the protectorate remained in force until 1880, when the island formerly became a French colony.

[0025] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 9, 10 SEPTEMBER 1845<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/15), folded and directed.<sup>2</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 26–27 (dated [9 September 1845]).
Summary: BGLL, I, p. 13.

Tuesday evening | Hotel des Tuileries | Rue de Rivoli | Paris

My dear Madam

I arrived at this place (without my baggage) this evening. The infernal boobies who govern the station at Rouen must have forgotten to put it (my portmanteau) in the luggage van. I made a tremendous disturbance about their negligence at the station here; the result of which has been a promise to recover "my effects" by tomorrow. As I saw my luggage safely delivered to the railway porter, I have no doubt that I shall find it on application, tomorrow afternoon.

On the passage across, there were only three people well enough to sit at the dinner table; of which trio, the heir of your late father's estates made a voracious and most important unit. As, (like "Marlow") "I generally make my father's son welcome where ever he goes"<sup>3</sup> I made acquaintance which every soul in the ship, from a good-natured negro who told me he was a student in philosophy! to a man with a blood-spotted nose, who knew all the works, of all the artists, ancient and modern, all over the world. Ere, however, I reached Paris "my very good friends" vanished into thin air; with the exception of a very agreeable /family/ party, who visit this earthly paradise for the first time and whose graces I may yet cultivate[.]<sup>4</sup> Like young Rapid I have "kept moving" ever since my arrival;<sup>5</sup> having shaken hands with every soul in this, my beloved hostelry, taken a bath, ordered boots, eaten a dinner, changed a sovereign, smoked cigars imbibed coffee and procured one of the chambermaids neck-handkerchief, as an impromptu nightcap, within a couple of hours after my first setting foot in "the capital of Europe"

As for Rouen, it is very fine indeed; I got a man in a blue blouse to take me all over the place in two hours – Gothic architecture, painted windows, palace of Justice, Joan of Arc, Chateau de Bellafort – by the powers, I saw them all!

Tell Charley (in case he comes home first) that the keys are in the cabinet drawer. Mrs Hall sent the letter of introduction the evening before I set off.<sup>6</sup> It is (with the M. S.) in the same berth as the keys.

I am so horrifically sleepy, that I am incapable of writing another line: beyond – yours affectionately

W. W. C.

Wednesday morning –

Write as soon as you receive this, telling me how the Governor goes on and what you mean to do about Torquay. How is Charley? Have you heard from him again?

News about my luggage must come in my next. I do not go to recover it till after post-time

---

1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | At E. E. Antrobus’ Esqre | 9. Beacon Terrace | Torquay | Devonshire | England’, with ‘Angleterre’ added in the lower left corner. There are two postmarks, both largely illegible, though the fragments ‘10 | SE’ and ‘1845’ are visible.

2. The postscript shows WC concluding the letter on the following day, Wednesday the 10th.

3. The words are those of Charles Marlow, the young heir who enjoys the society of working-class women, to the wealthy Mr Hardcastle, who intends Marlow to marry his own daughter, in Act IV of Goldsmith’s comedy She Stoops to Conquer (1773). Unlike that of the previous summer, WC’s 1845 expedition to Paris was made not with Charles Ward but alone.

4. [0028] to HC, 23, 24 September 1845, reveals that the English family in question, with whom WC seems to have spent a good deal of time on this solo trip, was named Cormick.

5. Thomas Morton’s comedy A Cure for the Heart-Ache (1797) features a pair of characters named Old and Young Rapid, for both of whom ‘kept moving’ is the catch phrase.

6. Presumably referring to the Irish author Mrs Samuel Carter Hall (1800–81: ODNB), née Anna Maria Fielding, who was then assisting her husband in his role as owner and editor of the monthly magazine, The Art-Union. The specific nature of the letter of introduction eludes us, while the manuscript may well have been that of WC’s first novel Ioláni.

[0026] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 13 SEPTEMBER 1845

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/16), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 27–29. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 13.

Saturday Sept 13th 1845 | Hotel des Tuileries | Rue de Rivoli

My dear Mother/

The day after I wrote my last letter, I recovered the baggage, by dint of “apostrophising” everybody at the station in the most forcible expressions I could muster up.

I am so weak with last night’s laughter (at “Le Medicin malgré lui”)<sup>2</sup> and so [del] /crammed/ with this mornings breakfast (oysters and cutlets) that writing this letter is by no means an employment of ease. I have scarcely been “all alone by myself” an hour at a time since my arrival. Yesterday, in sweating through the Louvre (with the travelling companions I told you of in my last) I [del] met – Solomon Alexander Hart. R.A.<sup>3</sup> and the day before drove past William Hookham Carpenter<sup>4</sup> in the Place Vendôme. An addition to these meetings with the British will arrive, next week, in the person of Charles Lambert<sup>5</sup> and three ladies.

Doctor Bullar’s<sup>6</sup> letter of introduction, I have not yet presented. Mr [Choveserk]’s<sup>7</sup> /note/ I delivered when I applied for my monies; but the individual indicated thereon, was not in the office to greet the individual indicated therein. I shall use him when I apply for my next remittance.

I have got some loves of boots in the newest Parisian fashion, which is:– Toes, broader than any other part – a freak of dandyism most delightful to people with “corns, bunnions [sic] and callosities”.

They have made a play, here, of the whirlwind at Rouen, which I saw the other night. It began with a chorus of manufacturers (sung out of tune) and ended in thunder lightning, fire from Heaven, smoking ruins, and a fat woman in tights and muslin petticoats who said she was Charity. It was evidently intended to be very impressive and, as the audience laughed prodigiously, I suppose it was.

Paris is twice as full as it was last year. The [del] Palais Royal is /now/ encased in denser clouds of tobacco smoke and /more/ crammed with a ~~more~~ heterogeneous crowd of people, every evening, than ever I saw it before. The children who assemble there are worth the journey from England, alone. An evening or two since, a creature (whether “masculine, feminine or neuter”, I know not) bowled his hoop against the toe of my boot and /made/ me an apology (he seemed just able to walk and talk) so elaborately civil that I was perfectly astounded and took off my hat to him “in the impulse of the moment”. The men stick to their beards, their arguments, and their sugar and water, as usual; and the women eat as many bonbons, wear as many “bustles” & make as many speeches, as ever. The gutters hold their rights unfringed, the churches rejoice in their accustomed emptiness, the sugar plums still glitter in gorgeous indelicacy of design, each shopkeeper leaves his business to his wife and each grisette is redolent of sentiment and prodigal of smiles, as in the days of Sterne – in short (saving that it is more desecrated /than usual/ by the presence of the beef-eating British) Paris flourishes its “flesh pots of Egypt” and nourishes “the old man Adam” with the /serious/ industry and perseverance of former days.

Why the deuce don’t you come over here instead of vegetating among the dairies of Devonshire? My family (I put them down as my family, to save trouble, in the books of the Louvre!) want me to go to Nice with them.<sup>8</sup> Could you not send me £100, upon the strength of my M. S. and Chapman and Hall?<sup>9</sup> Or could you not make up your minds to take the journey yourselves and stay at Nice (think of the Protestant Church and the “resident English” [del]!) while I conveyed the younger branches of “my family” to – what Plummer the portly calls – “Cara Italia”? Life is short – we should enjoy it. I am your affectionate son

W. Wilkie Collins – you should humour me!

P.S. | Give my love to the Governor and tell him that I will eat “plain food” (when I come back to England) and read Duncan’s Logic and Butler’s Analogy (when I have no chance of getting anything else to peruse)<sup>10</sup>

Pray find out, whenever you think it Politic to do so, the utmost extent of leave that I can obtain from Mr. A. I left London the 7th of this month.<sup>11</sup> I ought to have my liberty extended to the 15th or 20th of October – at least.<sup>12</sup>

---

1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | At E. E. Antrobus’ Esqre | 9. Beacon Terrace | Torquay | Devonshire | England’, with ‘Angleterre’ in the lower left corner. There is a Parisian postmark dated ‘13 | SEPT | 45’.

2. The three-act prose comedy of 1666 by Molière.

3. S. A. Hart, R.A. (1806–1881: ODNB), Anglo-Jewish painter specialising in historical subjects.

4. William Hookham Carpenter (1792–1866: ODNB), Keeper of Prints and Drawings at the British Museum, and husband of WC’s maternal aunt.

5. Unidentified, but see [0023] to HC, 21 September 1844.

6. Probably Dr Joseph Bullar – see [0018] to HC, 13 January 1844.

7. We have been able to make nothing of this reference.

8. The Cormicks – see the letters to HC [0025] 9, 10 September and [0028] 23, 24 September 1845.

9. A further reference to WC’s first novel Ioláni, which in the event was not published by Chapman and Hall.

10. William Duncan, Elements of Logic (1748) and Joseph Butler, Analogy of Religion, Natural and Revealed (1736), two philosophical works more likely to appeal to Collins senior than his son.

11. On 3 September WC had been paid £35 out of his father’s bank account, presumably for this trip (Couatts: WmC).

12. WC adds this second postscript on his first page, above the salutation and to the left of the address.

[0027] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 16 SEPTEMBER 1845

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/17), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 29–30. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 13.

Hotel des Tuileries | Rue de Rivoli | Sept 16th 1845 | Thursday

My dear Madam

I was agreeably surprised by the appearance of your letter this morning, as (~~from the delay~~) I had given /up/ all hopes of further epistolary communication on your part, having received Ward’s answer to my first missive on Monday last.

“The Evil One” (whom you mention with somewhat unladylike want of courtesy at the close of your letter) is such an exceedingly gentlemanlike dog in this city, with his theatres and his kitchens, that I find it rather difficult to “cut his connexion”. I have bought an Opera Glass, so I must, of necessity, go to the Play to use it. I have got a box of Soda Powders, so I must, [del] in common justice, deliver myself to Gastronomy, to test their correcting powers, [~~del~~] /on/ my [~~del~~] /digestive/ organisation. In short, “I sticks” to the “poms and vanities” – ne’er an Evilangelical [~~del~~] of the lot of ’em can accuse me of being “a spiritual rebel”, here.

I have seen no sights – the pictures and your sister’s spouse excepted<sup>2</sup> – I kept the mighty hunter of prints away from his dinner till the landlady of the Hotel positively came in to remonstrate! But as he had the audacity to tell me that he considered that he was journeying here “in the capacity of a public servant” (!) my bowels had no compassion for his, and I stuck to my seat and my conversation to the very last.

It has rained pretty pertinaciously with us, for the last four or five days; so, I have subscribed to Galignani’s Library to keep off ennui. Harrison Ainsworth<sup>3</sup> was there today, sitting, as usual, in the positions of his different portraits. Hart, too, is here – I met him at the Louvre.<sup>4</sup>

I have just come from the Exhibition of the rising landscape painters in France. The worst Suffolk street landscape is superior to the best picture of this precious collection, which is worth a visit, as affording an example of a very rare human attainment – the perfection of incapacity. Skies, trees, grass – colour – composition, drawing – all are equally bad. Not a square inch of any of the canvasses is respectable even by accident. Yet these daubs have received twice the criticism bestowed upon the whole Royal Academy with us, and have produced twice the sensation every [~~del~~] felt in England on the opening of the Exhibition! The start of young /a new/ man in Literature or Art is a matter of intense moment to every educated individual in this city. If the governor sent a sea-piece to the Louvre, he would be deified in the papers and hot-pressed in every salon of Paris. [~~del~~] Money is to obtained [~~del~~], too, as well as admiration. The average /amount of the/ yearly remuneration to the Dramatists /only/ of this place, [~~del~~] is from £70,000 to £80,000!

I suppose you have heard ~~that~~ of the death of poor ~~old~~ Mr Ward. It happened about a week or a fortnight ago.<sup>5</sup>

Doctor Bullar’s letter of introduction still remains in my pocket-book. I am [~~del~~] leading so thoroughly free and easy a life that I feel immensely disinclined to the bore of making a new acquaintance. I must, however, present my “credentials” I suppose, or I shall give offense to the “Medico”.

You say nothing about Charley, so, I suppose he /is/ just as pleased with his disgustingly pastoral pursuits as you are.

If you want anything in the way of spectacles &c &c, this is the place for them. An opera glass in London costs £4 ,, ,, here it comes to £2 ,, 4 ,, -. Every other specimen of the Opticians craft is equally cheap.

I always read your letters through. Considering that he is a lamb of Mr Dodsworth’s flock,<sup>6</sup> Mr Collins evinces a most unchurchmanlike disposition to scandalise other people. Heap coals of fire upon his head by giving him my love in return for his fabrications and believe me affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

Remember me very kindly to the Antrobuses and Strong and everybody at Torquay but Mrs Travers, who has rather too much of “the leaven of hypocrisy”, as Moses observes,<sup>7</sup> for my taste.

---

1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | Beacon Terrace, | Torquay, | Devonshire; | England’, with ‘Angleterre’ added in the lower left and “Paid” in the upper right corners. There are Paris and Torquay postmarks dated 19 and 20 September respectively.

2. William Carpenter, the husband of HC’s sister.

3. William Harrison Ainsworth (1805–1882: ODNB), the popular historical novelist.

4. Solomon Hart, the painter.

5. Perhaps Charles Ward’s grandfather.

6. A reference to the Rev. William Dodsworth (1798–1861: ODNB) whose Tractarian congregation at the Margaret Street Chapel, Cavendish Square, William and Harriett Collins joined in the early 1830; see, e.g., WmC’s letter to HC of 17 October 1831, where he notes, ‘Mr Dodsworth continues his sermons upon the fearful character of the present times.’ (WC, Memoirs, II, pp. 1–2). In the summer of 1837, while the Collins family were in Italy, the flock had migrated to the newly constructed Christ Church in Albany Street where Dodsworth became perpetual curate.

7. Strong and Travers remain unidentified, while the biblical reference should be to Jesus rather than Moses: see Luke 12:1 (AV), where the disciples are warned against ‘the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy’.

[0028] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 23, 24 SEPTEMBER 1845

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/18), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 30–32. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 13.

Hotel de Tuileries | Rue de Rivoli | Sept 23rd 1845

My dear Mother

The weather, here, today, is again admirably adapted for letter-writing. It has been raining furiously the whole morning and as a matter of course I have been reduced to reading furiously at Galignani's Library by way of adapting myself philosophically to the changes of the ~~weather~~ sky.

I am much obliged by your information about my return. I shall give up the Belgium plan and come back the shortest way – by Boulogne and Folkestone.<sup>2</sup> Paris is the same to me, with, or without, sun; but traveling in rainy weather (and I see no chance of a change) is detestable.

The [del] old characteristic /and indiscriminate/ regard for “the small sweet courtesies of life” withstands the innovations of the new school of melodramatic rudeness more stoutly than I supposed. There are some Frenchmen, still, who possess the politesse that once enchanted Sterne. A gentleman, covered with orders, who sat in the next stall to me at the play, the other night, made me two bows and begged my pardon for taking the liberty of removing the tail of my coat (which had obtruded itself on his seat) to get at his opera glass! This was tolerably delightful; but, an adventure that happened to me yesterday, eclipsed the gentleman with the orders, completely.

I was just passing the “cuisine” of this hotel in my way to the Café where I breakfast when I was stopped by a loud cry of Monsieur Collins! I turned round and confronted the Kitchen maid with an immense pan of some boiling ingredient which in her hurry, she had forgotten to lay aside. “Comment?” said I. “Virginia, desires her kindest remembrances to you, Monsieur” said she – and here the kitchen maid put down the boiling ingredient and wiped a “black” off her nose with the end of her apron. “I am extremely obliged to Virginia”, said I, “but who is she”? – “What! Monsieur has forgotten Virginia, [”] said she; [“]Oh Heavens! this is very desolating” – (I translate literally). “She had my place, that poor Virginia and hearing on a visit to the landlady, that you were here, she could not refrain from charging me with her kindest remembrances”. By this time I discovered that Virginia was last year's kitchen-maid; but I had not then and have not now ~~any~~ /a clear/ recollection of her. However, I told a lie and said I had, for fear of hurting Virginia's feelings. Is not this deliciously French? Fancy the astonishment of a thoroughbred Englishman at hearing that a kitchen-maid named Virginia(!) whom he [del] /scarcely recollected and whom he never fed with money, [del] /had sent/ him her kindest remembrances when she heard he was again in the Hotel where she had once served! You might rummage the world over without finding such a set of originals as the people at this place. They all attempt to talk English and all fail in the most ludicrous manner. I had scarce put my head out my bedroom door, this morning, when the waiter approached me swinging his arms, opening his mouth, and making an indistinct cackling noise in which the word “Omeberellaw” played a prominent part. I screamed with laughter and (after he had cackled for a short time longer) so did he. He had been learning (from the master I suppose) to address me in English about the necessity of taking an umbrella as it was raining dreadfully; but such a horrible mess did he make of his harangue that not one word of it was intelligible except – Omeberellaw. It was really and truly exactly like the “cackling” of a goose

It is [del] too late to day to send this; I must (like Caliban) “to dinner”;<sup>3</sup> and finish my epistle tomorrow.

Sept 24th

I have just seen the Historical Exhibition of pictures by the rising men. There is more respectability in this show than in the last I told you of – but the works of the young frenchmen in history are still ineffably below those of the Royal Academy students.

On returning from the Beaux Arts I looked in at the Morgue. A body of a young girl had just been fished out of the river. As her bosom was “black and blue” I suppose she had been beaten into a state of insensibility and then flung into the Seine. The spectators of this wretched sight were, for the most part, women and children.

I conclude by your letter that you are not likely to be in London before November. Hart leaves Paris today. He hopes the governor has found some sand-banks to paint as he is in the field as a purchaser. (This was his message, what it means I know not)

Doctor Bullar's friend is, I suppose, not in Paris. They knew nothing about him at the address indicated on my letter of introduction

As I [del] do not pester myself with sight-seeing, I cannot oblige Mr Collins by making notes; but, I will do the next best thing – I will go to the Opera Comique tonight and hear them.

Love to the governor and kindest regards to the Antrobi –

Affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

The name of the family with whom I became acquainted on the journey is – Cormick. They have left “this earthly, sensual, and devilish city”

-----
1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | 3. Beacon Terrace, | Torquay, | Devonshire; | England’, with ‘Angleterre’ added in the lower left and “Paid” in the upper right corners. There are Paris and Torquay postmarks, both largely illegible.

2. Presumably Mr Antrobus had vetoed an extension of WC's leave from work beyond October 15 – see the second postscript to [0026] to HC, 13, 14 September 1845.

3. Caliban to Prospero in Shakespeare's The Tempest (I.ii): ‘I must eat my dinner.’

[0029] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 30 SEPTEMBER 1845

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/19), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 40. Published: B&C, I, pp. 32–34. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 14.

Hotel de Tuileries | Rue de Rivoli

My dear Madam

Either my two last letters have been lost or you have parted with the faculty of memory. The “mysterious” letter you refer to was the answer to the first I received here; and has been followed by two others – answers to your subsequent epistles. ~~What should induce~~ /Why/ you /should/ ~~to~~ refer, in your present communication, to my second letter exclusively, at the expense of my third and fourth, I do not know – unless, as I have hinted above, both my latter answers have been lost.

If you complain of my former epistles, you will be furious at this. It contains no impiety and it attempts no jokes. [del] It is devoted to a statement of my approaching INSOLVENCY.<sup>2</sup>

My “monies and usurers” will last me for my /miscellaneous/ expenses here; but will not pay, either my bill, or my passage home. A cheque for £10 „,-,- crossed with Ward's name, or with “Messrs Coutts & Co”, and enclosed in a letter directing the said Ward to pay the said cheque into the hands of Messrs Lafitte, Paris, will have the effect – weather permitting – of restoring me to Devonport Street.<sup>3</sup>

Should Mr Collins vow that he will pay no attention to the above modest, and, I may be permitted to say, ~~rease~~ luminous suggestion, do not be /in/ the least alarmed or put out of the way. I can live here a long time upon my credit, and when that is exhausted I can go into a “spunging house” without disgracing myself by any ungentlemanlike violence of behaviour to “my opposing creditors” – the actual difference between imprisonment at Paris and imprisonment at the Strand being too inconsequential to be worth ascertaining to a nicety.

My joke about Mr Collins's scandalising propensities was an answer to one of yours of the same nature – referring to his ~~invention~~ statement that I did not care about your letters; but it shall be ~~the~~ /my/ last /witticism/. People who live in the country and eat beefsteaks are not to be joked at with impunity.

The weather is as bad as it can be. I told you in one of my missing epistles that I should return by the direct way – i.e. Boulogne; and I see no reason – from the continuance of the rain and cold – to alter my determination, at present.

Hart left last Thursday. I have met no one since that I know. Doctor Bullar's friend is not in Paris and Charley Lambert has not yet dawned in “this pestilential city”. Thus, to the great benefit of my french, my confabulations are all in the native language; and are held with all sorts and classes of the population – except the representations of the Jeune France; who are noisy, dirty, brainless fellows and whose near neighbourhood I cannot abide.

I am very sorry to hear of Bessy's death;<sup>4</sup> but I entirely disagree with you about the unworthiness of the world, for good people. The proof that you are wrong, is in the existence of such individuals as Mrs Collins in “the habitable globe” – (Dont forget the £10 ,,,-,-). Excellence such as your's – my dear Madam – cannot exist independant [sic] of usefullness, and would not be useful were people altogether unworthy of its softening and humanising influence. (The checque must be crossed “Messrs Coutts & Co”) Therefore, I am inclined to conclude: that as long as you are in the world, the world must, logically and absolutely, be worthy of everybody and everything in it. (A letter must accompany the checque directing Ward to forward it to Lafitte & Co Paris)

The weather has, hitherto, prevented my journey to Versailles to see Vernet's last great picture. Everybody is in extasies [sic] about it, here.<sup>5</sup>

I am sorry to hear that the governor's cough is again making its appearance. He must take care not to follow my example and catch cold. I have been snorting and sniffing for the last three days with very disagreeable regularity.

I shall be in the Strand the 14th, or 15th, I hope without fail. You need not be much alarmed about weather, as far as I am [del] concerned. I shall take a place in the coupé; and I bought a coat at Edgington's,<sup>6</sup> before I left London, as thick as a hearth-rug and as warm as a vapour bath

With love to the governor, affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

Your account of Charley is very unsatisfactory. He seems [del] to have more chance of becoming a member of the Royal Academy of Dancing at Paris, than of the Royal Academy of Arts at London.

Remember that I have not disobeyed your parting injunctions about economy. You said you hoped I should make my Checque last for my trip. It has lasted for my trip but not for my return.

---

1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | 3. Beacon Terrace | Torquay | Devonshire | England’, with ‘Angleterre’ added in the lower left and ‘Paid’ in the upper right corners. There is a Paris postmark dated ‘30 | SEPT | 45’ with an illegible Torquay endorsement.

2. WC uses large decorated block capitals.

3. The Paris banker referred to is Charles Laffitte, 48 bis, rue Basse du Rempart, Paris (Galignani's New Paris Guide, 1853, p. 595) – WC consistently spells the name incorrectly.

4. The good Bessy remains unidentified, though perhaps the reference is to a household servant.

5. As [0030] the following letter to HC makes clear, the reference is to Horace Vernet's ‘The Taking of Smalah’.

6. Perhaps Benjamin Edgington of 208, Piccadilly, a specialist in waterproof fabric.

[0030] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 6, 7 OCTOBER 1845

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/20), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 34–36 (dated 6 October 1845).
Summary: BGLL, I, p. 14 (dated 6 October 1845).<sup>2</sup>

Hotel de Tuileries | Rue de Rivoli | Oct: 6th 1845

I have just received – my excellent parent – your delightful communication of the 2nd inst. Many thanks for your expressions of affection and your announcement of the departure of the cheque.

It is raining in torrents today. My landlady in giving me your note assured me that she was shocked at the want of complaisance in the weather and that she could only account for it by imagining that “le bon Dieu” had been “dreadfully” offended by some “maladresse” on the part of somebody, and that the human family at large was “sou pénitence” on that somebody's account!

Yesterday however the human family had a respite from “la pénitence”, which I took advantage of to go to Versailles and see Horace Vernet's last great [del] /painting/ “The Taking of Smalah”.<sup>3</sup> I know of no picture – except Michael Angelo's Last Judgment – in Ancient or Modern Art, so triumphantly successful as this wonderful work. Difficulties of the most stupendous nature, in drawing and composition, extending over a space of upward of two hundred feet, and varying in complexity at every succeeding foot of canvas, are overcome by Vernet – positively – in every instance. [del] The Arab palanquins, [del] the squadron of French cavalry galloping out of the picture – the frantic Jew pursued by an infuriated herd of cattle – the overthrown tents – the fainting women – the scared antelopes – the sand hills in the background – the slaughtered and slaughtering Arabs. These, and a hundred other objects incident to the terrible occasion, are all treated with equal fidelity and equal skill. How long I stood before the picture, I know not. It [del] raised my [del] /belief in/ the power of painting to a pitch I could never have [del] imagined possible before. It stands alone among the productions of Modern Historical Art – above all expression and beyond all criticism.

I have definitely fixed to depart by the 2 o'clock (P.M.) Diligence for Boulogne, on the 13th – and hope to be in Devonport Street on the evening of the 14th. My official labours will, therefore, commence on the morning of the 15th. By this plan, I attain the utmost extension possible of my stay in Paris – a very pleasant and necessary achievement, considering that the Italian Opera has begun and that “Pâtés de Foies Gras” are daily expected at the principal Restaurants.

You need cherish no feelings of commiseration for my solitary state. The privilege of being able to consult my own tastes and inclinations without the slightest reference to any one else, quite counterbalances the inconvenience of my being – like a late royal Solomon – “all alone by myself”. My time has never hung heavy upon my hands since my arrival; and, with the exception of an occasional sigh – physically ~~natural~~ /necessary/ and morally natural – when I am more than usually sensible of the increasing tightness of the waistband of my br-ch-s, a serene cheerfulness has pervaded my mental temperament /here,/ from my first pinch of snuff in the morning to my last at night.

If you think the air of Devonshire too relaxing for the governor you /will/ do quite right to quit Beacon Terrace as soon as possible. Nevertheless, I must say, [del] I am horribly afraid that he will catch another severe cold if he winters in London. I should strongly recommend him to write to Doctor Chambers, and ask his advice upon his future movements, before he makes up his mind to brave the November fogs in the Great Metropolis.

I thought I saw Mr Dodsworth the other day at Galignani’s. The Lauries I have not met with anywhere; but I may see them tonight at the Opera as all the Paris world is to “assist” at the “début” of Moriani in Lucia de Lammermoor.<sup>4</sup>

With love to the governor, affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins
I have just come from Lafittes [sic]. The £10,-,- has arrived, and I am grateful.
Wednesday morning

---

1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | 3. Beacon Terrace | Torquay | Devonshire | England’, with ‘Angleterre’ added in the lower left and ‘Paid’ in the upper right corners. There is a Paris postmark dated ‘9 | OCT | 45’, with a Torquay endorsement the following day.

2. Regarding the extended dating, see WC’s final postscript, written on Wednesday 7th.

3. Held at the Musée National du Château, Versailles, ‘The Taking of the Smalah d’Abd-el-Kader’ by Horace Vernet (1789–1863) depicts an event during the French conquest of Algeria. In May 1843 a cavalry force headed by the duc d’Aumale surprised and overran the camp of the Amir Abd al-Qadir, comprising around 30,000 people – see John Ruedy, Modern Algeria (Bloomington: Indiana UP, 1992), p. 64.

4. Napoleone Moriani (1808–1878), Italian tenor who made his Paris debut in October 1845 at the Théâtre-Italien, in the revival of Donizetti’s Lucia de Lammermoor.

[3147] TO [CHARLES WARD],<sup>1</sup> [1841–1845]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Penn State (Box 1 Folder 179). Published: A&C6, pp. 3–4 (as to Unidentified Recipient).

Dear fellow

You shall see the “letters” when you come and dine with us next week The substance of the Tea-monger’s answer to Mr Collins’s communication was, 1st:— a denial of the £200~~ a year conversation. 2nd:— A vindication of the respectability of his shop, consisting in a declaration that he could have had plenty of young men in his office, my equals in birth and education.<sup>3</sup> The letter began with “Sir” and ended with “yours obediently”, so that you will easily conclude (being an intelligent sort of boy) that there is a mighty feud “henceforth and for ever” between the “houses twain” of Collins & Antrobus.<sup>4</sup>

When you answer this, pray give me an account of what has passed between you and old tea leaves,<sup>5</sup> upon the subject of the governor<sup>6</sup> and

yours very faithfully | W. Wilkie Collins

Whatever you tell me shall be kept “as secret as the grave”,<sup>7</sup> or one of your domestic [epistles].<sup>8</sup>

Burn this immediately

A cheque is enclosed with the Bill.

---

1. Despite the lack of formal identification, this must be the first surviving letter to Charles James Ward (1814–83), a lifelong friend, whose younger brother, the artist E.M. Ward, WC had first met in Italy in 1838. Like his father, Charles Ward was an employee at Coutts & Co., the private bank in the Strand, the premises of which were close to where WC worked at this time. The reference in WC’s final postscript to the enclosure of a cheque and bill suggests that this is the first record of Ward acting as WC’s informal accountant.

2. The tentative dating is from the content, the salutation and signature, and the reference to WC’s father as ‘the governor’. The reference in the letter to a feud between the Collins and Antrobus households perhaps makes it likely that the letter derives from close to the end of this period. It seems highly unlikely, for example, that this letter precedes [0018] to HC of 13 January 1844, which speaks of the Antrobus family with considerable affection.

3. The letter clearly refers to WC’s informal apprenticeship, from January 1841 to late 1845 or early 1846, at the tea-merchant office of Edmund Antrobus, 446 Strand, at the western end opposite the current site of Charing Cross Station. WmC painted the children of the Antrobus family in 1842 and charged him 200 gns (Memoirs, II, pp. 196, 206, 350). He also secured WC the job at the office. It seems there was a major misunderstanding about whether WC would be paid.

4. The quotations are a slight puzzle: “henceforth and for ever” has not been identified (Browning’s use of it was decades later); the “houses twain” quotation is possibly from James and Horace Smith, Rejected Addresses, 1812 (Loyal Effusion by W.T.F.):

Who burnt (confound his soul) the houses twain
Of Covent Garden and of Drury Lane?

Or the two together could be a much misremembered reference to the houses of Montague and Capulet in Romeo & Juliet.

5. Clearly WC’s disrespectful nickname for Edmund Antrobus.

6. WC refers to his father WmC.

7. Not an uncommon phrase but possible a reference to Henry Boyd (d. 1832) ‘The Temple of Vesta’ in Poems, Chiefly Dramatic and Lyric, 1793, Act IV:

...There is a place
As secret as the grave, which even the eye
Of Malice and Revenge’s eagle glance
Might scrutinize in vain.

8. The word has an extra stroke between the initial ‘e’ and ‘p’ but cannot be anything but ‘epistles’.

[0031] TO PETER CUNNINGHAM,<sup>1</sup> 2 APRIL 1846

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 14.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | Thursday April 2nd 1846

Dear Sir

Should you be in our neighbourhood Friday, Saturday or Monday next, my father will be very happy – on either of those days – to show you the pictures he has prepared for the ensuing Exhibition<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To / Peter Cunningham Esqre

---

1. Peter Cunningham (1816–69: ODNB), journalist, friend of CD, author of Handbook of London (2 vols, 1849), treasurer of the Shakespeare Society (see Pilgrim, V, p. 285 n. 1). He was the son of Allan Cunningham (1784–1842), Sir David Wilkie’s biographer, who had died before the Life could be published, leaving his son to write the preface and see the work through the press.

2. Presumably the Royal Academy Summer Exhibition, the last at which WmC would exhibit. He showed five pictures (Memoirs, II, p. 352).

[0032] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 31 JULY 1846

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/21), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 36–37. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 14.

Hotel de St Antoine | Antwerp | Aug<sup>t</sup> | July 31/46

My dear Mother

The heat in this place is of a superior degree of intensity to the temperature of Timbucto. I write this, literally in a reeking state. We arrived – all dust and perspiration – at 4 o’clock this afternoon at the above direction.

I accompanied Ward in the second class, after all. The impression the hard benches made upon my personal superficialities can never be effaced. As if labouring under insanity, I continued his companion in the fore part of the Steamer at 3 o’clock in the morning and got wet through with the spray. Ward vibrated between the bilious and the sick the whole voyage. I was perfectly well.

On our arrival at Ostend reason returned to me and I inveigled my beloved friend into a first class train. After perspiring for five horrid hours, we reached Antwerp in a state of fusion.

My observations on this country, like Adam’s first essays in ploughing, have been made by “the sweat of the brow.”<sup>2</sup> I find the country a great flat damp grim meadow speckled with church spires like pepper-boxes and dwellings like over-coloured baby-houses. I find the people possessed of immense physical energies – little intelligence and enormous seats to their breeches. The posterior portion of our Ostend waiter’s trousers would have clothed a whole family of destitutes in St Giles’s.<sup>3</sup>

I would continue my “revelations of” Belgium were I not, at the moment, overpowered by the heat and at a loss for time and paper – you shall have some more buffoonery in my next letter (if you can read this).

Write /to/ me by return of post letting me know how you go on at Iver, and, with love to Mr Collins, believe me

Affectionately yours | W. W. Collins

---

1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | at Mr King’s | Iver | near Uxbridge | England’, with an illegible Antwerp postmark and an endorsement at Uxbridge dated ‘AU 3’.

2. One element of God’s curse on Adam for the act of original sin was, ‘In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread’ (Genesis 3:19, AV).

3. The parish of St Giles remained a byword for insanitary housing and destitute inhabitants, although, as WC wrote, New Oxford Street (completed in 1847) was already being driven through the ‘Rookery’, the most infamous of its slums.

[0033] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 6 AUGUST 1846

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/22), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 37–39. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 14.

Hotel de Flandre | Brussels | Aug<sup>t</sup> 6th 1846

My dear Mother

Finding Antwerp – after its antiquities had been exhausted – by no means a desirable residence for idle men, we removed to this place a day or two since, having directed any letters that might arrive after our departure from Brussels, to be forwarded to the above address. We have – neither of us – received any epistolary commiserations from the bosoms of our respective families up to this morning.

I cannot ask you to answer this as we shall be on route for Bruges tomorrow – Ward refuses to extend his tour out of consideration for the suffering of his bereaved wife during his absence. He spouts prophetic – talks about his moral duties – tells me that I am a profligate and vows that he will be in London by Monday next. As I have no great pleasure in travelling by myself I shall return with him, and probably close my travels by an expedition to Iver the day after our arrival at Devonport Street.

Although Antwerp is essentially a dull town, although its inhabitants are a miserable compound of the worst parts of the Dutch and French characters, the pictures that are to be seen there make it worth a visit, were the transit from London ten times more difficult and expensive than it now is. I never knew of what the genius of Rubens was really capable till I saw the Descent from the Cross and the Marriage of St Catherine. These two works are such miracles of colour and composition, that I felt as I looked at them, the justice of Sir J. Reynolds’s remark “that it is difficult for the most sober judgment to name the superior of Rubens” in the art of painting on first beholding his works at Antwerp.<sup>2</sup> We were admitted to see a private collection containing some of his smaller pictures among which I noticed a portrait of a fat dignitary of the church with a large jowl, bleary eyes, and a sensual expression [del] /which/ was the finest piece of picturesque and natural portrait painting that I have ever beheld.

Last Sunday the streets of Antwerp were decorated with large strips of white linen numerous enough to have covered miles – tied on to young fir spars planted artificially in the pavement, ~~Portraits of Saints~~ pious inscriptions, /gaily-coloured/ flags and portraits of Saints rose imposingly above this deluge of spotless calico. Crowds of phlegmatic Belgians sauntered through the streets – perched themselves in the windows and sat at their doors in chairs placed in perilous propinquity to the kennels. This mighty preparation was intended to greet a procession carrying a new relic box of silver, which was expected to appear every moment. We mixed with the crowd (who to use the words of Don Quixote – “smelt of anything rather than amber[’]”)<sup>3</sup> and awaited the solemn advent of the sacred box with considerable impatience. After a long interval four soldiers loomed dimly visible through the masses of the crowd, and were followed by a troop of dirty-looking men [del] carrying filthy tallow candles and every now and then turning round and bowing indefatigably to a gang of priests in tawdry dresses who bore aloft a Britannia-metal-and-decidedly-second-hand-looking cross between a gigantic snuff-box and an old woman’s tea caddy; stuck on the shoulders of four corpulent copper angels endowed with an imposing amplitude of wing and gifted with singular sedateness of expression. These celestial gentlemen were tattooed for the occasion with leaves of flowers cast on them by several devout old women among the crowd. After being carried through the different streets in the manner I have just described, this honorable [sic] box was deposited in a church; where it was to be sung to and prayed over for fifteen days! So much for the piety of the good people of Antwerp!

The old city seems in many instance to have changed but little from its former self. The children still look as if they had just stepped out of one of Teniers’<sup>4</sup> pictures, the drinking vessels at the public houses have not varied in form since the days of Ostade,<sup>5</sup> and the houses and the Churches present the same picturesque variety of architectural combinations as in the distant days of the persecution of Alva<sup>6</sup> and the commercial  $\text{\textcircled{e}}$  glories of the merchants of Antwerp.

At Brussels, with the exception of a few old houses, everything looks clean new and modern. People have called it an imitation of Paris. I can see no resemblance between the two cities. There is none of the all-pervading gaiety of the French metropolis about the place. The spirit that animates the Boulevards and Cafés of Paris is wanting to the Boulevards and Cafés of Brussels. There is little in it to interest and less to amuse.

I have much more to write about – but my physical energies – so awful is the intensity of the heat – completely fail me. My strength will carry me no further than the bottom of this page. Give my love to Mr Collins and believe me

Affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. To: 'M<sup>rs</sup> Collins | at M<sup>r</sup> King's | Iver | near Uxbridge | England.' The letter is postmarked at Brussels on August 6 and franked at Uxbridge on August 8. WC writes on extremely thin paper with dark ink so that the texts on recto and verso are often difficult to distinguish.

2. This quotation from memory has not been traced, though it seems likely to derive from 'A Journey to Flanders and Holland in the Year 1781' in the second volume of The Works of Sir Joshua Reynolds (1797), which concludes (p. 427): 'I will venture to repeat in favour of Rubens, what I have before said in regard to the Dutch school, – that those who cannot see the extraordinary merit of this great painter, either have a narrow conception of the variety of art, or are led away by the affectation of approving nothing but what comes from the Italian school.'

3. The 1801 four-volume translation by Charles Jarvis of Cervantes's Don Quixote was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 88). Perhaps WC is recalling the following hilarious passage in Chapter 31, where Don Quixote imparts an aura of romance to the (in reality) less than lovely damsell Dulcinea:

'... One thing, Sancho, thou canst not deny; when near her, thou must have perceived a Sabaeen odour, an aromatic fragrance, a something sweet, for which I cannot find a name – a scent, a perfume – as if thou wert in the shop of some curious glover.' 'All I can say is,' quoth Sancho, 'that I perceived somewhat of a strong smell, which must have been owing to the sweat she was in with hard work.' 'Impossible,' cried Don Quixote; 'that smell must have proceeded from thyself: for well I know the scent of that lovely rose among thorns, that lily of the valley, that liquid amber.' 'Very likely,' answered Sancho; 'for the very same smell often comes from me which methought then came from my lady Dulcinea: but where's the wonder that one devil should be like another?'

4. Probably referring to David Teniers, the younger (1610–1690) of Antwerp, realist and genre painter.

5. Adriaen van Ostade (1610–1685), genre painter.

6. Referring to the repression of Calvinism by the Duke of Alva which helped to provoke the Dutch War of Independence from Spanish control (1568–1648).

[0034] TO JOHN LINNELL,<sup>1</sup> 5 MARCH 1847

MS: Fitzwilliam (MS 3411–2000).<sup>2</sup> Extract: Story, II, pp. 25–26 (misdated).<sup>3</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 15.

1. Devonport Street | Friday, March 5th 1847

My dear Sir

You were kind enough to say that you would give us some advice about the treatment of our oil sketches,<sup>4</sup> when we had them ready for your inspection. If you can conveniently call on us, either Monday or Tuesday next, at any time before 3 o'clock, we shall be happy to show them to you.

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To / J. Linnell Esqre

1. John Linnell (1792–1882: ODNB), portrait and landscape painter, a longstanding friend and neighbour of WmC, resident at 38 Porchester Terrace, Bayswater.

2. A single sheet of black-edged mourning paper – WmC had died on 17 February.

3. On the MS is a pencil note in an unknown hand: 'printed by Mr Story but date omitted and explained wrongly'.

4. Probably sketches by WC and CAC, but may refer to those of WmC.

[3311] TO S. C. HALL,<sup>1</sup> 18 MARCH 1847

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C11, pp. 3–4.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens
March 18th 1847

Dear Sir,

Accept my best thanks for your kind letter of condolence.<sup>2</sup> I loose [sic] no time in answering it as satisfactorily as I can.

The enclosed page of the Literary Gazette of Feby 27th contains a notice of my father's life written by me,<sup>3</sup> which is in substance and almost in form, identical with the M.S. I transmitted to you some time since.

Such additions to that short Memoir as I can readily furnish you with, I now enclose.<sup>4</sup> They are written as notes and illustrations to the facts contained in the Literary Gazette, in order that you may experience every facility in making use of both together. This mode of transmitting your materials is, I know, confused; but I have borne in mind your recommendation to me to be speedy in my communications, and have sacrificed order to promptitude accordingly.

You may find what information I have given you, deficient in quantity and little available in quality; but it is all that I can immediately provide with the certainty that it is correct.

I have begun the examination of my father's papers with the ultimate view, if I can find materials enough, of writing a Memoir of him – to comprise possibly anecdotes of his contemporaries and some investigation into the state of Art in his time. But my leisure has not hitherto – and will not immediately – allow me to pursue my investigations so far and so uninterruptedly, as to render them usefully available either for your information or for mine. Fragments of letters and journals I have found – but the links to connect them and render them comprehensible – even to me – are still scattered among his voluminous collections of papers; and are only to be discovered by long and systematic examination.

What I have told you, then, is derived from what I have heard from my father's own lips – from my mother's recollections – and from the communications of old friends. It may consequently be depended upon.

I hope (and think) that you will gain from the Athenæum,<sup>5</sup> the Literary Gazette, and the enclosed M.S. information enough to aid you sufficiently in the Biographical part of your Memoir.<sup>6</sup> For the Critical part, your knowledge of Art and your just and generous appreciation of my father's genius, leave me no anxiety or doubt whatever.<sup>7</sup>

Whatever further additions or explanations on the subject of my enclosed packet you may require, I will make it my duty to supply to you – as completely as possible – immediately. Any communication I may receive from you shall have my prompt and careful attention.<sup>8</sup>

With our united kind regards to Mrs Hall and yourself believe me, Dear sir, | very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To/ S. C. Hall Esqr

---

1. Samuel Carter Hall (1800–1889: ODNB), Irishman who edited the Art Union Monthly, later known as the Art Journal (1839–1880), 'a publication which made high-quality pictures available to the general population' (Sutherland, p. 271). See also Hazel Morris, Hand, Head and Heart: Samuel Carter Hall and the Art Journal (Norwich: Michael Russell, 2002).

2. On the death of WmC a month earlier: WC writes on full mourning paper.

3. See Literary Gazette, no. 1571, 27 February 1847, pp. 177–178. A footnote on p. 177 reads, 'Received from his son; who is thanked for the communication. – Ed. L. G.'. WC's short biography also includes a list of some of WmC's major works roughly sorted by date.

4. The enclosure is no longer with the letter.

5. Referring to the obituary of WmC in the Athenæum, no. 1008, 20 February 1847, p. 200. The author remains unknown but the many accurate details strongly suggest WC's involvement.

6. Hall's memoir has not been traced. But many years later he did write A Book of Memories of Great Men and Women of the Age (London, 1871), which has a short paragraph on WmC at p. 482: 'He was a scholar as well as a gentleman, graceful and gracious in manners, considerate and kind to all who approached him.'

7. Hall also edited the Amulet: A Christian and Literary Remembrancer, an annual which contained improving poems and works of art. The editions of 1829, 1830, 1834, and 1835 had all contained an engraving of a WmC painting. Hall's wife Anna Maria [née Fielding] (1800–1881: ODNB), also a writer, edited the Juvenile Forget Me Not, a similar annual aimed at children and young people. It had published an engraving of a WmC painting in 1831, and possibly two others, which are untraced but are mentioned in Memoirs, II, p. 354. In the year following WmC's death the Art-Union Monthly Journal published engravings of two of his paintings (1848, vol. X, pp. 144 and 250).

8. No other letters in this exchange are known; the next extant letter to Hall is [0165], 3 May 1854.

[0035] TO GEORGE RICHMOND,<sup>1</sup> 20 MAY 1847

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11, formerly laid in copy of the Memoirs, II), damaged.<sup>2</sup> Photocopy: Texas. Published: Parrish & Miller, p. 11; Coleman, pp. 6–7; BGLL, I, 15–16. Extract: Davis, p. 50 (as to R. H. Dana).

1 Devonport Street | Hyde Park / | 20th May 1847

Dear Mr Richmond

I have been told by my mother that you have kindly offered to assist me in my projected

Biography of my father, by furnishing me with your personal recollections of his opinions on Art, and of himself. I assure you I shall receive your communication with extreme pleasure – it will be a very welcome and important addition to my materials for describing my father’s life as a painter, while he was in Italy – materials, which from the unfortunate scarcity of information in his journals of that period – are not, at present, quite so plentiful as I could wish.

In other respects I think I have got together, in various ways, a very important requisite for my task – matter generally interesting for the Biography; [which] is already advanced [to] the year 1815, and [which] will be illustrated by prints from my father’s pictures – the plates being our own property.

If you have any letters from my father and will entrust them to me to copy – you will increase my obligation to you.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To / G. Richmond Esqr | &c &c &c

---

1. George Richmond (1809–96: ODNB), RA, portrait painter and member of William Blake’s circle. His relationship to WmC is described in WC’s Memoirs, II, pp. 130–132.

2. On black-edged paper. Addressed and dated at the end of the letter after the signature. The paper is damaged at the end of the address line, affecting on the recto the areas of the text marked in square brackets, which have an element of conjecture.

[3017] TO JOHN MURRAY,<sup>1</sup> 22 MAY 1847

MS: NLS (John Murray Archive, Acc.12604/1235).<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C3, p. 34.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | May 22nd 1847

Dear Sir

I think I once had the pleasure of an introduction to you, when you paid us your last visit to see my father’s pictures before they were sent to the Exhibition; and although you have doubtless forgotten the circumstance, my name will I dare say serve sufficiently for my re-introduction to you through the medium of this letter.

I am engaged in writing a Biography of my father, having collected from different sources materials likely to be interesting to the general public in such a work. Before however I proceed further in my task, I wish to obtain advice upon matters practically connected with publication; and I know no one to whom I could apply, under such circumstances, more satisfactorily than yourself.

If therefore you could favour me with a quarter of an hour’s conversation upon this subject, at the earliest opportunity convenient to you, I should feel greatly obliged. At any day and hour you may appoint I shall be happy to wait upon you.

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To / John Murray Esqre

---

1. John Murray (1808–1892: ODNB), the third generation of the John Murray publishing dynasty based at Albermarle Street in London. In approaching the publisher, WC was perhaps influenced by the fact that Murray had issued Allan Cunningham’s Life of Sir David Wilkie in three volumes in 1843.

2. On full-mourning paper with a thick black edge, with the addressee line at the foot of the first page, and addressed and dated at the end of the letter after the signature.

[0036] TO MARY LINNELL,<sup>1</sup> [SPRING 1847]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Fitzwilliam (MS 3412–2000). Extract: Story, II, pp. 24–25 (undated). Published: BGLL, I, p. 16.

Tuesday evening.

My dear Mrs Linnell

My brother and I are very anxious to take advantage of your kind invitation to us to pay you a visit at Porchester Terrace some evening – I now write to know whether to-morrow or Friday evening will be convenient to you – We are disengaged on either day.

I shall hope to find Mr Linnell at home, as I hear he has some hints to give me respecting the early parts of my father's life which will I am sure be of very great use to me in the Biography I am now writing.

Do not trouble yourself to write – a verbal answer by the bearer – either for tomorrow or Friday evening – will be quite sufficient.

Truly yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. John Linnell's first wife, née Palmer (d. 1863), whom he had married in 1817.

2. The dating is suggested by the black-edged mourning paper and the reference to the early stages of writing the Memoirs.

[0037] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 2 AUGUST 1847

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/23), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 45–47 (incomplete); BGLL, I, pp. 16–19.

Hotel du Grand Cerf | Aux Andelys, Normandie | August 2nd 1847

My dear Mother/

The date of this letter will be – geographically speaking – a mystery to you. Let me therefore tell you that we are still in Normandy at a place an hour and a half distant (in a railway point of view) from Rouen. Our Hotel was built in the 13th century and has remained to this day uncontaminated by the “hod” of the bricklayer of Modern times. At a short distance from us a ruined castle rises on a mighty crag which overlooks the Seine.<sup>2</sup> Opposite to us is a church built like this house in the year 1200 and ornamented with grand old painted glass windows crammed with effigies of queer saints, incomprehensible emblems and unimaginative verdure. Around us are picturesque old women sun burnt into an Indian red – large sheep dogs (I have already made acquaintance with one of them) pretty tortois shell cats (uncommunicative to strangers) and fierce young gentlemen with dirty faces blue blouses and beards whose expansive hairiness might put Esau himself to the blush. To say that we look out on all sides on toppling dirty old houses deeply suggestive of vermin and three-cornered rooms – is only to tell you what you already know – that we are in an old French town, and to assure that I mean to sketch furiously at all points and under any circumstances is only to inform you that I intend to make some use of a useful article of my luggage – of my cherished painting box – which with infinite “toil and vexation of spirit”<sup>3</sup> I have always carried at my back wherever Ward and I have turned our exploring steps.

Apropos of the painting box – I had made three sketches – the first two are failures – the third is exceedingly good, and a most elaborate undertaking – for it occupied three days of my time – But as I said before it is exceedingly good and the hours of my youth have therefore not been wasted upon it.

As to Rouen – I am glad we have left it – A more ghastly set of people than Rouennese it has never been my misfortune to meet with. When you have seen the old churches (in which by the bye there is not a picture or a statue worth five minutes contemplation) – when you have seen the place where Joan of Arc was burned (I don't believe in Joan of Arc at all for my own part) you have seen all that Rouen can afford to interest you. The people are all sordid trades people who sit behind their counters all day and lounge silently about the Exchange all the evening. Last Saturday night we went to a (so-called) Fête given at some public gardens near the city – the profits of the festivities to be dedicated to the poor. When we got into the gardens the air smelt damp and earthy as if we had descended into a catacomb – A few lamps – enclosed in dirty canvas and half expiring – the very beau ideal of the illuminations of an applewoman's stall – were all that brightened the darkness of the night – We found swings and roundabouts rotting direfully in dark unfrequented walks – women varying in ugliness from the simply plain to the utterly repulsive – and men vain as peacocks – silent as boarding-school [songsters] at their first ball and restless as condemned spirits in the [vastness] of the ancients – After a mournful interval we were “bidden unto” an open air theatre – where we found an orchestra composed of one fiddle and a dramatic personae of three amateurs – Anything more dismally wretched than the acting of this histrionic trio or more hopelessly unintelligible than the play they performed I never witnessed – After the theatre came some dancing – in which the [appreciations] stood in the same relation to the spectators as three to three hundred – or a Thames wherry to a three decker. After the dancing came a display of fireworks which lasted five minutes and accomplished – nothing – After the fireworks Ward and I got too intensely miserable to do anything but depart for our hotel. How long the townspeople continued their funereal Saturnalia I know not. The papers advertised that the Entertainment was to begin at eight of the clock in the evening and to end at five of the clock in the morning!

We have made two or three country excursions from Rouen. One was to the Ancient Abbey of St George Bosherville<sup>4</sup> – We started at 6.A.M. by steamboat (without breakfast) got put ashore on the banks of the Seine at eight o’clock – walked (still without breakfast) – eight miles – arrived at last at St George &c and breakfasted at a “cabaret,” where the hostess (a woman five feet broad by three feet long) asked us, as she laid the cloth, whether we had our own knives with us (!) – This excellent woman had no milk in the house, so we breakfasted à la fourchette on wine, meat, omelette &c &c – which gave Ward a violent head ache and made me very sleepy and unideal – After our meal we started to see the Abbey Church but the Beadle was practising agriculture – i.e. labouring in the fields, so we went into a pine wood to wait his return. There, Ward fell asleep and I made a sketch – One of the failures already alluded to. When I had finished my failure and Ward had finished his nap we returned – but the agricultural fervour still possessed the beadle – the villain was still pastoralising in the fields – and though I penetrated into the priest’s garden and asked everybody I met to let us into the Church – and “drummed” at the Church doors, and so forth, we could not get in, after all. So we returned to the “Cabaret” and got a huckster’s cart to take us back to Rouen – or rather to the entrance of Rouen; for Ward was proud and refused to drive up to the Hotel in our excellent but humble and uneasy vehicle –

Soon after this we drove out to a country chateau inhabited by a rich Frenchman – a cidevant merchant. Our Phaeton drove up to this gentleman’s private grounds as if we had arrived by invitation – we were met in descending from our vehicle by the owner, who asked us into his house and showed us all over it himself. He was a very polite old gentleman – a bachelor [sic] and an admirer of the Arts. His rooms were decorated in the Classical Pompeian style – His walls were covered with choice engravings from Wilkie Turner and all the old masters<sup>5</sup> – His halls and staircase were adorned with beautiful bronzes and magnificent copies of the Apollo Belvidere – the Venus de Medici and other irreproachable antiquities. His library was excellently provided with the works of English authors as well as French and Latin and one of his rooms was stocked with the finest collection of of [sic] stuffed tropical birds I ever beheld. But the greatest treat we derived from our visit was from the view from the Chateau – The Park commanded the whole panorama of the Seine, with its wooded islands, its rugged cliffs – its undulating forests and its rich pasture lands; and the complete extent of the distant city – of Rouen – the cathedral spires of which rose before us through the hot golden mist of a cloudless summer day – We staid upwards to two hours at the gentleman’s abode and returned, coveting our neighbour’s house, in inexpressible forgetfulness of the patriarchal requisites of the tenth commandment.

I received your letters with great satisfaction. The news about my excellent “Snooks” was perfectly gratifying.<sup>6</sup>

As I am ignorant of the length of our stay here and of our next destination – I cannot tell you where to write to should you feel inclined to answer this – Ward talks of returning to London next Saturday.

It is getting late – and we are to rise at six o’clock tomorrow-morning – so with love to Charley and blessings for Snooks and the rest of the domestic circle – I get me into my comfortable but verminous-looking bed, and remain

Yours affectionately | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. To: 'Mrs Collins | 1 Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | London | Angleterre'. Postmarked: 'LES ANDELYS | 2 AOUT | 47'.
2. Château Gaillard, constructed in the late twelfth century for Richard the Lionheart, who was also Duke of Normandy.
3. See Ecclesiastes 4:6 (AV): 'Better is an handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit'. Webster's 1833 translation has 'toil and vexation of spirit'.
4. WC also describes his excursion to the abbey in one of his early publications, 'A Pictorial Tour of St. George Bosherville' in Bentley's Miscellany, 29 (1851), pp. 493–508. There Ward becomes 'his travelling companion and friend, Mr. Scumble'. The published narrative is much longer than that in the letter, though the visit to 'the polite old gentleman' is omitted entirely.
5. As often in the early letters WC omits the comma from the list, but clearly refers to the famous British painters Sir David Wilkie and Joseph Turner.
6. The pet cat at Devonport Street – see [0020] to HC of 8 August 1844.

[0038] TO HARRIET COLLINS, [3–4] AUGUST 1847

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/24), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, p. 48 (dated [early August 1847]).
Summary: BGLL, I, p. 20 (dated [3–5] August 1847).

Paris!!!! | Hotel des Tuileries | Rue de Rivoli | Monday afternoon

My dear Mother,

Are you not disgusted? Would you not give up a weeks [sic] walking in Kensington Gardens to be able to express to me, viva voce, the feelings aroused by the date of this letter? Let me first tell you then that I have money enough to keep me here three or four days and to pay my journey back. You see therefore that I have not been extravagant /at other places/ and do not intend to be so here. We have come to Paris because we have exhausted all the best views in Normandy and find provincial cities insupportably oppressive to our mercurial characters. The fact is that the scenery in Normandy has been very much exaggerated [sic]. It is very pretty of its kind but exceedingly monotonous, and the castle at the place whence I last wrote to you, which the guide books informed us was a magnificent view and which as we thought (on seeing it under the shades of evening) was deserving of its reputation – turned out on inspection at broad daylight to be by no means so picturesque an object as we had thought it.<sup>2</sup> So we ~~began~~ /made/ sketches of it and then finding nothing more in the neighbourhood that was unusually attractive and having wandered about Rouen and its neighbourhood till we had exhausted both we determined to say farewell to France at its Capital – where we are going to take great care of our health and stay only a short time.

Will you write to me here to let me know whether Charley and Henry Bullar have settled everything about Cumberland<sup>3</sup> – and if you have a spare five pound note by you ("I thought it would come to that?") you may send it through Coutts's to W. Wilkie Collins at Paris as soon as possible after you receive this letter – telling Coutts that it is "for the use of W. Wilkie Collins at Paris".

If it is not convenient for you to send me this money, do not do it. As I said before I have money enough to keep me here and take me back. I ask for the five pound note because I shall want both boots and gloves when I come back, and can (if I have some extra money) get them cheaper and better here than in London. Consider the subject – stifle your indignation – and believe me affectionately yours

W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. To: 'Mrs Collins | 1 Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | London', with 'Angleterre' in the lower left and 'Affranchi' in the upper right corners. Two postmarks largely obscured, but with the date '5 AU 5 | 1847' just legible on the British one. In the light of the previous letter, and despite the Monday dateline, the likelihood is the WC wrote this letter on the Tuesday or Wednesday, August 3–4, after arriving in Paris from Rouen.

2. Château Gaillard – see [0037] to HC, 2 August 1847.

3. Henry Bullar (1815–1870), the youngest son of John Bullar Sr, of Southampton, and a barrister on the Western Circuit, who became one of WC's sailing companions. We cannot elucidate the reference to Cumberland.

[0039] TO CHARLES WARD,<sup>1</sup> 10 AUGUST 1847

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/1), folded and directed.<sup>2</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 44–46. Published: B&C, I, pp. 49–51. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 20.

Hotel des Tuileries – Rue de Rivoli | Tuesday morning –

My dear Ward

Up to this moment I have received no communications – monetary or epistolary – from England, and I /now/ write to you with eight francs in my pocket – and in debt for two pair of boots, to ascertain whether I am to expect any remittances at all – before I become bankrupt – an event which I have my suspicions will take place tomorrow.

On the day you left me I made a calculation of my resources – including the five pounds I expected from England – and found to my horror and astonishment that if I paid for my boots – my bill here and my journey back, like an honest man I could not stay more than two days longer at Paris, at the furthest. I made up my mind therefore to start for London today rather than spend a single farthing more money – but on Saturday no money arrived – on Sunday no money arrived – on Monday no money arrived – and today – this present Tuesday – “par le sang bleu”! I have changed my last “Nap” and have not a banker at Paris to go to for any more!

I suppose Mrs Collins is determined to punish me for going to Paris at all – by keeping me there as long as she pleases in a state of pauperism. This may seem at the first glance – a monstrous good joke – but it will be found on closer inspection to be rather an expensive one. Every day I stay here enlarges my bill at the Hotel and increases my current expenses – which – carefully as I watch them – grow upon me as fast as moss on an old house or pimples on a drunkard's face.

I breakfast for a franc and a half – I dine for three francs and a half – I have never entered a hackney coach since I have been at Paris – I have missed the Theatre one whole night – I occupy myself all day in painting and taking salubrious walks – I have had three glorious bowel complaints since I saw you which have done my stomach a world of good and made my complexion as pure as milk of roses. Can anything be more economical – more salubrious – more virtuous than such a mode of life as this?

Have the goodness to show (or send) this letter to Mrs Collins – directing her attention particularly to the above paragraph and also to the statement of my assets and liabilities exposed beneath.

Liabilities – (supposing that W.W.C. departs from Paris in a solvent state on Saturday next ~~from Paris~~). N.B. this is /only/ allowing proper time for securing my place in the Diligence and getting my money from London)

| Probable amount of                                                                                                                                                                                             | Frs                                     | Assets |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------|--------|
| Board Lodging – Washing – Candles – Servants                                                                                                                                                        | 40                                      | Frs 8  |
| or in two words – “Hotel Bill”                                                                                                                                                                                 | 40                                      |        |
| Journey back (cheapest way)                                                                                                                                                                                    | 65                                      |        |
| Bill for boots                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 68                                      |        |
| (This bill for boots includes two new pair at £50frs [ sic ] (charged £3,-,- in London) and new fronting an old pair, the leathers and soles of which have burst – at 18frs – charged £1,-,- in London) |                                         |        |
| Board and pocket money for five days at 10frs a day (i.e. 15frs less than I spent at Paris p <sup>r</sup> diem on my last visit                                                                         | 50                               |        |
| Total                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 223                                     |        |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 8                                |        |
| Liabilities                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 215 Frs or £8,,12,,6<sup>3</sup> |        |

This will doubtless appear very horrifying to Mrs Collins, but it is not entirely my fault. I have spent £2,,15 on boots in Paris – because I must have spent in the course of the year – £4,,,-,- – for the same articles of clothing /but less lasting/ in London. If the £5,,,-,- had arrived on Saturday morning – I should have set off to-day and not have wanted a farthing more.

If you have already forwarded five pounds to Lafitte’s [sic] – forward another five immediately on the receipt of this – without waiting to get it from Mrs Collins. I will settle with you when ~~you~~ I return. If you have not remitted me a “rap” (Mrs Collins being unpropitious) ask her boldly for £10 – at “one fell swoop” and send the money with all possible despatch to Lafitte’s [sic]. If Mrs Collins refuses to touch the estimate let me know by return of post. It will then be time to pawn my watch and coat at the Mont de Pieté and try my fortune with the proceeds at a table of Rouge et Noir! (Horror! Horror!!)

Above all things be speedy (and excuse the trouble I am giving you)[.] “Je soutiendrai pugnis et calcibus”<sup>4</sup> that I have not thrown away a farthing of money in this business and that I have been very ill-used by the Devonport Street dynasty – to which however in a fine spirit of Christian piety I extend my forgiveness and desire my love.

How did you get home? How did you find Jane and progeny?<sup>5</sup> Write and tell me all about my pecuniary and your domestic affairs. D— me! I must have a letter from Somebody!

I have finished my view of Chateau Galliard. It is – if possible – a more sunny little bit of nature than my representation of Dieppe D’H.<sup>6</sup> The foreground is exquisitely luxurious – full of chiaro-oscuro – and suffused in airy freshness.

I have also bought as much writing paper as I can afford / (3 Penny-worth)/ – and intend to write something. It is to be a farce or a sermon – I have not yet decided which.

“Le Verre d’Eau” was admirably played at the Francais – the night you left – Brindeau made a brilliant and gentlemanlike Bolingbroke<sup>7</sup> – In mentioning however “Swift, Prior, and Atterbury” as his newspaper colleagues – he pronounced the names of these British worthies a little obscurely – as thus: –

Shwiffts – Preeore – Autturboorey –

The actress who played Queen Anne acted with an ease grace and dignity delightful to look at – she [del] is a particularly ladylike and elegant woman and is named (I think) Mdlle Denain.<sup>8</sup> The piece played before the comedy was one of the most original and interesting I ever saw. It was called “The Chef d’oeuvre inconnu” – and treated of one Act – Michael Angelo being one of the characters.<sup>9</sup>

It is time to leave off – or I shall /miss/ ~~lose~~ today’s post. Don’t forget my moneys and [expenses] – for I am anxious to get back to my work at home and am not particularly enamoured of an economical sojourn in Paris –

ever truly yours | W Wilkie Collins

C.J. Ward Esq | Messrs Coutts Co

Mrs Collins may say – that I gave her “the option” of lending me the £5,,-,- – or not – but surely I had a right to be told by return of post what I was to await [del] – how could I otherwise be expected to arrange any plan – economical or ~~otherwise~~ the contrary? This epistolary silence is most unaccountable. Can anything have happened?<sup>10</sup>

---

1. See [3147] to him of [1841–1845].

2. To: ‘Charles J. Ward Esq | at Messrs Coutts & Co’s | Strand | London’, with ‘Angleterre’ in the upper left corner and ‘W.W.C’ in the lower left. Postmarked ‘PARIS | 10 | AOUT | 12 | (60)’, and endorsed ‘CZ | 12 AU 12 | 1847’.

3. WC draws a long diagonal line between the ‘8’ under “Assets” and the ‘8’ just above the total, while there are horizontal lines between each entry and the related amount.

4. ‘I would argue (French) with all my might (Latin, literally, “with fists and with heels”).’

5. His wife Jane Ward and their children.

6. Probably indicating ‘Dieppe vue d’en haut’ or ‘Dieppe seen from above’.

7. Le Verre d’Eau, ou Les Effets et les Causes (1840: The Glass of Water, or Effects and Causes), historical comedy set in London during the War of the Spanish Succession by Augustin Eugène Scribe (1791–1861). In the revival at the Théâtre Français of 1847, the part of Lord Bolingbroke was played by Louis Brindeau (1814–1882).

8. The part of Queen Anne was played by Mademoiselle Denain (stage name of Pauline Mesnage, 1823–92), actress at the Comédie Française, 1840–56.

9. Presumably a dramatization of Balzac’s short story, Le Chef-d’œuvre inconnu (1831: The Unknown Masterpiece).

10. HC’s bank account records £5 ‘Sent W W Collins’ on 5 August 1847 (Coutts: Exors WmC).

[0040] TO CHARLES WARD, [17] AUGUST 1847<sup>1</sup>

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 20 (dated [1847]).

1. Devonport Street | Tuesday –

My dear Ward

I shall be charmed to eat of your venison in company with your benignant and excellent father.<sup>2</sup>

The matter of the professional cook is delicate – My private sentiments are for employing him – but my sentiments, under fear of your wife, are for leaving the haunch (under that lady’s superintendence) to the woman of the stentorian larynx who opens your gate to visitors – not the tall hungry looking girl who is “usher” of the family chamber pots, and lady in waiting on young Wards [sic] foul napkins<sup>3</sup> – but the short woman who warms your dishes, and who has a good plain-cook-and-steakish physiognomy<sup>4</sup> – Under good guidance I pronounce her to be capable of great things – even of a haunch of Venison.

Yours ever faithfully | W. Wilkie Collins

Has a gentleman named Andrews paid in £148 or £168 (I d’ont know which) to our account?<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Dating from the first available Tuesday after both the bank payment mentioned in the postscript and WC’s return from the trip to Paris – see [0039] to Ward, 10 August 1847.

2. Also Charles James Ward (1781–1858), a friend of WmC and manager at Coutts & Co.

3. This presumably refers to the Wards’ second child and first son, William Charles Frith, generally known as Toby, born in spring 1847.

4. WC initially writes ‘plain-cook-steakish’ but inserts the ‘and’ in the margin..

5. A payment of £148-1s from G.T. Andrews is recorded in HC’s account on Friday, 6 August 1847 (Coutts: Exors WmC). The nature of the payment has not been identified. The only viable candidate of that name and initials from public records is the York architect George Townsend Andrews (1804–1855).

[3018] TO JOHN MURRAY, 25 FEBRUARY 1848

MS: NLS (John Murray Archive, Acc.12604/1235).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C3, p. 35.

1 Devonport Street | Feby 25th 1848

Dear Sir

I have only this morning discovered that a letter I wrote to you, on the day when I received from you my M.S., was, by some mistake, not taken to the Post as I had imagined. This will account for my delay in answering your communication.

I am much obliged by the attention you have given to my Biography of my father, and by your kind advice relative to the best manner of endeavouring to procure its publication. I hope in a few days to submit my M.S. to the revision of a competent literary friend, in compliance with your recommendation to that effect.<sup>2</sup>

I remain Dear sir, | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To / John Murray Esqre

---

1. On half-mourning paper with a thin black edge, with the addressee line at the foot of the first page, and addressed and dated at the end of the letter after the signature.

2. It is not clear who, if anyone, performed this service. Arrangements had already been made to publish the biography by private subscription though Longmans by early May – see [0041] to Sir Robert Peel of 4 May 1848.

[0041] TO ROBERT PEEL,<sup>1</sup> 4 MAY 1848

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 28–29; BGLL, I, p. 21.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | May 4th 1848

Sir

The Biography of my late Father, in reference to which I had the honour of writing to you some months since, is now completed. It will be published in two volumes, by Messrs Longman & Co, during the next autumn season.

In sending my M.ss. to Press, I cannot prevail upon myself to forego attempting to procure an addition to it, which in its printed form, I am most anxious to be permitted to make – its dedication to you.<sup>2</sup> I feel that to connect it thus with your name, would be not only fitting to inscribe it to a patron of English Art; but also to dedicate it – as the narrative of my father's life and studies – to one who exercised a generous influence over both; who was his friend as well as his patron – the object of his personal gratitude and esteem, as well as the purchaser of some of the finest of his works.

Should you be willing to allow me to dedicate the Memoir to you, I am permitted by Mr Alaric Watts to inform you – as some guarantee that its contents are not unworthy of the favour that I ask – that it has been read by him, and has received his warm approval.<sup>3</sup> If my application should not be admissible, I have only to hope that you will excuse it, as made with a motive which is at least natural and sincere.

I have the honour to remain, | Sir,
Obediently and respectfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To / | The Right Honble | Sir Robert Peel, Bar<sup>t</sup>, M.P. | &c &c &c

---

1. Sir Robert Peel (1788–1850: ODNB), Prime Minister (1834–5) and founder of the Conservative Party. Peel was also a patron of the arts. Between 1824 and 1829, when he was Home Secretary, he bought four pictures from WmC, including 'A Frost Scene' for £525.

2. WC's dedication to the Memoirs reads: 'To the right honourable Sir Robert Peel, Bart., etc., etc., this biography of an English painter, whose genius he encouraged and whose character he esteemed, is respectfully inscribed'.

3. Alaric Alexander Watts (1797–1864: ODNB), poet, journalist and friend of WmC. See [0048] to Watts of 3 August 1848.

[0042] TO J. WILSON CROKER,<sup>1</sup> 18 MAY 1848

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 22.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | May 18th 1848

Sir

I have just completed a Memoir of the life of my late father – Mr Collins R.A. – which is to be published by private subscription during the ensuing autumn.

Knowing you to be interested in whatever relates to the Fine Arts, and believing you to have been personally acquainted with my father, as well as an admirer of his works, I have thought it likely that the narrative of his career in Art might have some interest in your eyes, and that you might excuse my asking permission to add your name to the lists of subscriptions from noblemen and gentlemen interested in subjects connected with painting, which I have already received.

The Biography will occupy two volumes – with a portrait; and will comprise, among its other contents, selections from my father’s Journals and Correspondences (the latter including letters from Coleridge, Wilkie, Allston,<sup>2</sup> &c &c) descriptions of his principal works, and anecdotes of many of his remarkable contemporaries. The price of the book will be one guinea.

I remain Sir, | Your most obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins
To | The Rt Honble | J. Wilson Croker | &c &c &c

---

1. John Wilson Croker (1780–1857: ODNB), Tory politician and regular contributor to the Quarterly Review.
2. The American painter Washington Allston (1779–1843), after whom CAC was named.

[0043] TO W. C. MACREADY,<sup>1</sup> 18 MAY 1848

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 22–23.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | May 18th 1848

Sir

I have just completed a memoir of the life of my late father – Mr Collins R.A. – which will be published by subscription during the ensuing autumn.

Believing you to be an admirer of my father’s pictures, and to have been personally acquainted with him as well, I am induced to hope that I may be excused for asking to be permitted the honour of adding your name to the list of subscriptions from noblemen and gentlemen interested in subjects connected with the fine Arts, with which I have already been favoured.

The Biography will occupy two volumes – with a portrait; and will comprise, among its other contents, selections from my father’s Journals and Correspondences (the latter including letters from Coleridge, Wilkie, Allston, &c &c) descriptions of his principal works, and anecdotes of many of his eminent contemporaries. The price of the book will be one guinea.

I remain Sir, | Your most obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins
To | W.C. Macready Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. William Charles Macready (1793–1873: ODNB), the famous actor-manager. He replied on 20 May 1848 that he would subscribe (Morgan, Misc. Drama MA Unassigned). WC sent him the volumes on 18 June 1849 [0059].

[0044] TO J. WILSON CROKER,<sup>1</sup> 22 MAY 1848

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 23–24.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | May 22nd 1848

Sir

I am afraid I hardly made my motives, in writing to ask you to subscribe to my biography of my late father, sufficiently clear and comprehensible – and I will now endeavour, at the risk of troubling you unnecessarily, to explain it more completely.

I was advised by a literary friend to keep the copyright of the Memoir under my own control, by publishing it on commission, and to cover the expense of this process by obtaining subscriptions for it – to be paid at the convenience of those subscribing – after they had received their copies of the book. As many of my friends were willing to make my plan of publication known among their acquaintance, if I would give them the means of doing so, I determined to print a Prospectus which they might distribute privately, and which containing the names of many subscribers eminent for their rank or attainment, might give some importance to the work in the eyes of others. Having received the names of many of the nobility patrons of Art – and of many gentlemen connected in various ways with Literature and Painting, among whom are Mr Rogers, Mr Hallam, Mr Wordsworth, Mr Lockhart, Mr Martin Shee, Mr Eastlake, Mr Maclise,<sup>2</sup> &c &c I felt anxious to obtain your name among these – to place in the Prospectus – leaving the payment of the subscription, in your case as in that of others, to be made after the book had been published and received by the subscribers.

Having thus endeavoured to explain the nature of the preliminary support for my work, which I was desirous of obtaining when I wrote to you, I have only to add my apologies for troubling you in a subject of little importance to anyone but myself, and remain, Sir, your most obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins

-
1. On 21 May Croker had replied to [0042] of 18 May to the effect that he preferred to ‘await the publication of the book’. Croker’s draft reply was written on the final leaf of WC’s original letter and is thus preserved in Parrish.
  2. WC refers to: Samuel Rogers (1763–1855), poet; Henry Hallam (1777–1859), historian; William Wordsworth (1770–1850), Poet Laureate; John Gibson Lockhart (1794–1854), editor of the Quarterly Review; Sir Martin Archer Shee (1769–1850), painter; Sir Charles Lock Eastlake (1793–1865), painter; and Daniel Maclise (1806–70), painter.

[0045] TO BENJAMIN DISRAELI,<sup>1</sup> 22 MAY 1848

MS: Bodleian (Dep. Hughenden 123/2, no. 336, owned by the National Trust).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 24–25.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | May 22nd 1848

Sir,

I have just completed a memoir of the life of my late father – Mr Collins, R.A. – whose pictures of coast and cottage scenes, you may have remarked among private Collections in this country, as well as in the former Exhibitions of the Royal Academy.

The Biography is to be published by subscription during the ensuing autumn. Having already received for my list of subscribers, the names of many gentlemen eminent in Literature and Art, I have been induced to hope that it might not be inappropriate to communicate to you the nature of the work which I have now completed; in case you should feel disposed to permit me the honour of adding your name to the list of subscriptions from noblemen and gentlemen which I have already received.

The Biography will occupy two volumes – with a portrait – and will comprise, among its other contents, selections from my father’s Journals and Correspondence, (the latter including letters from Coleridge, Wilkie, Allston, &c &c) descriptions of his principal works, and anecdotes of many of his distinguished contemporaries. The price of the book will be one guinea.

I remain, Sir, | Your most obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins
To | Benjamin Disraeli Esq M.P. | &c &c &c

-
1. Benjamin Disraeli (1804–81: ODNB), British politician and novelist.
  2. At the top of the otherwise empty fourth page of the folding notepaper is written, in Disraeli’s hand, ‘1848 May 28th | Mr Collins [to Disraeli] | No Answer | returned’.

[3000] TO LORD JOHN RUSSELL,<sup>1</sup> 23 MAY 1848

MS: NA (PRO30/22/7C 87–88). Published: A&C2, p. 61.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | May 23rd 1848

My Lord

I have just completed a Memoir of the life of my late father – Mr Collins R.A. – whose pictures of coast and cottage scenes, your lordship may have remarked among the private collections of this country, and in the former Exhibitions of the Royal Academy.

The work is to be published by private subscription during the ensuing autumn. Having already received for my list of subscribers the names of many noblemen and gentlemen distinguished as connoisseurs and as patrons of Art, I have been induced to hope that it would not be entirely inappropriate to communicate my plan of publication to your lordship, should you be willing to permit me the honour of adding your lordship's name to my subscription list – as patronising a work which has for its object to increase (however humbly) the existing collection of Biographies of English Painters.

The Biography will be published in two volumes – with a portrait; and will be sold for one guinea.

I have the honour to be | My Lord

Your lordship's most obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins

To | The Rt. Honble | The Lord John Russell, M.P.

---

1. John, First Earl Russell (1792–1878: ODNB), Whig statesman who first served as Prime Minister from 1846–52.

[0046] TO G. POULETT SCROPE,<sup>1</sup> 1 JUNE 1848

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 24.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | June 1st 1848

Sir

I have just completed a memoir of the life of my late father – Mr Collins R.A. – which is to be published by private subscription during the ensuing autumn.

Knowing you to be interested in whatever relates to the Fine Arts, and to be most probably well acquainted with my father's pictures of coast and cottage scenes, I am induced to hope that I may be not addressing you on a subject wholly without interest, and that you may perhaps excuse my asking to be permitted the honour of adding your name to the list of subscriptions from noblemen and gentlemen connoisseurs, and patrons of Art which I have already received.

The Biography will dedicated by permission to Sir Robert Peel – will occupy two volumes with a portrait – and will be sold for one guinea.

I remain Sir, | Your most obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins

To | G. Poulett Scrope Esq. M.P. | &c &c &c

---

1. George Julius Poulett Scrope (1797–1876: ODNB), FRS, MP for Stroud (1833–68).

[0047] TO GEORGE RICHMOND, 26 JUNE 1848

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 10; BGLL, I, pp. 25–26.

1, Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | June 26th 1848

Dear Mr Richmond

I take the liberty of sending you some Prospectuses of the forthcoming Memoir of my father's Life. I am sure that you will not object to show them to any of your friends who may be interested in the Fine Arts, and that you will excuse my thus troubling you again on the subject of my book.<sup>1</sup>

The Subscription list has I think begun well, and to make it go on better, I am sending my Prospectuses flying abroad upon "the four winds of Heaven",<sup>2</sup> and am I suspect tempting all my acquaintance to propose as a new interpretation of "Oh that mine enemy would write a book"<sup>3</sup> –

the following context: – “Because he could’nt then bore me with Prospectuses as one of his friends!”

Pray remember me very kindly to Mrs Richmond,<sup>4</sup> and believe me,
Yours faithfully and obliged | W. Wilkie Collins
To | George Richmond Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. See [0035] to Richmond of 20 May 1847.
2. The tag is biblical – see, for example, Daniel 11:4 (AV): ‘his kingdom shall be broken, and shall be divided toward the four winds of heaven’.
3. Biblical tag deriving from the outcry of the suffering Job – see Job 31:35 (AV): ‘Oh that one would hear me! behold, my desire is, that the Almighty would answer me, and that mine adversary had written a book.’
4. Mrs Julia Richmond née Tatham – the couple were married in January 1831 (ODNB).

[0048] TO ALARIC A. WATTS,<sup>1</sup> 3 AUGUST 1848

MS: Nottingham (M 352). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 26–27.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | August 3rd 1848

Dear Mr Watts

I returned to town on Tuesday last,<sup>2</sup> and have received your letter with the proofs,<sup>3</sup> forwarded hither from the country.

Finding that you were out of town, and being unwilling to trouble you further about the duplicate proofs, I took the four sheets I had corrected to press yesterday. The second sheet must therefore, I fear, take its chance with my emendations only. The remaining three I shall take to Bolt Court today,<sup>4</sup> in time to take advantage of your corrections by comparing them with mine.

I am really sorry that you should have been troubled with the proofs, at a time when any extra troubles must have been by no means welcome, and am proportionately thankful for the kind attention that you have given to the correction of the proofs.

I shall be in town I think till the close of the autumn, and shall therefore be able to take care that you see the proofs regularly for the future. I will send them to the address at the head of your letter, unless I hear from you to the contrary.

Your approval of the Memoir in its printed form is of no slight value to me – for I have occasionally felt a little nervous about it, on seeing it “arrayed in all the responsibility of type”.<sup>5</sup>

With kind regards to your family circle | Believe me my dear Sir

Yours obliged & faithfully | W. Wilkie Collins

To Alaric A. Watts Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. Alaric Alfred Watts (1797–1864: ODNB), journalist and poet. He knew WmC and had bought two of his pictures. Watts edited the Literary Souvenir, an annual which published engravings of paintings, including three of WmC’s, in 1830, 1834 and 1835. Watts was clearly helping WC with the Memoirs.
2. On Tuesday 1 August – WC writes on a Thursday.
3. Proof sheets of the Memoirs, published in December 1848.
4. Referring to Tyler & Reed, 5 Bolt Court, Fleet Street, who printed the Memoirs.
5. Quotation untraced.

[0049] TO ALARIC A. WATTS, 4 AUGUST 1848<sup>1</sup>

MS: Private. Published: (New York) Collector: A Magazine for Autograph and Historical Collectors, no. 996 (1997); BGLL, I, p. 27.

1. Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | Friday

Dear Mr Watts

I was very sorry not to have been at home when you called yesterday. You have, ere this, received I suppose a letter from me acknowledging the safe receipt of your enclosure. Your proofs have been taken to the printers – where the corrections on them will be all strictly attended to.

I have I hope ensured the regular transmission of the fresh sheets to you, as soon as they are struck off. My presence in London will I trust prevent any fresh mistakes in forwarding them – Your corrections are far too valuable to me to be lost or delayed by any want of attention in sending you proofs regularly and immediately.

I remain My dear Sir | Your's obliged & faithfully

W. Wilkie Collins

To Alaric A. Watts Esqr. | &c &c &c

---

1. Dating from [0048] to Watts of the previous day.

[0050] TO GEORGE GODWIN,<sup>1</sup> 20 AUGUST 1848

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 27–28.

1 Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | Augt 20th 1848

Sir

I take the liberty of enclosing a Prospectus of a forthcoming “Memoir” of the late Wm Collins, R.A., with whose pictures of coast and cottage scenes you are I presume not unfamiliar.

Knowing that from your connection with the Art Union you must be interested in whatever relates to the Fine Arts, I have thought it not inappropriate to make known to you my publication – in case you should not be unwilling to permit me the honour of adding your name to the list of subscriptions from noblemen and gentlemen, connoisseurs and patrons of Art, which a reference to the Prospectus will show that I have already received.

I remain, Sir, | Your most obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins

To | George Godwin Esqre, Junior, F.R.S. | &c &c &c

---

1. George Godwin (1815–88: ODNB), distinguished young architect, editor of the Builder and Honorary Secretary of the Art Union of London, which he had helped to found in 1836–7. The Art Union Journal carried several prints of WmC's pictures and an obituary by WC was published there in April 1847, p. 137.

[0017] TO HARRIET COLLINS, [SUMMER 1848]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/10). Published: B&C, I, pp. 19–20 (dated [July 1844]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 8 (dated [1842/1843]).

Dear Mother

The enclosed letter from Miss Clarkson is unspeakably agitating for me. I have placed the house at her disposal – expect the three ladies to come of course<sup>2</sup> – /and/ have asked Marion Gray (!) to meet them,<sup>3</sup> and help me to put them to bed, and “let down their back hair”, and tuck them up, and so forth. What in the devil's name, am I to do with this seraglio of women? (six, including the servants). Shall I get the garret for Marion Grey [sic] – Charley's room for one Miss Clarkson – your room for the other – the large bedroom for the Mama? Have we towels, sheets, soap, enough, in the house? Oh Lord! oh Lord! What shall I do? Write quickly and tell me!

I suppose I have done right in asking Marion Gray to come – A woman is wanted in the house is'nt she? – It was Mrs Charles Ward's idea<sup>4</sup> – I intended to have asked one of Charley's “sluts”<sup>5</sup> to come and help me

Good God, suppose they should want a change of chemises!

I send some Prospectuses[.] Get me some subscribers[.]<sup>6</sup> Mrs Bullar is at Southampton, I have forwarded your letter, Spend money at the Sale of course.

Kind regards to all at Southsea –

Yours affectionately | W. W. C.

PS. Don't think of doing anything so foolish as to come back on account of the guests. If you give me some directions, I shall manage well enough. I don't feel much about anything but the chemises<sup>7</sup>

-
1. Tentative redating based on internal references – to a married Charles Ward and the distribution of 'Prospectuses' – as well as on the corrected salutation and the absence of mention of WC's father.
  2. The Clarksons were old church friends of the Collins family (Lycett, pp. 55–56). The three ladies here must be Mrs Sarah Clarkson, widowed mother of the Rev. George Arthur Clarkson (1815–97) of Amberley Vicarage, Arundel, Sussex, and her unmarried daughters Jane Anne (1814–73) and Frances Mary (c. 1816–76). It was perhaps the younger sister, known as Fanny, who had written the letter – see WC, Memoirs, II, pp. 261–263, and [0058] to Miss Clarkson of [5/12 June] 1849.
  3. WC's cousin Marion Gray (1825–1900), daughter of Catherine Gray, née Geddes.
  4. WC's cousin Jane Carpenter (1826–91), who on 4 February 1845 married WC's friend Charles James Ward.
  5. 'Presumably artists' models', according to Peters (p. 63).
  6. The reference must be to the printed leaflet publicising WC's autobiography of his father, which in the summer of 1848 he was sending 'flying abroad upon "the four winds of Heaven"' – see [0047] to George Richmond, 26 June 1848.
  7. WC underlines the word three times.

[0051] TO DAVID ROBERTS,<sup>1</sup> 16 SEPTEMBER 1848

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 28.

1 Devonport Street | Hyde Park Gardens | September 16th 1848

My dear Sir

I called with some Prospectuses at your house, about a month since, and found that you were out of town. I now enclose a few of my circulars, taking advantage of your kind offer to make the Memoir known to some of your friends, and trusting that your good nature will excuse my thus troubling you on the subject of my work.

The printing proceeds pretty expeditiously, and the book will be ready for publication, I hope, in October next<sup>2</sup>

I remain Dear Sir | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To | David Roberts Esqre, R.A. | &c &c &c

-
1. David Roberts (1796–1864: ODNB), RA, distinguished Scottish painter in oils and watercolours; traveller in Europe and the Middle East and author of The Holy Land (1842).
  2. The Memoirs, which in the event was published by Longmans in November 1848.

[0052] TO ALARIC A. WATTS, [7 NOVEMBER] 1848<sup>1</sup>

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 28–29.

38, Blandford Square | Tuesday

Dear Mr Watts

I forward a proof of one of the Vignettes. The other will be finished in a few days – Mr Creswick has touched upon both, and likes them.<sup>2</sup>

The Portrait has been altered as you recommended as regards the coat and stock – It is now in Bicker's hands to have the autograph engraved<sup>3</sup> – The first Vignette shall not be sent to Press until I hear your opinion of it.

There is nothing to print now in the Memoir but the list of pictures – this will be completed in a day or two.<sup>4</sup>

Shall we not see you, or your family, at the Fancy Ball on Friday? Consider what an opportunity you would have of adding to your satirical ballads, by the contemplation of some forty or fifty people, all trying to assume other people's characters? Charley is going as a rake of the time of Charles the Second;<sup>5</sup> and I have been induced to assume wig, breeches, and embroidery, as somebody (I don't know at all who I am to be) in the reign of Louis the 16th – Fancy the figures we shall make? – but the subject is too serious to joke upon – I am obliged to shave off my whiskers to be in costume!<sup>6</sup>

Yours obliged and faithfully | W. Wilkie Collins
To Alaric A Watts Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. Conjectural dating from the reference to the vignettes for the Memoirs. According to [0053] to R. H. Dana Sr, of 15 November 1848, work on the vignettes was finished by that date.
2. Thomas Creswick (1811–69: ODNB), RA, landscape painter and etcher whose book illustrations were praised by Ruskin. The two vignettes – ‘The Shrimper’s Return’ and ‘Visiting the Puppy’ – were frontispieces for the two volumes of WC’s Memoirs. They were based on WmC’s work and engraved by John James Hinchliff (1805–75: ODNB). (Despite the clear signature ‘J. Hinchliff’ on both vignettes, WC refers to him as ‘Mr Hinchcliffe’ in the book – Memoirs, II, p. 340.)
3. The portrait of WmC was painted by John Linnell, engraved by the prolific portrait engraver Henry Robinson (fl. 1827–72). Bicker is unidentified. WmC’s signature is under the portrait.
4. A list of WmC’s works and who had bought them is found in the Appendix to vol. II. It was based on WmC’s own list, now found at the NAL.
5. CAC, then aged 20.
6. WC had no whiskers in the 1850 portrait by John Millais, but grew them again in 1853.

[0053] TO R. H. DANA SR,<sup>1</sup> 15 NOVEMBER 1848

MS: Parrish (Box 4/18), folded and directed.<sup>2</sup> Published: Parrish & Miller, pp. 7–8; B&C, I, pp. 51–53 (with recipient misidentified as R.H. Dana Jr). Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 46–47; Davis, p. 51. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 29.

38. Blandford Square | London | November 15th 1848

My dear Sir

I have allowed so long a time to elapse since I last had the pleasure of communicating with you that I am afraid you will have almost forgotten both me and my book.<sup>3</sup> During the last two months I have had little time to devote my attention to anything not connected with the printing of the Memoirs of my father’s Life; and I was unwilling to write to you again until I could inform you definitely of the period of the publication of my work – in which you have taken so kind an interest, and to which you have contributed so much information giving [del] interest to that portion of it referring to Mr Allston’s character and genius.<sup>4</sup>

Many causes connected with delay in engraving the illustrations to the book and with changing the arrangements of parts of the Mss. have contributed to put off the publication of my work. It will, however, be “out” at last, in about a week or ten days hence. It occupies two volumes, is dedicated by permission to Sir Robert Peel, and will be published by Messrs Longman. What chances of success can be predicted for a book devoted to so peaceful a subject as the Art, amid the vital and varied interests of home politics and foreign revolutions now attracting everybody’s attention in England, it is impossible to say. I resign myself philosophically to await the event of my experiment – hoping little and foreboding less.

One of my objects in writing to you, is to ascertain the safest and easiest method of sending you a copy of my work; which I hope you will accept as some small return for your kindness in enabling me to give so many valuable particulars respecting Mr Allston’s death and character from your own letter to my father.<sup>5</sup> I hope you will think that I have done justice to this part of my subject when you see the Memoir, which shall be forwarded to you as you may direct.

As regards matters of Art generally, our most important event, here, has been the presentation by Mr Vernon of his magnificent gallery of modern pictures to the nation.<sup>6</sup> Of this you have most probably heard, and perhaps also of the place to which this splendid bequest has been consigned – the dark ground-floor rooms (never intend/ed/ for pictures) of our ugly and inco/nvenient/ National Gallery. ~~With~~ Considering the legislative carelessness about most public buildings, peculiar to this country, I think it doubtful whether money enough will ever be granted to build a fitting receptacle for this collection of the finest works of the English school. If any hope is to be entertained on the subject, it can only exist in the chance that the effect of our new Houses of Parliament (which are really magnificent /buildings/) may be powerful enough to excite the government, at some future time, to attempt the reformations and additions which are so much wanted in so many of our other Public Edifices.

Trusting to hear from you soon, I remain

Dear Sir, very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To, R. H. Dana Esqre | &c &c &c

-
1. Richard Henry Dana Sr (1787–1879), American lawyer, poet, and critic, whose assistance is acknowledged in the Preface to WC's Memoirs. The recipient's more famous son Richard Henry Dana Jr (1815–82), lawyer and author of Two Years Before the Mast (1840) and other works, is mentioned in [0073] to Dana Sr of 17 June 1850.
  2. Addressed, 'To | R.H. Dana Esqre | Boston | U.S. | America', with 'November 15th 1848' written in the bottom left-hand corner, 'Paid' in the top right-hand corner, and a faint postmark on which only 'PAID' and '1848' are decipherable. The MS was formerly laid in WC's Memoirs of the Life of William Collins (1848) at Princeton, I, pp. 6–7.
  3. WC's earlier letter to Dana has apparently not survived.
  4. Washington Allston, American painter (1779–1843), who in 1830 had married for a second time to Dana's sister Martha. Allston became a close friend of WmC during his second visit to England in 1817 (see WC, Memoirs, I, pp. 134–143), and his name was given to WC's younger brother, Charles Allston Collins.
  5. See WC, Memoirs, II, pp. 236–243, which reproduces Dana's letter to WmC of 15 August 1843 reporting the last days of his 'dear brother-in-law', and WmC's reply of 26 September 1843.
  6. Robert Vernon (1774/5–1849: ODNB), who had purchased two pictures from WC's father – Shrimpers: Evening (1831) and The Mariner's Widow (1835), presented a collection of 157 paintings to the nation on 22 December 1847.

[3019] TO ELHANAN BICKNELL,<sup>1</sup> 9 DECEMBER 1848

MS: Parrish (5/11). Published: A&C3, p. 35.

London 9th December 1848

Received of E. Bicknell Esqre The Sum of one Guinea, for one copy of Memoirs of Wm Collins Esqre R.A.

£1 .. 1.. –

W. Wilkie Collins

-
1. Elhanan Bicknell (1788–1861; ODNB), art collector.

[0054] TO WILLIAM BUCKLAND,<sup>1</sup> 9 DECEMBER 1848

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 30, amended A&C8, p. 23.

London Decr 9th 1848

Received of The Very Revd The Dean of Westminster The sum of one guinea for one copy of Mem of Wm Collins Eqr R A

W. Wilkie Collins

£1 .. 1.. –<sup>2</sup>

-
1. William Buckland (1784–1856: ODNB), Dean of Westminster (1845–56).
  2. On verso in contemporary ink, 'Collins - | £1 – 1 – 0', preceded by a later addition in pencil, 'Autograph | Wilkie'.

[0055] TO RICHARD WESTMACOTT,<sup>1</sup> 11 DECEMBER 1848

MS: Lewis Collection (tipped into a copy of Memoirs, I). Published: Lewis website; BGLL, I, p. 30

London Decr 11th 1848

Received of Richard Westmacott Esqre A.R.A. the sum of one Guinea, for one copy of Memoirs of W<sup>m</sup> Collins Esqre R.A.

£1 .. 1.. –

W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Richard Westmacott (1799–1872: ODNB), sculptor, whose father, Sir Richard Westmacott (1775–1856: ODNB), RA, is mentioned in Memoirs, I, p. 231. The younger Richard Westmacott became a full RA in 1849, and was Professor of Sculpture at the Royal Academy from 1857–67.

[0056] TO WILLIAM ETTY,<sup>1</sup> 10 JANUARY 1849

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 30–31.

38 Blandford Square | January 10th 1849

My Dear Sir,

Having heard that you were not in town, I have, hitherto, delayed sending you the copy of the Memoirs of my father's Life (now published) which you kindly subscribed for – not knowing at what address it would be most desirable that the book should be delivered, and being uncertain whether you might not return to London, and so enable me, at an early opportunity perhaps, to send it to you at Buckingham Street.

As however, I have not up to this period heard of your return to town, I am unwilling to let any longer time elapse, without communicating with you on the subject of my work, and ascertaining accordingly, whether you would wish it to be sent to you in the country, or to be left at Buckingham Street.

I am sure you will be glad to hear that the book has been favourably received by the Press, and that it is selling very satisfactorily.

Trusting that your health does not suffer from the rather trying changes of temperature during this winter season,

I remain, My Dear Sir, | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins P.S. I direct this letter to Buckingham Street, supposing that it will be duly forwarded to you in the country
To William Etty, Esq, R A, | &c &c &c

---

1. William Etty (1787–1849: ODNB), painter of classical and historical subjects, who had rooms at 14 Buckingham Street, off the Strand.

[0057] TO R. H. DANA SR, 12 JANUARY 1849

MS: Parrish (Box 4/18),<sup>1</sup> incomplete,<sup>2</sup> folded and directed.<sup>3</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 48–50; Davis, p. 60; Baker 2001, p. 511. Published: Parrish & Miller, pp. 8–10 (our copy text for the missing portion); B&C, I, pp. 53–55. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 31.

38. Blandford Square | London | January 12th 1849

My dear Sir,

On Saturday the 30th December last, I gave Messrs Longman directions to send a copy of my Memoirs of my late father's Life to their Boston Correspondents – Little & Brown – addressed to you. They assured me that the parcel should be despatched at the first opportunity – I hope you will receive it with as little delay as possible.

The book has hitherto succeeded very satisfactorily. It has been received with much greater indulgence, and reviewed at much greater length, by the Press, here, than I had ventured to anticipate.<sup>4</sup> More than half the edition of 750 copies is already sold; and this success thus far, trifling as is its importance in itself, is a matter of some gratification to me – not merely as showing that I have not entirely failed in my undertaking – but also as relieving me from some pecuniary responsibility; for the Memoirs are my own speculation, and by the sale of the larger half of the edition, the somewhat heavy expenses connected with their publication are already more than paid. I sincerely hope that you may be led to form a favourable opinion of the work, on perusal.

You ask what is the opinion among artists here of Ruskin's Modern Painters.<sup>5</sup> Although I do not follow my father's profession, (being a student of Lincoln's Inn; and only painting at leisure moments, in humble amateur-fashion, for my own amusement) I live very much in the society of artists, and can therefore tell you something of the impression made by Ruskin's work. The violent paradoxes in the First volume, had the effect which violent paradoxes, when cleverly urged, usually produce: – they amused some, displeased others, and startled everybody. It was pretty generally admitted that the author was a vigorous [sic in Parrish & Miller] and dashing writer, who had studied the Art with genuine enthusiasm, but with doubtful judgment. On the other hand, however, the greater part of his readers (with whom I came in contact) while doing justice to his capacities, thought him woefully [sic in Parrish & Miller] misdirected; and considered him as a man, who having determined to say something new on every subject that he touched, resolutely overlooked or dogmatically contradicted, any received and tested principle of intellectual or critical truth that came in his way; and fancied that he had achieved originality when in many cases he merely succeeded in producing what was eccentric or absurd. His book had its small circle of resolute admirers – but it made a sensation, and only a sensation, among the larger class of readers – artists and amateurs.

His second Volume, published some time after his first, and containing an expression of regret for the arrogance of manner in his preceding publication, has, however, raised him immensely in the estimation of cultivated and thinking readers. I have merely looked into it myself, but I have heard it spoken of by artists who have read it carefully as a work of very unusual power, exhibiting a deep sympathy with the highest purposes of Art – poetical observation of Nature – and profound critical appreciation of many of the works of the “Old Masters”. Some paradoxical opinions it might contain, in common with the preceding volume; but they were urged in a different spirit, and were amply compensated by the general intention of the book, and the real good to be gained from it – philosophically as well as pictorially – by attentive readers. Such is the general opinion of this second volume, so far as it has reached me.

All literary London is now astir however, [sic in Parrish & Miller] about a work of a very different order – Macaulay's History of England.<sup>6</sup> It is regarded everywhere, as a really great achievement, and as tending to found a new school of Historical writing. The first edition of three thousand copies was out of print in a fortnight. This is indeed a great age for great authors. Dickens told a friend of mine, that he had made four thousand guineas by his last year's Christmas book – (The Battle of Life) – a five shilling publication,(!) which everybody abused, and which, nevertheless, everybody read. Eighteen thousand copies of his present Christmas book (The Haunted Man) were “subscribed for” by the booksellers, before publication.<sup>7</sup>

I quite agree with you, that it is a matter of importance, that Mr Allston's portrait of Coleridge, should be engraved with the next edition of his works. I do not know any of the members of Coleridge's family, myself; but I know those who are acquainted with them; and will mention the subject to these friends of mine, at the earliest opportunity. To interest the Poet's son in the matter, is now unhappily out of the question – Hartley Coleridge's death having appeared in the papers of a few days since.

It has been one of the greatest sources of gratification to me, since the publication of my work, that the Memoirs have gained the favourable opinion of Sir Robert Peel; whose long and kind friendship for my father, and whose well-known judgment in matters of Literature and Art, concurred to give the highest importance to any criticism of his, on my undertaking. I had the pleasure of visiting him, by invitation, at his country seat, to receive his personal congratulations; and enjoyed the privilege of seeing in his gallery (for the first time) two of the largest and finest pictures my father ever produced – both painted some twenty years since, and both exhibiting those high and genuine qualities of Art, which will preserve them as “classics of the English School of Painting” – whatever the alterations /of style/ which that School may hereafter adopt. You will find them, in the Memoirs, described by me from my mother's [sic] recollections, under the titles of “A Frost Scene” and “The Morning after a Storm”.<sup>8</sup>

I remain, My dear Sir, | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins.
To | R.H. Dana, Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. MS formerly laid in copy of Memoirs of the Life of William Collins (1848), II, pp. 6–7.
2. The second page of the three-page letter is missing at Parrish, the first page ending ‘... they amused some,’ and the third page beginning ‘and as tending to found a new school ...’. Parrish & Miller, pp. 8–10, supplies the missing text in our transcription (from ‘displeased others, and startled everybody. ...’ to ‘... as a really great achievement.’).
3. ‘To | R.H. Dana Esqre | Boston | U.S. | America’, dated ‘January 13th 1849’ in the bottom left-hand corner and ‘Postage Paid’ in the top right-hand, with two postmarks, one entirely illegible and one reading ‘L | JA 16 | A’. At the foot of the page, upside down in relation to the written address, is added in another hand (perhaps that of Dana himself): ‘W. Wilkie Collins | Jan<sup>y</sup> 12 / 49. Ans. | June 5th ––’.
4. The Memoirs was ‘reviewed with enthusiasm and at length’ (Page, p. 3). Reviews appearing before WC writes to Dana have been traced in the following journals: Examiner (25 November 1848), pp. 755–756; Athenæum (2 December 1848), pp. 1211–1213; Literary Gazette (2–9 December 1848), pp. 785–787, 807–708; Observer (1 January 1849) p. 2; New Monthly Magazine (January 1849), pp. 53–57; and Westminster Review (January 1849) pp. 607–611. The last concludes: ‘We have rarely met with a biographical work full of such absorbing interest as the one before us, or one in which the events are clothed in language so unaffected, and a style so pleasing. Every one who has a taste for art should possess the “Life of William Collins”.’ Later reviews appeared in: Daily News (24 February 1849) p. 2; Gentleman’s Magazine (April 1849), p. 385; Eclectic Review (June 1849), pp. 709–719; and, Blackwood’s Magazine (February 1850), pp. 192–207, by John Eagles, probably the most enthusiastic and lengthy.
5. The first volume was published in 1843, the second in 1846.
6. The first two volumes were published in late 1848 (dated 1849), with the third and fourth appearing together in 1855.
7. See Patten, pp. 187, 198 (where WC’s words here to Dana are cited), and 202–204.
8. See WC, Memoirs, I, pp. 272–273, 315–316.

[0058] TO MISS CLARKSON,<sup>1</sup> [5/12 JUNE] 1849<sup>2</sup>

MS: Morgan (Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/23). Published: BGLL, I, p. 31.

38, Blandford Square | Tuesday evening

Dear Miss Clarkson

I have just heard from Ward that you are in town. Pray come tomorrow and see the Rehearsal (it will be a very bad one – ).<sup>3</sup> We dine at 5 o’Clock, and hope to see you at that hour

If either of your brothers, or your sister, happen to be with you – don’t forget to bring them at 5 o’Clock –

The disappointments we have met with in getting up the Play would fill a three volume novel – but these shall be related to you in full, when you come

My mother sends her kind regards – She has gone to bed, or she would have written herself –

Very sincerely yours | W. Wilkie Collins

(In great haste)

---

1. Either Jane or, more likely, Fanny, the two sisters of the Rev. George Arthur Clarkson of Amberley Vicarage, Arundel, Sussex – see [0017] to HC, [Summer 1848].

2. Conjectural dating based on the reference to amateur theatricals. HC, CAC and WC were only resident in Blandford Square from the summer of 1848 to the summer of 1850.

3. WC and his young friends were in the habit of producing amateur theatricals at the Blandford Square house in what was christened the ‘Theatre Royal, Back Drawing Room’. WC produced and acted in an adaptation of Goldsmith’s The Good-Natur’d Man, performed on 19 June 1849. The cast included WC, CAC and their painter friends Ned Ward and Jack Millais. A copy of the programme is found in the collection of the Theatre Museum, London. WC’s specially written printed Prologue is now at Morgan (R–V Autogr. Misc. English, 25). See [0463] to E. M. Ward, 1 April 1862, and Peters, p. 83.

[0059] TO W. C. MACREADY, 18 JUNE 1849

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:2). Published: BGLL, I, p. 32.

38 Blandford Square | June 18th 1849

Dear Sir,

In the summer of last year you favoured me with a very kind letter, announcing your willingness to become a subscriber to the Memoirs of the Life of my late father, (Wm Collins R.A.)<sup>1</sup>

I was then engaged in writing the work, which was not published until the end of the year – when you were absent from England. Having heard of your return, I take an early opportunity of sending you your copy of the Memoir – with many thanks for your support to my undertaking; and many hopes that my book may prove, on perusal, not unworthy of your approbation.

I remain, Dear sir, | (with great esteem)

Your obliged & obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins

To | W. C. Macready Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. See [0043] to Macready of 18 May 1848.

[0060] TO RICHARD BENTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 30 AUGUST 1849

MS: Berg. Extract: Griest, p. 70; Published: Davis, pp. 64–65; B&C, I, pp. 56–57. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 32.

38 Blandford Square | August 30th 1849

Private

Sir,

Having nearly completed an Historical Romance in three volumes, illustrative of the events of the first siege of Rome by Alaric, and of Gothic and Italian character in the fifth century, I have thought it probable that such a work might not inappropriately be offered for your inspection, while recent occurrences continue to direct public attention particularly on Roman affairs.<sup>2</sup> I now write therefore to say, that it will give me great pleasure to forward it to New Burlington Street, upon hearing that such an arrangement meets with your approval.<sup>3</sup>

Without now entering into detail, (which I shall be happy to do, if you think an interview desirable) I may merely observe that the subject, as far as I know, has the merit of being an original one; and that, while I have spared no pains to collect all the historical information connected with the period of the Romance, I have not forgotten that it was important to present that information – as far as lay in my power – in the graphic form most likely to be attractive to the taste of readers of the present day.

I can only mention to you, as an introduction, my work published at the close of last year:– “Memoirs of William Collins R.A.” – the success of which has encouraged me to enter on another literary undertaking.<sup>4</sup>

It is perhaps hardly necessary for me to add, that you will much oblige me by considering this offer – in case you should not be willing to entertain it – as strictly confidential.

I remain, Sir, | Your obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins

P.S. | Two volumes and a half of the Mss. are ready for Press.

To Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. Richard Bentley (1794–1871: ODNB), publisher, who in 1829 had formed a partnership with Henry Colburn in New Burlington Street, in the West End between Regent Street and Saville Row. Colburn had departed in 1832, thus creating the independent house of Bentley, which continued to issue the successful reprint series of ‘Standard Novels and Romances’ at 6s, and in 1837 started up the monthly Bentley’s Miscellany with Dickens as initial editor.

2. The year 1849 was a dramatic one in the history of the city. In February, an armed insurrection caused Pope Pious IX to flee and encouraged Giuseppe Mazzini to declare a Roman Republic. By July, Papal authority had been restored, following Giuseppe Garibaldi’s unsuccessful defence of the city besieged by the French army.

3. Antonina was published in three volumes by Bentley on 27 February 1850 (Gasson, p. 8).

4. This was not strictly true. The MS of Antonina records that it was half completed before William Collins’s death on February 1847 (Peters, p. 73).

[0061] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 8 SEPTEMBER 1849

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, I, pp. 57–58. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 33–34.

38 Blandford Square | September 8th 1849

Dear Mother,

There has been considerable “indisposition” in the house, but it has – with one exception – only been an “indisposition” to write letters; from which (as this piece of paper will show) I have been the first to recover.

Miss Elwin is the “exception”; she has been suffering dreadfully with the face-ache; but is now much better. Her sole piece of domestic intelligence, is: – that the woman who roasts flesh, and punches dough into bad pie-crust for us, is about to leave for her new place on Wednesday next. We confidently expect that our creature-comforts will be improved in the matter of confection, from the day of her departure – as the kitchen will then be turned into a Republic – Miss Elwin taking the post of Minister of the Interior; and Emma, that of Public Works.<sup>1</sup>

I returned from Brighton full ten days since, “sick and sorry”; but was speedily restored by the air of London from the effects of the noxious sea-breezes of the Sussex coast. On this day week (Saturday) Charles Ward and I propose setting forth at about half past eleven at night to embark at London for Boulogne – “en route” to Paris, Tours, Fontainebleau, Orléans, and whatever other places in the neighbourhood we can find worth seeing – We return in a fortnight. Have you any commands for Republican France?

Two volumes of my book are in Bentley’s hands. I wrote a civil letter offering them on trial, received a civil answer accepting them on trial; and expect, in process of time, a second civil answer, refusing them on trial.<sup>2</sup> After this, I suppose it will be time to try if Newby will let my “little book” puff out on its brief trial trip to the terminus of popularity,<sup>3</sup> along the same publishing line as the Curate of Wildmere.<sup>4</sup> If Newby declines (I shall begin to feel grievous doubts about the quality of the book, if he accepts) it will be time, I suppose, to see about publishing it myself. In the mean time nearly 200 pages of Volume 3rd are ready for press, and the remaining hundred so chalked out “in the rough”, that I could get them “executed”, like the country orders of advertising tradespeople, “on the shortest notice.”

So much for the Literature of one of your sons. As to the Art of the other, he is now filling in his design for his large picture; and is so engaged in that, and some other pictorial matters, as to be unable to leave home, on any visits whatever, for some time to come.<sup>5</sup>

No letters have been received – Mrs and Miss Grant called – the latter having performed the astonishing feat of recovering from her illness, by the short and simple process of migrating from the suburb of Hackney, to the suburb of Blackheath!<sup>6</sup> – After this let us hear no more of dawdling from one end of England to the other for change of air.

You were told, I believe, of the visit of the excellent Lady Chantrey,<sup>7</sup> bearing a bandbox filled with clouds of misty and indefinite white muslin, destined to encircle your head in such a halo of airy elegance as never floated around it before. I hope you have not forgotten to write and thank her for her kindness.

Pray, are the keys of the large chest in my room, and of the box folios placed upon it, in any part of the house where we can get at them? If they are, perhaps you will write and say where. If they are not, I must wait until I see you on my return from Paris, to get at some books that I want to read and some drawings that I want to see. The matter is of no great importance, at any rate.

Mind you apply to the doctor immediately if you feel any continuance of your complaint. I am sorry you did not do so, in the first instance.

I believe I have now exhausted my news. If you have any directions for me before I go, write them at once.

With kind regards to all at Southsea

Ever affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Miss Elwin and Emma are both otherwise unidentified members of the Blandford Square domestic staff. The departing cook also remains unidentified.
2. Referring to Antonina – see [0060] to Richard Bentley of 30 August 1849. The novel was in fact accepted by Bentley.
3. Thomas Cautley Newby (c. 1798–1882), ‘without doubt, the most notorious publisher of fiction in the Victorian period’ (Sutherland, p. 461).
4. Three-volume novel published anonymously in 1847 by Newby – a copy is found in the BL. In the same year, of course, Newby had unsuccessfully published Wuthering Heights and Agnes Grey as a single three-volume set.
5. Presumably ‘Berengaria’s Alarm’, exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1850, now in Manchester Art Gallery.
6. That is, a move from north to south-east London. The Grants must have been family friends – see [0683] to HC, 4 June 1866, on the death of Billy Grant.
7. Antonina was dedicated to Lady Chantrey, née Wale, the wealthy widow of Sir Francis Legatt Chantrey (1781–1841: ODNB), sculptor and friend of WmC.

[0062] TO RICHARD BENTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 12 NOVEMBER 1849

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 65. Published: BGLL, I, p. 35.

38 Blandford Square | November 12th 1849

Dear Sir,

I send you at last, the concluding sheets of my Romance; (“Antonina, or the Temple & the Church”)<sup>2</sup> [del] completing the M.s.s. now in your hands.

The conclusion of the book has been delayed, I am afraid, longer than you expected. I can only allege in excuse of this, that I was anxious to make the last part of the story, the best part; and was therefore unwilling to deprive myself of full time for consideration, in [del] revising and rewriting many parts of it.

Trusting to have the pleasure of hearing from you shortly,

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours, | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esq

---

1. The New Burlington Street publisher – see [0060] to him of 30 August 1849.

2. The novel was eventually published under the title Antonina: or the Fall of Rome. A Romance of the Fifth Century.

[0063] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 22 NOVEMBER 1849

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, pp. 66, 89: B&C, I, pp. 58–59.

38 Blandford Square | November 22nd 1849

My dear Sir,

I hope there is no doubt of our coming to an arrangement satisfactory to both, as regards the publication of “Antonina”.

I think I shall best show my frankness in stating my views, by telling you what considerations guided me in calculating ~~what~~ the amount of remuneration /which/ I should ask for the Mss. I felt, in the first place, that I had no right to mention, or to think of, any price which might adequately reward me for the time and pains that I have bestowed on the book in writing it, and shall still bestow in correcting it for press, because – although it ~~was~~ /is/ not my first work – it is my first novel; an experiment on the public, of which you are willing to take whatever risk there may be, and in the profits of which, if successful, you are therefore justly entitled to have the largest share. You see I state the case against me, candidly, just as I feel it.

At the same time, I reflected on the other side of the question, that the book was likely – in virtue only of its historical information (much of which remains to be put into notes) to appeal to a wider class of readers than general novel readers, in these times when history is so much in vogue; and that the modern taste for present times and the horrible, having been somewhat surfeited of late, a work appealing to other sympathies, would on that very account have, as a novelty, a considerable chance.

I was further guided in forming my views, by the profit I made on the “Memoirs” of my father’s Life, and by what I had heard of the prices given to men of great reputation as novelists. Calculating on these, considerably downwards from the last, as you will see, I came to the conclusion that if I ~~was~~ mentioned two hundred pounds, as the consideration on which I should be willing to part with my Mss, I should be proposing an amount of remuneration, which I candidly assure you I cannot but think rather under than over what anyone else in my peculiar situation would ask.<sup>1</sup>

And now, my dear Sir, having frankly placed my offer and the reasons which lead me to make it, before you; and while I await your answer, which I know will be as fair and friendly as your letter now in my hands – I can only repeat that it will not be my fault if Antonina does not make her appearance in the world under your protection. And, sanguine as I may be, I cannot help hoping that the connection between us, thus begun, may so continue that we may have no reason to repent it; and may both feel the same inclination to renew it at future periods.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

P.S. | I should have answered your letter by return of post, but I felt that a day’s consideration was due to it, before I replied.

To Richard Bentley Esqre<sup>2</sup>

---

1. [0064] to Bentley of 26 November reveals the terms eventually agreed – £100 in bills at three months on publication and £100 on the sale of 500 copies.

2. Written at the foot of the opening page of the letter.

[0064] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 26 NOVEMBER 1849

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Extract: Davis, p. 67. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 35–36. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 35.

38 Blandford Square | November 26th 1849

My dear Sir,

I willingly accede to your modification of the terms of payment for the copyright of Antonina – viz: – £100..-.- by your note, on publication, and £100..-.- on the sale reaching 500 copies.<sup>1</sup> I may add – in order to leave nothing unexplained – that I accept the above terms, with the understanding that the two notes of £100-- each, when paid to me, shall not be drawn at longer dates than two or three months – whichever you think best. I mention this, believing that I am making a fair and customary proposal – where no higher sums than £100-- are concerned; and wishing to make the terms of acceptance on my part, as a business transaction, as clear as possible.<sup>2</sup>

And now, to leave monetary matters, I can assure you that I am much pleased to find that you think my offer was a fair one, because I made it decisively, on careful reflection; and with quite as much consideration of what I owed to you, as of what I owed to myself.

As I think carefulness in Style, may, in these days, add considerably to the chances of success for the book, I shall take care to revise attentively each sheet of the M.s.s, as it goes to press. However, we can talk further on these, and other little matters connected with the work, when I have the pleasure of seeing you in town (which I presume will be the case) before the printing begins

Believe me, My dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esquire

---

1. See [0063] to Bentley, 22 November 1849, for the terms initially proposed.

2. Such promissory notes for a certain amount payable to a specified person at a given time in the future were quite common. They could be paid into a bank earlier than the due date at a discount. HC’s bank account does not record any payment from Bentley in this period (Coutts: Exors WmC). See [0072] to Bentley, 21 May 1850, for details of the payment.

[0065] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 6 DECEMBER 1849

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 67. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 36–37.

38 Blandford Square | Decr 6th 1849

My dear Sir,

I enclose the agreement signed. We must alter the title of the book I think as it now stands in the Mss.<sup>1</sup> I have thought of a title which in my opinion will look much better in the advertisements than “Antonina” – The Pincian Hill – where the greater part of the scene of the romance is laid – was called by the Romans of the Empire – “Collis Hortulorum.” Suppose we translate this “The Mount of Gardens” (adding: – “a Romance of the 5th Century”) as a title – It will be original, and will pique public curiosity – at least in novel readers. The only alteration necessary to be made in the Mss, would be to speak of the Mount of Gardens where I now speak of the Pincian Hill – the explanation of why it was called the Mount of Gardens occurs already in the first volume.

“Serapha” was a name of one of the early Christian Saints; (female). Would not this be a better name than “Antonina”? The only Antonina of any celebrity was, I am sorry to say, what we should call, “by no means a respectable woman” – The infamous wife of Belisarius was named Antonina. It would be more likely, too, that “Numerian” – as a Christian devotee – would call his daughter after a Christian Saint – and not by a Pagan, old Roman appellation.

Pray let me know what you think of these alterations. I write in a great hurry; but nevertheless with a firm conviction that we must, at least, change the present title of the book.<sup>2</sup>

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. According to Davis (p. 67), WC ‘re-enforced the substantial, learned appearance of Antonina by inserting footnote references to Gibbon. While doing so he apparently glanced by accident into one of Gibbon’s later chapters. What he saw there appalled him. He hurriedly wrote to Bentley that the name of both the novel and the heroine would have to be abandoned.’

2. None of WC’s suggestions was in fact implemented – presumably Bentley was against such wholesale changes at this late stage of the project.

[0066] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 6 FEBRUARY 1850

MS: Parrish (Box 4/16). Published: BGLL, I, p. 37.

38 Blandford Square | February 6th 1850

My dear Sir,

I have much pleasure in accepting your kind invitation for Saturday next, the 9th Inst,<sup>1</sup> at ½ past six for 7 o’Clock.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. WC writes on the Wednesday.

[0067] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 7 FEBRUARY 1850

MS: Parrish (Box 4/16). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 37–38.

38 Blandford Square | Thursday

My dear Sir,

After I wrote to accept the invitation with which you favoured me yesterday,<sup>1</sup> I heard of the advertisement of “Antonina” in the “John Bull”; and was told that there was a little mistake in it,<sup>2</sup> which I see repeated in the literary advertisements of this morning’s “Times”.<sup>3</sup> In both cases, I am described as the “Author of the Life of Samuel Collins, R.A.”, instead of Author of the Life of William Collins, R.A.

As I think this little ~~erro~~ slip had better be corrected without loss of time, I write to mention it at once, instead of waiting to tell you of it until I have the pleasure of dining with you on Saturday.

I remain, My dear Sir, | very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. See [0066] to Bentley of the previous day.
2. John Bull was a Conservative, Anglican Sunday newspaper founded in 1820; the advertisement for Antonina appeared in the issue of 3 February 1850.
3. The erroneous notice – which announced the novel as available in ‘a few days’ – appeared in the Times first on 7 February (p. 10f) and was repeated on 9 February. A corrected notice – which also announced the novel as ‘Just ready’ – seems to have appeared only from 23 February (p. 11d).

[0068] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 28 FEBRUARY 1850

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Extract: Davis, pp. 68, 73; Peters, pp. 82, 452 n. 23 (dated 28 July 1850).
Published: BGLL, I, p. 38.

38 Blandford Square | Thursday evening | Feb 28/50

Private

My dear Sir

I have received the books, and the proper letters have been written to ensure for them a fair reception.<sup>1</sup>

My friend will himself take a copy of “Antonina” to the Office of the Athenaeum, and will speak in favour of the Romance to two of the Reviewers. If this, does not secure for us common justice at least, I know not what will.<sup>2</sup>

The binding of the book is beautiful. It is in the best taste; and is (to me) quite new<sup>3</sup>

Very faithfully yours, | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre

P.S. | I am glad to hear that the copies have been sent to my friends; for they were quite as anxious to have the book the moment it was published, as they were to buy it. – Talking of copies, my mother (who of course thinks that I have written the most remarkable novel that ever was produced!) wishes me to ask you whether you will give her a copy of “Antonina”? I don’t know whether such a question is “admissible” (as the lawyers say) or not – but at any rate – as in duty bound – I put it.

---

1. The three volumes of Antonina, published by Bentley on 27 February 1850.
2. According to Davis (p. 68), the friend was Douglas Jerrold. Among the many favourable reviews of the novel (see Page, ed., Wilkie Collins: The Critical Heritage (1974), p. 4), was that by Henry Chorley in the Athenaeum (16 March 1850), p. 285.
3. ‘Cream embossed cloth, spines lettered in gilt, yellow endpapers’ (Gasson, p. 8).

[0069] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 4 MARCH 1850<sup>1</sup>

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Extract: Davis, p. 72. Published: BGLL, I, p. 39.

38 Blandford Square | Monday evening

My dear Sir,

I have just received a letter from Mrs Hunter (one of the friends for whom I ordered a copy of “Antonina”) telling me, that on calling at New Burlington Street to pay for the book, ~~they were told~~ she was informed it was a present from the Author, and thanking me very warmly for the gift.

I am very sorry that some informality on my part (as I suppose) in giving the orders for

“Antonina” should have lead to what is certainly a mistake. Mrs Hunter, and the other two friends, whose names and addresses I placed in the hands of your clerk, told me that they would buy the book; and I requested it to be sent to them accordingly. In Mrs Hunter’s case, it is now of course too late to rectify the error; (committed I am afraid through my carelessness) but as regards my other two friends, I hope there is yet time to apply for the money and to receive it. At any rate, I now write at once to say that the price of the book may be applied for in the normal way of business, whenever you choose to direct that it shall be done, from “Doctor Thompson” | 3. Southampton Street | Fitzroy Square | and from | “W.P. Frith Esqre A.R.A” | 12. Park Village West | Regents Park.<sup>2</sup>

Although I know no one to whom I should more willingly have presented a copy of my first Romance than Mrs Hunter; (the sister of Sir David Wilkie, and an old and kind friend of ours) still I am vexed that such a mistake should have been made, as that which now I write to explain. Considering the liberal manner in which you met my views regarding the price of the copyright of my book, the very handsome ~~manner~~ form in which you have had it printed and bound, and the kind and unintermitting exertions which you are now making on its behalf, I felt from the first and still feel, that to expect you to sacrifice even a single copy of the ~~Romance~~ Book on account of any friend of mine, would be to expect too much – to take advantage of your good nature in a way that was not very considerate and not very justifiable, to say the least of it.

I hope therefore, that you will cause the proper application to be made at once, to Doctor Thompson and Mr Frith. They both desired to buy the book, and will both pay for it whenever called on to do so.

With many apologies for troubling you at this length on the subject of any mistakes of mine,

I remain, My dear Sir, | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. Dating from the publication of the novel on Wednesday 27 February, plus the relationship to [0068] to Bentley of Thursday 28 February 1850. Davis suggests ‘about March 2, 1850’ (p. 313 n. 65).

2. Dr John Thompson (c. 1791–1874), the evangelical family friend of long-standing (see [0001] to HC, 17 October 1831), and the artist William Powell Frith, RA (1819–1909: ODNB).

[0070] TO CHARLES WARD, 19 MARCH 1850

MS: Private.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, p. 60. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 40.

Albury | near Guildford<sup>2</sup> | March 19th 1850

Dear Ward,

Bentley was out of town for the day, when I called yesterday at New Burlington Street; and you were lunching (you always are lunching) when I dropped in at The Strand. I saw Bayfield,<sup>3</sup> and gave him a message to you – concerning the newspaper of the 14th ultimo, which contains the review quoted from in the advertisement.<sup>4</sup>

One of Bentleys myrmidons told me that there would be a review in the “Dublin University” for next month – but you will see the advertisements of all the magazines,<sup>5</sup> and you will buy those which notice “mein schöirnen buke” [sic]<sup>6</sup> – and you will apply to Mamma Collins for payment of your charges – and Mamma Collins will reimburse, and read.

And see glimpses of light in the gloom of despair

Which ~~she says she exists in~~ /we all must exist in/, while lodged in the Square.<sup>7</sup>

There is nothing particular here – very few leaves on the trees – very little grass on the fields – no political changes in the village – a cursed confused chirping of birds – an unnecessarily large supply of fresh air – and a d—d<sup>8</sup> absence of cabs, omnibuses, circulating libraries, public houses, newspaper offices, pastry cooks [sic] shops, and other articles of civilisation.

Kindest regards to Jane, and the new infant too, whenever it is foolish enough to poke its innocent head into this nasty vicious world.

Believe the assurance &c &c &c | Collins
Do'nt forget to send me down ~~and~~ any new reviews in the papers.<sup>9</sup>
To Charles Ward Esqr

---

1. On the first leaf, but without comment in the body of the letter, WC draws a face with sunbeams radiating from it.
2. WC was perhaps visiting the family of John Thompson, now settled in the village of Albury, Surrey, where the estate of the wealthy banker Henry Drummond provided a base for the Irvingite Catholic Apostolic Church and its adherents (Lycett, p. 28).
3. Presumably a clerk or other staff member at Coutts & Co.
4. Here 'the advertisement' must refer to Bentley's new full-column announcement of the publication of Antonina inserted in the Athenæum (16 March 1850), p. 293c, which cited nine lengthy extracts from positive evaluations of the novel from the metropolitan press both daily (Morning Post, Morning Herald, Sun) and weekly (Observer, Literary Gazette, John Bull, Weekly Chronicle, Weekly News, Weekly Dispatch). The newspaper review mentioned as appearing on Thursday, 14 March, may be that in the Morning Herald, which, according to the advertisement in the Athenæum, declared: 'The story abounds with passages of surpassing beauty and striking eloquence, and we are presented with a succession of artistically arranged scenes, pourtrayed with all the exuberant fancy of a poet and all the brilliant prismatic colouring of a painter.'
5. In the event, the final pages (pp. 660–662) of the unsigned 'Recent Novels', Dublin University Magazine (May 1850), pp. 647–662, were devoted to Antonina. Reviews of the novel were also found in the April issues of the following metropolitan monthlies: Art Journal (p. 131), Bentley's Miscellany (pp. 375–678), Eclectic Review (pp. 491–495), Gentleman's Magazine (pp. 408–409), New Monthly Magazine (pp. 560–562).
6. WC presumably intends 'mein schönen buche' ('my beautiful book' in German).
7. Verse, apparently invented by WC himself, written across the foot of the second and third pages of the folding notepaper, again without comment in the body of the letter. Presumably Ward needed cheering up.
8. WC only uses this elliptical form of 'damned' with intimate male correspondents.
9. Influential reviews appearing thereafter in the newspaper press included those in the weekly Examiner (23 March), and the two most influential dailies, the Morning Chronicle (29 March) and Times (4 April).

[0071] TO OCTAVIAN BLEWITT,<sup>1</sup> 25 MARCH 1850

MS: RLF. Published: BGLL, I, p. 40.

38 Blandford Square | March 25th 1850

My dear Sir

Will you oblige me by conveying my best acknowledgments to the Comittee [sic] of the Royal Literary Fund for the honour which they are willing to confer upon me?

Although I have little – if any – literary right and title to assume the office of Steward at the Anniversary Dinner I should nevertheless have undertaken it,<sup>2</sup> had it been in my power – but I expect to be travelling in the North of France during the month of May; and am therefore obliged very reluctantly to decline the flattering offer which your letter conveys to me.

As a small proof, however – a very small one, I am afraid – of my sincere wish to be of some little assistance in furthering the objects of the Dinner, I beg to offer a donation of one guinea to the Fund,<sup>3</sup> which the Collector may obtain, whenever he calls in Blandford Square.

With many thanks for your kind congratulations on the success of my book.<sup>4</sup>

I remain, My dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To | Octavian Blewitt Esqr

---

1. (John) Octavian Blewitt (1810–84: ODNB), writer and Secretary of the Royal Literary Fund (1839–84) – see also [0088] to him of 29 April 1851.
2. Sir Thomas Talfourd was Chairman at the 1850 annual dinner.
3. WC's annual guinea subscription to the Fund appears to have lapsed in 1853 or 1854 (RLF archivist Nigel Cross, to Andrew Gasson, 1979). His lack of support was due to his siding with CD in the attack on the Fund by Dilke and Forster (see K. J. Fielding (ed.), Speeches of Charles Dickens (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1960), p. 193; and Pilgrim, VII, p. 649 n. 3).
4. Antonina.

[0072] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 21 MAY 1850

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 83. Published: BGLL, I, p. 41.

38 Blandford Square | May 21st 1850

Private

My dear sir,

I return Gibbon with many thanks.<sup>1</sup>

The Second Edition is, I hope, decidedly improved in all matters of minor detail – i.e. – in style, arrangement, shortening of long speeches, and so forth.<sup>2</sup>

I am sure you will excuse me if I take this opportunity of reminding you of a little matter of business which has no doubt escaped from memory – I mean the first bill (or promissory note) in my favour, for £100.-.-., dated at three months from the date of publication, which our agreement provides that I should receive from you. “Antonina”, having been published on the 28th of February last, the bill would fall due on the 28th of May, and would be payable to me three days after, on the 31st. I believe I state these dates correctly, in stating them thus.<sup>3</sup>

As the month of May is now drawing to a close, I mention our pecuniary matter in good time – leaving it to your convenience either to give me a check for the amount at the expiration of the present month, or to maintain the original arrangement of a bill, so drawn as to become payable at that period.

With best wishes – both on your account and mine – for the success of the Second Edition,

I remain, My dear Sir, | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. WC drew heavily upon Gibbon’s Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire in writing and revising Antonina. Though here WC has clearly borrowed a copy from Bentley, a twelve-volume edition, dated 1813, was found in his library at his death (see Baker 2002, p. 111).

2. Bentley’s advertisements for a revised second edition of Antonina began to appear in the press from late May. The new preface, dated ‘May, 1850’, stated: ‘In preparing a second edition of “Antonina,” the author has endeavoured, as far as lay in his power, to render his Work more worthy of the kind welcome which it has already received from the readers of romance’. However, the following letters to Dana [0073] 17 June 1850, and [0075] to Charles Ward [0075] [30 July] 1850, suggest that publication may have been delayed. There was also an 1853 edition in three volumes using the original preface and text.

3. On the terms of the agreement, see [0064] to Bentley of 26 November 1849. At this time no amount of £100 appears in HC’s bank account nor indeed any payment from Bentley (Coutts: Exors WmC).

[0073] TO R. H. DANA SR, 17 JUNE 1850

MS: Wolff Collection (1344b), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Photocopy: Kansas (MS P557:A1). Published: Wolff, pp. 255–266: B&C, I, pp. 61–63 (with the MS untraced). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 42.

38 Blandford Square. London | June 17th 1850

My dear Sir,

As I consider myself quite inexcusable for having so long delayed answering your kind letter in acknowledgment of the receipt of my biographical work,<sup>2</sup> I shall not [del] venture to make any apologies – but rather trust entirely to your good nature to pardon my “shortcomings”, and still to preserve some faith in my regularity as a correspondent, for the future.

I called at Chapman’s<sup>3</sup> on Saturday, and heard that he had received Mr Allston’s Lectures, and had forwarded them to Longman. I shall no doubt have the book, either today, or tomorrow. Pray accept my best thanks for it – I need hardly tell you that I anticipate no small amount of instruction and pleasure from the perusal of the welcome addition to my library with which you have kindly provided me.<sup>4</sup>

I shall be most happy to make your son’s acquaintance. If I can be of any use to him in London, I hope he will not scruple to employ my services in any way that he thinks proper.<sup>5</sup> I wish I could look forward to the pleasure of seeing you here, as well. We have still great men and great institutions enough left, to make the Old Country worth a visit. There is certainly an absence of any leading Great Man in England – but does not this “absence” extend to other nations as well? I think it is the tendency of the present times to make greatness more of a Republic, and less of a Monarchy, than it was. The vast spread of education and knowledge, the hot competition existing in all branches of human acquirement, seems to be placing clever men upon an intellectual level – and, I am sanguine enough to think, a very high one. It appears to me, that what was well done before (in statesmanship, for instance) by one man, is now as well or better done by many. There is less honour acquired collectively by the many men, than was formerly acquired by the one; but the advantage derived by the world is the same – nay, it is in one respect, perhaps, greater, as regards England. For I cannot forget that under our great men, we engaged in some long, bloody, and not very creditable wars, and I cannot help suspecting that under a Chatham, or a Pitt – under any leading man like these, who influenced all things by his [sic] own individual genius, and naturally referred all things, more or less, to his own individual feelings – we [del] might have had a recurrence of war, on more than one ~~occasion~~ /matter of provocation/ within the last ten, or twelve years. Now, whatever diplomatic difficulties we involve ourselves in, we don’t fight about them – we don’t go to war with France about the Greek affair<sup>6</sup> – the rule of the lesser men who now govern, is /with all its faults,/ a rule of Peace – and surely this is some compensation for the loss of those great men, whose rule was a rule of war.

However, enough of Politics! I suspect I am writing more hopefully than wisely about them – but, like all young men, I look at “the bright side of things”, and believe in /all/ our national changes, as, in the main, changes for good.

I have little news to tell you. There is rather a lull here, just at present in the world of Literature – we have nothing to talk about, but the two forthcoming volumes of Macaulay’s History. In reference to this book, I was told, upon good authority, that the profit derived from the sale of the two volumes first published, was £20,000! Such is the sum that a popular book will produce in a short period! – and ~~the same may~~ it is much the same with a popular picture. Landseer’s “Duke of Wellington re-visiting the field of Waterloo” (one of the prominent attractions of this year’s Royal Academy Exhibition) is to be engraved; and the sum of 3000 £, has been given to the painter, for the mere right of ~~engraving a drawing~~ making a print of it, by the publisher who has entered on the speculation. Truly, there is no want of encouragement among us, for good Literature and good Art!

Even in my own small way, I have succeeded beyond what I had ventured to anticipate. A second edition of my Romance has been called for – I completed, a day or two since, the revision of the last sheet.<sup>7</sup> I confess I had my misgivings about the book, when it was first published. The story, I feared, was laid at too remote a period (the fifth century), and illustrated too remote an event, (the first siege of Rome by the Goths, under Alaric). However, it seems to have satisfied the critics and pleased novel-readers, here; and this is some encouragement to go on, and do better, if I can. I believe the publisher (Mr Bentley) sent some copies of the first edition to America.

I don’t know who the article on the biography, in Blackwood, was written by.<sup>8</sup> I have read “Two Years before the Mast”, and read it with great delight – it is a most entertaining and most original book; and is deservedly popular in England, among all classes of readers.<sup>9</sup>

Wordsworth’s death was, I believe, not unexpected by those who knew him – his health had been seriously impaired for a long period. I well recollect being introduced to him, by my father, on the Pincian Hill, at Rome. I was a boy then, (in 1837) and was much struck by the remarkable mildness and kindness of his manners. He seemed as little fitted, as any man I ever saw, to bear (much less to enjoy) the bustle and constant change of a travelling life – he looked, to use the common phrase, “quite out of his element”, in a foreign land, and among foreign people. The “Cholera” was then, beginning its ravages in Italy – Wordsworth was bound for Naples, like ourselves; but the reports that the pestilence had broken out in that city “gave him pause”. I remember being quite astonished at the earnestness with which he entreated my father to do as he intended to do, and not only abandon all idea of going to Naples, but leave Rome at once for England. My father tried in vain to combat his apprehensions – the very idea of the Cholera seemed to fill him with horror – he left Italy, as he had determined to leave it, and we went on, as we had determined. I never saw him any more; but he wrote me a very kind letter about the Life of my father.<sup>10</sup> He was a good man and a great man – greater, I think, as a moral teacher than as a poet.

I am at present residing at the address, at the head of this letter, but it is very possible that I may move before long. Your son will, however, be sure to find me out, wherever I may be, on application to my publisher, Mr Bentley of New Burlington Street.

Believe me, to remain, My dear Sir, | most faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To / R.H. Dana, Esqre. | &c &c &c

1. 'To | R. H. Dana Esqre | Boston | U.S. | America', with the last three lines cancelled and 'Andover | Mass.' inserted in another hand. At the top right 'Paid' in WC's hand. Postmark: 'L | JU21 | A'.
2. Memoirs of the Life of William Collins.
3. Probably John Chapman, the publisher, whose list included works on art – see [0127] to him of 3 May 1852.
4. Washington Allston, Lectures on Art, and Poems, ed. R.H. Dana Jr (New York: Baker & Scribner, 1850). A copy of this volume does not appear amongst the lists of books in WC's possession at his death (Baker).
5. From the context, this must refer to the eldest son, Richard Henry Dana Jr (1812–1882), author, lawyer, and abolitionist, though his first visit to Britain appears to have taken place as late as 1856.
6. Referring to French opposition to the British blockade of Piraeus during the Don Pacifico Affair – for a contemporary account, see [George Finlay], 'Greece Again,' Blackwood's Magazine 67 (May 1850), pp. 526–539.
7. This suggests a rather later publication date for the revised second edition of Antonina than '[May] 1850' (Gasson, p. 8).
8. Referring to the unsigned review by John Eagles, 'Memoir of W. Collins, R.A.,' Blackwood's Magazine 67 (February 1850) pp. 192–207.
9. Richard Henry Dana Jr, Two Years Before the Mast (1840), describing Dana's son's voyage as a merchant seaman from Boston to California, and back, via Cape Horn, beginning in August 1834.
10. William Wordsworth to WC, 10 December 1848, Letters of William and Dorothy Wordsworth: Volume VII The Later Years: Part IV 1840–1853, ed. Alan G. Hill (2nd ed.; Oxford: Clarendon, 2000), p. 882.

[0074] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 29 JULY 1850

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/25), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 63–65. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 42.

Fowey | July 29th 1850

My dear Mother/

We are now fairly in Cornwall. I date this letter from a sea-port town on the South Coast – the most uninteresting place we have yet met with. All before Fowey has, however, been wonderful. The scenery in the valleys is amazingly fertile and beautiful. Trees forming natural arches over the lanes – ferns and grasses in the hedges, of an almost tropical size and luxuriance. Then, when you rise to the ridges of the great hills which run through the middle of Cornwall, the whole prospect changes – vast, solemn moors stretch out on all sides – generally overshadowed ~~with~~ by black clouds – you see your road winding on before you till it looks like a white thread in the far distance. Old tottering gray sign posts ~~start~~ stand like spectres in lonely cross roads – strange Druidical stones, and black, grand rocks, piled fantastically one upon another, meet you at one place; and picturesque little ~~gran~~ farm-houses, pleasant cornfields, and holy wells with ruined chapels and sturdy Saxon crosses near them, present themselves at another. Cornwall is, in short, what I always thought it, one of the most beautiful and most romantic counties in England.

We are not idle in preparing, at least, for a book of some kind. Brandling sketches and I journalize diligently. What we shall yet do remains to be seen. We shall bring home some materials at any rate.<sup>2</sup>

You can trace out our route on the large map of England, if you like. From Plymouth we went to St Germans (in Cornwall) by a boat (a pleasant way of beginning a pedestrian excursion!). We had a lovely ~~row~~ /little voyage/ by moonlight – and met with some adventures, which you shall hear when we return. From St Germans we journeyed to Looe (on the coast) by land. This was our first start on foot with our knapsacks. The weight of the knapsack was anything but contemptible for the first mile or two, which was all uphill. But “poor human nature” gradually accustoms itself to all things – and during the latter part of our walk (a ten mile one) the knapsacks became as familiar and as comfortable as natural humpbacks.

We found Looe a snug cosy primitive old place, with a nice old bridge, and toppling old houses with two or three doors each, leading into two or three zigzag, labyrinth-like old streets. There was also a fat landlady /at the Inn,/ and a fat chambermaid who coddled us in comfortable beds, and fuddled us with comfortable ale, and stuffed us to bursting with good pies and puddings and sweetcakes, and then sent us into the garden of the Inn, to keep us out of mischief, like children; and to digest our feast in harmony and peace. Leaving Looe, and leaving all the best and purest affections of our – stomachs, with the landlady and the chambermaid, we walked to Liskeard to see the Druidical remains and curious rocks in the neighbourhood. At the Inn here, there was an awful change. The landlady was a nasty thin woman in black, with a bilious complexion and a crocodile grin – the chambermaid was unpleasantly addicted to perpetual perspiration on the forehead, and was shod in ~~an awful~~ /a mighty/ pair of boots that creaked and clanked all over the house without interruption. There was nothing good to eat, and nothing good to drink. So we changed this Inn for another in the Town, where we again found a nice landlady, who said she liked us for being such nice strong young Englishmen, who walked about independently and didn't mind the weight of our knapsacks. “We were not effeminate dandies, and she liked us for it, and bid God Bless us with all her heart”! From Liskeard we journeyed to Lostwithiel – a little town in a valley; full of Methodists ranting and singing (on Sunday morning) through their noses discordantly enough to set all the teeth of all the angels in Heaven on edge. We went to the Church; and heard a sermon of the old school from a nice harmless old parson, which edified us considerably, and strengthened us in our generation just as it out [sic]. From Lostwithiel we walked here today; and from this place we intend starting for St Austle tomorrow.

Direct your next letter (and write me a long one) to “Post Office, Falmouth, Cornwall”. If you do anything about a house in Fitzroy Square<sup>3</sup> – mind the drains – have a surveyor to examine them particularly. Some of the houses are badly drained. Is Gould to help you to move?<sup>4</sup> Write to Charley and ascertain distinctly when he is coming home – he must be able to settle sometime – give him my love – ever yours affectionately

W W Collins

Brandling sends his love.

-
1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | 38 Blandford Square | Regent’s Park | London’, with the initials ‘W.W.C.’ in the lower left corner and ‘Paid’ in the upper right. Postmarked ‘ST-AUSTLE | JY 31 | 1850’.
  2. The result, of course, was WC’s Rambles Beyond Railways; or, Notes in Cornwall Taken A-foot, a travelogue with twelve illustrations by Henry C. Brandling, which was published by Bentley at the end of January 1851.
  3. Brandling and his younger sister Emma then seem to have been resident at Fitzroy Square, the Georgian square off the Tottenham Court Road completed in the mid-1830s. In the event, when WC’s mother moved from Blandford Square it was to Hanover Terrace rather than Fitzroy Square – see [0076] to HC, 3 August 1850.
  4. Gould remains unidentified.

[0075] TO CHARLES WARD, [30 JULY] 1850<sup>1</sup>

MS: Harrowby (ff. 860–1), folded and directed.<sup>2</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 65–67 (dated 1 August as in the letter itself). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 42.

S<sup>t</sup> Austell, Cornwall | Aug<sup>t</sup> 1st 1850

My dear Ward /

I have not written to you before this, because I wished to gain experience enough of Cornwall to be able to give you a fair, full and trustworthy report of the country. If you look at a large map of England, you will see that, at S<sup>t</sup> Austell’s, we /are/ about half way down the Southern coast, on our way to the Land’s End – or rather to Penzance, our headquarters for the Land’s End. At Penzance you can meet us easily, if you will; and you really ought to see Cornwall – more varied, picturesque, and romantic scenery /than this,/ I have not often beheld, anywhere – and I am yet in what is considered the least interesting part of the country.

If you like old churches, here they are in abundance, Brandling is now sketching the tower of S<sup>t</sup> Austell's Church – a fine specimen of gothic architecture of the 14th century – studded all over with quaint images of Saints, and stone faces of ladies and gentlemen in purgatory, grinning horribly upon you at every corner.<sup>3</sup> Churches of this sort abound all over Cornwall. Besides this, there are holy wells dedicated to old Cornish saints, with little ruined chapels, and curious stone crosses near them. If such things as these, are not interesting ecclesiastical remains – what things are? Then, the scenery. In the valleys, it is fertile to the utmost degree of fertility. Ferns and grasses in the hedges almost as tall as I am – trees of all varieties, in full verdure – long, undulating cornfields – pleasant little streams – and snug little farm-houses, all built of solid granite with chimneys of bright /red/ brick. On the hills, you see half over Cornwall – immense moors roll, as it were, one over the other, to the far horizon – with masses of cloud, blown up from the Atlantic, grandly overshadowing them. The rain from these clouds is confined to certain spots on the highest ridges, and seldom reaches you on the roads and footpaths lower down. I only recollect ~~three~~ two showers since we entered Cornwall – nothing could be finer than the weather has been hitherto.

Our way of travelling is the most independent and delightful that can be imagined. We start at our own hour – walk where we please – stop where we please. After you have had it on for the first half hour, the weight of the knapsack ceases to be felt as an encumbrance of any importance – and the ~~privilege~~ /pleasure/ of having all one's luggage on one's back and caring nothing for whole legions of porters, is hardly to be described. The people in Cornwall are /a/ remarkably civil and orderly race. We have only met with one beggar, as yet, throughout our travels; and he was evidently “a tramper” from some other part of the country. The living at the Inns is remarkably cheap, and generally speaking remarkably good. We have had but one bad dinner since we left. Beds vary in price from one shilling to two (generally one); and breakfasts and dinners are proportionally low in price.

I am keeping my journal very regularly; and I have some hope of finding enough in it, when I get back to London, to make a book. We have already met with some adventures, have seen some curious people, and have visited some remarkable places – the granite rocks, Druidical monuments, and holy wells in the neighbourhood of Liskeard being among the most surprising of the Cornish sights that we have yet behold. We have asked in vain, at all the towns, for a guide book – so there is, at any rate, ~~an opening~~ ground enough “to let” on Literary “building leases”, in the county of Cornwall.

Now, does what I have already written tempt you to join us, or does it not? If it does, you can ~~join~~ /meet/ us comfortably by the middle of August, at Penzance. And you must proceed thus:–

Take /a passage in/ the Cork Steamer (from Margate Wharf: Office 25, Mincing Lane) either to Plymouth or Falmouth. To Plymouth costs 12/6; to Falmouth £1,,,- (Steward's Fee included)[.] The steamer stops all night at Plymouth on the way to Falmouth – so perhaps you may prefer going the shortest voyage to Plymouth only. In this case, you will have to get coach conveyance to Falmouth (plenty of coaches run along the Southern coast)[.] You will get every information at Radmore's Globe Hotel, Plymouth, where we have left our heavy coats till our return. I have just this moment heard, here, that the mail runs from Plymouth to Truro direct – and then from Truro to Penzance, so you can travel thus, easily and expeditiously enough. To go straight /by sea/ to Falmouth and then /by coach/ from Falmouth to Penzance would be the cheapest plan – but the shorter the voyage, in your case the better, I suppose.

By this plan you would see all the best part of Cornwall with us. Meeting at Penzance, we should visit all the wonders of the Land's End, and return by the northern coast and the mining districts to Plymouth in time for you to give Jane a week at the end of your holy days. As for luggage, you can buy a mackintosh knapsack for £1,,,- or a leather one for £1,,5,- – or if you don't like this expense, a small carpet-bag strapped on to your back, will do as well as any knapsack.

Write /as soon as possible/ and let me know whether you will come or not, (directing your letter to “Post Office, Falmouth, Cornwall”)[.] If you will come, set off if possible, the very first day of your holy days (the Steamers go Monday – one company; and Thursday – another[]). Tell me the day when you set off, and then write again from Plymouth to Post Office, Penzance; and there will be no fear of our not meeting. I will send you any fresh directions you may want.<sup>4</sup>

How is Jane? and How are the children? I heard they had the measles – but as this is generally ~~supposed~~ /considered/ to be an[~~del~~] excellent thing in /young/ families, I suppose I ought rather to congratulate than to condole with you. I only hope Coosey & Compy are having the infantine epidemic favourably – at any rate, they couldn't have it at a better time.<sup>5</sup>

Is my second edition out yet, or not?<sup>6</sup> I wrote yesterday to Mrs Collins; but forgot to tell her to forward me any letters that come to my address. Perhaps you will be kind enough to give her a message to this effect, with my love.

If Charley comes back before you leave London, bring him to Cornwall with you.

Give my kindest remembrances to Jane – tell her to keep up her spirits about the children – think yourself how much good the measles will /have/ do/ne/ them, after the measles have gone, and believe me

ever truly yours | W. Wilkie Collins

-
1. Dating based on the postmark and reference to [0074 ] to HC of the previous day
  2. To 'Charles J. Ward Esqre | Messrs Coutts & Co | Strand | London', with 'W.W.C.' in the lower left corner and 'Paid' in the upper right. Postmarked clearly 'ST-AUSTLE | JY31 | 1850'.
  3. See A. L. Rowse, St. Austell: Church, Town and Parish (H.E. Warne, 1960).
  4. In the event, Ward did not join the ramblings of WC and Brandling in Cornwall.
  5. 'Coosey' is a term of endearment for CW's eldest child Margaret (b. 1 December 1845) – see [0773] to HC of 11 October 1867 – while 'Compy' perhaps refers to his second daughter, Emily Blanche Ward (b. 25 September 1848), to whose marriage with solicitor William Thomas Waller at the Savoy Chapel on 4 January 1882 WC was to be a witness.
  6. Referring to Antonina – [0078] to CW, 14–15 August, suggests that the answer was negative.

[0076] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 3 AUGUST 1850

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/26), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 68–69 (dated [3 August 1850]).
Summary: BGLL, I, p. 42.

Falmouth | Saturday

My dear Mother,

Although I have the greatest contempt for money, myself, I find that the people of Cornwall regard gold and silver in a very different light. It is actually a fact that we cannot get on here without money; and it is, as actually a fact too, that my money is slipping out of my purse in a most unaccountable manner – I have just 30 shillings left. Under these circumstances, I beg you will have the goodness to send me £10,,-,- forthwith – in two Post Office Orders for £5,,-,- each.<sup>2</sup> Have them made out in the name of “William Wilkie Collins” (the name in full) – and let them be made payable at the /Post/ Office, Helstone [sic], Cornwall. Pray send them immediately.

Brandling wants the same sum, sent in the same way, to the same place – Will you let Miss Emma Brandling know this at once, at Fitzroy Square. Brandling left the key of his desk with Miss K. Howard so Miss Howard will be perhaps the best person to apply to.

I don't know whether you think this extravagant, or not. It certainly is not. By the time the remittance reaches us – £10 – each, will have lasted us three weeks! £5 – you still owe me on our account – and £5 – I must borrow of you. Mind the name of the place (Helston) is spelt right.<sup>3</sup>

I resign myself to Hanover Terrace (and to the Queen's Bench afterwards)[.]<sup>4</sup> But I do not feel quite resigned to leaving you to “move” by yourself. If you want me back, write and tell me so, and I will come back at once. Write moreover to advise me of the departure of the P.O. order – in a separate letter – dated properly.

I wrote to Charles Ward, the day after I last wrote to you – But have received no answer yet. If he has not written in reply before you receive this, he had better direct his letter to Helst[on] instead of Falmouth (as I told him). I sent him full directions for joining us, which I hope he will do.

There is no more news to tell of our journey. We walked 14 miles from St Austell's to Truro – and took a boat down the river from Truro to Falmouth. Neither Truro, nor Falmouth are interesting places. The first is a large market town, exactly like all market towns – with the usual allowance of dull streets, dull shops, and dull people. And Falmouth is as dirty and struggling as most seaport towns are.

If I was dropped in it blindfold I could not tell it from Portsmouth – and on the same plan, I could not tell either from Plymouth. The weather goes on very fine and very hot – a moist debilitating heat – but with bathing in the sea and walking on the land, I continue to defy all atmospheric influences.

Helstone, to which we go tomorrow, is, the point where all the fine scenery of the Land's End begins – continuing from that place all up the Northern coast. We look to these parts as the material of the book. As for my letters, they are about as fit for print, as your washerwoman's bills, or as this present business-letter, which you will not find particularly interesting – and which I must abruptly conclude to save post.

ever affectionately yours W W Collins

Love to Charley – glad he knows a brace of Lords – hope they will do something for him.<sup>5</sup> I have no time before post to write direct to Miss Brandling – and Henry can't – for he /is/ suffering (unlucky wretch!) from a violent fit of toothache. Tell Miss Brandling also, that he received the two letters sent to Fowey

-
1. To: 'Mrs Collins | 38. Blandford Square | Regents Park | London', with the initials 'W.W.C.' in the lower left corner and 'Paid' in the upper right. Postmarked 'FALMOUTH | AU 3 | 1850 | B' and 'V[crown device]W | 5 AU 5 | 1850'.
  2. HC may have had the money to hand or drawn it out specially. She had in fact withdrawn £10 on 31 July and then on 9 August she made three separate withdrawals of £10 each (Coutts: Exors WmC).
  3. This latter is in fact the standard modern spelling.
  4. HC moved from Blandford Square to Hanover Terrace during August 1850. Here 'the Queen's Bench' must refer to WC's legal studies at Lincoln's Inn.
  5. The two aristocrats in question have not been identified.

[0077] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 14 AUGUST 1850

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/27), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 69–71. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 42.

Penzance | August 14th 1850

My dear Mother/

Seeing sights, noting down recollections of them in my Journal, walking, eating, drinking, and sleeping, leave me very few opportunities for writing letters with a degree of regularity. I can only find ~~time~~ /an opportunity/ to indite this present “missive”, by cribbing half an hour from my bed time.

We have seen the rocks and precipices of the “Lizard”, since I last wrote, and have stood on the Southernmost promontory of England and beheld the Atlantic itself foaming at our feet. [del] /The/ [del] cliffs that gird the land east and west of the Lizard are really sublime – they reach their climax at a place called Kynance Cove.<sup>2</sup> Fancy an amphitheatre of separate rocks two hundred feet high – some rising like pyramids and steeples – some stretched longitudinally on the sand and pierced with great black caverns – some crowned with wild asparagus at the top, and tunnelled with holes at the bottom, in which the sea roars and boils with the thunder of a whole park of artillery – fancy the first sight of these rocks, from a precipitous cliff 300 feet high, wrapped in a mist which exaggerated [sic] their size twofold, with thousands on thousands of sea gulls flying screaming round them, with the white foam of the sea leaping up their black sides, and flying over them in long clouds of spray – fancy, finally, these same rocks, when the weather cleared, and the sun shone out on them, sparkling with splendid colours – deep red and rich brown and green and yellow and silver grey – as bright as polished marble, with the sea suddenly changed to a Mediterranean blue and the sky covered with minute driving, fleecy clouds; and you will have as good an idea as I can give you of Kynance Cove. Most of the rocks I climbed with a guide, and looked down into hideous black tunnels, where the raging sea seemed to shake us on our pinnacles – where the water was spirted [sic] in our faces from fifty feet off, through hidden holes and slits, followed by a roaring blasts of wind, as loud as if the devil himself was blowing his bellows at the fires of Hell. Then the caves, – we wriggled ourselves into them on our bellies, like snakes, where they were blocked up by rocks – and groped our way along their sides in pitch darkness where they rose again to /their/ full height, the guide telling me stories of drownings and smugglings and shipwrecks which harmonized admirably with the wild features of the scene. The visit to Kynance Cove was of itself alone worth the journey from London.

We have had our comic adventures too. When we entered the kitchen of the Inn at Lizard Town, we found it literally crammed by 15 or 20 babies, and 15 or 20 Mamas. The local doctor had got a supply of “fine fresh matter from London” (as the landlady said) and was vaccinating all the babies by wholesale. Perhaps as a mother yourself, you can imagine the noise these babies made. I can’t describe it. There were two pigs a flock of geese, and an assembly of little boys – all looking into the kitchen at our heels; but the noise they made was of no consequence at all, compared to the noise of the 15 or 20 babies and the 15 or 20 Mamas.

At this place Brandling immortalized himself by making an omelette – six eggs, a teacupful of clotted cream, new milk, an onion, and chopped parsley, made the ingredients. We gave the fat landlady a bit. She was a hugely fat, goodnatured soul, who was obliged to prop herself up against a wall or a door, whenever she came into the parlour to speak to us. As for the omelette, she smacked her lips, declared it was the most delicious thing she had ever tasted – and vowed that she would make one herself “please God as soon as she got out of bed tomorrow morning”!

I hear from Charles Ward that you are going to Southsea – and am very glad to hear it.<sup>3</sup> But who is to forward my letters, if any come? And how is this letter to get to you, if you are gone before it arrives? I suppose Miss Elwin is to be “locum tenens”.<sup>4</sup>

If you answer this directly, address your letter to “Post Office, St Ive’s, Cornwall”. We go to the Land’s End tomorrow, or next day – then round to St Ives, then to Redruth – to which place the next letter must be directed. Thomas Price<sup>5</sup> has given us a letter of introduction to a gentleman here, who is the most goodnatured and hospitable of men. We almost live at his house – and have been driving about in his gig all day [del]

You may as well tell me in your next letter what is the number of the house in Hanover Terrace – or when I get home, I shall not be properly qualified to find out where my home is.<sup>6</sup> By the bye, don’t forget that there will be something considerable to pay annually for /keeping up/ the inclosure in the Park, and that this must be settled somehow with Mr Gibbons.<sup>7</sup>

Tell me any news of Charley. Ward says he is “busily engaged in painting a fly’s eye with lashes to match” – for Heaven’s sake take care of my unfortunate papers – and believe me ever yours affectionately | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. To: ‘Mrs Collins | 38. Blandford Square | Regents Park | London’, with the initials ‘W.W.C.’ in the lower left corner. Postmarked ‘PENZANCE | AU15 | 1850’ and ‘M [crown device] H | 17 AU 17 | 1850’.

2. Kynance Cove is on the western side of the Lizard Peninsula, a couple of miles north of Lizard Point.

3. Presumably again to stay with Miss Otter.

4. Miss Elwin was apparently the housekeeper at Blandford Square – see [0061] to HC, 8 September 1849.

5. Unidentified, though see the letters to HC of 7 July 1852 [0129] and 29 July 1853 [0149], as well as to Edward Pigott of 22 November 1851 [0095] and 21 January 1855 [0191].

6. HC’s new home was at 17 Hanover Terrace.

7. Mr Gibbons seems to have been the neighbour at 16 Hanover Terrace – see [0237] to HC, 5 April 1856.

[0078] TO CHARLES WARD, 14–15 AUGUST 1850

MS: Private, folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Peters, p. 88. Published: B&C, I, pp. 71–72 (dated 15 August 1850).

Summary: BGLL, I, p. 42 (dated 15 August 1850).

Penzance | August 1850

(I don't know what day of the month, or week)<sup>2</sup>

My dear Ward /

I have received and read your two letters, on my arrival at Penzance. I am inexpressively shocked by your sentiments in reference to your native country. It will be three weeks or a month before I am able to leave Cornwall – I have no money to spend at Paris, and I shall have a Cornish Tour to write (not a guide book or handbook) as soon as I get home. So, if you will go to France – and will not come here – you must e'en be left to your own evil ways. I know France from Boulogne to Marseilles – there is no scenery in the country worth a d—n, compared to Cornish scenery. And as for eating, “stap my vitals”, if I have eaten chop or steak more than once, since I have been here! Here, Sir, we live on Ducks, Geese, chickens, tongue, pickled pilchards, Curried Lobster – Clotted cream – jam tarts, fruit tarts – custards – cakes – red mullet, conger eels, – salmon trout – and fifty other succulent dishes. I have almost forgotten the taste of joints – we have nothing to do with them.

Oh Ward! Ward! I have seen such rocks! Rocks like pyramids – rocks like crouching lions – rocks toppling, as if they would fall on your head, (three hundred feet high) – rocks pierced with mighty and measureless caverns – rocks covered with the most exquisite natural mosaic-work in all colours – rocks crowned by mist at one hour, and brightened by sunshine at another – rocks whose indescribable grandeur I might go on attempting to describe for the next two pages, if I thought it was any use – but I am writing to a prejudiced Anglo-Misanthrope, and I may as well save my pains and my paper. No descriptions of the “Lizard” rocks and precipices will ever affect you. You won't come here and you will go to France, and you expect me to leave this wonderful new country and go to provincial France which I know by heart already. Oh Ward! Ward! This is bitter mockery to a man who admires Nature, and is bent on making a book of Cornish Nature – and has not yet seen the Land's End, and has the wonders of the North Coast still to explore.

I thank you heartily for your information about my second edition (Which God speed);<sup>3</sup> and I condole with you still more heartily on your family troubles – but remember your numerous compensations – you have a very excellent wife; (my love to Mrs C.J. Ward), you are a British Father!<sup>4</sup> (my respects to your Social Title); and you have begotten, and are begetting, and will beget many, British Babies (smack their bottoms in my name, and for my sake!). What are measles, and tumblings out of bed compared to such blessed privileges as these ? Ah! “Got-for-Dam”, I wish I was married, and had a family and a respectable pot-belly, and /a/ position in the country as a householder and ratepayer – but this is not to be. By all the napkins of all the Babies of England, I begin to fear that I am little better than a vagabond – only fit to wander about Cornwall, and be very sorry that I ca'nt divide myself in two and wander about France at the same time, with C.J. Ward, who deserts my banner but whose very affectionate friend

W. Wilkie Collins, I nevertheless remain.

Will you give my love to dear Mama, and say that I will write in a day or two. I have not had 5 minutes to myself for the last three days, or I would have written before. We start for the Land's End tomorrow or next day.

---

1. To 'C.J. Ward Esqre | 81 Hamilton Terrace | St John's Wood | London', with 'Paid' above and 'W.W.C.' below. Postmarked 'PENZANCE|AU 15|1850' and 'X[crown device]G | 16 AU16 | 1850'.

2. Apparently posted on the same day as the preceding item of correspondence ([0078] 14 August 1850). From both postmarks and content, it seems possible that this letter may have been written shortly before that to HC.

3. Referring to Antonina.

4. Charles Ward's fourth child, WC's godson Francis Collins Ward, was born on 2 April 1850.

[0079] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 21 SEPTEMBER–9 NOVEMBER 1850<sup>1</sup>

MS: Brigham Young (Vault Mss 355, folder 45). Published: BGLL, I, p. 43.

17. Hanover Terrace. | Regent's Park. | Saturday Morning.

My Dear Sir,

My friend, Mr Henry Brandling, sends you, with this letter, all the drawings that he has completed of Cornish Scenery.<sup>2</sup> I can vouch for their fidelity to Nature, from my own experience; and I think, on looking them over that you will agree with me, that they are productions of no ordinary merit, as works of Art.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To / Richard Bentley Esqre

P.S. As there are drawings in the book sent, which are not connected with the Cornish scenes, the leaves containing these drawings have been sewn together to prevent the possibility of a mistake.

---

1. The letter predates [0080] of 14 November to Bentley, while WC did not return from Cornwall until mid September at the earliest.

2. Henry C. Brandling, the young artist who provided the twelve lithographed drawings for WC's Rambles Beyond Railways: Or, Notes in Cornwall Taken a-foot (1851). The half-profits agreement concerning publication was signed by WC and Bentley on 18 November 1850, with a fixed payment assigned to Brandling (BL, Add. 46615, ff. 276–7).

[0080] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 14 NOVEMBER 1850

MS: Private, folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 43.

17. Hanover Terrace | November 14th 1850

My dear Sir,

Will you be so kind as to have delivered to the Bearer, Mr Brandling's illustrations of Cornish Scenery?

Mr Brandling wishes to consult a friend on the subject of lithographing them.<sup>2</sup> I hope to call in New Burlington Street (with Mr Brandling) between eleven and twelve tomorrow morning

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. To: 'Richard Bentley Esqre | 8. New Burlington Street'.

2. The artist and engraver John Linnell – see [0081] to him of 19 December 1850.

[0081] TO JOHN LINNELL, 19 DECEMBER 1850

MS: Fitzwilliam (MS 3413–2000). Published: BGLL, I, p. 44.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regent's Park | December 19th 18.50 [sic]

Dear Mr Linnell,

I hope to have the pleasure of calling on you (with my friend, Mr Brandling) on Wednesday evening next at 7 o'Clock.<sup>1</sup>

If I do not hear from you to the contrary, I shall conclude that this arrangement will suit you.

With many apologies for not having written sooner to mention the evening of our visit to Porchester Terrace,

Believe me | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | John Linnell Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. WC writes on the previous Thursday concerning the illustrations for Rambles.

[0082] TO JOHN LINNELL, 23 DECEMBER 1850<sup>1</sup>

MS: Fitzwilliam (MS 3414–2000). Published: BGLL, I, p. 44.

17. Hanover Terrace | Monday morning

Dear Mr Linnell,

There seems to be some fatality connected with my proposed visit. It has only just this moment occurred to me, that in mentioning Wednesday evening next, in my last letter, as the evening on which I hoped to call on you, I was (quite unconsciously) mentioning Christmas Day! – the one particular day in the year on which I am always engaged to dine out, with some old friends.

I am afraid you will begin to doubt very justly, after all my delayings and deferrings – whether I am coming to Porchester Terrace at all. But if you will let me say Thursday next at 7, instead of Wednesday at 7 – I shall be sure to keep my engagement and to bring my friend, and his drawings, with me.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

If this new arrangement should be quite convenient to you, pray do not trouble yourself to write me any answer; and I shall then conclude that Thursday will suit you.

To | John Linnell Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. Dating from the previous letter.

[0083] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 28 DECEMBER 1850

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, pp. 87–88; BGLL, I, p. 45.

17, Hanover Terrace | Saturday, December 28/50

My dear Sir,

The Rambles beyond Railways, do not appear to have rambled into print, even yet. I have seen nothing, up to this moment, of proofs or pages; and it is now nearly the end of the month. Is there some fresh “hitch”? – and is it anything that I can remove?<sup>1</sup>

They have taken off “proofs” of four of the Illustrations; which Mr Brandling and I have shown, with the drawings, to Mr Linnell. I am happy to say that his opinion was very favourable. He especially liked the appearance of truth in the Illustrations.

One, or two “technical” alterations only are wanted in the proofs, which Mr Brandling will send to you, when they are printed to his entire satisfaction. He is beginning his sixth lithograph<sup>2</sup>

I remain, My dear Sir, | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. WC received proofs in the New Year (see [0084] to Bentley of 4 January 1851), and the book eventually appeared in mid-January 1851 in a single royal crown octavo volume at 15s from Bentley.

2. Out of a total of twelve, this one perhaps of Kynance Cove, Rambles, facing p. 135.

[0084] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 4 JANUARY 1851

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Extract: Davis, p. 88. Published: BGLL, I, p. 45.

17 Hanover Terrace | January 4th 1851

My dear Sir,

I accept with much pleasure your kind invitation for Thursday the 9th, at 6 o'clock for ½ past 6.

The proofs of the Rambles arrived to-day. They came “not single files, but in battalions”<sup>1</sup> – five at once! The page looks very well – the type clear and sharp. We shall certainly offer a handsome book to the public, and I hope they will “behave handsomely” in return.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
P.S. | I will deliver the one page you are kind enough to send to Mr Brandling tomorrow – so that his answer will reach you without delay. I am sure he will be happy to accompany me.
To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. WC misquotes Claudius in Hamlet, IV.v.78–9: ‘When sorrows come, they come not single spies, | But in battalions’.

[0085] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 25 FEBRUARY 1851<sup>1</sup>

MS: Berg. Extract: Sadleir 1948, p. 132; Robinson 1951, p. 58. Published: BGLL, I, p. 46.

17. Hanover Terrace | Tuesday morning

My dear Sir,

I have just received the enclosed letter from the Venerable Britton.<sup>2</sup> What ought I to do about it?

This is the third occasion in which the Venerable B. has laid in ambush for my books, and bounced out upon me with a letter of broad hints. On the first occasion, I gave him a copy of the “Life of Collins”, and received in return a treatise on Junius.<sup>3</sup> I could’nt read it; but I suppose I ought to consider myself a gainer by my literary “swop” – so I don’t complain. On the second occasion, determined to respect my rights of property and evade “paying tribute” with “Antonina”, by writing a polite, grateful, and complimentary letter to the Venerable B. This answered my purpose for “Antonina”; but, as you will see by the enclosed letter, it has not protected the “Rambles”. Again, and emphatically, I say it: – What am I to do? Am I to return a gift of Illustrations by a loan of “Rambles”?<sup>4</sup> Or am I now, and henceforth to consider the Venerable B. as a sort of second British Museum, legally entitled to a copy of every book I write?

I leave you to decide the point, and will abide implicitly by your judgment. If you send the book, I think it only fair to state, that I shall be quite ready to toss up with you for the proprietorship of the promised Illustrations.

I hope our book is selling pretty well. The Review in last Sunday’s Observer ought to do something for it.<sup>5</sup>

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating is from the reference to the Observer review of Rambles. Davis (p. 314 n. 12) tentatively dated the letter 18 February 1851.

2. John Britton (1771–1857: ODNB), aged Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries.

3. John Britton, The Authorship of the Letters of Junius Elucidated (printed for the author, 1848) (BL Catalogue).

4. Probably the illustrations from the Autobiography of John Britton (3 vols, printed for the author, 1850), which included plates and a portrait.

5. An enthusiastic review of Rambles appeared in the Observer on Sunday 23 February 1851, p. 3e. The book sold well enough to go into a second edition, published in December 1851.

[0086] TO CHARLES WARD, 28 FEBRUARY 1851<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/2). Published: BGLL, I, p. 47.

Friday

My dear Ward,

Will you kindly write me word (to Albury)<sup>2</sup> what reviews of the Rambles appear tomorrow. The Literary Gazette is I believe certain.<sup>3</sup> Will you buy it, and take it to Hanover Terrace? I won nearly 6/- last night – excellent people – excellent dinner – excellent game “Vingt et Un”

Comment se porte ce cher petit ange Toby?<sup>4</sup>

ever yours | WW Collins

-
1. Dating from the Gazette review.
  2. The village near Guildford, home to the Thompsons, where WC had stayed the previous spring – see [0070] to Ward, 19 March 1850.
  3. An unsigned highly favourable review appeared in the Literary Gazette and Journal of Belles Lettres (Saturday 1 March 1851), pp. 159–161. The review concludes: ‘Mr. Collins is the “Eothen” of Cornwall; and we hope that, like that eastern hero, he may beget a whole generation of home tourists’ (p. 161).
  4. ‘How is that dear little cherub Toby?’ (French) – referring to Charles and Jane Ward’s eldest son, born in 1847.

[0087] TO F. W. TOPHAM,<sup>1</sup> [MID APRIL 1851]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Ross. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 47–48.

17. Hanover Terrace | Saturday

My dear Topham

I am very sorry to hear you ca’nt come on Tuesday. As for the troubles of “hanging”,<sup>3</sup> I can only give you one consolation – they are mortal troubles, and must therefore come to an end. Mind you hang yourself well!<sup>4</sup>

I don’t know Dudley Costello’s private address, but a letter addressed to him at the “Examiner Office, Wellington Street, Strand”, would be sure to reach him.<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours | W. Wilkie Collins

-
1. Francis William Topham (1808–77: ODNB), watercolourist, occasional exhibitor at the Royal Academy and member of the Society of Painters in Water Colours from 1848. Topham acted with WC in Lytton’s Not So Bad As We Seem in 1851–2 – see [0089] to Cridland of [19 June/3 July] 1851 and [0111] to Topham of 2 February 1852. CD wrote: ‘Topham has suddenly come out as a Juggler, and swallows candles, and does wonderful things with the Poker – very well indeed, but with a bashfulness and embarrassment extraordinarily ludicrous’ (Pilgrim, VI, p. 539).
  2. Conjectural dating based on the reference to ‘hanging’. Topham was on the committee of the Society of Painters in Water Colours only in 1851 and 1852. It met in the third week in March prior to the annual exhibition which ran from the end of April to the end of July. The paintings arrived to be hung in mid April and this letter presumably dates from around this time in his first year responsible for arranging the exhibition. The address and signature fit this dating.
  3. WC knew the pains of ‘hanging’ from WmC who was on the Royal Academy hanging committee in 1821 – see Memoirs, I, pp. 171–181.
  4. At the 1851 Exhibition of the Society of Painters in Water Colours Topham displayed three pictures, including Barnaby Rudge and his Mother.
  5. Dudley Costello (1803–65: ODNB), Irish-born journalist, friend of CD, sub-editor of the Examiner from around 1845, who played the part of the Earl of Loftus in Not So Bad As We Seem.

[0088] TO OCTAVIAN BLEWITT, 29 APRIL 1851

MS: RLF. Published: BGLL, I, p. 48.

17. Hanover Terrace | April 29th 1851

My dear Sir,

I regret that an engagement on the evening of the 14th of May will prevent me from attending the annual dinner of the Literary Fund,<sup>1</sup>

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Octavian Blewitt Esq

-
1. The Chairman at the Anniversary dinner of 1851 was M. Van de Weyer, the Belgian Ambassador. See [0071] to Blewitt of 25 March 1850 concerning the previous year’s dinner.

[0089] TO CRIDLAND,<sup>1</sup> [19 JUNE/3 JULY] 1851<sup>2</sup>

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 48–49.

17, Hanover Terrace | Thursday Evening

My dear Cridland,

I am only sorry you should have had so much trouble about the order. I will forewarn my friend that there is a chance for him on Saturday – though I feel a little uncomfortable, at the same time, at the idea of your being “bored” so much about the business.

I am afraid the Play is still too long, although we have cut it down three quarters of an hour since we first had it.<sup>3</sup> However, it is pleasant to hear that the acting struck you so favourably – I wish you had seen the Farce, Dickens played superbly last night<sup>4</sup> – the applause was tremendous. In fact it was, all through, the best audience, as far as good appreciation goes that we have played to yet.

Addio! | Salvete, Cridlande, ora pro nobis<sup>5</sup>

W. Wilkie Collins

Will you send the order on to Mr Pigott if you get it?<sup>6</sup> – it seems a d—d shame I have to bother you to do this; but I go out of town on Saturday afternoon and this order might be lost if it came to me.

Another mess! You say you have just written for Saturday evening – Saturday evenings are not the evenings of the French Plays, Monday – Wednesday – Friday? D—n the French Plays! – they will be the death of both of us! Perhaps the thing had better stand over till I see you.<sup>7</sup>

---

1. Not securely identified, though Lycett refers to a friend of Edward Pigott’s named ‘Joseph Cridland, a Lincoln’s Inn solicitor’ who attended ‘risqué French plays’ with WC (p. 92). The reference is likely to be to Joseph John Cridland (1816–1901), born at Milverton in Somerset, and at this time an articled clerk resident at 22, James Street, Buckingham Gate (Legal Observer, Digest, and Journal of Jurisprudence, 42 (11 October 1851), p. 460). He soon qualified as a solicitor, married Sarah Elizabeth Stone Glover in August 1853, and later had chambers at 7, Lincoln’s Inn Fields.

2. Dating from the reference to Not So Bad As We Seem.

3. Referring to Not So Bad As We Seem, the comedy written in aid of the Guild of Art and Literature by Bulwer-Lytton for CD’s amateur company. There were four performances in London, all in 1851: 16 May, 27 May, 18 June and 2 July. The last two were Wednesdays so this letter was probably written on the day following one of them. (Generally on the amateur performances in aid of the Guild of Literature and Art, see Peters, pp. 96–97, Pilgrim, VI, pp. 856–857, and Gasson, pp. 5–6.)

4. Mr Nightingale’s Diary, written by CD and Mark Lemon. CD acted the various parts of Gabblewig the barrister, Charley Bit the boots, Poulter the pedestrian, Captain Blower the invalid, a deaf nonagenarian sexton, plus ‘A Respectable Female’, while WC was Lithers the landlord.

5. A mixture of Italian and Church Latin. ‘Farewell! Greetings, Cridland, pray for us’, though ‘Salvete’ (plural) should read ‘Salve’ (singular).

6. Edward Pigott of the Leader – see [0092] to him of 11 November 1851.

7. Referring to the regular seasons of original French drama performed by visiting Parisian companies at the St James’s Theatre. The French plays were ‘performed three nights a week with diverse attractions on the other evenings’ (‘St James’s Theatre’ in Ralph Mander and Joe Mitchenson, Lost Theatres of London, 2nd edn (London: New English Library, 1976)).

[0090] TO J. T. MARSH,<sup>1</sup> JULY 1851

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 49–50.

Hanover Terrace | Wednesday evening

My dear Sir,

I will send you the “Note” in a day or two.<sup>2</sup> I want to write, first, to “a good authority” to test the correctness of Mr Mathews’s statement.<sup>3</sup> My impression is, that he is altogether wrong. I have always understood that Lord Ellesmere’s Gallery was built originally with a view to public accommodation.<sup>4</sup> – If this is not starting the principle of opening galleries to the public, I should like (if I may be allowed to use a coarse expression) to know what the d---l is?

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | J T Marsh Esqre<sup>5</sup>

---

1. John Thomas Marsh, then Bentley’s office manager in New Burlington Street. According to the Bentley Archives (Employee papers, Illinois), he seems to have filled this role from the mid-1840s to the later 1860s, when he must have lost his position. In a letter to Richard Bentley of 19 July 1869, he thanks him for a contribution of a guinea towards the expenses of his emigration to America, and says he is ‘determined to spare no pains of body or mind to reinstate’ himself.

2. ‘The Earl of Ellesmere’s Collection’, the first of three articles by WC on the ‘Picture Galleries of England’, appeared in Bentley’s Miscellany, 30 (July 1851), pp. 78–87; there WC claimed that Lord Ellesmere was ‘the first to set ... [the] admirable example’ of opening his picture gallery to the public. Regarding this, WC was challenged by the Keeper of the gallery at Witley Court, Worcestershire, created by William, then the eleventh Baron Ward and from 1860 the first Earl of Dudley (1817–85). The Keeper’s claim and WC’s resolute defence were summarized in a paragraph entitled ‘Note on the Picture Galleries of England’ inserted at the end of the August number, on p. 224.

3. ‘Mr. Mathews, Keeper of Lord Ward’s Picture Gallery’, according to the note in Bentley’s Miscellany.

4. Francis Egerton, first Earl of Ellesmere (1800–57: ODNB), whose new gallery at Bridgewater House, by Green Park, was completed in 1850.

5. In this and other letters to Marsh there is some doubt whether WC writes the name as ‘J T Marsh’ or ‘J S Marsh’ (indeed, on several occasions he simply writes ‘J Marsh’). As found in his letters held in the Bentley archives at Illinois, Marsh’s signature is itself sometimes difficult to decipher, but there is no doubt of the full name, ‘John Thomas Marsh’.

[0091] TO CHARLES DICKENS,<sup>1</sup> 2 NOVEMBER 1851

MS: Morgan, in purple ink. Summary: B&C, I, p. 75. Published: BGLL, I, p. 50.

The Grove | Weston-super-Mare<sup>2</sup> | Nov<sup>r</sup> 2 | 51

My dear Dickens,

The report of the great sale of tickets at Bristol had reached me here, before I received your letter. I am delighted – for the sake of the Guild to hear that a second performance at Bristol is to take place.<sup>3</sup> A day more or a day less in the country, in the middle of November, is of no consequence to me. I am always ready to support the whole weight of the fourth-Act on my own shoulders, as usual and always my excellent manager’s attached and obedient servant,

W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. The earliest surviving letter to Charles Dickens (1812–70: ODNB), who WC had first met in March 1851, when Augustus Egg recruited the young author to CD’s amateur theatrical company (see Peters, pp. 95–101)

2. WC must have been staying with Edward Pigott at his family home, The Grove, Weston-super-Mare – see [0092] to Pigott of 11 November 1851.

3. Of Not So Bad As We Seem. On the subsequent performance at the Assembly Rooms, Bath, on Monday 10 November, again see [0092] to Edward Pigott, 11 November 1851.

[0092] TO EDWARD PIGOTT,<sup>1</sup> 11 NOVEMBER 1851

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, I, p. 75. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 51.

YORK HOUSE BATH | SG<sup>2</sup> | Tuesday morning<sup>3</sup>

My dear Edward,

The performance last night “drew” magnificently. Every place was filled, in a much larger room than the Hanover Square Room. I can’t say as much for the quality of the audience, as the quantity. There was immense attention to the Comedy; but the applause was scanty. The Bath people were evidently determined to understand Bulwer’s story;<sup>4</sup> and, what is still more extraordinary, they did understand it! – and applauded the dénouement vehemently after having missed almost every point in the first three acts. We had to speak so distinctly from the great size of the room, and its bad capabilities for conveying spoken sounds, that the performance took longer than usual. It began at ½ past seven, and was not over much before ½ past 12! The farce went well as a matter of course.<sup>5</sup>

I have no time to write more. We start for the Bath Hotel Clifton,<sup>6</sup> immediately –

Always truly yours | W.W.C.

---

1. The first known letter to Edward Frederick Smyth Pigott (1824–95), MA (Balliol College, Oxford), at this time WC’s fellow student at Lincoln’s Inn and afterwards a lifelong friend. Pigott had recently purchased a controlling interest in the radical paper, the Leader, founded in 1850 by Thornton Hunt and G. H. Lewes (see [0123] to Lewes of 29 March 1852). The ‘double-barelled’ family name Smyth Pigott (sometimes written Smyth-Pigott) had been adopted following the marriage in 1815 of Edward Pigott's parents, John Hugh Smyth of Ashton Court and Ann Provis (niece and heiress of the Rev. Wadham Piggott). The family's property in north Somerset at this time included The Grove, Weston-super-Mare and Brockley Hall, Yatton. Unusually, in [0112] of [6] February 1852, WC directs his letter to 'E. F. Smyth Pigott Esqre', but we have opted throughout to refer to the recipient as 'Edward Pigott', as WC himself more generally does – see, for example, [0160] to HC, 25 November 1853, or [0489] to Charles Lever, 12 September 1862.

2. WC uses notepaper from the York House Hotel, George Street, Bath, with an embossed heading in a oval belt device.

3. Dating from the performance of the Guild play in Bath.

4. At the Assembly Rooms, Bath, on Monday, 10 November 1851, WC played the part of Smart the Butler in Not So Bad as We Seem, a comedy written by Bulwer Lytton for CD's company. CD agreed with WC: 'We had a great room at Bath but they are a horribly dull audience' (to Henry Austin, 13 November 1851, Pilgrim, VI, p. 536).

5. Mr Nightingale's Diary by Mark Lemon, in which WC played Lithers, the landlord.

6. In the letter to Austin, CD notes that the hotel was 'close to Brunel's unfinished Suspension Bridge' (Pilgrim, VI, p. 537).

[0093] TO THOMAS JOSEPH HERCY,<sup>1</sup> 17 NOVEMBER 1851

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Extract: Davis, p. 106. Published: Sayers, p. 78 (as to Thomas Joseph Henry); B&C, I, p. 76 (with recipient misidentified as Sir Thomas Henry (1807–1876), barrister and magistrate). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 51 (with recipient again misidentified).

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | Monday Evening

Dear Hercy,

The affecting national ceremony of calling me to the Bar, will take place on Friday next (the 21st).<sup>2</sup> If you don't mind Lincolns [sic] Inn wine, and have no better engagement, it will give me great pleasure to see you at the Call Party.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Thomas Joseph Hercy Esqre

---

1. This must be Thomas Joseph Hercy (1825–1914), BA (London), of Cruchfield House, Maidenhead, who was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn in November 1848. In the 1851 Census he was recorded as a barrister in practice, resident at 229 Lincoln's Inn Fields.

2. The petition of Call was made at the Special Council of Lincoln's Inn on 17 November and was confirmed by the Order for Call at a Special Council on 20 November. WC had entered Lincoln's Inn on 18 May 1846, and the call ceremony took place on Friday, 21 November 1851 (Records of the Honorable Society of Lincoln's Inn: The Black Books, V, p. 399). This was the second call of Michaelmas Term 1851, the first taking place a week earlier on November 14.

[0094] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 20 NOVEMBER 1851<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 51.

Hanover Terrace | Thursday evening

My dear Edward,

I shall not be able to call at Southampton Row at 12 tomorrow,<sup>2</sup> because I go down at that hour to pick up my surety at the Temple<sup>3</sup> – Perhaps we may meet at the Steward's Office,<sup>4</sup> or perhaps I may find you at home afterwards. At any rate depend on me for being at your lodgings at a quarter to 5, to go to dinner<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours WWC

I have just received and read the proof of my article.<sup>6</sup> It strikes me that where the writing flags is near the end – I'll put "spunk" into it there; and we'll test the quality of it together, before going to Press

Jusque à demain<sup>7</sup> | W.W.C.

---

1. Dating from the preparations for the Call to the Bar of Pigott and WC on 21 November 1851.

2. Pigott's lodgings – the Leader office was at 10 Wellington Street.

3. The Call to the Bar depended on no debts being outstanding, and on the presentation of a bond or surety immediately before the Call, against the payment of future dues.

4. The main administrative office of Lincoln's Inn, now called the Treasury Office.
5. The dinner at Lincoln's Inn, a few minutes' walk from Southampton Row, was held at 5 o'clock.
6. Probably 'The New Dragon of Wantley: A Social Revelation', unsigned comic tale published in the Leader, 20 December 1851, pp. 1213–1214 – see the edition by Graham Law, Wilkie Collins Society, 2007.
7. French, 'until tomorrow'.

[0095] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 22 NOVEMBER 1851<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, I, p. 76. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 52.

Saturday morning | 17. Hanover Terrace

My dear Edward,

Look over the proof and see whether it will do for Press now.<sup>2</sup>

What a night! What speeches!<sup>3</sup> What songs! I carried away much clarets [sic] and am rather a seedy barrister this morning. I think it must have been the oaths that disagreed with me!

We'll talk it over next week. Today I go to Price's,<sup>4</sup> and return on Monday morning.

Always yours | W. Wilkie Collins

Will you dine with us on Tuesday next at 6, punctually?<sup>5</sup> You will meet a Lincoln's Inn man – Charles Otter<sup>6</sup> – just one old friend; and no one else.

-
1. Dating from the celebration of the call to the bar of both Pigott and WC at Lincoln's Inn on Friday, 21 November.
  2. Again probably 'The New Dragon of Wantley'.
  3. Peters mistakenly has 'What chicken!' (p. 110).
  4. Probably Thomas Price, whose mother lived at St Leonards-on-Sea – see [0149] to HC, 28 July 1853.
  5. Underlined three times.
  6. One of the Otters of Southsea, Charles was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn in Hilary Term, 1835.

[0096] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, [28 NOVEMBER] 1851<sup>1</sup>

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, pp. 105–106 (dated '[t]owards the end of October'); B&C, I, pp. 72–73 (dated [23 October 1851]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 52.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | Friday evening

My dear Sir,

Mr Marsh has, I dare say, told you that an idea for a Christmas Story made a morning call in my brains the other day.<sup>2</sup> The sort of book I propose would be a 5/- affair, running to about 130 pages – a sort of tragi-comedy in the form of a story – and the title (of course we keep this strictly entre nous)

The Mask of Shakespeare.

The story would be of Modern date, ~~for~~ starting from a curious fact, which I should mention in the Preface.<sup>3</sup>

Now I feel pretty certain of getting this book done by ~~the~~ or before the 15th of December – so that it could be published by the 20th. If you like the notion of a Christmas Story by me – and like the M.S. – I have no doubt we can easily arrange about terms. The pressing part of the business is the Illustration part – that ought to be settled at once if we are to have Illustrations – and I think we ought.

My idea is that a Frontispiece Vignette and Tail Piece would be quite enough – well done – ordinary mediocre /work/ wo'nt do – work by the famous men is only to be had at a high price; and, as far as my knowledge of the great names goes, not even then to be had in time. I should propose that the three illustrations should be done by three young gentlemen who have lately been making an immense stir in the world of Art, and earned the distinction of being attacked by the Times (any notice there is a distinction) – and defended in a special pamphlet by Ruskin – the redoubtable Pre-Raphael-Brotherhood!!<sup>4</sup> One of these "Brothers" happens to be my brother as well – the other two Millais and Hunt are intimate friends.<sup>5</sup> For my sake as well as their own they would work their best – and do something striking, no matter on how small a scale – I could be constantly at their elbows, and get them to be ~~done~~ /ready/ as soon as I should. Should you be willing to try them? – and give them some remuneration? – the amt of which I could easily settle between you and them.

Will you let me know what you think of the scheme – and whether you care to engage in it?<sup>6</sup> I will come to New Burlington Street and speak to you on the subject, at any time you may appoint. If I ask for an early time, it is only because I must know at once what my position is with respect to you and the book.

In great haste | very truly yours | W Wilkie Collins

-
1. As the following letter [0097] to Edward Pigott of 30 November suggests, the idea for the Christmas book seems only to have struck Collins after the Lincoln's Inn call party on Friday, 21 November, and the work was thus composed and published in great haste. This letter is therefore most likely to date from the Friday following the call party.
  2. Presumably WC called round at New Burlington Street earlier in the week, when Bentley was not in the office, and talked instead to Marsh, his office manager.
  3. The initial preface (dated December 1851) was later to cause a problem, as it divulged the central mystery of the story – see [0104] to J.T. Marsh, 24 December 1851.
  4. On 3 May 1851, p. 8a-c, under the heading 'Exhibition of the Royal Academy: First Notice', the Times had launched a virulent attack on the work of the Pre-Raphaelites, singling out Millais, Hunt and CAC, in particular, for 'wasting their talents on ugliness and conceit'; a later notice repeated the insult, accusing the young artists of 'morbid infatuation' ('Exhibition of the Royal Academy: Second Notice', 7 May 1851, p. 8a-b). Ruskin offered a spirited and detailed defense in two letters to the Times of 13 May (pp. 8f-9a) and 30 May 1851 (p. 8f), expanding his argument in the pamphlet Pre-Raphaelitism (London: Smith, Elder, 1851), with its Preface dated August 1851.
  5. The painters John Everett Millais (1829–1896: ODNB) and William Holman Hunt (1827–1910: ODNB), members of the Royal Academy, founders of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, and close friends of WC and CAC.
  6. In the event, the Christmas story appeared from Bentley around 23 December 1851 (though dated 1852) under the title, Mr Wray's Cash-Box; or The Mask and the Mystery: A Christmas Sketch, with only a single illustration, by Millais.

[0097] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, [30 NOVEMBER] 1851<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, I, p. 74 (dated [Autumn 1851]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 52.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | Sunday evening

My dear Edward/

On Friday morning last, an idea came into my head for a Christmas Book.<sup>2</sup> I tell it you, mind, as a profound secret – don't say a word about it to anybody. If I am to put this new notion into shape and form this year, I must work night and day; and I mean to do so.

I want you, if you will, to give me a helping hand in this way: –

The pivot ~~of~~ /on which/ my projected story turns ~~about~~ /is the/ taking a plaster cast from a Bust. I am nothing like so well acquainted with the process of doing this, as I ought to be. I want to know all about moulds, plaster of Paris, and so forth – and I must apply to some sculptor. Gibson is the only sculptor I know at all intimately – and I have not the slightest idea where he is.<sup>3</sup> Can you manage a meeting at your rooms between our friend of the call-party, Mr Durham, and me?<sup>4</sup> I would come in the evening – any evening you appoint. Information I must have from somebody – and that at the very earliest opportunity possible.

It would be enough to tell Mr Durham that I am writing something with which moulds for plaster casts have to do

Can you manage what I want, without inconvenience? Pray let me know immediately

Ever yours | W.W.C.

Don't fear my being engaged – I have cut every evening engagement for the present. Could you make it Tuesday evening?

Where does Mr Durham live?<sup>5</sup> The shortest way would be to go to his Studio if you could spare the time. Could you manage a morning visit to him on Tuesday? A quarter of an hours [sic] talk would set me all right, and leave me more leisure for writing than an evening interview would. Can we make an appointment for Tuesday morning? or afternoon?<sup>6</sup>

-
1. The letter can only date from the Sunday following [0096] to Marsh.
  2. Again referring to what would become Mr Wray's Cash Box, though [0096] to Marsh WC suggests that the idea for the story had struck him a day or two earlier.
  3. John Gibson (1790–1866: ODNB), sculptor, whom the Collins family who met in Rome in 1837.
  4. Joseph Durham (1814–1877: ODNB), sculptor, who had achieved popularity in 1848 with his marble bust of Jenny Lind, the Swedish opera singer.
  5. According to the London Post Office Directory (1851), Durham then held residences at both 26 Alfred Place, Bedford Square, and 50 Cambridge Street, Hyde Park, with the latter perhaps serving as his studio.
  6. This second postscript is squeezed into the space to the right of the signature and first postscript.

[0098] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, [6 DECEMBER] 1851<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/16). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 52–53.

17, Hanover Terrace | Saturday evening

My dear Sir,

I send you the corrected copy of the “Rambles”. Beyond prefatory advertisement about the Title and the new Cornish Railway; and a note or two, my corrections are merely verbal.<sup>2</sup> My friend’s, I regret to say, have not arrived.<sup>3</sup> I have again written to him about them by today’s post.

If they should arrive by the beginning of next week, they will be in time for me to work in, in the proofs for the 2nd Edition, which I have asked to have, principally with that view.

I will not delay the book from the Press, even one day, on account of these corrections, if I should hear from you that it is necessary to publish without losing the smallest time.

In great haste | Very faithfully yours | W Wilkie Collins

To Richard Bentley Esqre
The Christmas book gets on

-
1. Dating from the publication of Rambles and the progress on the Christmas story, Mr Wray's Cash-Box.
  2. The second edition of Rambles Beyond Railways, WC’s Cornish travel book, appeared in early January 1852 – though it was advertised in the Times, 6 December 1851, Supplement, p. 11, as ‘Elegant PRESENT BOOK – Just Published’. WC added an ‘Advertisement’ at the start explaining that during the year since the book was first published, the railway had indeed penetrated to Cornwall but he would not change the title. He added a couple of footnotes in the text.
  3. Rather than Henry Brandling, who prepared the lithographs for the book, this probably refers to the Cornish friend mentioned in [0099] to Marsh, [13 December] 1851.

[0099] TO [J. T. MARSH], [13 DECEMBER] 1851

MS: Berg and Illinois (Bentley Archives).<sup>1</sup> Extracts: Davis, pp. 108–109 (from body of letter, as to Richard Bentley, dated 6 December 1851) and p. 109 (from second postscript, as to Richard Bentley, dated Monday 8 December). Published: B&C, I, p. 77 (body of letter and first postscript only, as to Richard Bentley, dated [6 December 1851]); BGLL, I, pp. 53–54 (second postscript only, as to J.T. Marsh, dated [14 December] 1851). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 53 (body of letter).

17, Hanover Terrace | Saturday morning

My dear Sir,

There are three damnable mistakes in the one advertisement of my Xmas Book, in this morning’s Times!<sup>2</sup>

First, the artist’s name is spelt Willais – It ought to be Millais.<sup>3</sup>

Secondly, the work is advertised as Mr Wray’s Cash-Book. It ought to be Cash-Box<sup>4</sup>

Thirdly, after my names comes “Author of Antonin”

I once wrote a book called Antonina. If it means that it’s a very bad imitation of the meaning.

I have never yet had a book advertised right for the first time; but this tops everything! Pray get it /immediately/ set right; and give the printer over (in my name) to “the devil and all his angels” at the same time. If we put the public, at the outset in the way of making mistakes about our title, they will never know it afterwards. Make it a Cash Box (on the ear) to the miserable printer,

and believe me | yours faithfully | W. Wilkie Collins

I have had no proofs yet from Bradbury & Evans.<sup>5</sup> Mr S. Bentley sends me proofs of the 2nd ed: of Rambles,<sup>6</sup> which I send back to Bearer for press, so no time is lost.<sup>7</sup>

P.S. | Will /you/ tell Mr George Bentley, that I will not give him the trouble of sending me any proofs of the 2nd Edition of Rambles, that pass through his hands, now I find that duplicates are sent to me. If he will be kind enough to let me have the note of corrections by my Cornish friend, which I left with him, it will be quite enough.<sup>8</sup>

I have arrived at the /last/ chapter of Mr Wray's Cash-Box | illustrated by Millais | and written by the | author of AntoninA – A.A.<sup>9</sup>

1. Body of letter and first postscript on single leaf torn from a sheet of folding notepaper at Berg; second postscript on corresponding torn leaf in the Bentley Archives at Illinois.
2. The mistake-ridden advert appeared in the Times on Saturday, 13 December 1851, Supplement, p. 11a. It was reprinted correctly on the Monday following, 15 December, Supplement, p. 11c.
3. WC in fact underlines 'Millais' three times. This frontispiece was the artist's first book illustration.
4. WC in fact underlines 'Box' three times.
5. Printers of Mr Wray's Cash-Box.
6. Presumably Richard Bentley's older brother Samuel (1785–1868), who often acted as his printer. He retired in 1853 due to failing eyesight.
7. The first postscript from 'proofs' on is squeezed up the right-hand side of the verso of the leaf at Berg; the following 'P.S.' occupies the recto of the leaf at Illinois.
8. WC's Cornish friend has not been identified, but may well be the 'most goodnatured and hospitable of men' at Penzance introduced to WC by Thomas Price – see [0077] to HC, 14 August 1850.
9. 'Box', 'Millais' and the final 'A' of 'AntoninA' are in fact underlined three times and the final 'A.A.' four times.

[0101] TO J. T. MARSH, 21 DECEMBER 1851

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, pp. 109–110, 116 n. 7 (dated 14 December); B&C, I, pp. 77–78 (also dated [14 December 1851]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 54.

17. Hanover Terrace | Sunday evening<sup>1</sup>

My dear Sir,

My ten copies of "Mr Wray's Cash Box" did not arrive on Saturday evening. I am obliged to ask you to be particular in sending them ~~on~~ by tomorrow (Monday), because I wish to send two copies, on that day, to a certain friend, whose good offices, will be of very great importance to the future of the book.<sup>2</sup>

I think the binding (judging from the copies my brother brought home with him) very neat and pretty. As, however, we have adopted a less elaborate (and therefore I conclude) a cheaper cover than was at first proposed, it now becomes a question whether we may not /spare money enough to/ indulge, at the eleventh hour, in the luxury of gilt edges – gilt edges certainly make the book look more costly, and more fit for a present; but if they are to lead us into any important additional expense, let us abandon them by all means. We must beware of cutting down our profits ~~in~~ /from/ this book!<sup>3</sup>

And now about the lettering of the Plate. Have the present lettering stamped out, the moment it is possible to do so – and substitute my lettering: –

"The New Neckcloth".

I think a title is better than a mere reference to the page. As for the present title, the only two friends /to/ whom /I/ have hitherto shown the book have both asked me, what "Mr Wrays [sic] Cash box" has got to do with the picture? – the public will ask the same question, I suspect.<sup>4</sup>

Mind the new lettering is kept as faint as the old.

Here, I think, my budget of petitions may fairly end. I would have made them in person; but doctor's orders forbid me to busy myself by [del] going out to look after /any of/ my affairs on Monday – and on Tuesday I depart for a week or so of rest and restoration in the country.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | J. Marsh Eqre

---

1. Dating from the publication of the Christmas book.
2. Possibly CD.
3. Gasson (p. 108) describes the first edition as follows: ‘Blue cloth, front cover blocked in blind and lettered in gilt, spine blocked in blind, cream endpapers.’
4. This change in the lettering for Millais’s frontispiece was effected for the second edition issued in January 1852.

[0102] TO J. T. MARSH, [22 DECEMBER] 1851<sup>1</sup>

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, p. 110 (as to Bentley, dated 15 December 1851); BGLL, I, p. 54.

Hanover Terrace | Monday morning

My dear Sir,

Another letter about the lettering of the plate!!!

I have received a note from Mr Millais, directing that his name is to be stamped out, as well as “Mr Wray’s Cash-Box” – and placed at the side, “written” he says – “in imitation of small writing”. The reason he alledges for this is that the present position of his name, “spoils the look of the design”.<sup>2</sup>

When this is altered, I hope we shall have got to the end of our alterations! The difficulty of writing a book, is nothing to the difficulty of lettering a plate!

Yours faithfully | W. Wilkie Collins

P.S. | We seem to have dropped advertising in the Times lately. Is that right?

---

1. This letter must immediately follow that to Marsh of Sunday 21 December, which contains WC’s first set of demands concerning the lettering of Millais’s plate in the Christmas book.
2. In the first edition, the published plate has Millais’s name directly beneath the feet of the figures in the picture and the title in cursive script under that.

[0103] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 22 DECEMBER 1851<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 55.

17, Hanover Terrace | Monday morning

My dear Edward,

I am dead knocked up with hard work, and an accident with Isaac,<sup>2</sup> which I will tell you about when we meet. I go down to Stringfield’s as I proposed originally;<sup>3</sup> to get as much rest as I can – Mind you join us when you say you will.

I would do the article for the Leader with pleasure – but the doctor forbids me to use my brains just yet; and I feel that the doctor is right.

With this, I send the Leader Copy of the Christmas book – leaving it to you to dispose of it in the right direction.<sup>4</sup> The “subscription” was a little over 400.

I would have answered your last kind letter from Paris – but even letter-writing is too much for me just now.

Ever yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the reference to Mr Wray’s Cash-Box and the visit to Somerset.
2. Unidentified.
3. Joseph Stringfield, MRCS, physician at Weston-super-Mare and a friend of both WC and Pigott. [0106] to J. T. Marsh of 1 January 1852 was written from Stringfield’s house.
4. The Leader advertised the book on 27 December 1851, p. 1244, but it was not reviewed until 10 January 1852. [0106] to Marsh of 1 January 1852 suggests that a copy was not sent to the Leader office at this time.

[0104] TO J. T. MARSH, 24 DECEMBER 1851

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, p. 111; BGLL, I, p. 55.

Decr 24/51

My dear Sir,

I have written to Bradbury & Evans, to have the Preface to “Mr Wray’s Cash-Box”, left out of any fresh copies sent to the binder. It must be cancelled altogether. Two persons whose opinions are of weight, consider that it forestalls the interest of the story – and I think they are right.<sup>1</sup> People who read the preface will find out at once, in the story, before I chose to tell them, that the “mystery” in the Cash-Box, is a mask of Shakspeare – and this ought not to be. My brains must have been utterly addled by the hurry of printing – or I never should have written the preface.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | J. Marsh Esqre

---

1. Davis (p. 111) suggests CD and Jerrold, though Pigott and Millais seem more likely in the circumstances.

2. The original preface, dated December 1851, was replaced in the second edition of the work by a shorter one dated January 1852. It omitted the explicit reference to the mask of Shakespeare and read:

The main incident on which the following story turns, is founded on a fact which many readers of these pages will probably recognise as having formed a subject of conversation, a few years back, among persons interested in Literature and Art. I have endeavoured, in writing my little book, to keep the spirit of its title-page motto in view, and tell my “honest tale” as “plainly” as I could – or, in other words, as plainly as if I were only relating it to an audience of friends at my own fireside. | W.W. C.

[0105] TO NEWTON CROSLAND,<sup>1</sup> [LATE 1851]

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 56, 133 (as two separate letter fragments), amended A&C3, p. 62.

... of my little Christmas book. Although I am unable to accept your invitation for next Sunday (being engaged to dine out on that day) I gladly look forward to finding an opportunity of personally thanking Mrs Crosland ...

... be very glad to see you.

Believe me | My dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Newton Crosland Esquire

---

1. Newton Crosland (1819–99), London wine merchant, married in 1848 to the novelist Camilla Toulmin (1812–95: ODNB), who thereafter wrote under the signature ‘Mrs Newton Crosland’.

2. A square of paper cut neatly from the bottom half of the first page of a letter, with the addressee line in the style of WC’s earlier correspondence. Here ‘my little Christmas book’ can only refer to Mr Wray’s Cash-Box – hence the suggested date. The first paragraph and the addressee are on the recto and the valediction and signature on the verso.

[0106] TO J. T. MARSH, 1 JANUARY 1852

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, p. 56.

Verandah House | Weston-super-Mare<sup>1</sup> | January 1st 1852

My dear Sir,

Will you send a copy of “Mr Wray’s Cash-Box” to the Office of the Leader – addressed to the Editor?<sup>2</sup>

The copy I had intended to forward out of my ten, has gone to the Bristol Times, to secure the insertion of a favourable review in that paper, which possesses great local influence. The Review will appear, I hope, next week.<sup>3</sup>

I expect to be back in London on the 5th

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | J. Marsh Esqre

---

1. Where WC was staying with Joseph Stringfield – see [0103] to Edward Pigott of 22 December 1851.
2. ‘Wilkie Collins’s Christmas Book’ was favourably reviewed in the Leader (10 January 1852), pp. 38–39.
3. WC’s Christmas tale was in fact noticed in the weekly Bristol Times only on Saturday 31 January 1852, p. 6d. After warmly recalling the author’s performances in Bristol in the Guild of Literature plays, the reviewer praises the ‘exquisite felicity of unforced writing’ in his latest narrative, which is ‘adorned with a kindly humour and a natural pathos’.

[3172] TO WILLIAM PARKER HAMOND,<sup>1</sup> 2 JANUARY 1852

MS: Private.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C7, p. 37.

Weston-Super-Mare<sup>3</sup> | January 2nd 1852

Dear Sir,

Your letter has been forwarded to me here, from my residence at Hanover Terrace. I have great pleasure in writing these few lines, in compliance with your flattering request which you have honoured me by making.<sup>4</sup>

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Wm Parker Hamond Esquire, Junr | &c &c &c

---

1. This must be William Parker Hamond Jr (1793–1873), Cambridge University graduate (St John’s College), of Pampisford Hall, south of Cambridge. WmC had also supplied an autograph to Hamond in August 1846 (with thanks to Alan Bean).
2. Inserted into an extra-illustrated copy of Memoirs.
3. WC was staying with Joseph Stringfield at Verandah House. See [0103] to Pigott, 22 December 1851.
4. Clearly for an autograph, making this the first surviving response by WC to such a request. For his later policy on autograph hunters, see [2878] to Mrs Morris P. Flint of 30 July 1888.

[0107] TO J. T. MARSH, 7 JANUARY 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Extract: Davis, p. 112. Published: BGLL, I, p. 57.

17. Hanover Terrace | Wednesday

My dear Sir,

I shall have the article for the Miscellany ready by the 19th.<sup>2</sup>

I heard last night that no copy of the Christmas Book had been received at the Office of Frasers Magazine.<sup>3</sup> Has it not been sent? If not, let me have it here, as soon as possible; and I will put it myself into the right hands. We may shall miss a good review in the next month’s number if something is not done at once.

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Based on internal evidence, the date must be the first Wednesday in January 1852.
2. This must be the comic tale ‘A Passage in the Life of Mr Perugino Potts’, appearing in Bentley’s Miscellany, 31 (February 1852), pp. 153–164; reprinted for the first time in Thompson, pp. 21–33.
3. Reviewed briefly in ‘Suggestions about Gift-Books’ in Fraser’s Magazine, 45 (February 1852), pp. 141–147.

[0108] TO J. T. MARSH, [9] JANUARY 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 57–58.

17. Hanover Terrace | Friday

My dear Sir,

Will you send a copy of “Mr Wray’s Cash Box” to Fraser’s Magazine? It is important that the book should be despatched (to the Editor of the Magazine in the Strand) without a moment’s delay.

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | J. Marsh Esqre

If the new copies of the Christmas book are not put up yet by the binder – will you send me one copy of those you have by you?

-----
1. Dating from the relation to the previous letter.

[0109] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 12 JANUARY 1852

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, I, pp. 78–80. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 58.

17. Hanover Terrace | January 12th 1852

My dear Edward,

I am about to write down, hap-hazard, as you desired, one or two suggestions for altering the arrangement of the “Leader”.<sup>1</sup>

In the first place, starting from the News of the Week, and leaving it (as one of the admirable features of the paper) where it is, and what it is – I think the leading articles on Public Affairs, ought to be placed immediately after the weekly summary. These articles might, I think, properly follow the summary, because they are in eight nine cases, out of ten suggested by it – they are the thoughts of thinking men on the news of the week, and might therefore be /naturally/ connected as a matter /of arrangement/ with that news. Thus the most important political part of the paper, would at once present itself to the reader, as he turned over the first leaf.

Literature, the Portfolio, the Drama &c, I would keep where they are, at the end of the paper. Thus the two special branches of the paper Leader (the Political and the Literary) would have the two prominent places; and the whole space between them would be left free for general contributions and general news, topic after topic following in due order of classification without a single break.

If the “making up” of the paper would allow of it, I should like to see this said “general news” arranged as much as possible under different stated “heads”. I will refer to last Saturday’s number to explain what I mean.

“The Continent” | Under this head, the letters from ~~the~~ Paris – the “continental notes” – and all other foreign intelligence from Europe.

The Colonies – The Cape – Everything about India, New Zealand, Australia &c &c

America –

The Army –

The Navy (the interesting journal you are publishing might come under this head)

Home News – the Ministerial Imbroglia, the Revenue, the case of the Engineers, National School Association – Omnibus grievance –<sup>2</sup>

This sort of heading and arrangement, would keep the same topics together in the same place. I should like to see Law, made another division, and more attended to in the Leader. Abstracts of the results of the week’s “cases”, both civil and criminal, are wanted. They might be the merest abstracts, and still be of use. Important cases might have a pretty stout paragraph now and then accorded to them. And legal anomalies and corruptions might be thoroughly lashed from time to time, in leading articles. Legal abuse is a subject on which /even/ your mild Protestant “Church and State” man, can feel and talk furiously. King Public would go with us with all his heart /soul/, quote us, praise us, learn us by heart, on such a subject as Law Reform. I find no articles in the Times and the Examiner so highly praised by all parties, and so constantly reproduced second hand in conversation, as the Law Articles. Let us then, from time to time as opportunity offers, politely d—n Magistrates, and spit in the face of Juries. A birch-rod for the backside of old Mother “Justice”, is a weapon ~~that~~ /for which/ people are beginning to feel a household sympathy. Lay it on, Mr Editor! Lay it on thick!

If we made The Fine Arts a special subject, we should penetrate into the Studios. There is no occasion to take up much room with this topic – except in such cases, as the Royal Academy Exhibition. Notices of new prints, for instance, might bring print-sellers [sic] advertisements. What do you say to a circular, sent round to the print-sellers – to say, that the beginning of a new year, ~~was~~ and a change in the Proprietorship, were good opportunities for mentioning some extension which was contemplated in the sphere of the paper. Part of this extension, to be more attention shown to the Fine Arts – ~~Reviews~~ notices of New Prints and new Art Publications, written in the same spirit of impartiality, and with the same due deference to due claims, which have distinguished the literary notices.

Nothing more occurs to me just now. I only throw out these suggestions for you experienced men to use them as you like. Indeed, I should hardly have ventured to write them at all, if you had not asked me. One thing I know – the present arrangement of the paper is objected to, as confused; not, mind, by our enemies, but by our friends. You and the Editors are the men to set this right – I only jog your elbows to try and make you do it.

I hope you will be able to make out this miserable letter. I write it, under the benign influence of gin and water

Ever yours | W. Wilkie Collins

I think I shall be able to do something amusing for you, about the Pre-Raphael painting school in the country. John Millais (entre nous) is going to lend me his diary. He is cut up in last week’s Athenaeum, along with me. They have poked the Christmas Book into their “Library Table”, and mauled it about, rather more maliciously than usual.<sup>3</sup> The fiend receive their souls therefor!

---

1. Having recently taken over the financial and editorial control of the Leader, Pigott was planning a revamp of the printing and layout of the paper – see [0115] to him, 16 February 1852.

2. At this point WC draws a continuous line across the leaf. The five listed items all represent sub-headings in the ‘Home News’ department of the Leader, 10 January 1852, pp. 29–32. They relate to: (1) the dismissal from the Cabinet on 19 December 1851 of the foreign secretary Viscount Palmerston (Henry John Temple, 1784–1865: ODNB) for expressing approval of Louis-Napoléon Bonaparte’s coup; (2) official figures showing the domestic product of Great Britain; (3) the formation and actions of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers which brought together millwrights, mechanics, smiths and machinists into a single union to stand up to their employers; (4) a deputation to present a Bill for establishing free schools in England and Wales; and (5) concerns about the working hours and pay of omnibus drivers and conductors.

3. The brief notice in the Athenæum, 10 January 1852, p. 50, contrived to criticize the ‘somewhat impracticable nature’ of WC’s story while describing Millais’s illustration as ‘less affected and angular than might from such a source have been expected’.

[0111] To F. W. TOPHAM,<sup>1</sup> 2 FEBRUARY 1852<sup>2</sup>

MS: Pocock. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 58–59.

17, Hanover Terrace | Monday evening

My dear Topham /

I have just come from rehearsing the part with Dickens and shall be delighted to follow up the process with you.<sup>3</sup> Thursday evening, I have a dinner engagement, exactly in the ~~opposite~~ end of London opposite to your end! But Friday evening I am quite at your service; and will present myself at Fortress Terrace between 7 and 8, with very great pleasure.<sup>4</sup>

Thank you for your kind answer about Mr Brandling – an answer which I shall consider equally kind, whether he is elected, or whether he is not.<sup>5</sup>

Ever truly yours | W. Wilkie Collins

Coe – the omnipresent Coe! takes Smarts [sic] part! /<sup>6</sup>

1. The watercolourist – see [0087] to him of [mid April 1851].
2. Dating from the references to the Guild play.
3. Referring to the Guild performances of Lytton's Not So Bad as We Seem. The absence of Douglas Jerrold (on account of the recent death of his mother) meant that WC was asked to take over his part of Shadowly Softhead for the performances at Manchester and Liverpool on 11–14 February 1852. CD starred as the young man of fashion, Lord Wilmot, while Topham played the part of the respectable businessman Mr Goodenough Easy, who gets drunk in the third act.
4. According to the Post Office London Directory (1851), Topham had rooms at 32 Fortress Terrace (now named Fortress Road), Kentish Town, in the north-west of London.
5. Concerning the young artist Henry C. Brandling, illustrator of Rambles Beyond Railways, and the election of new members to the Society of Painters in Water Colours. Topham was then on the committee which met on 9 February 1852; Brandling seems to have been rejected on that occasion and had to wait until 13 June 1853, when he was elected an associate member.
6. Thomas Coe (c. 1819–86), carpenter, actor and stage manager, a member of the Haymarket company from 1846, who served as prompter for the Guild plays, taking over various parts when the distinguished amateur performers were unavoidably absent. CD had written to Coe on 1 February 1852: 'A change that has been rendered necessary in the cast of the comedy obliges me to ask you to be so good as to double Smart with Lord Loftus' (Pilgrim, VI, p. 588). Smart was Lord Wilmot's valet and Lord Loftus his father.

[0110] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, [2] FEBRUARY 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, folder [1852] [Feb. 9]). Extracts: Beetz, p. 23 (dated 'early February 1852'); Lawrence, p. 393 (dated 9 February 1852). Published: B&C, I, p. 83 (dated [January–February 1852]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 58.

17, Hanover Terrace | Monday evening

My dear Edward/

Saturday evening, is the only free evening that I have in the week. Can you get orders for the Marionettes on that occasion?<sup>2</sup> I will call on you at the Office, at, or near, 5 o'clock; and we will dine together. I shall not forget about Bentley;<sup>3</sup> and, moreover, I have one or two things to say to you (quite privately) about certain doctrines of "Leader" religion, which I wish to draw your attention to, [~~del~~] very seriously – and which I ought to have mentioned to you long before

—
ever yours | W. Wilkie Collins

If you would rather I called on you at your lodgings /on Saturday,/ let me know.

My mother is better, thank you.

---

1. The conjectural dating of the three letters to Pigott concerning the editorial line of the Leader on religious questions ([0110], [0112], [0115]), relies on the recognition (not shared by Beetz or Lawrence) that these represent respectively the opening, middle, and closing of the debate. The date of the last (Monday, 16 February) is fixed by the internal reference to specific performances of the Guild plays; that of the second (Friday, 6 February) is determined by its discussion of Thornton's Hunt's article in the paper on Saturday, 31 January, and the fact that WC was in Liverpool rather than London on Friday, 13 February; while that of this first (Monday, [2] February) is constrained by the fact that WC could not have written on Monday, 9 February, with a proposal to attend the theatre in London with Pigott on Saturday 14th, as he was himself scheduled to be performing in Liverpool on that day.

2. On 12 January 1852, the Royal Marionette Theatre, Adelaide Street, West Strand, opened 'for the representation of operas, burlesques, vaudevilles, ballets, and spectacles by a TROUPE OF MARIONETTES' (Times, 12 January 1852, p. 4). The puppets were not subject to licensing by the Lord Chamberlain and could indulge in dialogue not permitted to human actors (see Pilgrim, VI, p. 592). The following interesting bill of fare was offered on the Saturday evening in question: 'Signor Bari Tone will sing the French Commentary on Shakespere. The grand melodramatic romance of THE BOTTLE IMP. New Neapolitan grotesque divertissement, ARLECHINO FORTUNATO. And BOMBASTES FURIOSO.' (Times, 7 February 1852, p. 4).

3. We cannot elucidate this reference to Bentley.

[0112] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, [6] FEBRUARY 1852

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, folder [1852] [Feb. 20]). Extracts: Beetz, pp. 23–24 (dated 'late February'). Published: Lawrence, pp. 394–396 (dated [20 February 1852]); B&C, I, pp. 83–86 (dated [20 February 1852]).

Private

17. Hanover Terrace | Friday<sup>1</sup>

My dear Edward,

You have not quite hit what I was “driving at”, in my last letter.<sup>2</sup> You seem to think that I wish to “impose restraint upon /your/ absolute freedom of thought in Religion”. I want to do nothing of the kind; but I want to ask you what business Religion has in a newspaper, at all?

I say nothing about the rhymes on Aquinas [sic]. I may have my opinion about the necessity of connecting a belief in the ultimate salvation of the whole human race with a belief in the ultimate salvation of the devil – I say nothing about your friend’s verses, but this: – They have no business in a newspaper. Admitting that the ultimate destiny of Satan is a useful and interesting subject for Christians to speculate on – how is that subject (made doubly grave by being coupled with Our Saviour’s Name) [del] /presented/ to your readers? – “cheek by jowl” with an article on puppets. Can any good be done, any purpose worth a farthing achieved, by such an anomalous coupling of the sacred and the profane – of “M” on Aquinas’s [sic] [del] aspirations for the salvation of the Devil; ~~and~~ /with/ “Vivian” on the history of Marionettes? Yet this anomaly you must have, if you introduce Religion into a newspaper.<sup>3</sup>

It is not your freedom of religious thought that I wish to object to; but your license of religious expression – a license which is, to me, utterly abhorrent. I have never seen any religious thought in the paper – you have made your confession of political faith (and I agree in it, as you know) – but you have made no confession of religious faith. If you are to take a leading position in Religion as ~~well~~ in Politics, let us know what your religion is, just as you have let us know what your politics are. What does the Leader believe in, and what does it disbelieve in? Readers have a right to ask that question of a Journal which starts for the discussion of religious subjects, as well as political. Surely your mission is to teach, as well as to inquire. [del] Surely you ought to teach us something /definite/ in religion, just as you teach us something in politics, if you must have this “freedom of religious thought”. Why not let Mr Holyoake write a series of articles on the advantages of Atheism as a creed? – his convictions have been honestly arrived at, miserable and melancholy as they are to think of.<sup>4</sup>

But I repeat it, religion /itself/ is not a subject for the columns of a newspaper – religious politics (such as were discussed in that admirable article on the “Church in Distress”) are fair game, if you please.

I honestly believe that if anything can prevent the Leader from achieving the great success ~~to~~ which it bids fair to attain to – it will be the suicidal policy (as I think) of allowing the individual scepticisms of the different /writers/ to appear in their articles on the affairs of the day. This is a course that has never been followed in any other system of /political/ journalism that I am acquainted with. It tends to disunite contributors, who might otherwise be perfectly united. For instance, I go with you, in politics – I go with you (saving one or two exceptional cases) in social matters – I go with you in your judgment on Literature – but, in /regard to/ your mixing up of the name of Jesus Christ with the current politics of the day, I am against you – against you with all my heart and soul. I will expose and condemn as heartily as any of you the corruptions and abuses of Church [del] Politics, as the inventions of man – but if one of the things you understand by “freedom of religious thought” be the freedom of mingling the Saviour’s name with the politics of the day – I protest against that “freedom”, as something irredeemably bad in itself; and utterly useless for any good purpose whatever.

Surely there is some difference between the “orthodoxy” which would keep you within the limit of this or that particular creed; ~~and~~ of this or that particular church or community, and the “orthodoxy” which /simply/ believes Our Saviour’s name to be something too sacred for introduction into ~~the~~ articles on the political squabbles and difficulties of the day.

You will ask, what does all this tend to? I will tell you, candidly. The lines on “Aquinas” [sic] and Thornton Hunt’s “Political Letter”<sup>5</sup> are written in a tone and spirit which I cannot subscribe to. Your letter, and ~~these~~ /the fact that these/ articles appear at a new era of the paper, show that the tone of which I complain will be continued as the established tone of the Leader literature, on religious matters. [~~] /With/ that tone I cannot agree – it outrages my own convictions – and for this reason – I and this only – I must beg that my name may never be appended to any future articles I may write for the Portfolio – to the story, for instance, of which you were talking the last time I saw you.<sup>6</sup> If my name appears in the paper, the natural inference must be that I subscribe to the /religious/ tone of Thornton Hunt's letter – that I am one of you in religion, as well as in politics. [~~] I make no claim to orthodoxy; but I dread such an inference as this – dread it conscientiously [sic] – not from fear of “What the world will say.”~~~~

What I mention /here/ about my name does not apply to /my reasons for keeping/ the Magnetic Letters anonymous. They would have been anonymous wherever I had sent them for publication.<sup>7</sup>

If, with this restriction, you still wish to employ my pen – it is at your service. I will write for you, my very best – I will give you all I /fairly/ have to give of brains and time – I will give your work precedence over any other work any other man may ask me to do – but I will not give you my name, because I will not /by so doing even seem to/ give in my adherence to the /individual/ religious opinions which you allow your contributors to express in their political or literary articles. It might seem (to strangers) no very creditable way of “sticking to my principles” to /continue/ writing in a paper, after I have /for these reasons/ declined letting my name appear publicly [sic] as one of the contributors. You will know that I commend this inconsistency as a matter of friendship – from the wish to help you at a critical period – if I can be of help. I have no wish to withdraw from the paper, till it is well “set on its legs”, and your interests are secured.<sup>8</sup> I am neither a Protestant, a Catholic – or a Dissenter – I do not desire to discuss this [~~] or that particular creed; but I believe Jesus Christ to be the son of God; and believing that, I think it a blasphemy to use his name, as it is used in “Acquinas” [sic], and in the letter signed “Thornton Hunt”~~

I write these lines hastily, but candidly, and after some consideration. I ought to have expressed to you what I have now said, ere this; but a feeling of restraint which I cannot account for – and which I ought to have known you better than to have indulged – kept me silent. I thought I would wait, and see how the paper went on, how it started at its new era, before I spoke to you. This was uncandid and wrong – I am sorry for it – and I hope I have in some measure atoned for it, by the frankness with which I have spoken out, now.

But one thing more remains for me to say. The course I have taken is my own course – no one has prompted me to it – no one has [~~] attempted to give me any advice. I act under the dictates of my own opinion – only my own.~~

Yours affectionately | W. Wilkie Collins

To | E. F. Smyth Pigott Esqre

---

1. On the dating, see note 1 to [0110] to Pigott, [2] February 1852.

2. It is unclear whether this refers to [0110] to Pigott of [2] February 1852, or to an intervening letter that has been lost.

3. The consecutive articles in question, appearing in the Leader of Saturday, 24 January 1852, were: in the ‘Portfolio’ department, ‘Acquinas’ by ‘M.’ (W.M.W. Call), p. 89b, a nine-stanza poem which pictures the mediaeval saint praying fervently to God to forgive the sin of Lucifer, concluding “‘If darkness change to light with thee | The devil may yet an angel be.’”; and, in ‘The Arts’ department, ‘The Marionettes’ by ‘Vivian’ (G.H. Lewes), pp. 89c-90a, a six-paragraph review of performances at the Royal Marionette Theatre, Adelaide Street, which described the puppets as ‘two and a half feet in height, well proportioned, splendidly dressed, and immensely absurd’, but assured readers that ‘there is profound meaning in these Marionettes, and I advise you to find it out’.

4. George Jacob Holyoake (1807–1906: ODNB), secularist member of the co-operative movement and editor of the weekly Reasoner (1846–61), who had served a six-month prison sentence for blasphemy from August 1842. Holyoake had contributed letters to the Leader from as early as 13 April 1850, p. 61, while his ‘Archbishop Whately and the Port Royal Logic’ occupied the ‘Open Council’ department in the issue of 14 February 1852, p. 155a-c.

5. Referring to Thornton Hunt, ‘Political Letters. III. – The Progress of Progress.’, Leader, Saturday, 31 January 1852, pp. 105b-106b, which declared: ‘The spirit of Jesus, I say – for most devoutly do I wish that the spirit inculcated by that divine heretic against the established faith of his day, the truly Catholic faith which he restored to religion, could be introduced into our daily life and work.’ (p. 106a).

6. No story by WC in the Leader ‘Portfolio’ department has been identified other than ‘The New Dragon of Wantley’ on 20 December 1851, which was signed only with the pseudonym ‘Philo-Serpens’.

7. Referring to ‘Magnetic Evenings at Home’, a series of six letters about ‘Animal Magnetism’ (mesmerism) addressed to George Henry Lewes, which appeared in the Leader on 17 January, 14, 21 and 28 February, and 6 and 13 March 1852. Lewes replied in ‘The Fallacy of Clairvoyance’ (27 March 1852, p. 305), to which WC in turn responded in ‘The Incredible Not Always Impossible’ (3 April 1852, pp. 328–329 – included here as [0123] to G.H. Lewes, 29 March 1852). In fact, like WC’s first contribution to the paper, ‘A Plea for Sunday Reform’ (27 September 1851, pp. 925–926), each of WC’s seven ‘magnetic’ contributions was signed ‘W.W.C.’.

8. The three sentences of justification, ‘It might seem ... your interests are secured.’, represent an afterthought added in first the left-hand and then the upper margin of the sheet, with an asterisk indicating the appropriate place of insertion in the body of the letter.

[0113] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 10 FEBRUARY 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, folder [1852] [Feb. 3]). Published: BGLL, I, p. 59.

Tuesday morning

My dear Edward,

I have only time to thank you for your letter, and to send you the second of the “magnetic evenings”<sup>2</sup> – the third is all written, bar the conclusion, which I will do on Sunday evening when I return from the country.<sup>3</sup> Come and dine here, on Monday next at ½ past 5, and you have the M.s.s<sup>4</sup> – ever yours

W.W.C.

For Heaven’s sake be careful in looking over the proof!<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Dating from the publication of ‘Magnetic Evenings’.

2. Following his visit to Weston-super-Mare in the New Year of 1852, Collins wrote a series of six essays describing ‘Magnetic Evenings at Home’, in which he gave accounts of mesmerism and clairvoyance witnessed at that time. They were published in the Leader from 17 January 1852. The second was ‘Magnetic Evenings at Home. Letter II – To G. H. Lewes’, Leader (14 February 1852), pp. 160–161.

3. WC left that day to perform in Not So Bad as We Seem in Manchester on 11 February, going on to Liverpool to perform on 13 and 14 February, and returning to London on Sunday 15 February.

4. In fact WC posted it – see [0115] to Pigott of 16 February 1852.

5. Indicating that there would be no time for WC himself to view the proof, and thus further confirming that the letter was written on the Monday before the appearance of the second in the ‘Magnetic Evenings’ series.

[0114] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 13 FEBRUARY 1852

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, I, p. 81. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 60–61.

Adelphi Hotel | Liverpool | Friday morning

My dear Mother /

I have just half an hour to occupy in writing you an account of our tour thus far.

Our triumph in Manchester was worth all our other triumphs put together. Two thousand, seven hundred people composed our audience – and such an audience! They never missed a single “point” in the play – and applauded incessantly. My part, you will be glad to hear, was played without a single mistake – and played so as to produce some very warm congratulations from my manager, and indeed from the whole company. The dress and wig made me (everybody said) look about sixteen. The first sight of the audience, when I peeped at them through the curtain, before we began, was something sublime – nothing but faces from the floor to the ceiling. I did not feel in the slightest degree nervous, and was not “thrown off my balance” by a round of applause which greeted my first appearance on the stage.<sup>1</sup> When the curtain fell on Dickens and your dutiful son, at the end of the first act, the audience were all rolling about like a great sea, and roaring with laughter at the tops of their voices –

When we were called on, at the end of the play, Dickens stepped forward and made a little speech, expressing our gratitude for the reception we had got. I shall never forget the sight of the audience just as he spoke the last word – They were all on their legs; the women waving their handkerchiefs and the men their hats, with roar after roar of applause, continuing for some minutes after the curtain had fallen –

Yesterday we dined here, with the Mayor –<sup>2</sup> A real banquet in rooms on the most magnificent scale – Sixty or seventy people invited to meet us – capital speeches made by Dickens and Charles Knight and some French dishes that would make you turn pale if you looked at them.<sup>3</sup> We are all delighted with the Mayor – he is a very young man – the owner of the yacht [sic for ‘yacht’] which saved so many of the passengers in the “Ocean Monarch”, some years back.<sup>4</sup>

Tonight we act here for the first time, and I hope with as much success as at Manchester. I shall most probably return on Sunday evening, when I hope I shall find you getting quite well again. Do’nt answer this letter for I shall not be here long enough to get your reply –

With love to Charley and kind regards to Miss Otter,
I remain affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC performed the role of Shadowly Softhead in Not So Bad As We Seem. For CD’s account of these proceedings, see CD to Catherine Dickens, 13 February 1852, Pilgrim, VI, p. 598.

2. Robert Barnes was Mayor of Manchester, 1851–3.

3. Charles Knight played the part of Mr Jacob Tonson, a bookseller.

4. The 1,301-ton barque Ocean Monarch was destroyed by fire in Liverpool Bay on 24 August 1848. Of the 398 passengers, 218 were saved and 180 lost. The Liverpool-based yacht Queen of the Ocean rescued 32 passengers under its captain, Commodore Thomas Littledale (see the Illustrated London News, 2 September 1848).

[0115] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 16 FEBRUARY 1852

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, folder [1852] [Feb. 16]). Extract: Beetz, p. 24 (undated). Published: Lawrence, p. 393 (dated [16 February 1852]); B&C, I, pp. 82–83 (dated [16 February 1852]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 61.

17. Hanover Terrace | Monday evening<sup>1</sup>

My dear Edward/

I send you the 3rd “Letter”. If you can let me see a proof of it, pray send me one. You shall have it back by return of post.<sup>2</sup>

The paper looks admirably in its new dress – the printing is really beautiful.<sup>3</sup>

I do’nt see the distinction you mention, between the Portfolio part of the Leader and the other parts; and, if I did, I would not take advantage of it. I refuse my name on principle; and am by no means desirous of seeing it appear under protest, in a part of the newspaper specially set apart for protesting contributors! I always give it unreservedly – or I don’t give it all.

As to what is “irreligious” or what is “heterodox”, or what is the “immensity” of the distance between them, you and I differ; and it is useless to broach the subject. Nothing will ever persuade me that a system which permits the introduction of the private religious, or irreligious, or heterodoxical opinions of contributors to a newspaper into the articles on [del] politics or general news which they write for it, is a wise or good system – either in itself, or in its effect in [sic] the various writers whom you employ. It is for this reason only that I don’t desire to be “one of you” – simply because a common respect for my own religious convictions prevents me from wishing to —

— but writing on this subject is of no use. I hate ~~discussions~~ controversies on paper, almost as more than I hate controversies in talk. I’ll explain myself as fully as you desire, when we next meet; and there’s an end of it!

We have had a wonderful theatrical campaign. Even a Bristol audience is beaten in enthusiasm by the audiences of Manchester and Liverpool.<sup>4</sup> They even laughed at “dimidum me!”<sup>5</sup> We filled the Philharmonic Hall at Liverpool two nights following – Jenny Lind in the height of her vogue in the provinces was afraid to try what we have accomplished. King Public is a good king for Literature and Art!/
affectionately yours | W.W.C.

If you have no time to send me the proof, pray look over the article sharply as soon as it gets into type.<sup>6</sup>

1. On the dating, again see note 1 to [0110] to Pigott, [2] February 1852.
2. WC's 'Magnetic Evenings at Home. Letter III – To G. H. Lewes, The Leader (21 February 1852), pp. 183–184.
3. In a note 'To Subscribers and Agents' at the end of the issue of The Leader for 7 February 1852, p. 140, it was announced that: 'On and after Saturday, the 14th instant, the LEADER will be printed on New Paper and in New Type.' Among the visible changes to the layout from that issue were the use of a serifless font for, and wider spacing between the department titles in the list of Contents on the front page, the insertion of a double rule line beneath the header on every page, the reducing of the 'Literature', 'Portfolio', and 'Arts' departments from a three- to a two-column format, and the moving of the 'Open Council' department to earlier in the paper, thus creating a rather clearer division between the political and cultural contents as advocated by WC in [0109] to Pigott, 12 January 1852.
4. WC and CD performed in Bulwer Lytton's Not So Bad as We Seem in Manchester on Wednesday, 11 February, and in Liverpool on the Friday and Saturday. Dickens reported that 'Collins was admirable' (Pilgrim VI, pp. 596 and 598 n. 4).
5. A play on words from Horace's Odes, 1.3.8. Wilmot, played by Dickens, refers to the dimwitted Softhead, his chum and double, as 'Animae dimidium meae' ('my soul mate', Latin). To his annoyance Softhead mishears 'Animae' as 'Enemy', and then mistakes 'dimidium meae' for a fashionable equivalent of the oath 'Damn me!', using it throughout the rest of the play in the form 'dimidum meae' to great comic effect. (With thanks to Paul Barlow of Northumbria University.)
6. Postscript added in the left margin of the opening page of the letter.

[0116] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, [18 FEBRUARY] 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 61–62.

17. Hanover Terrace | Wednesday evening

My dear Edward /

I saw Ward this afternoon. Kean sends orders,<sup>2</sup> at certain periods, to certain people at Coutts's, and Ward gets his share; but they are dress Circle orders only, which are sent to the bank as a matter of civility, and cannot be applied for by anybody in the Bank. None have arrived since the Pantomime began –<sup>3</sup>

I am sorry I can't help you in this affair. The whole system of orders seems likely to be upset – How on earth will Managers continue to fill the Upper Boxes? I suppose they will be shut up altogether, as a sacrifice to principle – !

However, we are sure of the Adelphi the week after next –<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | W.W.C.

---

1. Conjectural dating from the dispute between Kean and G. H. Lewes over free tickets to the Royal Princess's Theatre. WC was in Manchester the previous Wednesday.

2. Charles Kean, manager of the Princess's Theatre, Oxford Street, and its chief tragic actor – see [0274] to him of 15 January 1858. He presented a series of Shakespeare plays at the Princess's Theatre during February 1852. Here 'orders' are free passes for admission to theatres (see OED, 'order', 24c).

3. G. H. Lewes, writing in the Leader, was very critical of Charles Kean and his melodramatic style of acting. Kean objected and early in 1852 the dispute came to a head when Kean withdrew Lewes's 'orders'. On 7 February Lewes, who adopted the pseudonym 'Vivian' for his theatrical criticism, reported this in the Leader ('Vivian in Tears!' (7 February 1852), p. 137) promising 'I shall be there on first nights as of old'. See Rosemary Ashton, G. H. Lewes: A Life (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1991), p. 126; and William Baker (ed.), The Letters of George Henry Lewes (Victoria, BC: English Literary Studies, University of Victoria, 1995), I, p. 201. This letter from WC appears to be in response to a request by Pigott to get his 'orders' from a different source – Charles Ward at Coutts & Co.

4. Possibly for 1 March – on that day they would see John Poole's Paul Pry, which had reopened there on Monday 23 February.

[0117] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, [19] FEBRUARY 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 62.

17, Hanover Terrace | 2 o'clock A.M.!!!

My dear Edward /

I have just returned from a very jovial dinner party at Lady Boothby's<sup>2</sup> – and am in the worst possible condition for making alterations of any consequence in a proof sheet.<sup>3</sup> I have put in the poetry from Tennyson, as you wished – though I think such an expression as “wilful thorns” hardly suits the character of our sweet-tempered and lovely Alice! (N.B. This is written in a very maudlin Bacchanalian state – Oh! if Alice were here at this moment!)<sup>4</sup>

I send the proof by post, as I shall not be able to get to the office in good time tomorrow – even if I am able to get there at all. I am changing the “locale” of my study – and have to wait the visits of upholstery-men, tomorrow.

Can't you dine with us on Sunday next, and accompany me to Charley Ward's in the evening?

Affectionately yours | W Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the proofs of the third instalment of 'Magnetic Evenings'. WC typically corrected the proofs on the Wednesday before publication; this letter probably dates from early on the Thursday morning.

2. Presumably Lady Louisa Cranstoun Boothby (c. 1812–58: ODNB), popular comic actress under the stage name of Miss Mordaunt and later her first married name of Mrs Nisbett. Her first husband was Captain John Alexander Nisbett (1831) and her second Sir William Boothby (1844), both of whom died not long after the marriage. The drunken WC puts three letters 'o' in the name.

3. 'Magnetic Evenings at Home. Letter III – To G. H. Lewes', Leader (21 February 1852), pp. 183–184.

4. 'A rosebud set with little wilful thorns, | And sweet as English air could make her, she' – from Tennyson's The Princess, cited in 'Magnetic Evenings III'. It has been suggested that the subject of the clairvoyance experiments described there was WC's goddaughter Alice Jane Ward (b. 19 June 1849), daughter of the painters E. M. and Henrietta Ward. However, the reference here would seem to be to a rather more mature young lady.

[0118] TO J. T. MARSH, [JANUARY–FEBRUARY] 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Extract: Davis, p. 114. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 61–62.

17. Hanover Terrace | Friday

My dear Sir,

I hope there has been no mistake made about paying the amount due to Mr Millais. I heard from him yesterday, with some surprise, that he not yet received it [sic]

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | J T Marsh Esqre

---

1. We assume the letter is likely to date from rather earlier in the year than Davis (p. 114), who writes concerning the delay in the payment to Millais for his illustration for Mr Wray's Cash-Box: 'In March he severely reprimanded Bentley'.

[0119] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 3 MARCH 1852

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 63–64.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | March 3rd 1852

My dear Edward,

I return the proof corrected, and with it the last Magnetic Letter.<sup>1</sup>

I am much obliged to you for your very kind and prompt offer to Ward. He will do his very best, I know, to justify your good opinion; and if a dash of my pen can help him, it shall be applied to the best of my ability.<sup>2</sup>

Go and see the Corsican Brothers by all means.<sup>3</sup> I intend to go a second time – I had an order for two last Saturday;<sup>4</sup> and should have asked you to accompany me; but that you had told me you were engaged all last week.

At last, I have got my room in good order;<sup>5</sup> and have taken up my new book again in earnest. Vol: 1st is undergoing correction today.<sup>6</sup>

The circulation of Bleak House promises to beat the circulation of Copperfield, already!<sup>7</sup>

Come here and have a talk on Monday morning if you can.

In the mean time, | Believe me |

affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. The proof of the fifth instalment of 'Magnetic Evenings at Home' (published in the Leader (6 March 1852), pp. 231–233), and the manuscript of the sixth (in the Leader (13 March 1852), pp. 256–257).

2. The offer remains unidentified – perhaps Charles Ward had been asked to write something for the Leader.

3. The Corsican Brothers, adapted from a French play by the Anglo-Irish dramatist Dion Boucicault (c. 1820–90: ODNB). It opened at the Royal Princess's Theatre on Tuesday 24 February 1852.

4. WC writes on a Wednesday and refers to the play's first Saturday performance, on 28 February.

5. See [0117] to Pigott of [19] February 1852.

6. Basil was eventually published on 16 November 1852.

7. The first monthly part of Bleak House was published at the beginning of March 1852. On the circulation of Dickens's monthly serials, see Patten.

[0120] TO [J. T. MARSH], 11 MARCH 1852

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Extract: Davis, p. 115. Published: BGLL, I, p. 64.

March 11th 1852 | 17. Hanover Terrace

My dear Sir /

Keep a place open in the Miscellany for April. I have the story from the French which I mentioned to you;<sup>1</sup> and will bring it to New Burlington Street on Saturday – I have given the translator a dash or two of my pen, here and there; and mean to go over the fair copy, before I put it into your hands. The story is well worth any pains that can be taken with it.

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

The article will occupy, I should think, 10 or 12 pages.

---

1. Referring to 'The Midnight Mass: An Episode in the History of the Reign of the Terror', translation by an unidentified friend of WC – perhaps Charles Ward – of Balzac's short story 'Épisode sous la Terreur', eventually published in Bentley's Miscellany, 31 (June 1852), pp. 629–638.

[0121] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 8 JANUARY–18 MARCH 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 64–65.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | Thursday

My dear Edward /

We have never been a second time to the Game of Speculation.<sup>2</sup> Can you go on next Monday evening? Can Lewes get a box for Monday evening? – or if not, orders? I want very much to take my friend Henry Bullar to see the play;<sup>3</sup> and Monday evening would suit him as well as it suits me, and as well (I hope) as it will suit you. Will you let me have a line, by return of post, to say whether Monday is available and, if not, what evening next week would be?

ever yours | W.W.C.

P.S. If you are likely to be at the Office at about twelve o'clock tomorrow (Friday) morning, you need not trouble yourself to write an answer. I will call on you.

---

1. Dating from the second visit to Lewes's play – see the following note.

2. The Game of Speculation, adaptation by G. H. Lewes of a Balzac comedy. This opened at the Royal Lyceum Theatre on Thursday 2 October 1851, and ran for 94 performances ending on Saturday 27 March 1852, though the theatre was dark from 13 October until 15 December 1852 (see the Leader, 20 December 1851, p. 1214). In December WC was too busy with Mr Wray's Cash-Box for the theatre, and he was away on Thursday 1 January 1852.

3. Henry Bullar (1815–70), son of a Southampton doctor – see [0018] to HC of 13 January 1844. Bullar was then a barrister and afterwards a judge on the Western circuit. At the time of his death he was acting as recorder at Poole, Dorset.

[0122] TO NINA CHAMBERS (AFTERWARDS LEHMANN),<sup>1</sup> 27 MARCH 1852

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Published: Lehmann p. 31; Baker 2001, p. 508. BGLL, I, pp. 65–66.

Miss Chambers has sent me a very sharp letter
With a gift of some toffy (I never sucked better!)
'Tis plain, from her note, she would have me infer
That I should have first sent the toffy to her.
I will only observe, on the present occasion,
(Thinking first gifts of sweets, so much sugar'd temptation),
That in tempting of all kinds, I still must believe
The men act like Adam – the women like Eve:
From mere mortal frailties I don't stand exempted,
So I waited, like Adam, by Eve to be tempted –
But, more fitted than he with "The Woman" to grapple
I return her (in Toffy) my bite of "The Apple"! <sup>2</sup>

W.W.C.

March 27/52

---

1. Jane Chambers (1830–1902), who was always known to family and friends by the pet name of 'Nina'. She was the eldest daughter of the Edinburgh author and publisher Robert Chambers (1802–71: ODNB), who founded Chambers's Edinburgh Journal with his brother William. Nina became close friends with WC some time before her marriage in November 1852 to the son of a Jewish merchant from Hamburg, Frederick Lehmann (1826–91), who settled in Scotland in the 1840s. This is the only extant note to Nina before her marriage but she and WC were clearly on fairly intimate terms.

2. Presumably the poem accompanied the return gift of one or more toffee apples (candy apples).

[0123] TO G. H. LEWES,<sup>1</sup> 29 MARCH 1852

MS: Unknown. Published: Leader, 3:106 (3 April 1852), pp. 328–329, our copy text; Wilkie Collins, Magnetic Evenings at Home (London: Wilkie Collins Society, 2001); BGLL, I, pp. 66–69 (italicisation omitted).

THE INCREDIBLE NOT ALWAYS IMPOSSIBLE

MY DEAR LEWES, – I have just read your article on the "Fallacy of Clairvoyance." Certain portions of it seem to me to call for a rejoinder on my part as the writer of the series of letters, entitled "Magnetic Evenings at Home."<sup>2</sup>

In the first place, allow me to acknowledge the liberal and temperate spirit in which you have written; and let me further admit, that I consider you, personally, quite justified in your disbelief in clairvoyance by the failure of the personal experiment which you made as a test of its truth. I am not writing to remonstrate with you; but to defend myself – or, in other words, to show that, if your disbelief is founded on what you term "a crucial instance," my belief is founded on "a crucial instance" too.

Referring to the experiment related by me, in No. 102 of this journal, you endeavour to account for the extraordinary results which I relate as having been obtained, by assuming that the clairvoyante was prompted in her answers by "leading questions, by intonations, by the hundred suggestions of voice and manner." You further admit, that the gentleman who put the questions (not the magnetizer, remember), denied your explanation, and assured you that he had remained perfectly passive. His statement does not appear to have staggered you in your theory. I suppose you doubted whether the person who put the questions was the best witness as to how the questions were put. At any rate, you resolved to “test the clairvoyante when she knew nothing, when her operator knew nothing, when no other human being but yourself knew what the real case was.”

It is on this part of your letter that I wish to make one or two comments.

1. I beg to repeat what I have already stated in the “Magnetic Evenings” – i.e., that in the case of clairvoyance now under review, and in the others which I have reported, I took down in writing the questions and answers as they passed, and sent them to press in the Leader from the notes thus taken. Is this evidence of the verbal correctness of my report of the questions, or is it not? Do scientific men, like the Dr. Cullen you quote, disbelieve other people’s ears as well as their eyes; and assume that the general public are as incapable of correctly writing down what they hear, as of correctly describing what they see? I can only say for myself, that I wrote down what I heard, exactly as I heard it; that whenever a question was repeated (and that was not often) it was repeated in the same words; that no observations of any kind intervened between the questions and answers in the part of the interrogatory which produced the most astounding results; and that no interference, by word, look, or gesture, proceeded from any of the audience – for the simple reason, that none of them knew whether the answers were right or wrong. I know all this just as well as I know that I am writing to you at the present moment.

2. Now let us examine the questions taken down under these circumstances. We will only revert to two of them, in order to save time and space. But, for the sake of the point at issue between us, we will select the two questions which elicited the most marvellous answers, and one of which I know to have been immediately followed by the answer. They are these, (I quote from my fifth letter): – “Q. How many people were seated at table? A. (given directly) Seven. (right). Q. How many ladies and how many gentlemen? A. (after a pause of perfect silence) Four gentlemen and three ladies. (right).” First recapitulating the circumstance, that these questions referred to a breakfast-party at Paris, given while the clairvoyante was at a watering-place in Somersetshire; and that we knew, by every human means of knowledge, that no hint of the party, or of any matter connected with it, had been communicated to her, or to any one about her, – first recapitulating this, let me ask whether the two questions quoted are, in any sense of the word, “leading questions?” and whether they are not, on the contrary, studiously confined to the, simplest, baldest form of interrogatory? If you believe that from such questions any guess could be formed by anybody, of what the required answer ought to be, I have been wasting my time in writing this letter; but I know you don’t.

Having done with the “leading question” part of your explanation, let us get on to your notion that “anxious expressions, intonations, and the hundred suggestions of voice and manner,” had something to do in producing the answers that we heard. If, by “anxious expressions,” you mean expressions in words, the questions, as they stand, dispose of that hypothesis; if you mean expression by look, I should like to know your idea of the “look” which can so eloquently accompany the question, “how many people were seated at table?” as to inform the questioned person (previously in a state of total ignorance on the subject) that the right answer was “seven?” Or, if you would rather not tell me about the “look,” perhaps you will inform me how an “intonation of voice” accompanying the same question, would be able to produce the same effect? I should like to hear you sound that “intonation,” some day, after dinner, when we are in a comfortable state for judging of it, – say after a bottle of port apiece. The celebrated Irish echo, which, when a traveller says “How d’ye do?” always replies “Pretty well, thank ye” would be nothing to the “intonation!”

As for my friend’s “manner” helping the clairvoyante, – I wish you had seen it! He sat with both his hands on the elbows of her chair all the time, certainly “suggesting” nothing in that direction. His face, whenever I looked at it, (and that was pretty often,) always wore the same expression of rigid attention, – nothing more; and he plied his interrogatories with as much coolness and deliberation as if he had been a practised hand. But, let his manner have been any manner you like, if – accompanying the two questions I have quoted – it could have helped to betray what the answers ought to be, then, assuredly, one of the easiest stage-directions ever given to an actor, is that renowned direction in the old melodrama: – “Here the miser leans against the side-scene, and grows generous.”<sup>3</sup>

3. If you have any doubt whether our friend could be quite certain that in selecting the subject for experiment he was testing the clairvoyante as you tested her, “when she knew nothing of the case, and when her operator knew nothing,” and I may add, when nobody present and nobody not present connected with the magnetizer or his family circle, knew anything either – I refer you first, to our friend himself; and secondly, to the statement of the matter contained in my fifth letter. In both cases you will find the evidence as clear and direct as evidence can possibly be.

And now I have done. If after this you still believe that, because your experiment failed, there must necessarily have been some failure in our experiment which we could not detect, I must give up all hope of convincing you. But why then did my experiment fail? you will say. I again refer you to my letters. You will find failures faithfully reported there; and you will find the magnetizer himself quoted as saying, that what he succeeded in at one time, he did not succeed in at another. He has failed in your case – he succeeded with us: he has succeeded with dozens of other people – he may yet succeed with you, in the manner and under the circumstances which you would imagine least likely to produce success. In the mean time, I write this letter, (my last) not with any wish to enter into a controversy on the general subject of clairvoyance, but simply to vindicate the special experiment to which you have referred in your letter, as a genuine experiment; and to try and show you, by clear straightforward evidence, that my friend and myself were not duped by our own imaginations – not misled by any deception of our own senses – and not unmindful of using every possible caution, as well as of raising every fair difficulty in selecting and prosecuting our test of the merits of clairvoyance.

W. W. C.

March 29th.

---

1. George Henry Lewes (1817–78: ODNB), journalist, novelist, editor.

2. Following his visit to Weston-super-Mare in the New Year of 1852, Collins wrote a series of six essays describing ‘Magnetic Evenings at Home’, in which he gave accounts of mesmerism and clairvoyance witnessed at that time. They were published in the Leader from 17 January 1852. Lewes, the paper’s editor, wrote a sceptical response published on 27 March.

3. George Colman, the Younger, records with amusement an unnamed old play where, according to a the fifth-act stage direction, the repentant miser ‘leans against the wall, and grows generous’ (Random Records, London: Colburn & Bentley, 1830, II p. 171).

[3272] TO WILLIAM CULLENFORD,<sup>1</sup> 31 MARCH 1852

MS: Morrab (Cornish Special Collection, C914.2370481 SP), pasted into a copy of the second edition (1852) of Rambles Beyond Railways. Published: A&C10, p. 3.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park
March 31st 1852

Sir,

I shall be happy to take a Ticket for the Dinner of the General Theatrical Fund, on the 5th of April.<sup>2</sup>

I remain, Sir, | Your obt servt | W. Wilkie Collins
To Wm Cullenford Esq

---

1. William Cullenford (d. 1874), co-founder in 1839 of the Royal General Theatrical Fund and Secretary from 1845 to 1873 (Wendy Trewin, The Royal General Theatrical Fund, London: The Society for Historical Research, 1989).

2. The Fund records the following donations by WC: 1 gn on the evening of 5 April 1852, 5 gns on 4 April 1863, and 10 gns on 12 April 1865 when he took the chair. WC’s bank account – which was opened in 1860 – records two payments to the Fund, of 5 gns on 1 April 1863 and of £15-9s on 15 April 1865 (Coutts: WC).

[0124] TO J. T. MARSH, 1 APRIL 1852

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 69–70.

17, Hanover Terrace | April 1/52 /

My dear Sir /

I see by the Table of Contents in this month's "Miscellany", that my friend's story from the French ("The Midnight Mass") does not form part of the new number. I understood from Mr George Bentley that it was accepted. I presume it will be inserted next month; and, in that case, I should like to see a "proof" of it, before you go to press.<sup>1</sup>

Will you let me know for certain, when the article will appear?

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | J T Marsh Esqre

---

1. The translation in fact appeared in the June issue of Bentley's Miscellany. The following cryptic remarks are found in another hand on the letter MS: '[a/e] to Agreement Bancroft /' and '([pf] week in May)'

[0125] TO J. T. MARSH, 6 APRIL 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, p. 70.

17, Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | Tuesday,

My dear Sir /

I have no copy of the Second Edition of "Rambles".<sup>2</sup> Can you afford to give me two copies? and will you send them here, the first time one of your messengers is coming this way?

Thank you for letting me know about the rate of pay for the translation. I hope we shall have it in the May number.<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Addressee and date based on the assumption that Marsh has replied to [0124] to him of Thursday 1 April, and that WC now writes back again.

2. Published back in early January 1852 – see [0098] to Richard Bentley of [6 December] 1851.

3. 3. 'The Midnight Mass' appeared only in the June number. On behalf of the anonymous translator, WC received £5-5s for the ten pages, which was rather lower than the rate of £10-10s per sheet of 16 pages which he himself was typically paid (BL Add. 46652, ff. 163–5).}

[0126] TO GEORGE BENTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 19 APRIL 1852

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, pp. 114, 160. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 70–71.

17, Hanover Terrace | Monday

Dear Mr Bentley,

In the Melodrama phrase, "Some mysterious fatality hangs over me",<sup>2</sup> in regard to your Wednesday evenings, this year! I had hardly put down my engagement with you for Wednesday next, before I was summoned to a private, evening rehearsal of some scenes of the Guild Play, "on the 21st." Forster will not be able to act at Birmingham on our next trip; and we are about to supply his place on that occasion, out of our own company instead of getting a professional actor to do the work.<sup>3</sup> This renders a little rehearsing necessary, with the new man; and as I have some scenes with him, beginning with the first scenes in the play, I am obliged to be present, at the very beginning of the evening. Any other engagement, I could have put off; but this is imperative, I am afraid. I was just about to write to you on the subject when I received your kind letter of this morning.

Under these circumstances, I am obliged again (with very sincere regret) to ask you to let me put off my next Wednesday's engagement. But, on Wednesday week, nothing short of a convulsion of Nature, or a supernatural interposition at the gates of the Regents Park, shall prevent me from availing myself of your general invitation, and coming to the Conversazione – I enjoy such pleasant friendly gatherings as yours too much to miss them if I can possibly help it.

My brother desires me to thank you for your kind invitation to him, and to ask you to extend the same indulgence to him that you give to me. He will be delighted (with your permission) to accompany me to New Burlington Street, on the evening of Wednesday week.

With kind regards | Believe me (in Great haste)

Very truly yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | George Bentley Esq

---

1. George Bentley (1828–95: ODNB), publisher and editor, son of Richard Bentley. He had entered his father's publishing office in New Burlington Street at the age of seventeen and took control in 1867 after his father was involved in a serious railway accident.

2. Collins later uses a similar phrase twice in 'The Monkton's of Wincott Abbey', in Fraser's Magazine, 52 (1855): 'warns me to escape from the fatality which hangs over our race' (November, p. 500) and 'The fatality hangs over my head no longer' (December, p. 671).

3. The summons came from CD: John Tenniel was to play the role of Hardman in place of CD's close friend and literary adviser, the journalist and biographer John Forster (1812–76: ODNB), in the performances of Not So Bad as We Seem at Birmingham on 12–13 May (see CD to Frank Stone, 15 April 1852, Pilgrim, VI, p. 643).

[0127] TO JOHN CHAPMAN,<sup>1</sup> 3 MAY 1852

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 71–72.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | Monday evening – May 3rd

Sir,

I have just received your Circular of the 30th April, from Mr Bentley.

As I heartily concur in the object of the proposed Meeting, it will give me much pleasure to be present at it (with your permission) tomorrow night.<sup>2</sup>

I remain, Sir, | Your obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins

To | John Chapman Esquire

---

1. John Chapman (1821–94), publisher and editor of the Westminster Review, which he purchased in 1851.

2. The public meeting called by Chapman on 4 May 1852 was a rally attacking the restrictive practices of the Booksellers' Association, which were supported by conservatives like Murray and Longman and opposed by liberals like Bentley and Chapman. The meeting was chaired by CD, attended by WC, and statements of support were read from Carlyle, Gladstone and Mill, among other authors. The conflict had earlier been submitted to the arbitration of Lord Campbell, who on 19 May gave a decision in favour of the free-traders, which led to the disbanding of the Association on 28 May. See James J. Barnes, Free Trade in Books (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1964), ch. 2. Chapman's own views had been expressed in a lengthy article on 'The Commerce of Literature', Westminster Review, 57 (April 1852), pp. 511–554, reprinted as a pamphlet entitled Cheap Books and How to Get Them.

[0128] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 12 MAY 1852

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/28). Published: B&C, I, pp. 86–87. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 72.

Hen and Chickens Hotel | (This is the true name!) | Birmingham<sup>1</sup>

My dear Mother,

A rainy morning, and a little spare time give me an opportunity of reporting progress. We expected little from the Shrewsbury audience, and were most agreeably disappointed. More intelligent and appreciating people we have never acted to. The morning after the Play, we all breakfasted with Mr Clement,<sup>2</sup> ~~the~~ the gentleman who [del] took on himself the whole arrangement of the acting. A glorious old house – a magnificent view from the terrace – a grand champagne breakfast, and a roomful of Shrewsbury Ladies and Gentlemen [del] to receive us. What with the Champagne, and the compliments, and the Ladies breakfasting in gorgeous bonnets and shawls, I felt as if I had been at a wedding, by the time we started from Shrewsbury for this place. Here we found the ladies – and a very jovial and /delightfully/ ungenteel evening we all had last night. Half the members of the Guild Company,<sup>7</sup> turned out, under “pressure of circumstances” to be very expert and astounding conjurors. Mr Coote<sup>3</sup> (the Duke of Devonshires [sic] band-master) who is with us, accompanied on the piano-forte – in short, of all the successful impromptu parties that ever were, this ~~has~~ was the most successful.

Tonight our first performance at Birmingham takes place – tomorrow the second,<sup>4</sup> – and, after that, /on Friday morning,/ we go to Stratford on Avon and Kenilworth. I cannot say yet, what time we shall get back on Saturday – I dare say it will be by dinner time; but, if not, don’t wait for me, and leave the door on the latch, when you go to bed. However, I will write again, and tell you something more definite before Saturday.

With love to Charley | ever yours | W.W.C.

-
1. Dating from the Guild Company performances of Bulwer Lytton’s Not So Bad as We Seem etc. at Birmingham.
  2. The surgeon William John Clement (1804–1870) of Shrewsbury, then town councillor, and later mayor and MP; see note 1 to CD to him, 18 September 1851, Pilgrim, VI, p. 484.
  3. Charles Coote (1807–1879), musician and composer, the Duke of Devonshire’s pianist; see note 6 to CD to him, 25 September 1851, Pilgrim, VI, p. 493–94.
  4. For the contemporary reception of their performances at Shrewsbury and Birmingham, see notes 2 and 4 to CD to the Duke of Devonshire, 17 May 1852, Pilgrim, VI, pp. 672–673.

[0129] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 7 JULY 1852

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/29), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, p. 87. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 72–73.

17, Hanover Terrace | Wednesday –

My dear Mother,

I am glad to hear that you could travel comfortably by second class – I cannot. I must either pay 1st Class fare, or defer the pleasure of going to Southsea.

Henry Bullar dined and slept here on Monday night. He came from Basset to ask you to go there. I told him of your intention; and he said Mrs Bullar (who is now at Basset) would write to you.<sup>2</sup>

Three Circulars and a tax paper have come for you – nothing else. For Charley only one letter hitherto, from Thomas Price, sending back his proposal and giving him up – in accordance with his own desire – as a customer at the new Insurance Shop.<sup>3</sup> This letter of course I have not forwarded.

George Thompson is in town, and dines here today with Charles Ward. His wife made a miscalculation – she is quite well, and still cheerfully waiting to answer the bell when Nature rings.<sup>4</sup>

The picture from Mrs Thompsons (York Terrace) has come for Charley, and is placed in the painting-room. As a representation of three ladies, in liquor, trying to look sober and not succeeding – it deserves the highest praise.<sup>5</sup>

No friends of Charley’s or yours have called. The cupboard is always locked – the key is always in my breeches-pocket. I have ordered a leg of lamb and a gooseberry pudding. I got up this morning at a quarter to ten – I gave “Chops” a thrashing at half past, for trying to steal milk off the breakfast table;<sup>6</sup> and I am

With love to Charley and the ladies

Your affectionate son | W Wilkie Collins

Charles Otter has written to know what train you left by. He sent his clerk to Waterloo Station at 1. to give you a parcel to take to Eastlands – the clerk did not find you – and Otter is afraid therefore that the clerk is an ass

-
1. Initialled and directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Miss Otter | Eastlands | Southsea | Hants’, with postmark obscured, but endorsed ‘PORTSMOUTH | JY 7 | 1852’. HC and CAC were then staying with their old family friends the Otters in Hampshire.
  2. Basset Wood near Southampton was the family home of the Bullars.
  3. Thomas Price seems to have been an old acquaintance – he is also mentioned in letters to HC of 14 August 1850

[0077] and 29 July 1853 [0149], as well as [0095] to Edward Pigott of 22 November 1851 and [0191] to him of 21 January 1855.

4. George Agar Thompson (1824–1860) was the only son of John Thompson, MD, the long-standing evangelical friend of the Collins family (see [0001] to HC, 17 October 1831). In 1846 George had resigned as ensign of the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders and married Ellen Elizabeth Ann Newton, daughter of the Rev. Alfred Padley of Bulwell Hall, Nottinghamshire. Her miscalculation must have been minor, as the couple's second child and first son, Agar Padley, was baptized at Albury, near Guildford, on 27 July 1852.

5. Apparently no relation of George, Mrs Thompson of 11 York Terrace, a short walk away from Hanover Terrace across Regent's Park, has not been otherwise identified.

6. Chops was presumably a cat or other household pet at Hanover Street.

[0130] TO [J. T. MARSH], 14 JULY 1852

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 73–74.

17. Hanover Terrace | 14th July 1852

My dear Sir,

I will bring you my article for the August number on the 16th – certainly not later than the 17th. It will be about 12 pages, I think.<sup>1</sup>

Perhaps you will be able to give me some answer by that time about my friends Mss which was under judgement, when I last saw you –<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. 'Nine O'Clock!', a short story set in the French Revolution, which appeared in Bentley's Miscellany, 32 (August 1852), pp. 222–234; reprinted for the first time in Thompson, pp. 89–101.

2. Both article and friend remain untraced – though this may well again be the translator of 'The Midnight Mass'. See [0120] to Marsh of 11 March 1852.

[0131] TO E. M. WARD,<sup>1</sup> APRIL 1851–JULY 1852<sup>2</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), folded and directed.<sup>3</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 34 (dated [1850–5]); BGLL, I, p. 74.

17. Hanover Terrace | Wednesday Morning

My dear Ned /

Are you and Mrs Ward disengaged tonight? And, if you are, would you like a ticket to The French Play?<sup>4</sup> – I expect to have two Stall tickets sent here at, or about, 7 o'Clock this evening, and will send or bring them to you, if you would like to go. Just send a message, in answer to this letter, and believe me

Ever yours | W. Wilkie Collins

P.S. | The stalls have been already written for – so there is little or no chance that they will fail me. Do you think it worth dressing for?

---

1. Edward (Ned) Matthew Ward (1816–79: ODNB), painter of historical subjects, younger brother of Charles Ward and also a close friend of WC, who first met him in Rome in February 1836 (see Peters, pp. 42–43). Ned Ward was elected an associate of the Royal Academy in 1846 and a full member in 1855. In May 1848 he secretly married the sixteen-year-old Henrietta Ada Mary Ward, née Ward (1832–1924: ODNB), who became a distinguished historical painter in her own right.

2. The precise dating remains conjectural, but this must be WC's earliest surviving letter to Ned Ward. The dating of the letter is limited initially by WC's arrival at Hanover Terrace (in September 1850) and the Wards' removal to Slough (by late 1852 at the latest – see [0142] to E. M. Ward of 5 January 1853). For further refinement of the dating, see the notes below.

3. To 'E.M. Ward Esqre A.R.A. | 33. Harewood Square', without stamp or postmark. Harewood Square, which disappeared at the end of the nineteenth century to make way for Marylebone Station, stood in the Parish of Christ Church, Marylebone, only a few minutes' walk from WC's residence.

4. This must be part of one of the regular seasons of original French drama performed from 1842–54 by visiting Parisian companies at the St James's Theatre, King Street, off St James's Square, under the management of John Mitchell. These performances were regularly announced and reviewed in the Times under the heading 'The French Plays'. The reviews show that François Régnier and Charles Fechter, later close friends and colleagues of WC, were among the Parisian stars who appeared. Coverage in the Times also indicates that the relevant seasons ran from 5 April to 28 June 1850, from 28 April to 22 August 1851 and from 16 February to 14 July 1852. Given the problems of dating the letter, the particular performance in question here cannot be ascertained, but it must belong to the season of either 1851 or 1852.

[0132] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 25 AUGUST 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/30). Summary: B&C, I, p. 88. Published: BGLL, I, p. 75.

Royal Hotel | Derby | Wednesday morning

My dear Mother,

My throat is very much better – almost well – It was ~~much~~ less hurt by all the speaking on Monday night than I had feared it would be. Richardson pronounced the ulcer to be much better, when I saw him on Sunday morning. I hardly feel it at all, today.

Not a good audience at Nottingham – except for the Farce. The Comedy went very heavily until the drunken scene.<sup>2</sup> But it is immensely improved by the compression – the story is cleared of obscurities – and the situations at the end of each act are far better. Here, the parsons have been preaching against us. One reverend gentleman, we hear, solemnly adjured his flock, all through last Sunday evening’s sermon, not to compromise their salvation by entering our Theatre. Considering that we do not act on Sunday evening, and that congregations are to let on week days, these parsonic prohibitions seem slightly unreasonable. However, we have a very fair audience of sinners and shall make money in spite of the saints –<sup>3</sup>

Love to Charley – I will write again, soon –
yours affectionately | W.W.C.

---

1. The dating is suggested by the reference to a sore throat, returned to in [0133] to HC of 1 September 1852.

2. Again referring to the performances in aid of the Guild of Literature and Art – the Farce being Mark Lemon’s Mr Nightingale’s Diary and the Comedy Bulwer-Lytton’s Not So Bad As We Seem.

3. Curiously CD plays down the opposition they met – see Pilgrim, VI, p. 745.

[0133] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 SEPTEMBER 1852

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/31). Summary: B&C, I, p. 88. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 75–76.

Royal Hotel | Manchester | 1st September 1852

My dear Mother,

I have just ten minutes before Rehearsal to write and tell you that my sore throat of a week since, has become as smooth again as I could possibly desire. I have a cold in the head now – but I am used to that, and think it of no consequence whatever.

The Comedy has been brilliantly successful everywhere. Tonight we try the two new Plays.<sup>1</sup> I will bring back a newspaper report of the performance if I can possibly get one.

The kindness of the Miss Brandlings during my stay with them at Newcastle, was beyond all acknowledgement. The eldest is the cleverest and the most agreeable woman I think I ever met with – all the elegance and vivacity of a Frenchwoman – and all the sincerity and warm heartedness of an Englishwoman. How it is she has never been married, is beyond all imagination!<sup>2</sup>

We shall return, as originally arranged on Saturday. Early in the week after, I go (with Egg)<sup>3</sup> to stay with Dickens at Dover.

I have no time to write more. | Love to Charley.
Yours affectionately | W.W.C.

---

1. According to the enthusiastic notice in the Manchester Guardian, 4 September 1852, p. 7d–e, the two new Guild plays were Charles Mathew’s comedy Used Up, in which WC acted the part of James, and J. R. Planché’s Charles XII, where he played the burgomaster Triptolemus Muddleworth.

2. With his wife Mary Jaques, Robert William Brandling of Low Gosforth, Northumberland, from a wealthy coal and railway family (Lycett, p. 79), seems to have had nine children, five girls and four boys; the eldest child was Mary (b. 1807) and the youngest Emma Elizabeth (b. 1826), who is mentioned in [0076] to HC of 3 August 1850. WC's friend Henry Brandling, the illustrator of Rambles beyond Railways, was the second youngest.

3. Augustus Egg (1816–63: ODNB), RA, painter of historical and contemporary subjects, who had introduced WC to CD.

[0134] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 9 SEPTEMBER 1852

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/32). Published: B&C, I, p. 89. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 76.

10. Camden Crescent | Dover | Thursday<sup>1</sup>

My dear Mother,

Forward all my letters to “care of Charles Dickens Esqre” at the above address. We received the kindest and heartiest welcome here. The house fronts the sea and is within a minute’s walk of baths and bathing machines. I have had my first dip today, and feel all the better for it.

The sea air acts on me as if it was /all/ distilled from laudanum. I was actually glad to go to bed last night at a 1/4 past 10! We breakfast at 10 minutes past eight – after breakfast Dickens goes into his study, and is not visible again till two, when he is available for every pleasant social purpose that can be imagined, for the rest of the [del] day. Dinner at 1/2 past 5 – and bed between 10 and eleven. Such is the life here – as pleasant a life by the seaside as it is possible to lead.

I shall get to work tomorrow, and finish and correct my book in a week, I hope. If good ideas are as infectious as bad, the end of the novel – written in this house – ought to be the best part of it. Dickens anticipates a fortnight of the very hardest work to make up for time lost in our last trip.<sup>2</sup> The visitors here are getting used to him now. But when he first came, they used to wait to waylay him every morning – and have a good long stare at the “Great man” ~~on~~ as he went to his bath!

Write and tell me any news there is, and how Charley is going on. I am getting money here, as well as health, a six shilling “pool” passed into my fortunate pocket last night.<sup>3</sup>

Affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from [0133] to HC, 1 September 1852, which suggests that WC will go to stay with CD in Dover early in the week beginning Monday, 6 September.

2. WC was correcting Basil and Dickens writing Bleak House.

3. Probably referring to a card betting game such as Loo in which the ‘pool’ represents the combined bidding contributions of those playing.

[0135] TO CHARLES WARD, 16 SEPTEMBER 1852

MS: Harrowby (ff. 75–6). Published: B&C, I, pp. 90–91. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 76.

10. Camden Crescent | Dover | September 16th 1852

My dear Ward,

In bed at 1/2 past 10 – up at 7 – ten mile walk every day. What do you think of that for W.W.C., of late-hours-and-no-exercise-notoriety? I am in a state of the rudest health and hardest fat, already!

Oh the “Dook” the “Dook”! How they will write about him! how they have written about him already! What sort of funeral will it be I wonder? Military I suppose. If they don’t keep it simple, and free from all the damnable tomfooleries of plumes, black velvet, and undertakers – it will be a public failure with all of the public who are worth making an impression on.<sup>1</sup>

I have done the book – really done it, down to writing the memorable word “End.” In a week more, I shall most likely be back to put the Mss in Bentley’s hands. Vol 2 will run to 350 pages, unless they print close.<sup>2</sup>

The walks about this place are really lovely, and more varied than any other walks by the sea side that I can remember anywhere. Inland, you get to copses, fields, lanes, downs, villages – scenery, in short, that looks as if it might be /a hundred/ miles away from the coast. The views along the cliffs, I need say nothing about – they, as you may imagine, are all magnificent. We are going to the ruined monastery of S<sup>t</sup> Radegonde, this morning.<sup>3</sup> What a place for you to wreak your antiquarian frenzy on!

The lunch bell has just rung. So I have only time to send my remembrances to Jane – to hope all the children are well – and to “undersign” myself

Ever truly yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Arthur Wellesley, first Duke of Wellington (1769–1852), died on 14 September 1852 and was buried with great pomp and ceremony at St. Paul’s Cathedral on 18 November – see the contemporary reports and engravings in the Illustrated London News.

2. WC finished Basil on 15 September 1852 and delivered it to Bentley on 1 October 1852, who published it in 3 vols., of 300, 304, 302 pages respectively, on 16 November 1852. The novel is dedicated to Charles Ward.

3. The Abbey near Dover founded in 1191 in honour of Saint Radegund (c. 520–587), the daughter of Berthaire, King of Thuringia, who was born at Erfurt and buried at Poitiers.

[0136] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 16 SEPTEMBER 1852

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 76–77.

10. Camden Crescent | Dover | September 16th 1852

My dear Edward /

The Slips from the Leader were forwarded to me here, this morning – They are sure to do the paper good – especially on the subject of Red Republicanism – Your disclaimer is candid and complete; and takes away all excuse for any future misinterpretation of your principles and motives, in treating political topics.<sup>1</sup> As to Socialism – I would suggest being still more explicit; for the sake of that large portion of the intelligent public who don’t know exactly what Socialists want – I should like to see Socialism reduced to “articles” or “points” – to a practical statement in the plainest and fewest words of ~~precisely~~ what Socialism wants to achieve – unaccompanied by reflections, comparisons, or vindications of any kind – I think an article of this sort might do good, as a plain straightforward avowal of faith – confined to such narrow limits, as to ensure the reader’s attention to the end. Long articles and serial letters won’t do at first with the people you want to teach.

Our life here is as healthy and happy as life can be – Work in the morning – long walks – sea-bathing – early hours – famous meals – merry evenings – make up the various fuel with which we feed the fire of life. Following the example of my host, I have been working hard since my arrival here; and have really finished my hitherto interminable book. Yesterday morning I wrote those two last welcome words “The End”; and today, I feel as if I had really achieved something wonderful in only getting rid of my own little trumpery responsibility.<sup>2</sup> If the good wishes of my kind friends here could only be comfortably settled behind the waistcoat of King Public, my venture would be a magnificent success indeed!

All the flags in Dover are half-mast high, in mourning for the poor old “Dook”.<sup>3</sup> I shudder to think of the deluge of diurnal writing about him which is likely to overwhelm us. Yesterday’s Times let loose the waters with a Vengeance – 21 Columns of Memoir! and more promised for tomorrow.

I shall be back in town to bargain with my “imminent publicator”, in about a week, I think – and then propose correcting the proofs at Weston. We dont publish till the end of October

Ever yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. See the Leader Saturday 18 September 1852.

2. Basil, WC’s first novel set in modern times. See [0139] to Bentley, 1 October 1852, concerning the delivery of the manuscript to him. The novel was published on 16 November 1852. CD was writing Bleak House for publication in monthly parts.

3. The Duke of Wellington died on 14 September 1852, aged 83.

[0137] TO HARRIET COLLINS, [23 SEPTEMBER] 1852

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/33), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 89–90 (dated [16 September 1852]).
Summary: BGLL, I, p. 77.

10 Camden Crescent | Dover | Thursday morning<sup>2</sup>

My dear Mother,

I have fixed Saturday next as the day of my return – the hour I can't certainly inform you about. If I return travel by the Express, I shall not start till 1/2 past 7 in the evening – and not get to Hanover Terrace till 11 o'clock at night. At any rate, don't wait dinner for me, and leave the door on the latch when you go to bed.

My excellent friends here have had an opportunity afforded them of showing me [del] even more than their usual kindness, by a bad attack of ear-ache and face-ache; which I suffered from pretty acutely all last Monday and Tuesday. Mrs Dickens's remedies – a little care – and a liniment from the doctor's, have set me up again today. I feel no pain, and am going out for a walk in the sunshine.

Tell Ward, if you see him before Saturday, that I have no other excuse for not writing to him again, but excessive laziness. I hope he will accept the candour of my confession, as some mitigation of my epistolary short-comings.

You will have a glorious number of "Bleak House", on the last day of the month. Dickens read us the two first chapters as soon as he had finished them – speaking the dialogue of each character, as dramatically as if he was acting ~~it~~ his own personages; and making his audience laugh and cry with equal fervour and equal sincerity. You will find a wonderful description of a death – terribly true and /genuinely/ pathetic – [del] old Mr Turveydrop, too, is better than ever. Altogether, a famous number.<sup>3</sup>

I have written to Fribourg and Treyer to send me some snuff, by way of securing a hearty welcome for my nose, on my return. Will you put it /very tenderly/ into my Jar, as soon as it comes?

With love to Charley | Yours affectionately | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. CD's monogrammed stationery, directed to: 'Mrs Collins | 17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London.'

2. The dating is suggested by the correspondence with [0138] to Harriet Collins of [24 September] 1852.

3. Referring to the 32-page number for October 1852, comprising Chapters 23–25. The death in questions is that of Mr Gridley at the end of Chapter 24.

[0138] TO HARRIET COLLINS, [24 SEPTEMBER] 1852<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/34).<sup>2</sup> Summary: B&C, I, p. 91. Published: BGLL, I, p. 78.

10 Camden Crescent | Dover | Friday night

My Dear Mother,

Dickens has persuaded me to stay till Wednesday next, and come back by the early morning train with him. Objection to this arrangement was impossible, on every account – my own pleasure and advantage, being, as selfishly as usual, the principal items in this said account.

We have been to Canterbury today – walk there (15 miles) – back in a carriage, Cathedral white and brilliant against the brightest of blue skies – But I can't describe, I don't know what I am writing about, I am so sleepy. Give my love to Charley – remember that I am certain to be back on Wednesday – and believe me (with only one eye open and that three parts asleep)

Affectionately yours | W.W.C.

---

1. The date '1 October 1852' is suggested in pencil on the MS at Morgan, but this seems to be too late as WC was already back in London by this time – see [0139] to Richard Bentley of that date.

2. The letter is accompanied by a plain envelope which must be associated with another otherwise untraced letter – see

[0140] to HC, 2 October 1852. However, also at Morgan there is found, among other unattached envelopes without a unique MS number, between items MA 3150/88 and 3150/89, an envelope from Dickens's monogrammed stationery directed to: 'Mrs Collins | 17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London', and initialled 'W.W.C' in the lower left corner. There is no visible postmark or endorsement, but otherwise there is a good match with this letter.

[0139] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 1 OCTOBER 1852

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, pp. 122–123; BGLL, I, pp. 78–79.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | October 1st 1852

Private

My dear Sir,

I took the Mss of my new story of modern Life to your house yesterday; and then learnt that you had left town, and would not return till Saturday. As I am not certain whether I can call on you tomorrow, I think it best to write to you on the subject of my book.

Some three weeks ago, in informing Mr George Bentley that the Mss was nearly ready for Press, I also told him that I should wish to receive an offer for the book from you, as I had no idea myself what to ask for it. Since that time, however, I have been staying with Mr Dickens, at Dover; and have been favoured by his advice on the subject. Under these circumstances, I think it only fair to you, to come forward at once with a proposal for the sale of the Mss.

The terms I propose then, by Mr Dickens's advice, as my ultimatum – are, Three hundred and fifty pounds (unconditionally paid), as the purchase money for the entire copyright of the book (unconditionally sold). I prefer this arrangement to all others, because it is one that can be definitely settled between us at once; and I sincerely believe that I am mentioning a perfectly fair rate of remuneration for me to ask, and for you to accord.

You will much oblige me by letting me have your answer to my proposition at your earliest convenience,<sup>1</sup> as I am engaged to visit some friends in Somersetshire, and cannot leave town till this little affair is thoroughly settled. If you agree to my terms, and think proper to send the book to Press immediately, the proofs can follow me to the country, to be always sent back corrected by return of post.

I remain, My dear Sir, | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. A copy of Bentley's reply is preserved in his Letter-book at the BL (Add. 46641, f. 252v.):

New Burlington St. | Oct 6. 1852.

My dear Sir

Agreeably to my promise I now sit down to write to you on the subject of your offer to me of the Copyright of "Basil". Your frankness shall be met by me with corresponding frankness. The sum mentioned by you for the copyright unconditionally and as your ultimatum, I confess did startle me a good deal. To give Three Hundred and Fifty Pounds for a novel in two volumes will require a much larger number of copies to be sold than any of your previous Works have sold and will leave little chance of profit to your Publisher.

Nevertheless I confess I should regard the severance of our literary connexion with sincere regret (although under any circumstances I trust the same pleasant relations would continue to subsist between us) and am therefore determined to meet you boldly provided you think fit on reflection to adopt one or two suggestions I would venture to propose to you, and that on one or two points irrespective of "Basil" you would in return meet my views.

I remain &c &c | (signed) R.B.

The publication agreement between Bentley and WC (BL Add. 46616, ff. 186–7) was dated only on 8 December 1852, assigning the entire copyright for £350, to be paid in the form of two promissory notes. The two payments of £175 were credited to HC's account on 11 February and 11 May 1853 (Coutts: Exors WmC). This contract also speaks of a novel in two volumes, although Basil eventually appeared as a triple-decker. See the full transcription at BGLL, IV, Appendix B, p. 395.

[0140] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 2 OCTOBER 1852

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/34), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 80.

Mrs Collins | 17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London | WWC

---

1. Postmark obscured, but endorsed in Weston-super-Mare: '2 OC 2 | 1852'.

[0141] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, [30 OCTOBER/6 NOVEMBER] 1852

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Extract: Davis, p. 125 (dated '[a]bout November 1'). Published: BGLL, I, p. 80.

17. Hanover Terrace | Saturday evening

My dear Sir,

I send you Volume 1 – now at last ready for press.<sup>1</sup> As I have managed the alteration now, I think the difficulty in the last chapter is got over altogether. If you will look at Folio 104, you will see that I have only mentioned “the Hotel” as a “deserted, dreary-looking building”.<sup>2</sup>

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. Referring to Basil: a Story of Modern Life, published in three volumes on 16 November 1852. This, with the calendar, determines the dating of the letter.

2. In the published version WC's initial reference to a brothel is toned down: 'The house becomes a hotel, and the prostitute a waiter' (Peters, p. 115).

[0142] TO E. M. WARD, 5 JANUARY 1853

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 36; BGLL, I, p. 80.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | January 5th 1853

My dear Ward,

It is such an age since I have seen you, and may be such another age (unless we fix a day) before I get to Slough,<sup>1</sup> that I now write boldly to invite myself. Will you let me come and dine with you on Sunday the 16th, that is to say next Sunday week? And may I bring Henry Bullar with me? We were talking of you the other day, and when I told him that I proposed going to Slough on Sunday week, he said he would like very much to accompany me

My mother and Charley – send all sorts of “kind loves” and “happy New Years”. I join them in their good wishes and remain

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

We shall travel by the first train after churchtime, I suppose, and return by the last train at night

---

1. The town in Buckinghamshire, west of London, to which the Wards had moved during 1852.

[0143] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, [31 JANUARY 1853]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 81.

17. Hanover Terrace | Monday evening

My dear Edward /

I shall be delighted to see Ravel on Saturday – whatever he does. If the “[Screamer]” is not played, he is sure to be good in anything else.<sup>2</sup> I will be at the Office at six o’Clock

We will toast the ladye of your first love at dinner, by any fancy name you please – the more sentimental the better.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | W.W.C.

Thompson has written to Charley Ward from Cape de Verde.<sup>4</sup> It is a sort of Journal of misfortunes. Would you like to see it for extracting from?

---

1. Conjectural dating based on the play – see below.

2. Pierre Alfred Ravel (1814–57), popular French comic actor at the Théâtre du Palais Royal, where he created his most celebrated role, that of Felix in L'Etourneau by Jean Bayard and Léon Laya, from 7 September 1844. The original title can mean both 'The Starling' and 'The Harebrain', and might well be rendered into English as 'The Screamer', thus retaining the bird pun. Ravel appeared regularly during the 1848 and 1853 seasons of original French plays performed in London at the St James's Theatre, during both of which L'Etourneau proved extremely popular. According to reports in the Times, in the 1853 season, Ravel performed at the St James's from Monday 31 January to around Saturday 19 March. Though the French plays were normally performed there on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays only, during this period there was 'an extra performance on the Saturdays' ('French Plays', Times, 22 January 1853, p. 8d). On Saturday 5 February at least Ravel appeared in L'Etourneau.

3. Reference unidentified – Pigott seems never to have married.

4. Given the role of Charles Ward, presumably another reference to George Agar Thompson (first mentioned in [0129] to HC, 7 July 1852), who seems to have abandoned his wife and children and headed to the gold diggings in the Australian colonies (Lycett, pp. 220–221). Before the completion of the Suez Canal in 1869, the Cape Verde Islands in the North Atlantic Ocean west of what is now Senegal, represented an important port of call on the long sea route to Australia round the Cape of Good Hope. Thompson's residence in the Melbourne area is reported in [0154] to HC, 9 October 1853, and his suicide there is recorded in [0373] to HC of 12, 13, 15 September 1860.

[0144] TO E. M. WARD, 5 FEBRUARY 1853

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 37–38; BGLL, I, p. 82.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | February 5th 1853

My dear Ward /

Where is that portable gas to be got, which came to your house while I was there?<sup>1</sup> I have forgotten the address which you told me. Also, what was the precaution to be taken in lighting it, which I heard Mr Chapman<sup>2</sup> explaining to you while he was fitting up your lamp? If you can answer these questions you will be the means of conferring a real favour on a lady of my acquaintance<sup>3</sup> who has got the lamps for the portable gas, but cannot tell where to get the gas itself.

Don't trouble yourself to write more than two lines – just the address and the precaution.

I am over head and ears in work, but I hope to see you again shortly – on a Saturday afternoon. I am going to Eton with Pigott (the editor of the Leader, whom you have met at our house, I think) – and I shall take it on myself to bring him with me for half an hour or so (on our way back) to your house. We have not settled the Saturday yet.

With kindest regards to Mrs Ward, and best love to my goddaughter and L. Ward of the medieval countenance,<sup>4</sup>

Believe me | Ever truly yours | W. Wilkie Collins

I told Dickens that you were pleased with his mention of you. He said he admired Charlotte Corday even more the second time of seeing it than the first.<sup>5</sup> I hope the new picture gets on well.<sup>6</sup>

---

1. Presumably on Sunday 16 January – see [0142] to Ward of 5 January 1853.

2. Unidentified, though presumably a servant or tradesman.

3. Unidentified, though presumably someone not resident in an urban area where piped gas would be available.

4. The Wards' children, Alice (b. 1849) and Leslie (b. 1851).

5. Ned Ward's painting 'Charlotte Corday Going to Execution' of 1852, which 'won the first Birmingham Fine Arts prize of 60 guineas' (see Pilgrim, VII, p. 80 n. 5; also VI, p. 337 n. 4). It was praised by CD as 'my friend Mr. Ward's magnificent picture' in his speech on 6 January 1853 to the Society of Artists, Birmingham – see Speeches Literary and Social by Charles Dickens, ed. R. H. Shepherd (London: Hotten, 1870).

6. Perhaps Ward's 'The Execution of Montrose', the first of eight historical subjects commissioned in 1853 for the corridor to the House of Commons.

[0145] TO F. O. WARD,<sup>1</sup> 5 MARCH 1853

MS: Rylands (Eng. MS. 341, p. 32 item 78), on thin paper. Published: BGLL, I, p. 83.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | ~~February~~ March 5th 1853

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my best thanks for the interest you have kindly taken in promoting the success of “Basil”. A copy will be sent today, direct from Bentley to the address of M. Forgues at Paris,<sup>2</sup> with a note from me enclosed. I have written it in English, presuming that M. Forgues is perfectly acquainted with “our native tongue”. I don’t mind making endless mistakes in talking French, but I never can make up my mind to write “Continental English” to a Frenchman when I can possibly avoid it.

I shall preserve a copy of Basil in my bookcase to be offered to you when you return to England – if you will oblige me by accepting it. The book has gone off pretty well hitherto – our first edition being nearly exhausted. It has been vehemently objected to as immoral (!) by some of those virtuously inflammable ladies and gentlemen of Modern Times who are gifted with particularly sharp noses for smelling out supposititious [sic] filth in particularly unlikely places. As I never have written for these people and never will, then their condemnation is infinitely more acceptable than their approval.

Believe me, | My dear sir

Yours truly and obliged | W. Wilkie Collins

To | F.O. Ward Esqre

I hope you will let me hear when we are likely to see you again in London.

---

1. Frederick Oldfield Ward (1818–77), specialist in osteology, journalist, friend of CD, G. H. Lewes, W. S. Landor and others, who was ‘familiarily known as Fow’ (Edmund Yates, Recollections and Experiences (2 vols, London, 1884), I, p. 238).

2. The first mention of Émile Forgues, an early reviewer of WC who lived in Paris, with whom WC had a long literary connection and friendship. WC later described him as ‘a gentleman, an admirable English scholar, and a translator who has not his equal in France’ (see [1531] to Reade, 31 March 1863). Forgues translated The Lighthouse, The Woman in White and No Name into French. Forgues’s essay ‘Étude sur le roman anglais’ was published in Revue des Deux Mondes in late 1855 and helped WC’s early literary reputation. WC published ‘M. Forgues and the Caricaturists of England’, Leader (25 August 1855), pp. 823–824, subsequently dedicating The Queen of Hearts (1859) to the Frenchman.

[0146] TO GERTRUDE TENNANT,<sup>1</sup> 27 APRIL 1853

MS: Clarke Collection. Published: BGLL, I, p. 84 (as to Mrs Tennant).

17. Hanover Terrace | 27th April 1853

Dear Madam /

I very much regret to say that I have a dinner engagement for this evening, and cannot therefore avail myself of your kind invitation.

With your permission, I will take the first opportunity of calling in Russell Square with my friend Mr Millais, and improving the acquaintance which you are kind enough to allow me to cultivate.

In the mean time, | I remain | Dear madam

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Mrs Tennant

---

1. Though no other social relations with the family are recorded, this must be the society hostess, Gertrude Barbara Rich Tennant, née Collier (1819–1918: ODNB), the wife of Charles Tennant (1796–1873), landowner and MP. The Tennants were long-standing residents of 62 Russell Square.

[0147] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 25 JUNE 1853<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Summary: B&C, I, p. 91. Published: BGLL, I, p. 84.

17 Hanover Terrace | Saturday 25th June

My dear Edward

It seems months since I have heard anything from you or of you – Do you still go to Weston every week?<sup>2</sup> Are you quite recovered? In what state is your father's health?<sup>3</sup> – Do let me have a line to answer these questions – or drop in here any evening you like to dinner (if you are not still passing your leisure time at home) and answer in your own proper person.

I am much better – but not strong enough yet to do more than “toddle” out for half an hour at a time with a stick. I hope soon to be able to pay some visits in the country which I have owed for a long time – and so get cured naturally by change of air.<sup>4</sup>

I have no news – having been no where, and seen but few of the “callers” in this house. My illness and long confinement have muddled my brains dreadfully – I am still in very bad trim for anything that deserves the name of work.

With kindest regards to all at the Grove (if you are now there)

Believe me | Affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the address and calendar.

2. The Pigott family home at The Grove, near Weston-super-Mare, Somerset.

3. In fact Pigott's father, John Hugh Smyth Pigott (1792–1853), was to die on the following day, 26 June. By this time the Smyth Pigott estates seem to have been considerably encumbered, and, though Edward was only the third son, it fell to him to sort out the affairs of a family which Lycett calls ‘dynamic and often spectacularly dysfunctional’ (p. 92). The heir to the estates, the eldest son John Hugh Wadham Pigott Smyth Pigott (1819–92), was the black sheep of the family. In the spring of 1852 he had been subject to a Sheriff's Court Proclamation of Outlawry for failing to respond to a suit for debt (Times, 22 May 1852, p. 7b), and the following year he failed to return to Somerset on his father's death; in late 1855, according to CD's correspondence (Pilgrim VII, pp. 757, 762), Edward was forced to rush to Genoa to prevent his ‘fugitive brother from making a mad marriage’ with a ‘Polish Jewess’ by buying her off for £600, though the prodigal eventually married an Englishwoman (Blanche Mary Arundell, 1835–91) in July 1857. Moreover, the second son, Henry Thomas Coward Smyth Pigott (1823–58), sole executor of the estate, was already showing signs of mental illness and in August 1854 was admitted to Sussex House Lunatic Asylum. The administration of the will was thus not completed until June 1858, with the effects of the deceased eventually recorded at less than £6000.

4. On WC's serious illness – ‘perhaps the first attack of the inherited “rheumatic gout” that was to plague him for the rest of his life’ – see Peters, p. 128; also [0152] to George Bentley, 17 August 1853.

[0148] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 7 JULY 1853

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/35), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, p. 92. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 84–85.

17. Hendon Terrace | Maidenhead | Thursday morning 10 minutes to 9

My dear Mother,

I have begun the great reformation.<sup>2</sup> Observe the hour above written, and know that I am dressed, and waiting for the breakfast bell – a position I never remember to have been placed in before in the whole course of my life.

Mrs Langton has given me the bedroom which looks into the garden, with a literary table and chair of irrefragable manufacture<sup>3</sup> – I look out on a madder-lake-and-flake-white- coloured rose tree about fourteen feet high, and in full bloom. The rest of the scene is in the perfection of its English summer green, except in one corner, where a peep of the arid solitudes of Mrs Langton's Bran New Alpine pass among the mountains takes the mind full gallop to Switzerland (“if you make believe very much”), and suggests savage sublimity – provided you don't catch sight of the cow, who is absurdly out of proportion with the mountain by her side, and could by no possibility meet with the slightest injury if she fell into the innermost depths of the “ravine”.

I feel better already – I take no beer – and I stop short at my three glasses of wine. This course of conduct does me I think a great deal of credit and I am therefore happy to mention it.

Please forward any letters that come for me, and write when you feel inclined. Give my kindest remembrances to Miss Otter and my love to Charley (who is hereby entreated not to forget the Bill of “Bleak House”).<sup>4</sup>

I have nothing more to say – being too hungry for reflecting about anything – except that

I am

Yours ever affectionately | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Initialed and directed 'To | Mrs Collins | 17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London', with postmark 'MAIDENHEAD | JY 7 | 1853'.
2. Following his serious illness.
3. The Langtons were family friends, with whom HC frequently stayed – see, for example, [0306] to HC of 14 July 1859 and [0357] to her of 26 July 1860.
4. The allusion escapes us – unless this is simply a reference to paying for the monthly numbers.

[0149] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 29 JULY 1853

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/36). Summary: B&C, I, p. 92. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 86–87.

Chateau des Molineaux | Rue Beaurepaire | Boulogne sur Mer July 29th 1853

My dear Mother,

I got to Boulogne without hindrance or adventure of any kind at ½ past 4, yesterday. We made the passage in two hours and a half, rolling and pitching all the way under a fresh southwest breeze. The steamer was crowded, and the company with about three exceptions were all sick the whole way across. I counted seven white basins with corresponding ghastly faces retching over them, in my immediate neighbourhood only. As usual, I escaped and enjoyed the voyage immensely – I could feel that every fresh puff of wind and spray was doing me good. The sun burst out when we were about half way across the Straits. I never saw the blue lustre of the waves more dazzlingly beautiful than it was yesterday.

Mr & Mrs Dickens, Miss Hogarth, and Mr & Mrs Leech<sup>1</sup> (who are staying here) were all on the Quay when I arrived, ready to take me to this charming place. We are entirely surrounded by trees, and look out on the old town. The house is full of quaint lively little rooms all opening into each other. The Garden includes a Swiss Cottage, a rustic Chapel and altar, a miniature chateau (called the "Chateau de Tom Pouce") and a "Pavilion" near the house, which I inhabit. My bedroom door opens at once into the garden. The window at which I am writing looks out, over a rustic balcony, towards the cupola of the never-to-be-finished Boulogne Cathedral; the whole intermediate distance being filled with trees. A more charming place for me to work in could not have been provided anywhere.<sup>2</sup>

Tomorrow we take a trip to Amiens and Beauvais, returning on Sunday evening. Dickens will go to work again on Monday morning, and I shall follow his example. I have just read the new number of Bleak House, which contains, as I think, some of the finest ~~things~~ passages he has ever written.<sup>3</sup> The better and nobler parts of Sir Leicester Dedlock's character are brought out with such pathos, delicacy, and truth to nature, as no other living writer has ever rivalled, or even approached, in my opinion.

Write to me to "care of Charles Dickens Esqre" as soon as you get to Southsea, and tell Charley, with my love, that I mean to write to Thomas Price from this place immediately – though it is no easy matter, situated as he is poor fellow, to decide how to advise him for the best. Don't forget to send your letter to Mrs Price – the address is 10 Stanhope Place, St. Leonards on Sea.<sup>4</sup>

Ever affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

I hope Charley will go with you to Miss Otter's. Mind the cook gets the right address to forward letters. W.

---

1. John Leech (1817–64: ODNB), illustrator and caricaturist, and his wife.

2. See CD's invitation to WC, 24 June 1853, Pilgrim, VII, p. 101.

3. The eighteenth number, published in August and containing chs 57–59.

4. Thomas Price and his problems have not been satisfactorily identified – though see to HC of 14 August 1850 [0077] and 7 July 1852 [0129].

[0150] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 6 AUGUST 1853

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, pp. 137–138. Published: B&C, I, p. 93. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 87.

Chateau des Molineaux | Rue Beaurepaire | Boulogne sur Mer | 6th August 1853 /

My dear Sir,

Your letter has followed me to this place, where I am rapidly getting as well again as ever under the hospitable roof of Mr Dickens, who has been staying at Boulogne with his family for some little time past. I have fixed no time yet for my return to London; but I /shall/ most likely be back in the course of next month, and shall not fail to make a call in New Burlington Street as soon as I get home.

In the mean time, in case the project to which you allude should not be of a nature to admit of delay, I can only assure you that if you will write to me on the subject, at this place, I shall be happy to give it my best consideration, and to let you know the result as early as possible.<sup>1</sup>

If I had had any personal experience of the clumsy jugglery which goes under the name of “Spirit Rapping,” I should be very glad to assist in exposing it (if it has not been already exposed enough) in the Miscellany – but I have never attended a “Séance,” or exhibition of this last new Spirit of the Age, and I cannot write /as I should wish/ on that subject, or indeed any other, without some fund of personal knowledge to draw from.<sup>2</sup> However, I hope to be of some use to you later in the year. I am going to Italy in October, to renew as many of my old local experiences as I can during a holiday trip of between two and three months. Any picturesque materials for short articles which I may pick up on my way, I shall be very glad to give you the refusal of for the Magazine.

I hope you got my card in return for the cards you sent me. The envelope was addressed to New Burlington Street. It is rather late, I am afraid, to offer you my best congratulations on your marriage; but I send them nevertheless, trusting that you will not think them the less hearty and sincere because they have been delayed.<sup>3</sup>

With best remembrances to all the members of your family

Believe me | My dear Sir | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

I corrected the Mss of the Story adapted from the French (which I mentioned to you some time since as well [del] /fitted/ for the Miscellany) before I left London. It will be sent to you as soon as the author has made a fair copy from the corrected pages<sup>4</sup>

To | George Bentley Esqre<sup>5</sup>

---

1. The details of Bentley’s proposal to reduce the price of his new publications in three volumes are revealed in [0152] to him of 17 August 1853

2. Bentley’s request comes some time after ‘Magnetic Evenings at Home’, WC’s series of articles on mesmerism and clairvoyance in the Leader from 17 January to 13 March 1852, which did not cover instances of ‘spirit rapping’.

3. Bentley had married Anne Williams of Aberystwyth on 16 June 1853 (ODNB).

4. Both adaptation and author remain untraced, though this again may well be the translator of ‘The Midnight Mass’ – see [0125] to J.T. Marsh of 14 July 1852.

5. Written at the foot of the first page.

[0151] TO CHARLES COLLINS, 12 AUGUST 1853

MS: Morgan (MA 3152/1). Published: B&C, I, pp. 94–96. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 87.

Chateau des Molineaux | Rue Beaurepaire | Boulogne sur mer | Augt 12th 1853 /

My dear Charley,

I have not much to write about, but I write nevertheless /for the sake of/ [del] answering your letter. I scrawled a wild account of our visit to Amiens and sent it to Ward, telling him to forward it to Mother, by way of sending her fresh news of me. Did he do so?<sup>1</sup> We had no time for Beauvais. I don’t believe in anything finer in the world than Amiens – which is said in the guide book to be the better of the two Cathedrals.<sup>2</sup>

Since our little trip we have not left Boulogne. Dickens has been, and is still, hard at work; and I am hardly less industrious in my smaller way. We are to have great festivities and rejoicings here the week after next, in honour of the completion of Bleak House. The publishers of the book, the illustrator, Forster, Lemon, and others are coming here. The grandest dinner is to be given that Boulogne can produce, and a pic-nic and a trip to Abbeville (to see the Cathedral ~~Abbey~~) are in contemplation to follow.<sup>3</sup>

In the meantime, we content ourselves with such diversions after work as Boulogne affords. All Fairs are dull, but there is the dullest fair ~~near~~ now going on near /us/ that I ever looked at. No shows or dancing – nothing but booths full of showily-fragile merchandise – two “roundabouts” circling slowly, always to the same organ tune – and hosts of the worst-looking English people, staring about them, that our native country can possibly produce.

The Fêtes are much better. We have had plenty. Town Fêtes and country Fêtes, like those in and around Paris – and one Fête des Enfants [sic], the prettiest and best of all. It began at ½ past 3 and ended at twelve at night – and the admission was five pence!! For this entrance fee we had provided an orchestra of 40 performers – thousands of variegated lamps to be lit as it grew dark – statues – flowers – amusements of every kind – racing in sacks, greased poles, donkey races, two balloons, fireworks and a grand lottery. The children danced on the grass with the grown people sitting round them – the trees were lighted with festoons of lamps – and round the palings outside, the general public who could’nt pay half a franc had a capital view of the proceedings within.

This Fête (which we might do well to imitate in England, if our stupid dignity would only let us) was set up by a Benevolent Society, the members of which are the briskest and pleasantest-looking doers of good actions, I ever met with. They were all employed with scarfs round their arms in directing the amusements of the Fête, the profits of which were to be given to the poor. One fat member who never ceased exerting himself, and welcoming everybody till he was in a profuse perspiration of public hospitality early in the afternoon – stood at the entrance as we went out at ten o’clock, bowing, smiling, pulling off his hat, and thanking ~~everybody~~ /us all/ for having honoured the Society with ~~their~~ our company, as fresh and unwearied to the last, as if he had been a new man sent on duty for the occasion.

There is a curious votive Chapel here – like a Methodist Meeting House outside – but different enough within. /From the/ [del] ceiling hangs a perfect fleet of models of ships in an elaborate state of rigging, all presented by fishermen who have escaped drowning when their [del] boats have been out on stormy nights. Each man too presents a hideous coloured print of a saint or martyr – hundreds of which are stuck on the walls, in grimy little wooden frames. The smell in the place, produced by the mingling fumes of multitudes of burning wax tapers, and the fishy exhalations from the garments of worshipping women from the coast, was too much for my acute organ of smell, and drove me out into the fresh air before I had looked at half the sacred Roman Catholic frippery with which the inside of the chapel is decorated from floor to ceiling.

How is your leg? And is mother getting well and strong again? Ask her with my best love, how she got on in the great negotiation for [del] Peace, which she was about to attempt in the morning when I left home between those hostile clans – the Wards of Upton Park and the Wards of Fitzroy Square?<sup>4</sup> Talking of hostility reminds me of marriage, and that of John Sleigh.<sup>5</sup> Send him my congratulations, and say I wish him long life and loads of children. He is one of those fresh-complexioned men with a low forehead and a meek character, who always take kindly to the institution of marriage. He will get domestic happiness, a large paunch, and a numerous family in the enjoyment of which advantages he will live respected and die happy. And there is an end for the present of my friend Sleigh.

I must leave off and dress. We are going to dine today with Frank Stone,<sup>6</sup> who is here with all his family – in a comfortable country house at the top of a hill.

With love to mother and best regards to Miss Otter

Ever affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

The weather is lovely – glorious sunshine and cool air. I go on very well, except my legs, which are not as strong yet as they ought to be.

Thank you for forwarding the letters. They both wanted answers.<sup>7</sup>

-
1. The letter referred to has not been traced.
  2. The cathedral towns of Amiens and Beauvais are respectively around 125 and 180 kilometers south of Boulogne on the road towards Paris.
  3. The cathedral town of Abbeville is around 80 kilometers south of Boulogne on the road towards Paris.
  4. WC refers to the continuing dispute between the two unrelated Ward families over the secret marriage between Edward Matthew Ward (1816–1879: ODNB) and Henrietta Mary Ada Ward (1832–1924: ODNB), when he was 31 and she was still a month short of 16. The Wards of Fitzroy Square were the parents of Henrietta – George Raphael Ward and his wife Mary (née Webb). The Wards of Upton Park were Charles James Ward, who was a clerk at Coutts' Bank, and his wife Mary (née Ford), the parents of WC's friends Edward and Charles. Edward had taught Henrietta painting since her ability became clear at the age of 11 or 12, and at the age of 30 he proposed to the 14½ year old who accepted. Her parents demanded a two-year wait before they could marry. But the couple forestalled that by a secret marriage at All Souls, Langham Place on 4 May 1848, assisted and witnessed by WC. On 2 August that year they ran away in secret for a honeymoon, again assisted by WC. The dispute between the families went on for years, and Henrietta later wrote, 'My mother never really forgave me' – see Ward, pp. 32–50 (ch. III, 'My Great Romance').
  5. Probably John Sleight (1826–1907), student of the Inner Temple from November 1850, called to the bar in January 1854. He was born at Leek, Staffordshire, married Margaret Petty at Ulverston, Lancashire, on 27 July 1853, and died at Southsea, Hampshire. In the 1851 Census, he was listed as a Member of the Inner Temple aged 24, resident at 25 St James Street, Westminster, with his mother and older sister.
  6. WC's fellow actor in the Guild plays, Frank Stone (1800–1859: ODNB), artist – see note 2, CD to him, 24 June 1855, Pilgrim, VII, p. 100.
  7. WC writes this second postscript sloping diagonally downwards above the salutation on the first page of the letter.

[0152] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 17 AUGUST 1853

MS: Berg. Extract: Griest, pp. 67–68. Published: Davis, pp. 139–140; BGLL pp. 87–89.

Chateau des Moulineaux | August 17th 1853 /

My dear Sir,

I am delighted to hear that your house is about to lead the way in lowering the present extravagantly absurd prices charged for works of fiction. I should be inclined to doubt the propriety of still adhering to the three volume form, if I did not believe that you know the "Manners and Customs" of Librarians much better than I do and are able to calculate much better than I can on the increase of sale among the Libraries generally, which is likely to be produced by the decrease in prices. Waiving therefore any doubts on this point, in deference to your superior experience, I heartily wish the new experiment, what I believe (if properly supported by really good works) it will certainly obtain – encouraging and genuine success.<sup>1</sup>

And now, to turn to the proposal you are kind enough to make to me. I have an objection to the "half-profit" system of publication, which it is needless to refer to here, but which disinclines me to treat for my new book on that plan.<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, I should not think of asking you, at the commencement of your experiment of reduction in prices, to commit yourself to any such speculation as the purchase of the copyright of the Mss. on which I am now engaged.<sup>3</sup> The arrangement I should propose to you would take a middle place between these two extremes, and would not be of a nature to expose you to run any risk or venture on any outlay to me, except such as your own lowest scale of calculations will, I believe, abundantly justify. I do not mention the arrangement to which I allude in detail in this letter, because we shall have ample time to talk it over when I return to town in September or at the beginning of October, previous to my departure for Italy.

The only real difficulty that I see in our way at present, has been produced by my illness. I lost two months work while I was under the doctor's hands, and the consequence is that only half of my book is now ready for Press. The remaining half cannot possibly be completed (with my slow progress as a workman when I am writing for my reputation) before I start for the Continent. In fact, when I return at Christmas, or a week before, I expect to have the larger half of my third volume still left to finish. Will not this unavoidable delay make me too late to occupy the foremost place in leading the new experiment which I should, otherwise, be glad and proud to take?

However, whether I am in time for your first start or not, you shall have the first sight of my Mss. – of the two volumes if you like, which I shall bring home with me from this place, completed. I am piping quite a new tune this time, and expect to make the readers of Antonina and Basil prick up their ears, and at least allow that I have given them some fresh variations which they did not expect from me

I remain, My dear Sir, | Very faithfully yours, | W. Wilkie Collins
To | George Bentley Esq

1. From 3 October 1853 (p. 13e), the following notice appeared in the columns of the Times:

NOTICE. – All New Novels, at one-third of the Present Price. To all Booksellers and Circulating Libraries in Town and Country. – Mr. Bentley begs to inform the trade that from and after the 1st of October, 1853, he will ISSUE all his NEW NOVELS and ROMANCES at one third of the price hitherto charged for them; that is, if the work be in three volumes it will be charged at 10s-6d; two volumes 7s.; one volume, 3s-6d. The works will still be produced in the same manner as before, and all the usual allowances to the trade will be continued. Mr Bentley looks for repayment of his enterprise in the increased circulation of his novels. – New Burlington-street, October 1.

Bentley's notice in the Times for 15 October 1853 (p. 10c) added the following note: 'Mr. Wilkie Collins' "Basil," 3 vols, and "Cyrilla," by the Author of the "Initials," 3 vols, are included in this new arrangement'.

2. Bentley's financial difficulties, which encouraged him to offer profit-sharing agreements to many of his authors around this time, are described in Gettmann, pp. 23–26.

3. Hide and Seek – in the event not published until June 1854.

[0153] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 SEPTEMBER 1853

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/37). Published: B&C, I, pp. 96–97. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 89.

Chateau des Moulineaux | Rue Beaurepaire | September 1st 1853

My dear Mother,

The festivities of our week of rejoicing are all over, and the guests all gone, except Wills and his wife.<sup>1</sup> We stuck to our gaieties in defiance of [del] the /incessant/ rain that tried to quench them – actually lurching one day on a high road in a heavy shower. I was in the carriage, Dickens and Miss Hogarth were walking, and our visitors and the young ladies were on horseback – the Stones bringing up the procession with their carriageful, in the rear.<sup>2</sup> We blocked up the whole road, and enjoyed our pic-nic in the rain, as much as you enjoyed yours in the sunshine. Marvellous to state nobody came down to breakfast the next morning with a bad cold.

“The grand-dinner” (which Dickens had pledged himself should be the best that Boulogne could supply) was a banquet to make a classical epicure's mouth water. The table was charmingly decorated with flowers, and a nosegay was placed by each guests [del] napkin. As for the dishes, I say nothing; having preserved my Bill of fare, as a memorable document for my family to peruse when I come home. Talking of dinners Miss Coutts has been here on her way to Auvergne.<sup>3</sup> She and her [del] “companion” and her “companion's” husband,<sup>4</sup> and Sir James Kay Shuttleworth,<sup>5</sup> who is travelling with them, all dined here; and we all dined [del] with them at their Hotel the day after. Miss Coutts (if she did not possess a farthing [del] I should write, and think, the same of her) is really, and not conventionally, a very “charming person”. I never saw a more gentle and winning manner than her's.

I have just heard some news which will shorten my letter, by changing my plans here. I shall be back earlier than I expected, to make my preparations for our Italian Tour. An important meeting of the Guild is arranged for Friday the 9th. Dickens will leave for London on Tuesday the 6th. Wills and his wife go also on that day; and I shall join the party. Instead of starting for Italy on the 20th of October, we shall start on the 10th. What day I shall return here, [del] before we set out on our journey, I don't know yet. But I think I can say safely that (wind and weather permitting) I shall be in Hanover Terrace on the evening of Tuesday the 6th. So if you and Charley are not in town then, you can write to the servants to tell them of my proposed arrival. If I am not home before their usual time of going to bed, they need not expect me; for the Train is due in London at a quarter past six P.M.

Under any circumstances I must have returned to Town – not only on on [sic] account of my passport and money – but also on account of Bentley. From whom I have had a letter about my new book, which will oblige me to settle matters about publication with him in New Burlington Street. I have not even done the 2nd volume yet;<sup>6</sup> but he has a new project for issuing /his/ ~~future~~ publications; and wishes to make a bargain with me for the future (that is, the winter) in reference to it, before he completes his plans and makes them public.

Shall you be back in London on the 6th? or away at the Langtons'? or still at Miss Otters [sic]? I should like to know your arrangements, [del] when I get back. [del] Don't disturb them on my account, but only let me know what they are.

With love to Charley believe me ever affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins
I have all sorts of kind invitations here but can't settle, till I've seen Bentley

---

1. William Henry Wills (1810–1880: ODNB), working editor, manager and joint proprietor of Household Words and All The Year Round, who in 1846 had married Janet Chambers (1812–1892), the youngest sister of William and Robert Chambers, the Edinburgh publishers.

2. Frank Stone, his wife Elizabeth, and their several children, the eldest Ellen being then around seventeen.

3. Angela Georgina Burdett-Coutts (1814–1906: ODNB), friend of Dickens who shared his philanthropic work. She inherited the controlling shares in Coutts & Co., where WC and Dickens had accounts. See Dickens, Pilgrim, I, p. 559 n. X, and Edna Healey, Coutts and Co., 1692–1992: The Portrait of a Private Bank (1992).

4. Referring to Angela Burdett-Coutts's former governess Hannah Meredith, a woman of strong evangelical beliefs whose husband from 1844, William Brown, acted as the heiress's resident and travelling physician until his death in 1855.

5. Sir James Kay Shuttleworth (1804–77: ODNB), educational and social reformer, the son of a wealthy dissenting cotton merchant.

6. Of Hide and Seek.

[0154] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 9 OCTOBER 1853

MS: Pembroke, in CD's blue ink. Summary: B&C, I, pp. 97–98. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 89–90.

Boulogne | Sunday morning

My dear Mother,

I write to tell you that we hope to be in Lausanne, in Switzerland, on this day week, and that your first letter, giving me news of yourself and Charley and of any letter that may have arrived, must be sent to meet me there, directed to the Poste Restante. You had better write soon after you receive this, so as to insure the arrival of your letter before Sunday next.

I enclose a letter to George Thompson (which I had not time to write, while at home). Put it in an envelope and direct it to him at Post Office Melbourne, Australia – paying the postage.<sup>1</sup> Or, give it to Charles Ward (who is better I hope, and to whom I beg my kindest remembrances) to send with Coutts's letters.

We start for Paris at ½ past 12, tomorrow, dine with Miss Coutts on Tuesday, leave Paris on Wednesday morning by railway for Strasbourg, thence, again by Railway to Basle, and from Basle we take a carriage to Lausanne – a three days drive. After Lausanne, the Pass of the Simplon – Milan – and Genoa. So much for our plans, as at present arranged.<sup>2</sup>

Do you remember, or did you ever know, a certain Angus Fletcher?<sup>3</sup> He dined here yesterday – a harmless madman, who was much with Dickens at Genoa, and began life as a sculptor. He knew Wilkie and my father well, and received me with open arms the moment I mentioned my name to him.

Mark Lemon is coming today to dine, and see us off on Monday. Dickens's new courier is a German – young – and of intensely gentlemanlike manners and appearance. He seems to know his business well and promises to be thoroughly useful to us.<sup>4</sup>

In my next letter, I hope I shall have something interesting to write about – In this, I have nothing more to say – Except that I send my love to Charley and my kind regards to Miss Otter

and Miss Thompson

Ever affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

Mind you write to Lausanne – and let me know how you are.

-
1. On Thompson, see [0129] to HC of 7 July 1852 and [0143] to Edward Pigott, [31 January 1853].
  2. On the expedition to Italy from October to December with CD and Augustus Egg, see Peters, pp. 132–140.
  3. Angus Fletcher (1799–1862), sculptor (see Pilgrim, I, p. 514).
  4. CD wrote to Catherine Dickens, 13 October 1853: ‘So far, Edward has done very well indeed!’ (Pilgrim, VII, p. 163).

[0155] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 16, 17 OCTOBER 1853

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/38), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 98–101 (dated 16 October 1853). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 90 (dated 16 October 1853).

Lausanne | 16th October 1853/<sup>2</sup>

My dear Mother,

Today is Sunday – we only arrived late last night – and this is a Protestant place, so I can’t tell whether there is any letter from you, ~~at~~ at the office, till tomorrow. In the meantime, I take this opportunity of writing home, in the hope that good news is in store for me [del] – /on Monday/ – from you and Charley.

To begin at the beginning: – We started from Boulogne on Monday last, as we had arranged – and found Paris literally overflowing with English travellers, and altered (in the Tuleries quarter) past all recognition, by the commencement of a magnificent new street, running from the Palace to the Hotel de Ville. Old houses were being demolished, and new houses were springing up, over nearly a mile of space in the heart of Paris. The street will be the broadest, longest, and grandest in the world, when it is finished.<sup>3</sup> We dined in the evening with Miss Coutts, and met a certain ~~foreign~~ French Prince, whose name I have forgotten, but who deranged our plans for getting into Italy, by telling us that we were liable to be turned back if we attempted to enter the Austrian dominions [del] from Switzerland, because “political reasons” made these said Austrians suspicious of all travellers entering their part of the country from a Republic which is plentifully stocked, in this and the neighbouring Cantons, with liberal refugees. The only effect of the warning thus given to us will be to prevent our crossing the Simplon and to make us choose the St Gothard, or St Bernard Passes instead – by either of which routes we can enter Italy from the Sardinian dominions instead of the Swiss.<sup>4</sup>

On Wednesday morning we left Paris for Strasbourg, by the best railway I ever travelled on – delightful carriages, excellent punctuality, admirable speed. The journey lasted over ten hours; but none of us were in the least tired by it. Thursday morning was spent in getting through the “sights” of Strasbourg. The oddest is certainly the famous Clock which exhibits a fantastic puppet show, every time 12 o’clock strikes. Our Saviour is in a niche above the dial. At the first stroke, a procession of the twelve Apostles issues from a door /and/ passes before him; [del] each of the twelve stopping to receive his benediction – then passing out again at an opposite door of exit. St. Peter’s cock (big enough to eat-up fifty St Peter’s) flaps his wings, and crows mechanically three times, during the ceremony – the machinery in the inside of this Brobdignag bird creaking and rattling audibly while the automation goes through its performance. A cherub shakes an hourglass, and ~~our Saviour~~ the puppet representing our Saviour, waves its hand to the right, and left, in token of general benediction – and this closes the exhibition of the clock, which is actually displayed in the magnificent Cathedral, to crowds of people, who all gape at it and laugh at it in the same breath!

Another sight of a very different kind is shown in the Church of St Thomas. In two glass cases are preserved the bodies of a “Count” and his daughter (aged 14). Both were embalmed before burial, and the girl has the /very/ dress on which clothed her when she was put into her coffin, two hundred years ago. The grave flowers are round her head – the lace is perfect over her bosom – the rings are on her fingers – nothing is decaying about her but her face; and that is falling away slowly into dust. It was a very touching and solemn sight.

On Thursday afternoon, we left Strasbourg for Basle – again by the Railway, which ends at that place. We got an excellent carriage, four horses and a postilion, as substitutes for Steam and were off again at half past eight on Friday morning, with a Strasbourg sausage, a bottle of wine, brandy, ~~and~~ Kirsch-Wasser, and plenty of bread to keep off hunger on the road. In a few hours we began to get into the real Swiss country. Immense masses of hill – woods blazing in the [del] sun with the most vivid autumn red yellow, and purple I ever saw – farm-houses with barn, granary, and stable, all under one immense overhanging roof – little fortified towns with streets ~~all~~ /full of/ quaint gables and carved balconies – shepherds singing the Rauz der Vaches – cattle-bells chiming on every hill-side – roofed bridges and wild streams – all gave us assurance that we had already pushed our journey as far as Switzerland. On Friday night we slept at Berne; and leaving that place early on Saturday morning caught sight of the German Alps, just as we got outside the town. The mighty peaks rose dark and dim, with the sun behind them through masses of thick white cloud, rolling far below their summits, and far above the morning mists smoking up from the valley's [sic] beneath. We left this sublime sight behind us and made for the Italian Alps. It was /a/ clear moon-light evening, ~~and~~ when the Lake of Geneva and the miles on miles of soaring mountains beyond it, burst into view from the [del] high land above Lausanne. The cold mountain air was nestling solemnly in the pine forests on either side of us as we first looked on this unparalleled scene – a scene never to be forgotten and never to be described, either by pen or pencil!

We are staying here with Mr Townshend, in a charming country house on the borders of the Lake.<sup>5</sup> Our plans for getting into Italy are not yet settled, and cannot be, till we gain decisive information on Tuesday next at Geneva. Tomorrow we go to Vevey [sic] and the Castle of Chillon.<sup>6</sup>

We travel in a state of mad good spirits, [del] /and/ never flag /in our jollity/ all through the day. I am Keeper of the Privy Purse for roadside expenses of an irregular nature, which are not included in ordinary travelling charges; and am in this capacity the purveyor of all the pic-nic eatables and drinkables, consumed on the way, between breakfast and dinner. Egg is constantly exercised in Italian Dialogue by Dickens. The Courier turns out to be a perfect treasure! He spares us all the troubles and minor anxieties of travelling. He packs our trunks, gets our linen washed, settles our bills, [del] procures our railway tickets, pays our postillions, and – most important of all – renders in his accounts /fairly and/ rightly to a farthing. In short, he takes all the inconveniences of travelling to himself, and leaves all the pleasures to us.

The next place to write to me at will be Genoa (Poste Restante). Don't pay your letters – the foreign post offices being most to be depended on, when they don't get their money beforehand. Let me hear how you are, and what home news you have. Remember me to Ward, and other friends who may appear at Hanover Terrace. Send my love to Charley, and tell him that I have read a little of Jeremy Taylor – in accordance with my /promise/: a little because my present course of life is not favourable to theological studies, and Jeremy is rather involved and hard to understand after a day's [del] rolling over rough high roads in a travelling carriage.<sup>7</sup>

If I have anything more to add, I will put it in a postscript tomorrow morning. It is too late tonight to write any more.

Ever affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

Monday morning/

I have just received your letter, and am delighted to hear that you and Charley are both well. I will write again from Genoa, when I have got your letter there/

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | 17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London', with the initials 'W.W.C.' in the lower-left and 'Angleterre' in the upper-left corner. Postmarks largely obscured.

2. The postscript shows WC concluding the letter on the following day, Monday the 17th.

3. Referring to the eastward extension of the Rue de Rivoli planned by Baron Haussmann.

4. The unidentified Prince turned out to be 'utterly wrong' and they in fact entered Italy via the Simplon Pass – see [0156] to HC, 28 October 1853.

5. The Rev. Chauncy Hare Townshend (1798–1868: ODNB), collector, poet and friend of CD, who spent much of his live abroad on health grounds, often at his villa Mon Loisir at Lausanne.

6. Vevey and Chillon lie on the eastern shore of Lac Lemane, around 25 kilometres from Lausanne.

7. Jeremy Taylor (1613–67: ODNB), Anglican cleric, whose Rule and Exercises of Holy Living offered a manual of devout practice.

[0156] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 28 OCTOBER 1853

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/39). Published: B&C, I, pp. 101–105. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 90.

Hotel de la Croix de Malte<sup>1</sup> | Genoa | 28th October 1853 /

My dear Mother,

Your letter has just been brought to me, and I am duly grateful for all the news it contains – especially the good news from home. [del] The letter which Charley is writing must be directed to me at the “Poste Restante, Rome”. We go to Naples from this place on Monday by Steamer and thence to Rome, Florence, Bologna, Verona, and Venice. Sicily is given up, as impracticable in the short time we have at our disposal. And we propose being back in England as early as the 10th of December – urged principally by economical considerations in forming this resolution. So much for the future – and now for the Past.

My last letter left us at Lausanne. We went to the Inn for the first night; but Mr Townshend hospitably insisted on lodging us all in his house the next morning. The arrival of Dickens produced a prodigious sensation [del] in the English colony at Lausanne, which practically expressed itself by a grand dinner and a grand evening party. [del] All the resident gentlemen whom we consulted about the best route to take to get into Italy were unanimous in declaring that the “French Prince” who had solemnly assured us that we should not be let into Italy by the Austrians if we went by the Simplon Pass, was utterly wrong – so by the Simplon we determined to go – and here we are without having experienced the smallest hindrance in crossing the dreaded frontier.<sup>2</sup> I shall never believe in diplomatic noblemen again as long as I live.

We went to Geneva by the steam boat, and started the next morning by Post at four o'clock for Chamounix. Soon after sunrise we began to toil up the mountain sides, which we had hitherto only seen from a distance. Rather more than half way to Chamounix we had to leave the carriage and get into a vehicle called a “Char”. There were no springs to this said char, which was compounded of frousy [sic] leather curtains, and clumsy woodwork, and looked exactly like a rotten sedan chair on wheels. In this extraordinary carriage, we continued our journey on such a road – or rather no road, as never was seen before. When we were not up to our axle-trees in mud, we were jolting over the ~~bed of~~ dry bed of a torrent. How it was that we were not overturned fifty times before we got to Chamounix I cannot to this moment imagine. Somehow or other, our mules tore through everything, our carriage bumped over everything, our driver yelled to his beasts incessantly and we finished the journey, sore with jolting, but otherwise uninjured. As to describing the scenery (especially when we got near to Chamounix) it is out of the question. Imagine a thousand feet of almost [del] perpendicular precipice and pine forest on either side of you, with the gloom of night settling grandly on miles of weird rock and gloomy foliage – imagine a torrent beneath you, spouting, crashing, and leaping in the dim light over a chaos of split ~~reek~~ stone – imagine a wild mule track winding about, and heaving up and down before you, whenever the tossed-up ground will allow it a few feet of tenable space to continue its /course/ – imagine, lastly, right in front the eternal snows of [del] Mont Blanc, ghastly, and awful in the deepening twilight, rising and rising ever into the [del] night sky, till the great clouds themselves looked earthly by comparison with it. Imagine all this, and you will have some faint idea of the view we saw, when we left the carriage, and walked up the last ascent, before going down into the Valley of Chamounix.<sup>3</sup>

The next day was devoted to the Mer de glace. We went up the mountain on mules – the beasts, as usual preferring the extreme edge of every precipice all the way up. There is not the least danger however (except to people whose heads turn giddy on heights), as long as you let them take their own way, and leave the bridle on the pommel of the saddle. You know all about the Mer de Glace from books. It is an enormous mass of ice wedged in between two sides of the mountain; and looks less like a frozen sea (in my opinion) than like a frozen city of pinnacles, ~~and~~ minarets, and obelisks. We descended a little way on to it, and looked down into one of the crevices – an awful place, two or three feet wide, and three hundred feet deep, with the ice-walls shining blinding green all the way down. Beneath /an invisible/ torrent of thawed water flows, with a distant, all-pervading, [still] sound, very [del] grand to listen to in the frozen and silent solitudes of the mountain. The sun was shining brilliantly, there was literally not a cloud in the sky, and the snow all round us was dazzling in its purity, as we looked at the upward view of precipices, [del] crags, and interminable icy wildernesses where even the hardy Alpine fir is unable to grow.

From Chamounix we rode on mules to Martigny – the vast precipices, and vast forests, ever increasing round us as we went until we [del] gained at last the topmost summit, and looked down into the renowned valley of Martigny, bounded on the horizon by the whole chain of the Bernese Alps with the blue-Rhone winding hither and thither through ~~the~~ flat green pasture-lands. This day again was cloudless, from sunrise to sunset. You may have some idea of the overwhelming vastness of the scenery of Switzerland, when I tell you that we were occupied three hours in incessantly descending, before we reached the valley, and got to our Inn (an old Convent) for the night.

From Martigny we went to Buez, and from that place began the ascent of the Simplon – Napoleon's great road into the South, over the Italian Alps. At this place we left the Swiss Valleys, and left them (for a reason which I will presently tell you)/ without regret.) All the magnificent scenery which I have been telling you of, the mountains, forests and lovely wooded hills are so many fatal causes of misfortune and misery to the human race. The beautiful valleys are nests of pestilence and the people who inhabit them are hideous with idiotism, [del] disease, and deformity. The unbroken chains of mountains shut in the air, and prevent the exhalations from the marshy ground about rivers and streams, from escaping. Every healthy breeze that comes from the snowy peaks is fatally tainted before it can reach the cottages in the valleys. [del] /Many/ of the people are born idiots (Cretins) as a matter of certainty, if they are born in the valleys. The first of these miserable creatures that I saw was about the height [sic] of Ward's eldest child, had the face of a monkey, and could utter no articulate sound. I asked the Postillion how old he was, and was told that he was twenty years of age. There are hundreds and hundreds of creatures like this in all the Swiss valleys we passed through.

Still more frequent is the hideous deformity called the goitre – a [del] bag of flesh growing from the throat, generally as large as a hat, often the size of /a/ carpet bag, and affecting the women particularly. Some of them walk with the goitre actually slung over their shoulders and we heard of a boy (but I am glad to say did not see him) who trundles his goitre before him in a wheelbarrow. He is a renowned beggar in one of the valleys, and makes a good living by exposing his deformity.

All that we had seen before, grand as it was, was not to be compared with what we saw on the Simplon. How the men who made the road, were hung over the precipices, to cut the way out of the rock, and build it up above the ravine, passes all comprehension. The views grow literally terrific as you get higher and higher up. Towards the top of mountains all vegetation ceases, and perpetual ice and snow begin. Such is the danger here, in the wintertime /from snow storms and avalanches,/ that six refuges are built for travellers to fly to over a space of a mile and three quarters. Some of these refuges are in the form of galleries hewn out of the living rock, numerous icicles hang at their sides and waterfalls pour over their roofs, the stream rushing [del] /over/ the windows which light the refuges, in one vast sheet of falling water. Lower down the sun at midday was still so powerful even amidst the snow, that it was a pleasure to lie down on a felled tree, and bask in it's [sic] warmth, while looking miles ~~down~~ away into the valleys beneath. But towards the sunset, the real icy cold made itself felt, and nothing but brisk walking [del] in advance of the carriage really kept us warm. We descended the mountain through the famous Gorge of Gondi. You remember the Gorge d'Olivets when we were going to Toulon? Well the Gorge of Gondi is twenty times as long, ten times as high, and fifty times as wild and precipitous as that. We were in one continuous ecstasy of astonishment and delight all the way through it. All the landscape painters in the world might come to this place, and find subjects for pictures for the rest of their lives.

Our nights lodging after the Simplon was in Italy, at Domo d'Ossola. Here were the vast rooms, and the dirt and the screaming servants with their pleasant Italian manners – all unchanged since I had last seen them. We ~~po~~ set forth the next morning to post from Domo d'Ossola to Milan – a long journey and a lovely day for it. Never was any contrast more remarkable than the contrast between this journey, and the journey over the Simplon. We were now driving, in the warmest brightest sunshine along the lovely shores of the Lago Maggiore. The great snow mountains, were far behind us, gently-rising hills were on one side, with vines and mulberry trees, and pretty cottages and country-houses, dotted all about them. On the other side was the blue water, without a ripple stirring its surface – with its islands /and/ [del] their palaces and terraced gardens all reflected in the ~~brightest~~ stillness of the lake – with boats stealing along far and near, covered prettily with bright awnings – in short such an Italian scene as one dreams of and sees faintly represented sometimes in what are called “poetical pictures”.

We crossed the river into which the lake empties itself in a ferry. The sunshine was in all its rich afternoon glory – the view [del] /beautiful/ beyond description or imagination – embracing almost the whole length of the Lake, with its islands, its boundary hills, and the mysterious lustre of the snowy Alps in the far distance. There was an old blind fiddler in the boat, who sang some Italian national songs, harshly and unscientifically enough, but with a certain [del] earnestness and spirit which made them very pleasant to hear. [del] I don't /know/ whether it was the music which reminded me of old times in Italy, or the scenery or the gliding motion of the boat over the clear water, and through the lovely river-landscape [del] or the state of incessant excitement that I had been in for the last three or four days, that affected me – or whether it was all these things together – but I never felt nearer astonishing everybody by bursting out crying (!!!!) than I did while we were ferrying over the river and listening to the blind fiddler's Italian songs. The poor old fellow said “Goodbye” in English with immense unction as we stepped on shore. He had been forty years blind, had two blind children and depended for support on what he got [del] for singing from passengers by the ferry boat. He made a good days [sic] work of it with us, and sat down in [del] a corner [del], to wait for a fresh audience in great contentment and satisfaction.

The town at which we were now landed was on the Austrian frontier. What we did here and how we got to Milan, and from Milan to Genoa, I must reserve, however, for another letter, which I mean to write from the Steamer to Charles Ward.

Charley must send off his letter to Poste Restante, Rome, as soon as possible, after he receives this. Our next place for letters will be Florence (also poste restante). If you write to me there, despatch your letter, if you can, three or four days after Charley has despatched his. It will then be sure to arrive in good time for me.

With love to Charley and best regards to all friends,

Believe me | Ever affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

I have bought you another bracelet of Genoa silver-work [del] and a snuff box for Charles Ward. I reserve /getting/ Charley's present till I arrive at Naples, or Rome.

---

1. The name of the hotel means ‘Maltese Cross’ in French; CD's corresponding letter to his wife has the Italian rendering ‘Croce di Malta’ (28–29 October 1853, Pilgrim, VII, p. 176).

2. See [0155] to HC of 16, 17 October 1853.

3. Compare the description in WC's ‘My Black Mirror’, Household Words, 6 September 1856, pp. 169–175.

[0157] TO CHARLES WARD, 31 OCTOBER 1853

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/3), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 105–109. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 90.

My dear Ward /

If my mother has shown you my letters to her you will be acquainted by this time with our progress through France and Switzerland, as far as the frontier of Austrian Italy. My last letter home left off with our passage in a ferry across ~~the~~ /a/ river into which the Lago Maggiore empties itself. From that point, I shall now get on a little, in this present letter to you, as far as Milan, and Genoa too, if my paper gives me room enough.

The town at which the ferry-boat landed us, was all alive with the white Austrian uniform. If we were to be stopped /and turned back/ at all (a calamity which certain reports in Paris had led us to look on as possible) this was the place at which our further progress would be barred. Dickens's servant took our passports to the Office, and we went away in some little suspense [sic] to the Inn where we enjoyed the loveliest possible prospect and eat the dirtiest possible dinner. Just as we had done, an officer entered and, very politely, begged our attendance before the examiner of passports. We found this dreaded official the very cream and pink of politeness. He only wanted us to answer to our names (pronouncing mine with a low bow, as "Wilkens Collers", and complementing me on my Italian) and was then quite ready and willing to let us go on. On we went accordingly to Milan, travelling fast, changing the carriage at every third stage or so, and getting worse and worse vehicles, the nearer we got to our destination. Our last carriage was of the period of Louis the 14th and was so indescribably "fusty" that I lit a cigar in self-defence the moment I got into it. Before we started, the postmaster who was extremely attentive and drunk, assured us that the road swarmed with thieves and that unless we took some precaution, we might have our luggage stolen in the dark (it was then night) from the top of Louis the 14th's coach, while we were innocently riding inside. [del] We asked the postmaster what precaution he would recommend. "Tie three strings to each of the three trunks," said he in broken French, "and hold the end in your hands as you ride." This was actually done, and we held our three impromptu bell-ropes all the way to Milan. It was like sitting in a shower bath, and waiting to pull the string – or rather like fishing in the sea, when one waits to feel a bite by a tug at the ~~string~~ /line/ round one's finger. If you had only heard the noise that was made in starting us, with these string-detectors – the way in which the postmaster waved a tallow candle and howled at all the men in the yard, who crawled frantically about the top of the carriage entangling themselves with the rope, and howling at the postmaster in return – if you had only heard this, you would have imagined we were taking all the treasures of Golconda to Milan, and were perfectly certain to be attacked by bands of implacable robbers at every mile of our way. No such thing, however, occurred. Not one of us felt the nearest approach to a bite – and /we/ got into Milan about half past ten with all the minutest atoms of our baggage still in their proper places on the roof of the fusty coach.

There is nothing characteristic about Milan as a city. It is a place of magnificent streets, and palatial houses; and might be a French town of the first class as far as outward appearances go. The Cathedral is one of the great sights of course. The façade is a compromise between the Gothic and the Classical styles; and like all compromises is unsatisfactory and feeble enough; but the interior is noble in its gloom and mystery. The body of St Carlo Borromeo (a really good man in spite of his being a Saint) is preserved in a crypt. They show it clothed in magnificent episcopal finery and jewels, encased in a crystal tomb. The roof of the crypt is of solid silver, with bas reliefs of the same metal in the cornices, jewels sparkle all over the tomb and in every available part of the saint's dress. In short, a more dazzling and beautiful mausoleum never was built. It is utterly out of harmony with the character of the /good/ man who reposes in it, and whose motto "Humilitas" stares you in the face over his priceless jemmed coffin – but the Roman Catholics don't mind trifling little inconsistencies of this sort – and the Sacristan gets 5 francs for showing the place – and strangers always admire it – and so everybody is pleased which is a great thing to attain by the exhibition of any man's dead body in this world.

There are several picture galleries at Milan – full of rubbish with here and there a good picture or two to keep the spectator from turning his back on the old masters in disgust. The best example of these glorious exceptions is Raphael's celebrated Sposalizio (the betrothal of the Virgin and Joseph) – a picture that really deserves its reputation. Nothing to approach the divine beauty and refinement of some of the [del] in the composition has been painted since Raphael's time. Copies from the picture, and prints, give no idea of it in its highest aspects.

But the /so-called/ grand Art-Sight of Milan is Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper". I have heard people who cant about Art talk in raptures of this picture. It is not a picture: it is the utter ruin of something which was once a picture. There is [del] a faint, very faint, reflection of the original majesty and beauty left in the face of Christ – but all besides is ruined – or worse, painted over in the most infamous manner by modern restorers. ~~Where~~ /When/ the original faces have not been distorted by the clumsiness of the picture [del] patcher – they are torn and frayed up, blotched, stained, or utterly rubbed out. The picture is in short, just recognisable as a picture with a great many figures in it – and that is all. Anybody who pretends to be able to see anything of Leonardo da Vinci's /genius/ in it now, pretends to achieve a downright impossibility.

Of course, we went to La Scala – the second largest Theatre in the world. As we saw it, its size was its only advantage. It was miserably lighted, wretchedly dirty, mournfully empty, and desecrated by some of the very worst singers I ever heard, and some of the mouldiest scenery I ever saw exposed to gaslight. The Opera was Verdi's last and noisiest production – the tenor was laughed at, and the Prima Donna was hissed – in short, the whole performance was utterly miserable and incapable, even for Italy – and that is saying a great deal in the present state of Opera here.<sup>2</sup>

By way of being economical, we left Milan for Genoa by diligence – an awful and penitential [sic] vehicle, with damp seats, which ran at the rate of five miles an hour. We got a good dinner on the road, and a bottle of good wine for the night – and, as everybody [del] (horses included) was asleep at the post-houses, we had plenty of time for wayside refreshments of an indescribably composite character at every halting place. But by the time we reached the railroad /from Turin/ after 20 hours of travelling over the worse high roads I ever saw, we were so utterly disgusted with our vehicle, that, when the carriages stopped at an unfinished station "four hours" from Genoa, we relapsed into our old posting habits, and got a comfortable private carriage of our own. I got some cold meat /from an Inn/ to carry us on (the landlord sprinkling salt over it with his own greasy and hospitable fingers) – and we arrived at Genoa in the evening, as lively and fresh as if we had only gone through the fatigues of a short journey.

Here we have been through the Palaces with their marvellous portraits by Vandyck and have attended mass in the wonderful churches whose ceilings [del] are all ablaze with gold. Dickens's Genoese friends have loaded us with hospitalities,<sup>3</sup> and we leave tomorrow by the English Steam Boat, for Naples, with all sorts of amicable good wishes to bear us prosperously on our way. When you answer this, write to me at Poste Restante, Florence, three or four days after the receipt of my letter. I hope I shall hear that you have quite recovered, and that Jane and the children (to whom I beg my love) are quite well. I sent you various messages of condolence by your father, when I got my circular notes at Coutts's, – sore throat, and its accompanying miseries, being afflictions for which I can feel deeply from personal experience.<sup>4</sup>

Beneath this, is an order [del] on Longman, for the money due to me, on the 4th of December. Will you tear it off, and send [to Paternoster Row on that day – placing the amount to my mother's]<sup>5</sup> account, as usual. I don't remember the exact sum to which I am entitled (it is £28 something, I think) – but I have no doubt the order as here written will obtain for me my "lawful rights".<sup>6</sup>

I have got your snuff box and a brooch for Jane. The snuff-box you gave me, was stolen at Milan – by a pickpocket. There was no other way of accounting for the loss of it. I had every enquiry made by two different emissaries, but no good result followed. You may imagine my misery at losing such a hinge and a present from you. I have bought a box just like it (in tortoiseshell) here. It has a promising hinge; and that is my only consolation.

Give my love to my mother and Charley, when you see them, and say I shall write from Rome.

Ever yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To Charles J. Ward Esqre

On second thoughts, you had better write and send off your letter to make sure of my receiving it as soon as [del] possible after the arrival of this.

-
1. Directed to 'Charles J. Ward Esqre | 81 Hamilton Terrace | St John's Wood | London', with 'Inghilterra' written in the top left corner and 'WWC' in the bottom left. Postmarked 'GENOVA | 1 | NOV | 53 | 8S', with two endorsements.
  2. CD wrote to Georgina Hogarth: 'We went to the Scala, where they did an opera of Verdi's, called "Il Trovatore", and a poor enough ballet. The whole performance miserable indeed.' (29 October 1853, Pilgrim, VII, pp. 180–181).
  3. See CD to his wife, 28–29 October 1853, Pilgrim, VII, p. 176–77.
  4. On 10 October from HC's account WC was paid two separate sums of £105 and £5 (Coutts: Exors WmC). The first presumably represents £100 in circular notes (with £5 commission) which were an early form of traveller's cheque. These notes normally for £10 or more were issued with a letter identifying the bearer who could sign them to get local currency at a bank or even at some inns. See Guide to the Unprotected in Matters Relating to Property and Income, by A Banker's Daughter, London: Macmillan, 1863, pp. 47–51. The author was in fact Emma Sophia Galton (1812–1904), who signed the preface in subsequent editions E.S.G.
  5. The border on the lower part of the leaf has been torn away, damaging the final line of text (in parentheses), the reading of which is thus to some extent conjectural.
  6. A payment of £28-8s from Longman, presumably for sales of the Memoirs, is recorded in HC's account on 3 December 1853 (Coutts: Exors WmC).

[0158] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 4 NOVEMBER 1853

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3; folder 1853 Nov. 4), badly damaged.<sup>1</sup> Published (incomplete): B&C, I, pp. 109–112; BGLL, I, pp. 91–95.

Naples | November 4th 1853 /

My dear Edward /

I have followed all the great stages in our journey in my letters to England, as far as Genoa, in regular succession. The Neapolitan Link is now all that is wanting to complete the Chain of our Travelling Events up to this present date – the Vigil (as you will see by the top of my letter) of the Feast of St Guy Fawkes.<sup>2</sup> You may hear if you go to Hanover Terrace, or to Charles Ward's, how we got through France and Switzerland to [reach] Genoa.<sup>3</sup> You shall now hear, if you will read my letter, how we got to Naples this morning

I always wish to be philanthropic, but I cannot shut my eyes to the palpable fact that the travelling part of the human race wants thinning. We have encountered crowds everywhere. No Hotels are large enough, no coaches numerous enough, no post-horses indefatigable enough to accommodate, hold, and draw the legions of tourists who are now overflowing the Continent in every direction. Even the Steam Ship "Valetta" of 7000 tons unladen and [1000] horse power,<sup>4</sup> plying from Marseille to Malta calling at Leghorn, Civita Vecchia and Naples by the way,<sup>5</sup> teak-built, copper fastened, and making 15 knots an hour, turned out to be an ignoble and utterly unfit receptacle for the number of passengers who wanted to go by her. We went on board at Genoa at ½ past ten,<sup>6</sup> and found the deck thronged. A perfect fleet of boats was about the ship, one of them brim full of small chorus singers from the opera, trying to pick up a little extra salary by saluting us with shrill choruses from Verdi's operas. It was even difficult to hear the English Chief Officer of the Valetta shouting to these [tuneful] Minstrels of the South (impersonated by shirtless youths with fiddles, and coffee-coloured women with guitars) to get out of our way as we began to heave anchor. "Hullo! you Sir, you're in the way! I say, Signora, sheer off – Oh come d--n it! Mademoiselle will you sheer off!" – such was the symphonious accompaniment to "Il mior cor"<sup>7</sup> and the fiddles – and amid such noises, mingling with that sort of chaotic and purposeless general screaming which constitutes the staple of ordinary Italian conversation, did we steam out of the harbour of Genoa, leaving the palaces of the lovely city glittering behind us in the sun, and the hills beyond them lightly crowned with white and purple clouds, rolling onward in calm procession, before a fresh North Wind.

Nothing could be pleasanter than the voyage, as long as the daylight lasted. With some few exceptions presently to be noticed, our travelling companions were all really agreeable people – the sea was smooth – the officers of the ship all politeness. But when night came, and beds were in demand the scene altered. We were rather more than twice too many for the cabin accommodation at our disposal. Berths in the Saloon (on the seats) had been kept for us, but the atmosphere here was so stifling that we never attempted to occupy our impromptu beds – and determined to rough it with wrappers and sofa pillows on Deck. Just as we were comfortably asleep under an awning, down came the rain – Italian rain which pours like a waterfall. We retreated towards the cabin. Prostrate bodies of men and women in those distorted attitudes which only the bedless on board ship can assume, prevented entrance – the atmosphere was mephitic – in short, the place was a nautical Pandemonium, sulphury with the fumes of past dinner and present human breath! So on deck we went again, and fell asleep at last in spite of the elements, on the cabin skylight. I was kept awake for some time, by a bore, one of three who infested the ship. Neither rain, nor darkness, nor want of bed, quelled this conversational miscreant. He talked everywhere to everybody on every possible subject, in a prosy cracked bass voice that always seemed close at my ear. You will have some idea of him when I tell you that he was describing the origin of the “Rejected Addresses” and giving personal sketches of James and Horace Smith [to a] taciturn American,<sup>8</sup> at three in the morning, with the rain clattering on deck and the lightning flashing on the sea, when I fell asleep and heard no more of him.

The next morning we reached Leghorn. The ship being detained in Port for certain “Pratique” reasons which it is not worth while to explain. Dickens and Egg and I and Sir Emmerson Tennent and his family<sup>9</sup> and the Captain and Doctor, and [the] Third Officer, all went on shore to spend the day in seeing the sights of Pisa. At dinner at the Hotel, Dickens, in his own good-humoured way, let off an incessant fire of jokes at the Captain (with a pretty pointed meaning in them) all alluding to the misconduct of the Steam Boat Agent in allowing double the proper number of people to take passage by the “Valetta”.<sup>10</sup> These jokes were received in perfect good part, and they produced their effect. The next night we got beds.

Did you ever sleep in a Store Room? Egg and I slept on two dressers in the store room of the Valetta. I had a barrel of flour, a basket of apples, and a chest of bread under the outer edge of [a] couch. Drums of figs, bunches of grapes canisters of spices were all around us – the smell was the smell of a clean chandler’s shop. Besides ourselves we had the steward and an old gentleman, and a [sharp-eyed black] cat in the store room; and we all “pigged together”, as the vulgar saying is, in the most amicable and comfortable manner imaginable. I never slept better in my life before. Dickens had a share of a friends cabin.<sup>11</sup> – In short, everybody had some sleeping accommodation in unheard-of parts of the ship, except the man who persisted in sitting on deck under an umbrella (it rained again the second night), and would not hear of being sheltered below on any terms. I was in hopes that this extraordinary deck-hermit among the passengers might be the “bore”, and that he might catch cold and lose his voice, for the benefit of the ships company. But no! – it was somebody else. The man with the bass prosy voice was in high preservation, when I went down below to breakfast, talking about Moore’s Melodies,<sup>12</sup> and humming [missing word][illegible word] with a mouthful of beefsteak, to his next neighbour. The second morning brought us to Civita Vecchia (a wretched, dead place – infested by beggars and French soldiers) – and the third, after another luxurious night in the storeroom, saw us fairly steaming into the Bay of Naples. It was about seven o’Clock – misty on one side of the view, brightly sunny on the other. The sea was of the real Mediterranean blue – light wreaths of white smoke were curling up quietly into the fair morning sky from the Crater of Vesuvius – the Islands in the Bay showed their lovely forms with a soft indistinctness indescribably visionary and beautiful to look at – and the unrivalled scene of Naples itself, with its gardens its lofty houses, and its grand forts, gleamed again right under the sunny portion of the sky. Every part of the view was familiar to me, though it is 15 years since I saw it last – But such a place as this (seen from the sea) is never to be forgotten, when you have once looked at it.

I must tell you, that we left the “bore” (who was bound for this place) complicating every arrangement, confusing the police officer who was calling our names, and getting into everybody’s way, as we went over the ship’s side. We thought we had at last fairly got rid of him, when the boat landed us. Vain hope! Just before dinner we were walking towards the King’s Palace, and were stopping to look at some bag-pipers from the mountains, when I heard a voice close at my ear, say “Calabrians – eh?” I looked round and there he was! We bolted directly; but bolting is no use. Unless some good Samaritan murders him tonight, I have a presentiment that he will be the first living creature I shall set eyes on, on going out of the Hotel tomorrow morning. I suppose men of this kind are created as a sort of moral hair-shirts for unpenetential [sic] Protestants who wo’nt “mortify” the flesh with any rougher discipline than a cold bath and a rub with a Turkish towel.

This is a rambling, scrambling, scrawling letter – but I can’t write anything correct and regular, for I have not long done eating a very capital dinner, and washing down the same with copious draughts of Lachryma – and I am, as you know, one of that unhappy race who get particularly stupid after repletion. Will you send, or take this letter to my mother, when you have read it? It will give her some fresh news of me, since Genoa, which she will be glad to hear. Say also that I will write to Charley from Rome. Give my best regards to Lewes;<sup>13</sup> and believe me

Affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

Write to me as soon as you conveniently can, after receiving this and direct your letter to “Poste Restante, Venice”. I met with a subscriber to the Leader at Genoa, who praised the paper with real sincerity and enthusiasm, and recommended it in all directions.

1. Two folded sheets of plain thin tissue paper, heavily damaged by water and the passage of time, repaired with netting that reduces the contrast between ink and paper. The first sheet, where WC writes on both recto and verso, is especially difficult to decipher, as the ink has bled through in many places, and WC’s cancellations can obscure the text on the other side. There are thus quite a number of doubtful and conjectural readings, which are enclosed in square brackets.
2. That is, the evening before 5 November or ‘Guy Fawkes’ Night’, commemorating the Gunpowder Plot in 1605 when Catholics tried to blow up the English Parliament.
3. Referring to [0156] to HC of 28 October and [0157] to Charles Ward of 31 October 1853.
4. An English vessel owned by the Peninsular and Orient Company.
5. WC, CD and Egg joined the ship for the Genoa to Naples section of this route down the west coast of Italy.
6. This was on Tuesday 1 November – see [0157] to Charles Ward, 31 October 1853, and also CD to Georgina Hogarth, 4 November (Pilgrim, VII, pp. 186–188).
7. WC presumably intends to refer to Gilda’s famous aria from Act I of Verdi’s Rigoletto, which saw its premiere in Venice in March 1851 and was first performed in London at Covent Garden in May 1853: ‘Caro nome che il mio cor – ‘Sweet name which made my heart [throb for the first time]’.
8. Rejected Addresses, or the New Theatrum Poetarum (1812), a collection of speeches parodying the style of Wordsworth, Byron and others, by the brothers James and Horace Smith.
9. Sir James Emerson Tennent, Baronet (1804–69: ODNB), author and politician, who married Letitia Tennent in 1831 (d. 1883) and took her name. They were travelling with one of their two daughters and their son William Emerson Tennent (Pilgrim, VII, p. 183 and VI, p. 701 n. 4).
10. ‘We were, with the crew, some two hundred people; with boats, at the utmost stretch, for one hundred, perhaps’ (Pilgrim, VII, p. 187).
11. ‘Emerson Tennent, with the greatest kindness, turned his son out of his state room’ (Pilgrim, VII, p. 186).
12. Thomas Moore (1779–1852: ODNB), whose Irish Melodies appeared between 1807 and 1834.
13. G. H. Lewes.

[0159] TO CHARLES COLLINS, 13 NOVEMBER 1853

MS: Morgan (MA 3152/2). Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 80. Published: B&C, I, pp. 112–116. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 95.

Rome | November 13th 1853 /

My dear Charley /

Here I am actually in Rome again! after an interval of no less than sixteen years. It may seem (and very likely is) egotistical enough – but nothing has astonished me more than my own vivid remembrance of every street and building in this wonderful and mournful place. Houses, fountains, public buildings, shops even, appeal to me as familiar objects, that I cannot help fancying I must have been in daily contact with, since my first introduction to them in the old bye gone time. All the other places we have visited in Italy have seemed more or less changed to me. This place seems, and really is, unaltered. I recognised, this morning, all the favourite placēs /haunts/ on the Pincian Hill, that we used to run about as little boys. I saw the same Bishops, in purple stockings, followed by servants in gaudy liveries – the same importunately impudent beggars – the same men with pointed hats and women with red petticoats and tightly swaddled babies, that I remembered so well in England since 1837 and 1838. Not the least changeless object in Rome was our old house in the Via Felice. The Virgin is still in her niche – the cabbage stalks and rubbish are strewn about underneath – the very door looks as if it had never been painted since we left it. Genoa I did not know again, till I got to the great street of palaces – Naples I found altered in one or two important respects, as far as the town is [del] concerned – but Rome is what it was when we saw it. Here, I can hardly help fancying that I must have gone to sleep at fourteen years old, and woke up again at the comparatively mature age of twenty nine.

Such are my impressions of Rome – but I must go back a little, and tell you something of Naples, before I say anything more about what I have seen here. Pigott has a letter of mine, which I told him to send or take to you, describing our voyage from Genoa to Naples.<sup>1</sup> Our occupations at Naples remain to be recorded. The first day after our arrival we went to Pompei with Sir Emmerson Tennent and his family – friends of Dickens’s, whom we met on board the steam boat, and very delightful people. Many things have been excavated since our time – the day was lovely – we picknicked among the ruins – and did not get back till dark. The next day Egg and I, leaving Dickens to write letters and make calls, went to the Baiae side of the Bay – got on men’s backs in the Sibil’s Cave, and so splashed through much subterranean water by torchlight – wandered about temples and amphitheatres /and/ saw the wretched dog tortured at the Grotto del Cane (I roared fiercely to the man to let him go before he became insensible, being unable to bear the howling of the poor brute as the mephitic air acted on him – and so stopped the experiment before it was complete). We /saw/ quite enough, however, both at the Grotto del Cane and elsewhere to convince us that all the so-called “sights” on the Baiae side of the Bay are as nothing compared to the fine sight of Nature [del] / – the hills, the sea, the islands and the lovely sky, which/ cost not a farthing, require no guide, encourage no beggars and live longer in the memory than all the antiquities and chemical curiosities that ever have been discovered, or ~~will~~ ever will be.

The next day was devoted to Vesuvius. Besides the Tennents (father, mother, son, and daughter) Layard of Nineveh fame,<sup>2</sup> was of our party. We reached the Cone (on horseback) about half past four in the afternoon. The toilsome ascent on foot occupied us half an hour. The ladies were carried up in chairs. Egg and I were the last of the gentlemen who arrived at the summit – we discreetly rested, whenever we felt fatigued, and so got to the top quite fresh, and ready to enjoy the marvellous volcanic spectacle, without any alloy of the slightest sense of fatigue. The mountain was very quiet – ~~not~~ no flame, no stones, no noise – nothing but thick clouds of sulphurous smoke. The last great eruption was in 1850;<sup>3</sup> and it has altered Vesuvius, past my recognition. All is crater now, the moment you get to the top – the hollow space we walked over when I visited it in 1838, exists no more. Dickens, Layard, Egg and I, went all round the mouth of the crater. I shall never, as long as I live, forget the view from the highest point, over Sorrento and Capri, with a blood-red setting sun gleaming through the hot vapour and sulphur smoke that curled up high from behind us, as we rested for a few minutes to look at the western prospect. The descent was as lively and as rapid as usual ~~with us~~. Our procession as we rode along by torchlight, with a young Italian moon shining above us, a perfect army of guides around us, and wild lava rocks on all sides of us – was a picture in itself, such a picture I am afraid as could never be painted.

We called on Iggulden<sup>4</sup> at his private house (he had previously left cards for Dickens and me at the Hotel). We did not see him however, until we went to his place of business to get money. [del] He was extremely depressed and gloomy, /and ~~was~~/ surrounded by wretched pictures, on which he had been lending money, I suspect. He expressed himself as quite amazed that Dickens should still be a “lively man” with nine children – and grievously desired to know whether I was still going on “writing books,” and whether I ever meant to “practise my profession.” He asked after you and my mother with great interest, and then introduced me to a tall young gentleman with a ghastly face, immense whiskers, and an expression of the profoundest melancholy, who was casting accounts, and reckoning up dollars, in the outer office. Do you remember little “Lorenzo” who was the lively young “Pickle” of the family in our time? – Well! This was Lorenzo!!!! He asked me whether I had not broken my arm when I was last at Naples. I told him you had. He rejoined gloomily “Galway’s dead”<sup>5</sup> – and then waited for me to say something. I said, “God bless me! Is he indeed?” – And so we parted. I must not forget to say that Charles Iggulden – the pattern goodboy who used to be quoted /as an example/ to me – has married a pretty girl without his parents’ consent – is out of the banking business in consequence – and has gone to Australia, to make his fortune as well as he can. I was rather glad to hear this, as I don’t like “well-conducted” young men: I know it is wrong – but I always feel relieved and happy when I hear that they have got into a scrape.

We had reserved our last day at Naples for a visit to Sorrento – but, after weeks of incredibly fine weather, the rain came at last, on the said day. They had not had a drop /in the town/ for nearly two months before. We waited at Naples, accordingly – Went to the Museum and the Opera – and heard a prima donna at the San Carlo, who ought to make a great reputation in London some of these days, if managers have the sense to find her out. The Opera itself was Verdi’s last – very poor. The Theatre magnificent in its unrivalled size and sober, tasteful decorations.<sup>6</sup>

On the 10th we started for Rome by Vetturino – a good carriage and a jovial old driver, with a purple face, a white head, and a wall eye. On the 12th we arrived at the luxurious and delightful hotel<sup>7</sup> in the Piazza del Popolo from which I [~~del~~] now write. This morning was devoted to the Coliseum [sic] and the Forum. The afternoon to Vespers at St Peter’s. I was detained at the Hotel, and started late, leaving Dickens and Egg to precede me to St Peter’s. And, for once in a way, the procrastinating man was the lucky man of the party. As I was walking along the street which leads from the Ponte S. Angelo to St Peter’s, two dragoons dashed past me, clearing the road at full gallop, two carriages came after, with cardinals inside – and next came a state coach with the Pope himself. Every creature near me fell on his or her knees. I stood up, of course, but pulled off my hat. The Pope (I suppose, seeing me the only erect figure out of a group of 30 or 40 people), looked straight at me as he passed – and bowed as he saw me with my hat in my hand. He looked care-worn, old, anxious, and miserable – I just saw his head sunk sadly on his breast as the carriage dashed by me. There was an idea among the strangers present that he would be in St Peter’s at Vespers; but he never appeared. The Interior of the Church looked more sublime and overwhelming than I ever remember to have seen it. The Nave was grand with gathering darkness, while the high altar sparkled with hundreds of fantastically disposed lights. In the immensity of the building, the pealing of the great organ and the voices of the full choir, sounded faint and mysteriously far off – it was impossible to follow the music note by note, ~~wh~~ in the position which we occupied, or to see the ceremonies /plainly/, but the service was all the more impressive to me, on this very account – I mean, on account of the visionary uncertainty of all that we saw, and the alternate swelling and sinking of all the sounds that we heard!

On the 6th of December we hope to be at Turin, going round by [~~del~~] Venice and Verona, before we get there. On the 13th or 14th, we expect to be back in London, travelling by way of Lyons and Paris. When my mother sends her next letter (the sooner the better) tell her, with my best love, to direct it to Poste Restante, Lyons. I shall be able to write an answer, I hope, from that place, fixing certainly the day of my return.<sup>8</sup>

Now for other messages: – Tell Millais I will write to him from Florence (I got his letter in your’s [sic], this morning). Remember me kindly to Ward and Bullar and any other friends you may see. I am very sorry [~~del~~] to hear of William Brandling’s death – I only saw him once, but I carried away a ~~very~~ pleasant impression of him, poor fellow, even from that short acquaintance. Remember me to Henry when you see him next.<sup>9</sup>

I [~~del~~] /highly approve of/ Miss Otter’s plan for pitching her tent near my mother’s, in case they both move from their present residences. To begin in the country with a good neighbour in the shape of an old friend, seems as promising an entrance into a state of rural existence as could well be desired. But where are they /and we/ to go? We must discuss that question when [~~del~~] I get home. In the mean time I send best love to the Hanover Terrace household, and remain (too sleepy and tired to write any more) yours ever affectionately

WWC

-
1. See [0158] to Pigott, 4 November 1853.
  2. Austen Henry Layard (1817–1894: ODNB), whose Nineveh and Babylon had been published during the summer of 1853. CD wrote to Miss Burdett Coutts, 13 November 1853: ‘At Naples I found Layard – with whom we ascended Vesuvius in the Sunlight, and came down in the Moonlight, very merrily’ (Pilgrim, VII, p. 189).
  3. ‘Vesuvius had last erupted on 6 Feb[ruary 1850] for nearly a month’ (Pilgrim, VII, p. 190 n. 4).
  4. William Iggulden (1794–1864), banker whom the Collins’ family had met in 1838. See HC, Manuscript Journal, (MSL/1914/1915), National Art Library, Victoria and Albert Museum.
  5. Galway was the son of Captain Thomas Galway, UK Consul in Naples, and was blamed by HC for breaking CAC’s arm in Naples. Again see HC, Manuscript Journal, Victoria and Albert Museum, and Clarke, pp. 39–40.
  6. Referring to Il Trovatore with Rosina Penco (1823–1894), Neapolitan soprano for whom Verdi wrote the part of Leonora. CD wrote to Georgina Hogarth: ‘The night before we left Naples we were at the San Carlo, where with the Verdi rage of our old Genoa time, they were again doing the ‘Trovatore.’ It seemed rubbish on the whole to me, but was fairly done. I think ... the prima donna, will soon be a great hit in London. She is a very remarkable singer and a fine actress, to the best of my judgment on such premises’ (13 November 1853, Pilgrim, VII, p. 192).
  7. Referring to the Hotel des Iles Britanniques.
  8. They arrived back in London on Sunday, 11 December 1853 (see Pilgrim, VII, p. 225); the next day WC was paid £10 from HC’s bank account (Coutts: Exors WmC).
  9. WC’s friend Henry C. Brandling, the illustrator, was the second youngest of the nine children of Robert William and Mary Jaques Brandling of Low Gosforth, Northumberland; William Brandling (1809–53) was the second oldest – WC had presumably met him the previous year (see [0133] to HC, 1 September 1852).

[0160] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 25 NOVEMBER 1853

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/40), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 117–119. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 95.

Venice | November 25th 1853 /

My dear Mother,

By the time you receive this, you will have seen my letter from Florence to John Millais,<sup>2</sup> and will know what our plans are for returning. They are still unaltered. On the 12th or 13th of next month I hope to be at home again. If no future change takes place, this will most likely be my last letter, for we expect to arrive at Lyons at night, and leave again, straight for Paris, the next morning – so I shall have no time for writing in France. However if I discover at Paris, that the tides and their attendant trains will bring us late at night to London, of course I will warn you as early as possible. In the mean time, look out for me on the 12th or 13th – “till further notice”.

We left Florence in an excellent English travelling carriage with six horses and, posting all day and all night arrived in the morning at Padua, whence the railroad took us to Venice in a little more than an hour. Thus, the journey which took ten days ~~in~~ when we /all/ travelled together, [by] “Vetturino”, was performed in about eight and twenty hours by post horses and steam. I have no idea, as yet, whether the railway bridge has altered [del] the approach to Venice for the better or the worse. We stayed all day at Padua seeing pictures and churches, and travelled here in the dark. The Hotel Gondola met us at the Railway Station – we left our modern inventions, our comfortable carriages propelled by steam; and the next minute (while the engineer’s whistle was still screaming above us) there we were on the dark water in a boat of the middle ages, rowing along streets of water that have not altered for the last four hundred years. It was the most bewildering “jumble” of the totally modern and the totally antique that ever I met with!

Our Hotel is at the mouth of the Grand Canal, close to St. Mark’s. The first day [del] we were all anxiety to see how Venice looked. It was a lovely, sunshiny morning (we have only had three rainy days for the last seven weeks – fancy that!) – it was a lovely morning, and the [del] first object we looked at was our old friend the Church of San Saluté with its huge white cupola glittering in the sun, almost opposite to us. Just below, at our right, we next saw the seaward side of the Ducal Palace and below was the Mole, with turbaned Turks and petticoated Greeks by dozens, diversifying the lively native Venetian crowd stretching away from us on either side as far as we could look.

Here, as at Rome, nothing seems /to have/ altered for the last fifteen years. The glorious pictures look as superbly superior as ever to everything else in the Art of other schools. Coming fresh from all that the galleries of Rome and Florence can show, I am more struck than I could have imagined possible, with a sense of the superiority of the Venetian painters – and especially of Tintoretto, ~~the~~ to my mind the chief and greatest of them all. You remember his marvellous “Crucifixion” in the Scuola di San Rocco – but do you also remember well his Paradise in the Ducal Palace? This picture is altogether without a parallel in the world. It is 70 feet long by thirty high. They have tried in Venice to count the figures in it, and left off in despair at three thousand!!! Such is the wonderful genius of the painter, that there is really no confusion in this amazing picture – the longer you look at it, the less confused it gets. The whole assembly of the Blessed, are all tending upwards towards God from every part of the picture. The grand general lines of the composition seem to have been taken from the lines of clouds – so that when you get to a distance from ~~it~~ /the picture/ the hundreds and hundreds of human beings and angels seem to be all circling together ~~in living clouds~~ below the Mercy Seat, as clouds circle at midday below the sun. This seems to me to be the sublimest [del] pictorial idea of [del] representing Heaven, that ever entered into the head of any painter – and it is carried out with a victorious ease in every part of the picture that it absolutely bewilders one to look at. Charley and Millais and Hunt, ought to come here if they go no-where else. These Venetians, [del] employed as they almost always were, to represent conventional subjects, are the most original race of painters that the world has yet seen.

We lead the most luxurious, dandy-dillettante sort of life here. Our gondola (with two rowers in modern footmen’s [del] liveries!) waits on us wherever we go. We live among pictures and palaces all day, and among Operas, Ballets and Cafés [del] more than half the nights. Yesterday evening we went to hear Verdi’s “Nabuco” in the gondola – one of the Rowers going before us, ~~with~~ as soon as we landed to light us /upstairs/ into our box by means of a huge ship’s lantern, which there was not the slightest occasion for, but which the gondoliers persisted in bringing as a proper assertion of our own magnificence.<sup>3</sup> This said “magnificence” by the bye, was of the most economical kind. We got the best box in the theatre, on the Grand Tier for exactly seven and sixpence /in/ English money – just the price which each person must pay in London for entering the pit of the Opera, without any security of finding a seat when he gets inside. Both the singing and dancing were very fairly and pleasantly done – and it was as satisfactory and as long an evening’s amusement, as the veriest glutton of theatrical enjoyment could possibly desire.

Here, we are already beginning to feel the cold which we shall soon have to encounter in its more Northern intensity, among the snows of [del] the Mont Cenis, on our journey into France. The marble ~~pavements~~ floors of the Academy were so chilly today that we could not comfortably stand still on them for two minutes together to look at the pictures – and the shrill North Wind is [del] blowing so freshly that our gondola really rocked this afternoon at the entrance of the Grand Canal. Warned by these signs of coming frostiness, I have purchased a Venetian Capote – an immense long garment which [del] falls below my knees and is made of some hair cloth, thickly lined and renowned for its resistance to wind and weather. A Monk’s hood is attached to the collar, to keep the head and face warm in case of necessity – and the whole is sold for sixteen English shillings. With this, and my bulky British wrapper, I can defy the elements – even when we come to sledges on the top of the French Alps.

How are you? and how is Charley? and how do the country plans go on? – I shall have all these questions answered when I get back – as well as two others of an indignant nature which I mean to address to those two epistolary recreants Messrs Charles Ward and Edward Pigott. I told the first to write to me at Florence, and the last at Venice; and at neither place has the ghost of a letter appeared. I suppose they delayed writing their answers – though I gave them time enough in all conscience, in both cases – till it was too late. Catch me writing to them again – that’s all!

I believe I have a great deal more to ~~tell~~ /write to/ you, but I cannot for the life of me tell where I ought to begin “fetching up my arrears”, just at present. We travel at such a rate, visit so many places and see so many things, that reflection and remembrance /appear to be/ [del] absurd impossibilities, until our [del] /journey is/ fairly over. It seems seven months instead of seven weeks since we started from Folkestone. As for notes, I have not made one – they are all in my letters, and what is not in my letters must be reserved for our fireside. In the mean time, the waiter is laying the cloth for dinner, and my hunger is so sharply stimulated by the sight of the knives and forks that I am physically incapable of writing any more. So, with my love to Charley (for whom I have bought a Roman Crucifix!!!!)

Believe me | Ever affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | 17, Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London', with 'Inghilterra' added in the upper left corner. Postmarked 'VENEZIA | 28 | 11' and endorsed 'CA | 5 DE 5 | 1853'. On the verso of the second leaf of the letter is a note in pencil, presumably from Charles Collins to Charles Ward: 'My Mother wants a new Cheque Book if you please | C.C.'

2. This letter has not been traced.

3. CD offered a rather different description to his wife: 'Imagine the procession led by Collins with incipient moustache, spectacles, slender legs, and extremely dirty dress gloves – Egg second, in a white hat and a straggly mean little beard – Inimitable bringing up the rear, in full dress and big sleeved coat, rather considerably ashamed' (Pilgrim, VII, p. 215).

[0161] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 14 JANUARY 1854

MS: Berg. Published: Davis, p. 151; BGLL, I, pp. 95–96.

17, Hanover Terrace | January 14th 1854

My dear Sir,

I leave for you with this, the first Monthly instalment of my Letters about Italy, which I promised to offer you for the Miscellany.<sup>1</sup> The Second is just completed, and you can see that too if you wish, before we decide on anything.

I should want a place in six numbers, of the Magazine, occupying in each an average space of a sheet – sometimes a little less, sometimes a little more. You will see what the plan is of the Letters I propose writing, from the first of the series. As this plan is, so far as I know, quite a new one, I should wish to reserve the copyright of the Letters, as my own property – giving you of course the refusal of any republication of them which it might seem desirable to me to make, in case of their success; and engaging also at the outset, not to republish, under any circumstances, without your consent until after the expiration of a certain time, dating from the publication of the First Letter.

Will you let me know what you think about the series of papers I propose, as soon as you can, after reading the first of the number?<sup>2</sup> The second (which I am now polishing and correcting) lets out some rather unconventional opinions on the subject of Art, and describes travelling in Italy. The Papist ceremonies and superstitions will figure in the Third number. I have a true love-story, to keep for the last,<sup>3</sup> and all sorts of quaint odds and ends of travelling observation and information to occupy the intermediate Letters. It is important that two of these letters should always appear in a number for the sake of contrast.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | George Bentley Esqre

---

1. Clearly based on his personal letters home during the trip to Italy.

2. WC's offer was declined as the magazine had recently carried a very similar series of articles – the unsigned 'A Journey from Westminster Abbey to St Peter's', appearing in seven instalments in Bentley's Miscellany, 33 (May–November 1853).

3. Perhaps the love story of 'Brinsley Norton and his tousle-headed fisher-girl, or the banished Charles Iggulden' (Peters, pp. 137–140).

[0162] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, [2 MARCH] 1854<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3; folder [1854] [Mar. 2]?). Published: BGLL, I, p. 96.

17, Hanover Terrace | Thursday

My dear Edward,

How are you? Where are you? And why, in the name of all that is mysterious, did you not make your appearance at Millais' the other night?

I wish you would let me know, when you have room in the "Leader" for a couple of paragraphs which I have written about your painted glass at Marlborough House.<sup>2</sup> The glass is rarely and really admirable – and therefore deserves special notice.<sup>3</sup> I don't know the artist – (a lady I believe)<sup>4</sup> – but I have been told by those who do, that a little timely appreciation would be very welcome to her /

Ever yours | W.W.C.

Don't answer this. I shall most likely call and see you at the office tomorrow /

Sorry I was not at home when you called

---

1. Conjectural dating based on the appearance of the piece in the Leader.

2. Marlborough House, Pall Mall, built by Sir Christopher Wren in 1711 for the Duchess of Marlborough. At this time it was a Museum of Ornamental Art. In January around 12,000 people visited it (Times, 2 February 1854, p. 7f).

3. 'A Word about a Painted Window', Leader (11 March 1854), p. 236.

4. Unidentified.

[0163] TO CHARLES WARD, 16 MARCH 1854

MS: Huntington (HM 12934).<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, p. 120 (dated 15 March 1854). Published: BGLL, I, p. 97.

My dear Ward,

My sentiments on the subject of the approaching Russian War, are dictated by the most disinterested feelings of Patriotism.

Ever yours | W. Wilkie Collins

Sir C. Napier | British Fleet<sup>2</sup>

---

1. This note is found beneath the following note from Millais, who draws two cats, one arching its back, either side of his monogram:

Hanover Terrace

My dear Ward

How you have beaten me this evening the 16th of March 1854.

Ever yours | John Everett Millais

2. To the left of the signature WC draws a small yacht in full sail with this caption. Sir Charles Napier (1786–1860: ODNB) was appointed vice-admiral of the British Navy in May 1853 and, in February 1854, with British entry into the Crimean War inevitable, was put in command of the Baltic fleet.

[0164] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 20 MARCH 1854

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, pp. 112, 154. Published: BGLL, I, p. 97.

17, Hanover Terrace | March 20th 1854

My dear Sir,

I am very glad to hear that any Money can still be squeezed out of the unfortunate "Cash-Box".<sup>1</sup>

If you think it best to put off altering the price of the "Rambles" until after Lent, I think so too.<sup>2</sup> The subject of Mr Brandling's remuneration, I will leave to be talked over when I next have the pleasure of seeing you. Early in next month I hope to bring you my magnum opus – not quite done, but done enough to be judged of, and negotiated about.<sup>3</sup>

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | George Bentley Esqre

---

1. The revised edition, issued in January 1852, was presumably still bringing in a few pounds.
2. In 1854 Ash Wednesday (the beginning of Lent) fell on 1 March and Palm Sunday (the end of Lent) on April 9. The second edition of Rambles Beyond Railways, issued early in 1852, was still on sale at 15s and had not yet sold out.
3. Referring to Hide and Seek, which appeared first in three volumes from Bentley in early June.

[0165] TO S. C. HALL, 3 MAY 1854

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 39; BGLL, I, p. 98.

17. Hanover Terrace, Regents Park | May 3rd 1854

My dear Sir,

The Article which this letter accompanies has been written by a friend of mine now resident in Rome,<sup>1</sup> and has been sent to me to be offered for publication in England. As it treats of a subject of some Art-interest, I take the liberty of sending it to the Editor of the Art-Journal. Will you oblige me by looking at it, and letting me know whether you think it can be rendered available for the pages over which you preside?

In case you should not be able to make use of the Article, I will send for it to the Office, if you will order it to be left there with my name on it.<sup>2</sup>

I remain, My dear Sir, | Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Samuel Carter Hall Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. Frances Dickinson (1820–98), journalist and travel-writer – see Peters, p. 140, and Catherine Peters, ‘Frances Dickinson: Friend of Wilkie Collins’, WCSJ, NS 1 (1998), pp. 20–28. It was previously thought that these articles might have been written by WC himself – see W. M. Clarke, ‘The Mystery of Collins’s Articles on Italian Art’, WCSJ, 4 (1984).

2. Hall accepted the article. In total a series of seven pieces on the art and artists of Rome by Dickinson appeared in the Art-Journal under the pseudonym ‘Florentia’ between June 1854 and August 1855. See also [3311] to Hall of 18 March 1847.

[0166] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 16 MAY 1854

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Summary: B&C, I, p. 120. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 98–99.

17. Hanover Terrace | May 16th 1854

My dear Edward,

I have enquired about you from time to time at the office, and was delighted to hear the other day that you were getting better, and were likely to be soon in town. What a sad time of it you have had! I have not bothered you with letters which you might worry yourself about answering when you were not well enough to write. And I only send this to say how anxious we shall be to see you when you come back.<sup>1</sup>

I am up to my eyes in business. My new book comes out on the 25th, and I have 70 pages still to write, and the whole to see through the Press – besides negotiations with Bentley which are not even yet completed.<sup>2</sup> I have not even time to finish this letter as I should wish – But I hope we shall meet soon. In the mean time, with very kindest regards to your brother<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Edward Pigott’s own ailments have not been identified, but the source of the sadness was undoubtedly the onset of severe mental illness in his older brother Henry Thomas Coward Smyth Pigott. Married with three young sons and a daughter, and formerly a scholar at Eton and a Captain in the Royal Scots Greys, Henry Pigott was to die on 29 January 1858, at the age of only thirty-five, in the Sussex House Lunatic Asylum, Hammersmith. The death certificate gives the cause of death as ‘acute mania, softening of the brain and general physical paralysis of the insane’. Lycett (p. 144), however, without offering supporting evidence, states that Henry Thomas Pigott in fact suffered from ‘dementia associated with syphilis’.

2. The publication agreement for Hide and Seek was in fact signed with Richard Bentley on 17 May 1854, with £150 to be paid in two parts to WC for the right to publish a first edition of 500 copies and Bentley to be given the option of publishing any further editions within a period of eighteen months (BL Add. 46616, f. 309).

3. Presumably referring to Henry Pigott.

[0167] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 29 MAY 1854<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 99–100.

17, Hanover Terrace | Monday

My dear Edward,

The Courier is engaged, and now travelling on the Continent. I am sorry to say I don't know of any other; but Charles Ward does. Couriers constantly leave their names and addresses at Coutts's – and a man whom Ward recommends is as safe a man as could be wanted.<sup>2</sup>

Shall we go to the Academy on Wednesday?<sup>3</sup> I shall be in the neighbourhood of the office, and will call between 1 & 2 if I don't hear from you to the contrary –

La Joie fait peur wonderful.<sup>4</sup> I don't know which is best the play or the acting. I would not have missed it for the world – though it did make me cry – More about it when we meet

Ever yours | WWC

---

1. Dating based on the play mentioned.

2. The courier in question might be Edward, the young German who accompanied CD on the 1853 trip to Italy – see [0154] to HC of 9 October 1853. It is not clear for what journey Pigott required a courier, though he seems to have visited Paris later in the year – see [0188] to him of 18 December 1854.

3. The 1854 Royal Academy summer exhibition opened on 28 April 1854.

4. Play by Sophie-Dauphine de Girardin. It opened in French at St James's Theatre on Tuesday 23 May 1854 and ran until Saturday 3 June with the original cast, 'as recently performed by them for upwards of 50 nights at the Théâtre Français, Paris with the most unparalleled success' (Times, 22 May 1854). It was reviewed by 'Vivian' (G. H. Lewes) in the Leader (27 May 1854), p. 499, who soon created an English version of the play himself, Sunshine through the Clouds, performed at the Lyceum from 15 June 1854.

[0168] TO S. C. HALL, 1 JUNE 1854

MS: Unknown (formerly owned by Jeremy Maas). Photocopy: Private, our copy text. Published: BGLL, I, p. 100.

17, Hanover Terrace | June 1st 1854

My dear Sir,

May the Bearer have a copy of the Art Journal of this month, to be sent to the writer of the Article on the "Studios of Rome"?<sup>1</sup>

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | S.C. Hall Esqre

---

1. See [0165] to Hall of 3 May 1854.

[0169] TO THE MAYOR AND MAYORESS OF OXFORD,<sup>1</sup> 12 JUNE 1854

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 100.

17, Hanover Terrace | June 12th

Mr Wilkie Collins has much pleasure in accepting the honor of the Mayor & Mayoress of Oxford's invitation for Thursday the 22nd June.

---

1. The mayor at this time was Richard James Spiers, a respected art dealer – see [3273] to him of 21 July 1854.

2. The Thursday evening reception on 22 June 1854 at the Oxford Town Hall, fitted up for the occasion with innumerable art works, was a grand affair attended by over 1200 guests, including the heads of Oxford colleges, and more than fifty distinguished visitors from London, with E.M. Ward among the artists attending. See 'The Festival at Oxford', Art-Journal NS 6 (August 1854), p. 240.

[0170] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 13, 14 JUNE 1854<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, I, pp. 120–121 (dated ‘early June 1854’). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 100–1.

17. Hanover Terrace | Tuesday Evening

My dear Mother,

You will find inside letters from Millais and Charley, and Miss Otter – all that have come for you up to this time.

Old Mrs Dickinson called to ask you to dinner,<sup>2</sup> just as I was going to Miss Coutts’s – so I went to Stratton Street dry and saved cab hire. A nice party – rooms palatial, especially the new one, which is one of the most beautiful things I ever saw – grand collation – plenty of famous people – Miss Coutts full of kindness and hospitality.

Opera the other night. Grisi wonderful.<sup>3</sup> I was in luck’s way – hardly standing room in the Pit – met a press friend who had a private box, and gave me a seat in it. French Opera to do tomorrow night<sup>4</sup> and new Play at Lyceum the night after.<sup>5</sup> I hope I shall be able to get to Oxford Tuesday or Wednesday next week, and will write again to tell you for certain. In the mean time my kind remembrances to Mr & Mrs Combe.<sup>6</sup>

I have another letter from Bentley – sanguine this time. We have nearly sold half the edition. Not so bad in War times, and before a single review has come out, or people have had time to talk about the book to each other.<sup>7</sup>

Pigotts [sic] brother is going on a little better. They have taken a top part of house near Hyde Park Corner, and mean to move him on Thursday.<sup>8</sup>

No more news at present!

Affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

Wednesday Morning /

I have just received your letter. Egg was talking to me about the Mayor’s reception, at Miss Coutts’s. He thought he would not be able to leave town – but I will tell him of Mr Combe’s invitation<sup>9</sup>

---

1. Dating based on the internal references to the London theatre and the publication of Hide and Seek.

2. Widowed mother of Frances Dickinson (1820–98), and family friend (see Pilgrim, VIII, p. 361 n. 2).

3. Giulia Grisi (1811–69), soprano with the Royal Italian Opera for seven seasons at Covent Garden culminating in 1854. CD said she ‘excelled as Bellini’s Norma’; he also saw her in Donizetti’s Lucrezia Borgia (Pilgrim, VII, p. 377 n. 1). The performance in question here is presumably in the title role of Lucrezia Borgia on Friday 9 June – see the review in the Times, 12 June 1854, p. 12c, which describes the presentation as taking place before a ‘densely crowded house’.

4. Presumably the performance by the Opéra Comique of Louis Clapisson’s new piece La Promise at the St James’s Theatre on Wednesday 14 June 1854 – see the announcement in the Times of that day.

5. Sunshine through the Clouds (G. H. Lewes’s adaptation of Delphine de Girardin’s La Joie Fait Peur), which opened at the Royal Lyceum on Thursday 15 June 1854 – see the review in the Leader (17 June 1854), pp. 572–573.

6. The Combes were old church friends of the Collins family, in whose Oxford garden CAC’s ‘Convent Thoughts’ had been painted in 1851 (Lycett, pp. 90–92).

7. Referring to Hide and Seek, published in three volumes by Bentley on 6 June 1854 – see Gasson.

8. Edward Pigott’s older brother Henry, suffering from mental illness – see [0166] to Edward of 16 May 1854.

9. See [0169] to the Mayor and Mayoress of Oxford, 12 June 1854.

[0171] TO [J. T. MARSH], 10/17 JUNE 1854

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, p. 155; B&C, I, p. 121 (dated [10 June 1854]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 102.

17. Hanover Terrace | Saturday

My dear Sir,

Did we settle that the Globe was to have a copy of Hide and Seek? I was asked whether a copy had been sent, last night, by one of the contributors to the paper, and not being certain what arrangement we had made, was guarded in my answer. I only write now to tell you of this, in case you think it desirable to let the paper have a copy.<sup>1</sup> If you do not, we can allow the matter “to be adjourned sine die”

The proper negotiations are in progress with The Thunderer. I hope to give a satisfactory account of them in a few days.<sup>2</sup> As to the subscription – about which Mr Bentley wrote to me the other day in a very desponding tone – I don’t care two straws [del] whether it is large or small. Give the Press time to introduce the book to public notice – and give the readers time to [del] /get through/ the story – and I have no fear about the result. The booksellers and librarians are a parcel of asses, and the public voice is the stick that cudgels them into activity.

Faithfully yours | W.W.C.

---

1. Hide and Seek was favourably reviewed in the London evening paper, the Globe and Traveller, Saturday, 24 June 1854, p. 3.

2. In the event, the novel was not reviewed in the ‘Thunderer’, as the Times was affectionately known in the mid-nineteenth century in recognition of its Jove-like power. There were, however, lengthy and positive notices in the Morning Post (13 July 1854, p. 3, by W.M. Rossetti) and Morning Chronicle (7 September 1854, p. 7).

[0172] TO THE MAYOR AND MAYORESS OF OXFORD, 21 JUNE 1854<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 102.

Oxford Wednesday

Mr Wilkie Collins regrets extremely that an engagement which obliges him to leave Oxford Friday morning prevents his having the honor to wait on the Mayor and Mayoress – University Press<sup>2</sup>

---

1. This dating assumes that the letter was written during the same visit to Oxford as that anticipated in [0169] to the Mayor and Mayoress of 12 June 1854.

2. This must be WC’s return address. Presumably he was visiting HC, who was staying with her friends the Combes, where letters were directed to Thomas Combe, University Press, Oxford – see [0170], [0309] to HC of 13–14 June 1854 and 26 July 1859.

[0173] TO FREDERICK LEE,<sup>1</sup> 23 JUNE 1854

MS: Houghton (Autograph file C.) Published: BGLL, I, p. 102.

Oxford | June 23rd 1854

My dear Sir,

I have great pleasure in complying with the request which you honoured me by making yesterday evening.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Frederick Lee Esqre

---

1. Unidentified – presumably an autograph hunter encountered at a social occasion in Oxford.

[0174] TO E. M. WARD, 28 JUNE 1854

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Extract: Ellis, pp. 13–14; Robinson 1951, pp. 54–55. Published: Coleman, pp. 31–33 (dated as [1849]); B&C, I, pp. 55–56 (dated 28 June [1849 or 1850]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 102.

17. Hanover Terrace | ~~Tue~~ Wednesday | June 28th /<sup>1</sup>

My dear Edward,

I called at Slough, on my way back to London from Maidenhead,<sup>2</sup> about two hours before your return as I conjecture. Mr Birch<sup>3</sup> was at home, however, and told me all I wanted to know about Mrs Ward. The Carter Halls<sup>4</sup> gave such contradictory accounts that I had no clear notion of what had been the matter with her, until I heard from Mr Birch the good news of her recovery.

Have you fixed the Christening Party for next Wednesday – July 5th?<sup>5</sup> And if you have, at what hour do the Orgies begin? And which train ought one to travel to Slough by? Is it a morning or evening party? Will the male guests be in black, as to their breeches, or in general colours? I have promised to communicate these particulars /except about the breeches/ to Egg, so answer at your earliest convenience.

An awful crowd at the Mayor's last Thursday.<sup>6</sup> Stewards with names of distinguished individuals on private printed lists – charged to make civil speeches to all author's and artists – made hideous mistakes instead – Cardwell<sup>7</sup> taken for Bulwer<sup>8</sup> – your humble servant taken for a P.R.B.<sup>9</sup> and asked whether the author of Antonina was there that night – gallons of cider-cup in a vessel like a gold slop-pail, out of which the company drank like horses out of a trough – seedy next morning and miserably unfit to be in the house of a virtuous man whose servant had never heard of Brandy and Soda Water in the whole course of his life.<sup>10</sup>

Ta-Ta, | W.W.C.

I met Bulwer at a party on Monday night. He is looking Bright And Plump[.] Now is the time to take his portrait /

-
1. The 1854 dating is determined by the address and the calendar.
  2. Perhaps WC had been visiting his mother, staying at Maidenhead with the family friends, the Langtons – see [0181] to Harriet Collins of 27 July 1854. Maidenhead and Slough are neighbouring towns.
  3. Unidentified, but presumably a servant with the Wards.
  4. Samuel Carter Hall (1800–1889: ODNB), editor, writer, and journalist, and Mrs Carter Hall (Anna Marie Fielding) (1800–1881: ODNB), a prolific writer: 'By general consent Mrs Hall was the more agreeable of the two' (Pilgrim, I, p. 481 n. 4.)
  5. This must be the christening of Wriothsesley Ward (b. 1854), not Leslie (b. 1851), as Coleman assumes.
  6. Referring to the reception given by the Mayor of Oxford on Thursday 22 June 1854 – see [0169] to the Mayor and Mayoress, 12 June.
  7. Viscount Edward Cardwell (1813–1886: ODNB), politician, at this time MP for Oxford and President of the Board of Trade.
  8. Edward George Earle Lytton Bulwer-Lytton (1803–1873: ODNB), politician, novelist, dramatist, editor, social critic.
  9. That is, a member of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, which included close friends such as Holman Hunt and Jack Millais.
  10. WC was probably staying with his mother's friend Thomas Combe in Oxford – see the notes to [0172] to the Mayor and Mayoress of Oxford, 21 June 1854.

[0175] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, [30] JUNE 1854<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 103.

The "Leader" Newspaper, 7, WELLINGTON STREET, STRAND. | ½ past 8
My dear Edward,

I hear you are not to be back here before eleven, and I am obliged to be in another part of the town long before that time. This week I have been desperately idle all day and desperately dissipated all night. But next week the Second Batch of New Books (which was not wanted this week) shall be done.<sup>2</sup> Kean, Cabal, and the Opera, I have duly reported on.<sup>3</sup>

Shall I do the Sirène, and the Italian Opera next week?<sup>4</sup> Write me a line – Yes or No. I only ask because I have missed Lewes and don't know what his plans may be.

I hope Henry is going on poor fellow as satisfactorily as we can all wish.<sup>5</sup> Your commendation of Hide And Seek was very acceptable.<sup>6</sup> The book seems to have made a hit among the judges<sup>7</sup> – and the public demand from what I can hear of the Libraries seems to be as brisk as possible on all hands.<sup>8</sup>

Let me know as soon as you come back.

Affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

-
1. WC writes at the end of the week after the review of Hide and Seek appeared in the Leader, and the week before a 'Second Batch of New Books' appeared.
  2. See 'A Second Batch of New Books', Leader (8 July 1854), pp. 642–643.
  3. See the Leader (1 July 1854).
  4. He did – see 'The Arts', Leader (8 July 1854), pp. 644–645.
  5. Pigott's older brother – see [0166] to Pigott of 16 May 1854.
  6. Referring to the review in the Leader (24 June 1854), pp. 591–593.
  7. The Spectator (17 June 1854), p. 645, and the Athenæum (24 June 1854), p. 775, both praised it in their own way. See Page, pp. 55–58, for reviews, including that in the Leader.
  8. Referring to circulating libraries such as Mudie's.

[0176] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 10 JULY 1854

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Summary: B&C, I, p. 121. Published: Davis, p. 157; BGLL, I, p. 104.

17. Hanover Terrace | 10th July 1854

My dear Sir,

After due consideration, I am obliged, very reluctantly, to decline taking advantage of the offer you have been kind enough to make me on the subject of the copyrights of Antonina and Basil.<sup>1</sup>

In the present state of my resources, I cannot afford to part with £200, for the sake of the prospective advantage which the possession of the copyrights might offer me. I can only hope that at a future period, when I have more money to spare, I may also have another opportunity of making Antonina & Basil my own property.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. The offer was in fact another sign of the desperate financial difficulties which forced Bentley to sell his Miscellany to Harrison Ainsworth in October 1854 – see Gettmann, pp. 23–26.
2. Bentley's reply is preserved in his Letter Book at the BL (Add. 46642, f. 44r.):

New Burlington St | July 11. 1854

My dear Sir

Your letter of yesterday I beg to acknowledge. As I believe there is no difference of opinion between us upon the question of the value I have placed upon the copyright of "Antonina" & "Basil" & as you reluctantly decline my offer on the ground that the present state of your resources will not enable you to part with £200 for a prospective advantage, I am sure you will appreciate my motive in proposing that instead of your deferring this step you should merely pay me one half. viz: – £100. & the remainder at your convenience within a twelvemonth.

Very & [illegible] yours | (signed) RB

[0177] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 12 JULY 1854

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Summary: B&C, I, p. 122. Published: Davis, pp. 157–158. BGLL, I, pp. 104–105.

17, Hanover Terrace | July 12th 1854 /

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my best thanks for the friendly manner in which you are willing to modify the terms for the repurchase of "Antonina" and "Basil", for my advantage.<sup>1</sup>

I am afraid, however, that I must refrain from availing myself of the new proposal which you have been kind enough to make, for I have no certainly of being better able to pay the second £100 at the end of a year's time than I am now. My "savings" (such as they are) are collected by my pen. Although we have, I think, no reason as yet to complain of the reception of "Hide And Seek" – I cannot disguise from myself that if this war continues,<sup>2</sup> the prospects of Fiction are likely to be very uncertain, to say the least of it. I may find myself obliged to turn my pen in other directions than those which it has hitherto been accustomed to take; and though I might profit by such a change in a year's time, I might also lose by it. In the latter case I should certainly not have a hundred pounds – perhaps not even ten pounds! – to spare.

Looking then to the present uncertainty of my prospects, I must still unwillingly decline the second offer which you have been kind enough to make me, from motives of prudence which I hope I have written about frankly enough to enable you to appreciate them.

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. A further sign of Bentley's desperate need for cash.

2. In the Crimea – Bentley's 'financial strain was aggravated by the outbreak of war with Russia' (Gettmann, p. 24).

[0178] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 17 JULY 1854

MS: BL (Add. 46652, f. 233).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 105.

London 17 July 1854

Received of Mr Richard Bentley His Dft on Messrs Herries & Co<sup>2</sup> for Seventy five Pounds together with his promissory note due 17/20 August 1854 also for Seventy five Pounds amounting together to £150 – the purchase money as agreed for the Copyright of the first Edition of "Hide And Seek"<sup>3</sup>

W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Written on a small plain piece of blue paper without heading or address, embossed with a penny revenue stamp. The following calculation appears on the MS in another hand, presumably that of Richard Bentley or a member of his staff: '£75 – Dft | 75 – Promis | Notes | £150'.

2. Later Herries, Farquhar & Co., now part of Lloyds TSB.

3. The account at Coutts bank used by both HC and WC records two payments of £75, on 19 July as 'reced' and on 19 August as 'R Bentleys Note' (Coutts: Exors WmC).

[0179] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, [4/11/18 JULY] 1854<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 106–107.

17, Hanover Terrace | Tuesday

Private

My dear Edward,

We shall be delighted to see you on Sunday. Drive here at once and you will be in excellent time for dinner at  $\frac{1}{2}$  past 5.

As the worst certainty is better than doubt of the most painful kind, I had better tell you that the "reports" to which I alluded, have been acknowledged to be Truths by Thornton Hunt, to whom Carr put the question in plain terms.<sup>2</sup> Carr is coming here on Sunday (by an engagement made yesterday) to take a walk with me. I will ask him, if you like, to stop and dine, so that you may hear in my ~~own~~ room afterwards, from his own lips, what he heard from Hunt's lips. Carr has spoken of you, and of his willingness to exert himself for you in any and every way, with the best possible feeling. He has no words for his indignation against Lewes, and I think he has every right to feel it.

I did not know that Cole had ever spoken to you on the subject.<sup>3</sup> I disbelieved, not his report but the report of two people holding honorable and distinguished positions in the literary world – who told me there was no doubt, but I persisted in doubting for your sake and mine, as long as I could.

Be assured my dear Edward of my deep sympathy with you in your troubles, and my resolution to help you out of this Leader trouble,<sup>4</sup> and to back you with all might and main. If you take the steps, which I believe you will think as necessary as I do when you hear all particulars, you will not only extricate yourself from a dangerous and degrading connection, but I must honestly and entirely believe do more to promote the success of the Leader than circumstances have ever allowed you to do since you first became proprietor of it. Think of this as a safe and certain consolation, under this very painful but still remediable misfortune.

I am afraid from your letter that poor Henry is still but a very little way advanced towards recovery. Time is the great Hope there – and patience and care the great remedies which we may trust implicitly.<sup>5</sup>

If you would rather Carr did not come on Sunday evening, tell me so by return of post. I only suggested his presence, because his testimony is conclusive, and he has an earnest desire to help you to the best of his ability.

Believe me, | Affectionately yours | WWC
Plenty of news for the Literary Summary this week, from abroad. Four Reviews all ready, if four are wanted. Two new Plays for Theatres next week.

-
1. On 20 July G. H. Lewes and Marian Evans (George Eliot) went abroad to escape the scandal surrounding their relationship.
  2. Probably the Rev. H. W. Carr, MA, fellow of Durham University (Clergy List, 1855), who did not have any parochial responsibilities – see [0195] to Pigott of 5 February 1855.
  3. Charles Cole wrote for the Leader in 1854. His brother Henry Cole (1808–82) was Assistant Keeper at the Public Record Office.
  4. It was feared the scandal involving the paper's literary editor (Lewes) and its political editor (Hunt) would affect its standing. With Lewes's knowledge and agreement Hunt had become the lover of Lewes's wife Agnes, who bore Hunt four children. The fact that Lewes sanctioned the relationship prevented him from seeking a divorce and marrying George Eliot.
  5. Pigott's brother who died in an insane asylum in 1858 – see [0166] to Pigott of 16 May 1854.

[3273] TO RICHARD JAMES SPIERS, ESQ.,<sup>1</sup> 21 JULY 1854

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, pp. 3–4.

The Garrick Club.<sup>2</sup> | July 21st 1854

My dear sir,

Many thanks for your kind invitation. I should be delighted to avail myself of it – if I had not already accepted an invitation to visit some friends at Boulogne.<sup>3</sup> I leave London on the 24th, and do not return for a month.

I am very happy to have this opportunity of thanking you for the pleasant evening you afforded us on the night of the “Reception” – and I hope to have a future opportunity of improving the acquaintance which began under your hospitable auspices.<sup>4</sup>

If I were writing from home, I am sure I should be charged to present my mother's kind regards to The Mayoress.<sup>5</sup>

Believe me | My dear sir | very sincerely yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To | Richard James Spiers Esqre

-
1. Richard James Spiers (1806–1877), Mayor of Oxford, 1853–54.
  2. WC uses the note paper of the Garrick Club, with the simple heading “Garrick Club” embossed within an oval. He joined the Garrick in the early to mid 1850s; other members included Dickens, Fechter and Reade. WC resigned in 1858 over the “Garrick Club Affair” concerning Edmund Yates, subsequently rejoined, but resigned again with Dickens when their candidate, W. H. Wills, was blackballed. See to the Secretary of the Garrick Club, [0624] 25 February 1865, [0626] 5 March 1865, and [0630] 10 March 1865.
  3. Referring to an invitation by Dickens to join him in the Villa du Camp de Droite, Boulogne (CD to WC 12 July 1854, Pilgrim, VII, pp. 367–368).
  4. For an illustration of the reception on 22 July 1854 and a description of the event, see the Illustrated London News, 1 July 1854.
  5. See [0211] to Mrs Spiers of 7 June 1855, where WC declines a further invitation.

[0180] TO E. M. WARD, 21 JULY 1854<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 40; BGLL, I, pp. 107–108.

July 21st Friday

My dear Ned,

I start, with Dickens, on Monday evening, instead of Tuesday.<sup>2</sup> This change and an increase in the work wanted of me before I go, will (greatly to my own vexation) keep me in this unutterably hot metropolis, on Saturday (tomorrow).

I hope I am right in assuming that the guest from Knebworth does not visit you tomorrow. Having heard no more of him from you when you were in town – and having received no communication from Egg – I take it for granted that Mr Lytton will not be at Upton Park this week. If he is, I am doubly a recreant, for I remember absolutely engaging myself to meet him.<sup>3</sup>

I suppose I shall see you on Monday at Hanover Terrace – we shall have your bed ready for you, of course. I blush to own that I shall be at work on Sunday(!!!) – or I should certainly run down and taste some of your delicious fresh air, on that day

With penitential [sic] respects (I dare not express myself in other terms) to Mrs Ward and my godchild<sup>4</sup>

Believe me | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

To | E.M. Ward Esqre ARA

You will find Dickens all ready for you at ten<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Dating based on the calendar and the internal references noted below.

2. To stay at the Villa du Camp de Droite at Boulogne with CD, until mid-September 1854.

3. That is, Edward Bulwer-Lytton of Knebworth House, Knebworth, Hertfordshire. He was expected to sit for E. M. Ward at Upton Park, Slough, Buckinghamshire; WC had promised to meet him there, but was unsure of the dates in question. Later in 1854, in fact, Lytton's portrait was painted by Ward at Knebworth House, where the picture now hangs.

4. Alice, now about five years old.

5. CD's portrait was also painted by E. M. Ward in 1854.

[0181] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 27 JULY 1854

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/41), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 122–123. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 108.

Villa du Camp de Droite | Boulogne sur Mer | July 27th 1854 /

My dear Mother,

We are living here in such a state of Elysian laziness, that it is an absolute effort to me to write this letter. The cool sea breeze blows over us by day and by night without cessation. We are on the top of one of the highest of the hills above Boulogne. My bedroom windows look straight down into the valley, with buildings and gardens climbing up the opposite side /of the hill,/ till they end under the ramparts and trees of the old town. This house is all doors, cupboards, and windows – the rooms are bright, clean, and lively beyond description – and when we want to be out of doors, we have a garden with pretty flowers and turf walks on one side, and a field with a haycock to lie under on the other. In this field we have just been playing at “Rounders” with the boys. If I had not had this game to stir me up, I very much doubt whether I could have summoned energy enough to sit down to this letter.

The camp is within easy walking distance – far enough off, however, to be no annoyance. We should /not/ know here, as long as we kept within the grounds that there was a camp at all. Immense numbers of soldiers are all about us nevertheless. Boulogne itself swarms with them. Drums and bugles are to be heard in every street.<sup>2</sup> Our old locality – the market place – had a whole regiment in it today with a real live Vivandière serving out drams to the men in the most operatic manner possible.<sup>3</sup> You may be curious to know what /was/ the dress of this Fille du Regiment. She had on a /short/ glazed hat, stuck very much on one side – a tight blue jacket that fitted her without a wrinkle, an ample scarlet petticoat – ample as to breadth – that came to her knees – and scarlet trousers. Her hair was dressed in the regular feminine way – plain bands, with a knot or lump, or bunch, or whatever you call it, behind./ ~~and~~ Her /small/ barrel of spirits was coloured /with/ red, blue, and gold, and slung over her shoulder. She was a very passably pretty woman – was evidently treated by the men with great distinction – and appeared to be very glad to find that all the civilians in the market place were taking special notice of her. We have no ~~uniforme~~ women among us who wear the uniform of the regiment they serve and follow. So the Vivandière was a great sight for the British part of the population of Boulogne.

No plans about expeditions into the surrounding country have been settled yet. We are talking of a trip to a queer place in this neighbourhood – situated in a slough of black mud, which obliges the inhabitants of the village to wear a peculiar kind of high patten instead of shoes /whenever they leave their houses all the year round./

I suppose you are now staying at Maidenhead. Give my kind regards to my friends there. Also write and tell me any news there is, and say what Charley’s plans are. Does he stay at home? Give him my love and believe me

Affectionately yours | W.W.C.

If Charley intends leaving home, you had better ask Charles Ward to call once a week and see if there are any letters<sup>4</sup>

Direct me care of Charles Dickens Esq<sup>5</sup>

---

1. On Dickens’s monogrammed stationery, directed to: ‘Mrs Collins | 17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London’, with ‘Angleterre’ written above the address and ‘W.Wilkie Collins’ below. Postmark largely obscured, though ‘BOULOGNE-SUR-MER | 27’ can still be discerned, with two endorsements, both dated ‘JY28’.

2. In preparation for the Crimean War, French troops were gathered in a mass camp at Honvault, Boulogne, with Emperor Napoleon III scheduled to hold a major troop review in September 1854.

3. The term ‘vivandière’, indicating a female supplier of refreshment to an army, was also used in the English-speaking world, for example, in the United States during the Civil War.

4. The first postscript is written vertically down the left-hand margin on the final page.

5. The second postscript is written diagonally on the first page, to the left of the address.

[0182] TO CHARLES COLLINS, 31 AUGUST 1854

MS: Morgan (MA 3152/3). Published: B&C, I, pp. 123–125. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 108.

Villa du camp de droite | Boulogne sur mer | August 31st 1854

My dear Charley,

There is to be a “grand dinner” here on the 12th of September – Mark Lemon and Bradbury & Evans are coming to it – and Dickens is hospitably resolved that I shall not go away till the festive solemnity is accomplished. I am far too comfortable and happy ~~here~~ in this charming place to be ready to leave it – so I remain gladly enough for the dinner on the 12th and my return home may therefore be considered as deferred till the middle of next month (September).

We have hardly had a cloud in the sky here for the last week – except at sunset, when fiery and purple clouds seem to rise and float towards us from the English shore. The airless heat [del] in the morning is something indescribable – but every afternoon the sea breeze rises, and our flags stream out gallantly above the haystack. We have increased the height of the mast, and have now got a tri-color [sic] – three yards long floating over the Union Jack (of similar dimensions), in honor [sic] of the alliance between the two countries, and in special compliment to France the land of our temporary sojourn. When the morning breeze freshens to what the sailors call “half a gale of wind” we [del] bring out a mighty kite – jointly produced by the labour and ingenuity of Dickens and your humble servant – which is supposed to be capable of taking up more string than can ever be bought to accommodate it. For cool evenings we have a mammoth Trap, Bat, and Ball, and play matches in which there is very little [del] science and a great deal of fun. So the time passes – as to amusements – inside the gates of this “Property”.

Outside the gates, we have every sort of preparation ~~for~~ going forward for the military manoeuvres which are to take place as soon as the Emperor comes.<sup>1</sup> The right wing of the camp has now got its full complement of forty thousand men. The tents and mudhuts of the soldiers [del] stretch out along the coast, literally for miles and miles as far as you can see. On the “Fête Day” of Napoleon, we went to see a military mass at the camp. They made the loveliest little rustic Chapel with evergreen Gothic arches, and a soft floor of young ferns. Flags floated all around it, and the sea (as blue on that day as the Mediterranean itself) [del] murmured within a stones’ [sic] throw of the back of the chapel. Ten thousand men were under arms for the occasion. The regiments approached the chapel from all sides, all at the same time converging towards one common centre – [densely] and threatening in the far distance, bright almost as the sun itself, with glittering bayonets, and flailing swords, and gleaming cannon, as they approached and formed three sides of a square – an immense square – in front of the chapel. Then the General on a white horse, followed by a staff of thirty or forty mounted officers, came galloping to the front – pulled up suddenly – ~~were~~ was saluted by a braying of trumpets and a rolling of drums – and then the mass began. It was accompanied by the military bands. When the Host was raised, the artillery fired their great guns & the ten thousand men presented arms – the bayonets and swords all floating up together into the sun. It was one of the grandest sights I ever saw.

The service was performed by one meek-looking old curé, who came shambling in through all the magnificent military preparations with his rusty black [del] cassock trailing in the dust, and his green umbrella under his arm. He put on his vestments in a sort of ornamental cowshed – and after mass preached a sermon which had the great and singular merit of being only five minutes long. One noticeable point in connection with the secular part of this military mass, was the extraordinary civility of the officers and soldiers. [del] When the general public got into wrong positions (which they [del] did about a dozen times) they were not pushed about – as at our reviews – but politely entreated with bows and smiles to move back a little. One officer made his band play to please us – and another sent [del] privates, off duty, scouring [del] all over the camp for chairs for all the ladies – every woman in the place being included under this denomination. It is really a remarkable army, for good breeding and quiet behaviour. The few men who get drunk on fête days, are only harmlessly exhilarated [sic]. They dance, embrace each other, sing opera airs, and flourish their pocket handkerchiefs – but interfere with nobody. Charles Ward would be enchanted with the contrast they present to the “British Grenadiers”.

I intend this letter for mother, when you have done with it. Give her my love and tell her to stop in the country as long as she can.

Affectionately yours | W.W.C.

Show this to C. Ward – till I can write him a letter for himself<sup>2</sup>

I hope you will stick to a modern life subject. You did quite right to put my name down for Brandling’s book.<sup>3</sup>

Please fold up and post the enclosed, directing it to [del] E.M. Whitty Esqre | Leader Office | 7 Wellington Street | Strand<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Emperor Napoleon II in fact arrived in Boulogne on the evening of Thursday, 31 August, and was scheduled to stay for most of September. For British press reporting and commentary on these events, see, for example, ‘The Emperor of the French at Boulogne’, Times, Monday, 4 September 1854, p. 6e-f, and the accompanying editorial on p. 6a-b.

2. WC adds his first postscript vertically up the margin between his second and third pages.

3. Probably a reference to H.C. Brandling, Views in the North of France (Hanhart, 1855). WC writes his second postscript vertically up the left margin on the first page.

4. The enclosure might be a contribution to the Leader by WC, though none has been identified during September 1854. Whitty seems to have taken over the working editorship of the paper during much of later 1853 and 1854. This third postscript is squeezed in to the left of, and separated by a looping line from, the address and date at the top of the first page.

[0183] TO CHARLES COLLINS, 7 SEPTEMBER 1854

MS: Morgan (MA 3152/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 125–126. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 108.

Villa du camp de Droite | Boulogne sur mer | September 7th 1854

My dear Charley,

I brought no great coat here with me (thinking I should leave during the heats of August). Crossing the channel however, in the middle of September, as I shall most probably do – is not to be accomplished comfortably without “top-hamper” of some kind – as we say at sea. Will you be kind enough, as soon as you get this, to have my /brown/ coat with the wide sleeves wrapped up in a piece of brown paper, and to send the parcel by the lad from the stables, addressed to Mark Lemon Esqre | Punch Office | 85 Fleet Street. | Lemon is coming here on Monday and will be at the Punch Office on Saturday. If you can manage to send the parcel on Friday afternoon (assuming that you get this on Friday morning – tomorrow morning –) it will be sure to find him. I will write a note to Lemon, on the other side of this sheet, which you can put into an envelope and send with the coat by way of explanation.<sup>2</sup>

About the public fêtes and military solemnities here the newspapers and popular talk in general will inform you.<sup>3</sup> In regard to our private share in the present rejoicing, I have to tell you that we illuminated the house in the English way, and astonished all Boulogne by the spectacle. The French illuminate outside their houses, with oil lamps in devices with which the wind interferes considerably. We shut all the front windows in the English way, and put candles in them. This house is all windows. We had 114 candles burning, in 114 clay candlesticks, stuck on a [sic] 114 nails, [del] driven into the window sashes. When we were ready to light up, every soul in the house (except the children) was stationed at a window – Dickens rang a bell – and at that signal we lit up the whole 114 candles in less than a minute. The effect from a distance was as if the whole house, was one steady blaze of light. It was seen for miles and miles round. The landlord went into hysterical French ecstasies – the ~~people~~ populace left their illuminations in the town, and crowded to the Ramparts opposite our hill, to stare in amazement.<sup>4</sup> We let off fire works besides – and to crown all, we had not the slightest alarm or accident. I shall have more to tell, when we meet.

Affectionately yours | W.W.C.

I have not fixed a day yet for returning, but you may expect me, unless you hear to the contrary any day next week after the 12th. My love to mother.<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Collins Esqre | 17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London’, with Boulogne postmark partially obscured, and franked ‘PAID | 8 SP 8 | 1854’; above the address WC writes ‘Angleterre’ and ‘Affranchi’ (for ‘Affranchie’ or ‘Postage Paid’), with the initials ‘WWC’ in the lower left corner. With a ‘D’ monogram on the flap, the envelope seems to be from Dickens’s personal stationery.

2. The second leaf of the notepaper has been duly torn off, though WC’s note to Lemon seems not to have survived.

3. See, for example, ‘The Emperor of the French at Boulogne’, Times, Monday, 4 September 1854, p. 6.

4. Compare CD’s account to Henry Austin, 6 September 1854, Pilgrim, VII, p. 410.

5. WC writes the postscript vertically up the left-hand margin on the first page, with the message to his mother intersecting the salutation.

[0184] TO CHARLES WARD, 10 SEPTEMBER 1854

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/4). Published: B&C, I, pp. 126–128. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 108.

Villa du camp de droite | September 10th 1854/ | Sunday

My dear Ward,

Thank you for what you have done about the Chronicle<sup>1</sup> and for what you mean to [del] try with Hood.<sup>2</sup> In relation to the latter negotiation, if it should not succeed, I have only ~~two~~ three words to say: – Try no more – or (if you like the form better) – Hood be damned.

I shall be back, I believe, next week – at the latter part of it. This smooth existence of mine will soon become as ruffled as your’s – though in a different way. I have plenty of hard work in prospect – some of it, too, work of a new kind, and of much uncertainty as to results. I mean the dramatic experiments which I have been thinking of, and which you must keep a profound secret from every body, in case I fail with them. This will be an anxious winter for me. If I were not constitutionally reckless about my future prospects, I should feel rather nervous ~~about myself~~ just now in looking forward to my winter's work.

Two thirds of your depression of spirits come from want of change, and will be cured by a holiday. The other third may be successfully combatted by mild aperients and dogged spirit-drinking every now and then. As to what you shall do next month I have an economical suggestion to make. Consider Hamilton Terrace as your head quarters and start off by early-morning trains short distances into the country – ~~take~~ walks about for hours wherever you please – dine cheap – and return by the late train – sometimes, where the Inn can be depended on, sleep and return next evening. I have a map of the country 25 miles round London, /, [del] which you can take possession of – and whenever I can make a holiday, I will help you to assume the character of Nature's housemaid and "scour the plains". If you want a cheap and healthy holiday plan there you have it!

You know as much about /our/ public festivities here, from the papers, as I do. I saw the Victoria and Albert and the two attendant steamers enter Boulogne harbour from the heights. It was a very pretty sight, and was fired at by large guns and small with the noisy loyalty proper to the occasion.<sup>3</sup> The reviews [del] I have not seen – hating dust, knowing nothing of soldiering, and having already assisted at military manoeuvres ~~erased~~ before the Emperor's arrival. The public concert was not loud enough for the open air – but some excellent players helped to make what music there was. The Fireworks were very grand – but we had fireworks of our own to let off on the same night and did not pay them so much attention as they deserved. Our illumination of this house was a veritable "blaze of triumph" – ask Charley to show you my letter giving an account of it. The public ball was not different from other public balls here - and was injured by threatenings of rain. Now we /are/ all quiet again, and the last dregs of the English excursionists have<sup>4</sup> drained off. I have much more to tell – but my paper is exhausted, and I shall see you I hope this day week. In the meantime keep up your spirits – give my love to Jane (whom I trust to find better when I see her) and believe me

Ever yours | WWC

My love to my mother and Charley, if you see them – they know that they make [sic] expect me back towards the end of next week.

---

1. Referring to the extensive and enthusiastic review of Hide and Seek in the Morning Chronicle (7 September 1854, p. 7e-f), which concluded: 'We shall look forward eagerly to Mr. Wilkie Collins's next work of fiction; for, in our judgment, "Hide and Seek" displays greater knowledge of humanity, greater facility of expression, and greater maturity of talent generally, than either "Basil" or "Antonina."'

2. Hood remains unidentified, though the reference is presumably to another attempt to get Hide and Seek reviewed in the press.

3. To consolidate the Anglo-French alliance in the Crimean War, in July 1854 the French Emperor had invited Prince Albert to review the French troops massed outside Boulogne. See, for example, 'Prince Albert's Visit To The French Emperor', Times, Saturday, 9 September 1854, p. 6.

4. From here to the end of the letter, WC writes across what he has already written.

[0185] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 13 SEPTEMBER 1854

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/42). Published: B&C, I, p. 128. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 108.

Wednesday evening | September 13th /1

My dear Mother

There is a general break-up here on Friday next – so on Friday you may expect me at Hanover Terrace. The boat crosses at 1/2 past 3 in the afternoon – and there is a train from Folkestone which starts at 7 in the evening, and reaches town about 10. If we get through the Customs House in time this is the train we shall travel by, and I shall most likely be home soon after eleven. Let the servants sit up, with orders not to despair of me until 12 o'Clock has struck – by which time if I do not ring at the bell they may conclude that I have been obliged to stay at Folkestone – or change my plans in some way. Leave me some cold meat, and a bottle of beer, I shall want nothing more.

I hope I shall find you all right in your accustomed atmosphere of the Park. We are well out of the way of Cholera there, I should think. My love to Charley. All news I reserve till we meet.

In haste | Affectionately yours | W Wilkie Collins
I have got the Morning Chronicle Review.<sup>2</sup> Some one sent it here. I will bring it for you in my trunk

-
1. The letter is clearly sent from the Villa du Camp de Droite, Boulogne, the dating being confirmed by the correspondence with [0184] to Charles Ward, 10 September 1854.
  2. Again see [0184] to Charles Ward, 10 September, n. 1.

[0186] TO [ROSA] BULLAR,<sup>1</sup> 25 SEPTEMBER 1854

MS: Yale. Extract: Davis, pp. 150–151. Published: BGLL, I, p. 109 (as to Mrs Henry Bullar).

17. Hanover Terrace | Regent's Park | September 25th 1854

My dear Mrs Bullar,

Dickens's notes to me are only signed with his initials. I have cut the enclosed signature off one of his letters, which I cannot part with as it is full of references to our pleasant journey to Italy.<sup>2</sup>

Pray remember me kindly to all at Basset,<sup>3</sup> and if Henry is with you, tell him how sorry I was not to see him when he called here.

Very truly yours | W. Wilkie Collins.

-
1. Since Henry Bullar seems never to have married, and old Mrs Bullar (Susannah Sarah Whatman Bullar, née Lobb) died back in 1835, this is likely to be Rosa Bullar, née Follett (c. 1817–96), the wife of John Bullar Jr, also a barrister. HC was particularly close to Rosa – see [0576] to HC, 20 April 1864.
  2. This must be CD's letter to WC of 14 December 1853, recorded in Pilgrim with the signature excised (VII, p. 226).
  3. Basset Wood, near Southampton, the home of the Bullars.

[0187] TO MRS RICHARDSON,<sup>1</sup> [8 JANUARY 1851–8 NOVEMBER 1854]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 109–110.

17. Hanover Terrace | Wednesday

Dear Mrs Richardson,

If I had my time, either morning or evening, at my own disposal, it would give me the greatest pleasure to join your party on the 16th. But I am just now tied too fast to my desk to escape, even for a few hours in the evening. Morning, noon, and night printer's boys are in the house, and morning noon, and night, I am obliged to answer their demands. This bustle and business will soon be over I hope; but my work will last me another week at least; and will therefore prevent me – however I may wish to do so – from accepting your kind invitation.

My brother has a dinner engagement for Thursday; but he will endeavour to get away in good time, and present himself at Radnor Place, before the festivities are over –

With kind regards to the Doctor, | Believe me, My dear Madam,

Yours very sincerely, | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Mrs Richardson

-
1. Wife of William Richardson, MD, then the Collins family physician and resident at 17, Radnor Place, on the north side of Hyde Park (see Davis, p. 50).
  2. The dating remains uncertain. While WC lived at Hanover Terrace there were nine months with a Thursday 16 – January and October 1851; September and December 1852; June 1853; February, March and November 1854; August 1855. Among these, WC was not in London in September 1852 or August 1855, but was not known to be pressed by the printers on any of the other available dates. The notepaper, with an embossed crown in a circle with 'SUPERFINE SATIN PAPER' around it, suggests late 1854 or 1855. If WC were still busy with the Christmas number of Household Words, published on 14 December, the best option might be 8 November 1854.

[0188] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 18 DECEMBER 1854

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, folder [1854] [Dec. 12]), with a lengthy 'Note'.<sup>1</sup> Published: Lawrence, pp. 396–398 (Note only, assigned to [December 1854]); B&C, I, pp. 129–131 (as two separate documents, the Note assigned to [December 1854]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 110.

17. Hanover Terrace | Monday morning<sup>2</sup>

My dear Edward,

Thank you for the pains you are taking about my books. I have left [del] "Basil" at the office today. Will you explain to M. Forgues that the first edition in 3 volumes is out of print?<sup>3</sup> I am therefore obliged to send him the cheap edition.<sup>4</sup>

Don't talk about having no home to go to – you know you ~~at~~ are at home here. Come and eat your Christmas dinner with us – you will find your knife, fork, plate and chair all ready for you. Time six o'clock.

Millais is still staying with us. He has however got the most delightful rooms in a new artist's house, just behind the church with the extinguisher-spire in Langham Place.<sup>5</sup> He has a noble painting-room – a large bedroom, a bath-room and the full use of a kitchen, for £50 a year! Nothing in Paris, as cheap as that I suspect. How I should like to be with you!<sup>6</sup> how I wish I could get out of the way of the Patriots!<sup>7</sup> Nothing is left to send to the soldiers now – but Ices for next summer. Every man has his potted grouse, flannel waistcoats of the finest lambswool, /Bible/ prayer-book, and Butlers [sic] Analogy<sup>8</sup> – (to wipe his a-se with). Our virtuous country women have been dancing with the Russian officers at a ball at Brighton – that is the last war news.<sup>9</sup>

The paper goes on famously – I have done an article for this week on Chaucer, apropos of Bell's admirable edition.<sup>10</sup> The Christmas number of Household Words has made a great impression. It is thought the best – a noble, an exquisite story by Dickens in it – a delightful sketch of two French children by Sala. [del] My "Poor Traveller" is a broken-down Lawyer – who has "given satisfaction", I am glad to say.<sup>11</sup> I am just putting the last hand to the Finale of my play<sup>12</sup> – more, however of this, and many things when we meet.

Mind you come on Christmas day

Affectionately yours | W.W.C.

There are no /French/ books or plays I particularly want just now – or I should take advantage of your kind offer – give my respects to /M./ Regnier if you see him again, and if he remembers me.<sup>13</sup>

Note

-

It seems to me that people who think this new Proclamation by the Pope of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary,<sup>14</sup> likely to damage the Papist Church, take rather too hasty a view, and decide (as it appears to me) quite erroneously.<sup>15</sup> Damage to the Papist Church can only come from the Papists themselves. If this new piece of sacred Tom Foolery shakes the faith of individuals /Romanists/, or disunites congregations, down the Church may go in good time certainly. If it does neither, the Church stands firm. That seems clear enough to begin with.

Now what shakes a man's faith? – an outrage on his common sense or rather a flat official contradiction to whatever is purely the result of the exercise of his reasoning powers. Such a contradiction to the reasoning power of any man woman or child in this world (not absolutely an idiot [sic]) may most certainly be found in this new Proclamation. But how can that affect individual Romanists – or Romanist congregations. Does any Papist make use of his reason when he lets his Church give him his religion? Does not his Church expressly tell him he must give up his reason, and accept mysteries which outrage it, implicitly as matters of faith Does not every good Papist – who will not let his butcher, baker, wife, or children, rob /him/ of one particle of his common sense if he can help it, voluntarily hand that common sense over altogether to the keeping of his Priest whenever his Priest asks him for it? If this be true – and I can't see how it can be otherwise than true – where is the common sense, where is the reasoning power, to be outraged and contradicted among Papist congregations by the Pope's new Proclamation? What is there in the Immaculate Conception to outrage millions of people who believe (if one may abuse the word by using it in such a sense) – who believe in “the Real Presence”? When Smith, a ~~Pap~~ lay Papist, believes that if he gives money to Jones a clerical Papist [~~del~~] to pray his soul out of Purgatory, Jones will succeed if Jones prays fairly up to his terms, what in Heaven's name is there in the Immaculate Conception to stagger Smith?

For these reasons I think that the new Proclamation will rather be popular than otherwise inside the pale of the Papist Church.

Outside it has outraged the independent thinkers (a minority) and the Protestant Party – another minority compared with dunderheaded humanity in general. [~~del~~] Said Dunderheaded humanity – when it falls to being religious, wants anything you please in a religion – except common sense. In an age when thousands of people join the Mormons, I cannot see, for one, why the Immaculate Conception should stand in the Papists' way in making new converts. If infinite weakness, [~~del~~] eagerly swallows infinite nonsense at the hands of Joe Smith, why [~~del~~] not at the hands of Pius the Ninth? – I am not at all sure that this consideration has not weighed privately with the Sacred College – and that ~~they~~ /the theological physicians of long standing/ have not slyly dropped a fresh infusion of nonsense into their great dogmatic dose, with the wise purpose of not letting even the smallest quack /in the same line of business/ go too far ahead before them. /

---

1. While the Note is not physically attached to the letter at Huntington, or explicitly referred to in it, the dating, paper and ink all suggest that the two documents belong together. Lawrence (p. 399 n. 10) considers that the Note might be associated with [0179] to Pigott, [4/11/18 July] 1854, which he assigns impossibly to '12 or 19 December 1854'. Lawrence also suggests that the Note might have been 'intended for publication in The Leader' (p. 392), though the style and tone suggest rather a personal response to an opinion expressed by Pigott. WC's letter itself is clearly written point by point in reply to one just received from Pigott, which might well have included a comment on the recent Papal Encyclical.

2. Dating from the only Monday available between the publication of the 1854 Christmas number of Household Words and WC's piece on Chaucer in the Leader.

3. On Forgues, see [0145] to F.O. Ward, 5 March 1853.

4. This edition, not recorded in Gasson (p. 15), must be Vol. 20 in the 'Bentley's Railway Library', advertised as 'Double vol., 2s.' in the Times, Thursday, 6 April 1854, p. 13a.

5. At Langham Chambers across from All Souls' Church – see Fleming, pp. 141–143.

6. As the references to Forgues and French books suggest, Pigott was clearly paying a visit to Paris.

7. Referring to the wave of patriotic fervour during the Crimean War, which tended to take the form of supplying comforts for the stricken soldiers – see, among many examples, 'Comforts for the Crimea', Daily News, Monday, 25 December 1854, p. 3.

8. Referring to The Analogy of Religion, Natural and Revealed (1736) by Joseph Butler, Bishop of Durham (1692–1752).

9. Referring to a recent letter to the Times (Friday, 15 December 1854, p. 8), complaining that, at a ball at Brighton Pavilion on December 12 for the benefit of the Patriotic Fund, English ladies were seen dancing with Russian officers 'whose brethren in arms ... have been engaged in the cowardly act of stabbing ... our poor wounded men and officers'.

10. Unsigned, 'Chaucer', Leader (23 December 1854) pp. 1215–1216. This was a lengthy review of the first volume of Poetical Works of Geoffrey Chaucer, ed. Robert Bell (London: Parker & Son, 1854), eventually completed in eight volumes.

11. Referring to 'The Seven Poor Travellers', the Household Words extra Christmas number for 1854, issued 14 December. The first tale was by Dickens, the second and fifth by Sala, the third and seventh by Adelaide Procter, the fourth by WC – afterwards reprinted as 'The Lawyer's Story of a Stolen Letter' in After Dark (1856) – and the sixth by Eliza Lynn.

12. Presumably referring to The Lighthouse, first performed on 16 June 1855 at Tavistock House by CD's amateur company, and first professionally staged on 10 August 1857 at the Royal Olympic Theatre.

13. François Régnier (1807–85), leading French actor with the Comédie Française. See [0763] to him of 30 August 1867.

14. On 8 December 1854, Pope Pius IX issued the Encyclical, Ineffabilis Deus, which formally pronounced the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary herself (not that of Jesus). The key statement read:

Declaramus, pronuntiamus et definimus doctrinam quae tenet beatissimam Virginem Mariam in primo instanti suae conceptionis fuisse singulari Omnipotentis Dei gratia et privilegio, intuitu meritorum Christi Jesu Salvatoris humani generis, ab omni originalis culpae labe praeservatam immunem, esse a Deo revelatam, atque idcirco ab omnibus fidelibus firmiter constanterque credendam.

(‘We declare, pronounce, and define that the doctrine which holds that the most Blessed Virgin Mary, in the first instance of her conception, by a singular grace and privilege granted by Almighty God, in view of the merits of Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the human race, was preserved free from all stain of original sin, is a doctrine revealed by God and therefore to be believed firmly and constantly by all the faithful.’)

‘Papal Encyclicals Online’. URL: <<http://www.papalencyclicals.net/Pius09/p9ineff.htm>>

15. For example, the Times carried a very critical piece the next day which concluded, ‘We shall await with some curiosity this bold experiment on the credulity of mankind.’ (9 December 1854, p. 7a-b). The considered judgment of the Leader itself appear in an editorial entitled ‘The “Immaculate Conception”’ (13 January 1855, pp. 37–38): ‘If anything has risked the gradual march of the Holy Catholic Church into a new century without total disruption, it is this foolish attempt to stake its existence upon a new axiom of dogmatic physiology uttered in the fifth decade of the nineteenth century.’

[0189] TO CHARLES WARD, [LATE 1854]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/86). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 110–111.

Wednesday

My dear Ward,

Will you ask your porter or Stationer to buy for me

Tales of the First French Revolution | translated by the | author of | Emilia Wyndham?

They appeared some time ago in the Parlour Library – now published by Hodgson in Paternoster Row.<sup>2</sup>

I positively cannot get the book in this neighbourhood – though I order it. The damned fools send me Lamartine’s Pictures of the French Revolution – History of the Girondins – everything but the right book. You have more sensible people about you, and may succeed if you write down the title for them. I want to consult these tales as soon as possible to make quite sure that I am not unconsciously getting on their ground in my present story.<sup>3</sup>

Look into the book when it is got. If there is a story in it called “Sealed orders” or “Secret orders” – it is the right thing.<sup>4</sup> I have a horrid presentiment that even your emissaries will make a mistake if they possibly can.

Ever yours | W.W.C.

---

1. Conjectural dating based on the reference to the preparations for writing ‘Sister Rose’. CD had read the first half of the story by 19 March 1855 (Pilgrim, VII, p. 570).

2. Tales of the First French Revolution, collected by Anne Marsh (1791–1874), author of Emilia Wyndham and other novels, appeared in 1849 as vol. 31 of the Parlour Library, initially published by Edward Lacey. See [0225] to Thomas Hodgson of 1 November 1855.

3. WC’s short story ‘Sister Rose’, set at the time of the French Revolution and published in four parts in Household Words, 7–28 April 1855.

4. Marsh’s Tales does not include a story under either title, though its second sequence, entitled ‘Family Pictures; or, The Life of a Poor Village Pastor and His Children’ and apparently based on Familiengeschichten (‘Family Stories’, 1797–1804, 12 vols) by the German novelist August Lafontaine, prominently features the sisters Lisa and Mina who both fall in love with the same man, and contains, among its sixty-five chapters, one entitled ‘The Secret’ (Chapter XXV, pp. 122–131).

[0190] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, [1854]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 111.

Wednesday afternoon

My dear Edward,

Will you send me a proof of the article inside, by post or any how you like, as soon as possible? – and I will bring it corrected to the Office on Friday afternoon.

Will you also, at the earliest convenience, ask Mr Galloway<sup>2</sup> to ascertain at the Haymarket whether my name is down, or not – and, if it is, whether I can take in a friend, as well as myself? I got in, the last time I tried; but there was an explanation and botheration. The application had been received, but the name not put down. Then there was another Mr Collins (D—n him, whoever he is!) who did the theatres for some other paper – so perhaps it is desirable to see that “Mr Wilkie Collins”<sup>3</sup> is set down for the Leader or there may be confusion. I only trouble you about this, because three words from Galloway spoken at the right time will set it all right. Affecty yours

W.W.C.

You have not yet come for the walk!

---

1. Since neither the play nor the article in the Leader referred to can be pinned down, this letter can only be allocated generally to 1854, when WC was most active as a theatre critic.
2. Alfred Edmund Galloway, on the Leader payroll from 1852, and registered as its printer and publisher from 21 October 1854 to 10 July 1858.
3. The forename is in fact underlined three times.

[0191] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 21 JANUARY 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 111–112.

17, Hanover Terrace | Sunday

My dear Edward,

I am inundating you with letters – but I have a solemn purpose to answer by the present epistle. A West Indian Friend of Thomas Price's has sent a letter of introduction to me,<sup>2</sup> and a card informing me that he lives at Gibson Square Islington. I dare not attempt to find the place out, but I will ask him to dinner – and take the chance of his finding us out. He has never been in England before, and I should think would turn out in consequence rather an amusing fellow. He has behaved excellently to Price, who strongly recommends him (through me) to your kindness as a West Indian Waif and Southern Stray on our national shores. If I ask him to dinner at six on Saturday next will you come? Also keep yourself as disengaged as you can for Monday the 29th or Tuesday – on one of which days, most likely, Dickens will be here to go to the Marylebone.<sup>3</sup>

Affectionately yours | WWC

I intend to do you the very best review I can of Etty, for the next number.<sup>4</sup>

How about that (possibly-to-be-d—d) Play of mine? Has it been sent? and lost? Or is it still at the Office?<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Dating from the review in the Leader.
2. Thomas Price has not been fully identified but is an old friend of the Collins family. See to HC of 14 August 1850 [0077] and 29 July 1853 [0149].
3. The Royal Marylebone Theatre was playing As You Like It on both these nights, starring William Wallack and his wife.
4. ‘William Etty, R.A.’, Leader (27 January 1855), pp. 90–91, was a review of Alexander Gilchrist’s The Life of William Etty, R.A. (1855).
5. The play is unknown – but see [0212] to Pigott of 9 June 1855.

[0192] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 24 JANUARY 1855

MS: BL (Add. 46652, ff. 247–8). Published: B&C, I, p. 136. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 112.

17, Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | January 24th 1855 /

Private

My dear Sir,

Yesterday, in clearing out one of my study-table drawers, I disinterred the enclosed account of the Second Edition of the “Rambles”.<sup>1</sup> Will you kindly hand it to Mr Marsh to make up to the present time, and to place among the expenses incurred the £10, which you obliged me by advancing to Mr Brandling?<sup>2</sup>

Our second edition has now been published three years! – and, for the sake of the novelty of the sensation, I should like to feel, this year, that it has returned something – however little – to the “owners on both sides”. Will you, therefore, kindly send me a cheque, when your settling day comes, for whatever share of the profits I may be entitled to, up to the present time? As to the copies on hand, I am sure you will agree with me that any attempt to dispose of them now, would be perfectly useless. We must wait till better times. The war has certainly had a specially disastrous influence on us.<sup>3</sup> I was privately informed, some little time since, that the Great Review of “Hide and Seek” was actually in type, and that but for Sebastopol, the Thunderer’s notice would have appeared some months ago.<sup>4</sup> After this, you will not be surprised to hear that I side with Bright on the subject of the war!<sup>5</sup>

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To | George Bentley Esqr.

---

1. The second revised edition was published with the original lithographs in late 1851 (dated 1852).
2. Henry C. Brandling, who created the lithographs for Rambles.
3. In March 1854 France and Britain had entered the Crimean War to prevent Russia from taking over territory from the declining Ottoman Empire. The war had had a depressing effect on the sales of fiction in particular.
4. Hide and Seek had been published in three volumes in June 1854, but in the event no review appeared in the Times – see [0171] to J.T. Marsh, 17 June 1854. The siege of the Russian naval base at Sebastopol had begun on 17 October 1854 but the city fell only on 9 September 1855.
5. John Bright (1811–1889; ODNB), son of a Lancashire miller, advocate of free trade, and MP for Durham from 1843. On 31 March 1854 he had made an impassioned speech in the House of Commons protesting the declaration of war on Russia.

[0193] EDWARD PIGOTT, 26 JANUARY 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 112–113.

Friday morning

My dear Edward,

I have just written to George to tell him we are coming down by the 4.50 train, the day before the wedding.<sup>2</sup> – Mind you are in time! As to hindrances – there must be none allowed. Go you must.<sup>3</sup> As to George, nothing ought to pass his lips on Wednesday but oysters, and the strongest Port Wine.

You say in your letter “I return the Mss”. Is the word will left out between “I” and “return”? – Nothing has reached me but “Fanny Fern”,<sup>4</sup> up to this time of writing ( $\frac{1}{2}$  p<sup>t</sup> 3). Have you sent the Play?<sup>5</sup> There is no hurry. I only want to be certain that it is not lost /

Send me books – more books – Fanny Fern is only fit for the Water Closet<sup>6</sup>

Affectionately yrs | WWC

---

1. The Friday before the wedding mentioned in the letter.
2. Edward’s younger brother George Octavius married Maria Matilda Ricketts at St Swithin’s, Walcot, in Bath on Thursday, 1 February 1855.
3. Here ‘you’ is triply underlined.
4. Novel by Sarah Payson Willis (1811–72), also known as Parton after her third husband, James Parton, American feminist and children’s writer under the name Fanny Fern.
5. See [0191] to Pigott of 21 January 1855.
6. WC attacked her best-selling novel Ruth Hall at length in the Leader – see [0196] to Pigott of 6 February 1855.

[0194] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 3 FEBRUARY 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, folder [1855] [Feb. 3]). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 113–114.

17. Hanover Terrace | Saturday

My dear Edward,

I have just read the new number, and have detected a mistake in the Literature which must be guarded against for the future. The article called "Five Fictions" is I suspect one that must have stood over some little time.<sup>2</sup> At any rate it contains a review of a book called "The Old Chelsea Bun House",<sup>3</sup> which I reviewed in a Batch a few weeks since.<sup>4</sup> You will see it by referring to the File – and will see also that, although I noticed the antique pretension of the book unfavourably, I spoke far more enthusiastically of it than Reviewer No 2 – picking out characters by name for special commendation – and so forth. There is a second error of double-work of the same kind in the same article – only luckily I have only contemplated the notice this time. You sent me "The Step-Son" to review. It is now on my table!!! and yet there it is noticed this week!!! How the deuce has this happened? How was the Step-Son reviewed, without the book? and the Bun House too, which is still in my possession? Is anybody at work on "Wolfert's Roost"?<sup>5</sup> or "The Warden"?<sup>6</sup> – both of which I think of tackling this week. Let me know the names of all the books done by others before I get to work for you this week. Also if there is any over matter left of long-standing, would it not be better (for fear of future accidents) to have it rigidly examined with reference to the File? It is a capital number of the paper – variously vigorous and interesting.

I hope you have quite recovered from your depression, from Bailey and from Balaklava!<sup>7</sup> Any news (erotic or otherwise) of dear old George will be welcome.<sup>8</sup> I go to Paris tomorrow week.<sup>9</sup>

Affectionately yours | W.W.C.

Don't forget a line or two in next week's Summary for Bentley's new speculation.<sup>10</sup> It really deserves mentioning, as a plucky experiment in these barbarous times. His account to me of the state of the book trade was something awful. Damn and blast the War!

---

1. Dating from the reference to WC's trip to France the following week, the reference to the newly married George and the contents of the Leader.

2. 'Five Fictions', Leader (3 February 1855), pp. 115–116.

3. Anne Manning, The Old Chelsea Bun House; A Tale of the Last Century (London: A. Hall Virtue & Co., 1855).

4. Leader (6 January 1855), pp. 19–20.

5. 'Geoffrey Crayon's New Sketch Book. Chronicles of Wolfert's Roost and other papers. By Washington Irving', Leader (24 February 1855), pp. 187–188.

6. 'The Warden by Anthony Trollope', Leader (17 February 1855), pp. 164–165.

7. Apart from the battle in the Crimea, the allusions here escape us.

8. Edward's brother had married on 1 February 1855.

9. WC left for France on the morning of Sunday, 11 February 1855.

10. See notes to [0196] to Pigott of 6 February 1855.

[0195] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 5 FEBRUARY 1855

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 114

17 Hanover Terrace | February 5th 1855

My dear Edward,

I have just a minute since the receipt of your letter to thank you for the cheque, and to say that I will get the Reviews done. Delighted to hear about George. I shall be at the office in a day or two.

Affectly | W.W.C.

Very glad to hear of Carrs [sic] Election<sup>1</sup>

---

1. The Rev. W. H. Carr was elected to the Garrick Club on 3 February 1855.

[0196] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 6 FEBRUARY 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 115.

17 Hanover Terrace | Tuesday

My dear Edward,

I am engaged tonight, Wednesday, and Thursday – so I am afraid I can't manage the Drama in the event of nobody being ready, surely the Times critique would do – a play of Boucicault's is of no great consequence.<sup>2</sup>

Read the enclosed Review in the copy, before you send it to the Printer's. If it is too fierce with the Publishers, cut out just as you please.<sup>3</sup> The notice is instead of Batch – for which I have nothing like books enough. – you shall have Washington Irving<sup>4</sup> and the British Institution<sup>5</sup> – and anything else I can get time for, before I go.<sup>6</sup> I shall be at the office I hope on Friday.

I can't write for summary without Bentley's Prospectus – Keep a place open (not more than three or four lines) in the Summary, and I will get another Prospectus somehow.<sup>7</sup>

Affectionately yours | W.W.C.

-
1. Dating from the various publications referred to in the letter.
  2. Janet Pride by Dion Boucicault opened at The Adelphi on 5 February and was reviewed in the Times (6 February 1855, p. 7d), while a short notice only appeared in the Leader (10 February 1855), p. 141.
  3. 'A New Bookselling Dodge. Ruth Hal: A Domestic Tale of the Present Time. By Fanny Fern', Leader (10 February 1855), p. 139–40. The book was considered 'utterly unworthy of review' but for what it tells us about the 'new system of puffing'.
  4. Review of Irving's Chronicles of Wolfert's Roost in the Leader (24 February 1855), pp. 187–188.
  5. 'The British Institution', Leader (10 February 1855), pp. 140–141.
  6. WC went to France with CD on Sunday 11 February 1855.
  7. An untitled paragraph approving a new publishing venture on the part of Richard Bentley, to produce high quality cheaper editions at 6s, appeared in the Leader (10 February 1855), p. 136.

[0197] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 9 FEBRUARY 1855

MS: BL (Add. 46652, f. 250). Published: BGLL, I, p. 116.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | February 9th 1855 /

My dear Sir,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of Mr Bentley's cheque for £13.2.8 – being my share of the profits of the Second Edition of "Rambles Beyond Railways" up to the date of February 1855.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | George Bentley Esqre

-
1. WC had asked Bentley to make up the accounts in [0192] to Bentley of 24 January. No record of this payment appears in HC's bank account so it might have been a cheque payable to WC or bearer which he simply cashed (Coutts: Exors WmC).

[0198] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 14 FEBRUARY 1855

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/43). Published: B&C, I, pp. 136–138. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 116.

Hotel Meurice | Paris | February 14th 1855/

My dear Mother,

We got here on Monday evening,<sup>1</sup> with much less suffering from the cold than we had anticipated. The sea-passage was, for the time of year, an easy one, the greatest sharpness of the frosty air being on land, at Boulogne. Here, the difference between the French atmosphere and the English made itself piercingly felt. Compared with French frost, our national frost seems to be always wrapped up in more or less /of/ soft fog. We should have felt this difference unpleasantly enough on the railway from Boulogne to Paris – but for the excellent metal cases of boiling-water placed in each carriage, and renewed several times in the course of the journey. These kept our feet and legs warm, and made the air like the air of a room. Tell Charley, with my love, that we passed, [del] beyond Amiens miles of fields overflowed, and now covered with the smoothest perfectest ice, unmarked by the traces of a single skate.

We are settled here in a delightful apartment, looking out on the Tuileries, gorgeously-furnished drawing-room – bedrooms with Turkey carpets – reception room – hall – cupboards – passages – all to ourselves. Paris is almost snowed up. The Boulevard /pavement/ is inches thick with snow and ice – the Cafés are filled with shivering Frenchmen who congregate round the stoves.<sup>2</sup> It is the height of the gay season here, in spite of the Siberian state of the weather. The great masked ball at the Opera takes place this week. The two Theatres we have been to [del] up to this time, proved to be well filled. In short Paris amuses itself as gaily as ever, and only talks occasionally on the [del] miserable subject of the war in the East.<sup>3</sup>

The principal effect of the Alliance here seems to be shown in the great additional number of English inscriptions one sees [del] in the shop windows, and in the increase of the [del] once rare class who speak English. Shopkeepers, cabmen & waiters, ~~and~~ if they only know two words of our language, let off those two words at our countrymen in the most vehemently persevering way. I suppose this is by way of practising for the Exhibition time.<sup>4</sup> The building is externally nearly complete. The roof only is of glass – all the rest is stone-work of the solidest kind – evidently built to serve some permanent purpose quite unconnected with Sight-seers and Exhibitions.

I think we shall be away about ten days, dating from the day of our start. But nothing is positively settled yet. Put any letters that come for me, away in a drawer – and tell any enquiring friends, generally, that I shall be back towards the end of the month.

Mind you write me an answer to this, directing simply “Hotel Meurice, Paris” – and telling me how you and Charley are, and any home news there is. I shall most likely write again, and ~~tell~~ warn you of the exact day of our return.

ever Affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

I suppose my parcel has gone safely to Parkers by this time – and that Charley and Ward have settled the money-matters with my cheques – also that my packet of books went to Pigott. /<sup>5</sup>

---

1. WC was travelling with CD.

2. A Times report dated February 14 read: ‘Paris represents something of a Crimean aspect today, as far as deep snow, bitter cold and high winds may produce the resemblance.’ (16 February 1855, p. 7).

3. Again referring to the Crimean War in which Britain and France were allies.

4. The Exposition Universelle, designed to rival the 1851 Great Exhibition in London, was held in the new Palais de l’Industrie in the Champs Elysées from 15 May to 15 November 1855.

5. In this letter WC makes no mention of being unwell, though CD writes to François Regnier on the same day: ‘Collins not being very well has seen Dr. Olliffe, and the Doctor has given him some strong medicine, and has cautioned him not to go out in the snow for two or three days, except in a carriage and then well wrapped up.’ (Pilgrim, VII, p. 537).

[0199] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 19 FEBRUARY 1855

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/44). Published: B&C, I, p. 138. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 116.

Hotel Meurice | Monday Feby 19th/

My dear Mother,

We propose leaving this tomorrow (Tuesday the 20th) – sleeping at Boulogne on Tuesday night, and crossing, weather permitting on Wednesday – in which case we shall be due at London Bridge at a quarter past nine on Wednesday night. The only delay which can take place may be occasioned by the state of the sea. If we find it blowing a gale we shall probably wait a day for calmer weather. But no such necessity will I hope occur. Under any circumstances, leave the door on the latch /and a kettle with some warm water at the fire and some wine on the table/ on Wednesday night – for we may be after our time in consequence of the snow.

It has been three degrees colder here than in London. But we have been amusing ourselves in spite of the Polar state of the temperature. Did I tell you [del] before I started, that we meditated a further trip to Bordeaux? I think not. We have been obliged to give up this “mad” idea (as you would call it); the Railway traffic in the West of France having been literally stopped altogether by the snow.

We have escaped with only two dinner parties, and have had our time to ourselves for the most part, from morning till night. I must wait till I see you to tell you all [del] our adventures – having neither time nor space to write about them now. With love to Charley

Affectionately yours | W. Wilkie Collins

[0200] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 22 FEBRUARY 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 116–117.

17. Hanover Terrace | Thursday evening

My dear Edward,

I got back last night – not at all well, but having enjoyed my trip very much nevertheless.

I gave your message to Regnier,<sup>2</sup> who sends all sorts of kind regards in return, and desires me at the same time to upbraid you for never having sent him two Guide-books to the Palace at Sydenham, written by the late S. Phillips,<sup>3</sup> which Regnier says you promised to get for him. “Je veux mon Sydenham – ou mourir!”<sup>4</sup> were his last words to me, as we shook hands.

I went twice to Galignani’s – but no packet had arrived for you. The second time, I caused special inquiries to be made – but they only resulted in the fact that nothing had come directed to you. This was on Monday afternoon – and we left Paris on Tuesday morning.

Send me any books you have for next week – and come yourself and have a gossip. My maladies will keep me at home both morning and evening. So choose your own time.

Any more news of George?<sup>5</sup>

Affectionately yours | W.W.C.

The last admirable article on “A National Party” is quoted at full length in Galignani.<sup>6</sup>

---

1. WC went to France with CD on Sunday 11 February 1855, returning on Wednesday evening 21 February 1855.

2. On Regnier, see [0188] to Pigott, 18 December 1854.

3. Samuel Phillips (1814–54), reviewer for the Times. His Guide to the Crystal Palace and Park was published in 1854 and went through three editions that year.

4. ‘I want my Sydenham, or to die!’

5. Pigott’s brother who had married at the beginning of February.

6. Galignani’s Messenger, the English language daily newspaper published in Paris. The article referred to is ‘A National Party. The Next Step in the Enquiry’, from the Leader (17 February 1855), p. 156.

[0201] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 14 MARCH 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 117–118.

Wednesday /

My dear Edward,

I can easily make an article out of the books I have got<sup>2</sup> – and one for next week on the novel called “Thorney Hall”<sup>3</sup> – which is a very nice story, far beyond the average.

The first edition of “Antonina” was all sold – Of the second, we had some “remainders” left which were disposed of to Tegg (I think).<sup>4</sup> The only way of procuring the book is to get a second hand copy. If you don’t mind sending to Mudie’s – or failing there to Willis’s in Covent Garden, or Tegg’s which would perhaps be better – I will repay you the money disbursed, I am almost certain I saw the book for sale in Mudie’s Catalogue at 7/6 – where old novels range from six to nine shillings – which last is the maximum price it would be desirable to give. I can’t go to Mudie’s myself, in the state I am still in – Half an hour’s walking or riding is as much as I can safely manage.

I shall send you the article tomorrow – leaving the proof this time to your care.

Affectly yours | W.W.C.

Thank you for promise of the cheque. I wish I could afford to work without wanting cheques for the present – But I am as poor as Job just now – in addition to my other misfortunes – and am hard put to it to tide comfortably over the next three or four months – Ah! that d—d money!<sup>5</sup> “Maupertuis! cher Maupertuis, que notre vie est peu de chose!”<sup>6</sup> When I think of the asses who roll in money!

---

1. Dating from the review of Thorney Hall.

2. The review ‘A Strong Minded Heroine. Grace Lee. A Tale. By Julie Kavanagh’, in the Leader of 17 March 1855, is probably by WC. But he did not review any others that week – these may have been held over to accompany his review of Thorney Hall.

3. ‘Four Novels’, Leader (24 March 1855), pp. 282–283, included a review of Thorney Hall: A Story of an Old Family by ‘Holme Lee’ (1855). WC liked the novel and correctly guessed that the pseudonym was a woman’s – in fact that of Harriet Parr.

4. William Tegg & Co., booksellers and publishers of 85 Queen Street, Cheapside.

5. Presumably with passages like this in mind, Lycett states, ‘On more than one occasion he [WC] had to chase payments from Pigott, who, as a result of the problems associated with his family estate, was also surprisingly strapped for cash.’ (p. 138).

6. ‘Maupertuis! dear Maupertuis, what a little thing our life is.’ Referring to Pierre Louis Moureau de Maupertuis (1698–1759), free-thinking French mathematician and scientist, a member of the Royal Society who put forward the idea of the survival of the fittest. WC quotes from the opening of the Ode to Maupertuis (‘La vie est un songe’) by Frederic the Great of Prussia, as cited in Boswell’s Life of Samuel Johnson.

[0202] TO PETER CUNNINGHAM,<sup>1</sup> 16 MARCH 1855

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 118–119.

17 Hanover Terrace | March 16th 1855

My dear Peter,

Are you engaged to propose any new candidate for the Garrick just now? If not, you would very much oblige me by proposing a friend of mine, and Millais’ and Leech’s (among other members),<sup>2</sup> who is a good “clubbable” fellow – young, and so enthusiastically devoted to Painting that he sold out of the army to become an artist, and is now studying with all his heart and might to become worthy of his new profession. Mr Luard<sup>3</sup> (the candidate) is now living in the same Chambers with Millais, who will furnish you with all due particulars of Christian names &c &c

Leech will second Mr Luard, but he thinks it very desirable – as of course I do, too – to have him proposed by a member of the Committee. Hence the present application to you. If you can help us, I am sure you will.

Ever yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Peter Cunningham Esqre

---

1. CD’s friend Cunningham was a member of the Garrick Club from 7 February 1852 until 14 April 1860.

2. John Leech (1817–64: ODNB), painter and illustrator – see [0600] to HC, 3 November 1864. A member of the Garrick Club from 21 April 1849 until his death.

3. John Dalbiac Luard (1830–60: ODNB), who exhibited at the Royal Academy from 1855. Member of the Garrick Club from his election on 7 April 1855 until his death.

[0203] TO E. M. WARD, 13/20 MARCH 1855

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 41–42 (dated ‘[20 March 1855]’); B&C, I, p. 139 (also dated ‘[20 March 1855]’). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 119.

17 Hanover Terrace | Tuesday

My dear Ned,

I have ordered the Athenaeum, and shall read the article about you with the greatest interest[.] /Mr/ Darvill's letter puts me up to the facts of the case which are certainly disgraceful enough.<sup>1</sup> The whole question of protection of the interests of ~~artis~~ authors as well as artists in their own works, is coming before the public – in connection with the taking off of the Newspaper Stamp, which will enable any scoundrel who starts a low paper to steal articles from good papers – or whole books, with perfect impunity, as the act now stands – just in fact as the scoundrel stole your name and sold his copy of ~~th~~ your picture with it.<sup>2</sup> If nothing else will do, the authors must have A League and the Artists must join them. Parliaments and hereditary legislators don't care a straw about us or our interests – we must somehow make them care.

I will mention the case to Dickens of course the next time I see him – or, if I don't soon get well, – the next time he comes here.<sup>3</sup> I am in the Doctor's hands again – a long story which I will not bother you with now.

[del] I hope Mrs Ward is progressing satisfactorily towards what some French author calls "the Sublime Fact of Maternity."<sup>4</sup> My love to the children. My mother has been laid up with Influenza – and is only just out of bed. Charley goes on slowly – slowly – with his picture. We are all sick and sorry together – but as patient as righteous Job – and as cheerful about "the good time coming" as Mr Henry Russell the eminent vocalist.<sup>5</sup>

My mother sends all kind messages – so does Charley. Millais has been ill in bed, to complete the partie carré [sic].<sup>6</sup> He has only just got to work again.

Ever yours | W.W.C.

---

1. On Monday 5th March a case was brought before the Marlborough Street Court by Ward to seek remedy for the injury to his artistic reputation caused by the fact that a poor copy of his 1851 painting 'James II receiving Intelligence of the Landing of the Prince of Orange' had been sold as an original. Appearing in court, Ward's solicitor Henry Darvill pointed out that existing statutes provided no suitable remedy in such a case, and suggested that a law should be enacted setting up a public system for the registration and validation of original paintings. The case was reported under the heading 'Pictorial Copy-right and Copy-wrong' in the Athenæum of Saturday, 10 March, pp. 294–295. In the issue of 17 March, p. 322, under the same heading, there appeared a longer article commenting on the correspondence generated and the various issues raised. This article cited a detailed letter from Darvill (dated 10 March), which clearly pointed the finger of blame in the Ward case at the dealers Melton and Clark. The fact that WC has seen Darvill's letter but not the Athenæum article implies that a copy of the letter must have been sent to him by Ward. Some doubt remains, then, whether WC's letter dates from the Tuesday after the appearance of the first or the second article in the Athenæum.

2. The 'act' referred to here is the 1842 Copyright Act 5&6 Victoria c.45, which left open the question of copyright in newspapers. But, in thus defending the rights of authors and artists, WC here takes a reactionary position on the abolition of the tax on newspapers, then being debated in Parliament. The Newspaper Stamp, which prevented the legal production of cheap newspapers for the masses, had been reduced from fourpence to a penny in 1836 and was finally abolished in June 1855. Generally on the fight against the 'taxes on knowledge', see Richard Altick The English Common Reader (Chicago, 1957), pp. 318–354.

3. Dickens had of course been involved in a number of previous attempts to form such a "League" of authors – the Society of British Authors (1843), the Association for the Protection of Literature (1843–9) and the Guild of Literature and Art (1850–97) – none of which were conspicuously successful. See Bonham-Carter, Authors by Profession, pp. 77–89.

4. Referring to the approaching birth of the Wards' third child (Eva), which in fact took place on 27 March.

5. 'The Good Time Coming', a poem by Charles Mackay (1814–89), editor of the Illustrated London News, and set to music by the tenor Henry Russell (1813–1900), was one of the most popular songs of the period.

6. Thus for partie carrée (French), meaning 'group of four people'; literally, 'square party', frequently in the case of card games.

[0204] TO THE EDITOR OF THE ATHENÆUM,<sup>1</sup> 28 MARCH 1855

MS: Unknown. Published: 'Pictorial Copy-right and Copy-wrong', Athenæum, 1431 (31 March 1855), p. 380, our copy text;<sup>2</sup> BGLL, I, p. 119–121.

London, March 28.

Will you allow me to add a word or two to the plan suggested by your last Correspondent for the prevention of picture piracy?<sup>3</sup> The remedy proposed at present, as I understand it, is the establishment of a registration office in London, and the placing of that office under the ceremonial superintendence of Members of the Royal Academy. Why should not the office itself be set up in the first instance by the Royal Academy, and be placed in the building in Trafalgar Square? By this means, your Correspondent's suggestion might be practically carried out entirely by the painters themselves. The Royal Academy is rather apt to stand on its dignity, I know; but it is not easy to see why the Members might not just as gracefully, and with quite as much propriety, be registrars of pictures as exhibitors of pictures. Then, again, as to the stamping, there seems no reason why the Academy, – which makes its own laws, gets the Queen's ratification of them when made, and imposes them on all artists who wish to exhibit or to win professional honour, in Trafalgar Square, should not invent a special seal to be impressed on the backs of pictures sent for registration. The Royal Academy stamp would be the most satisfactory of all certificates of genuineness. On the question of legislative enactments, I am not competent to speak; but I apprehend that the counterfeiting of the seal of a public institution would be an offence punishable at law; and that the establishment of a small fund to meet the necessarily rare contingency of legal expenses incurred for prosecuting counterfeiters might be taken into consideration, in regulating the amount of the registration fee, without imposing any unendurably heavy tax on the pockets of artists. Whether this registering and stamping plan be the best that can be devised, I know not; but of this I feel certain, that the prevention of picture-piracy might fairly and gracefully originate with the Royal Academicians, who represent the profession of painting, and who, during the summer months, keep the largest picturemarket in England. Is it not their interest as our principal picture sellers to protect our picture buyers? – or, if this be too low ground to take, I will say, is not their professional position concerned in coming forward to offer this said protection? If I had money enough to buy pictures, I should be apt, in reference to the Royal Academy and its duties towards helpless patrons of Art, to reason with myself in this wise: – if I want to be certain of the soundness of a horse, I have an incorporated profession of veterinary surgeons to appeal to: if I want to be certain of the genuineness of a picture, why should I not have an incorporated profession of painters to appeal to also? – I am, &c. W. W. C.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Prestigious weekly literary review founded in 1828, of which William Hepworth Dixon was then the editor – see [1356] to him personally of 29 June 1873.

2. This article is mainly made up of three letters on the subject of counterfeit paintings: by E. M. Ward (to the effect that the counterfeit of his own picture had been recovered and had been judged to be a poor imitation not worth £5, much less the £200 that had been paid for it); by the artist 'J.C.', who wrote for the second time on this issue to argue that any system of registration must be backed up by legislation; and that by WC which is introduced thus: 'The following notes, from a Correspondent who has had ample means of knowledge, are also worthy of consideration: –'.

3. In the column of 'Fine-Art Gossip' in the Athenæum of 24 March, p. 354, there had appeared an unsigned letter suggesting that a voluntary system of registration of original paintings could be set up under the control of the Royal Academy, without the need for parliamentary intervention.

4. The Athenæum article here continues: 'We concur in this suggestion. The Royal Academy, though at present pretending to no higher place than that of premier private association of artists, may ere long assume a larger character, becoming a real National Academy instead of a "secret and irresponsible society".'

[0205] To E. M. WARD, 28 MARCH 1855

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 43; BGLL, I, p. 121.

17 Hanover Terrace | Wednesday

My dear Ned,

I have written to the Athenæum today – the letter will reach them tomorrow morning (their morning for getting up the new number) so it will be just in time.<sup>1</sup>

I don't know whether they may not think it going over the last week's correspondent's ground. He has cut the freshness of my Royal Academy proposition away from me.<sup>2</sup> I can only write to plead that the Academy itself should keep the office, Stamp, Register, &c &c, and I have given some pretty strong reasons for it (in a good-humoured way) – which they may perhaps put in to amuse their readers.

My mother has written you our congratulations.<sup>3</sup> When you have a few more children I shall cease to congratulate. I find married men look as if their feelings were hurt when you flatter them about their large families!

Ever yours | W.W.C.

---

1. See [0204] to the editor of the Athenæum of the same day.
2. Referring to the unsigned letter in the column of 'Fine-Art Gossip' in the Athenæum of 24 March.
3. On the birth of the Wards' third child, Eva. See the announcement in the 'Births' column of the Times, 29 March 1855, p. 1a: 'On the 27th inst., at Upton-park Villas, Slough, the wife of Edward Matthew Ward, Esq., RA, of a daughter'.

[0206] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 29 MARCH 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 121–122.

17, Hanover Terrace | Thursday afternoon

Private

My dear Edward,

Read the enclosed before it goes to press – or look carefully over the proof – to see that I have not gone too far in making fun of Silk Buckingham's Vanity and twaddling.<sup>2</sup> I have been making myself laugh while writing the article – but I don't know how it will affect our "Esteemed readers".

I must ask you to correct the proof, as there will be no time to send it here.

Will you go to the Garrick, and put your name down among the seconders of Mr John Luard?<sup>3</sup> – an excellent fellow, friend of Millais's and of mine, whom we want to get into the Club. He is vouched for in the book by Millais and Leach.<sup>4</sup>

Do you, or do you not, sell the books sent for Review? I have a heap, too big for Parcels Delivery – which ought to be taken down to the office in a cab. I am going to tie them all up, before the next time you come here.

Yours Affly | W.W.C.

Did they get a copy of "Antonina" At Tegg's?<sup>5</sup>

Edward Pigott Esqre

---

1. Dating from the review in the Leader.
2. See the review 'Mr Silk Buckingham', Leader (31 March 1855), p. 306.
3. See [0202] to Peter Cunningham of 16 March 1855.
4. Thus for John Leech (1817–64), Punch cartoonist and Garrick Club member.
5. See [0201] to Pigott of 14 March 1855.

[0207] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 9 APRIL 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 122–123.

17 Hanover Terrace | Monday night

My dear Edward,

Do you go to the Opera on Thursday?<sup>2</sup> If so, shall we go together? What are we to do about the Theatres? Shall we go on Wednesday night to one of them – the Adelphi,<sup>3</sup> or Haymarket?<sup>4</sup> I can make up an article with the Times information about Easter pieces I do not see.<sup>5</sup> I will also do the article on the Suffolk street Exhibition.<sup>6</sup> Shall we dine at the Garrick at ½ past 5 on Wednesday punctually before going to one of the theatres?<sup>7</sup> We can dine as cheaply there as anywhere, and it is cleaner than those greasy hot, beastly British Eating houses. Write and let me know, by return of post. You are the man to do the Opera. I will take the Theatres and Suffolk street. My name is not down for the "Leader" at the Adelphi – at least it was not when I applied last.

Affectionately yours | W.W.C.

Millais' picture wonderful – the most surprising thing he has done<sup>8</sup>

-
1. Dating from the references to the various performances at Easter time – Easter Sunday fell on 8 April in 1855.
  2. The Royal Italian Opera opened at Covent Garden on Thursday 12 April 1855, with Rossini's Le Comte Ory (Times, 11 April 1855). Reviewed in the Leader (14 April 1855), p. 357, and again on 21 April 1855, p. 381.
  3. Playing The Mysterious Stranger by Charles Selby, based on Satan; ou, Le Diable à Paris by Clarville and Damarin. The play had opened on 8 January 1855.
  4. The Secret Agent followed by Una Noche de Fiesta en Sevilla; or The New Haymarket Spring Meeting 1855 with The Galician Fete.
  5. 'The Easter Pieces', Leader (14 April 1855), p. 357. No other reviews of plays appeared. Theatres were closed or had concerts of religious music during Holy Week, so the re-opening on Easter Monday was something of a festival. The Times carried two and a half columns of reviews of 'Easter Amusements' (10 April 1855). The week before the Leader carried a long piece looking forward to the Easter plays.
  6. The Society of British Artists held an annual exhibition at its premises, 6½ Suffolk Street. 'The British Artists' (Leader (21 April 1855), p. 380) was largely critical of the works on display.
  7. Pigott was elected to the Garrick Club on 19 April 1845, WC on 3 June 1854.
  8. 'The Rescue' by Millais depicted a firefighter handing two children to their mother with a fire in the background. He got the idea from a fire at the Meux Brewery on Tottenham Court Road in 1854. It was exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1855.

[0208] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 21 APRIL 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 123.

17, Hanover Terrace | Saturday.

My dear Edward,

I have just seen Robert Bell,<sup>2</sup> and have been reminded by him that it is the Shakespeare Dinner at the G. on Monday.<sup>3</sup>

In this case, we must keep out of the way, for fear of being pressed to dine, and worried with speeches. So I will call at the office and meet you there instead of at the Club at six precisely
Affectly Yours | W.W.C.

-
1. Dating from Shakespeare dinner.
  2. Robert Bell (1800–67), journalist.
  3. The Shakespeare memorial dinners at the Garrick Club were held on 23 April unless that fell on a Sunday in which case they were held on the Saturday. In 1855 the dinner was held at the Garrick on Monday 23 April.

[0209] TO W. H. WILLS,<sup>1</sup> 30 APRIL 1855

MS: Morgan (MA Unassigned).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 124.

17, Hanover Terrace | April 30th 1855

My dear Wills,

I beg to acknowledge with many thanks the receipt of a cheque for £40 from the "Household Words" Exchequer – and I assure you I consider it a most liberal "cash equivalent" for the story of "Sister Rose"<sup>3</sup>

As soon as I can get another good subject, for another story of the same length, I shall gladly devote the said story to H.W. – always provided I find I can succeed well enough in my work to make it worthy of its destination.

Ever yours | W. Wilkie Collins
To W.H. Wills Esqre

-
1. W. H. Wills (1810–80: ODNB), secretary to CD from 1846, sub-editor of Household Words from the beginning, and of All the Year Round until 1868, when injuries caused by a hunting accident forced him to retire.
  2. Morgan Accession Number formerly 'Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/10'.
  3. Its four parts filling 75.5 columns of Household Words, 7–28 April 1855, 'Sister Rose' was WC's longest piece so far for CD's weekly miscellany. On 30 April HC's bank account records £40 as received (Coultts: Exors WmC).

[0210] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 2 MAY 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, I, p. 146 (dated [October–December 1855]).
Summary: BGLL, I, p. 124.

17. Hanover Terrace | Wednesday

My dear Edward,

I will be at the office on Friday afternoon, and will do a paragraph about the R. A.<sup>2</sup> The hanging and the Pre Raphaelites alone will take up a whole article, as I shall treat the subject – and this I must do for next week,<sup>3</sup> working in the morning when I am fresh and have my wits about me. I think a paragraph by way of preliminary will be quite enough, considering that we are going to treat the subject at full length this year – I have got the ticket. Forgues' pamphlet has not arrived yet.<sup>4</sup> Of course I will undertake it.

I am glad the notice of Bohn is thought likely to benefit the publisher. I have nothing to say in defence of my low opinion of Boccaccio – except that I always was a heretic about him and always shall be.<sup>5</sup> My appreciation is all wrong on no end of literary subjects – and I ca'nt for the life of me get it right. Excepting Falstaff and Dogberry, I think Molière a greater humourist than Shakespeare, and one of the most tedious books /((to me) that/ I ever read in my life was Tom Jones. This is wrong, I know, but all men have their "cracked" points – and these are some of mine.

Langham Chambers would be a much better situation for you, as well as cheaper.

Affectly yours | W.W.C.

We will go next week, and suffer under Cushman<sup>6</sup> – there is another of my cracked points!

---

1. Dating from publication in the Leader of WC's first article on the 1855 Royal Academy Exhibition.

2. See 'The Royal Academy Exhibition', Leader, 5 May 1855, pp. 428–429, a lengthy preliminary paragraph in which WC is in general highly critical (owing to 'the disgraceful incompetence and injustice of the hanging Committee'), though he singles out for special praise works by his friends Millais, Leslie, and Egg.

3. In fact WC wrote three further pieces on the exhibition for Leader: 12 May, p. 452; 19 May, pp. 475–476, 26 May, p. 500. The last of these concluded, '... we take leave of an exhibition which is, upon the whole, the worst we remember to have seen since the building in Trafalgar-square was first opened to the public.'

4. Emile Durand Forgues, La Caricature en Angleterre (Paris: Simon Dautreville, 1855), reviewed by WC in 'M. Forgues on the Caricaturists of England,' Leader, 25 August 1855, pp. 823–824.

5. Referring to the brief review of the translation by Walter K. Kelly of The Exemplary Novels of Cervantes (London: Bohn, 1855) in 'A Batch of Books', Leader, 28 April 1855, p. 403, where WC confessed that he preferred 'the charming story of The Little Gipsy Girl ... to all that Boccaccio has ever written'.

6. Charlotte Saunders Cushman (1816–1876: ANB), American actress known for her ability to play male as well as female roles, who first appeared in London in 1845. In 1855, she opened on Monday, 23 April, at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, as the male lead in Romeo and Juliet, before appearing from Friday, 4 May, as La Tisbe in the Actress of Padua, an English version of Victor Hugo's Angelo by John Baldwin Buckstone, manager of the theatre. A paragraph reviewing the Actress of Padua by WC appeared under the heading 'Haymarket Theatre' in Leader, Saturday, 12 May 1855, p. 453. It commented sourly: 'the American tragédienne makes up for fascination by force, and for coquetry and passion by tragic purpose and intensity.'

[0211] TO ELIZABETH SPIERS,<sup>1</sup> 7 JUNE 1855

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 124, amended A&C5, p. 19, and A&C10, p. 22.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | June 7th 1855

Mr Wilkie Collins regrets that engagements which oblige him to be in London on the 16th and 18th of June will prevent him from having the honour of availing himself of Mr and Mrs Spiers' hospitable invitation.

---

1. Elizabeth Spiers née Joy (1818–1858), wife of the former Mayor of Oxford, Richard James Spiers; see [3273] to him, 21 July 1854. Victorian etiquette suggests that a reply to a domestic invitation would be directed to the woman of the house – see [0457] to Mrs Jacure, 13 February 1862, or [0603] to Henrietta Ward, 15 November 1864.

[3341] TO EDWARD LEAR, 9 JUNE 1855

MS: Unknown. Extract: Cited in letter held at Lincolnshire (TRC/LETTERS/5415), our copy text.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C12, pp. 3-4.

... do come & see the last (for us) of John Millais ...<sup>2</sup>

1. These words are contained in a letter of the same date from Edward Lear to Alfred Tennyson. The paragraph reads:

Collins has just now written to say I will dine there at 6 to meet Millais, who sets out tomorrow for Perth. He says “do come & see the last (for us) of John Millais”. So I throw over a lesserer engagement and shall go. I feel woundily like a spectator – all through my life – at what goes on amongst those I know – very little an actor.

2. Millais was leaving for Perthshire to marry Euphemia Gray – see [0215] to Pigott of 2 July 1855 which invites friends to an eve-of-wedding party.

[0212] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 9 JUNE 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 125.

17, Hanover Terrace | Saturday morning

My dear Edward,

We seem fated not to meet. I ca’nt possibly go to Wigan’s today<sup>2</sup> – on account of our little play at Tavistock House, which is just at the crisis of production.<sup>3</sup> But can you not fix a day next week (excepting Monday) with Wigan, when you would be sure to be disengaged for the afternoon or the forenoon. I don’t want to give him the play to read but to read it myself to him and you. Some of it is not very legibly written – and besides there are certain circumstances which make me desirous of knowing at once whether the play will suit Mr Wigan.

Tell him about my books, and he wo’nt think his time thrown away in listening to a beginner. The Play is in five acts – I have finished it with thorough satisfaction to myself – and I know what is good by this time, in the dramatic way. The story is in many important respects altered from the book – and, I think, improved in the telling.<sup>4</sup>

Try if you can arrange a day for next week – Would Tuesday? Wednesday? or Thursday suit you?<sup>5</sup> – I want you to be present at the reading for many reasons, if you don’t mind it.

Ever yours | WWC

Shall you be at the office on Monday afternoon? between 3 & 4? – I shall most likely be in your neighbourhood and will call.<sup>6</sup>

---

1. Dating from the production of WC’s play The Lighthouse at Tavistock House on 16, 18 and 19 June. The dress rehearsal was on the 15th, and Monday was ‘virtually our last Rehearsal’ (Pilgrim, VII, p. 644).

2. Alfred Sydney Wigan (1814–78: ODNB), actor and manager, who leased the Olympic Theatre from October 1853 to August 1857.

3. The Lighthouse was produced at CD’s home, Tavistock House. CD wrote of it: ‘The real Theatre is so bad, that I have always a delight in setting up a sham one’ (Pilgrim, VII, p. 641). The play was based on WC’s short story ‘Gabriel’s Marriage’ (Household Words, 16–23 April 1853).

4. All these details convince us that it is not The Lighthouse which WC is showing to Wigan, even though he did later consider that play for professional production (see [0219] to Charles Ward, 20 August 1855), and indeed produced it in 1857. The Lighthouse, which WC calls here ‘our little play’, was in two acts (Pilgrim, VII, p. 920), not five, and was based not on a book but on a short story. Also if it was ‘not very legibly written’ it could not then have been in production at Tavistock House. So this might be an unknown version of Basil or Hide and Seek.

5. There were rehearsals on Monday and Friday.

6. On his way to Tavistock House for the rehearsal.

[0213] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 14 JUNE 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, p. 126.

17 Hanover Terrace | Thursday 7 o'clock

Mr dear Edward,

I have just opened and read your letter, dated today, with a Postscript “hoping that I received the cheque”. No cheque has reached me, and no letter from you (except today's) since I enclosed the corrected proof of Moredun in my letter of Monday last.<sup>2</sup> I write at once, in order that every enquiry may be made – supposing that you know when the letter was posted and by whom. I hope you crossed the cheque. If I can, I will be at the office tomorrow afternoon to know if this unlucky business has had any light thrown on it. Our servants have recently been threatened with dismissal if they did not bring all letters up stairs the moment the postman left them – so carelessness on their part, in the affair is not very probable.

If I do not appear on Friday afternoon (the dress Rehearsal day) write, or come here on Saturday. I shall be at home at work, the whole day. I got an invitation from Mr Spiers. We act on Monday, and Tuesday evenings as well as Saturday<sup>3</sup> – so I wrote to tell him I had engagements. Be in time to a quarter to 8 on Saturday, or you will not get in.

Affly yrs W W C

---

1. Dated from the Leader review and the plays.

2. See ‘A Queer Story. A Tale of the Twelve Hundred and Ten’, Leader (16 June 1855), pp. 584–585. WC is dismissive of this book ascribed to Walter Scott.

3. The Lighthouse was performed on Saturday 16, Monday 18 and Tuesday 19 June 1855.

[0214] TO MARK LEMON,<sup>1</sup> 28 JUNE 1855

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11, formerly in a case with a copy of a poster of ‘The Lighthouse’). Published: Parrish & Miller, pp. 155–156; Davis, p. 173; BGLL, I, pp. 126–27. Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 90.

17. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | June 28th 1855

My dear Lemon,

I am anxious to know what Mr Webster’s intentions are on the subject of “The Lighthouse”.<sup>2</sup> If you will kindly communicate to him the terms, on which I am willing to dispose of the play for a limited period, I think we shall come to a definite understanding immediately.

The terms, then, that I propose (if “The Lighthouse” is acted in public) are: –

Five pounds a night to be paid to me during the first twenty nights of the run of the piece – the Play to be, so far as the dramatic right over it is concerned, Mr Webster’s property for twelve months from the first night of its production on the stage at his Theatre. After that period, all rights over it are to revert to me.

There are one or two other minor arrangements which it will be time enough to talk over when I know how Mr Webster is disposed to receive this proposal.

With many thanks for your kindness in charging yourself with this little negotiation

I remain | my dear Lemon | ever truly yours | W. Wilkie Collins

To | Mark Lemon Esqre

---

1. Mark Lemon (1809–70: ODNB), founding editor of Punch, journalist, dramatist and actor. Earlier that month Lemon had played the part of Martin Gurnock in the amateur production of The Lighthouse at Tavistock House.

2. Benjamin Webster (1798–1882: ODNB), actor-manager of the Theatre Royal, Adelphi from 1844–74. WC’s play was not in fact produced at Webster’s theatre.

[0215] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 2 JULY 1855

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, I, p. 140. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 127.

17 Hanover Terrace | Monday<sup>2</sup>

My dear Edward,

I am very glad to hear that Mr Galloway will be able to [del] attend at the office during the latter part of the week – the more so, as Dickens knows of no man sufficiently trustworthy and intelligent whose services could be had for a temporary period only.<sup>2</sup>

Tomorrow is John Millais his wedding day[.]<sup>3</sup> Luard<sup>4</sup> and Charles Ward and his wife dine here. Do come too (as one of Jack's friends) if you have no other engagements. We dine at six, and shall drink [del] limitless potations. May he consummate successfully! and have the best cause in the world to lie late on Wednesday morning!<sup>5</sup> (you see I am like that excellent parson and bulwark of the church, who married George<sup>6</sup> – I can't resist Prianpian [sic for 'Priapic'] jesting on the marriages of my friends. It is such a dreadfully serious thing afterwards, that one ought to joke about it as long as one can

Affy yours | W.W.C.

We act the Lighthouse (in public) at the Campden House Theatricals. Tomorrow week.<sup>7</sup>

No need to dress if you can come tomorrow

---

1. Dating from Millais's wedding day.

2. Alfred E. Galloway was still registered as publisher and printer of The Leader at this time – see [0190] to Pigott, [1854]. Presumably CD has been asked if he could recommend someone capable of acting temporarily as manager at the Leader office.

3. Millais married Euphemia ('Effie') Chalmers Gray on 3 July 1855, in the house where she had been born at Bowerswell, Perthshire.

4. John Luard (1830–1860), painter and close friend of Millais.

5. Effie had married John Ruskin on 10 April 1848, but on 15 July 1854 she had been granted a decree of nullity dissolving the marriage on the grounds of non-consummation – Fleming, pp. 133–138. It seems Millais fared better as he wrote to CAC the next day, 'By George, Charlie, I am truly a favoured man... It is such a delight to feel a woman always about one part of oneself' (Peters, p. 126).

6. The Rev. Sidney Henry Widdrington was the vicar of Walcot where George Pigott was married on 1 February 1855 – see [0193] to Pigott, 26 January 1854.

7. That is, on Tuesday, 10 July 1855 (see Pilgrim, VII, p. 665).

[0216] TO CHARLES WARD,<sup>1</sup> [13 JULY] 1855<sup>2</sup>

MS: Wolff Collection (1343d). Published: Wolff, p. 255 (with recipient uncertain); BGLL, I, pp. 127–28.

17 Hanover Terrace | Friday

My dear Ward,

I have the fourth part of my story The Yellow Mask to write,<sup>3</sup> and only till Monday to do it in, beginning today. The consequence is that I am obliged to keep out of all engagements for today, Saturday, and Sunday, or I shall risk not getting done. I shall be at it Sunday morning and Sunday evening too – otherwise I should have been very glad to go to Doctor Diamond's<sup>4</sup> – If I don't go to your brothers [sic] Sunday week,<sup>5</sup> I will let you know, and then perhaps we might make that day do.

The play and the story together have driven me dreadfully into the corner. I have taken the play to Wigan – who applied for it a week ago<sup>6</sup>

Ever yours | W.W.C.

---

1. The recipient must be Charles Ward rather than his brother Edward. Though there are two letters addressed to Edward as 'My dear Ward' from early 1853, WC typically addresses him as 'My dear Ned', while the reference to Alfred Wigan links this to [0219] to Ward of 20 August 1855.

2. Internal evidence shows the letter was written on a Friday before the 'The Yellow Mask' was completed, making 13 July the most likely date.

3. Published in four weekly parts in Household Words, 7–28 July 1855; reprinted as 'The Professor's Story of the Yellow Mask' in the collection After Dark (1856).

4. The reference remains unclear, but is perhaps to an exhibition of the portraits of insane female patients by Hugh Welch Diamond (1809–86: ODNB), then surgeon at the Surrey County Asylum and founding member in 1852 of the London Photographic Society. See Adrienne Burrows and Iwan Schumacher, Portraits of the Insane: The Case of Doctor Diamond (London: Quartet, 1990).

5. That is, to visit Ned Ward and his family at Upton Park, Slough.

6. Negotiations broke down concerning a professional production of The Lighthouse by Alfred Wigan at the Olympic Theatre – see [0219] to Charles Ward of 20 August 1855. Concerning the amateur performances, see Gasson, p. 95.

[0217] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 9 AUGUST 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, I, pp. 140–141. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 128.

3 Albion Villas | Folkestone | Thursday

My dear Edward,

I return the proof corrected.<sup>2</sup> Why should you not come here for this next Saturday? or, if you can't manage that, make up your mind for Saturday fortnight. I am not certain, but I hope I shall be able to prolong my stay here until that time.<sup>3</sup>

We made a great success /on Monday/ of the trip to Boulogne. The ladies went with us. Blue sky and calm sea on the passage over – everything ready for us (in accordance with a Telegraphic message) at the Hotel des Bains. Tuesday we went to the Camp, and returned in the evening to Folkestone. A roughish passage – All sick except Miss Hogarth,<sup>4</sup> Stanfield,<sup>5</sup> and your humble servant. Such a contrast between the picturesquely martial look of the French camp, and the dreary unmilitary [del] aspect of our camp over here at Shorncliffe – between the brisk jollity of the French soldiers and the hangdog stolidity of the foreign legion!<sup>6</sup> Five hundred of these wretched substitutes for a national soldiery were disembarked here yesterday, from a transport, for the Queen's inspection today. Such a set of dirty, ill-looking vagabonds, I never saw in uniform before. The stench of them, as they stood in line before befouling the fragrant sea air on the pier, is not out of my nose yet. If these (paid) allies do't disgrace us in the Crimea I give up appearances for ever. Falstaff himself would have blushed at the sight of them!<sup>7</sup>

If it is convenient to you, any time next week, to let me have my cheque for ~~Aug~~ July, I wish you would ask Mr Galloway, to send it me in a Post Office Order, made payable to at the Office here, to "William Wilkie Collins"<sup>8</sup> (3 Albion Villas, if they want my address at Folkestone). I am obliged to give you this trouble, because my money shows signs of running short after the trip to Boulogne, and because, as my money is always put to my mother's account at Coutts's, I can't draw any of it without a cheque from her. She is, by this time, staying at Southsea – or I could get my "supplies" from Hanover Terrace easily enough.

Do come here – I know you would enjoy it so!

Affectionately yours | W.W.C.

---

1. Dating from the review of the troops at Shorncliffe Camp, Folkestone, by the Queen.

2. Unidentified but possibly the review of 'Four Novels', Leader, 11 August 1855, pp. 772–773.

3. CD was at 3 Albion Villas, Folkestone, from 16 July to 31 October, and invited WC to stay from 31 July at this 'very pleasant little house overlooking the sea' (17 July 1855, Pilgrim, VII, pp. 675–676). WC's visit lasted until 10 September.

4. Dickens's sister-in-law Georgina Hogarth.

5. Clarkson Stanfield (1793–1867: ODNB), marine and landscape painter, who had painted the scenery for The Lighthouse earlier in the year and went on to paint scenery for The Frozen Deep in 1857.

6. German soldiers in the British Foreign Legion which was formed under an Act of 1854 to replace British soldiers fighting in the Crimea. CD wrote to Henry Austin: 'Camp at Shorncliffe composed, generally speaking, of the most hideous blackguards these eyes ever did rest upon.' (19 August 1855, Pilgrim, VII, p. 692).

7. For a considerably less jaundiced account of the Queen reviewing the Camp, see 'The Foreign Legion', Times, Friday, 10 August 1855, p. 10a, and the accompanying editorial, p. 6d-e.

8. In fact the first forename is underlined three times.

[0218] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 14 AUGUST 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 128–129.

3 Albion Villas | Tuesday

My dear Edward,

Let me have a proof of the enclosed, by return of Post, if you possibly can. It is (what I consider) a proper appreciation of Conscience the Flemish novelist.<sup>2</sup>

They will be delighted to see you here.<sup>3</sup> If it is in the least inconvenient to send me that cheque, keep it waiting, and pay me the two together next month, in case the money flows in more readily then. Charley has sent me some “yellow dirt” to go on with<sup>4</sup>

I have no news – and I write with the lunch bell ringing – So Farewell till we meet here.
Aftly Yrs | W.W.C.

-
1. Dating from the Leader review. The reference to the cheque clearly follows [0217] to Pigott of 9 August.
  2. ‘The Novels of M. Hendrick Conscience’, Leader (18 August 1855), pp. 794–795. Hendrick Conscience (1812–83) was a sentimental Flemish nationalist novelist. His romantic masterpiece De Leeuw van Vlaanderen (1838) was translated as The Lion of Flanders (1855–7). It was one of three Conscience books dealt with in the review. WC had reviewed Conscience’s Tales of Flemish Life earlier; see Leader (6 January 1855), p. 19.
  3. Pigott visited Folkestone in the week of 27 August and stayed one night. See [0220] to HC, 2 September 1855. On Tuesday 28 August CD wrote of ‘Mr Wilkie Collins (who is our only visitor now)’, Pilgrim, VII, p. 696.
  4. Alexander Pope, Essay on Man: ‘Is yellow dirt the passion of thy life?’ (Epistle IV). The reference is to CAC – see [0220] to HC, 2 September 1855, where WC states that he ‘got five pounds from Charley’.

[0219] TO CHARLES WARD, 20 AUGUST 1855

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/5). Published: B&C, I, pp. 142–143. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 129.

3 Albion Villas | Folkestone | August 20th 1855/

My dear Ward

We have just been out for a walk and have been driven back wet through by a squall rather before our usual time of returning – so I get a little leisure to write to you.

Leisure seems a curious word to use when I am [del] supposed to be enjoying a holiday – but I am, in real truth, at work (beginning a new speculation) in the morning. In the afternoon we are taking prodigious walks and climbing inaccessible places – and, after a good dinner moistened with various good drinks, I leave you to imagine how utterly lazy I must necessarily feel all the evening considering the previous exertions of the day and the sleep-producing qualities of the sea air. My leisure time, in fact, is exclusively spent in smoking and sleeping – and I am getting fat in consequence, in spite of all the exercise.

I have no news to tell – except that I meet George Smith nearly everyday – that we smile, nod, shake hands, exchange remarks about the weather, and are mutually and rapidly arriving at the end of our small talk. Wigan, by the way (if Charley has not told you already) is unable to perform the Lighthouse – his company not enabling him in the flourishing present state of the stage to “cast” the play.<sup>1</sup> Dickens thinks I have had a lucky escape, and Charley (who went to see the actors at the Olympic [del] /foreboding/ that they might be actors in my drama) thinks so too. I may show the play to Regnier when I go to Paris – but nobody else shall see it in London. The principal part really requires a first-rate serious actor – and where is he to be found, Anno Domini 1855, in this great and prosperous Kingdom of England?<sup>2</sup> (Say nothing about this Olympic business, as Wigan might not like to have the real reason of his being obliged to decline the play generally known.)

We have [del] had the Queen and Albert here, reviewing the Foreign Legion, and received by the local population with stolid indifference. Said Foreign Legion is composed of the filthiest, clumsiest, drunkennest [sic], ugliest set of unmitigated louts you ever looked upon. They are a disgrace to the country. The Worst of the Household Troops is an elegant and [del] sober man by comparison with them.

So I hear that you have been made the happy father of another “Ogre” – the largest and stoutest baby ever borne.<sup>3</sup> You lucky devil!

Will it be giving you any trouble if I ask you to send your Stationer or Porter to buy for me the following books: – 1. A secondhand copy of “Hide And Seek,” advertised at Mudies for six shillings – (I can’t ask Bentley in his present state) to give me another copy if any are left).

2nd. “Human Longevity” translated from the French. Published by Baillière. 3/-.<sup>4</sup> 3. “Magic & Witchcraft” in Chapman & Hall’s cheap series price 1/-.<sup>5</sup> Also, if any copies of the reduced “Mr Wray’s Cash-Box,” are still to be had at a shilling, or two shillings (I forget which) to get me two copies of the same. We have no copy of the book at Hanover Terrace. If you can keep these at the Strand for me till I come to town, I will send for or fetch them, when I reimburse you.<sup>6</sup> But don’t bother about these books, if it is any trouble.

Ever yours W.W.C.

I shall most likely be back at the end of the month – but no day is fixed yet. Write and tell me how Jane is, and give her my love – and tell me any news you have.

---

1. Referring to Alfred Sydney Wigan (1814–1878: ODNB), lessee of the Olympic Theatre, October 1853 to August 1857.

2. The Lighthouse was eventually performed professionally from August 1857 at the Royal Olympic Theatre, with Frederick Robson in the part of Aaron Gurnock – see [0263] to HC, 10 August 1857.

3. The Wards’ seventh child, Charles Augustus, was born on 4 August 1855 and baptised on 15 August 1855 (Baptismal Register, St Mark’s, Marylebone).

4. Pierre Flourens, Human Longevity and the Amount of Life Upon the Globe, trans. Charles Martel (London: H. Baillière, 1855).

5. [George Moir], Magic and Witchcraft (London: Chapman & Hall, 1852), originally published as ‘Daemonology and Witchcraft’, The Foreign Quarterly Review 6 (June 1830), pp. 1–47.

6. Having run out of space, at this point WC draws a dotted saltire; the remainder of the letter, with the exception of the postscript which is inserted in the left-hand margin of the first leaf, is found in the left-hand margin on the final leaf following a corresponding dotted saltire.

[0220] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 2 SEPTEMBER 1855

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/45), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 143–145. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 129.

3 Albion Villas | September 2nd 1855/

My dear Mother,

I ought to have written to you long ago, but I waited day after day until I could tell you something definite about my departure. Nothing was settled before yesterday, and then I made up my mind to go back this next week, towards the middle of it. There are some people I want to see and some things I have to do in London, before I leave again for Brockley Hall with Pigott.<sup>2</sup> We are to start about the 10th, and, if we can manage it to include in the trip a ten days’ cruise in the Bristol Channel, sailing ultimately to the Scilly Islands. I shall not be back for good, most likely, before October – so much for my plans at present.

We have had a delightful time of it here – all alone, until the last week, when we had a little dinner company – Thackeray<sup>3</sup> and Kinglake (“Eothen”)<sup>4</sup> among others; Thackeray pleasanter and quainter than I ever saw him before. Pigott came here, and slept a night, at the same time. Young Charles Dickens is now passing his holiday here, and Mark Lemon and his daughter arrived last night. The boys have gone back to school and have /thus/ helped to make room for the accession of visitors.

I began to work at your M.ss. three weeks ago. After I had done fifty pages, leaving out many things and transferring others, but keeping as close as I could to the simplicity of your narrative, I began to have my doubts whether it would not be necessary (with the public) to make a story to hang your characters and incidents on. I had told Dickens, in confidence, the history of the Manuscript – and I now read to him what I had done. He thought it a good notion and well worth going on with, but felt as I did that without more story it would not do with the public. Strangers could not know that the thing was real – and novel-readers seeing my name on the title-page would expect a story. So I am going to try back, and throw a little dramatic interest into what I have done – keeping the thing still simple of course and using all the best of your materials. As soon as I have made the alterations and have started again, I will let you know how I proceed.<sup>5</sup>

I shall most likely show “The Lighthouse” to Regnier when I go to Paris, to find out from him whether it is translatable and actable in French.<sup>6</sup> As to trying anybody else in London it is useless. There is no actor on our stage capable of doing Dickens's part, Wigan was obliged to decline the play because he could not "cast" – that is, act it. If Macready had been still on the stage the play might have been performed – ~~now~~ any present English tragedian would make nothing of the part of "Aaron Gurnock."

This place is full – [del] troops of hideous women stagger about in the fresh breezes under hats as wide as umbrellas and as ugly as inverted washhand basins. The older, uglier, and fatter they are the bigger hats they put on – and the more execrably they dress themselves. My soul is sick of the seaside women of England. If I had not the bonnets of the ladies ~~here~~ /in this house/ to look at, I should be in a rage from morning to night. Your story about the lady and the dentist is very good – but useless for book-purposes, because the public would not believe it. There would be the old cry of exaggeration [sic] – nevertheless it is very amusing.

Boating, fishing, and excursion-making have drained me of money (though I got five pounds from Charley) – and I have barely enough to take me back to town. If my calculations are right, I have £20 in your hands – left after the bill-paying. £10 I owe to you. Can you write me a cheque for the other £10, cross it, "Coutts & Co", and send it by post to [del] Charles Ward, at the Bank / (Coutts), / telling him to keep the money till I call for it? If you have not got your cheque-book, you can write the draught on a blank sheet of paper. In any case, you must put a stamp on.<sup>8</sup>

Why should you not go back to the Bullar's? Why not stop away until the end of October ~~if~~ when it does you so much good? I should be at home all that month – and you know how well I can keep house. Forward me any letter you get from Charley – To Folkestone, if before Thursday – To Hanover Terrace, if after – I mean in case he is going at once to Perth.

ever affectionately yours | W.W.C.

My kind regards to Miss Otter and Miss Thompson<sup>9</sup>

Of course, I will write to Mrs Slade telling her the day of my return.<sup>10</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | care of Miss Otter | Eastlands | Southsea | Portsmouth', with the initials 'W.W.C.' in the lower left corner. Three postmarks on the back: 'FOLKESTONE | SP 2 | 1855 | 8', '[crown device]C | 3 SP 3 | 1855' and 'PORTSMOUTH | SP 3 | 1855 | D'.

2. Brockley Hall was the Pigott family home at Brockley, near Yatton, in Somerset.

3. This is the first mention in the letters of the novelist William Makepeace Thackeray (1811–63: ODNB), though clearly by no means the first time WC had met him.

4. Alexander William Kinglake (1809–91: ODNB), historian and travel writer, author of Eothen (1844), an account of his travels in the East.

5. The first reference to an autobiographical manuscript by HC, untitled and dated 25 April 1853 (now held at HRC, University of Texas at Austin, MS-0881/5.13). 'Leah's Story', the introductory section of After Dark, is based to some degree upon this narrative.

6. In the event, The Lighthouse was translated into French by E.D. 0135

as Le Phare, published in four parts (with an introduction by WC dated 1 July 1856), in L'Ami de la Maison (3–24 July 1856), and later reprinted in W. Wilkie Collins, Une Poignée de Romans (Paris: Hetzel & Lacroix, 1864), pp. 277–346. See Andrew Gasson and Caroline Radcliffe, eds, Wilkie Collins: The Lighthouse (London: The Wilkie Collins Society, 2013).

7. Five lines erased indecipherably.

8. HC's bank account records the receipt of £33 from 'W H Wills' on 3 September and the payment of £10 to 'W W Collins' on 10 September (Coutts: WC). The 'stamp' is the one penny duty stamp required on all cheques at that time.

9. WC writes his first postscript vertically down the left margin of the final page. The reference is presumably to HC's old friend Amelia Thompson, sister of John Thompson.

10. Mrs Slade is presumably the housekeeper, or one of the other servants, at 17, Hanover Terrace. WC writes his second postscript vertically up the left margin of the first page.

[0221] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 2 SEPTEMBER 1855<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 129–130.

3 Albion Villas | Sunday

My dear Edward,

I shall be certainly in town this week – most likely Thursday or Friday next. I shall report myself at the office on my arrival.

If the yachting is to come off, can you find out before we leave London, about the size of the vessel, the number of amateur sailors to go, the time of starting, and, last not least, what is likely to be the expense per man of the trip?<sup>2</sup> This last item, so far as I am concerned, is an important one to be ascertained beforehand – and, besides, if we can manage it, let us by all means take some stores at least with us from Fortnum & Mason’s. We can be certain of their preserved provisions – and that certainly is worth paying a few shillings extra for.

Mark Lemon has arrived for a day or two, with his two daughters.<sup>3</sup> The boys went back to school yesterday, with their elder brother for escort across the water.<sup>4</sup> We saw them off and little Sydney (going to school for the first time) accepted his fate like a hero. His pluck was undiminished when I saw him last, very small and flushed, with a double Illustrated News flapping about him like a sail, a threatening sea before him, and the horrid perspective of the schoolmaster awaiting him on the opposite shore. Charley (Dickens) comes back today.

Your present of fruit has arrived and excited the greatest admiration and delight!

Affectly yours | W.W.C.

---

1. Dating from Lemon’s arrival – see [0220] to HC of the same date.

2. Pigott and WC took a twelve-day sailing trip from Weston-super-Mare in Somerset to the Scilly Isles in the last two weeks of September 1855. WC wrote up the trip in ‘The Cruise of the Tomtit’, Household Words (22 December 1855), pp. 490–499. It was reprinted with minor amendments as an appendix to the 1861 edition of Rambles Beyond Railways.

3. Lemon’s elder daughter Alice, aged 13, was too noisy for CD (Pilgrim, VII, p. 712).

4. Alfred, Frank and Sydney Smith Dickens, then eight years old, went to the Rev. Matthew Gibson’s school for English boys in Rue de l’Oratoire, Haute Ville, Boulogne (Pilgrim, VII, p. 678, and p. 145 n. 2).

[0222] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 4 SEPTEMBER 1855

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, I, p. 145. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 130.

3 Albion Villas | Tuesday<sup>1</sup>

My dear Edward,

Dickens has persuaded /me/ (as this week is his holiday time after finishing a certain preliminary division of the new book)<sup>2</sup> to stay here over Sunday. So that my arrival in town is deferred till Monday, when I shall return in the afternoon to London. If this is too late for you, by no means wait for me. I can follow you to Brockley on Thursday – or perhaps on Wednesday (the 12th or 13th)[.] I shall be delighted to find myself at the Hall – but I must work every morning, having a new iron in the fire, which I will tell you about when we meet.<sup>3</sup> Any books for the Leader I shall be delighted to do, as well – and the afternoons can be consecrated [del] to walks.

Now about the yacht trip – Everything very jolly, except the tremendous consideration of the Equinox. I find by my Almanack that it begins on the 23rd September. Surely we shall not have time for the Scilly Islands, starting only on the 18th or 19th? And as for returning in an Equinoctial Gale in a boat of 8 tons, with one able seaman on board, is that not rather “tempting Providence” by making a toil of a pleasure? Had we not better make a brief burst upon the Welsh coast and get back before Boreas can overtake us?<sup>4</sup>

If you should by any unforeseen cause be delayed in London, come and dine at Hanover Terrace at ½ past 5 on Monday, (when I have positively settled to be back) – and we can talk things over.

Kindest remembrances from all here | The lunch bell is ringing!!

Affectly yours | W.W.C.

---

1. Dating from the relation to [0221] to Pigott of 2 September 1855, concerning the arrangements for WC’s return to London from Folkestone, together with the dates mentioned within the letter.

2. Referring to the opening of Little Dorrit, which appeared in monthly numbers from December 1855. On 30 September 1855, CD wrote to WC that he had ‘almost finished No. 3’ (Pilgrim, VII, p. 711).

3. Apparently a reference to the work he was doing on HC’s autobiographical manuscript.

4. In fact they took three sailors in a rather bigger boat to the Scilly Isles – see The Cruise of the Tomtit, ed. Paul Lewis, Wilkie Collins Society, 2003.

[0223] TO PETER CUNNINGHAM, 8 OCTOBER 1855

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 130–131.

17 Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | October 8th 1855

Sir,

I regret being obliged to inform you that it will be out of my power in consequence of an attack of inflammation of the eye, to be present at the dinner to Mr Thackeray on Thursday next.<sup>1</sup> I write this apology under doctor's orders.

May I beg that you will kindly communicate this expression of my regret to Mr Thackeray – and, with it, my hearty good wishes for the [prosperity] of his Voyage.

I am, Sir | Your obedient humble servant | W. Wilkie Collins
To | Peter Cunningham, Esq<sup>re</sup> | [two undecipherable words]

---

1. On 11 October 1855 Thackeray attended 'A farewell banquet proffered him by some sixty friends. Dickens presided ... Thackeray sailed for New York from Liverpool on the Africa two days later' (Gordon N. Ray, Thackeray: the Age of Wisdom 1847–1863 (London: Oxford UP, 1958), pp. 257–258).

[0224] TO J. W. PARKER JR,<sup>1</sup> 31 OCTOBER 1855

MS: Morgan (Autogrs. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/10). Published: BGLL, I, p. 131.

17 Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | October 31st 1855

My dear Sir,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for my story "The Monktons, – Part 1. –"<sup>2</sup> in the current number of "Fraser's Magazine"

Very truly yours | W Wilkie Collins
To | J.W. Parker Esq<sup>r</sup> Jun

---

1. John William Parker, publisher and editor, son of a father of the same name and occupation (1792–1870: ODNB). See William Baker (ed.), The Letters of George Henry Lewes (Victoria, BC: English Literary Studies, University of Victoria, 1995), I, p. 149 n. 1.

2. Published as 'The Monktons of Wincot Abbey', Fraser's Magazine, 52. Chapter 1 was published in November and chapters 2–3 in December 1855.

[0225] TO THOMAS HODGSON,<sup>1</sup> 1 NOVEMBER 1855

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 44; BGLL, I, p. 131.

17, Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | November 1st 1855 /

Sir,

The copyright of my last-published novel – "Hide And Seek" becomes my property after the 17th of the present month, and I am desirous of disposing of it for republication in a cheap form. Under these circumstances, I address myself to you to know whether you would feel inclined to treat for the book, with a view to including it among the novels of the "Parlour Library".<sup>2</sup>

I trust that my connection with literature may be considered a sufficient warrant for my writing to you without having procured a formal introduction.

I am, Sir, | Your obedient servant | W. Wilkie Collins
To | Thomas Hodgson Esqre

---

1. London publisher of 13, Paternoster Row who had taken over the business of the Belfast firm of Simms and McIntyre, a pioneer in publishing cheap reprints of fiction.

2. An early form of the ‘yellowback’, the Parlour Library series offered monthly volumes in boards with distinctive green paper covers from as cheap as one shilling each, beginning with William Carleton’s Black Prophet in April 1847 – see Sadleir 1951, II, pp. 149–160; and Altick, pp. 298–299. According to trade advertisements, Parlour Library imprints seem to have changed from Simms and McIntyre to Thomas Hodgson in late 1853.

[0226] TO [J. T. MARSH], [AUGUST 1850–DECEMBER 1855]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, p. 132.

17, Hanover Terrace | Thursday evening

My dear Sir,

I am much obliged to you for getting “La Vie de Ste Elizabeth”.<sup>2</sup>

As long as I can get Charpentier’s edition of Victor Hugo’s plays, I do not care how long I wait. Therefore I willingly accept your kind offer of ordering it for me from Paris<sup>3</sup>

Very faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the address and the form of the signature, which is not found after the end of 1855. The MS is found in the Bentley Archives but the recipient also remains conjectural. Given the nature of the assistance provided to WC, it seems rather more likely to be task of the office manager than that of the publisher himself or his son.

2. This title could represent a number of volumes of French verse or prose retelling the life of Saint Elizabeth of Hungary (1207–31), none of which appears to have been in WC’s library at his death (see Baker). The most likely candidate is perhaps La Vie de Sainte Élisabeth de Hongrie (Tours: A. Mame, 1846) by Hubert Lebon (pseud. Belhon), of which a copy is found in the BNF.

3. Théâtre de Victor Hugo, published in 3 volumes by the Parisian house of Charpentier, 1844–47. An edition dated 1850 was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 121).

[0227] TO EDMUND YATES,<sup>1</sup> 1855<sup>2</sup>

MS: Kentucky (63m24, f. 50). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 132–133.

17, Hanover Terrace | Thursday morning

My dear Yates,

I shall be at the Office either today or tomorrow,<sup>3</sup> and will gladly do all that is in my power to secure the insertion of the verses.<sup>4</sup>

Pigott has been at Paris – but he must be on his way back by this time. I expect to see him every day.

Very truly yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Edmund Hodgson Yates (1831–94: ODNB), journalist, editor, novelist and dramatist. Founder and editor of the Train (1856–8), he organized a charitable performance of The Frozen Deep for Douglas Jerrold’s widow in 1857. One of ‘Dickens’s young men’, he worked on Household Words and All The Year Round, editing Temple Bar in 1866 and Tinsley’s Magazine in 1867. Yates founded his own society weekly, the World: A Journal for Men and Women, in July 1874, and on 17 March 1875 his editorial article gave strong support to WC in a censorship dispute with the Graphic. See [1528] to Yates of 20 March 1875.

2. Yates had introduced himself to CD in the summer of 1854 and probably first met WC during the production of The Lighthouse in 1855, while WC stopped using this form of signature at the end of that year.

3. The Leader office.

4. The verses in question have not been traced.

[0228] TO [GEORGE BENTLEY], [1850]–55<sup>1</sup>

MS: Unknown.<sup>2</sup> On sale: Catalogue of John Wilson no. 79. Published: BGLL, I, p. 133.

... pleasure in attending the Conversazione tonight – for which you were so kind as to send me an invitation – if I had had my time at my own disposal. But the printers have been absorbing it all lately.

I hope you will think this a sufficient apology for me, if I sit at my desk this evening instead of availing myself of your invitation.

Faithfully yours | W. Wilkie Collins

---

1. Both the recipient and dating must be conjectural. George Bentley held a regular ‘Conversazione’ at his home on Wednesday evenings which WC often attended in the earlier 1850s – see [0126] to Bentley of 19 April 1852. Around this time WC regularly uses the valediction ‘Faithfully yours’ with Bentley. The form of the signature provides the later limit.

2. What follows is the only text available; it is not clear whether the MS itself is incomplete.

[0230] TO R. J. LANE,<sup>1</sup> 9 FEBRUARY 1856

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 133–134.

17 Hanover Terrace | Feby 9th 1856

My dear Lane,

Many thanks for the name and address of the Printer.<sup>2</sup> If I can, on my own account or on the account of anyone else, put business into his hands I shall be delighted to do so.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | R.J. Lane Esq. A.E.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Richard James Lane (1800–72: ODNB), line-engraver and lithographer, best known for his portraits of Queen Victoria.

2. Unidentified.

3. Associate Engraver of the Royal Academy, an honour accorded to Lane in 1828.

[0231] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 28 FEBRUARY 1856

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/46), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 147–148. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 134.

No 63. Avenue des Champs Elysées | Paris | Thursday Feby 28th 1856/

My dear Mother,

Here I am safe, sound, and already better – in the quaintest and prettiest bachelor lodging that ever was built. I have a bedroom, sitting-room, dressing-room, /and/ kitchen, all comprised in one little building – like a cottage in a ballet. Opposite to me is another cottage like mine in which the “concierge” and his wife live – and behind me is a large mansion, with twice the number of windows that they would think of putting into a house of similar size in England. The whole group of buildings is shut in by smart green gates – outside of which the stir and bustle of the Champs Elysées goes on from morning to night. So much for my habitation. I only wish you could come over here and see it.

I got through the journey with less fatigue than I expected. But I began it under rather unpleasant circumstances. The cab selected by the wise and observant Jane, was, in regard to the horse the very worst that could have been picked up in all London, at any hour of the day or night. The lame, sickly and miserable cabman did his best, but the still more miserable horse, staggered at every fresh step as if he was going to drop down dead in the road. By the time we got into Tottenham Court Road, I was obliged to stop at the nearest cab-stand, pick out the best horse in another cab, shift luggage, [del] bribe the man to drive fast, and so do my best, in a state of unspeakable vexation, to catch the train. I succeeded with about three ~~seconds~~ minutes to spare. We had a beautiful passage – but, owing to a change in the arrangements for labelling luggage, did not get to Boulogne in time to wait for the examination of the trunks there, and to catch the Paris train. I had thought, as the rest of the passengers did, that the baggage would pass the Boulogne Custom House immediately, and be examined at Paris. As it was, there was nothing for it but sleeping at Boulogne, or leaving [del] my trunk and hat-box in the care of a Custom-House Agent, to be forwarded ~~today~~ after me, today. Being resolved to sleep in my own Parisian apartment at any hazard I accepted the last alternative – had another scramble in a cab (shouting “Vite! Vite!” to the coachman every minute) – and, after another narrow escape of being too late, caught the train again. I found Dickens’s [del] servant waiting for me – and Dickens himself here, all kindness and cordiality, with a supper for me at his house. A fire in my bedroom and a dry and excellent bed, completed the arrangements for my comfort. I feel the journey a little in the shape of a headache this morning – but have profitted, in other respects, already, by the change of air.

The first chapter of my “Rogue’s Life” is published today – Dickens is delighted with it.<sup>2</sup>

Tell Charles Ward, I have no time to see him at the Strand – but that I will write to him soon. Tell Mrs Dickinson too of my safe arrival and say also that she shall have a letter.<sup>3</sup>

With love to Charley | Affectly yours | W.C.

Write soon to the address below. If you have a chance of showing the Herricks some attention, after [del] the refusal to see “W. Salter” the other night, do.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | 17 Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London’, with ‘l’Angleterre’ above the address and ‘Wilkie Collins’ below. Postmarked ‘PARIS | 28 | FEVR | 56’ and endorsed ‘10EN10 | FE29 | 1856’.

2. WC’s ‘A Rogue’s Life: Written By Himself’ appeared in five parts/chapters in Household Words (1–29 March 1856). Though the journal carried a Saturday dateline, it was available for purchase from the previous Thursday.

3. Regarding Frances Dickinson, see [0165] to S. C. Hall, 3 May 1854.

4. The reference is clearly to William Salter Herrick, artist (see [0266] to him of 26 September 1857), though it is uncertain who refused to see him and why. WC writes the postscript vertically up the left margin of the first page, in the space beside the address and salutation.

[3351] TO W. SALTER HERRICK,<sup>1</sup> FEBRUARY 1856

MS: Unknown. On sale: Heritage Auctions (12 September 2019, sale 6212, lot 42180). Published: A&C13, p. 3.

February 1856<sup>2</sup>

To W. S. Herrick
From | Wilkie Collins

---

1. William Salter Herrick (c. 1806–91) was a historical and portrait painter. He exhibited at the Royal Academy from 1852 to 1880 and is perhaps best known for the oil painting ‘Hamlet in the Queen’s Chamber’, (exhibited RA 1857 under the title The Chamber Scene from “Hamlet”). In 1856 he lived at 21 Edwards Street, Portman Square (The Exhibition of the Royal Academy of Arts. MDCCCLVI [1856] p. 56) with his unmarried sister Marianne (see Census 1861, RG09/75/66/17).

2. Handwritten by WC on the half title of a first edition of vol. I of After Dark. In the preface to After Dark, Collins acknowledges W. S. Herrick as his source for the facts on which ‘A Terribly Strange Bed’ is based.

[0232] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 11 MARCH 1856

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/47), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 150–151. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 134.

63. Avenue des Champs Elysées | Paris | March 11th 1856

My dear Mother,

I must have expressed myself badly about my luggage. I left it, knowingly, in the hands of the official person (in uniform) charged with the business of sending passengers baggage after them, when they have not time to wait for the Custom House examination. Of course both trunk and hat-box arrived quite safe by the first train in the morning. [del] As for women managing better than men, suffer me to remind you that it was a woman who fetched the wretched cab that was the cause of all my woes at starting. The wrapper I admit was not exactly the right article of baggage to leave behind – but Charley was right – I did not want it on the journey, the cold weather only setting in the day after my arrival here. As for the pepper, (in the words of Captain Shandy in reference to his nephews first infantine work) “wipe it up and say nothing about it”. One bottle has been delivered with the other things, and Mrs Kean’s friend’s stomach will be all the better for not having too much British pepper in it.<sup>2</sup>

What I do want though is some more handkerchiefs, I have only eight. There must be some more at home. Can you make them up into a small parcel and send them, or take them in Mrs Gibbon's carriage, to Household Words office, addressed to me to Dickens' care. Dickens went to London on Sunday evening last, to stay a week – so Saturday will be time enough. [del] Write on the parcel so that he may know what it is “handkerchiefs for Wilkie Collins”. Also, likewise send a note to Fribourg & Treyer telling them to pack up a quarter of a pound of their tobacco mixture for me, and send it addressed in my name to “care of Charles Dickens Esq. Household Words office, 16. Wellington Street North Strand”, on or before Saturday next. If you have no /other/ means of sending the handkerchiefs, ask Charley to take [del] them on one of his night walks. If the office is shut, he has only to ring at the private door – one door nearer Waterloo Bridge, than the public door. So much for business.

As for myself, I have had the luck as usual to catch a chill (everybody does the same here in March) – Rheumatic pains and aguish shiverings – but I am all right again now. The thing was taken in time, and I got up this morning with nothing to complain of but a little weakness left from judicious and necessary physicking and sweating in bed.

I dined out last week with the Dickenses, at a French party. Met the Editor of The Revue Britannique among others.<sup>3</sup> My story in Fraser's<sup>4</sup> is translated into French in that magazine, and the Editor told me that Scribe (the famous Dramatist) had spoken of it “with enthusiasm”. I have also been introduced to Ary Scheffer (the painter).<sup>5</sup> He has done a wonderful portrait of Dickens, which is to be exhibited at Trafalgar Square. He was very kind and so was his wife.<sup>6</sup> Talking about Trafalgar Square, tell me, or ask Charley to tell me, how he is getting on with his picture. Also ask Charles Ward to send me the Athenaeum which has the review of “After Dark” in it.<sup>7</sup> He will know what it is necessary to pay beforehand for postage – so send him my address, and tell him I would have written before – but my leisure has been occupied by work – the end of “A Rogue's Life”. I shall have done in a day or two, and will write to him and Pigott and E. Ward. Tell them all so when you see them.

What about letting the house? If it comes to anything for Heavens [sic] sake leave all my books and things packed up out of harm's way. Write soon and tell me how you are, and your plans and so on. I am just going out for a turn in the sun.

With love to Charles, Affly yours | WC

Tell Fribourg and Treyer to write outside their parcel “Tobacco from Fribourg and Treyer”<sup>8</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | 17 Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London’, with ‘l'Angleterre’ at the top left and ‘WC’ at the foot. Postmarked ‘PARIS | 11 | MARS | 56 | 60’ and endorsed on the same day at Calais.

2. Neither Mrs Kean nor her friend in Paris have been identified, but the story seems to involve the breakage of a bottle of pepper sauce, presumably at the London end.

3. Amédée Pichot (1795–1877), editor and translator.

4. ‘The Monktons of Wincot Abbey’, Fraser's Magazine 52 (November–December 1855) pp. 485–502, 662–678, subsequently reprinted as ‘Brother Griffith's Story of Mad Monkton’ in The Queen of Hearts (1859). It appeared in French translation (with the translator unidentified) as ‘La Recherche du Mort’, La Revue Britannique (January–February 1856), pp. 143–175, 341–363.

5. Ary Scheffer (1795–1858), Dutch academic painter and prolific portraitist who moved to Paris in 1811 and became a French citizen in 1850. CD complained about the lengthy sittings for his portrait in 1855, and did not consider it a good likeness. It was exhibited in 1856 at the Royal Academy, then in Trafalgar Square, and is now held in the National Portrait Gallery.

6. Françoise Louise Sophie, née Marin, whom he married in March 1850, and who died in June 1856.

7. There was a very lengthy and favourable review of After Dark in the Athenæum (1 March 1856) p. 260, including an extract of more than a column from ‘The Yellow Mask’, one of the stories in the collection.

8. WC writes the postscript vertically up the left margin on his first page.

[0233] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 16 MARCH 1856

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/48), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 151–152. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 134.

63 Avenue des Champs Elysées | Paris | Sunday<sup>2</sup>

My dear Mother,

I have been writing to Wills to pay my money for the Rogue's Life into your account. It must be more than £40 – and more will be paid in, as I do other things for Household Words here.<sup>3</sup>

I find by reckoning up my accounts, that you have advanced me £10 – send a cheque for [del] £20 – more to Ward to be paid into Lafitte's [sic] here for me.<sup>4</sup> You will then have advanced me £30, and you will have £40 to reimburse you at Coutts's at the beginning of April – to say nothing of what I gain further as the month goes on.

I have also told Wills that Charley will pay him the £2, odd, – he had better do it by a cheque from you, which can be charged also to me, if you like.<sup>5</sup> No need no [sic] turn up your eyes – you won't advance more than I can already pay back, before you are put to it for money towards the middle of the year. I am obliged to ask for the £20 now, because I am obliged to pay everything here in advance. I am out of debt for lodging, attendance &c&c – at this moment, till the 11th of April.

Write and tell me when you have sent the money to Ward.

The Empress began her labour at 5 on Saturday morning, and ended at 6 this morning. 101 guns fired to announce a boy.<sup>6</sup> Prodigious preparations for illuminating. Flags at an awful premium. Trumpeting and soldiering going on in all the streets. Crowds about the Palace. I am just going out to see more. My cold is almost well.

What about the Wards? I am going to write and give him a title for his picture tomorrow.

Love to Charley. They are waiting for me to go out, and I have no time to say more.

Why don't you or Charley write?

Affly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | 17 Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London', with 'l'Angleterre' at the top left and 'WC' at the foot. Postmarks obscured.

2. Dating from the birth of the French Prince.

3. A payment of £35 marked simply 'received' was recorded in HC's account on 15 March (Coutts: Exors WmC).

4. The cheque for £20 to W W Collins was recorded as paid on 19 March (Coutts: Exors WmC).

5. Presumably the withdrawal by HC of £2-6s-6d on 17 March (Coutts: Exors WmC).

6. Eugenia de Montijo, Empress of France by virtue of her marriage with Napoleon III, gave birth to the Imperial Prince Napoleon Eugenio Luis Juan José Bonaparte on Sunday, 16 March 1856.

[0234] TO E. M. WARD, 18 MARCH 1856

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Extract: Ellis, pp. 17–18; Robinson 1951, p. 97 (both dated 8 March 1856).
Published: Coleman, pp. 45–47 (again 8 March); B&C, I, pp. 148–149 (also 8 March). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 134.

63 Avenue des Champs Elysées | Paris | March 18th 1856<sup>1</sup>

My dear Ned,

I think this is the best title: –

The Last Parting of Marie Antoinette And Her Son (Scene:– the Prison of the Temple. Persons present, the Queen, her son and daughter, the Sister of Louis the Sixteenth, and the Members of the Revolutionary Committee.)<sup>2</sup>

I have underscored the part in parentheses, because it must be printed in Italics to distinguish it from the Title. So you must underscore it in copying it out. If "Members of the Revolutionary Committee" is not the right phrase, of course you can alter it to something historically and recognisably expressive of who the men are in the left hand corner of the picture. Also, when you copy out the translation (which I am now about to add) put after it, "Translated from —" whatever the book is, which you don't mention in your letter.

The translation is on the other side.<sup>3</sup>

"At last, the Queen having collected all her energies, seated herself, drew her son near to her, and placed both her hands on his little shoulders. Calm, motionless, /so/ absorbed in grief,

/that she neither wept/ [del] nor sighed, she said to him in a grave and solemn voice: “My child, you are going to leave us. Remember your duties when I am no longer near to remind you of them. Never forget the [del] merciful God who has appointed you this trial, or your mother who loves you. Be modest, patient, and [del] good, and your father in heaven will help you.” She said those words, kissed her son on the forehead, and gave him back to the gaolers.”

I have been obliged to make the above translation rather a free one, for it happens oddly that, short as the original passage is, it contains quite a cluster of idiomatic French expressions and forms of construction which it is difficult to render literally into English. However, I hope both the extract and title as they stand here, will be satisfactory.

I have got the most perfect little bachelor apartment. A “Pavilion” like a house in a Pantomime – and the most willing pleasant Concierge and wife, in the world, to wait on me. Here my luck has stopped. I caught a chill a fortnight ago, from which I have now recovered, but which while it lasted, seriously interfered with Paris /pleasures/ and put me back sadly in some work I had to finish. Some things, however, I have seen of the interesting sort – two charming little plays at the Gymnase acted to perfection, and a very fine portrait of Dickens by Ary Scheffer.<sup>4</sup> I went expecting to be disappointed – and came away amazed. The picture is to be exhibited in the rooms of the corrupt Institution to which you belong.<sup>5</sup>

In the way of Imposters, add to our /former/ experiences here the name of Madam Ristori – the Italian actress about whom they have been going mad in Paris.<sup>6</sup> Perfect conventionality of the most hopelessly stagey kind – walk, attitudes, expression, elocution, all nothing but commonplace in a violent state of exaggeration. We saw her in a play of Alfieri’s, exhibiting the unnatural bestiality of a daughter in love with her own father, in long classical speeches.<sup>7</sup> Virtuous females of all nations, sitting in balloons of crinoline petticoat, observed the progress of this pleasant and modest story with perfect composure.

I am to be taken today to see Mr Leighton’s new triumph in Art – Orpheus playing the fiddle.<sup>8</sup> Adelaide Kemble<sup>9</sup> is said to have been the model, more or less, for every man woman and child in the composition! Surely an amusing “canvas” must be the result of this!

With love to the “Home Circle”

Believe me | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Addressed and dated after the signature at the foot of the letter, which WC writes in landscape format on a sheet of plain folding notepaper. The first ‘1’ is joined up with the preceding word ‘March’, thus leading to the misreading of the date by Ellis and others.

2. Ward has clearly asked WC to provide a title for his latest painting, together with an English translation of an evocation of the scene in French. The title and underscored scene are enclosed within a continuous wavy line.

3. At this point, WC turns over the sheet and continues the letter in landscape format on the verso.

4. Ary Scheffer (1797–1858), historical and portrait painter, born in Holland but working in Paris.

5. That is, the Royal Academy, to which Ward was elected as a full member in 1855.

6. Adelaide Ristori (1822–1906), popular Italian actress famous for her highly emotional performances.

7. Vittorio Alfieri (1749–1803), Italian neo-classical poet and dramatist; the play in question is probably Mirra (1786).

8. The young Frederic Leighton (1830–1896: ODNB), upcoming painter who first exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1855, afterwards Baron Leighton of Stretton, and President of the RA. WC’s negative views were first voiced in his comment in the Leader on Leighton’s ‘Cimabue’s “Madonna” Carried in Triumph through the Streets of Florence’ at the 1855 Royal Academy Exhibition: ‘This work neither deserves its good place on the walls, nor its noisy Academy reputation. It is a tame, conventional picture – apparently promising great things, at a distance, and performing none of them at close inspection.’ (5 May 1855, p. 429).

9. Adelaide Kemble (1814–1879: ODNB), renowned British opera singer, who retired from the professional stage in December 1842. WC later met her in London – see [0694] to Adelaide Sartoris (her married name), 5 July 1866.

[0235] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 19 MARCH 1856

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/49), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 152–153. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 134.

63 Avenue des Champs Elysées | Paris | March 19th 1856

My dear Mother,

I have this instant got your letter. As for the lost one, that is a mystery – I should have got it if it had been delivered here. The Post is desperately irregular – but, in your case, it seems to have been downright untrustworthy as well.

Now about the new house – the news of the taking of which comes on me “like a clap of thunder”.<sup>2</sup> The situation seems an excellent one. But did you have a surveyor to go over it? I see no objection that can be made, provided we are not committed to a long twelve years’ lease – and this, I gather from your note, we need not be. Otherwise I don’t think you could have done better than take the house. The quiet neighbour on one side is an invaluable attraction. But what do we save in rent for our ready money outlay of £150? £30, or £40, a year? Are the taxes reasonable? And about the drainage? I suppose that is all right. What does the back look out on? And, furthermore, what are you and Charley going to do from the 5th of April to the 5th of June? You are going about visiting, I suppose? and does he take a room? Answer me all these questions. I shall most likely return to town at the middle of April – when I shall have Pigott to go to at Richmond, and Mrs Dickinson at Farley Hill – and lots of other friends if I like – so I am provided for.

I am very sorry to hear of poor Pigotts [sic] fresh trial.<sup>3</sup>

I have [del] received the parcels, quite safe from Dickens. Thanks for the handkerchiefs and critiques. The Athenaeum is very kindly and skillfully done. Dickens thinks the machinery in which my stories are inserted very nicely imagined and executed – and he brings word that Miss Coutts (whom he saw when he was in town) was delighted with it. Look attentively at the 4th and 5th chapters of my Rogue’s Life. I am rather proud of them. The last chapter was finished in spite of rheumatism. I am all right now.

I was introduced to Mr Leighton and saw his new picture of Orpheus yesterday. Here is my remembrance of it.<sup>4</sup>

A lady came in and asked where he got his notion of the figures. Mr Leighton smacked his forehead, and said “Here! Here!”. It is the worst /life-size/ picture that ever was painted. “Cimabue” is absolute perfection compared to it.<sup>5</sup> But the young fellow has talent for small delicate pencil and water colour designs, some of which he showed me.

With love to Charley | Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins
Is Charley’s new painting room to be in the drawing room?

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | 17 Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London’, with ‘l’Angleterre’ at the top left and ‘WC’ at the foot. Postmarked ‘PARIS | 19 | MARS | 56’.

2. At 2 Harley Place, New Road, which HC and her sons eventually moved into around 24 June – see [0239] to Townshend, 5 June 1856.

3. Perhaps referring to the mental condition of Pigott’s brother, Henry.

4. There follows an ink caricature by WC of Leighton’s ‘The Triumph of Music’: four static figures labelled ‘Proserpine’, ‘Pluto’, ‘Orpheus playing the fiddle [sic]’, and ‘Eurydice’, with ‘Hell’ written in the centre between the first two and the second two figures, and ‘curtain’ written among curving lines above Pluto’s head.

5. See note 8 to the previous letter, [0234] to E.M. Ward, 18 March 1856.

[0236] TO CHARLES WARD, 19 MARCH 1856

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/6). Published: B&C, I, pp. 153–155. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 134.

63. Avenue des Champs Elysées | Paris | March 19th 1856

My dear Ward,

Dickens, I hear, told you of my illness. It came of course at the most unlucky time possible, just in the midst of the labour of writing the last longest and most difficult chapter of my “Rogue’s Life.” Everybody here, natives, as well as visitors, has been catching cold. My particular experience of the general malady took the form of rheumatism. I cured myself by sweating – the only way of getting rid of such maladies that I believe [del] in. [del] My arms, legs, back, head, neck, and teeth were all rheumatic by turns. After relieving my mind by swearing and my body by sweating for four consecutive days, I came out victorious in the struggle. But it was rather trying while it lasted.

I have got a lodging that a man might live in for the rest of his life in comfort – and the heartiest pleasiest people in the world to wait on me. Paris is more magnificent than ever. The Rue de Rivoli is now in a perpetual state of illumination. In each arch of the arcade on the side towards the street, is placed a brilliant gas light. The view from /one/ end to another is as brilliant as Vauxhall in its best days. The Square of the Louvre is all but completed. The matchless new street is in great part inhabited.<sup>1</sup> And, you will be glad to hear, the old tower of St Jacques de la Boucherie which has been in a ricketty state for years past, is now restored with the most perfect taste. It looks far finer than it did, when surrounded by houses – for the simple reason that you have now room to see it. A new Boulevard is the next thing to be made – running at right angles to the new Rue de Rivoli – and joining the old Boulevard at the Porte St Denis.<sup>2</sup>

We had an illumination here, on the day of the birth of the Imperial Infant who was created Prince of Peace and King of [del] Algeria, as soon as he could squall and dirty his napkins.<sup>3</sup> I went to the expense of two Francs! for coloured lanthorns for my own little window – and my illumination lasted out the night, while the rest in the Great house, at the side of ~~the~~ which my Pavilion is situated, were all quenched by the rain. The Parisians however turned out in spite of the wet, engaged every carriage and thronged every footway. We had great fanfaronading with trumpets – quantities of soldiers everywhere – and 101 guns to announce the birth, not one of which I, (in the arms of Morpheus) was [del] respectfully wakeful enough to hear. As for news of the Peace Congress,<sup>4</sup> we get it all from the English Journals.<sup>5</sup> Not one of the French papers has a line about it. Even in the way of mere gossip.

I have /seen/ some perfect and some wretched dramatic performances here. Our great theatrical excitement now is about a forthcoming play on the subject of “Paradise Lost” at the Ambigu Comique! There has been great difficulty in getting a good Eve, with plenty of flaxen hair to flow over her innocent shoulders. The play is announced for Saturday next. I suppose “the Deity” and “the Devil” will be principal characters. Le malhereux Abel, and Le feroce Cain, ought to be made interesting – and will be, no doubt.<sup>6</sup>

I have just heard that my mother has taken a new house – a good situation near town. I see no objection, if we are not let in for too long a period of occupancy.

You will have received by this time a £20 cheque to be paid in to my credit at Lafitte’s<sup>7</sup>. Write as soon as the payment is made – and in the mean time with love to Jane and the children.

Ever yours Wilkie Collins.

---

1. Referring to the continuing eastward development of the Rue de Rivoli and the surrounding area – see [0155] to HC, 16 October 1853.

2. Initially planned as Boulevard du Centre, it was renamed Boulevard de Sébastopol, in celebration of victory in the Crimean War.

3. See note 3 to [0233] to HC, 16 March 1856.

4. Referring to the Peace Congress held in Paris from February 1856 between representatives of the powers involved in the conflict in the Crimea, with the Treaty of Paris eventually signed on 30 March.

5. It is not clear whether this refers to the London press or to English-language journals issued in Paris such as the daily Galvani's Messenger (1814–84).

6. According to CD to Forster, [?29–30 March 1856], Pilgrim, VIII, p. 78 n. 4, WC and CD went to the Ambigu-Comique for the first night of Le Paradis Perdu, by Adolphe d’Ennery et Ferdinand Dugué, on Monday, 24 March 1856.

7. For ‘Laffitte’s’ – see [0029] to Harriet Collins, 30 September 1845, note 3.

[0237] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 5 APRIL 1856

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/50), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 155–156. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 135.

63. Avenue des Champs Elysées | Paris | April 5th 1856

My dear Mother

I like the situation of the house so much that I am sure to like the house itself. As for money, Wills has paid in for the Rogues Life £50 to your account at Coutts’s.<sup>2</sup> So your advance to me is paid back, with a balance of £20 – which I shall increase by some more periodical work on my return. Talking about work, I read the sketch of the plot of my new novel to Dickens a few days since. He was quite excited and surprised by it – and even he could not guess what the end of the story was, from the beginning. He prophesies that I shall get more money and more success with it, than I have got by anything else I have done.<sup>3</sup> Keep all this a profound secret from everybody but Charley – for if my goodnatured friends knew that I had [del] been reading my idea to Dickens – they would be sure to say when the book was published, that I had got all the good things in it from him. He found out, as I had hoped, all the weak points in the story, and gave me the most inestimable hints for strengthening them.

I shall come back about the middle of this month – having many reasons for not extending my stay here much beyond the six weeks I had originally allotted for it.<sup>4</sup> Of course you will proceed with all your arrangements for the country quite independently of me. I shall want nothing but the key which I left in the cupboard of your bedroom in an envelope, when I return. My strong box, and the [del] long bureau on the little table in my room, remain I suppose, under the Ward dominion at No 17.<sup>5</sup> As to my plans when I come back, they are at present in the clouds. If I take a fit of hard work, I shall probably settle down somewhere in quiet. Pigott offers Richmond – and Stringfield his study at Verandah House.<sup>6</sup> So asylums for the homeless are not wanting. How long has Charley taken the lodging at Percy Street for? Does he stop in London after the pictures have gone in? Write next week, and tell me this. I thank Frith for his invitation by this post.<sup>7</sup> Tell Ward (E.M.) that Sir Joseph Olliffe,<sup>8</sup> was from home, when his letter to Lady Ely arrived,<sup>9</sup> but that it was forwarded to her, the moment Olliffe received it. Macready is coming on Sunday to stay a week with the Dickenses. There is to be a dinner party on Wednesday at which some great notabilities of Paris are to be present. I can't quite shake off my cold still – and feel occasional rheumatic twinges, which I allay by a vapour bath – Probably the change of air back to London will set me quite right again. Don't do too much – and do go away into the country as soon as you can. Let things take care of themselves. Don't you know the subject of Charleys [sic] picture yet? Give him my love and believe me

Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

I write in a hurry and dare [sic for 'dare say'] I have forgotten some things I wanted to say

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | care of Mrs Gibbons | 16. Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | London', with 'l'Angleterre' at top left and 'WC' at bottom left. Franked 'PAID | 7 AP 7 | 1856'.

2. Recorded 'of Mr Wills' on 2 April (Cousts: Exors WmC).

3. Referring to The Dead Secret, serialized in Household Words, 3 January to 13 June 1857, and published in two volumes, June 1857.

4. In fact WC 'returned to London on 12 April, crossing the channel in a half-gale, ill once more' and 'after one night in a hotel took lodgings at 22 Howland Street, Fitzroy Square' (Peters, p. 165). Compare the comic treatment of his illness in both Paris and London in 'Laid Up in Two Lodgings,' Household Words, 7–14 June 1856, pp. 481–486, 517–523.

5. That is, the Collins's former residence at 17, Hanover Terrace.

6. WC and Edward Pigott's friend Dr Joseph Stringfield who resided at Verandah House, Weston-Super-Mare, Somerset – see [0703] to him of 16 August 1866.

7. William Powell Frith, RA (1819–1909: ODNB), distinguished painter, who studied with CAC, close friend of WC and Edward Ward; the nature of the invitation remains unclear.

8. Sir Joseph Francis Olliffe (1808–1869: ODNB), from March 1852 physician to the British Embassy in Paris.

9. Referring to Jane Loftus, Marchioness of Ely, née Hope Vere (1821–90), a lady of the bedchamber of Queen Victoria from 1851, who was also intimate with the French Empress Eugénie.

[0238] TO PETER CUNNINGHAM, 9 MAY 1856

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 135.

17 Hanover Terrace | May 9th 1856

My dear Cunningham,

I am only just recovering from a bad rheumatic and stomach attack, and am still too much

“out of condition” as a Journalist to be up to my work. But I have given the Prospectus of the new project to the Editor of the Leader who has promised to read and report on it as soon as possible.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Peter Cunningham Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. We cannot shed any light on the project in question. WC’s contributions to the Leader had ceased by this point and there are no surviving letters to Edward Pigott around this time.

[0239] TO THE REV. CHAUNCY TOWNSHEND,<sup>1</sup> 5 JUNE 1856<sup>2</sup>

MS: Wisbech. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 135–136.

17 Hanover Terrace | Regents Park | June 5th

Dear Mr Townshend,

At the pleasant dinner of Tuesday Dickens told me that you were desirous of knowing my brother’s address. It is “17 Hanover Terrace” in the Regent’s Park – until the 24th of this month. After that period we move into a new house – No 2 Harley Place, Upper Harley Street, New Road<sup>3</sup> – where my brother will have his studio.

I forgot to give you this little fragment of information, in the interest of our discussion about the bell-pulling ghost.<sup>4</sup> I am afraid I believe still in the supernatural origin of the nine o’clock ring – partly, I suspect, because it would make such a picturesquely awful opening for a ghostly Romance!

I remain | Dear Mr Townshend | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | The Reverend Chauncy Hare Townshend

---

1. The Rev. Chauncy Hare Townshend (1798–1868: ODNB), antiquarian, poet and friend of CD, with an interest in curious mental states; he was a witness at CAC’s wedding to Kate Dickens in July 1860. Townsend was transparently the model for the hypochondriac Frederick Fairlie in The Woman in White. His jewelry, as described there in Walter Hartright’s initial narrative, section VII, is now displayed at the Wisbech and Fenland Museum.

2. The dating is from WC’s mother’s removal from Hanover Terrace to 2 Harley Place, where CAC continued to live with her. But WC, though keeping a room at Harley Place, had begun to establish himself elsewhere, originally in Howland Street, later at 124 Albany Street. It was in the latter that he first openly resided with Caroline Graves and her daughter.

3. Now Marylebone Road.

4. Unidentified.

[0240] TO BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ,<sup>1</sup> 18 JUNE 1856

MS: Unknown.<sup>2</sup> Published: Otto, pp. 75–76, our copy text; BGLL, I, pp. 136–137.

2, Harley Place, New Road, London, June 18th, 1856.

Your kind letter has just been forwarded to my residence in town. I am sincerely gratified to hear that some of my works have a prospect of being included in your far famed series.<sup>3</sup>

I accept the remuneration you are so good as to offer me, the more readily because parts of After Dark offer something in return for it, in the shape of literary labour which has never appeared in Household Words. I refer to the Introduction and Prologues to the Stories, which make one interest of them, and which are now printed for the first time; and to one of the Stories themselves, called The Lady of Glenwith Grange, which has never appeared in any periodical publication. I hope these original additions to the book may so help its circulation as to justify the liberality which has led you to make me a gainer by the republication of After Dark.

I am just contemplating writing a new work of fiction, and I will take care that you shall be informed in good time of its publication.<sup>4</sup>

My last story, in three volumes, was called Hide and Seek.<sup>5</sup> It met with greater success here than anything I had previously written. If you should, at any time, like to look over the book,

I should be happy to place a copy at your disposal, if you will kindly inform me of the means of enabling it to reach you.

---

1. Christian Bernhard Tauchnitz (1816–95), founder in 1837 of the Leipzig publishing house, which quickly began to specialize in editions in English for a Continental audience. From around 1843 Tauchnitz began to obtain authorization from and offer payment to the British writers included, rather before he was required to do so by international copyright conventions within Europe. These ‘Sanctioned’ or ‘Copyright’ volumes could not be sold or imported into Britain or the Colonies but sold in thousands in the United States. See Nowell-Smith, pp. 41–63.
2. The Tauchnitz archives in Leipzig were destroyed by bombing during the Second World War.
3. After Dark was published on 24 July 1856 as No. 367 in Tauchnitz’s General Series of International Editions, also known as The Collection of British Authors, started in 1841 (Todd & Bowden, p. 97). Between 1856 and 1889 Tauchnitz issued twenty-eight of WC’s titles in a total of fifty volumes, two of his collaborations with CD and several short stories in Novels and Tales Reprinted from Household Words.
4. Presumably The Dead Secret, which ran from 3 January 1857 in Household Words and was published in three volumes by Bradbury & Evans in June 1857.
5. Hide and Seek is recorded as published on 16 October 1856 as vols 370 and 371 in the Collection of British Authors (Todd & Bowden, p. 98).

[0241] TO CHARLES COLLINS, 26 JUNE 1856

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 137–138.

R.Y.S. Coquette | June 26th Thursday

My dear Charley,

We are becalmed off Cowes, and I send this letter ashore by the Steward to report our safety so far.<sup>1</sup>

We lay at anchor all Sunday – for whatever the wind might have been doing on that day in London, it was blowing “half a gale” at Gravesend. On Monday, we set sail – the wind, it is hardly necessary to mention, being against us. Dublin was given up, and Cherbourg (on the French coast) substituted as our destination – principally because Champagne and Sauterne are wanted in the cabin cellar. We got no further on Monday than Margate Roads – where we anchored for the night. On Tuesday still beating against the wind, we got to Dungeness and anchored again – a blustrous [sic] day – the Steward so sick that we were obliged to get our breakfast for ourselves. On Wednesday we still sailed on, as well as the contrary wind would let us – and today we have reached the Isle of Wight intending to get back in a slanting direction (sideways with the always unaccommodating wind) to Cherbourg. We call at Torquay coming back, and then go round the Land’s End to the Bristol Channel and Weston.<sup>2</sup>

It is very pleasant on board here. The yacht is a delightful vessel, and Pigott’s brother is a thorough character – like Alfred in some of his ways, but with the queerest fidgetty [sic] mania for tidyness.<sup>3</sup> He is the kind of man one becomes familiarly friendly with directly. We began to clap each other on the back before we sailed from Gravesend.

I shall get your letter at Torquay, rather later than I expected owing to this trip to Cherbourg – but I hope you will send me good news about the house, and mother, and the mischievous idiot with whom we have the misfortune to be obliged to treat. Give my love to mother, and say I hope she is seeing a perspective of tranquillity already at the end of her troubles.<sup>4</sup>

I am getting sunburnt even by this time, and my general health is improving rapidly – but I can’t get rid of the d—d rheumatism. In this respect, I suppose my inevitable exposure to all varieties of temperature at sea is rather against me. Today, however, has been lovely – scorching hot summer weather at last.

Affectionately yours | WC

Tell mother I shall write to her from Torquay.

---

1. As Peters records (p. 166), ‘in late June he [WC] went sailing with Pigott and Pigott’s brother’.

2. That is, back to the home of Edward Pigott at Weston-super-Mare.

3. Probably referring to Pigott’s younger brother George who had married in February 1855 (see [0193] to Edward Pigott of 26 January 1855), though this might also be his older brother John Hugh Wadham Pigott (1819–92), who had inherited the family estates on the death of the father in 1853. Alfred remains unidentified.

4. Referring to the lease of her new home – see [0242] to her of 2 July 1856. The ‘ideot’ must be Roberts, referred to in that letter.

[0242] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 2 JULY 1856

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 138–139. Summary: B&C, I, pp. 156–157.

R.Y.S. Coquette | Torquay | 2nd July 1856

My dear Mother,

Charley’s letter has been brought to me this morning, and I can’t tell you how glad I am to hear that the war between you and Roberts is ended at last.<sup>1</sup> Now the house is your own, and the business is all done, you ought to be as well again, by the time I return, as ever you were in your life.

We got here from Cherbourg late last night, and are about to sail again as soon as possible for the Land’s End. When we enter the Bristol Channel we are to be met by a fleet of boats from Weston with a band of music, guns of triumph, and beef of course (or it would not be England) in plenty on board, to escort us to Weston. The Flower Show there, is to be on the 8th and I shall return either on the 9th or 10th, towards evening most likely.

Our last port was Cherbourg – the French Portsmouth. They have a breakwater twice the length of ours at Plymouth, and arsenals and dockyards of the most Brobdignag proportions.<sup>2</sup> But the town itself is a dull neglected place, full of the most intricately composite Continental stench. There is a good Table d’Hote at the principal hotel (where we dined) – a pretty theatre very badly ventilated (to which of course we went) – and a whole population of women in high Norman caps, like this:<sup>3</sup>

We have made acquaintance with a Cherbourg tailor who was employed to clothe the cook on board – a devout Papist, believing in miracles &c &c, but otherwise an intelligent man. His clothes marvels of cheapness and nice workmanship. He introduced us to his father and mother (outfitters in the old part of the town) and we spent the evening with them and their two bonnes!<sup>4</sup> The young man showed us his library and gave us coffee and pipes in his bedroom. The old people walked a mile into the country to gather us nosegays and gave us such Noyau<sup>5</sup> and Claret, as I have seldom found equalled anywhere. There was no interested gratitude for much money spent, in all this. It was simply politeness and hospitality. The bill for the clothes was about half what we expected it to be – I bought two coloured shirts for rough wear for 2<sup>s</sup> / 1<sup>d</sup> each! Cherbourg is famous for shirts, and I shall lay in a stock when we next go there.

Give my love to Charley, and say Pigott (who sends his love) offers him the enclosed ticket for the Opera. If he can’t go, he can easily give it away.

No time to write more. Goodbye.

Ever affectionately yours | WC

---

1. HC had just moved to 2 Harley Place, New Road. Charles Roberts was the previous owner, who was still recorded as resident there in 1856.

2. That is, extremely large, as in Swift’s Gulliver’s Travels.

3. WC draws the face of a woman in profile with a Norman cap.

4. Maids.

5. Liqueur made of brandy flavoured with fruit kernels (OED).

[0243] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 15 AUGUST 1856

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, pp. 189–190; BGLL, I, pp. 139–140.

2, Harley Place | New Road<sup>1</sup> | Augt 15th 1856

Dear Sir,

I called to-day in New Burlington Street, and your letter was handed to me by Mr Marsh.

I never supposed that you had delegated powers to act for you to anybody. But I did suppose that I might write to your son on matters of business just as appropriately as I might write to you<sup>2</sup> – the more especially as my last business transaction with your house (the publication of “Hide and Seek”) was managed with Mr George Bentley. With him I had several interviews on that occasion, and with Mr Morgan I had several interviews,<sup>3</sup> but I do not remember that I had the pleasure of seeing you at all in the course of the business transaction to which I refer. I only mention this circumstance in order to account for the mistake which it appears I have committed in supposing that writing to your son was the same in effect as writing to you.

The object of my call in New Burlington Street this morning was to ask for the account of the sale (if any) of Rambles Beyond Railways. Unless my memory deceives me, the account has been hitherto rendered and the profits have been divided in the January of every year. Last January I received no account and no share of profits. If no copies of the book have been sold since the last settlement of the account in January/ 55, I can only express my astonishment at your refusal to dispose of the Remainder. If, on the other hand, copies have been sold, I should like to see an account of the sale and to know when the profits – no matter how trifling they may be – are next to be divided.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Richard Bentley Esqre

-
1. The first occurrence of the new address.
  2. WC’s letter to George Bentley causing the row has not been traced.
  3. Edward Samuel Morgan, Richard Bentley’s chief clerk from 1829 to 1858 – see Gettmann, pp. 19–20.

[0244] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 19 AUGUST 1856

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/51). Published: B&C, I, pp. 157–158. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 140.

Villa des Moulineaux | Boulogne-sur-Mer | Augt 19th 1856.

My dear Mother,

I got here pleasantly enough on Saturday, and was at once installed in my comfortable Pavilion bedroom.<sup>1</sup> Hitherto, the principle [sic] effect of the sea-air has been to make me inveterately lazy and sleepy. I have, however, contrived to finish my work as the enclosed leaves will testify. Please string then on to the leaves already in your possession (entitled “The Family Mystery”) – take care that the pages follow each other properly – put the manuscript and the letter I enclose with it into an envelope, and direct the packet to

John Saunders Esqre | 25 Essex Street | Strand. | —<sup>2</sup>

If Charley is at home, and could take it on the day when you get it, so much the better – for it ought to have been sent in three days ago. If not, pray take or send it to Charles Ward, who will send one of the Bank porters with it. Only impress on him that it must /not/ be delayed, or trusted to any but safe hands.

Write me a line to acknowledge, the safe receipt of my enclosures, and to tell me how you are, and when you go into the country. We have had some dinner company here – Jerrold, Shirley Brooks,<sup>3</sup> and the boys’ schoolmaster – and the two Miss Powers (Lady Blessington’s nieces)<sup>4</sup> are expected to stay, on Wednesday next. The garden is beautiful – trees wonderfully grown – flowers in profusion. As for the town I have not been near it since my arrival. There is a fair /on the/ opposite hill to ours with [del] wonderful shows, gingerbread, and cheap jewellery. A lady staying here (Miss Boyle)<sup>5</sup> bought an emerald ring for a franc and a half which took in Townshend, who possesses the most magnificent real jewellery, and who admired the mock emerald as something quite priceless!

With love to Charley | ever affectionately yours | WC
Tell Charley Townshend has gone to Lausanne<sup>6</sup>

-
1. WC was again staying with CD outside Boulogne.

2. John Saunders (1810–1895; ODNB), journalist and novelist, who started up the finely illustrated monthly National Magazine in November 1856. WC's 'Uncle George or the Family Mystery' appeared in the first issue, pp. 10–15, and was reprinted as 'Brother Griffith's Story of the Family Secret' in Queen of Hearts (1859).
3. Charles William Shirley Brooks (1816–1874: ODNB), journalist and playwright., whose lifelong connexion with Punch began in 1851.
4. Marguerite Agnes Power (?1815–1867: ODNB), writer, and Ellen, her younger sister.
5. Mary Louisa Boyle (1810–1890: ODNB), writer.
6. To his villa Mon Loisir – see [0155] to HC, 16 October 1853. WC writes the postscript down the left-hand margin of the final page.

[0245] TO BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ, 23 AUGUST 1856

MS: Unknown. Extract: Otto, p. 76, our copy text; BGLL, I, pp. 140–141.

2, Harley Place, New Road, London, August 23rd, 1856.

... I have seen, at Boulogne,<sup>1</sup> your edition of After Dark and have been very much pleased at the neat and elegant appearance which my book presents in your form of publication.<sup>2</sup>

-
1. WC gives his new London address, but was in fact visiting Boulogne with CD during August and September 1856.
  2. See [0240] to Tauchnitz of 18 June 1856 for the details.

[0246] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 SEPTEMBER 1856

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/52). Published: B&C, I, pp. 158–160. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 141.

Villa des Moulineaux | Boulogne Sur Mer | France | Monday<sup>1</sup>

My dear Mother,

There have been some unexpected changes in our arrangements here, and I have only waited to write to you about our /new/ plans until they were completely settled.

There has been an epidemic – (malignant sore throat) among the children here ever since June which the townspeople kept secret, of course, as long as they could, for the sake of their own interests. Being far out of the town we only heard vaguely about the disease, until last Saturday week, when Dickens received a letter from Sir Joseph Oliffe [sic] – Physician to the Paris Embassy – entreating him to send all his children away from Boulogne. None of them were ill – our situation here being so healthy and so well away from the town – but Dickens, as a measure of precaution, instantly took Oliffe's advice – knowing the reliability of the man who offered it. All the boys were sent to London under their mother's care – those at school here as well as the youngest.

The next break-up was the departure for home of the two Miss Dickenses – Katie having a cough and loss of appetite which alarmed her father. We have since heard that Doctor Hastings<sup>2</sup> has pronounced ~~her~~ that nothing serious is the matter and that she is getting well in London.

Besides the gaps they made in our party – there has been a shocking catastrophe in the town. Gilbert à Beckett the writer and police magistrate has died of brain fever at a boarding house – and one of his children sank just before him under a fatal attack of the epidemic. These deaths have cast a fresh damp over us – we all knew poor A Beckett, and all hoped to the last that he would rally.<sup>3</sup>

Under these gloomy circumstances, Dickens gives up the house here – a month before the appointed time. Pigott arrived yesterday, and the two Miss Powers have been staying here for the last ten days. We all flit on Wednesday or Thursday next. The youngest Miss Power goes to Paris the rest of us cross to ~~London~~ /Folkestone/. The ladies go straight to London, and Dickens and Pigott and I, if the weather is at all encouraging, walk back by short stages through the Kentish Hop Grounds – reaching home I cannot tell when to a day – but not earlier than /the end of/ this week, or later than the beginning of /the/ next.<sup>4</sup>

I hear from Pigott that you are going tomorrow to Maidenhead. All you have to do is to drop a line to the servants at Harley Place (I don't know their names) telling them that I am coming back, but am not certain to a day when. They will neither have to sit up nor leave the door on the latch – for I shall arrange my return so as to be at home in good time. Above all things, you are not to think of hurrying ~~your~~ /your/ [sic] visit at Maidenhead on my account – If you come back [del] before the right time, I shall take /you/ to the railway and return you forcibly to the Langton's! I want you to get all possible good from the visit – and you know I can keep house as well as anybody. I am glad to hear Charley is with you. My love to him – and kind regards to the Langtons.<sup>5</sup>

Don't get alarmed about me after all these accounts of illness and death. Except that the damp weather makes my shoulders ache, I am perfectly well and taking such care of myself that my friends here hardly know me again.

Write and tell me how you are later in the week, addressing the letter of course to Harley Place.

Ever afftly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. For the dating, see Pilgrim, VIII, p. 178 n. 4.

2. 'J. Hastings, M.D. of 14 Albemarle St' (Pilgrim, VIII, p. 182 n. 2).

3. Gilbert Abbott á Beckett (1811–1856: ODNB), comic writer, who died at Boulogne on 30 August of typhus fever, unaware that the same fever had claimed his son Walter, aged nine, on 28 August. For CD's immediate response, see to Forster, [?30 August 1856], Pilgrim, VIII, pp. 179–180.

4. CD 'left Boulogne with Collins and Pigott on 3 Sep, and they walked part of the way from the Kent coast, evidently reaching London on 6 or 7 Sep' (Pilgrim, VIII, p. 180 n. 4).

5. The remaining two short paragraphs and the valediction are written in a small hand in the margin of the first page.

[0247] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 20 SEPTEMBER 1856

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, p. 141.

2. Harley Place | New Road | September 20th 1856 /

Dear Sir,

I have only just come back to town, or I should sooner have acknowledged the receipt of the Third Account of "Rambles Beyond Railways" – which I find awaiting me here on my return.

On examining the account I observe that I am on the credit side of it to the amount of £9. 16. – reckoning up to June last. May I enquire when you propose to pay me this sum? I ask the question, under the impression that there ought to have been some division of profits between us at an earlier period of the present year – for I do not find on referring to my private account any entry of money received from the sale of the second edition of the Rambles since January 1855.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. The previous payment must have been made in response to [0192] to Bentley of 24 January 1855. Bentley's slowness in paying what was owed to his authors reflects his continuing financial difficulties (Gettmann, p. 25). On this occasion, however, he responded promptly – see WC's acknowledgement [0248] of 24 September.

[0248] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 24 SEPTEMBER 1856

MS: BL (Add. 46652, ff. 276–7). Published: BGLL, I, p. 141

2. Harley Place | New Road | September 24th 1856

Dear Sir,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £9. 16. –, being the amount of my share of profits from the sale of the Second Edition of Rambles Beyond Railways up to June the 30th 1856.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. The cheque may have been cashed by WC at Bentley's bank: two payments for this amount entered HC's bank account around this time, but both are for interest paid on Consols.

[3020] TO LEWIS M. BECKER,<sup>1</sup> 2 DECEMBER 1856

MS: Massachusetts HS.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C3, pp. 35–36.

2 Harley Place | New Road | Decr 2nd 1856

Sir,

I have received from Mr Dickens your letter requesting permission to adapt for stage purposes a story of my writing called, "Sister Rose".<sup>3</sup>

I regret that I cannot give you the permission you seek, as it has already been conceded in another direction.<sup>4</sup>

Your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins

Lewis M. Becker Esqre

---

1. Perhaps Lewis Matthew Becker (1832–1909), listed as master engraver in the 1861 census.

2. In an extra-illustrated edition of American Actor Series (Boston: 1882), extended by Curtis Guild, Boston, 1883, and bound 18 March 1886.

3. See Dickens to Becker, 9 November 1856, Pilgrim VIII p. 220; the tentative identification there of the recipient as Bernard Henry Becker (1833–1900), journalist, is clearly incorrect.

4. No dramatisation of 'Sister Rose' has been identified.

[0249] TO W. R. SAMS,<sup>1</sup> 31 JANUARY 1857

MS: Huntington (HM 16010; Sams Collection LF). Published: BGLL, I, p. 142.

East Sheen | Jan'y 31st 1857

My dear Sams,

Your kind letter has been brought to me here, – where I am shut up from the world, in a hermitage overlooking Richmond Park, driving my pen as hard as I can make it go, day and night. I have a fortnight's work to do in a week, and the printer's devil is perpetually at my heels, lashing me on.<sup>2</sup>

If I can make time (the phrase is strictly true, in my case) to get to town on Wednesday evening,<sup>3</sup> I shall be only too glad to "look on lovely woman" and to whirl amid the intoxicating mazes of the dance.<sup>4</sup> If I am unfortunately absent again, when you ask me, I can only say that it will be, again, not my fault. I am afraid you will (very naturally) think me a Humbug, a setter-up of obstacles, and a maker of excuses. I can only say for myself that I am sincerely grateful for your invitation – that I will ~~accept~~ say Yes in my own proper person if I can cover a certain quantity of paper before Wednesday – and that, in any case,

I am always | yours very truly | Wilkie Collins

W.R. Sams Esq

---

1. Probably 'William Raymond Sams, bookseller and publisher, 1 St. James's St.; tickets for performances were obtainable from him' (Pilgrim, VIII, p. 387 n. 1).

2. Where WC was staying in East Sheen remains unidentified, but the copy in question must have been for Household Words, and may have been instalments of The Dead Secret.

3. WC writes on a Saturday and refers to Wednesday 4 February.

4. We have not been able to identify the social event in question.

[0250] TO F. M. EVANS,<sup>1</sup> 30 MARCH 1857

MS: Unknown. Photocopy: Private, our copy text. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 142–143.

2. Harley Place | New Road | March 30th 1857

My dear Evans,

I should like to see those estimates for the republication of “The Dead Secret”, whenever you can conveniently let me have them. If you remember, we talked at the Household Words office of a half guinea volume and settled that the book would run, as to length, to about a sheet more than “Hard Times”. I feel sure, by this time, it will not be longer than that – probably not quite as long.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

When do you think we may expect Dix and Edwards’s answer?<sup>3</sup> I ask, because I am now within five or six weekly numbers of the end of the story.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Frederick Mullett Evans (c. 1803–70), printer and publisher with his partner William Bradbury (c. 1800–69). Bradbury & Evans had acted as CD’s publishers since 1844, and had printed WC’s Antonina, Mr Wray’s Cash-Box and Hide and Seek for Bentley. They printed The Dead Secret both as a serial in Household Words and in volume form for their own publishing house.

2. Unlike CD’s Hard Times, which had appeared in a single volume at 5s. (in August 1854), WC’s novel appeared in two volumes at a guinea (in the first half of June 1857).

3. New York publishers – in the event the first US edition of The Dead Secret was published by their successors Miller & Curtis.

4. The final instalment appeared in Household Words on 13 June.

[0251] TO F. M. EVANS, 6 APRIL 1857

MS: Bodleian (MS. Eng. lett. d. 396, ff. 101–2). Published: B&C, I, p. 160. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 143.

2 Harley Place | New Road | April 6th 1857

My dear Evans,

I saw Dickens yesterday. He is favourably inclined towards the notion of two volumes at a guinea – but advises that you should communicate with Mudie, and ascertain how many copies in the two volume form he would take, before we decide. This certainly seems the right course to follow “with all convenient speed”, as the Scotch say

I think, with the experience of “After Dark”, to go by, we can hardly be wrong (especially if Mudie gives a satisfactory answer) in printing a guinea edition of 750, instead of 500

With regard to the suggestion of terms, Dickens suggested that I should put it to you whether, on reflection, you would think one fourth of the profits, instead of one third, a satisfactory arrangement – considering that there is no risk of the book not paying its expenses, and that you have already an interest in ‘The Dead Secret’ in its present form, as one of the Proprietors of Household Words. I need hardly say that I mention this suggestion in no spirit of bargaining – I merely leave it for your opinion, knowing that you will judge rightly and justly whichever way your decision points. I look forward with particular pleasure to the republication of The Dead Secret, as the beginning of a connection with your house which I have long been anxious to form, and which I sincerely hope will go on in the future to our advantage on both sides.<sup>1</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

F.M. Evans Esqre

---

1. In the event, this was the only WC novel to be published by Bradbury & Evans. The relative failure of the edition and the break with CD in 1859 were both factors.

[0252] TO UNIDENTIFIED HAMPSTEAD HOSTESS, 22 APRIL 1857<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 143.

2. Harley Place | New Road | Wednesday April 22nd

Dear Madam,

I trust to your kindness to accept my apologies for having been absent from the party last night.

My only excuse is that I am, just at present, so fully occupied with the completion of a literary undertaking which must be finished within a given time,<sup>2</sup> that I have been obliged to decline all evening engagements for the last ten days. I was unwilling to give up all hope of reaching Hampstead yesterday, or I should have written to beg you to excuse me some days since, in consideration of the extra time which I am now obliged to spend at my desk.

Trusting that you will kindly accept my apologies

I remain | Dear Madam | Very faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the address and the calendar.

2. The serialization of The Dead Secret in Household Words.

[0253] TO F. M. EVANS, 9 MAY 1857

MS: Bodleian (MS. Eng. lett. d. 396, ff. 103–4). Published: B&C, I, pp. 161–162. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 144.

2. Harley Place | May 9th 1857

My dear Evans,

I leave with this, the Title, Dedication, and corrected leaves of H.W., down to the “Part” of the Dead Secret which will be published on May 23rd. As there are many alterations [del] made in the portion of the story which I now send for reprinting, I should like (besides seeing proofs of the Title and Dedication) to compare the /book/ proofs (when the chapters are set up) with the corrected leaves which I now supply. If both are sent to me together, I could see the effect of my alterations – which is all I want to do – in half an hour, while the messenger waited to take the [del] proofs back.

The number for Saturday May 30th (which I finished and corrected last night) I will send as soon as I get it from Wills and have looked it over again. The next number (for Saturday June 6th) which I begin today, shall be the last, if I can possibly manage to get the conclusion of the story within the compass of a week’s work. If not, it must run on to Saturday June 13th – which, as the number is published on the Wednesday previous, would give June 10th, at the latest, as the day for the publication of the reprint. If it is an object to save as much time as possible, before the Volume of H.W. comes out, we might then publish (as Dickens suggested) on the Monday – that is to say on June 8th. I shall do my best to get done a week before this – but I have a terribly trying chapter to write and I can’t feel sure of myself till that is done.<sup>1</sup>

Wills wrote to me about Dix and Edwards and the supply of the Mss of the last chapter. If the departure of the steamer and the conclusion of my work come neatly together – they can have sent to them a copy of the Mss, [del] (which I will provide) as soon as the original leaves my desk for your office. If not, the fault is not mine. As I understand /it./ my claim on them for the £25 ~~is at~~ was established (quite irrespective of other circumstances) on the day when I wrote to refuse /taking/ that sum from Messrs Harper. I did this on their account, and am a poorer man, at the present moment, by £25, than I might have been if I had served the interests of their opponents. It struck me, [del] when I read their letter, that they took this view of the case. It is clearly the only just view. Perhaps, if I am not able to send the /last/ chapter to America, [del] in Mss, before you send it in print, I had better write a line of explanation to Dix and Edwards to make sure of setting the matter right.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

F.M. Evans Esqre

---

1. The twenty-third and final instalment, comprising Ch. 27 ‘Forty Thousand Pounds’ and Ch. 28 ‘The Dawn of a New Life’, in fact appeared in Household Words on 13 June. The earliest announcement of the first book edition from Bradbury & Evans as published ‘this day’ is found in, among other papers, the Daily News, Tuesday, 16 June 1857, p. 8b. The earliest review is probably that in the Athenæum, 20 June 1857, pp. 788–789.

2. The first US edition of The Dead Secret was published in New York by ‘Miller & Curtis, 321 Broadway, Successors to Dix, Edwards & Co.’ (Parrish, p. 31). Whether the MS arrived in the USA in time to beat the pirates, and whether WC received his £25 from the American publishers is uncertain. No relevant record is found in Coutts: Exors WmC.

[0254] TO F. M. EVANS, [21 MAY] 1857

MS: Bodleian (MS. Eng. lett. d. 396, f. 107a/b). Published: B&C, I, p. 162. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 144.

Whitefriars<sup>1</sup> | Thursday afternoon<sup>2</sup>

My dear Evans

I have done!! Those two blessed words, “The End” were written at 1/2 past 3, today. The last chapter I have just given to Mr Gardener<sup>3</sup> to set /up/ and he will send it to me in proof tomorrow morning, to be corrected while the boy waits. This [del] arrangement will, I hope, allow plenty of time for sending the slips of this final number to America, by tomorrow’s mail. I understood from Wills that you would kindly undertake to do this. My corrections will all be done in the morning – so the number will be complete, I suppose, before noon.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Household Words was printed at the Whitefriars workshop of Bradbury and Evans.

2. Dating from the most likely Thursday, based on the composition of the final instalment of The Dead Secret, which appeared in Household Words on 13 June – see [0253] to Evans of 9 May.

3. Presumably a member of the printing staff at Bradbury and Evans.

[0255] TO J. F. OAKEY,<sup>1</sup> 4 JUNE 1857

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 144.

2. Harley Place | New Road | June 4th 1857

Sir,

I shall be very glad to see you on Monday next, at twelve o’Clock, as you propose.

At the same time, however, it may spare you from unnecessary trouble if I tell you in this letter that my present engagements render it impossible for me to accept any commission to write a story, either long or short, in any periodical publication. I have already made conditional promises in three directions – promises which my connection with Household Words will probably prevent me from fulfilling for some time to come. At present, whatever I may do in fiction which is not reserved for separate publication in book-form, is reserved for serial publication in Household Words.

I write these lines of explanation, necessarily in some uncertainty as to the nature of the proposal that you wish to make to me. If I am mistaken as to the exact nature of your object in proposing to favour me with a call, a line from you to say so, will insure my remaining at home to have the pleasure of seeing you, on Monday. If I am right, I can only express my regret at being unable to accept the offer which you have been good enough to make to me through my friend, Mr Reade.<sup>2</sup>

Your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins

J.F. Oakly [sic] Esq

---

1. The name at the foot of the letter undoubtedly reads ‘Oakly’, but this must be a misreading by WC of the name of Jonathan Francis Oakey (d. 1882, aged 64: Observer, 13 August 1882, p. 8), of Canterbury Place, Walworth one of the publishers of the Christian Times, a liberal weekly newspaper founded in 1848 (see Waterloo).

2. Presumably Charles Reade, the dramatist and novelist – see the first surviving letter to him, [0421] 4 June 1861.

[0256] TO [ALBERT] SMITH,<sup>1</sup> 8 JUNE 1857<sup>2</sup>

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 145.

2. Harley Place | New Road | Monday morning | June 8th

My dear Smith,

Am I right or wrong in supposing that you kindly lent me, a long time since, a certain old French book called “Pièces Interressantes”?<sup>3</sup> I have been employing my first leisure in looking over my various papers, and I find among them several references to anecdotes in the French book I have just referred to, which I should like very much to compare with the printed text. Would you mind (in case I am right in believing that you are the possessor of the book) trusting me with the volumes again? I can promise to take the greatest care of them, and I believe they will be of use to me in suggesting one or two articles for Household Words.

I am going out of town on Friday, and am engaged every evening this week till that day. But, if you have got the books and if it is convenient to you to let me have them for a little while, I would call for them tomorrow (Tuesday) afternoon between 4 and 5 o’Clock.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Pray don’t scruple to say No, if it is any inconvenience to you to lend the books

---

1. Most probably to Albert Smith (1816–60: ODNB), dramatist, novelist and regular contributor to Punch under the editorship of Mark Lemon. WC was in contact with him in 1857 (see [0269] to John Palgrave Simpson of 17 October) and must have been in correspondence with him (see [0711] to John Bullar Jr of 13 October 1866, where he forwards Smith’s autograph). This might just also be to George Smith Jr (1824–1901: ODNB), head of the publishing house of Smith, Elder. WC had been introduced to him by John Ruskin in the late 1840s when he was seeking a publisher for Antonina, though After Dark (1856) was the first work by the author to be published by Smith, Elder. However, [0428] to George Smith of 26 July 1861 still addresses him formally as ‘Dear Sir’.

2. The letter is endorsed: ‘W. Collins | 8th June 1857’. Dating also from the calendar and address.

3. Thus for Pièces Intéressantes et Peu Connues – for the details see [0283] to A. H. Layard of 14 June 1858, where WC states that the work was the source for his tale ‘The Little Huguenot’.

[0257] TO WILLIAM GALE,<sup>1</sup> 9 JUNE 1857

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 48; BGLL, I, p. 146.

2 Harley Place | New Road | Tuesday, June 9th 1857

Dear Sir,

I have much pleasure in enclosing the cheque as you request.<sup>2</sup> Please acknowledge the receipt of it to Mr Dickens | – “Tavistock House, | Tavistock Square.”

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | W. Gale Esqre

---

1. William Gale (1823–1909), painter. Early on he painted in Pre-Raphaelite style, though he later concentrated on historical and biblical genre painting, as well as portraits and scenes of life in the middle and north of Africa where he travelled. See also WC’s later letters to him: [1487] of 29 October 1874 and [1569] of 28 October 1875.

2. The cheque is almost certainly for a painting by Gale, ‘Mr. F.’s Aunt: from “Little Dorrit”’, which WC bought on CD’s behalf. See CD to WC, 22 May 1857, and to Gale, 11 June 1857 (see Pilgrim, VIII, pp. 329–330 and 347, and also the note in Hutton, p. 82). The painting was sold as part of CD’s estate by Christie & Manson on 9 July 1870 and was bought by the dealer Thos. Agnew for 60 guineas (lot 24, Auction Catalogue, p. 5).

[0258] TO F. M. EVANS, 12 JUNE 1857<sup>1</sup>

MS: Bodleian (MS. Eng. lett. d. 396, f. 106a/b). Published: BGLL, I, p. 146.

2 Harley Place | Friday

My dear Evans,

I have accidentally heard that the Dead Secret was sent round to the newspapers yesterday

– but not a copy of the book has reached me, up to 1 oClock today (Friday). I am just off into the country to return this day week, the 19th. If you will order six copies to be sent to Harley Place, I shall be very much obliged, and my “anxious mother” will be gratified with a sight of her son’s work in book-form.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Date based on the publication of the first edition of The Dead Secret in mid-June and the internal reference to the following Friday as the 19th.

2. Diagonally above the greeting, ‘Sent off’ has been added in other hand, presumably that of a member of staff at Bradbury & Evans.

[0259] TO HENRIETTA WARD,<sup>1</sup> 12 JUNE 1857

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 48; BGLL, I, p. 147.

2. Harley Place | 12th June 1857

My dear Mrs Ward,

I have written to Pigott about the box for the 19th, and have told him (as I am going out of town for a week) to let my mother know whether he gets it. She will write and tell you, and she begs me to say, with her love, that she will be delighted to see you here to dine and spend the day, before going to the theatre on Friday.<sup>2</sup>

When I get back to town I shall ask you let me come and have a long day at Slough – if you will let me after my months and months of absence!

With love to Edward and the children, and kindest regards to Mr Ward,<sup>3</sup> believe me,
very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Henrietta Ada Mary Ward, née Ward (1832–1924: ODNB), who at the age of sixteen eloped with the painter E. M. Ward; together they had six children between 1849 and 1866. She was also a distinguished historical painter in her own right – see her edited memoirs (Ward).

2. The play has not been identified.

3. Charles James Ward, of Coutts & Co., father of Charles and Edward Ward, now presumably retired and living with his younger son and daughter-in-law in Slough.

[3117] TO HERBERT WATKINS,<sup>1</sup> 14 JULY 1857

MS: Patterson.<sup>2</sup> Facsimile: <www.charlesdickensonline.com/Gallery/g257.htm>; A&C5, p. 3.

2 Harley Place | New Road | July 14th 1857

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my best thanks for the Photographs. I am quite ashamed that you should think it necessary to make any apology for the little delay that has occurred before I received your kind present.

The Photographs are really superb specimens of the art – especially the profile and the smaller front face portrait.<sup>3</sup> While I am writing of my likenesses, I must offer you my sincere condolences on the incredibly ~~awful~~ bad copy made by the engraver of “The Train” from your fine original.<sup>4</sup> Speaking for myself, I was simply amused when I first saw the astounding caricature in the magazine which assumed to represent what you had done from me. But I may add with perfect sincerity that I was really distressed on your account when I remembered the pains you had taken to produce an excellent likeness, and when I saw the result that appeared in the “Train”

I hope I shall be able to call on you some day this week and see the portrait of Frank Stone of which you are kind enough to propose to give me a copy.<sup>5</sup>

(In great haste) | believe me | very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
To / | Herbert Watkins Esqr | &c &c &c

---

1. Herbert Watkins was the first photographer known to have taken images of WC. At this time he was proprietor of the Institute of Photography at 179 Regent Street, and later he moved his business to 215 Regent Street. WC remained in contact with him until the 1870s. Watkins also took a full length image of WC in 1861.

2. The physical location of the Judge John M. Patterson Archive of printed and manuscript material related to CD is unclear; apparently maintained by Ralph Jay Crawford Jr, and Bruce Jay Crawford, it was exhibited at the Grolier Club, 47 East 60th Street, New York, January to March 2006, is catalogued in The Extraordinary Life of Charles Dickens: An Exhibition at the Grolier Club of New York (New York: Grolier, 2006), and is accessible in digital form at <www.charlesdickensonline.com/>.

3. The image shows WC in right profile sitting in a chair with his left arm on the back and his right hand holding his waistband.

4. Illustrating the piece about WC by Edmund Yates (1831–1894) in the ‘Men of Mark’ series in his short-lived periodical the Train. The engraving is found in the Train of June 1857, p. 353.

5. Frank Stone (1800–1859), artist and friend of Dickens and WC. He was a fellow actor in Dickens’s amateur theatricals and appeared with WC in Not So Bad as We Seem and Mr Nightingale’s Diary.

[0260] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON,<sup>1</sup> 15 JULY 1857

MS: Texas (W. Collins Letters TA). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 147–148.

2 Harley Place | New Road | July 15th 1857

Dear Simpson,

Long before you get this you will, I hope, have received a letter from me (written immediately after the reading of the play this morning) to tell you that Mr Gordon has been at my request, selected for trial in the part of Martin Gurnock in The Lighthouse.<sup>2</sup> If he produces a favourable impression at Rehearsal he may consider his appearance in the part a settled thing. I told Mr Emden that I felt certain I might in this case safely run the risk of trusting a new man – and that settled the question.

I shall, unluckily, not be at home tomorrow (Thursday) afternoon. But I shall be here from 3 to 5 on Friday afternoon – and shall be very glad to see Mr Gordon, if you are disengaged then. If Mr Gordon would like it, I will send for the play, and read it to him on Friday afternoon. Please drop me one line to tell me whether this shall be done, and believe me, truly yours

Wilkie Collins

---

1. John Palgrave Simpson (1807–87: ODNB), dramatist, novelist, travel writer and amateur actor; he frequently adapted CD’s and other popular authors’ novels. He was a member of the Garrick and Athenæum clubs and Secretary from 1868 of the Dramatic Authors’ Society.

2. The letter concerns the preparations for the first professional production of a play by WC – that of The Lighthouse at the Royal Olympic Theatre, off the Strand, from 10 August 1857. The joint managers of the theatre were Frederick Robson, who played the leading role of Aaron Gurnock, and W. S. Emden (see [0265] to him of 5 September 1857). The part of Gurnock’s son Martin was played by the theatrical newcomer Walter Gordon, who must have been recommended by Simpson. WC’s earlier letter to Simpson of the same day has not been traced.

[0261] TO HERBERT WATKINS,<sup>1</sup> 20 JULY 1857

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:4), envelope only.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 148.

H. Watkins Esq. | 179 Regent Street

---

1. Herbert Watkins, photographer, at this time proprietor of the Institute of Photography, 179 Regent Street; later of 215 Regent Street – see [0275] to him of 20 March 1858.

2. Postmarked ‘JY20 | 57’.

[0262] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 25 JULY 1857

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 148.

2 Harley Place | New Road | July 25th 1857

Dear Sir,

I have been away in a friend's yacht for the last week, or I should have sooner acknowledged the receipt of "Anne Sherwood."<sup>2</sup> Pray accept my best thanks for the gift of the book. I am anticipating the pleasure of beginning it in quiet, after tonight's performance of "The Frozen Deep."<sup>3</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Richard Bentley Esqre

-
1. Directed to 'Richard Bentley Esqre | 8 New Burlington Street | Regent Street | W.', postmark obscured.
  2. 'Berkeley Aikin' (pseudonym of Fanny Aikin Kortright; 1821–1900), Anne Sherwood: or, the Social Institutions of England (A novel) (3 vols, London: Bentley, 1857). Apparently not found in WC's library at his death (Baker).
  3. One of the amateur performances starring CD and WC, at the Gallery of Illustration, Regent Street.

[0263] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 10 AUGUST 1857

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, I, p. 162; BGLL, I, p. 149.

Albion | C & H Cooper, 26 Gt. Russell Street, Strand.<sup>1</sup> | Monday night

My dear Mother,

The Play has been a great success. The audience so enthralled by the story that they would not even bear the applause at the first entrance of Robson.<sup>2</sup> Everybody breathless. Calls for me at the end of the first Act. A perfect hurricane of applause at the end of the play – which I had to acknowledge from a private box. Dickens Thackeray, Mark Lemon, publicly appearing in my box. In short an immense success. I write this in the supper room in the midst of conviviality and applause. Charley is with us, and sends his love.

In great haste | Affly yours | WC

-
1. WC uses embossed paper from the Albion Tavern and Hotel off the Strand.
  2. Frederick Robson (stage name of Thomas Robson Brownhill; c. 1822–64: ODNB), who 'became co-manager of the Olympic in 1857, and played Aaron Gurnock' in the first professional production of The Lighthouse which opened there on 10 August 1857 (Wolff, p. 270).

[0264] TO CHARLES LAHURE,<sup>1</sup> 4 SEPTEMBER 1857

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 149–150.

2. Harley Place | New Road | London | September 4th 1857

My dear Sir,

I have, this day, sent to Mr Jeffs,<sup>2</sup> to forward to you, single copies of "Basil", "After Dark", and "The Dead Secret".

The duplicate copies shall be sent, as soon as I can procure copies of my other two novels – "Antonina", and "Hide and Seek"<sup>3</sup> – to forward with them. Since the second edition appeared, "Antonina" has not been reprinted, and some delay may happen before a copy can be procured. But I have given the necessary instructions, and the book shall be sent to Mr Jeffs as soon as it reaches me.

I have to thank you for the 1350 francs, which sum has been duly paid into the bank of Messrs Coutts & Co<sup>4</sup>

Believe me, my dear Sir, | Very faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Monsieur Ch. Lahure

-
1. Partner in the Parisian publishing house of Hachette, Librairie et Cie, which was to publish a translation by Émile Forgues of The Dead Secret in 1858 as Le Secret.
  2. In charge of Hachette's London bookshop – see [0317], [0488] to Charles Ward of 20/27 October 1859 and 11

September 1862.

3. Of the novels listed here, none seems to have been published by Hachette except Hide and Seek (as Cache-cache) in 1877.

4. Probably advance payment for the translation rights to one or more of the novels forwarded – see [0270] to F. M. Evans of 24 October 1857. The payment was credited to HC's bank account on 2 September as £53-3-11, at an exchange rate of 25.225 francs to the pound less commission of 6s-5½d, about 0.6%. (Coutts: WmC Exors).

[0265] TO W. S. EMDEN,<sup>1</sup> 5 SEPTEMBER 1857

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, I, p. 150.

Sept 5. 1857

My dear Mr Emden,

Received of W. S. Emden Esqre, the sum of ten pounds, making up the sum of one Hundred pounds, in full of my demand for the right of representing The Lighthouse at the Olympic Theatre for two years dating from the 8th of August 1857.<sup>2</sup>

Wilkie Collins<sup>3</sup>

---

1. William Samuel Emden (c. 1801–72), minor dramatist and theatre manager who with Frederick Robson succeeded Alfred Wigan in August 1857 as lessee and manager of the Olympic (see Pilgrim, VIII, p. 394 n. 1).

2. In the event, the play ran only from 10 August 1857 to 17 October 1857. No corresponding payment can be identified in HC's bank account for either a sum of £10 at this time, or an earlier one of £90 (Coutts: WmC Exors).

3. The signature is over the one-penny 'PAYABLE ON DEMAND' stamp endorsing this receipt.

[2982] TO [W. S. EMDEN],<sup>1</sup> [5–7] SEPTEMBER 1857<sup>2</sup>

MS: Private.<sup>3</sup> Published: BGLL, IV Addenda, p. 401 (dated, [6–7] September 1857, recipient unidentified), amended A&C2, p. 68.

... – is anxious to be personally introduced to you, for the purpose of submitting a dramatic proposal to your notice ...

I am just away for the moors of Cumberland

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The recipient must be a theatre manager, and is likely to be to Emden, then lessee of the Royal Olympic where The Lighthouse was running, and to whom WC sent a receipt for the payment for performance rights on 5 September ([0265]). It is possible that this personal letter accompanied the formal receipt.

2. Conjectural dating based primarily on the reference to the trip to Cumberland. Following the Manchester performances of The Frozen Deep and in a state of 'grim despair and restlessness', CD proposed on 29 August 1857 that he and WC should 'cast about ... go anywhere – take any tour – see any thing – whereon we could write something together.' (Pilgrim, VIII, p. 423). By early September, CD had announced to Forster that the decision was for a 'foray upon the fells of Cumberland' (Pilgrim, VIII, p. 428). CD and WC left London on 7 September and the collaboration became 'The Lazy Tour of Two Idle Apprentices', appearing in Household Words, 3–31 October 1857.

3. Fragment roughly torn away for the autograph, formerly inserted in an album. Judging by the folds, the portions of surviving text may be from around the middle of the third and fourth pages of a sheet of folded notepaper. Beneath and to the left of the signature is still visible a stroke of the pen that may well be a remnant of the excised addressee line.

[0266] TO W. SALTER HERRICK,<sup>1</sup> 26 SEPTEMBER 1857

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 150–151.

Scarborough | September 26th 1857

Dear Herrick,

Your letter has just followed me to this place.<sup>2</sup>

I am afraid I had no chance of being able to fit either of the stories, at present, to the literary projects that I have now in contemplation. Pray make any use of them, therefore, that you please, without reference to me.<sup>3</sup>

Have you seen The Lighthouse yet? If not, I shall be happy to give you an order for two, for any night you like. I shall be back at Harley Place on Tuesday next

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

W. Salter Herrick Esqre

-
1. William Salter Herrick (c. 1806–91), artist, best known for the oil painting ‘Hamlet in the Queen’s Chamber’, c. 1857.
  2. WC was convalescing at the Yorkshire seaside resort following the injury to his ankle – see the following letter [0267] to HC of 5 October, and Peters, pp. 178–180.
  3. The stories in question have not been identified.

[0267] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 5 OCTOBER 1857

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, p. 163. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 151–152.

2 Harley Place | Monday morning

My dear Mother,

Don’t make yourself nervous about nothing. My ankle gets stronger every day. I have been to Gadshill to talk over future work for H. W. with Dickens, and I was overrun by all sorts of small occupations, or I should have acknowledged the receipt of your letter before – the cheque enclosed in which came quite safe.<sup>2</sup>

Charley returns today. I was obliged to be back a day earlier. We shall have everything ready for you on Thursday. While the fine weather lasts you are quite right to stop away

Every thing goes on smoothly here. Charles Ward comes to dine today. No letters for you. Immense success of The Lighthouse. The other night the stalls were so full that the people had to be accommodated in the orchestra. Saturday last, I tried to get a private box for the Loudons and found they were all taken.<sup>3</sup> Robson goes into the country for three weeks this month – When he comes back the run of the play is to be resumed. I have engaged to do them another.<sup>4</sup>

No time for more – Ann is waiting to take this to the post.<sup>5</sup>

Kind regards to Mr & Mrs Combe and the Vicar

Ever afftly yours | WC

All the mountain part in H.W. is mine<sup>6</sup>

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Thomas Combe Esqre | University Press | Oxford.’, postmarked ‘London | OC 5 | 57 | W’.
  2. Presumably a cheque to him for cash. A debit of £53 to ‘W W Collins’ on 1 October is recorded in HC’s bank account (Coutts: exors WmC). WC used this account, technically WmC’s executor account, at Coutts until he opened his own there on 23 August 1860 (see Clarke, pp. 228–229, who mistakes the date as the 22nd).
  3. See [0268] to Agnes Loudon, 11 October 1857.
  4. Referring to The Red Vial, produced at the Olympic from 11 October 1858 with Robson as the lunatic Hans Grimm. In the event the run of The Lighthouse was not resumed – see [0269] to John Palgrave Simpson of 17 October 1857.
  5. Presumably a servant.
  6. Postscript added on the inside of the envelope flap. The reference is to the first instalment of ‘The Lazy Tour of Two Idle Apprentices’, which describes how Thomas Idle (alias WC) sprains his ankle while coming down Carrock Fell in the mist. The humorous narrative was co-written with CD and appeared in five parts in Household Words, 3–31 October 1857.

[3118] TO CHARLES LAHURE, 5 OCTOBER 1857

MS: Columbia (Spec. MS Coll. J. H. Samuels, 493–9/6/90).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C5, p. 4.

2. Harley Place | New Road | London | October 5th 1857

My dear Sir,

I send you, with this letter, (through Mr Jeffs) duplicate copies of Basil, After Dark, and The Dead Secret – with copies of my other two novels, Antonina and Hide And Seek, for you to judge whether it will be desirable to translate them also into French.

I beg you to accept my apologies for not having sent this second parcel sooner.<sup>2</sup> The delay has been principally occasioned by the difficulty in finding a copy of Antonina which was published some years ago, and which is now out of print.

Whenever you give me notice that it is time to do so, I will write, and transmit to you the Preface which is to accompany the translations,

Believe me | my dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Monsieur Ch: Lahure | &c &c &c

1. With an envelope addressed: 'Monsieur | Charles Lahure | &c &c –'.

2. See [0264] to Lahure, 4 September 1857, when these books were promised.

[0268] TO AGNES LOUDON,<sup>1</sup> 11 OCTOBER 1857<sup>2</sup>

MS: Wolff Collection (1386), with torn envelope flap. Extract: Wolff, p. 270 (dated 'summer, 1857'). Published: BGLL, I, p. 152, as to Agnes Loudon.

2. Harley Place | Sunday

My dear Miss Agnes,

Charles will be delighted to accept your kind invitation, and I should be very glad to accompany him – but I am again on the "sick-list".<sup>3</sup> My sprained ankle has prevented me from taking exercise, and want of exercise has ended in the return of some of my old bilious miseries. I have just been writing to the doctor, and I am terribly afraid that I shall be in the society of physic-bottles on Thursday night.

With kindest regards to Mrs Loudon

I remain | sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins

I am glad to hear that you liked "The Lighthouse". You will guess what my opinion of Robson is, when I tell you that I have engaged to write another play for the Olympic in which he is to have as strong a character as I can make for him

Did you not say in some former letter, you wanted a photograph? or was it somebody else? I enclose a portrait to make sure. WC<sup>4</sup>

1. Agnes Loudon (1832-1863) was born on 16 October 1832 at 3, Porchester Terrace in Bayswater, London. Her parents – the landscape gardener John Claudius Loudon (1783–1843: ODNB) and the botanical and gardening writer Jane Wells Loudon née Webb (1807–1858: ODNB) – became friendly with the Collins family who lived at no. 30 from 1830–1836. The friendship continued for many years. Agnes, described as being 'sweet and laughter-loving' (Mrs. Andrew Crosse (Cornelia Augusta Hewett Crosse née Berkeley) 'A Group of Naturalists', Temple Bar 98, (July 1893), pp. 356-372; here p. 359), played Miss Richland in Goldsmith's The Good-Natur'd Man in the back-drawing room theatricals at the Collins's home in Blandford Square in 1849 (see [0058] to Miss Clarkson [5/12 June] 1849). Agnes published two books: Tales for Young People, London: Bowdery & Kerby 1846, when she was barely 14, edited with a preface by her mother, and Tales of School Life in 1850. WC and CAC were frequent visitors to social events at Porchester Terrace where the Loudons lived until their deaths. Agnes was attracted to CAC but six months after her mother's death on 13 July 1858, she married the lawyer and political organiser Markham Spofforth. Her first child, Beatrice, died in 1860 at just one year old. A son Walter followed. But a month after giving birth to her third child, Agnes herself died on 13 June 1863 (Times, 16 June 1863, p. 1a). See Bea Howe, Lady with Green Fingers – The Life of Jane Loudon (London: Country Life, 1961), pp. 99, 105, 164.

2. The references to WC's sprained ankle (suffered during the walking tour of Cumberland in September with CD) and the professional production of The Lighthouse allocate the letter to the autumn of 1857; [0267] to HC of Monday, 5 October (where he states that he failed to obtain a box for the Loudons on the previous Saturday) and [0269] to John Palgrave Simpson of Saturday, 17 October (which reports the end of the run of the play) secure the letter between those dates, when the only Sunday fell on 11 October.

3. The invitation was for Agnes's birthday on the 16th: 'For her twenty-fifth birthday, her mother organized one of her best dinner parties, including such old friends as Charles Landseer, Wilkie Collins, Palgrave, Louis Blanc, the French patriot, and the Bonomis. It was a most successful evening' (Howe, pp. 157-158). Howe relied on diaries written by Agnes which may have contained the guest list but not those actually attending.

4. Second postscript written on associated scrap of paper which appears to be the flap torn from the original envelope. Though the hand and pen provide a fairly good match, there is a possibility that this postscript may belong with another and possibly untraced letter. If the note does belong with the letter to Agnes, the reference must be to the 1857 photograph by Herbert Watkins – see [0275] to him of 20 March 1858.

[0269] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 17 OCTOBER 1857

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 153.

2. Harley Place | October 17th 1857

My dear Simpson,

I have written to Mr Bidwell<sup>1</sup> by this post to tell him that I have been obliged to make a rule that no Ms copies shall be taken from the Olympic Prompt Book. This has been done, in my own defence, to enable me to decline applications from strangers – and for consistency's sake I must hold by my own regulation, in all cases.

However I have also written to tell Mr Bidwell that the play will probably be printed in a short time, and that I hope it may be published in time to suit the purpose of his company – I have said this, believing that if I belong to the Dramatic Authors' Society, the play will be printed as a matter of course. Mark Lemon and Albert Smith<sup>2</sup> promised to propose and second me, at a supper in celebration of the first night of the play – but we somehow forgot all about it afterwards. I write today to remind Mark of his engagement to propose me. Will you second me, in Albert Smith's absence? – that is to say, if seconding involves you in no trouble or inconvenience of any kind. The run of The Lighthouse will be stopped after this week, until Robson returns to London from his country trip<sup>3</sup> – after which it will again appear in the bills. This interim would afford an opportunity of printing the play from the prompt-book – supposing I am right in my idea that the Dramatic Author's Society undertakes the printing and publishing of plays by members<sup>4</sup>

I will tell Mark in writing to him that I have trusted to your kindness to second me. I ought to have joined the Society weeks ago.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Possibly the John Bidwell, who, with Palgrave Simpson, was on the Olympic Theatre committee organizing the farewell benefit of the actor-manager Alfred Wigan in July 1857 – see the notice in the Times, 20 July 1857, p. 8b.

2. See [0256] assigned to Smith of 8 June 1857.

3. The run seems in fact not to have been resumed.

4. No printed version of The Lighthouse in English is known. See [0349] to Simpson of 2 June 1860.

[0270] TO F. M. EVANS, 24 OCTOBER 1857

MS: Johns Hopkins (in extra-illustrated copy of John Forster, Life of Charles Dickens, 2nd edn (London, Chapman & Hall, 1872), III, p. 372). Summary: B&C, I, pp. 163–164. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 154–155.

2 Harley Place | New Road | October 24th 1857

My dear Evans,

I have received your kind note and the bill for £200, on account of The Dead Secret, enclosed. Pray accept my grateful acknowledgement for the trust you are willing to place in the future of the book, as well as my best thanks for the generous manner in which you have arranged that it shall remunerate me, for my part of the venture, at the earliest possible period.

It would be insincere to say that I am not vexed to find that the edition is not all sold. At the same time, I must add that I sincerely believe that the book has had the greatest possible advantages in being published by your house – advantages of every kind which I honestly feel it could have had in no other hands. My disappointment springs from the conviction, which is now forced on me, that, while I have made great progress with the public of other countries since I first began to write, I have made none, so far as solid results are concerned, with the public of my own. In America my books are all going to be republished with a percentage promised to me.<sup>1</sup> In France they are going to be translated with copyright paid to me beforehand.<sup>2</sup> In England I am, as to circulation, just where I was when I published my first novel seven years ago.

The only return that I can now make – and it is a very small one – for your liberality, is to beg that you will take any measures you please to make the book justify the advance on it that you have made to me. If it will produce this result to sell off the copies on hand for anything they will fetch and to publish a cheap edition forthwith, by all means do so.<sup>3</sup> I am anxious for nothing now but that my publishers should have their proper return and their proper profit with as little delay as possible.

In the mean time, | Believe me

Yours truly & obliged | Wilkie Collins

Drop me a line a day before you call, in order that I may make quite sure of being at home to receive you.

F. M. Evans, Esqr /

---

1. The Dead Secret was serialized by Harper & Brothers of New York in its new Harper's Weekly, though it was published in book form by Miller & Curtis of New York in the same year.

2. The Dead Secret was translated by Émile Forgues and published as Le Secret (Paris: Hachette & Cie 1858). Hachette published most of his other novels, though not The Woman in White, No Name and Armada, which were published by J. Hetzel.

3. In fact the first one-volume edition was published by Sampson Low only in 1861.

[0271] TO JANET WILLS,<sup>1</sup> AUGUST 1856–OCTOBER 1857

MS: Yale (laid in first edition of The Woman in White, I). Published: BGLL, I, p. 155.

2 Harley Place<sup>2</sup> | Thursday evening

My dear Mrs Wills,

The reading of your kind letter has relieved me so much, that I must write one line to thank you for it. I have felt a little better since I got out today – and I really begin to hope that I shall not disappoint your kind wishes for my speedy recovery.

Pray accept my best thanks, and

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Janet, sister of the publishers William and Robert Chambers, who married CD's secretary W. H. Wills on 23 April 1846. She was the aunt of Nina Lehmann (see Pilgrim, I, pp. 236, 238 n. 2).

2. Dating from the address, used by WC between 15 August 1856 and 24 October 1857. The address was changed by order on 20 February 1857, when New Road was renamed Marylebone Road and 2 Harley Place was renumbered 11 Harley Place. However, the change only seems to have come into force at the end of October.

[0272] TO F. W. HAMSTED, <sup>1</sup> [JANUARY–OCTOBER 1857]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 155–156.

2. Harley Place | Saturday

Dear Mr Hamstede,

I find myself again prevented from attending a dinner, so I send my subscription to you. I have not got the rules of the club by me, but I believe I am right in assuming that the subscription is one guinea.

With regard to the future, it strikes me that I shall be doing better if I dine at the club (on the few occasions when engagements, absences, and interruptions, will allow me to dine there) in the capacity of visitor instead of Member. I am now occupying a place which would be better filled by another man who could attend more constantly than I can. I am so frequently out of town on Saturday and so frequently beset by engagements on Saturday that I see no chance of my being able to dine at the club, as often as I ought and as often as I should like to dine there if I continued to be a member.

Under these circumstances I think it will be best if I ask you to take my name off the books after the conclusion of the present season – solely on the ground that I cannot attend as often as a good member should, and that I am unwilling to fill a place which any other man who could more frequently dine with you would so much more worthily occupy.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

F. W. Hamstede, Esqre

---

1. Frederick William Hamstede, City Clerk retired through disablement, was Honorary Secretary of 'Our Club', founded by Douglas Jerrold. He was also a member of the Garrick Club and was active in arranging support for the Jerrold Fund upon the death of Douglas Jerrold in 1857. See Pilgrim, VII, p. 719 n. 3; VIII, p. 373, etc.

2. Dating from the address and the notepaper, watermarked 'GOWAN & SON | 1857'.

[0273] TO MISS BROWNE,<sup>1</sup> 10 NOVEMBER 1857

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 156.

11 Marylebone Road<sup>2</sup> | London | Novr 10th 1857.

Madam,

I have great pleasure in complying with the request which you have honoured me by making – and I beg, at the same time, to thank you for the kind expression of approval which your note conveys to me in speaking of one of my works.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Miss Browne

---

1. Unidentified, but presumably an autograph hunter.

2. WC gets the revised address wrong on what is the first known occasion on which he uses it. Formerly 2 Harley Place, New Road, the address was revised to 11 Harley Place, Marylebone Road.

[3021] TO F. H. UNDERWOOD,<sup>1</sup> DECEMBER 1857<sup>2</sup>

MS: Maine HS (Fogg Collection 420). Published: A&C3, pp. 36–37.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road | London. | N.W.

My dear Sir,

I must again trouble you with a note to thank you for the first two numbers of the Atlantic Monthly, and to ask you to excuse the delay that has taken place in producing my promised contribution to that periodical.<sup>3</sup>

When I last wrote to you I was little better than an invalid, and since that time my health has been altogether upset by an accident.<sup>4</sup> Long confinement to the house has told upon my nerves, and has obliged me to be very careful not to exhaust what little literary energy I have still preserved. I have always been accustomed to plenty of exercise, and the enforced cessation of all bodily activity has sadly affected my health and spirits.

I only trouble you with this characteristic egotism of a sick man, because I am very anxious that you should not think me forgetful of an engagement which I still hope to fulfil. I am able to get out a little now, and I expect to be able to follow up this advantage by working off some of the arrears that have accumulated on me. If I succeed soon, which I trust I may, in doing something for the Atlantic Monthly, my proper course, I presume, will be to send my Mss to Messrs Trübner & Co for transmission to Boston.<sup>5</sup>

I have read the new Magazine with great interest. It seems to me to have the first great merit of appealing to a large variety of tastes; and I can express no better wish for it than that it may have already met with the success which it thoroughly deserves. The first publication of it in the very midst of a great commercial panic was an act of courage which no English publisher, under similar circumstances, would have so much as thought of rivalling.<sup>6</sup> There must be a genuine interest in literature, for its own sake, in America – or such a speculation as the Atlantic Monthly could never have been launched in such times as these.

Believe me, My dear Sir, | Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins
F.H. Underwood Esqre

-
1. Founder of the (Boston) Atlantic Monthly: A Magazine of Literature, Art and Politics – see [0289] to him of 12 August 1858.
  2. In another hand, upside down at the foot of the fourth page, a filing note reads: ‘Wilkie Collins | Dec. 1857 | London’. Given the acknowledgement of receipt of the first two issues of the Atlantic, dated November and December 1857, the letter seems likely to date from the middle of the month.
  3. Presumably WC had been originally invited to contribute to the opening issue.
  4. The letter remains untraced, but must date prior to 8 September 1857, when WC injured his ankle during the walking tour of Cumberland with Dickens.
  5. WC’s contribution ‘Who is the Thief’ duly appeared in the issue for April 1858; Trübner & Co were the London agents for and distributors of the magazine.
  6. The financial panic of 1857 was triggered by the failure on 24 August of the New York branch of the Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co. due to embezzlement.

[0274] TO CHARLES KEAN,<sup>1</sup> 15 JANUARY 1858

MS: Morgan (MA 4500). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 156–157.

11 Harley Place | January 15th 1858

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my best thanks for the honour you have done me in placing my name on The Free List of the Princess’s Theatre. I am only saying that I know how to appreciate the value of an evening’s enjoyment, when I assure you that I shall gratefully use the privilege which you have conferred on me.

With my best congratulations on your recovery, and on the proof of the completeness of it which you have given to the public,

I remain, My dear Sir, | Yours obliged & faithfully | Wilkie Collins

To Charles Kean Esqre

---

1. Charles John Kean (1811–68: ODNB), actor-manager at the Princess’s Theatre (see [0116] to Edward Pigott of [18 February] 1852). King Lear and The Merchant of Venice were among new productions opening in 1858, Kean’s penultimate season at the Princess’s.

[0275] TO HERBERT WATKINS, 20 MARCH 1858

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 50; BGLL, I, p. 157.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road. N.W. | March 20th 1858

My dear Sir,

Your admirable (profile) Photograph of me,<sup>1</sup> has been taken out of my portfolio, by an enthusiastic friend who was determined to have it. My mother has made me promise that it shall be replaced – and I now write to ask if you will kindly let me have three copies of the profile? – I say three, instead of one, to make sure of not troubling you with future applications.

Having made this request, I have another to prefer, which is, that you will allow me to defray the expense of taking the impressions. I ask this solely as a favour to be granted to me, and solely because I know the value of your time, and the full occupation there is for the Assistants in your Studio. My obligation would not be lessened by the arrangement I propose – otherwise, I should not have thought of making it.

If you will let me know when the impressions are likely to be ready, I will call for them myself and so get a sight of what you have been lately doing. I have been on the invalid list with a badly-sprained ancle for many months past, or I should have recalled myself to your recollection long since.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Herbert Watkins Esqre

---

1. This must be the profile by Watkins published along with WC's brief literary life in the Critic on 5 June 1858 – see [0277] to James Lowe of 13 April 1858. The photograph itself is likely to date from 1857 – see the envelope [0261] to Watkins found at Kansas, dated 20 July 1857. See the Lewis website for reproductions of this and other photographs of WC. The photograph is also reproduced as the frontispiece to BGGL, I.

[0276] TO M. H. FEILDE,<sup>1</sup> 1 APRIL 1858

MS: Liverpool (H13957). Published: BGLL, I, p. 158.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road N.W. | April 1st 1858

Sir,

I shall be very glad to read your forthcoming pamphlet – and I trust it will succeed in attracting general attention to a very important subject.

With reference to Household Words, I would recommend you to send a copy of the pamphlet to Mr Dickens, who, as Conductor of the Journal, has the entire responsibility of deciding on the subjects which are to be discussed in its columns.<sup>2</sup>

I have the honor to be, | Sir, | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins
M. H. Feilde Esqr

---

1. Matthew Henry Feilde, author of On the Advantages of Free Public News Rooms and Lending Libraries, with remarks on the Public Libraries Act 18th and 19th Vic. Cap. 70 (London: 1858).

2. Nothing concerning Feilde's pamphlet seems to have appeared in Household Words – see Lohrli.

[0277] TO JAMES LOWE,<sup>1</sup> 13 APRIL 1858

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 51–53 ; BGLL, I, pp. 158–159.

11. Harley Place | Marylebone Road. N.W. | April 13th 1858

Dear Sir,

Your note, containing the gratifying intelligence that the portrait is cut on the block and that we both felt alike on the subject of the profile likeness, finds me sadly out of health, and, I am sorry to add, ordered by my doctor to abstain from literary work of any kind for the present, and to go away to the country at once. Against authority of this sort there is no appeal – and I must unwillingly resign the pleasure of meeting you as you kindly propose, with no better excuse for myself than the old apology – “It is not my fault”.

Fortunately, the means are at hand for giving you the information you require. About a year ago, or less, a frightful caricature of me (!) appeared in The Train Magazine, accompanied by a Memoir, all the facts of which I supplied.<sup>2</sup> I have sent for a copy of the Magazine, and will forward the memoir to you the moment I get it. Every necessary particular that I can think of you will find there. There is nothing to add, except perhaps a word about works I have yet to bring out. I have a new three act drama at the Olympic Theatre which is to appear in the autumn, with Mr Robson in the principal character – an entirely new one, for him.<sup>3</sup> And I have, when I am able to work again, a new and long serial story to write in Household Words, the plan of which is all drawn out.<sup>4</sup> Besides this, there is a French translation of my novels about to be published in Paris, beginning with The Dead Secret – and there is talk at Boston of a complete American edition of my works, in which the publishers propose to give me a share of the profits. This is all I can say, thus far, of my literary future. If the particulars in The Train Memoir are not satisfactory as to the past, tell me where I can improve them – and I will do my best. A letter from you is sure to follow me, wherever I go.

It will, of course, be desirable to say nothing in the Memoir about my being obliged to suspend work just now. People would report directly that my brain was turned, and that I had an addition to my usual clothing in the shape of a straight waistcoat!

Pray accept the sincere apologies of a sick man who is not his own master, and believe me,

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
James Lowe Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. James Lowe (d. 1865: ODNB), journalist, editor of the Critic (1843–63), a weekly journal of literature and the arts. Lowe's paper published a brief literary biography and portrait of WC (from a photograph by Herbert Watkins) in its issue for 5 June 1858, p. 270 and facing, the first of a series of 'portraits of literary, artistic, and scientific celebrities' – see the notice in the Times, 31 May 1858, p. 13c.

2. See Edmund Yates, 'Men of Mark: No 2 – W. Wilkie Collins', Train, 3 (June 1857), pp. 352–357. Yates's description of Thackeray, which appeared later in the same series, led to his expulsion from the Garrick Club despite the support of both CD and WC.

3. The Red Vial, which ran from 11 October 1858. The production was a failure – see the review in the Times, 12 October 1858, p. 10d.

4. The Woman in White. Although it was more than a year before the story was serialized, WC started working on the plot very early – see [0289] to Underwood, 12 August 1858.

[0278] TO HERBERT WATKINS, 14 APRIL 1858

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 159–160; Lewis website.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road, N.W. | April 14th 1858

My dear Sir,

I have been out of town, or I should have answered your kind note before.

I send with this – as the best contribution I can offer to your library, thus far – my last written book.<sup>1</sup> Pray accept it, as the most careful “study from Nature” that I have yet made, and believe me,

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
To Herbert Watkins Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. Presumably The Dead Secret, published in June 1857.

[0279] TO HERBERT WATKINS, 24 APRIL 1858<sup>1</sup>

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:3). Published: BGLL, I, p. 160.

11 Harley Place | April 24th

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my best thanks for the Photographs.<sup>2</sup> The portrait of Millais (you know what I think of my own) is most admirable – a fine picture as well as a striking likeness.

I have been suffering from illness, or I should, ere this, have gladly accepted your kind invitation to me to see your new room. I am still on the invalid list – but I hope soon to be able to pay my long looked-for visit to your studio.<sup>3</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Herbert Watkins Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. Dating from the address.

2. Presumably a gift in return for WC's novel – see the previous letter.

3. See WC's reference to his sprained ankle in [0275] to Watkins of 20 March 1858.

[0280] TO F. M. EVANS, 26 APRIL 1858

MS: Unknown. Photocopy: Private, our copy text. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 160–161.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road | N.W. | April 26th 1858

My dear Evans,

Mr Townshend (whom you have met at Tavistock House) is desirous of printing and publishing the Mss sent with this, in pamphlet form,<sup>1</sup> and I have undertaken to forward it to you, for an estimate of expenses.

Mr Townshend's idea is, that he had better not print more than five hundred copies of the pamphlet to begin with – and that the type might then be kept standing in case of a demand for a further issue. Can you furnish him, in the course of this week, with an estimate of the number of pages to which the pamphlet would run and of the expense of publishing five hundred copies of it?

The address is, | The Revd C. Hare Townshend | 21 Norfolk Street | Park Lane | W.<sup>2</sup>

=

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

F.M. Evans Esqre

---

1. Probably a pamphlet in support of CD's 'attempts to reform the Royal Literary Fund' (see CD to [Evans], 26 April 1858, Pilgrim, VIII, pp. 550–551). The BL Catalogue offers no help on the publication in question, which may not have appeared in print.

2. See [0239] to Townshend of 5 June 1856.

[0281] TO F. M. EVANS, 29 APRIL 1858

MS: Bodleian (MS. Eng. lett. d. 396, ff. 105a/b). Published: BGLL, I, p. 161.

11 Harley Place | April 28th 29th 1858

My dear Evans,

I have communicated with Mr Townshend, on the point mentioned in your note.<sup>1</sup> Perhaps the matter had better stand over, until I have received his reply? I will then lose no time in immediately communicating with you.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0280] to Evans of 26 April 1858.

[3274] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 14 MAY 1858

MS: Unknown. On sale: Jarndyce (Catalogue CCXXI, Winter Spring 2016–2017, item 88). Published: A&C10, pp. 4–5.

Friday, May 14th 1858

Miss Sturch, the Vicar's governess, may be briefly and accurately described as a young lady who had never been troubled with an idea or a sensation since the day when she was born. She was a little, plump, quiet, white-skinned, smiling, neatly dressed girl, wound up accurately to the performance of certain duties at certain times; and possessed of an inexhaustible vocabulary of commonplace talk, which dribbled placidly out of her lips whenever it was called for, always in the same quantity, and always of the same quality, at every hour in the day, and through every change in the seasons. Miss Sturch never laughed and never cried, but took the safe middle course of smiling perpetually. She smiled when she came down on a morning in January, and said it was very cold. She smiled when she came down on a morning in July, and said it was very hot. She smiled when the bishop came once a year to see the Vicar; she smiled when the butcher's boy came every morning for orders. She smiled when Miss Louisa wept on her bosom, and implored indulgence towards errors in geography; she smiled when Master Robert jumped into her lap and ordered her to brush his hair. Let what might happen at the vicarage, nothing ever jerked Miss Sturch out of the one smooth groove in which she ran perpetually, always at the same pace. If she had lived in a royalist family, during the civil wars in England, she would have rung for the cook, to order dinner, on the morning of the execution of Charles the First. If Shakespeare had come back to life again, and had called at the Vicarage at six o'clock on Saturday evening, to explain to Miss Sturch exactly what his views were in composing the tragedy of Hamlet, she would have smiled and said it was extremely interesting, until the striking of seven o'clock; at which time she would have begged the Bard of Avon to excuse her, and would have left him in the middle of a sentence, to superintend the housemaid in the verification of the washing book. A very estimable young person, Miss Sturch (as the ladies of Long Beckley were accustomed to say); so judicious with the children and so attached to her household duties; such a well-regulated mind, and such a crisp touch on the piano; just nice-looking enough, just well-dressed enough, just talkative enough; not quite old enough perhaps, and a little too much inclined to be embraceably plump about the region of the waist – but, on the whole, a most estimable young person – very much so, indeed.<sup>2</sup>

From “The Dead Secret”, by | Wilkie Collins

1. [0282] to Harriet Collins, 3 June 1858, suggests that, on the date heading this document, prior to his sailing trip to Wales, WC was staying with his friend Joseph Stringfield, the Somerset doctor, so the lengthy passage describing Miss Sturch may have been written for a friend or acquaintance of his in Weston-super-Mare, or perhaps even for Stringfield's future wife Mary Ann Maria Teresa Garment (b. 1837) whom he married six months later – see [0837] to Edward Benham of 2 June 1868.

2. Wilkie wrote many extracts from his books for fans and friends but this is the earliest example found, one of the longest, and one of only two known from The Dead Secret. The extract differs from the published work only in the first line – ‘the Vicar’s governess’ rather than as published ‘the governess’.

[0282] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 3 JUNE 1858

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, p. 164 (dated 4 June 1858). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 161–162.

Care of Wyndham Lewis Esqr | Llanthetty Hall
Crickhowell | Breconshire.<sup>2</sup> | Thursday June 3rd

My dear Mother,

I write one line to tell you that I have got safely into Wales, and that the above will be my direction until Monday next in case of anything happening which may make it necessary to write to me at once. Under any ordinary circumstances, keep to the address at Stringfields.<sup>4</sup> I shall be back there on Tuesday next, and shall most likely be in Town on Thursday – this day week.

I sailed to Cardiff – or rather drifted in a calm to Cardiff yesterday, and I am now stopping at another of Mr Lewis's houses – “The Heath” a fine house and grounds in Glamorganshire. We go tomorrow, I think, to Llanthetty Hall. I have seen one specimen of Wesh [sic] manners and customs already, in the shape of a live “Bard”, attached to this house – not a venerable man with a robe and white beard but a simple-looking middle-aged farmer, in corduroy trousers and a swallow-tailed blue coat, who sat down at the word of command, and sang old Welsh songs, in a shrill falsetto voice, to the strangest plaintive wild savage tunes.<sup>5</sup> I was introduced as Doctor Collins as the only means of impressing the Bard with a due idea of my literary importance. He was so struck with my title and beard that he offered to teach me Welsh in a month (the singing as well as the language) – and invited me to a solemn meeting of Bards in the autumn, on the condition of my making an oration, if possible in the Welsh language!

We have nobody here but my host and an intimate friend of his both full of kindness and attention. The pure air is still doing me worlds of good – and I am going to get more of it among the mountains tomorrow.

With love to Charley | ever yours affly | WC

P.S. I asked Charley to forward Benham's letter to me at Stringfields. I hope he has not forgotten it.

-
1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | 11 Harley Place | Marylebone | London | N.W.'; postmark obscured, but endorsed 'London | JU 4 | 58'.
  2. In fact, as the text makes clear, the letter was written from The Heath, Glamorganshire. WC uses paper with an embossed device of a lion rampant and the motto 'Patriae Fidus' ('Faithful to my Homeland'), a Lewis family device. Wyndham Lewis is probably Wyndham William Lewis (1827–71), though his connection with WC is not known.
  3. Date written beneath the signature.
  4. Joseph Stringfield, the Weston-super-Mare doctor whom WC often visited.
  5. WC recycles this experience in the frame narrative of The Queen of Hearts (1859).

[0283] TO A. H. LAYARD,<sup>1</sup> 14 JUNE 1858

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 162–163.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road | N.W. | June 14th 1858

My dear Sir,

Dickens has forwarded your letter to me – "The Little Huguenot" having been one of my contributions to Household Words.<sup>2</sup>

I found the material for the story in a collection of old French anecdotes occupying eight volumes. Here is a copy of the Titlepage –

Pièces Intéressantes | Et | Peu Connues |
Pour servir | A L'Histoire | Et A La Littérature
Par M.D.L.P. | Tome Premier | A Maestricht | chez J.P. Roux & Cgnie
M.DCC.XC.<sup>3</sup>

=

The narrative from which I made a paraphrase for Household Words occurs at page 278 of the first Volume. At the conclusion of it, this note is quoted from Voltaire's Henriade: –<sup>4</sup>

"Ce même de Caumont qui échappe à la Sainte Bartheleme est le fameux Maréchal de la Force, qui depuis se fit une si grande réputation, et qui vécut jusqu'à l'âge de quatre-vingt-quatre ans. Il a laissé des mémoires qui n'ont point été imprimés, et qui doivent être encore dans les Archives de la Maison de la Force."<sup>5</sup>

=

The old book from which I copy these particulars is not mine – or I should have sent it to you with this letter. But if you would like to see my "authority" I have no doubt the friend who lent me the book will gladly authorise my sending it to you.<sup>6</sup>

In the mean time I accept gratefully the title of Sieur de Caumont and shall adventure my claims to my ancestors' property without an instant's delay.<sup>7</sup>

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

A.H. Layard Eqre

---

1. Austen Henry Layard (1817–94: ODNB), one of the leading British archaeologists of the nineteenth century. Both CD and WC had met him around five years earlier at Naples (see [0159] to CAC, 13 November 1853).

2. WC's narrative 'The Little Huguenot' – 'the true story of the escape of a little Huguenot from the Massacre of Saint Bartholomew's Day' – appeared, as usual unsigned, in Household Words (9 January 1858), pp. 80–84.

3. A copy is held in the BNF, whose catalogue suggests that this was only one of many editions of the work and that the initials 'M.D.L.P' indicate a member of the de la Place family.

4. The epic poem La Henriade (1728) in praise of Henri of Navarre, first published in 1723 as La ligue, by François-Marie Arouet, better known as Voltaire.

5. 'This same de Caumont who eluded Saint Bartholomew is the famous Marshal of la Force, who afterwards made such a great reputation, and who lived to the age of eighty-four. He left behind memoirs which have never been published, and which must still be in the Archives of the House of la Force.'

6. Probably Albert Smith – see [0256] assigned to him of 8 June 1857.

7. This is presumably in response to a pleasantry from Layard, whose original letter has not been traced.

[0284] TO PHILLIPS, SAMPSON & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 15 JUNE 1858

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11, formerly laid in case with copy of the Atlantic Monthly, April 1858). Published: Parrish & Miller, p. 324.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road | London | June 15th 1858

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter enclosing a Draft for £24 -<sup>2</sup>

If you will refer to Mr Underwood,<sup>3</sup> I think you will find that a mistake has been made in the amount of the draft. When I had the pleasure of seeing Mr Underwood, the terms he offered me, on your behalf, for writing in the Atlantic Monthly, were £2.. -..- per page. My story in the number of the Magazine for last April, entitled “Who Is The Thief?”<sup>4</sup> occupies sixteen pages, and my claim therefore – unless my arithmetic seriously misleads me – amounts to the sum of £32..- instead of £24..-

I mention this, feeling quite sure that you will excuse me for putting the case candidly, in the fewest and plainest words, as I apprehend it stands on my side.

Trusting that the Atlantic Monthly has, by this time, become an established “success”,

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Very faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To / | Messrs Phillips Sampson & Co

---

1. Boston publishers of the Atlantic Monthly, founded in 1857.

2. No sum that can be associated with this payment appears in HC’s bank account (Courtts: Exors WmC).

3. F. H. Underwood – see [0289] to him on this matter of 12 August 1858.

4. A comic detective story published in the Atlantic Monthly, 1:6 (April 1858), pp. 706–722; reprinted in The Queen of Hearts (1859) as ‘Brother Griffith’s Story of the Biter Bit’ (see Gasson, p. 19).

[3201] TO HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN,<sup>1</sup> 1 FEBRUARY 1858

MS: Copenhagen (NKS 1299 2°, g I, s. 54 nr. 2).<sup>2</sup> Published: Bredsdorff, p. 124, dated July 1st 1858; H. C. Andersen album I-V, Lademann, 1980, pp. 182–183; A&C8, pp. 3–4, both also misdated 1 July; Amended: A&C12 p.11-12.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road | London
Feby 1st 1858

My dear Andersen,

Thank you for your friendly greeting. I return it most cordially, and my mother joins me.

I have had a sad accident to my ankle – a severe sprain which has quite crippled me, and which still keeps me an invalid in the doctor’s hands.<sup>3</sup> In consequence of this misfortune, I shall miss the pleasure of making Mr Grimur Thomsen’s acquaintance.<sup>4</sup> I have written to him to apologise for myself and to tell him how unfit I am now, even for the pleasantest society.

Although I am gratefully sensible of your kind intentions towards The Frozen Deep, it is, at present, not in my power to accept your offer, as the play is not yet published, and there is but one copy of it in manuscript. I have not published it, because I am afraid it might get on the public stage, and do me harm with the public by being badly acted there. In the present deplorable state of our stage, there is neither actor or [sic] actress for the two principal parts in The Frozen Deep.

This is the frank explanation of how I am situated. I know you will accept it in a kind and friendly spirit.

Cordially yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Hans Christian Andersen (1804–1875), the Danish writer. He stayed with Dickens at Gad’s Hill in June 1857 where WC met him. WC later parodied his visit in ‘The Bachelor Bedroom,’ All The Year Round (6 August 1859), I, pp. 355–360.

2. With an envelope directed To/ Herr Hans Christian Andersen | Copenhagen. At the bottom left of the envelope WC writes inside a curved line ‘Forwarded by | Herr Grimur Thomsen’. Beneath Copenhagen another hand has added ‘Nyhavn | Hotel Christiania’. A green oval postmark reads F: P: with the numbers 12, 22, 3, 58 between the bold large capital letters. FP signifies FootPost and the numbers represent the time and date of the stamp ie 1200 on 23 March 1858. This letter must have been enclosed with WC’s untraced apology to Thomsen who then posted it to Andersen in Denmark when he returned.

3. WC was apparently still suffering from the ankle sprain incurred while visiting Cumberland in September 1857. He mentioned it nearly two months later in [0275] to Watkins, 20 March 1858. At this time WC consistently spelt the word as ‘anle’.

4. Grímur Thomsen (1820–1896) was an Icelandic poet and editor. WC was replying to the following letter from Andersen:

My Dear Collins

The bearer is one of our most important young critics, a man with both heart and soul, Mr Grímur Thomsen, working in the Ministry in Copenhagen. He brings you my warmest greetings, which I beg you will convey also to your mother, if she should still remember me. It was my wish to render The Frozen Deep in Danish, and you were kind enough to promise to send me the same. I would like to put it on the stage. Now that is presumably in print, let me have it very soon, please, either by my friend G.T. or by Bentley. Thank you for all your kindness towards me, and remember me, please, to Albert Schmidt and Mark Lemon.

Cordially yours | Hans Christian Andersen

(translation in Bredsdorff, p. 124. The original and an alternative translation is at <http://andersen.sdu.dk/brevbase/brev.html?bid=8957> wrongly dated June 1858)

Andersen met Harriet Collins on 4 July 1857 after the performance of The Frozen Deep at the Gallery of Illustration (see Bredsdorff, p. 80).

4. A photograph of the letter was exhibited among several others to and from Andersen as item 283 at ‘Hans Christian Andersen, Jubilee Exhibition’ at the National Book League in London organised by Bredsdorff on 2 April 1955 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of Andersen’s birth (see the Catalogue of the Exhibition).

[0285] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES,<sup>1</sup> 10 JULY 1858

MS: Trinity (Houghton DB5/25). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 164–165.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road | N.W. | July 10th 1858 /

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my best thanks for the loan of the Pamphlet.<sup>2</sup> I will keep it, for a few days (with your permission) to make an “abstract” of the Case. A more extraordinary set of circumstances I never met with – indeed, the story is more like a detailed narrative of a Dream than anything else. It considerably strengthens an old persuasion of mine that the only probable facts in this world are the facts of Fiction.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Richard M. Milnes Esqr M.P. | &c &c &c

---

1. Richard Monckton Milnes (1809–85: ODNB), from August 1863 the first Baron Houghton, poet, editor and literary patron.

2. Possibly the pamphlet A Discourse of Witchcraft: As it was acted in the family of Mr. E. Fairfax (1858), the narrative ‘Communicated by R. M. M.’, of which a copy is found at the BL.

[0286] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, 16 JULY 1858

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 165.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road. N.W. | July 16th

My dear Sir,

I am going away today to pay some visits in the country, and there is, I fear, no chance of my being able to get back to town in time to avail myself of your kind invitation. Under any other circumstances I need hardly say that I should have been delighted to dine with you and to have an opportunity of seeing the picture.<sup>1</sup>

I return the pamphlet, with my best thanks – having taken some notes of it which I shall keep carefully among my collection of special literary treasures.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Richard M. Milnes Esqre M.P.

-
1. The picture in question remains unidentified. WC received several later invitations from Milnes – see [0365] to him of 7 August 1860, for example.
  2. See [0285] to Milnes of 10 July 1858.

[0287] TO HARRIET COLLINS, [14 APRIL 1857–21 JULY 1858]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/117). Published: BGLL, I, p. 287, amended A&C4, p. 30.

Gad's Hill Place, | Highham by Rochester, Kent | Wednesday

My dear Mother,

I shall be back in town tomorrow and will sleep in Harley Place if you will have the front garret bed got ready. In case I don't make my appearance before you go to bed, leave the door for me. I say this because I may probably go to the reading tomorrow and may not have time to get to Harley Place before it.

Post waiting – so in great haste.

Yours afftly | WC

-
1. The letter is clearly written after 19 May 1857 when CD took over Gad's Hill Place. But the reference to the reading makes it more likely the date falls between 14 April 1858 and 21 July 1858 – the days before the first and last readings in London by Dickens (Pilgrim, VIII, p. xxiv).

[0288] TO FRANCESCO BERGER,<sup>1</sup> 10 AUGUST 1858

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 166.

3 Prospect Place | Broadstairs | August 10th 1858

My dear Sir,

I am much obliged to you for your kindly offering your assistance in reference to the musical part of my new play.<sup>2</sup>

So far as I know at present, I have no choice in the matter, the arrangements for the play all resting with the managers of the Olympic, to whom I have assigned the dramatic copyright for a term of years. I believe the musical director of the theatre would, under these circumstances, officially undertake the musical arrangements of the play. However, I will ascertain from the manager exactly how the matter stands, and if it is not yet settled, I will place your kind offer before them, and will immediately let you know the result.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Francesco Berger Eqre

-
1. J. W. Francesco Berger (1834–1933), pianist, who had composed the music for the amateur productions of The Lighthouse and The Frozen Deep.
  2. The Red Vial, scheduled to open at the Olympic Theatre on 11 October.

[0289] TO F. H. UNDERWOOD,<sup>1</sup> 12 AUGUST 1858

MS: Houghton (Autograph File C). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 166–168.

11 Harley Place | Marylebone Road | London | August 12th 1858 /

My dear Sir,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, inclosing a Draft for the £8 additional, completing the remuneration which I consider to be my due for the tale entitled “Who Is The Thief?” in the Atlantic Monthly.<sup>2</sup>

I very much regret that we did not reduce to writing the business part of our conversation when you favoured me with a visit in London. A misunderstanding which it would have been much more agreeable to both of us to have avoided, would not then have taken place. All I can do now, is to assure you that I distinctly remember your telling me that the remuneration you proposed to give to English contributors in general was £1..10.. per page, but that the publishers were willing to give me £2 -. While telling me this, you requested that I would not mention the rate of remuneration offered to myself, among my literary brethren, as the sum of £2 – per page was reserved for special cases only. This, I repeat, is not merely my impression, but my distinct recollection of a positive matter of fact.

With regard to the merits or demerits of the story itself, that is another question. I am not at all disposed to assert that “Who Is The Thief?” is as good a story as I might have made it, and as I honestly wished to make it. It was written, when I was by no means in my usual good health; and but for my anxiety to perform my friendly engagement with you, at the very first moment when I could put pen to paper, it would never have been written at all. This explanation I know does not alter the fact that the story has not been as successful as you and I could have wished – all it tends to show is, that I did my best at the time to earn my money. I only regret that the story was printed in the Atlantic Monthly, when doubts were felt about its being quite up to the mark. When my contribution was published, I had no other resource, in justice to myself, than to claim what I believed to be my right in the matter of remuneration.

Thus much – frankly, and without one atom of unfriendly feeling – in defence of my view of the case. The next thing to do is to provide against the possibility of any misunderstanding for the future.

So far as bodily health is concerned I am almost “my own man again” – but I am still obliged to spare my head by taking frequent holidays, and working no longer than two or three hours a day, when I do get to my desk. A long story for the Atlantic Monthly is under these circumstances out of the question. But a short story, as the autumn advances, may be within my means. When I have written this (and I shall eagerly seize the first opportunity of doing so) I will send it to Messrs Phillips and Sampson, through Messrs Trübner. You, or any person, whom you may think fit to appoint, shall look it over in Mss. If there is the least shadow of a doubt about its being as good a piece of literary workmanship as you have a right to expect from me, I shall expect you to send it me back by the next mail, frankly telling me the real state of the case. So far from feeling “hurt” at this proceeding, I shall feel personally obliged by it. On the other hand, if the story is inserted in the magazine, I shall ask to be paid for it at the rate of £2 -.- per page, and to receive my remuneration by the same mail which brings the copy of the Magazine, in which I appear, to England. If we only hold to this plan, my interests and the interests of Messrs Phillips and Sampson will be equally provided for.

Now for other matters, situated as I am, I can only thank you for your suggestion for securing the copyright in a serial work which appears in America and England, and defer entering into details until I am in circumstances to profit by your advice. At present, I am only engaged to write a serial in Household Words – and the appearance of it is still deferred, to leave me time to get full possession of my resources. When I do set to work on the story (which is all ready, in outline) I shall consult the proprietors on the subject of the Atlantic Monthly. They may be able to suggest a plan for giving you a privileged supply of my proof sheets, which I will take care to communicate to you in good time. I believe the story will be a success, for I have hit on what is (so far as I know) an entirely new form of narrative.<sup>3</sup>

Meanwhile, if you can secure Mr Charles Reade,<sup>4</sup> by all means do so. The only fear is that he may be otherwise engaged. Of the great advantage of gaining him as a contributor there cannot be the least question.

I often think of going to America, but the difficulty is how to get away from London and its chain of engagements. I should like nothing better than to claim the friendly welcome of my fellow-contributors at Boston – and I have a real interest of the strongest kind in wishing to see America. It is the completion of an Englishman’s education.

I have been away from ~~town~~ London and from the late numbers of the “Atlantic” – and I am now on the point of leaving again – but, on my return, I shall not forget to look out for “The Kinloch Estate”.<sup>5</sup>

With best wishes, | believe me, | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
To | F. H. Underwood Esqre

---

1. The Atlantic Monthly, founded in 1857 ‘was originally conceived by Francis Underwood, an ardent member of the Free Soil party and an editorial assistant of the Boston publishing house of Phillips, Sampson and Company’ (E. E. Chielens (ed.), American Literary Magazines (New York: Greenwood Press, 1986), p. 50). Francis Henry Underwood (1825–94: DAB), a lawyer and writer, assisted J. R. Lowell with the Atlantic Monthly from 1857 to 1859, but was not retained by Ticknor & Fields when they took it over in 1859. Underwood then became clerk of Boston Superior Court. See Pilgrim, IX, p. 155 n. 1.
2. See [0284] to Messrs Phillips Sampson and Co., 15 June 1858. No sum that can be associated with this payment appears in HC’s bank account (Coumts: Exors WmC).
3. Referring to the narrative device used in The Woman in White, which was serialized in the United States in Harper’s Weekly. WC himself describes it in the opening part of the book:

Thus, the story here presented will be told by more than one pen, as the story of an offence against the laws is told in Court by more than one witness – with the same object, in both cases, to present the truth always in its most direct and most intelligible aspect; and to trace the course of one complete series of events, by making the persons who have been most closely connected with them, at each successive stage, relate their own experience, word for word.

(The Woman in White, Hartright’s initial narrative, I).

There is no record of WC contributing again to the Atlantic Monthly.

4. See the first surviving letter to the novelist, [0421] of 4 June 1861. Reade’s Griffith Gaunt appeared much later in the Atlantic Monthly, from December 1865 to November 1866.
5. Underwood’s ‘The Kinloch Estate, and How it was Settled’ ran in The Atlantic Monthly, 2:9–11 (July–September 1858).

[3312] TO [THOMAS L.] ALDRIDGE, JUNE 1856 TO AUGUST 1858<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C11, p. 5.

Harley Place

Sir,

I shall be very happy to become a Subscriber for Three Copies of the new work.<sup>2</sup>

With my best wishes for the speedy filling of the Subscription List, and for the success of the Poems.

I remain, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mr Aldridge

---

1. Dating from the address only.
2. The only available collection of poems seems to be G.L. Curtis and T.L. Aldridge (of 3 Cardigan Street), Fear-Nac-Flu, a Combat; and other poems (London: Alfred W. Bennett; Oxford: Slatter & Rose, 1857), which bears the dedication, ‘To the Working Men of England, this little volume is fraternally inscribed By Two of Their Order’. Aldridge would thus be Thomas L. Aldridge, recorded in the 1861 Census as a compositor born in 1835 and living at 5 Cardigan Street, Oxford, with his father, Michael, his wife, Elizabeth, and their son, Thomas (RG 9; Piece: 896; Folio: 90; Page: 24). However, unlike that of CD who signed up for five copies, WC’s name is not found in the list of subscribers to the book (pp. 139–143), while no copy is recorded in Baker 2002.

[3119] TO HARRIET COLLINS, JUNE 1856 TO AUGUST 1858<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C5, p. 4.

Harley Place | Thursday evening

My dear Mother,

I have looked in on my way to the Procters<sup>2</sup> to ask you to order dinner tomorrow here, for me, and of course for Charley too. My plans are changed – and unless Charley settles to go out somewhere I will dine ~~at~~ here<sup>3</sup> tomorrow.

Yours afftly | W.C

If it is inconvenient to get dinner let me know through Charley, and I can dine at the Club.

-
1. Dating from the time HC lived at Harley Place.
  2. Brian Waller Procter, Anne Benson Procter and Adelaide Anne Procter. See [0306] to HC, 14 July 1859, note 1.
  3. WC overwrites the word 'at'.

[0290] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 5 NOVEMBER 1858

MS: Huntington (HM 7258). Transcript: Kansas (MS P557:A6). Published: BGLL, I, p. 169.

Royal Olympic Theatre | Novr 5th 1858

Dear Sir,

The reason which you very properly give for not making me any proposal in reference to my Dramas, is also the reason why I have never published them. I have been frequently asked to print them for private circulation; but I have – for many reasons which I need not trouble you with – resolved on not adopting this course.

The only answer, under these circumstances, which you can give to any applications made to you, is to state the simple fact that the Plays are not printed and are, therefore, not procurable. Many applications of the same kind as that which I now re-enclose to you, have been personally made to me, and I have been obliged to meet them all with the same reply.

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yrs | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Possibly Joseph Stirling Coyne, then Secretary of the Dramatic Authors' Society, which handled applications to perform plays by its members and may have been involved in publishing them. See [0269] to John Palgrave Simpson of 17 October 1857 and [0302] to Coyne of 6 May 1859.

[0291] TO JANE WARD,<sup>1</sup> 1 DECEMBER 1858

MS: Private. Summary: B&C, I, pp. 164–165. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 169–170.

2 Clarence Terrace | Regents Park<sup>2</sup> | December 1st 1858

My dear Jane,

I am sincerely sorry that my having carelessly allowed myself to drift into an engagement for this Christmas Day, should have caused you even a moment's vexation. I say "drift", because the invitation of the friends who now claim me, began conditionally, and grew, I hardly know how, into a ~~positive~~ an actual engagement, which I was warned, a month ago, that I was positively expected to fulfil. My own opinion is that I shall, in some small degree, atone for my shortcomings towards you by failing my Country friends at the eleventh hour, and being absent at their dinner, as, I am sorry to say, I shall be absent at yours.<sup>3</sup> I am far from well, and sadly in want of another change. My term, at my own house, is up this Christmas – I have no idea where to go to – and I think it quite likely that I may be at Paris, or by the seaside, in search of relief to body and mind, or in bed on Christmas Day. I never felt less certain of my future proceedings than I do at this moment – and I should, on that account, have been afraid of engaging myself to you, even if I had been a free man, this year, so far as the social proceedings of the 25th are concerned.

Why may I not keep Christmas Day, beforehand, quietly, with you and Charles, by dining on the plainest thing you can give me, either Monday or Tuesday next, at Clarendon Gardens? I told Charles to say as much for me – Surely he must have forgotten to do so?

Will you let me come in sign of forgiveness – and will you say if Monday, or Tuesday, will suit you best – or, if not, what day will?

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Jane Ward, née Carpenter (1826–91), WC's favourite cousin who married, in 1845, his close friend Charles Ward, and to whom he left fifty pounds in his will.
  2. WC's first letter from this address, to which HC and CAC had recently moved. WC was to use it as a correspondence address for some time (see the last reference in [0391] to Henrietta Ward of 1 January 1861), but by this time he was living with Caroline Graves.

3. The country friends in question have not been identified.

[0292] TO E. M. WARD, 13 JANUARY 1859

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 54–55; BGLL, I, pp. 170–171.

124 Albany Street | Regents Park | N.W.<sup>1</sup> | January 13th 1859

My dear Ned,

Dickens and I were talking of you and your pictures yesterday – and Dickens suggested a subject, which seemed to both of us in your line, and which no painter (to our knowledge) has yet used.

What do you say to Judge Jeffries?<sup>2</sup> Two pictures to be devoted to him, enclosed in one frame, as companions.

First picture – Jeffries on the Judgment Seat, in full court, bullying a witness.

Second picture – Jeffries taken, on Tower Hill, in the disguise of a sailor – the person instrumental in discovering him being the very witness whom he bullied in the day of his power. This is an historical fact. The witness was a man. You must have read it in Macaulay.<sup>3</sup>

Here is certainly a capital contrast – the witness bullied by the judge and the judge discovered by the witness. Jeffries is a good historical character to paint – he is universally known, and the descriptions of him are very suggestive. The scene in Court might of course include women – and so might the other scene in the Tavern where Jeffries was taken. The judge in his robes and his dignity, and the judge sweating in a sailor's dress – the witness shrinking in the box, and the witness triumphant at the tavern – would be full of variety and dramatic point, and you would tell the story so that no one could mistake it.

What do you think of this for your great work. The Nelson commanding the paper-fleet is excellent for a smaller picture – but I doubt your getting anything out of Nelson for a large subject. Of course I shall keep your idea and the Jeffries idea profound secrets. Send me a line to say whether the suggestion strikes you.<sup>4</sup> I should have appeared to tell you about it by word of mouth – but all the evenings, for the next week or more are filled up – and I thought it wrong to delay in case the notion suited you.

With kindest regards to Mrs Ward and love to the children

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The first surviving letter addressed from Albany Street, where WC was now living with Caroline Graves and her daughter.

2. Thus for Judge George Jeffreys (1648–89: ODNB), notorious hanging judge at the ‘Bloody Assizes’ following the Monmouth Rebellion of 1685, who tried to flee when James II was deposed in 1688.

3. The popular image of Judge Jeffreys was largely a creation of Thomas Babington Macaulay’s History of England from the Accession of James I (London: Longman, 1849–61), I, ch. 5, ‘The Monmouth Rebellion’. Macaulay concludes: ‘Jeffreys boasted that he had hanged more traitors than all his predecessors together since the Conquest ... all the executions of 1715 and 1745 added together will appear to have been few indeed when compared with those which disgraced the Bloody Assizes. The number of the rebels whom Jeffreys hanged on this circuit was three hundred and twenty.’

4. Neither the subject suggested by CD and elaborated here by WC nor that of the young Nelson seem in fact to have been taken up by Ward.

[0293] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 10 FEBRUARY 1859

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 171–172.

Office of Household Words. | . . .
No 16. Wellington Street. North. Strand. W.C.
Feby 10th 1859<sup>1</sup>

Dear Sir,

If I remember right, our account of “Rambles Beyond Railways” has been usually made up at this time of the year. Will you kindly let me have the means of knowing what progress the book has made, since the last account was rendered, addressing me at 124 Albany Street | Regents Park. N.W.

=

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. WC uses printed embossed paper, with only the date and the final digit of the year added in WC’s hand.

[0294] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 16 FEBRUARY 1859

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 172–173.

2 Clarence Terrace | Regents Park | Feby 16th 1859

Dear Madam,

I must begin by apologising for the time that has elapsed without my writing to you on the subject of your play. I have had many occupations and interruptions to prevent my giving attention to it – or I should have read it long before this.

I have now looked it through carefully – and if I venture to speak with great frankness of the result of the reading, I am sure you will feel that I do so in order to justify the confidence which you are pleased to place in my opinion.

In its present state, a representation of the play on the stage would be practically impossible. The perpetual changes of scene, and the perpetual appearances of “Hardress” (who only goes out at the end of one scene to come in again instantly at the beginning of the next) represent so many dramatic impossibilities. The setting right of these fundamental technical defects, would involve, I am afraid, nothing less than the reconstruction of the entire story of the play. To take as an example the First Act only – the way to fit this for theatrical representation would be to make the business of the scene proceed in Mrs Cregan’s house, all through the Act, altering “Eiley’s” [sic for “Eily’s”] position to that of a servant at Mrs Cregan’s, for the sake of bringing her before the audience in clandestine communication with Hardress, without necessitating a change of scene. This done, it would be next requisite for the purpose of ending the first Act with one of the strong “points” of the story, to incorporate with it, part of your second Act so as to bring the curtain down on the scene in which Hardress’s mother declares that Anne Chute loves him. Other smaller changes would have to be made – which I need not trouble you by mentioning in detail – before this one Act could be made safe for representation. And what I say of this first Act, I might say at even greater length of the second Act and the third. Radical changes of the sort that I have mentioned would be absolutely necessary everywhere, to suit the arbitrary laws of stage construction.

I write the plain truth on this subject because the defects of the play are technical defects, which spring from want of practical acquaintance with the stage, and from the misleading influence (so far as the stage is concerned) of following the story of a novel in writing a play.

The only question that remains in relation to “The Foster Brothers”, is whether it would be worth your while to re-write the whole play. In the present temper of modern audiences, I am a little inclined to fear that the story would be found too painfully tragic on representation. But so much would depend of the treatment of the incidents, the tact of the actors, and the disposition of the audience, that I cannot undertake to give any positive opinion on this point.

But, on another point, I am quite certain. Whether you recast the play, or whether you try your hand on a new dramatic work – it is absolutely essential that you should study the laws of dramatic construction by reading the best modern English and French plays, and by taking every opportunity of seeing them represented on the stage. “The Lady of Lyons”, as an English play,<sup>2</sup> and the “Tour de Nesle”, as a French play,<sup>3</sup> are both excellent examples of the art of dramatic writing – an art which I can declare, from my own personal experience, to be one of the most subtle and the most difficult that it is possible to attempt. I by no means say that you are not perfectly capable of practising this art – but I do say that you must study it resolutely and practically to do yourself justice and to make sure of results. If you do re-write “The Foster Brothers”, try to forget that such a novel as “The Collegians” ever existed. When you have taken the idea of the story, you have taken all that the novel can give to the play.

I will keep the manuscript until I receive your directions as to the disposal of it. In the mean time, I can only repeat that if I have ventured to write to a lady in a very plain and very bluff manner, I have done so because I am quite sure that I may trust to that lady’s own good sense to understand my motives and excuse my candour.

Believe me | Dear Madam | Very faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. From the contents of the letter, clearly the authoress of a play entitled ‘The Foster Brothers’, based on the social novel The Collegians (1829), by Irish author Gerald Griffin (1803–40). WC’s correspondent’s play never seems to have seen the light of day, though Griffin’s novel formed the basis of Dion Boucicault’s The Coleen Bawn, which achieved a major theatrical success after opening at the Adelphi Theatre on 10 September 1860.

2. By Bulwer-Lytton, 1838.

3. By Frédéric Gaillardet, revised by Alexandre Dumas, père, 1832.

[0295] TO J. T. MARSH, 21 FEBRUARY 1859

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 174.

124 Albany Street | Regents Park. N.W. | Feby 21st 1859

Dear Sir,

Some ten days ago I wrote to Mr Bentley, on the subject of the account of Rambles Beyond Railways,<sup>1</sup> and he replied that I should receive it from you “forthwith”.

Will you be so good as to send the account to the address at the head of this letter, as soon as you conveniently can?

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mr Marsh

---

1. See [0293] to Richard Bentley, 10 February 1859.

[0296] TO [ROSA] BULLAR,<sup>1</sup> 23 FEBRUARY 1859

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: Coleman, p. 56; BGLL, I, p. 174 (both as to Mrs Henry Bullar).

2 Clarence Terrace | Feby 23rd 1859

My dear Mrs Bullar,

I am ashamed to make conventional excuses to you, so I write with a daring candour – first, to thank you sincerely for your very kind invitation, and, secondly, to ask you to increase that kindness by pardoning me if I am absent from the party, owing to the humiliating circumstances of my being unable to dance. Although my unlucky ankle is well enough, so far as walking purposes are concerned, it still unfits me for any exercise in which the active graces of this life are concerned.<sup>2</sup> As a premature old gentleman therefore, in respect of my right foot at least, I feel that I am neither useful nor ornamental where dancing is going on, and that the highest homage I can pay to the “light fantastic toes” of others, is – considerately to keep out of the way of them!

Believe me | My dear Mrs Bullar | Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0186] to the same of 25 September 1854.

2. Apparently still referring to the injury suffered in the autumn of 1857.

[0297] TO W. S. EMDEN,<sup>1</sup> 24 FEBRUARY 1859

MS: Wolff Collection (1387). Published: Wolff, pp. 270–271; BGLL, I, pp. 174–175.

2 Clarence Terrace | Regents Park. N.W. | Feby 24th 1859

My dear Sir,

Will you and Mr Robson look to the little piece, in one Act, left with this letter? It is – though I can hardly believe it myself! – actually the product of my pen.<sup>2</sup>

I have had better ideas for better and more elaborate dramatic work – but they would run, in spite of me, into that vein of strong and serious interests which it would be, for the present at least, mere rashness and folly to attempt opening again.<sup>3</sup> A piece to keep the audience roaring with laughter all through, was the piece I was determined to write this time – and such as it is, you now have it.

In case Mr Robson should think he can make anything of the principal part, I ought to say that I have written the characters of the Twin Sisters to be acted by Mrs Stirling.<sup>4</sup> The rest of the cast, I should leave entirely to your decision.

In the other event – which I assure you would not in the least surprise me – of the piece not being found practicable or worth trying – you know me well enough to be sure that you have only to tell me so, and to send back the Mss. I might be disappointed at being of no use to the Theatre – but at nothing else.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Emden and Robson remained joint managers of the Olympic Theatre until 1864.

2. Apparently an untraced one-act farce adapted from WC's 'The Twin Sisters', Bentley's Miscellany (March 1851).

3. Referring to the failure of The Red Vial.

4. Mary Anne ('Fanny') Stirling (1813–1895: NPG), née Hehl, later Lady Gregory, had played the female lead, Mrs Bergmann, in The Red Vial. Her performance was described as the play's one redeeming feature.

[0298] TO WILLIAM S. FREDERICK MAYUS,<sup>1</sup> 21 APRIL 1859

MS: Sydney (Mitchell Collection, Album A8/22). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 175–176.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Portland Place. London. April 21st 1859

Dear Sir,

I have just received your kind letter. At present, my literary engagements are so numerous, that I have no prospect of being able to contribute to The Knickerbocker Magazine with a fair chance of doing justice to the proprietor and to myself.<sup>2</sup> All that I can now engage to do – and I sincerely regret that it is not more – is to keep in remembrance the proposal with which you have favoured me, and to communicate with Doctor [Noyes] as soon as I find that I have a little leisure to spare for extra work.<sup>3</sup>

In the mean time, pray accept my thanks for your letter, and Believe me

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | W<sup>m</sup> S Frederick Mayus Esqre

---

1. Mayus has not been securely identified.

2. New York literary monthly founded in 1833 by Charles Fenno Hoffman (1806– 84), edited from 1834 to 1860 by Lewis Gaylord Clark.

3. The Doctor also remains unidentified.

[3313] TO F. [G.] WHITELOCKE,<sup>1</sup> 21 APRIL 1859

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C11, pp. 5–6.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Portland Place

April 21st 1859

Dear Sir,

I have much pleasure in complying with the request which you honour me by making. On the other leaf, you will find a passage which I have extracted from “The Dead Secret”<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

F. [G]. Whitelocke Esqre

---

1. The only possible candidate found in the 1861 Census is Geo. F. Whitelocke, a 53-year-old army officer lodging at 34 St James’s Place, London.

2. No longer attached. However, a copy of an unrelated extract, taken from The Black Robe (1881), is now attached to the letter with stamp edging – see [3339] to Unidentified Recipient of 8 January [1882–1889]. This unrelated extract was also present when it was on sale by Waverly Rare Books, Falls Church, Virginia (auction, 8 June 1987), in a lot of three letters.

[0299] TO E. NELSON HAZELL,<sup>1</sup> 27 APRIL 1859

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 176.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Portland Place. W. | April 27th 1859

Sir,

I am very sorry not to be able to accede to the proposal which you make to me on the part of the gentlemen who are getting up an Amateur Play. But I have been obliged to make it a rule not to consent to representations of The Lighthouse, either in private or in public, and I have hitherto declined to avail myself of all the applications for permission to act the play which have reached me, in great numbers, from amateurs and from country managers.

I hope that you and the Gentlemen whom you represent will excuse me, therefore, if, solely for consistency’s sake, I still hold to my rule and beg to decline taking advantage of the offer which you have been so good as to address to me.

I remain, Sir | Your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins

To | E. Nelson Hazell Esq

---

1. Neither Hazell nor the amateur dramatic group he clearly represented have been identified.

[0300] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 27 APRIL 1859

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 176.

2 Clarence Terrace | April 27th

Mr Wilkie Collins has much pleasure in accepting Mrs Edward Ward’s kind invitation for Thursday, May the 19th.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Which fell on a Thursday only in 1859 while WC was associated with the Clarence Terrace address.

[0301] TO CHARLES WARD, 4 MAY 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/9). Published: B&C, I, p. 165 (dated [May 1859]). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 176.

2a New Cavendish Street | Wednesday<sup>1</sup>

My dear Ward,

I have today got a ticket sent me (for tomorrow night) to my friend Mr Townshend’s box at Covent garden.<sup>2</sup> You won’t mind my going away at eight o’Clock – will you? – and leaving the engagement /between us two/ in every other respect exactly the same. Dine at six – cigar afterwards – tea – I slip off – Caroline keeps you company and makes you your grog – and you stay as long as you feel inclined.<sup>3</sup> You will tell me when you come tomorrow – if you agree to this – and the dozen of wine shall be ready for you to take away.

Ever yours | (in haste) | WC

---

1. Dating from the sequence of letters to CW about the bottling of wine – see [0304] 9 May 1859, n. 1.
2. To see the Royal Italian Opera performing Verdi's Rigoletto from 8.30pm (Times, 5 May 1859, p. 8f).
3. The earliest reference in the letters to WC's relationship with Caroline Graves, née Elizabeth Compton (1829–1895), with whom WC lived, with the exception of two years, from late 1858 until his death in 1889 (see Lycett, pp. 156–158).

[0302] TO J. STIRLING COYNE,<sup>1</sup> 6 MAY 1859

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 177 (as to J. Sterling Coyne), amended A&C3, p. 62.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Portland Place. W. | May 6th 1859

Dear Sir,

I am much obliged to you for your note on the subject of The Red Vial, which I have just received.

Considering the reception which this play met with in London,<sup>2</sup> under all the advantages of being interpreted by an admirable company, under the immediate supervision of the author, I must honestly confess that I am unwilling to trust it to the chances of provincial representation by a company of whom I have no knowledge and over whose rehearsals I can exercise no control. On this ground, therefore – though I feel sincerely indebted to you for offering me the opportunity of producing again the play on the stage – I must beg you to excuse me if I abstain from availing myself of the proposal which your note contains.

I remain, Dear Sir | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

J. Stirling Coyne Esqre

---

1. Joseph Stirling Coyne (1803–68: ODNB), Irish playwright, Secretary of the Dramatic Authors' Society from 1856, best known for his satires and farces, such as Did You Ever Send Your Wife to Camberwell?
2. The disastrous production of The Red Vial at the Olympic in October 1858, starring Frederick Robson.

[0303] TO CHARLES WARD, 6 MAY 1859<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/7). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 177–178.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Friday morning

My dear Ward,

Another delay about the wine!<sup>2</sup> Not my fault this time. On going down this morning to fill you the dozen, I luckily examined your empty bottles before I poured in the wine, and found dregs of sour sherry and water in each. The bottles shall be properly washed out and dried here – but as this will take a day, and as there is a domestic cleaning up going on at this present moment, which promises to last till tomorrow – you had better not send your man, till you hear from me again. If the bottles had been cleaned, they would have been filled and corked by this time.

Ever yours | WC

The wine is sure to be ready early next week.

---

1. For the dating, see [0304] to CW of 9 May 1859.
2. See [0301] to CW of 4 May 1859.

[0304] TO CHARLES WARD, 9 MAY 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/8). Published: BGLL, I, p. 178.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Portland Place. W. | Monday

My dear Ward,

The bottles were cleaned and dried on Saturday night, and today they have been filled, corked and placed at your disposal, ready in the basket – so send when you like. How was it your man came on Saturday, when I wrote to you on Saturday morning and posted the letter myself, to tell you to delay sending him?

I have just finished the most wildly extravagant article for All The Year Round, ever written by mortal man. Tell Jane to look out for a certain “Major Namby” in the 5th or 6th Number of the new journal,<sup>1</sup> and not to blame me if she “splits her sides”!

Ever yours | WC

I found a splendid lamp at Green & Viners. £3.10 – but better than the other at £6.6. –.

---

1. ‘Pray Employ Major Namby!’ appeared in All The Year Round on 4 June 1859, pp. 136–141. This issue went to press on Tuesday 17 May (CD to Trollope, 17 May 1859, Pilgrim, IX, p. 66). As Collins thought he might be too late for No. 5 – and was – the letter must have been written on Monday 9 May when No. 5 was possible but No. 6 much more likely. This fixes the dating of the previous two letters [0301, 0303] to Ward as 4 May, 6 May.

[0305] TO THE REV. CHAUNCY TOWNSHEND, 29 JUNE 1859

MS: Wisbech, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, pp. 165–166. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 178–179.

2, Clarence Terrace | June 29th 1859

My dear Mr Townshend,

I have just called in Clarence Terrace and just received the copy you have so kindly given to me of your new poems. I hope you will think it almost unnecessary for me to say that I shall read the book<sup>2</sup> with very great interest, and with the sincerest and heartiest wishes for its success. Pray accept my thanks and my warmest congratulations on the completion of your labours.

I had hoped to have seen you again before your departure – but I have been staying at Gadshill and have now lost the opportunity. As I show all Dickens’s unwillingness ever to say, goodbye, let me help myself in my emergency with some pleasanter words in another language, and end this short note with “bon voyage” and “au revoir”.

Believe me, | My dear Mr Townshend,

Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘The Rev<sup>d</sup> Chauncy Hare Townshend | 21. Norfolk Street | Park Lane | W.’, postmarked on the following day.

2. A presentation copy to WC of Townshend’s Three Gates (1859) was part of lot 94 in the Puttick & Simpson January 1890 sale of WC’s library – see Baker 2002, pp. 157–158.

[0306] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 14 JULY 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/53). Published: B&C, I, pp. 166–167. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 179.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Portland Place. W. | Thursday July 14th 1859

My dear Mother,

I got back on Tuesday – saw Charley on Wednesday – and heard that you were at Maidenhead. I am so much better at Gadshill, and so much worse when I come back to London, that I am going away again, next week, and am charged by Dickens to ~~bring~~ take Charley with me. He has accepted the invitation, and as he will be away from Clarence Terrace next week, it seems a pity that you should come back. Charley tells me you thought of going on from Maidenhead to Oxford. Write and tell me what you think of doing and how you are. The heat of the streets, I can tell you, is all but insupportable, after the comparative freshness and coolness of the fields.

We have been very quiet at Gadshill. No company but Mrs Procter and Miss Procter.<sup>1</sup> Nothing settled yet about Dickens’s trip to America, except that he will lose a fortune if he does not go. So his departure sooner or later seems inevitable.

I can't make up my mind yet about what seaside place to go to next month. My notion of trying the Isle of Man has been discouraged by a competent witness who has been there, and who says that nobody can live in lodgings, for the simple reason that good food is not to be got in the Island except at [del] two Hotels. The wine at both these places is execrable – so living [del] at the hotels seems as hopeless as living in lodgings – in the case that is to say of a man who can't drink beer, which is unluckily mine. I suppose I shall have to fall back on Broadstairs again, but I would much rather go to a new place.<sup>2</sup>

It is so hot, at this moment, that I must stop here. I have been vainly trying to work – and now I find it just as hopeless to attempt to make this letter any longer. Remember me kindly to the Langtons and believe me

ever affectly yours | WC

[del] We don't go to Gadshill till Tuesday or Wednesday next – so there is plenty of time for you to drop me a line

---

1. Anne Benson Procter (1799–1888) and Adelaide Anne Procter (1825–1864), wife and daughter of the poet Bryan Waller Procter (1787–1874: ODNB) who used the pseudonym Barry Cornwall, to whom WC dedicated The Woman in White. See [0338] to Anne Benson Procter, 26 March 1860.

2. WC did indeed go to Broadstairs on 3 August for six weeks (see [0308] to Charles Ward, 25 July 1859), though he also travelled to the Isle of Man to carry out research four years later – see [0540] to HC, 2 July 1863.

[0307] TO CHARLES WARD, 19 JULY 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/10). Published: B&C, I, pp. 167–168. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 179.

2. a. New Cavendish Street | 19th July 1859

My dear Ward,

I have nothing particular to record but the history of my own doubts. At this moment I don't know where I am going to in August. My last idea of the Isle of Man has been discouraged by [del] competent authorities who tell me I should be starved there if I went into lodgings and poisoned with execrable wine if I try the Hotels. I had a notion of trying the Freshwater side of the Isle of Wight - and have abandoned it again in despair. To day, I am going to run down to Gadshill, and go on doubting there. On Saturday I propose investigating the old town of Hastings. I hear it is picturesque and I know that it looks out on a fine open sea. Perhaps, I shall settle there – or perhaps at Broadstairs again – possibly I may dart into Wales, and it would not surprise me if I drifted to the coast of Yorkshire. In short, I don't know what I am going to do, and I feel certain of nothing but my own powers of emitting perspiration, which seem to be perfectly inexhaustible.

There is no news in London except that we are to pay our little patriotic additions to [del] our beloved income tax, and that people are most unwillingly, beginning to give up believing in Louis Napoleon at last. In literature, the topic is the amazing and inconceivable badness of “Once A Week”.<sup>1</sup> The friends of that unfortunate publication are even louder against it than the enemies - and the great gun, Tennyson (price £100) – has flashed in the pan. The cheap edition of After Dark is just published – (I have not seen it yet) – and my new book is sauntering through the press so slowly that we have not got to the end of the first volume yet.

Charley continues to spin madly in the social vortex, and is still trying hard to talk himself into believing that he ought to be married. Pigott is cultivating zoological tastes in the verdant seclusion of South Bank.<sup>2</sup> When I last saw him he had a bull-terrier puppy, a parrot, a squirrel,<sup>3</sup> a goldfinch, and a wild black cat – together with the privilege of inhaling the odour of his neighbour's pigs, and hearing the continuous howling of his neighbour's big dog. My mother has been staying at Maidenhead, and has now gone to Oxford. Charley joins me at Gadshill this week – and that is all my news.

I will write again as soon as I am settled somewhere. Where shall I write to? You say nothing about your plans. Do you spend all your holiday at Sidmouth with Palk Hussey? or do you go and seclude yourself with Padley?<sup>4</sup> or do you come and end your trip with me when I get a place?

Caroline sends you her kindest regards – and I must go up and put another shirt on!
ever yours | WC

---

1. Once a Week, a new illustrated sixpenny weekly journal published by Bradbury and Evans after the closure of Household Words in 1859: ‘if the payment of £2,000 a year to Tennyson for contributions is any standard, its rate of pay was far higher than either of Dickens's periodicals’ (Patten, p. 270).
2. Referring to Pigott’s residence at 28 South Bank, one of the villas on the southern side of the Regent’s Canal, North Marylebone, with gardens sloping down towards the water.
3. Peters (p. 216) mistakenly reads this as ‘a spaniel’.
4. Despite the unusual name Palk Hussey cannot be identified, while Padley is likely to be the Rev. Alfred Padley of Bulwell Hall, Nottinghamshire, father of Ellen Elizabeth Ann Newton Padley who married George Agar Thompson in 1846.

[0308] TO CHARLES WARD, 25 JULY 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/11). Published: B&C, I, p. 168. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 179.

2. a. New Cavendish Street | Monday July 25th

My dear Ward,

I have just come back from Broadstairs, where I have taken a half-detached cottage all to myself, on the Ramsgate road with nothing between me and the sea but the open down. We go in on Wednesday August 3rd, and if you like to come and finish your holiday with us, by all means do so. We shall be settled in a day or two – with our own servants &c, and we have got a spare bedroom. So if you come on the 5th or 6th you are sure to find us ready.

Direct to me, after the 3rd August,
at Mr Wayhall’s | Church Hill Cottage | Broadstairs<sup>1</sup>

No time for more before the post goes out.

ever yours | WC

P.S. | I suppose I am right in believing that your holiday does not end before the middle of August.

---

1. Following the address WC draws a horizontal line across the middle of his sheet of writing paper.

[0309] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 26 JULY 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/54), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 169–170. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 179.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Portland Place. W. | July 26th 1859

My dear Mother,

Charley is still at Gadshill, and likely to remain there for the rest of this week, at least. I left on Friday evening last, travelled on Saturday (in despair of finding another place to suit me) to Broadstairs, and consulted the hotel-keeper there, who is an old friend of mine. The result is that I have got [del] one of two little cottages standing, unconnected with other houses, outside Broadstairs on the Ramsgate road. Between me and the sea there is nothing but the smooth down in front of the house, and fields and gardens behind it. I am to take possession (the day after the present lodgers leave) on Wednesday the 3rd August, and have got the place for six weeks from that time. Here I must begin my long serial story for All The Year Round<sup>2</sup> – and here if quiet can be got in this world for any man whose fate it is to create noises all round him by trying to write books, quiet seems moderately likely to be attainable. Lodgings were still to be had on the “Esplanade” – but pianos and children surrounded them – and it was cheaper for my purpose to pay a little more and have a place to myself. Talking about pay, I must have some money to start with. Have you got your cheque-book – or can you borrow a Coutts cheque of anybody? If not it can be written – Mr Combe will show you how – on a blank half sheet of paper: I want £25, out of the £40 which I paid into your account [del] a little while since. Cross the cheque, “Coutts & Co”,<sup>3</sup> and send it to me, any day this week, addressed to care of

Charles Dickens Esqre | Gadshill Place | Higham | near Rochester.

I shall most likely go to Gadshill tomorrow to bid them good bye, and stay [del] till the following Tuesday.

The R.A. Ticket was forwarded to me at Gadshill last week. And I sent it by post to Mrs E.M. Ward – so “F.G.” will see the pictures and the company – and if the company is not better worth looking at than the pictures, I, for one, pity “F.G.” from the bottom of my heart.<sup>4</sup>

My book is getting slowly through the press. The first volume is nearly printed, and the whole is to be published in September.<sup>5</sup> Do you see All The Year Round? Look out a fortnight hence for an article called “The Bachelor Bedroom”, in which I have taken off some of the guests at Gadshill, myself included.<sup>6</sup> The cheap edition of “After Dark” is announced for immediate publication, price 2/6.<sup>7</sup> No more literary news about me.

As they all like Tennyson at Oxford, they may like to hear what he said about himself to a friend of mine, who repeated it to me. “My misfortune is,” said the great T. – “that I have not got anything in me. If I had only got something in me, I could write as well as Shakespeare.”

yours ever, afftly | WC

Kind regards to the Combes. I looked in at Clarence Terrace yesterday. No letter for you. All going on well. I saw the tail of Miss Smith’s gown on the staircase, and I thought Mary looking rather yellow.<sup>8</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Thomas Combe Esqre | University Press | Oxford’. Postmarked ‘LONDON-WC | 6 | JY 26 | 59’ and endorsed ‘A | OXFORD | JY 27’.

2. The Woman in White.

3. £40 was paid into her account labelled ‘By recvd’ on 16 June 1859 and a payment of £25 was recorded as made to ‘W W Collins’ on 2 August. WC continued to use WmC’s executor account at Coutts until the following year when he opened his own account on 23 August 1860 with £300 cash from Low’s first payment for The Woman in White. See [0369] to HC 22 August 1860 and Clarke, Appendix C (‘Wilkie Collins Bank Account’), pp. 228–229.

4. Perhaps a pet name for WC’s godchild Alice Jane Ward, now aged ten. Though there is no evidence to support such a reading, ‘Fairy Goddaughter’ might provide a good fit.

5. The Queen of Hearts, WC’s second collection of short stories linked by a frame narrative, was published in 3 vols. in October 1859 by Hurst & Blackett.

6. ‘The Bachelor Bedroom’ appeared in All the Year Round, 6 August 1859, pp. 355–360.

7. After Dark, WC’s first collection of short stories linked by a frame narrative, was first published in 2 vols. in February 1856 by Smith, Elder, with the first single-volume edition appearing from the same publishers in summer 1859.

8. Though neither can be identified with any certainty, Miss Smith may well be one of the Smiths of Edinburgh that WmC and WC stayed with in 1842 (see [0011] to HC, 13 June), while Mary must be a household servant (see [0368] to Charles Ward, 14 August 1860). WC writes the postscript in a small hand vertically down the left margin of the final page.

[0310] TO CHARLES WARD, 7 AUGUST 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/12). Published: B&C, I, p. 175. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 179.

Church Hill Cottage | Broadstairs | August 7th 1859

My dear Ward,

I have waited to answer your letter and to tell you how sorry I am that you can’t come and stay with us here, until my reply could find you at Coutts’s. I certainly thought when I wrote that you would be able to pass the last week of your holidays here. Hot as the sun is, there is a fresh breeze blowing in from the sea all day long. There is nothing but the down between us and “the great water” – we are on the Ramsgate road, just outside Broadstairs – and we have got the cottage all to ourselves. Can’t you manage, some time in the course of the next six weeks, to get here from Saturday to Monday? You did this, last year. Why not try it again? I wish you had never gone to the Devonshire coast. That picture of the hotel in your last letter, made me perspire to look at it.

You will receive two enclosures with this. The small note addressed to “Mr Holsworth”<sup>1</sup> is an order for the payment of my salary to Bearer until further notice. Can you send a porter with it, every Wednesday, beginning from next Wednesday the 10th? And will /you/ keep the accumulation of money for me in your desk, till I want it? You will receive it ready done up in little paper packets containing £6..6.- each.<sup>2</sup> The porter can call at any time that is convenient on Wednesdays – the later the better perhaps, as Wednesday morning is publication morning.

The second letter is to Tauchnitz, about my new book.<sup>3</sup> Will you put it into an envelope, address it to and pay the postage (which I will refund), and send it at once with your letters? Have I spelt Leipsig properly?<sup>4</sup> or is it Leipzic, or Leipsig, or how the devil is it spelt? You know best, and can correct my errors. I am not even sure whether Bernhardt is right – I know it ought to have an “h”, but I am doubtful about the final “t”. Then again, is it Germany or Saxony? I protest I know next to nothing about it!!!

Le Chevalier | Bernhardt Tauchnitz | Leipsig | Germany

If you will kindly do these two things for /me/ [del], I hope I shall not trouble you with any more commissions. Do think about coming here. Give my love to Jane and the children, and believe me Ever yours WC

Caroline sends you her kind regards

---

1. George Holsworth of the Household Words office, sometimes written Holdsworth, as in CD to Wills, 3 April 1858 (Pilgrim, VIII, p. 541 n. 4).

2. This statement confirms that WC was paid his weekly wage at All The Year Round in cash. For more details see Paul Lewis, What Wilkie Earned from ‘All The Year Round’, Wilkie Collins Society, August 2015.

3. The Queen of Hearts; in fact only five of the ten stories, without the frame narrative, appeared from Tauchnitz in a single volume entitled A Plot in Private Life and Other Tales, 1859, Vol. 493 – see Todd & Bowden, p. 117.

4. WC draws a dotted saltire next to ‘Leipsig’ here and another next to the same word in the address above, linking the two with a curving line.

[0311] TO W. H. WILLS, 15 AUGUST 1859

MS: Unknown. Published: Lehmann, p. 35, our copy text; Priestley, pp. 102–103; BGLL, I, p. 180. Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 141; Peters, p. 209.

CHURCH HILL COTTAGE, BROADSTAIRS, | Aug. 15th, 1859.

MY DEAR WILLS,

– I send enclosed (and registered – for I should go distracted if it was lost) my first number. Please let me have duplicate proofs as soon as possible, for I want to see something in connection with the story which is not a mass of confusion. It is an awfully long number – between 8 and 9 pages; but I must stagger the public into attention, if possible, at the outset. They shan’t drop a number when I begin, if I can help it.

I have hit on a new title, in the course of a night-walk to the North Foreland, which seems to me weird and striking:

THE WOMAN IN WHITE.

My love to Dickens. How does he do? When will he write? Have you a house to let? I am at mortal enmity with my London landlord, and am resolved to leave him.<sup>1</sup> Where I am to go next ‘God, He knows.’ Ta-ta

WC

---

1. In the event, WC does not seem to have moved from 2a New Cavendish Street to 12 Harley Street until around March 1860.

[0312] TO CHARLES WARD, 18 AUGUST 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/13). Published: B&C, I, p. 176. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 180.

Church Hill Cottage | Broadstairs | Thursday 18th Augt 1859

My dear Ward,

I pay my landlord here, week by week, and I have dwindled to my last five pound note. The necessary consequence is a modest demand on you for a driblet of fifteen pounds to hold up my tottering credit. My salary of Wednesday the 7th 10th and Wednesday the /17th / 14th (now in your hands I hope) amounts to £12..12.- and my salary of next Wednesday the 21st 24th, which raises it to £18.18. will, by that time, more than square our accounts.<sup>1</sup>

Can you bring the money yourself on Saturday next? Caroline and Charley and I will all be very glad if you can, and you and I will go out and hold divine service on the ocean, on Sunday. If it is still too soon after your holiday to manage this, I suppose the best way will be to send me a registered letter with three five pound notes in it, on the day you get this – if you can do so without inconvenience. Tell me when you think you can get a day's leave at the end of the week, and I will endeavour to arrange humour my next necessity for money (Good God! how rapidly those necessities follow each other!) so as to make it occur when you come.

We are very quiet here. No visitor but Charley. I am shut up at my desk everyday from 10 till 2 or 3, slowly and painfully launching my new serial novel. The story is the longest and the most complicated I have ever tried yet – and the difficulties at the beginning of it are all but insuperable.

Broadstairs is quite full – and is laboriously gay today in honour of the annual Regatta.<sup>2</sup> The whole tribe of extortioners are enjoying their meridian glory of swindledom – and the weekly bills make my hair stand on end. I used to disbelieve in Hell. I believe in it now, because I know of no other place, after this life, which will be hot enough to do full justice to the British tradesman.

Caroline and Charley send kind regards. My love to Jane and the children,
Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC's weekly stipend was raised from six to seven guineas per week when his contract as a staff writer with All the Year Round was renewed around a year later – see [0364] to CD, 7 August 1860, and Paul Lewis, What Wilkie Earned from 'All The Year Round', Wilkie Collins Society, August 2015

2. The Broadstairs Regatta was a summer annual attraction in the mid-Victorian period – Forster writes of the summer of 1851 when he joined CD 'for the August regatta and stayed a pleasant fortnight' at the Fort House (II, p. 441).

[0313] TO CHARLES WARD, 30 AUGUST 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/14). Published: B&C, I, p. 177. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 180.

Church Hill Cottage | Broadstairs | Tuesday Aug 30th 1859

My dear Ward,

My last five pound note stares me lamentably in the face again. Will you send me, by Registered letter, fifteen pounds more, so that I may receive the money, if possible, on Thursday morning? By tomorrow (Wednesday the 31st) you will have received four weeks [sic] salary (Aug 10th, 17th, 24th, and 31st mounting to £25.6.- and you will have sent me (counting this second £15.) Thirty pounds. My salary for September 7th will therefore in a week's time, set me on the right side of the account again.

I have been suffering torments with a boil between my legs, and write these lines with the agreeable prospect of the doctor coming to lance it.<sup>1</sup> I seem destined, God help me!, never to be well.

Don't forget that we leave this, unless some fresh misery happens to lay me up, on Wednesday September 14th. So try hard for the Saturday before. The six weeks for which I took this place will be expired by that time.

I can't write anymore<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Peters (p. 209–10) states that this embarrassing problem ‘took months to clear up’, but this is based on a misreading of the phrase ‘my old torment in the ear’ ([0317] to Charles Ward, 20/27 October 1859) as ‘my old torment in the sac’.
2. Valadiction and signature torn away.

[0314] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 2 SEPTEMBER 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/55), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 177–178. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 180, amended A&C6, p. 19.

Church Hill Cottage | Broadstairs | September 2nd 1859

My dear Mother,

Charley wrote to you (I hope with a better pen than mine) the day before yesterday. On that day also Dickens arrived. He stays at the Hotel – dines here one day, and we dine with him the next – and seems to enjoy the change and the seeing his old haunts once more. He goes back to town next Monday (the American trip, by the bye, is postponed for this year at any rate) and Charley goes back with him, supposing Mary to have returned on Monday next. Benham is coming on Saturday.<sup>2</sup> Pigott I have heard nothing of. As for myself, I still stick so resolutely at my work, that my life is as uneventful as your’s [sic]. The more I can get done [del] now the less trouble and worry for me when the story appears in All The Year Round. I shall return to London when my time is up (on Wednesday the 14th) – literally driven away by the extortions of the Broadstairs people. No moderate income can cope with their demands. A skinny little chicken is three and sixpence – meat equally dear – vegetables three times the London price – my landlord won’t draw me a bucket of water without being paid for it – the cook I have engaged (an excellent servant I must fairly own) sends me up my dinner and breakfast at the small charge of ten and sixpence a week, and her keep, tea, and beer besides – and I was in great luck to get her at that, through the intercession of the landlord of the Hotel here. And the Broadstairs people complain of the shortness of their season! It is a wonder they have a season at all. You will not be surprised, after reading this lamentable statement, to hear that I shall want some money before I can leave. I have fifteen pounds of my own, in your account – will you put ten more to it, and send a cheque for £25.- - – ~~crossed~~ Coutts & Co – to Charles Ward, directing to him at the bank – /Messrs Coutts & Co,/ Strand, London. W.C.<sup>3</sup> This will clear me, and send me back to London, I hope, not quite penniless. I shall have more dribbles of money coming in soon from the foreign reprints of “The Queen of Hearts” – which will soon be published.<sup>4</sup>

My kindest remembrances to the Bullars – I hope old Mr Bullar is better – tell Henry to come here if he possibly can. How long you have been away! and what a [del] weary time it seems since we have seen each other!

ever your affectionate | WC

Charley sends his love, and he wants to know the exact day of Mary’s return<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of John Bullar Esqre | Basset Wood | near Southampton’. Postmarked ‘RAMSGATE | C | SP 2 | 59’ with the endorsement ‘SOUTHAMPTON | SP 3 | 1859 | B’.

2. Ebenezer (afterwards Edward) Benham, solicitor of Benham and Tindell, Essex Street, Strand, London – see [0719] to him of 5 January 1867.

3. On 6 September 1859, £25 was drawn from HC’s bank account to W. W. Collins (Coutts: Exors WmC).

4. Including the Tauchnitz volume, A Plot in Private Life and Other Tales – see [0310] to Ward of 7 August 1859. WC’s next payment into the bank was in fact £48 on 5 November 1859 (Coutts: Exors WmC).

5. WC writes his postscript down the left margin of the final page.

[0315] TO CHARLES WARD, 7 SEPTEMBER 1859

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/15). Published: B&C, I, pp. 178–179. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 181.

Church Hill Cottage | Broadstairs | Wednesday Sept 7th 1859

My dear Ward,

I am very glad to hear you are coming at last. Your course, on arriving at Ramsgate, is simplicity itself. You merely inquire for the Broadstair's [sic] 'bus<sup>1</sup> (which meets every train) – get on it, or in it, which you please – and tell the man to set you down at this place. Unless some new catastrophe overwhelms me, I shall be in the garden waiting to see you drive up. We look on to the high road by which you arrive, and are just the sort of house which nobody can possibly miss. I would come on to Ramsgate to meet you – but, although my incision is much better, I am hardly up to a long walk yet.<sup>2</sup>

No commission, thank you, except the eternal commission to bring me money. I want you to bring a heavy purse this time, including (by anticipation) my salary of this day week /the 14th / – the last I need give you the trouble of drawing for me. On the other leaf is my statement of our account. If it agrees with yours, then stow away in a safe pocket £32..14..6, making up that sum with one Ten pound note, four fives, and the rest in precious metals. I hope I shan't want so much as this but it is best to be on the right side – so please bring it.

Carolines [sic] kind regards. Ever yours | WC
Don't spoil your dinner on Saturday. We shall not dine till a quarter to seven – so you will have plenty of time.

Account<sup>3</sup>

Ward receives, Salary at £6-6- a week,
 From | August 10th – 6,, 6,,-
           17th – 6,, 6,,-
           24th – 6,, 6,,-
           31st – 6,, 6,,-
       Sept 7th (today)    6,, 6,,- £31,,10,,-
 Add Salary of Sept 14th – 6,, 6,,- 37,,16,,-
 Add cheque for       25,, -,,- £62,,16,,

Ward sends to Broadstairs two Registered letters containing fifteen pounds each – £30,,-,,- pays for registering –    ,,1,,- pays for stamp to Leipsig – ,,-,,6 30,,1,,6

Ward brings with him
 to Broadstairs – 32,,14,,6 £62,,16,,0

-
1. This seems to be WC's first recorded use of the abbreviated form of 'omnibus' (still referring, of course, to a horse-drawn vehicle for public transport); in [0003] to HC, 11 March 1839, for example, the teenage WC still referred to getting 'the omnibus' on his return to school.
  2. Referring to the lancing of the boil between the legs mentioned in [0313] to Ward, 30 August 1859.
  3. WC draws a vertical line between the two columns of the entries in his account, which is written in landscape format on the third page of WC's folding notepaper.

[3001] TO CHARLES DICKENS, [5] OCTOBER 1859

MS: Unknown.<sup>1</sup> Cited: CD to WC, 6 October 1859 (Morgan). Published: Hutton, pp. 103–105; Pilgrim, IX, p. 128; A&C2, p. 62.

... Could it have been done at all, in the way I suggest, to advantage? ...<sup>2</sup>

-
1. Judging by CD's reply of 6 October 1859, the letter (presumably later destroyed by CD) contained WC's thoughts on reading the ending of A Tale of Two Cities in MS or proof. (The serial run in All The Year Round finished only on 26 November). CD's letter concluded: 'I am very glad you like it so much. It has greatly moved and excited me in the doing, and Heaven knows I have done my best and have believed in it.' (Pilgrim, IX, pp. 127–128).
  2. WC had presumably suggested that, by allowing the reader access to the thoughts of Dr Manette (imprisoned in the Bastille for uncovering the corruption of the Marquis St Evrémonte), CD might have indicated rather earlier in the narrative the connection between him and Charles Darnay (nephew of the Marquis and in love with Manette's daughter). CD writes: 'I do not positively say that the point you put, might not have been done in your manner; but I have a very strong conviction that it would have been overdone in that manner – too elaborately trapped, baited, and prepared – in the main, anticipated and its interest wasted. This is quite apart from the peculiarity of the Doctor's character, as affected by his imprisonment; which of itself would – to my way of thinking – render it quite out of the question to put the reader inside of him before the proper time, in respect of matters that were dim to himself through being, in a diseased way, morbidly shunned by him. . . .'. CD later summarizes: "'Could it have been done at all, in the way I suggest, to advantage?'" is your question. I don't see the way, and I never have seen the way, is my answer. I cannot imagine it that way, without imagining the reader wearied and the expectation wire-drawn.'

[0316] TO THE EDITOR OF THE ATHENÆUM, 26 OCTOBER 1859

MS: Unknown. Published: Athenæum (29 October 1859), our copy text;<sup>1</sup> BGLL, I, pp. 181–182.

2A, New Cavendish Street, October 26

I beg permission, in the interests of plain fact, to correct a mis-statement which appears in the Athenæum of last week, on the subject of my recently-published work of fiction, 'The Queen of Hearts.'<sup>2</sup> Your critic announces that 'The Queen of Hearts' is a reprint from Household Words. Rather less than one-fourth of it is a reprint from Household Words; and considerably more than one-half of the seven hundred and odd pages which remain after deducting that fourth, consists of contributions on my part to the literature of fiction that are now published in England for the first time. If the critic in question will be so obliging as to open the book, he may make acquaintance with three stories ('The Black Cottage,' 'The Biter Bit,' and 'A Plot in Private Life') which he has not met with before in Household Words, or in any other English periodical whatever; and he will, moreover, find the whole collection of stories connected by an entirely new thread of interest which it has cost me some thought and trouble to weave for the occasion, and which runs through nearly two hundred pages of the work. When he has made these discoveries, I think he will agree with me that his description of my new volumes as a reprint from Household Words, not only fails in doing fair justice to the pains I have taken to give them as much of the attraction of novelty as I could, but announces the appearance of the work to the readers of the Athenæum in terms which can only be truly applied to less than one-fourth of it. Under these circumstances, I do not ask you to treat the book with the courtesies of critical attention which your weekly contemporaries have willingly offered to it, – I only request you to give me fair play by inserting this letter. I am, &c.,

Wilkie Collins.

---

1. The letter is introduced:

Mr. Wilkie Collins wishes to make some explanations in our columns with respect to his 'Queen of Hearts,' which would have appeared with equal grace and more appropriateness in his Preface to that work. We make room for them, however, with hearty goodwill; for we have the highest respect for Mr. Collins as a conscientious cultivator of the art of story-telling, and have always shown ourselves glad to discuss his results whenever he has been pleased to offer an original opportunity for doing so. Here are his Notes –

And is followed by:

– Why not have said all this in the Preface? Mr. Collins confesses that the contents of his volumes are mainly reprinted, either from Household Words or from the pages of some magazine “not published in England.” If we understand him, nothing in them is new except the framework which holds them together. Where, then, is the unfairness of describing them as a reprint?

2. Published in October 1859 in 3 vols, by Hurst & Blackett.

[0317] TO CHARLES WARD, 20/27 OCTOBER 1859<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/16). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 182–183.

2.a. New Cavendish Street. W. | Thursday

My dear Ward,

I can't get out today and tomorrow is doubtful. Will you make an inquiry for me at Hachette's London establishment<sup>2</sup> on your way home from Coutts's?

I have just heard from M. Lahure (Hachette's partner) that M. Forgues' copy of The Queen of Hearts has never been received.<sup>3</sup> These are the circumstances under which I sent it: –

I myself left two copies of the book at Hachette's London shop, on Friday the 7th, or Saturday the 8th of this month. I told them one was to be sent to Hachette & Lahure for translating purposes, and the other to be consigned to Hachette & Lahure for Monsieur Forgues. I offered to pay the expenses on M. Forgues' copy – but the man to whom I spoke, after some hesitation, said he thought they had better not charge me – and that they would send it for nothing, as a matter of politeness. I asked when the books would be sent. The answer was, they had a consignment to make to Paris, on Monday the 10th October, and that the two copies would go then. The copy for Hachette appears to have been received – the copy for Forgues is missing. And the point to ascertain is, whether both the copies were sent from London on Monday the 10th, either to Hachette or Lahure, it does'nt matter which. If both copies were sent from London – then Forgues' copy must have been lost or stolen on the way to Paris.

I hope this is pretty clear – and will give you no trouble. I have had my old torment in the ear<sup>4</sup> since I saw you and have never stirred outside the door.

Ever yours | WC

I left my card and address with Hachettes London people.

Basil has been translated in the “Journal Pour Tous”<sup>5</sup> – and not as a separate book

---

1. Dating from the publication of The Queen of Hearts, the references to dates within the letter, and the postal arrangements between London and Paris.

2. The Paris publishing house, founded in 1826 by Louis Christophe Hachette (1800–64), which ran a bookshop in London – see [0264] to Charles Lahure of 4 September 1857.

3. The collection of stories was dedicated to Émile Forgues, who translated them as Une Poignée de Romans (Paris: J. Hetzel, 1864).

4. Peters (p. 210) reads the word as ‘sac’, interpreting it with reference to the boil between WC's legs mentioned in [0313] to Ward of 30 August 1859.

5. Basil was translated by Emil Ouchard and serialised as ‘Un Mariage en Omnibus’ in the cheap weekly Paris magazine Journal Pour Tous from 8 January 1859 (IV, No. 197) to 5 March 1859 (IV, No. 205).

[0318] TO CHARLES WARD, 8 NOVEMBER 1859

2.a. New Cavendish Street. | W. | November 8th

My dear Ward,

Both Caroline and I are delighted to hear that Jane's confinement is over and that she is prospering well after it.<sup>1</sup> I will look in at Coutts's on Friday next to hear how she is going on and to fetch my money. We can then settle a day for your dining here. I have no evening this week but Saturday and that I know you devote to Smiths<sup>2</sup>

In haste and weariness, after a hard day's work

Ever yours | WC

-
1. The Wards' eleventh child Alfred Constable was born 7 November 1859.
  2. Unidentified, though see [0376] to Ward of 5 October 1860.

[0319] TO HENRY HOLL,<sup>1</sup> 9 NOVEMBER 1859

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 183–184.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | W. | Novr 9th 1859

My dear Holl,

Very smartly hit off indeed. You are wrong about my never having joined the Club. I belonged to it for a little while, and resigned because I found that other engagements got in the way of my attendance at the dinners.<sup>2</sup> I know the originals of most of the portraits, and can congratulate you on the fidelity of the likenesses.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

H. Holl Esqre

-
1. Henry Holl (1810/11–84: Boase), actor, playwright and novelist, whose melodrama Grace Huntley ran at the Adelphi in 1836–7. In 1863 he published the novel The King's Mail (3 vols, London: Sampson Low), which, in its preface, acknowledges 'the help of my friend Wilkie Collins for introducing me to my publishers'. A copy was found in WC's library, see Baker p. 118.
  2. Probably 'Our Club' – see [0272] to F. W. Hamstede of [January–October 1857].
  3. The portraits to which WC refers, presumably of members of the Club, remain unidentified.

[0320] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 11 DECEMBER 1859

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 184–185.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | W. | Sunday Decr 11th 1859

Private

My dear Ted,<sup>1</sup>

First of all (as I shall not be able to get to you this miserable morning) let me thank you for the article in The Daily News yesterday.<sup>2</sup> It is more than kindly, it is generously written, and it hits the point (in reference to the nonsense talked in certain quarters about my incapability of character-painting) so cleverly, that I shall take it as the text of what I have to say for myself in the preface to The Woman in White. I have just done a third of the story – more than four hundred pages of the novel-size! – Look at the number published on Wednesday next,<sup>3</sup> and see whether the manner in which I there "bring out" "Miss Halcombe's" character does not justify what you have so kindly said of me in The Daily News.

Secondly, help me to an understanding of the enclosed,<sup>4</sup> of which I can only decipher for myself about one tenth part. Don't trouble to copy it out – look in here on your way to the office any day but tomorrow, and read it to me. I am sure to be at home till 4 o'clock. Tomorrow we go to hunt for the Ghost at Cheshunt.<sup>5</sup> Personally speaking, I wish we may get it!

Yours ever afftly | WC

-
1. Until this point Pigott has been addressed as ‘Dear Edward’.
  2. Pigott reviewed WC’s The Queen of Hearts, just published by Hurst & Blackett, in the Daily News, 10 December 1859, p. 2a: ‘There is no novelist, even in France, who surpasses him in the difficult and delicate art of putting a story together, so as to keep the attention suspended on a thread of interest, sometimes of the slenderest texture, yet strong enough through skilful weaving, to hold the reader’s attention from the first page to the last, eager, anxious, and excited’. By this point Pigott seems no longer to have been connected to the Leader, and by 1862 at least he seems to have worked full-time for the Daily News – see [0489] to Charles Lever of 12 September 1862.
  3. Chapters VIII and IX in the issue of All The Year Round dated 17 December 1859.
  4. No longer attached and unidentified.
  5. WC, CD, W. H. Wills and John Hollingshead went to an allegedly haunted house in Cheshunt. For an account of the visit see Hollingshead, I, pp. 110–112. For the background, see William Howitt, History of the Supernatural (London: Longman, 1863), II, pp. 439–440. See also Pilgrim, IX, pp. 178–179. That December, the Christmas number of All The Year Round was called The Haunted House and contained a series of ghost stories, including WC’s ‘The Ghost in the Cupboard Room’.

[3202] TO THE EDITOR OF THE CRITIC,<sup>1</sup> 14 DECEMBER 1859

MS: Unknown. Published: the Critic (17 December 1859), p. 35, our copy text; A&C8, pp. 4–5.

Dec. 14, 1859

Sir,

My attention has just been called to a paragraph in your Bookseller’s Record for the 3rd of this month, which refers to me, and which I beg to correct in one particular.

The paragraph in question, after stating that I have begun my new serial story – “The Woman in White” – in the columns of All the Year Round, adds to that announcement the following sentence: “Some expressions in the brief preface have occasioned the surmise that he (Mr Wilkie Collins) is, in certain portions of it, to be assisted by the pen of Mr. Charles Dickens.”<sup>2</sup>

I beg to assure you that any surmise of this sort is founded on misapprehension of the facts.<sup>3</sup> The idea of “The Woman in White,” and of the peculiar narrative form under which the story is to be presented, is wholly and entirely my own. All the characters are of my painting, and all the incidents of my inventing. Not a line or word of “The Woman in White” will be written, from beginning to end, by any other hand than mine.

Trusting that you will publish this letter in your next number, in justice to Mr Dickens, as well as in justice to myself

I am, Sir, yours, &c., | Wilkie Collins<sup>4</sup>

---

1. From its beginnings in 1843 until its demise in 1863, the Critic (1843–63) was a review owned by Edward William Cox (1809–1879; ODNB), and edited by James Lowe (d. 1865; ODNB). In the late 1850s, it sold at a relatively expensive fourpence and was characterized on its masthead as, ‘A Weekly Journal of Literature, Art, Science, and the Drama’.

2. In full the original comment read: ‘In All the Year Round Mr. Wilkie Collins has commenced a new tale, “The White Lady”. Some expressions in the brief preface have occasioned the surmise that he is, in certain portions of it, to be assisted by the pen of Mr. Charles Dickens. This is not the first time that Mr. Collins and Mr. Dickens have combined their efforts, as the readers of the chronicle of the “Two Idle Apprentices”, in Household Words, may remember.’, the Critic (3 December 1859), p. 19.

3. The comment in the Critic clearly rests on a confusion between the roles of author and narrator in The Woman in White, which opens with Walter Hartright’s ‘Preamble’, where it is noted that ‘the story here presented will be told by more than one pen, as the story of an offence against the laws is told in Court by more than one witness’ (All the Year Round, 26 November 1859), p. 95.

4. Immediately after the letter appeared the following editorial comment: ‘We willingly insert Mr. Collins’s communication, but we do not find in our original statement anything to correct. The wording of Mr. Collins’s introduction to “The Woman in White” did occasion the “surmise” referred to: on its accuracy, however, we expressed no opinion.’

[0321] TO WILLIAMS & NORGATE,<sup>1</sup> 24 DECEMBER 1859

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, I, p. 185; Lewis website.

2.a. New Cavendish Street W. | Decr 24th 1859

Gentlemen,

I am much obliged to you for the form, which I return with this filled up and signed.<sup>2</sup> If you will kindly let me know when the books are received, I will take care to send for them, so as to cause you as little trouble as possible.

I remain | Gentlemen | Yours faithfully | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Williams & Norgate

---

1. Covent Garden publishers who acted as London agents for Tauchnitz (see Nowell-Smith, pp. 48–63). One of their duties was to arrange customs clearance for presentation copies of the Tauchnitz editions of novels by authors such as WC, the importation of which into Britain was illegal without the authorization of the copyright holder. Amongst the 28 volumes published by Tauchnitz just five letters like this survive – [0321] 24 December 1859, [1343] 23 May 1873, [3051] 19 December 1877, [1913] 14 April 1880, and [2370] 17 November 1884.
2. The letter is accompanied by a form with an embossed heading written in a secretarial hand with the text within braces {} inserted in WC’s hand:

Williams & Norgate | 14, Henrietta-Street, Covent-garden. London, WC | {Dec. 26 1859}
To the Honble Commissioners of H.M’s Customs —
I hereby authorize Messrs Williams & Norgate to import for my own use {four} cop{ies} of my Work – “A Plot in private life” &c published by Tauchnitz of Leipzig.
{Wilkie Collins}

The book in question is A Plot in Private Life and Other Tales, an 1859 Tauchnitz reprint of five stories from The Queen of Hearts (1859) – see Todd and Bowden, 493, p. 117.

[0322] TO JOHN WESTLAND MARSTON,<sup>1</sup> [LATER 1850S]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Kansas (O’Shaughnessy MS 24 Bg 3).<sup>3</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 186.

... the result of the experiment.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Westland Marston Esq

---

1. The poet and dramatist John Westland Marston (1819–90: ODNB), who acted with WC in the amateur performance of Edward Bulwer-Lytton’s comedy Not So Bad as We Seem in 1851. Co-editor with John Saunders of the National Magazine from 1856, which carried WC’s ‘Uncle George or the Family Mystery’ in May 1857.
2. The style of the hand and signature, plus the connection with Marston, suggest this conjectural dating.
3. Fragment cut off an otherwise untraced letter for WC’s autograph, with two lines of text, followed by the valediction, signature, and address line, on the recto with the verso blank.

[0323] TO EDMUND YATES, 1858–9

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: Lewis website; BGLL, I, p. 186, amended A&C4, p. 30.

... on the woodblock. If you can say a word for him in the right quarter, I am sure ...

... house – I [words excised], or even the remembrance, of serious matters.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins
Edmund Yates Esq

---

1. A fragment excised from the foot of a letter for the autograph, with text on both recto and verso. A partial watermark of ‘1858’ suggests the dating.

[0324] TO CHARLES WARD, [6 JANUARY 1860]

Friday 2.a. New Cavendish St | W.

My dear Ward,

I forgot to ask you last night to pay my subscriptions to the Garrick for me – six guineas, I think.<sup>1</sup>

Will you do so? I have the money put by here – and will repay you if you can look in on Sunday, after Church – or the next time I see you if you can't look in.

I hope Jane likes her shawl.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Subscriptions to the Garrick Club were due on 1 January. The only January when WC was using 2a New Cavendish St as his address is 1860. It is likely this letter was written on the 6th, the first Friday of the month. No debit for this amount appears in HC's bank account so the transactions were presumably in cash (Coumts: Exors WmC).

[0325] TO E. M. WARD, 7 JANUARY 1860

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 59. Extract: Ellis, p. 30; Robinson 1951, pp. 143–144; B&C, I, pp. 179–180. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 187.

2.a. New Cavendish St. W. | Jany 7th 1860

My dear Ned,

Your kind letter was left waiting for me two days at Clarence Terrace before I called for it – and my answer has been unfortunately delayed in consequence.

I am honestly glad to hear you like the opening of The Woman in White, because I know that you have an eye for detecting what is really genuine and good in literary workmanship. I do hope and believe the story will be the best I have written yet. It is on a much larger and much more elaborate scale than anything I have done hitherto – and, as far as it has gone, it has certainly made itself felt pretty strongly not only in England, but in America as well.<sup>1</sup> The effort of keeping it going week after week is (in the reporter's famous phrase) "more easily imagined than described". When I approach the glass in the morning to brush my hair, I am quite agreeably surprised to find it has not turned grey yet!

Give my kindest love to Mrs Ward and the children, with a warm return on my part of all their good wishes, and a special kiss for my goddaughter.<sup>2</sup>

Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins

E.M. Ward Esqre. R.A.

---

1. The novel was serialized from 26 November 1859 in both All the Year Round in London and Harper's Weekly in New York.

2. Alice Jane Ward, now ten years old.

[0326] TO RICHARD GRIFFIN & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 11 JANUARY 1860

MS: BL (Add. 28509, ff. 344–6), with corresponding pre-printed envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 180–181. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 187.

2.a. New Cavendish Street. | W. | ~~Dec~~ Jany 11th 1860<sup>3</sup>

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to Messrs Griffin, and begs to return them the Memoir revised and corrected in compliance with their request.<sup>4</sup>

COLLINS, /William/ Wilkie, /[elder]/ son of the great painter, a distinguished biographer and novelist, born in London in 1824. He was educated at a private school, and passed a considerable time in Italy. His biography of his father, the late William Collins RA, is remarkably interesting not more as a life of the man than as a kind of history of

English Art. “Antonina or the Fall of Rome” / (his first novel) / became popular at once. His other works are “Rambles Beyond Railways”, “Basil” “Mr. Wrays Cash-box”, “Hide and Seek”, “After Dark” and the “~~Dead Secret~~” / “The Dead Secret”/. Although toughly handled by many critics, those who have studied the works of Mr. Collins will bear testimony to their distinctness of plot and incident and their clearness and simplicity of Style. His earlier works were, no doubt, tinged with the colours of exaggeration but with time came mellowness, and when he does write now he writes well and ~~rigorously~~ / vigorously/. His /One of his/ latest productions is the drama of the “Frozen Deep” written for the Author-Amateurs, and commanded by the Queen. Mr. Collins is independent of literature, and may therefore write what he will without suffering much from a failure, except by the amour propre being wounded. /His latest work of fiction is “The Woman in White,” which is now appearing, in weekly parts, in the columns of “All The Year Round”./<sup>5</sup>

1. Publishers to the University of Glasgow, with offices in both London and Glasgow, specializing in biographical dictionaries and other works of reference, including A Dictionary of Contemporary Biography: A Handbook of the Peerage of Rank, Worth, and Intellect (London: Richard Griffin & Co, 1861). This contained a Preface, dated ‘November, 1860’, stating that the volume included ‘nearly one thousand memoirs’ of living individuals, with steps having been taken ‘to verify the facts by communicating with the parties themselves’.
2. Directed to ‘MESSRS. RICHARD GRIFFIN & CO. | PUBLISHERS, | AVE MARIA LANE, | LONDON, | E.C.’ In WC’s hand, ‘Wilkie Collins’ at the bottom left with lines above and right making a box with the envelope edges; in another hand at the top again ‘Wilkie Collins’.
3. Address line written at the foot of the paper.
4. The opening sentence of the memoir is a small printed cutting, pasted at the top of the paper, with the remainder handwritten in a clerk’s hand below. In WC’s hand there are the half-a-dozen corrections indicated, plus the final added sentence.
5. Whether the changes made in the meantime were approved by WC is unclear, but, as eventually printed in the A Dictionary of Contemporary Biography: A Handbook of the Peerage of Rank, Worth, and Intellect, pp. 105–106, the revised memoir read:

COLLINS, WILKIE, an English biographer and novelist, was born in London in 1824. A son of the celebrated painter, the late William Collins, R.A., he was educated at a private school, and passed a considerable time in Italy. His biography of his father is remarkably interesting; not more as a life of the man than as a history of English art. “Antonina, or the Fall of Rome,” his first novel, became popular at once. His other works are “Rambles beyond Railways,” “Basil,” “Mr. Wray’s Cash-box,” “Hide and Seek,” “After Dark,” and “The Dead Secret.” Although roughly handled by many critics, those who have studied the works of Mr. Collins will bear testimony to their merits, as regards plot and variety of incident, and their clearness and simplicity of style. His earlier works were, no doubt, tinged with exaggeration; but with time came mellowness, and when he does write now, he writes well and vigorously. One of his dramatic productions is that of “The Frozen Deep,” which was played before the Queen. His latest work of fiction is “The Woman in White,” which appeared in weekly parts, in the columns of “All the Year Round,” and has since been reprinted. He is also the author of a drama called “The Lighthouse,” which has been played under the care of Mr. Dickens.

[0327] TO SAMPSON LOW,<sup>1</sup> 11 JANUARY 1860

MS: Taylor. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 187–88.

2.a. New Cavendish Street. W. | Jany 11th 1860

Private

My dear Sir,

As you expressed a wish to make me an offer for the Woman In White, and as I assured you of my readiness to consider your proposal, I think it only fair to inform you that an arrangement for the reprinting of the book has been submitted to me this morning.<sup>2</sup> I have asked for two days to consider that arrangement, with a view to allowing you time to make your offer, in case you still feel disposed to do so. I may add, for your own information, that the basis of this proposal (which is the basis on which I should prefer to treat) is as follows: The right of reprinting the book to be purchased by the publisher for a term of three years only, and the form of the reprint to be limited to three volumes post 8<sup>vo</sup> of the usual library size and price. The book to be published, if it is so desired, in the same week on which the last number of the story appears in All The Year Round.

I shall be much obliged if you will kindly let me have your reply, in the course of tomorrow

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Sampson Low Esqr

I ought perhaps to add, that the story will make, when completed, three long post 8<sup>vo</sup> volumes.

---

1. Sampson Low (1797–1886: ODNB), London publisher then based at Ludgate Hill, who published the first editions of The Woman in White and No Name.

2. The reference is clearly to Smith, Elder: a comparison with [0328] to them of the same day shows that the author was happy to indulge in polite fictions in order to speed the negotiations.

[0328] TO SMITH, ELDER & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 11 JANUARY 1860

MS: NLS (MS 23180/132).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 188–189.

2.a. New Cavendish Street. W. | Jany 11th 1860

Private

Dear Sirs,

You expressed a wish, some little time since, to make me an offer for a work of fiction of my writing on which you then understood me to be engaged. That work was “The Woman In White”, now being published, in the serial form, in “All The Year Round”. In case you should still feel disposed to favour me with a proposal, I think it only fair to inform you, that an arrangement for reprinting the book has been submitted to me this morning. I have asked for two days to consider this arrangement – and I will wait to hear from you, any time in the course of tomorrow, before I conclude it. In case you do not feel disposed to make me an offer, under these circumstances, a line to say, No, will be enough. In case you do, I may mention for your information that the basis of the proposal submitted to me (which is the basis on which I should prefer to treat) is as follows: –

The right of reprinting the book to be purchased by the publisher for a term of three years only, and the form of the reprint to be limited to three volumes post 8<sup>vo</sup>, of the usual library size and price. The book (which, on completion, will be quite long enough to fill three volumes) to be published, if so desired, in the week when the last serial number of the story appears in “All The Year Round.” So far as I can tell at present, the conclusion of the story in its periodical form will take place in July next.

I remain | Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Smith, Elder & Co

---

1. Smith, Elder & Co. was one of the most distinguished Victorian publishing houses, then located at 65 Cornhill, an address that would give its name to their monthly miscellany starting in January 1860. George Smith responded to WC’s letter on 12 January by offering £500 before he knew of the extraordinary popularity of the novel in serial form. He later admitted that he could have offered tenfold and still made ‘a large sum by the transaction’ – see Leonard Huxley, The House of Smith, Elder (London: William Clowes & Sons, 1923), p. 92.

2. Like many of the letters at the NLS, with the publishers’ yellow filing wrapper, here marked: ‘MS23180 f130 PUBLICATION DEPARTMENT | No. 1214 | Wilkie Collins | Date Jany 11 1860 | Ansd 12/60 | Mr Williams’.

[0329] TO CHARLES WARD, 11 JANUARY 1860

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 / 17). Summary: B&C, I, p. 181. Published: BGLL, I, p. 329.

Wednesday | 2.a. New Cavendish Street

My dear Ward,

Thank you very much for the Eau de Cologne – it will be a real luxury to use, and will be treasured accordingly.

I ought to have written this note yesterday – but between work, interruptions, and an early engagement for the evening, I really had not five minutes to spare. My weekly race with the press is beginning to weigh heavily on me.

We have got another Stilton cheese – a real success this time. Come in on Sunday and taste it. I am bargaining with the publishers for The Woman In White and may have some results to tell you on Sunday.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I missed you on Monday afternoon because I was obliged to rush out for my walk.

---

1. See the letters to Sampson Low and Smith, Elder of this date.

[0330] TO MRS BICKNELL,<sup>1</sup> 12 JANUARY 1860

MS: Kentucky. Published: BGLL, I, p. 189.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | W. | Janry 12th 1860

Mr Wilkie Collins regrets that an evening engagement for the 25th will deprive him of the pleasure of accepting Mr and Mrs Bicknell's kind invitation.

---

1. Possibly Mrs Henry Bicknell – see Pilgrim, V, p. 596 nn. 2–3. Henry's father Elahanan (1788–1861: ODNB) was a collector of paintings who had purchased 'Buying Fish' by WmC from its original owner Lord Northwicke (Memoirs, II, p. 346). See also [0475] to Mrs Bicknell of 28 June 1862.

[0331] TO SMITH, ELDER & CO., 13 JANUARY 1860

MS: NLS (MS 23180/136).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 181–182. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 189.

2. a. New Cavendish Street. W. | January 13th 1860

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, offering me the sum of Five Hundred Pounds for the copyright of "The Woman in White."<sup>2</sup>

I thank you for making me this proposal; but I cannot avail myself of it, because it requires me to part with the copyright of my book. The offer previously made to me, purchases nothing more than the right of reprint for three years (in one form), on terms with which I have every reason to be satisfied. With that offer and with those terms, then, I have closed, after waiting till I had received and read your letter.<sup>3</sup>

With thanks once more for your proposal,

I remain | Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Smith, Elder & Co

---

1. With a yellow filing wrapper: 'PUBLICATION DEPARTMENT | No. 1276 | Wilkie Collins | New Cavendish St | Date Jany 13th 1860 | Ansd n/a | Mr Williams'.

2. See [0328] to Smiths, Elder, 11 January.

3. See [0327] to Sampson Low of 11 January.

[0332] TO W. H. WILLS, 15 FEBRUARY 1860

MS: Morgan (MA Unassigned).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, p. 182. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 190.

2a New Cavendish Street | W. | Feby 15th 1860

My dear Wills,

If I don't knock up, go mad, or die, the last number of The Woman in White will appear on Wednesday the 18th or Wednesday the 25th of July next, in A.Y.R.<sup>2</sup> This is as nearly as I can calculate it, at present. I may be a week over the mark – but I am not likely to be a week under.<sup>3</sup> If you tell Lever to put the pot of inspiration on to boil at the beginning of June I think you may be sure of giving him a good six weeks' notice.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Morgan Accession Number formerly 'Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/12'. A note on the verso of the MS in an unknown hand reads: '15 Feb. 1860. Wilkie Collins ... saying that the last No of "The Woman in White" would appear on the 18th and 25 July next.'
2. Although All the Year Round was nominally published on a Saturday it actually went on sale several days earlier.
3. In fact, The Woman in White did not conclude until the issue dated 25 August, four weeks later than WC predicted.
4. Charles James Lever (1806–1872: ODNB), Anglo-Irish novelist, whose A Day's Ride: A Life's Romance was scheduled to follow The Woman in White. CD wrote to Lever six days later giving him this timetable (Pilgrim, IX, p. 215), and the serialization of A Day's Ride in fact began on 18 August.

[0333] TO J. STIRLING COYNE, 18 FEBRUARY 1860

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 190 (as to J. Sterling Coyne), amended A&C3, p. 62.

2.a. New Cavendish Street. W. | 18th February 1860

Dear Sir,

I have just learned (through an application from the manager of the Norwich Theatre) that "The Red Vial" is one of the dramas on the list of The Dramatic Authors' Society.

If it be possible to take it out of the list again, will you oblige me by doing so? After the reception accorded to the play in London, I have no desire to give that acutely-critical portion of the British public which frequents Theatres any second opportunity of taking their dose of dramatic medicine out of "The Red Vial."<sup>1</sup>

I remain, | Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
J. Stirling Coyne Esq

---

1. See [0302] to Coyne of 6 May 1859.

[0334] TO CHARLES WARD, APRIL 1859–MID MARCH 1860<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /73). Published: BGLL, I, p. 190.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Thursday

My dear Ward,

Come and take pot-luck tomorrow at six. I have been all but laid up – but dieting and physic are beginning to set me on my ricketty [sic] legs again.

(In haste) | Ever yours | WC

---

1. Dating from the address only.

[0335] TO CHARLES WARD, APRIL 1859–MID MARCH 1860<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /74). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 190–191.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Saturday

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for the money, which came here safely, while I was in bed – the d—d green tea having kept me awake till seven o'clock this morning. My head feels fearfully fuddled – and I am just off to the Hair-Cutter's to have it "Shampoed".

Ever yours WC

---

1. Dating from the address only.

[0336] TO CHARLES WARD, APRIL 1859–MID MARCH 1860<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/75). Published: BGLL, I, p. 191.

2.a. New Cavendish Street | Tuesday

My dear Ward,

Will you put three guineas (£3.3.-) into the enclosed letter – seal it – and send it by one of your porters to the address on the envelope? – It is a subscription – I am told to pay it to that address – and I shall not be able to get there myself tomorrow or next day.<sup>2</sup> So if you can manage this for me without trouble, it will be a mighty convenience to

Yours ever | WC

I will bring the £3.3. with me when I dine with you on Thursday. Please keep the money for the cheque (£35.5) for me in your drawer<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Dating from the address only.

2. The subscription remains untraced and could be for a new book, a charitable fund, or a club.

3. Presumably a cheque drawn on a Coutts account which was cashed rather than paid in as no such payment is recorded in HC's bank account (Coutts: Exors WmC).

[0337] TO FANNY MITCHELL,<sup>1</sup> 23 MARCH [1859–60]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 191–192.

2 Clarence Terrace | March 23rd

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I have been away from Clarence Terrace for two days, or I should sooner have thanked you for your kind invitation. I accept it with the greatest pleasure – although my guilty conscience tells me that I hardly deserve to dine again in Great Stanhope Street, after allowing so many weeks to pass without calling there. My only excuse is that I have been far from well since I last had the pleasure of seeing you, and that I have been, until the last two or three days, condemned to lead a hermit's life in consequence.

Believe me | Dear Mrs Mitchell | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Fanny Georgiana Jane Mitchell, née Hasler (1831–1917), wife of Alexander Mitchell (1831–73), Scottish magistrate and Independent Liberal MP for Berwick-on-Tweed from 1865–68 (see Michael Stenton, Who's Who of British Members of Parliament). The Mitchells lived at 6 Great Stanhope Street during the 1860s, when WC seems to have been a dinner guest with some regularity.

2. The use of HC's Clarence Terrace address suggests a date in 1859, though WC still called regularly for letters throughout 1860, leaving the later dating as a possibility.

[0338] TO ANNE BENSON PROCTER,<sup>1</sup> 26 MARCH 1860

MS: Parrish (Box 5/7). Published: BGLL, I, p. 192.

12. Harley Street. W. | March 26th 1860

My dear Mrs Procter,

I have only waited to write to you and ask how the air of Richmond succeeds with Mr Procter, until I could find my note-paper. In plainer words, I have been moving, since I saw you last, into new rooms, on your side of Portland Place,<sup>2</sup> at No 12. Harley Street. I carry about with me an infinite quantity of “litter” and have been, and am still (except that I have found my note-paper) in a state of confusion which has, I think, definitely upset my “mental balance”. Did you find when you last moved that you could not get rid of the carpenter? I can't. He has been working with me ever since last week. He was putting up curtain-poles at one end of the room, today, and I was writing a strong effect of suspended interest at the other. He is coming tomorrow to saw something off, and he will look in, the day after, to put something on. He is a tall mild deliberate man, with a sympathetic smile – and I don't at all see my way to the end of our connection, unless any friends of mine in the neighbourhood London [sic] (say at Richmond) will be so very kind as to give him a job, and keep him at it for a good long time. I can strongly recommend him.

Seriously, when you have five minutes to spare tell me, by a little note, how Mr Procter profits by the Richmond air – and pray give him my kindest regards in the mean time. I could not go to Mr Chorley's party on Friday,<sup>3</sup> and should have missed dining with you, if you had remained in town, through the usual violent cold of the season which has kept me in-doors until today. I hope you have quite got rid of your cold. I wish I could try change of air too – but, (setting my work aside altogether) it is impossible to break my engagements with the Carpenter.

Believe me | Dear Mrs Procter | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Anne Benson Procter, née Skepper (1799–1888, ONDB), born in York, wife of Bryan Waller Procter (1787–1874), a barrister and close friend of CD, who also wrote under the pseudonym Barry Cornwall. Although Collins was close to him, no letters to Procter are known. His English Songs and Other Small Poems (London: Chapman and Hall, 1856), was in WC's library at his death with the inscription 'Wilkie Collins Esqr | with the Author's | Kind Regards', along with three other books (Baker 2002, p. 97). Their daughter Adelaide Anne (1825–64) was a writer and poet who, like her father, contributed to CD's periodicals Household Words and All the Year Round.

2. The Procters lived at 32 Weymouth Street, just a few hundred yards from WC's new home. His previous lodgings had been on the other side of the main road, Portland Place.

3. Henry Fothergill Chorley (1808–72), music and literary critic of the Athenæum, friend of CD and contributor to Household Words and All the Year Round.

[0339] TO SAMPSON LOW, 13 APRIL 1860

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 193.

12. Harley Street. W. | April 13th 1860

My dear Sir,

I promised to send you word what number of pages there were in the 1st and 2nd volumes.<sup>1</sup> Here is the calculation:xx

Vol I. 71 pages of All The Year Round

Vol II. 83 pages of „

=

The 3rd Volume will be from 70 to 75 pages – not more, I think I can say certainly.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Sampson Low Esqre /

P.S. I send by this post (under another cover) the Friday's supply of duplicates

---

1. Of The Woman in White.

[0340] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT,<sup>1</sup> 19 APRIL 1860

MS: Huntington (HH 80). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 193–194.

12. Harley Street. W. | Thursday April 19th

My dear Hunt,

If you can come here at three o'clock tomorrow afternoon (Friday) we will go on together to Dickens's. He will be prepared to see us and will give us all the advice he can with the greatest pleasure.<sup>2</sup>

If you can't come, send me the particulars of the bargain in a letter, and I will put them to Dickens – but it would be of course much better if he saw you – so be here at 3 tomorrow afternoon

if you possibly can.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins
W. Holman Hunt Esqr.

---

1. William Holman Hunt (1827–1910: ODNB), painter and founder member of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. Close friend of WC and best man to CAC at his wedding to Kate Dickens on 17 July 1860. Hunt represented WC when he was too ill to attend HC’s funeral (see [0829] and [0830] to Hunt of 19 and 21 March 1868) and he was the dedicatee of The Evil Genius (see 11 September 1886). One of Hunt’s patrons, Thomas Combe of Oxford, was also a friend of the Collins family.

2. WC proposed this meeting with CD, who was to advise Holman Hunt on the price for his picture ‘Finding of Christ in the Temple’, on which he had worked for six years. For an account of the discussion with WC and the meeting with CD, see Hunt, II, pp. 187–190. See also Robinson 1951, p. 124.

[0341] TO SAMPSON LOW, 20 APRIL 1860

MS: Wolff Collection, note on inside flap of envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 194.

12. Harley Street. W. | April 20th 1860

The Woman In White | Duplicates<sup>2</sup>
Weekly Part 27} 5 Pages. Pub<sup>d</sup> May 23rd
A. Y. R. No 57}

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘Sampson Low Esqr | 47. Ludgate Hill | E.C.’, postmarked as dated.
2. Copy for the triple-decker edition.

[0342] TO THE REV. CHAUNCY TOWNSHEND, 25 APRIL 1860

MS: Wisbech, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 194.

12. Harley Street. | W. | Wednesday

My dear Mr Townshend,

Many thanks for your kind invitation – I shall be delighted to dine with you tomorrow at 6 and to shake hands with you once more on your return to Norfolk Street.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘The Rev<sup>d</sup> C. Hare Townshend | 21 Norfolk Street | Park Lane | W’, and postmarked ‘LONDON-SW | 5 | AP 25 | 60’.

[0343] TO W. H. WILLS, 5 MAY 1860

MS: Johns Hopkins (in extra-illustrated copy of Forster, Life of Charles Dickens, 2nd edn (London: Chapman & Hall, 1872), III, p. 38). Published: BGLL, I, p. 195.

12. Harley St. W. | May 5th 1860

My dear Wills,

I will concede the right of translating The Woman In White into German for twenty five pounds. This is, I think, the least it is possible for me to ask for it – I claim, and get, higher terms for authorising French translations, and I hope Mrs [Wedden] will find the Leipzig publisher willing to treat on the arrangement proposed.<sup>1</sup>

I am very glad to hear you are not the worse for the gallant manner in which you “toed” the social “scratch” on Wednesday last.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

W.H. Wills, Esqr

It may be as well to say that I have made arrangements for registering “The Woman In White”, abroad, wherever the law requires it – in the event of publishers of translations, not agreeing to my terms.

---

1. Probably the married name of Marie Scott, whose translation Die Frau in Weiss was published by Voigt & Günther of Leipzig in 1862. Her German translation of Armadale appeared from the same house in 1866–7. For the most complete listing of nineteenth-century German translations of WC’s work, see GV.

2. The ‘scratch’ is the line across the centre of a boxing ring where the combatants are brought prior to the fight – they ‘toe the scratch’. WC also uses the metaphor in [0476] to Frank Beard of 30 June 1862. (The image was one popular with CD – see to Beard, 1 October 1856, Pilgrim, VIII, p. 196, and to WC, 24 October 1860, Pilgrim, IX, p. 331.) The event in question here is unclear. WC writes on Saturday and refers to Wednesday 2 May 1860. This might be the dinner to say farewell to Charles Dickens Jr, then off to Hong Kong – see CD to Beard, 28 April 1860, Pilgrim, IX, pp. 243–244, and CD to Cerjat, 3 May 1860, Pilgrim, IX, pp. 246–47.

[0344] TO GEORGINA STEEPLE,<sup>1</sup> 12 MAY 1860

MS: Wolff Collection, envelope only.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 195, amended A&C6, p. 17.

Miss Georgina Steeple | 87, Wellington Road, | Edgbaston, | Birmingham

---

1. Georgina M. Steeple (b. 1849), daughter of John Steeple (b. 1824) and Martha Steeple (b. 1823) both landscape painters. Identified at this address, Census 7 April 1861 (RG09 2123/10/16).

2. Postmarked as dated.

[0345] TO JANET CHAMBERS,<sup>1</sup> 15 MAY 1860

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Priestley, pp. 103–104; Coleman, p. 60; BGLL, I, p. 196 (all as to Miss Chambers), amended A&C6, p. 17.

12. Harley Street W. | May 15th 1860

I beg to assure Miss Chambers, solemnly, that nobody about whom she is interested and over whom the undersigned can exercise benevolent control, shall come to any harm. If she will look at the number published tomorrow,<sup>2</sup> she will see that Laura is not murdered, and in another week she will know that Anne Catherick is caught. In the same two numbers, Miss Halcombe’s whereabouts is satisfactorily ascertained, and Miss Halcombe’s recovery positively asserted.

If this categorical explanation be only half as acceptable to Miss Chambers, as the perusal of Miss Chambers’s note was to the lucky individual who has excited her interest in his story, that individual will consider these few lines as the most agreeable literary composition in which he has been engaged for many a long day past.

(Signed) Wilkie Collins<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Janet Chambers (1836–1863), twin sister of Eliza Chambers (1836–1909) and younger sister of Nina Lehmann, née Chambers. Eliza married Sir William Overend Priestley (1829–1900) who was knighted in 1893. In her autobiography she introduces the letter thus: ‘My twin wrote to Wilkie Collins saying she could not wait any longer, and must know the fate of Laura, etc. The following was the reply she received.’ (p. 103).

2. In All The Year Round, 19 May 1860.

3. Despite this unusual valediction which might suggest a copy (indeed, the catalogue at Texas assumes this is the case), the entire letter is in WC’s hand.

[0346] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 18 MAY 1860

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 61; BGLL, I, pp. 196–197.

12. Harley Street W. | May 18th 1860

My dear Mrs Ward,

Many thanks for your kind invitation. I am most unluckily plunged over head and ears in all sorts of evening engagements just at this time, and, I am sorry to say, Thursday the 24th is one of the evenings which is no longer at my own disposal. I have no choice therefore but to ask you to accept my excuses, and to remember that my absence on Thursday is to be attributed to my “misfortune” and not to my “fault”.

Give my love to Ward and the children. I can get to see nobody in the day time (while my story is still on my hands)<sup>1</sup> – or I should long since have found my way to Notting Hill<sup>2</sup>

Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The serial run of The Woman in White ended on 25 August. WC still faced more than another two months’ work – see [0357] to HC, 26 July 1860.

2. In west London, where the Wards then resided in Lansdowne Road – see [0398] to Henrietta Ward of 15 February 1861.

[0347] TO [GEORGE SAMUEL] GREGORY,<sup>1</sup> 24 MAY 1860

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 197–198.

12. Harley Street | London. W. | May 24th 1860

My dear Gregory,

Your kind letter has followed me to this house, where I have got better lodgings than I had in New Cavendish Street, and where I heartily wish there was a chance of our seeing you this summer.

Your invitation could not have arrived at a more welcome time. I have been working ever since last autumn, at a periodical story (“The Woman In White”) in All The Year Round, with the press clattering close behind me, all the time. The story has proved to be by far the greatest success I have made yet, both here and in America – but the perpetual strain of it has almost knocked me up, in spite of all encouragements to go on. I shall have done, I hope and believe, some time in August – and, after that, the prospect you offer of blessed country quiet, and comfortable talk, without the dismal ceremonies, chatterings, and general confusions of the London Tower of Babel and its “Society”, is the holiday of all others that I shall like best.

[thirteen erased lines]<sup>2</sup>

... holidays, before I break loose from my desk.

I shall know the period of my emancipation more certainly, as the summer advances – and I will then write again, and tell you exactly when we can come, so as to be quite sure of suiting your convenience. I don’t<sup>3</sup> like to “halloo till I am out of the wood” – but if I don’t see the [hare] in September, at latest, I shall never see it at all. My main ambition now is to [roll in] “The [Green], Stroud”. I have two characters to kill and a character to marry – and an intricate story to wind up in a neat point, before that time.

Meanwhile, many thanks again. When I next write I hope it will be to propose the day.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Probably George Samuel Gregory (c. 1813–1900), surgeon. The relationship to WC and his family is not entirely clear, but Gregory was born in St Pancras and died in Holborn, though he spent much of his medical career as a general practitioner at Beeches Green, Stroud, Gloucestershire – see the Post Office Directory of Gloucestershire, Bath and Bristol (London: Kelly, 1856) and the Census records for 1861–91. This must be the Gregory mentioned in [0373] to HC of 12, 13, 15 September 1860, whose ‘delightful old-fashioned house’ just outside Stroud WC had just returned from, and the Gregory mentioned in [0361] to Edward Ward of 3 August 1860 is presumably the same person. Given the use of ‘our’ and ‘we’ in this letter, it seems likely that Gregory had already met Caroline Graves in London and had invited her also to Stroud. The erased passage may then refer to WC’s illicit relationship, which some owner of the letter felt it desirable to suppress.

2. The lines are heavily obliterated in a different ink, almost certainly not by WC himself. The first eleven are totally illegible. The last two words of the twelfth and the final line have been deciphered here.

3. From this point to the end of the paragraph, the text appears on the verso of the heavily cancelled passage and is extremely difficult to decipher.

[0348] TO HENRY BLACKETT,<sup>1</sup> 31 MAY 1860

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 198.

12 Harley Street, W. | May 31st 1860

My dear Sir,

My brother (who will present this letter to you) is desirous of arranging for the republication of a series of papers, of which he is the writer, which have appeared with great success in the Columns of “All The Year Round”.<sup>2</sup> You will much oblige me if you will take his proposal into consideration and let him know the result.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To Henry Blackett Esq.

---

1. Of Hurst & Blackett, who published WC’s The Queen of Hearts (1859).

2. In the event the articles were published by Sampson Low as The Eye-Witness (1860).

[0349] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 2 JUNE 1860

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 198–199.

12. Harley Street W. | 2nd June 1860

My dear Pal[grave Simpson],<sup>1</sup>

This is a penitential letter – partaking, at the same time, of the nature of a sermon, inasmuch as it divides itself into three heads.

First, I am sorry for not having told you of my recent change of abode, and for so having caused your letter to be sent to the wrong house.

Secondly, I am sorry that the question that Lady Stracey<sup>2</sup> has paid me the compliment of asking through you, should have remained for some days without a reply, when it ought to have been answered immediately.

And thirdly, I am sorry, now that I do answer it, to have nothing satisfactory to say. The Lighthouse (like my other plays) has never been printed – my perverse object being to keep my dramas off the stage, in all cases (public or private) in which I could not superintend their representation myself. The only copies of The Lighthouse in existence are my own copy, which is illegible to anyone but myself, and the “prompt copy” at The Olympic Theatre. I have declined so many applications for permission to transcribe this last, that I am afraid I can hardly alter my resolution (however I might wish to do so in the present case) without giving reasonable cause for offence in other quarters. Will you therefore make my apologies to Lady Stracey, and assure her that if I see any future reason to alter my determination, as far as to print my play privately, I will take care to make atonement by sending her one of the earliest copies.

Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins
J. [Palgrave Simpson] Esqre<sup>3</sup>

---

1. The latter part of the addressee’s name has been cut from the letter (fortunately without obliterating the text on the verso significantly), but enough of the text remains to make this reading inevitable.

2. Presumably Lady Charlotte Stracey, née Denne (d. 1884), wife of Sir Henry Josias Stracey, fifth Baronet, of Rackheath Hall, Norfolk, MP (see Pilgrim, VIII, p. 5). The marriage took place in 1835 and the succession to the baronetcy in 1856 – see Lady Stracey’s obituary in the Times, 15 April 1884, p. 3e. Presumably Lady Stracey wished to stage an amateur production of the play.

3. Again the addressee line has been cut out, leaving enough strokes to make this reading highly likely.

[0350] TO J. BUNTING,<sup>1</sup> 12 JUNE 1860

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11, formerly laid in The Woman in White (New York: Harper, 1860), with envelope).<sup>2</sup>
Published: BGLL, I, 30–51.

12. Harley Street, Cavendish Square | London. | June 12th1860

Dear Sir,

Your kind letter was forwarded to me a day or two since. Pray accept my sincere assurances that I have read it with great pleasure. I should be insensible indeed, if I did not feel gratified and encouraged by such a recognition as you send to me of the appeal which I am now trying to make to the sympathy and interest of readers in your country and in mine – and I am especially pleased to find that the part of my story which was perhaps the most difficult to write, is exactly that part which you think the most successfully written. “The Woman In White” has made me many friends both in England and America – and I am glad to know that I number you among them.

Believe me, | Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

J. Bunting Esqre

-
1. Unidentified American, writing in praise of The Woman in White.
  2. Signed and directed to ‘J. Bunting Esqre | Darby | Pennsylvania | U.S. | America’, the postmark illegible.

[0351] TO NINA LEHMANN, WITH HER SISTERS ELIZA PRIESTLEY AND AMELIA CHAMBERS, 12 JUNE 1860

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 156. Published: B&C, I, p. 194 (dated 12 June 1861, and as to Nina Lehmann only). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 200.

12. Harley Street. W. | Tuesday June 12th

– | Three Letters |–

I

To Mrs Lehmann

Forgive me for being the innocent cause of your putting your foot in it. It was very kind of [del] you to try the experiment. I will prove my gratitude by doing everything you tell me. In one respect only, I have been the worse for the delightful party at Hallé’s<sup>2</sup> – the “Great Kreutzer Sonata”<sup>3</sup> has upset me about classical music. I am afraid I don’t like classical music, after all – I am afraid I am not the Amateur I once thought myself. The whole violin part of “The Great K.S.” appeared to me to be the musical expression of a varying and violent stomach-ache, with intervals of hiccups.

WC

Letter II

To the Lady described as “my sister Ella” (supposed to be Mrs Priestley???)<sup>4</sup>

=

Pray accept my best thanks for the double invitation. I will do my best to slip away in good time from a dinner-engagement for Friday – on which occasion we will unite our efforts (if Doctor Priestley and Mr Lehmann see no objection) with a view to “getting Mrs Lehmann’s foot out of it” – if we possibly can.

Letter III

To “A.C.” (supposed to be Rondinelle???)<sup>5</sup>

Yes. I think it is a great shame. In your case, I should take an opportunity of speaking privately on the subject to Chorley.<sup>6</sup>

WC<sup>7</sup>

I remain, Ladies, | your obliged and devoted servant | Wilkie Collins

---

1. This typically flirtatious letter is written not just to Nina Lehmann, but also to two of her younger sisters who WC must have met at a musical gathering. Robert Chambers had eight daughters in all, though only six were still alive at the time of his death in 1871 (ODNB). See also William Chambers, Memoir of Robert Chambers (Edinburgh: W. & R. Chambers, 1872) pp. 291 & 329.

2. Charles Hallé (1819–1895: ODNB), pianist and conductor specialising in Beethoven. From 1849 Hallé settled in Manchester where a decade later he founded the orchestra that still bears his name, though he also continued to give recitals in the metropolis. At this time Hallé gave evening recitals on Thursdays during the season at his home at 8 Mansfield Street, near Cavendish Square (see Robert Beale, Charles Hallé: A Musical Life (Ashgate, 2007), pp. 72–73), so perhaps the reference here is to such an event on Thursday, June 7th.

3. Beethoven's Sonata for violin and piano no. 9 in A, op. 47.

4. This must refer to Eliza, Robert Chambers's fourth daughter who went by the pet name of 'Ella'. In 1856 she had married Dr (later Sir) William Overend Priestley (1829–1900; ODNB), surgeon. Her identical twin sister Janet Chambers died suddenly in late 1863 – see [0561] to HC, 13 November 1863.

5. This must refer to Robert Chambers's fifth daughter Amelia Chambers, who was shortly to be married to her brother-in-law Rudolf Lehmann, the painter. The joke concerning Rondinelle has not been elucidated – though Amelia was reputed to be a very talented musician.

6. Presumably Henry Fothergill Chorley (1808–1872: ODNB), music and literary critic of the Athenæum, though the subject in question remains unclear.

7. Between his initials and the postscript, WC draws a horizontal line across the page.

[0352] TO CHARLES WARD, JUNE 1860<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/18). Published: B&C, I, pp. 182–183. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 200.

12. Harley Street. W. | Friday

My dear Ward,

Has Caroline written to ask you to come here and take pot-luck on Monday at six? I don't know – she has gone out. Come /on Monday/ – and please bring with you a £10 note, a £5 ~~pound~~ note, and five sovereigns – which I will exchange for a £20 note, which is no use to me in its present form.<sup>2</sup> Also look at the Voltaire next /to/ the fire-engine place in Chandos Street – and tell me what you think of it.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I am slaving to break the neck of The Woman In White – and get done in 5 numbers more. I shan't have finished the number I am now doing till Sunday night

---

1. General dating from the relation to the following letter and the composition of The Woman in White, which makes mid-June (Friday 15th or 22nd) more likely.

2. Large denomination printed Bank of England notes had been available since 1853; how WC acquired his 'useless' £20 banknote is unknown.

3. The Fire Station at 44, Chandos Street (now Chandos Place, behind Coutts bank) was built in 1836 for the London Fire Engine Establishment and closed in 1884 by the Metropolitan Board of Works. Next door at 43, Chandos Street, were the premises of John Miller, bookseller, who issued the monthly Miller's London Librarian and Book-Buyer's Gazette: A Monthly List of Valuable Second-Hand Books.

[0353] TO CHARLES WARD, JUNE 1860

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 / 19). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 200–201.

12. Harley Street. W. | 7 o'clock, Sunday

My dear Ward,

I have just done – and I write to say that I will call on you at Coutts's tomorrow, to change the £20 note – and to bring you back here to dinner, so that we may look at the Other Voltaire, and secure that before it is gone. I am sorry about Miller's it was the best-bound of the two.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I will call a minute or two before 4. We don't dine till six – so there is plenty of time to hunt Voltaire, unless you want to go home first?

---

1. A seventy-volume set of Voltaire's Œuvres complètes (Paris, 1784), bound in rubbed calf, with a life, and a portrait and plates by Moreau, was in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 159).

[0354] TO CHARLES WARD, 5 JULY 1860

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/20). Published: BGLL, I, p. 201.

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>1</sup> | Thursday July 5th

My dear Ward,

I am obliged to end the story in August to avoid running into a new volume – and with the prospect of one double number at least to write, I have less time to spare than ever. Will you kindly pay my insurance for me (I enclose the paper)? and will you also, in going home, ascertain the right address for the enclosed letter (at Hachette’s London shop)<sup>2</sup> – write the address – and send the letter (paid) to Paris, with your French correspondence?

Lastly will you come and take pot-luck here at six on Monday next, when I can pay you the insurance money – I have no evening before Monday.

Ever yours | WC

I hope these commissions won’t trouble you – I am half distracted with the hurry about ending the book

-
1. WC uses printed notepaper with the address in black Gothic type, the first extant letter on his own personalized stationery.
  2. The letter has not been traced and the recipient remains uncertain.

[0355] TO CHARLES WARD, 11 JULY 1860

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/21). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 201–202.

12. Harley Street, W. | 11th July 1860

My dear Ward,

Many thanks. In case I can’t get to you for a day or two, I write to say that I shall be delighted to have the Lafitte,<sup>1</sup> if I can have it without the Champagne. I say this, because I possess a year’s consumption of Champagne at least – and it would be mere superfluity to get more, even of the very best. The Claret is a different matter – and I embrace the opportunity if I can get it.

Ever yours | WC

I am a little better – but horribly fagged

-
1. See the reference to a purchase of wine in [0368] to Charles Ward, 14 August 1860.

[3374] TO SAMPSON LOW, 13 JULY 1860<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection (L2968). Published: A&C14, p. 3.

12. Harley Street<sup>2</sup>
July 13th 1860

The Woman in White

<sup>3</sup>The Duplicate will be sent with the remainder of the number, on Tuesday next.

+Single Proof. Portion of Double Number

Weekly Part 39}<sup>4</sup>

A.Y.R. No 69} — Pages. Pub<sup>d</sup> Augt 15th

-
1. Sampson Low was publishing the three-volume version of The Woman in White novel and needed WC’s marked up proofs to set it. See to Sampson Low [0327] 11 January 1860.
  2. The letter is written entirely on the inside of the envelope flap which was secured with a red seal. The front of the envelope is addressed:

Sampson Low Esqr | 47. Ludgate Hill | E. C. | Wilkie Collins

with the signature contained in a curved line. Postmarked 'LONDON | 8M9 | JY13 | 60' with two penny red stamps which at the time indicated it weighed between ½ and 1 oz (14-28g). For other examples of envelopes containing proofs, see to him [0339] 13 April 1860, [0341] 20 April 1860, [0359] 30 July 1860.

3. Inserted diagonally and referred to this place by a +.

4. The enclosure – not present – was apparently proofs of the penultimate part of The Woman in White which was to be published in All the Year Round, vol. 3 no. 69, dated 18 August but as always on sale from the previous Wednesday, i.e. 15th, pp. 433-440. It is not clear what the 'double number' refers to though the last number was nearly 23 columns long compared with typically 10 or 11. However, the previous two numbers were also longer at 18.5 and 16 columns.

[0356] TO ANNE BENSON PROCTER, 23 JULY 1860

MS: Parrish (Box 5/7). Published: B&C, I, p. 183. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 202.

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>1</sup> | Monday July 23rd

My dear Mrs Procter,

Except the day of the Wedding (when I was tied to my sister-in-law's petticoat string)<sup>2</sup> I have been tied to The Woman in White's petticoat string, like a dog to his kennel. The reward of this solitary confinement /under a female turnkey/ is not [del] far off. I hope and believe I shall finish the book (by dint of writing double numbers at the end) this week! So I accept your kind invitation with the greater pleasure, in the firm faith that the strain of the last ten months will /have/ been taken off me, when I sit at your table on Monday the 30th.

ever yours | Wilkie Collins

The Wedding was a pattern wedding in two things – nobody made any speeches and the bride and bridegroom had to go away before the breakfast was over. There was also only the /most/ moderate allowance of tears, at the last moment – and they were shed to the accompaniment of cheerful howling from Forster and a shower of old shoes flung after the married pair as they fled into the carriage.<sup>3</sup> They have gone to Calais and they find that intensely dreary town quite delightful. Such is Love!

---

1. WC uses Gothic printed water-marked paper.

2. On 17 July WC's brother Charles, 32, was married to CD's twenty-year-old daughter Catherine Elizabeth Macready Dickens (1839–1929) at St Mary's, the Parish Church of Higham, by the Rev. Joseph Hindle. For CD's account, see to Helen Dickens, 19 July 1860, Pilgrim, IX, pp. 273–274. For a description of CD's private grief, see Gladys Storey, Dickens and Daughter (London: Muller, 1939), pp. 105–106.

3. John Forster was one of the witnesses to the marriage.

[0357] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 26 JULY 1860

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/56). Published: B&C, I, p. 184. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 202.

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>1</sup> | London
Thursday, 26th July 1860 | five o'Clock. P.M.

=

Hooray ! ! ! ! !

I have this instant written at the bottom of the four hundred and ninetieth page of my manuscript<sup>2</sup> the two noblest words in the English language and, what is more, I have wound the story up in a very new and very pretty manner. We shall see if the public are of my opinion

— The End —

Send me a line to say how you got to Maidenhead – and give my kindest remembrances to the Langtons – and tell me if you are better.

I can't write any more – I must go out and walk off the work and the excitement of winning the battle against the infernal periodical system, at last.

Ever affectly yours | WC<sup>3</sup>

1. WC uses Gothic printed water-marked paper.
2. The 490-page autograph manuscript signed of 'The Woman in White,' dated 15 August 1859 to 26 July 1860, is now held at Pierpont Morgan (MA 79).
3. The signature is scored on top of the 'W' and underneath the 'C', with dots between the two letters above and below, a form which remains constant with WC from this period onwards.

[0358] TO THE REV. HELY HUTCHINSON SMITH,<sup>1</sup> 27 JULY 1860

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 202–203.

12. Harley Street, W. | London | July 27th 1860

My dear Sir,

I must begin by apologising for not having answered your letter earlier. All my correspondence has latterly fallen sadly in arrear, through the pressure of my literary engagements – and I have really and truly not had time to write to you before today.

I well remember my pleasant experience at the Scilly Islands – and the very large part of it for which I was indebted to Mr Augustus Smith's hospitality and to your kindness in giving my friend Mr Pigott and myself the advantage of your local knowledge.<sup>2</sup> Any assistance I can give you towards the publication of your poem, I shall be delighted to place at your service.

The "Lay" is so much too long for "All The Year Round" (which never publishes poems of any length) that it would be useless to send it to that periodical. One of the old-established magazines would be far more likely to afford space for you. The "Ingolsby" style is getting a little out of date now in London – and, for this reason, I should not recommend your trying any of the many periodicals which have recently started into existence. Perhaps, the best and safest plan would be for you to send me the Mss here (keeping a copy of it in case of accidents by post &c), and to let me submit it to critical inspection in quarters where I can insure its receiving fair treatment. I am about to leave town for a little while, but I shall be back again on literary business, about the 15th of August – and shall remain in London for a week, probably, when I can send your poem to the magazine which I think, on consideration, most likely to receive it.

Believe me, | My dear Sir, | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins
To/ | The Revd Hely Hutchinson Smith.

---

1. Author of many theological works found at the BL; cousin of Augustus Smith, 'Lord Proprietor' of the Isles of Scilly (from 1834) and founder of Tresco Abbey.

2. Pigott and WC took a twelve-day sailing trip from Weston-super-Mare in Somerset to the Scilly Isles in the last two weeks of September 1855. WC wrote up the trip in 'The Cruise of the Tomtit', Household Words (22 December 1855), pp. 490–499.

[3314] TO G. W. HEYWOOD,<sup>1</sup> 28 JULY 1860

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C11, p. 6.

12. Harley Street, W. | London
July 28th 1860

Sir,

I hope you will excuse the long delay of this reply. Your kind letter, addressed to me at the Garrick Club, (which I have not lately attended so often as usual) was only placed in my hands today. I hasten to comply with the request which you honour me by making, and very gladly add my autograph to my apology.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To/ | G. W. Heywood Esqre

---

1. George Washington Heywood (1842–1896) was a papermaker, the son of Abel Heywood (1810–1893: ODNB), publisher, bookseller, radical politician and Mayor of Manchester from 1862 to 1863 and 1876 to 1877. At this time George was nineteen and living at home. See also [3330] of 8 January 1881 to his brother Abel Heywood Jr.

[0359] TO SAMPSON LOW, 30 JULY 1860

MS: Unknown. On sale, envelope only:<sup>1</sup> Russell Hotel, December 2003 (inserted in copy of first edition of Heart and Science). Published: BGLL, I, p. 203.

Sampson Low, Esqr | 47. Ludgate Hill | London | E. C.
Wilkie Collins

---

1. Postmarked as dated.

[0360] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 1 AUGUST 1860

MS: Huntington (HH 81). Published: B&C, I, pp. 184–185. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 203.

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>1</sup> | August 1st 1860

My dear Hunt,

I have done my book. We dine here (in celebration of the event) on Thursday August 9th at ½ past 6.<sup>2</sup> I hope you will be in town then and able to come. Send me a line to say Yes.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Holman Hunt Esq.

No dressing – or ceremony of any kind.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Gothic, centred, engraved address. The date is written centred beneath it.
2. After completing The Woman in White on 26 July 1860, WC held a celebratory dinner for old friends at Harley Street on 9 August; among the guests were Holman Hunt, Augustus Egg, and Edward Ward.
3. WC's postscript is written across the top of the sheet, above the address.

[0361] TO E. M. WARD, 3 AUGUST 1860

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 62 ; BGLL, I, pp. 203–204. Extract: Ellis, pp. 30–31; Robinson 1951, p. 145.

12. Harley Street, W. | 3rd August 1860

My dear Ned,

I have done! (except my varnishing days,<sup>1</sup> in respect of proof sheets which publisher and translators are still bothering about) – we dine here at ½ past 6, on Thursday the 9th, to drink success to the book in England, Germany, America (United States) and Canada in all which places it will be published this month.<sup>2</sup> Will you come? – No evening dress – everything in the rough – Hunt and Egg are coming and Walker<sup>3</sup> – and perhaps Gregory<sup>4</sup> and Lehmann<sup>5</sup> and H. Bullar. Cast respectability to the winds and write me a line to say you will come!

I congratulate you on the new Miss Ward.<sup>6</sup> Tell Mrs Ward I received her kind message from Walker, and shall not forget to profit by it. I am glad to hear she is up again already. My love to the children and especially to Alice. She looked as rosy as the morning and as good as gold, the last time I saw her.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Varnishing days – the term used for the period of touching up and giving a final coat of varnish to oil paintings on the wall where they were being exhibited, particularly at the Royal Academy summer exhibition.
2. The volume editions of The Woman in White by Sampson Low in London, Tauchnitz in Leipzig and Harper in New York – the Canadian edition has not been traced.
3. The young Frederick Walker (1840–75), painter, illustrator and engraver, who in 1871 designed the striking poster for WC's stage version of The Woman in White.
4. Presumably George Samuel Gregory, the friend living in Stroud to whom WC writes on 24 May 1860 [0347].
5. Nina's husband.

6. That is, on the birth of the Wards' fourth child, Flora. See the announcement in the 'Births' column of the Times, 24 July 1860, p. 1a: 'On Sunday, the 22nd inst., at Lansdowne-road, Notting-hill, the wife of E. M. Ward, Esq., R.A., of a daughter'.

[0362] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 6 AUGUST 1860

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, p. 204.

12. Harley Street, W. | 6th August 1860

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your letter. Some time will probably elapse before I attempt to write another story. If when I do write it, I am, through any change of present circumstances, able to propose to you a renewal of our former literary connection, I shall very gladly do so. You may rely on my not forgetting your letter, when the right time comes for remembering it.<sup>1</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. Shortly before The Woman in White appears in volume from Sampson Low, Bentley writes to try to establish an interest in WC's next novel.

[0363] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN,<sup>1</sup> 6 AUGUST 1860

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Published: Lehmann, pp. 40–1; BGLL, I, pp. 204–205, amended A&C6, p. 19.

12. Harley Street, W. | August 6th 1860

My dear Lehmann

Delighted to hear you are coming!<sup>2</sup> The only hitch in the programme is, that I can't go to Shanklin this week – as I am already engaged to Gadshill. But you will give me another chance? – and we will discuss the question of time, on Thursday. The autumn is “all before us where to choose, and Providence our guide” (Milton).<sup>3</sup> I suppose you don't feel inclined to take a cruise off the west coast of Ireland on the 15th of September? I and two other British tars propose to plough the main for a fortnight or so, on that occasion, in a Welsh boat of our own hiring.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The first surviving letter to Nina's husband Augustus Frederick Lehmann (1826–91), the son of a Hamburg merchant who moved to Edinburgh in the 1840s.
2. Presumably to the party on Thursday 9 August to celebrate the completion of The Woman in White – see [0361] to E. M. Ward of 3 August 1860.
3. Reworking the final lines of Paradise Lost.
4. The trip was with Edward Pigott and Ebenezer (later Edward) Benham – see [0368] to Charles Ward of 14 August.

[0364] TO CHARLES DICKENS, 7 AUGUST 1860

MS: Johns Hopkins.<sup>1</sup> Published: Pilgrim, IX, p. 458; B&C, I, p. 185. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 205.

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>2</sup> | August 7th 1860

My dear Dickens,

I beg to accept the renewal of my engagement with “All The Year Round” on the conditions proposed to me, which I understand to be as follows:

The engagement is to be for two years, dating from the 31st of July 1860<sup>3</sup>

My salary, for those two years, is to be seven guineas a week.<sup>4</sup>

I am to receive, during the same period, additional remuneration equivalent to one eighth share of the whole annual profits of All The Year Round paid me by cheque, at the time when the profits are regularly divided between the partners.

For this [del] additional remuneration and for my salary, I am to write for “All The Year Round” during my two years engagement, one serial story of about the same length as “The Woman In White”. The copyright of that story, on the completion of its periodical publication, to be my property.

I am also, when not engaged on the serial story, to write articles (the copyright of which is conceded to me) for “All The Year Round”, as I can, and to suggest, as I can, and to assist you in any joint periodical production of which I may feel myself able to undertake a share.

I am to have five unoccupied months to prepare my serial story, before it is wanted for “All The Year Round”.

I am not to write, during the term of my engagement, for any other periodical.<sup>5</sup>

These are the conditions on which I [del] renew my engagement,

ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Charles Dickens Esqr<sup>6</sup>

---

1. In extra-illustrated copy of John Forster, Life of Charles Dickens (2nd edn; London: Chapman & Hall, 1872), III, p. 44).

2. Centred black Gothic type.

3. In the event WC appears to have abrogated the agreement in January 1862 – see CD to WC, 5 January 1862, Pilgrim X, p. 5, and [0750] WC to Wills, 14 May 1867.

4. WC’s initial agreement with All the Year Round was for a salary of six guineas a week.

5. In fact, except for shorter fiction in All the Year Round, WC seems to have written little for periodical publication between the date of this letter and appearance of the first instalment of No Name on 15 March 1862.

6. On the reverse of the blank integral sheet in another hand: ‘7 August 1860 | Wilkie Collins | 12 Harley Street | Agreeing to renew his | Engagement with “All the | Year Round” – and Stipu-| lating the Terms’. Written the other way up at the bottom of the sheet in another hand is: ‘August 7th 1860 | Wilkie Collins | About his engagement | with “All The Year Round”’.

[0365] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, 7 AUGUST 1860

MS: Trinity (Houghton 6/78). Published: BGLL, I, p. 205.

12. Harley Street, W. | 7th August 1860

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my best thanks for your kind invitation. I have an engagement – unluckily in Somersetshire – for the 20th of this month.<sup>1</sup> If I can in any way manage to defer it for a week, and so avail myself of the chance of paying you a visit, I shall most gladly do so. In the event of my succeeding I will write a day or two before the 18th, and report myself a free man at the time when you kindly propose to receive me.<sup>2</sup>

Meanwhile,

Believe me | Very sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins

Richard Monckton Milnes, Esqr M.P.

---

1. The planned trip to Somerset remains unidentified, though WC did go to Stroud in Gloucestershire in the second week of September. See [0373] to HC, 12, 13, 15 September 1860.

2. Monckton Milnes seems to have replied immediately with the suggestion of moving the invitation forward – see [0366] to Anne Procter of the following day.

[0366] TO ANNE BENSON PROCTER, 8 AUGUST 1860

MS: Trinity (Houghton 6/79). Summary: B&C, I, p. 186. Published: BGLL, I, p. 206.

12. Harley Street, W. | August 8th 1860

My dear Mrs Procter,

I have written to thank Mr Procter for a very kind note,<sup>1</sup> and I must write to thank you on the same account. I am delighted to think that the Dedication should have been so well-timed – and that my small tribute has found its way to you when the intention of it (the only part of the least value) expresses itself in the most welcome terms.<sup>2</sup> I do most earnestly hope that the new freedom from very harassing responsibilities will have the best effect on Mr Procter's health. The resignation will have its bright side then – and will be much pleasanter to look at than it seems now.<sup>3</sup>

I have had two very friendly notes from Mr Milnes, inviting me to Yorkshire – and I am casting about among many previous engagements to find a few days to go. He proposes my travelling with you and Miss Procter<sup>4</sup> on the 15th – which I should have liked of all things – but I have unluckily a last dinner engagement on that day. I am going to try for the 16th, and to write to Mr Milnes, the moment I can feel certain about it. In the meantime, my only complaint of my host, is against his handwriting. I am told that the station is “[ProRingley]” and that the house is “[Fystis]”. These two proper names are fac-similes (!) will you charitably translate them?<sup>5</sup> and add to the obligation by telling me at what hour the express leaves King's Cross – that is to say, in case you know it already. God forbid I should ask you to plunge into Bradshaw!<sup>6</sup>

Yours very truly | Wilkie Collins

I am afraid we shall be after our time with the book. I doubt our being ready by the 15th – though I shall have done then.

---

1. This letter has not been traced.

2. Referring to the dedication to The Woman in White: ‘To Bryan Waller Procter; from one of his younger brethren in literature, who sincerely values his friendship, and who gratefully remembers many happy hours spent in his house’.

3. Bryan Waller Procter was a member of the Lunacy Commission from 1832 until his official retirement in February 1861 at the age of 73.

4. That is, the poet Adelaide Anne Procter (1825–64).

5. Milnes's residence was in fact at Fryston Hall, near Knottingley, Yorkshire. The words in square brackets represent our best efforts to reproduce WC's facsimiles in type.

6. The railway time-table.

[0367] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 10 AUGUST 1860<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 207.

12 Harley Street | Friday

My dear mother,

Only these two letters and cards from Doctor Elliotson and Doctor Watson.<sup>2</sup> I shall put the last touches to the book today – and I go tomorrow for a day or two to Gadshill – then next week, to Mr Monckton Milnes in Yorkshire<sup>3</sup> – then back here again, and on to Somersetshire<sup>4</sup> – then back again about the 12th of next month to prepare for the cruise.

The book will, no doubt, be published next week.<sup>5</sup>

Write me word when you go to Oxford, and how you are. The painters are out of the house and Mary is back.<sup>6</sup>

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. The trips to Gad's Hill and Yorkshire mentioned in the letter, plus the reference to the publication of WC's new novel, point inevitably towards this date.

2. John Elliotson (1791–1868: ODNB), Professor of Medicine, University of London, a controversial pioneer of medical hypnosis; Watson remains unidentified. WC has obviously called in at Clarence Terrace to check the mail during HC's absence.

3. See [0368] to Charles Ward of 14 August 1860.

4. See [0365] to Richard Monckton Milnes of 7 August 1860.

5. The Woman in White, which appeared in three volumes from Sampson Low around 15–16 August – see Gasson, p. 160.

6. See the reference to WC's servant Mary in [0368] to Charles Ward, 14 August 1860.

[0368] TO CHARLES WARD, 14 AUGUST 1860

12. Harley Street, W. | Tuesday August 14th

My dear Ward,

I have just got back from three days at Gadshill and am just going on again for five days more in Yorkshire (at the Milnes's).<sup>1</sup> The book, as you will infer from this, is done to the last fragment of correction, and will certainly be finished this week. Many thanks for the letter to Walter.<sup>2</sup> The book can't be worked too much in all ways – for it has been chosen (as being a noticeable novel) to become the pivot of a strike of all the librarians against Mudie. The libraries said as much to Low.<sup>3</sup> They had been waiting for a popular book to try the question – and mine is fixed on. They declare they won't subscribe for a copy except on the same terms as those granted by the trade to Mudie. Cawthorne<sup>4</sup> said he would take 50 copies, on the Mudie terms – and not one on any other. When I last saw Low he was firm, and declared that the public pressure should force the libraries to our terms. I have not seen him since my return – and I feel disposed to trust the public too. We are just coming out at the crisis of the trade attack on Mudie's monopoly – and how it will end, nobody can say.<sup>5</sup> In the country we sold 200, on the first appearance of the advertisements ten days ago – and all the agents in provincial England, say the demand for the book is very large. An early notice in the Times will certainly help us in advertising the fact of the book's publication – and that is an important point.

I shall be back on Tuesday the 21st – and shall come to the Strand, when I shall have more news.

Charley and Katie are still at Calais! in lodgings! They think it a delightful place!!! Such is love. Where they go next they have not yet settled.<sup>6</sup>

If you will pay Mr Olivier I can settle with you when I come back – You must taste the wine. It is very genuine and good – but, to my taste, rather thin.<sup>7</sup>

What weather you have had! “Unhappy Ward!” has been my perpetual ejaculation – Pigott and Benham and I go a sailing on the 15th September. We think (on the rule of contraries hitherto observed by the seasons of 1860) that the equinoctial gales will bring us lovely weather – heat and calms.

Caroline sends her kindest remembrances. We have another servant – a hybrid white-haired young person engaged to help Mary – going! The hybrid and Mary don't agree. I am sorry to lose the hybrid. She sees me into the water-closet and out of it regularly – and tries the door every time I make water. I have reason to believe that the hybrid must have seen My Person!

Every yours | WC

I wish you had dined here on the 9th. The Genoese cook really did wonders. I never eat a more perfect dinner in Paris.

---

1. See [0365] to Richard Monckton Milnes, 7 August 1860.

2. Almost certainly John Walter II, proprietor of the Times. The review of The Woman in White did not appear until 30 October 1860, p. 6a–c. See also [0574] to Charles Ward of 5 April 1864.

3. Of Sampson Low, Son & Co.

4. Presumably referring to Cawthorn, Hutt & Son, 34 Cockspur St, circulating library.

5. On the outcome, see [0369] to HC, 22 August 1860.

6. Charles had married Kate Dickens on 17 July and they went to Calais for a honeymoon. They soon left the hotel and took lodgings at 56 Rue Royale. They stayed until 1 September, when they set off for a carriage trip around Europe which CAC used for his book A Cruise Upon Wheels: The Chronicle of Some Autumn Wanderings among the Deserted Post-roads of France (2 vols, London: Routledge, 1862). See CAC to HC of 5 August 1860 (Morgan MA 3153/ 11).

7. Probably referring to the purchase of claret mentioned in [0355] to Ward of 11 July 1860 and certainly to the invitation to drink it in [0371] to him of 29 August 1860.

[2988] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 20 AUGUST 1860

MS: Texas (Ms Works, W. Collins, Ellery Queen Collection).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C1, pp. 48–49.

A Square in a Country Town.

=

“There was a bare little plot of grass in the middle, protected by a cheap wire fence. An elderly nursemaid and two children were standing in a corner of the enclosure, looking at a lean goat tethered to the grass. Two foot-passengers were talking together on one side of the pavement before the houses, and an idle little boy was leading an idle little dog along by a string on the other. I heard the dull tinkling of a piano at a distance, accompanied by the intermittent knocking of a hammer nearer at hand. These were all the sights and sounds of life that encountered me when I entered the square.”

From “The Woman In White”<sup>2</sup> | By | Wilkie Collins | August 20th 1860

---

1. Accompanied by a photograph of WC, the full-length miniature portrait by Herbert Watkins – see [0423] to him of 12 June 1861. The photograph and autograph face each other on opposite sides of a folded sheet of paper to which they have been pasted.

2. From 5. The Narrative of Walter Hartwright, VIII, where Hartwright seeks out Mrs Catherick in Welmingham, ‘an English country town in the first stage of its existence’. This appears to be the first extant example of WC providing an autograph hunter with a signed passage from one of his novels.

[0369] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 22 AUGUST 1860<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/57). Published: BGLL, I, p. 209.

12. Harley Street, W. | August 22nd

My dear Mother,

I got back from Yorkshire yesterday and go to Shanklin on Friday.<sup>2</sup> The Milnes’s were very kind – and their house was delightfully comfortable. Lofty palatial rooms – a fine park – and perpetual company. They were sorry to lose me – and I was sorry to go away.

The Woman In White has beaten the libraries – they all gave in, and the whole of the first impression was sold on the day of publication. I am going today to get my money – and I hope to hear that the second impression is doing well.

Some boxes of Katie’s are (as I hear from her sister) about to be sent to Clarence Terrace. I will tell Mary about them when I go today to see for letters.

Will Charley be at Calais for the next fortnight? I have not answered his letter yet – and I shall not have time to write till I get back from Shanklin next week.

I am glad to hear you are sleeping better. My remembrances to the Combes. In great haste
Ever yours affly | WC

I have just returned from Low’s with £500.<sup>3</sup> 350 copies of the second edition sold in five days! Making in all 1350 copies in a week from the day of publication

6 o’Clock | – Clarence Terrace / | Nothing for Charley or Katie but cards – and only one letter (enclosed) for you

---

1. Dating from, among many other details, the references to the sales of The Woman in White.

2. To visit the Lehmanns – see [0363] to Frederick Lehmann of 6 August 1860.

3. This £500 payment was almost certainly in cash – as it was when Low paid WC for No Name (see [0515] of 5 January 1863). If this is the case, WC presumably retained £200 and used the balance of £300 to open his own account at Coutts the next day, 23 August (Coutts: WC).

[0370] TO NUGENT ROBINSON,<sup>1</sup> 28 AUGUST 1860

MS: Taylor. Summary: B&C, I, pp. 187–188. Published: Robinson 1893, p. 306; BGLL, I, p. 210, amended A&C4, p. 30.

12. Harley Street, W. | August 28th 1860

Dear Sir,

I have been away from home, and my letters have not followed me so regularly as usual.

Although I am, for this reason, late in acknowledging your very kind expression of interest in my story, I am not the less sincere in assuring you of the pleasure with which I read your letter. I am really and truly proud to have deserved such a generous tribute of approval as you have sent to me.

“Marian Halcombe” is “no abstract personification of my own ideas.” The first conception of her character originated in my own observation of many women who personally, morally, and mentally resemble her. In delineating her, I have had these “living models” constantly present to my mind, and have drawn from them, now in one way and now in another, to make the complete picture which I am happy to find has so much interested you. A character in fiction can only be made true to the general experience of human nature, by a principle of selection which is broad enough to embrace many individuals who represent, more or less remarkably, one type. There are many “Marian Halcombes” among us and my Marian is one of the number.<sup>2</sup>

Once more heartily thanking you for your friendly letter,
I remain | Dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Nugent Robinson Esqre

---

1. Nugent Robinson (b. 1838), hailed from Ireland but seems to have emigrated with his family to the USA in the 1870s. The 1880 Census records him working as an editor and living in Kings (Brooklyn) with his wife Jennette, sons St John (13), Charles (10), and Eugene (6), plus his own father and mother, Charles and Julia. In 1892 his son Charles Robinson, then aged 22, wrote a nine-page piece for the Cosmopolitan claiming it was an account of his own autograph hunting. It quotes WC’s letter as if he had obtained it in the last couple of years – by which period WC of course was dead. It seems likely that he was in fact describing his father’s techniques of obtaining signatures. His father would himself have been 22 when this letter was written to him. The absence of a ‘London’ dateline also indicates it is more likely to have been written to someone in the UK than in the USA. Charles Robinson writes: ‘instead of emitting the usual stereotyped batch of formal requests for their signatures, I wrote ... “for information” on some topic of supposed interest... My first victim was Wilkie Collins, whom I ventured to address on the subject of his Woman in White, dwelling at some length on Marian Halcombe, the brave woman of the story. The reader may imagine my delight at receiving from the great novelist the following reply:’. He then quotes the entire letter apart from the address, salutation, and addressee line. The valediction and signature appear in facsimile. Among the other literary authors whose letters appear are Walter Besant, Robert Louis Stevenson, Oliver Wendell Holmes, and Walt Whitman.
2. See the illuminating discussion of this paragraph in Peters, pp. 217–218.

[0371] TO CHARLES WARD, 29 AUGUST 1860<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/83). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 210–11.

12. Harley Street, W. | Wednesday morning

My dear Ward,

Can you come and try Oliviers Claret here at 6 on Friday? Send me one line to say yes.

I have come back from the Isle of Wight and found eighteen letters to answer. So no more at present from

Yours ever | WC

My furniture bill makes the 19th letter and amounts to £103.<sup>2</sup> Aie! Aie! Aie!

---

1. The Harley Street address, the reference to the trip to the Isle of Wight, and the relationship to [0372] to Ward combine to make this date inevitable – see [0369] to HC of 22 August 1860.
2. A payment for £103-17s was made to ‘Mr Clarke’ on 9 October (Coutts: WC).

[3275] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, AUGUST 1860

MS: Trinity (Crewe Bequest). Published: A&C10, p. 5.

R. Monckton Milnes | from Wilkie Collins | August 1860<sup>1</sup>

---

1. At the top of the title page of a first edition of The Woman in White, possibly written in the week of publication. The book was advertised as published on 15 August 1860, but the day before that Wilkie wrote: ‘The book ... is done to the last fragment of correction and will certainly be finished this week.’ ([0368] to Charles Ward, 14 August 1860). So it is possible that WC was sent copies late that week and took this copy to Milnes’s house on the visit for which he set off on Friday, 17 August (mentioned also in [0368]).

[0372] TO CHARLES WARD, 3 SEPTEMBER 1860<sup>1</sup>

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 211.

12. Harley Street, W. | Monday

My dear Ward,

Come on Friday, and take the fortune of the pot at Six – bringing with you, please, my banking-book.<sup>2</sup> If you don’t mind carrying the 3 Vols of The Woman In White home with you at night, Jane’s copy is ready for her here, with her name inscribed in it.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the first Monday when WC was in London following the publication of The Woman in White.

2. For WC’s newly opened bank account at Coutts & Co. The first deposit was on 23 August 1860 for £300 – see [0369] to HC, 22 August 1860 (Coutts: WC).

[0373] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 12, 13, 15 SEPTEMBER 1860

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/58), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 147. Published: B&C, I, pp. 188–189 (dated 12 September 1860). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 211 (dated 12–15 September 1860).

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>2</sup> | September 12th 1860

My dear Mother,

I got back from Stroud yesterday – a pleasant visit – wonderful kindness and attention from everybody, beginning with Gregory,<sup>3</sup> who lives in the most delightful old-fashioned house, just outside the town. The whole country more beautiful than I had supposed possible. Grand hills valleys and woods – the finest scenery of the kind, I ever set eyes on.

All sorts of good news still reaches me about The Woman In White. It is soothing the dying moments of a young lady – it [del] is helping (by homeopathic doses of a chapter at a time) to keep an old lady out of the grave – and it is the first literary performance which has succeeded in fixing the attention of a deranged gentleman in his lucid intervals!! The other day I reckoned up what I have got by it thus far. One thousand four hundred pounds – ~~and~~ with the copyright in my possession, and the disposal of all editions under the extravagant guinea and a half price, in my hands. Cock-a-doodle-doo! The critics may go to the devil – they are at the book still as I hear, but I see no ~~news~~ reviews. Low talks already of dealing for cheaper editions – but we have settled nothing yet, for when I last heard of it, the sale of the book in the expensive form was going on.

I return Charley’s letter. My own unbiassed opinion is that he and Katie are labouring under temporary insanity. When /two/ people adopt the slowest possible mode of travelling in the ugliest part of France – when they eat and sleep in dirty places for the sake of “an idea” – and when they saddle themselves with a horse and carriage to take care of, and enjoy the botheration of it – what is to be said? As I before remarked, “temporary Insanity”.

I shall keep this letter open till I go tomorrow to Clarence Terrace to see for letters. We are in the thick of fitting out for our cruise. On Friday we go to Bristol and to stay the night with Edwin Fox<sup>4</sup> – on Saturday by steamer to Newport, South Wales – on Sunday sail from Newport (wind and weather permitting) in our new vessel. The best of the three men who went with Pigott and me to Scilly, goes with us this time – and the ex-captain of Pigott’s father’s yacht, supplies the other two men of the crew. There seems to be every prospect of fine weather. We are going to Ireland, if the wind will take us there.

Very glad to hear you keep so well. Forster [del] (whom I saw yesterday) sends you his best love. My kind regards to the Bullars. No more at present from

Yours ever afftly | WC

Little Sydney Dickens has passed his examination and arrived in London yesterday in his uniform of a Naval Cadet. He had a glass of Champagne, and we took him to the Theatre immediately, by way of encouraging one of our naval heroes. Talking of heroes, I met one of Garibaldi's sons at Monckton Milnes's. A remarkably stupid boy!!

I send The Spectator by this post. Look at page 864. A review of The Woman in White answering The Saturday Review<sup>5</sup>

Thursday. I have just heard terrible news of poor George Thompson. He has died at Melbourne (or near it) by his own hand. The fatal drinking-mania brought on delirium tremens – he was left with a razor within reach for a few minutes only and he cut his throat. The act was not immediately fatal – but his constitution was gone, and the doctors could not save him. He recovered his senses at the last, and died penitently and resignedly. I heard all this from Ward.<sup>6</sup>

Saturday. No letters at Clarence Terrace. Only Mr Wilson's receipt which has been given to Miss Smith. No callers. All right. | WC<sup>7</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | care of John Bullar Esqre | Basset Wood | near Southampton', with no decipherable postmark, but endorsed 'SOUTHAMPTON | SP15 | 60'.

2. For the letter itself WC uses Gothic printed paper.

3. Not fully identified – but see [0347] to [George Samuel] Gregory, 24 May 1860.

4. The widower of Edward Pigott's sister Elizabeth Augusta (1820–50), Edwin Fydell Fox (1814–91) operated a private asylum at Brislington, Somerset (Lycett, p. 195).

5. The Woman in White was unfavourably reviewed in the Saturday Review, 25 August 1860, pp. 249–250. A rejoinder in the form of a favourable review appeared in the Spectator, 8 September 1860, p. 864. Second postscript written above the printed address on the first page.

6. The death on 5 July 1860 of George Agar Thompson, then Warden of the Gold Field near Inglewood, Victoria, by a self-inflicted razor wound to the neck while of unsound mind due to delirium tremens, was reported in detail in the (Melbourne) Argus, 10 July 1860, p. 7. No final spirit of penitence is mentioned in the Australian newspaper, and this was perhaps WC's invention to console his mother. The son of an old evangelical ally of the Collins family, Thompson was a mutual friend of WC, Charles Ward, and Edward Pigott – see [0129] to HC of [7 July 1852]. Third postscript written in a small hand vertically up the left margin of the first page.

7. Fourth and final postscript written on the inside flap of the envelope.

[0374] TO CHARLES WARD, 2 OCTOBER 1860

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/22). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 211–212.

12. Harley Street, W. | Tuesday October 2nd

My dear Ward,

We shall dine here on Thursday at six. Come and take pot-luck.

Low proposes republishing The Dead Secret,<sup>1</sup> and Ward and Lock (of all the people in the world!) are republishing Antonina<sup>2</sup> – having bought it of Bentley, I suppose. The public seems in a fair way to have rather more than enough of me, in course of time.

Ever yours | WC

Say nothing about The Dead Secret because nothing is settled yet

P.S. Many thanks for the translation, just received. Blast the Germans! The fuss they make about their trumpety £12.10.- is a perfect disgrace to commercial humanity.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. WC seems soon to have accepted this proposal – see [0380] to F. M. Evans of 13 October 1860. Later Messrs Sampson Low were sold the right to publish a uniform edition of his novels – see [0384] to them of 21 November 1860.

2. In the event, the projected Ward & Lock edition seems not to have appeared. On 29 September 1860, p. 429, the Athenæum carried an announcement of the publication by Ward & Lock of a single-volume edition of Antonina in ornamental boards at 2s on October 10; however, on that very day, the same weekly (p. 615) carried an announcement from Sampson Low of the publication on the 15th of that month of the same novel at 5s. in cloth. The explanation may be found in the 'Arts, Literature, and Science' column of the Nottinghamshire Guardian (25 October 1860, p. 3), where the following item appeared: "'The Woman in White' has gone into a fifth 'Library Edition,' – and its publishers have bought up the whole cheap issue of 'Antonina' under the notion that it was calculated to injure their valuable property.'

3. The reference has not been clarified, but presumably concerns the translation into English of a letter from a German company concerning payment to the author for the use of his work. The work in question is likely to be The Woman in White, published by Voigt & Günter of Leipzig. See [0343] to W. H. Wills of 5 May 1860 and [0417] to Ludwig Löffler of 20 May 1861. Or possibly from another translation, Die weisse Frau by Dr C. Buchele, published the same year in Franckh'sche Verlagshandlung, Stuttgart. No payment from Germany is recorded at this time in WC's bank account (Coutts: WC).

[0375] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 3 OCTOBER 1860

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, pp. 189–190. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 212–13.

12. Harley Street, W. | October 3rd 1860

My dear Mother,

I got back safe and sound from the cruise on Sunday evening last.<sup>2</sup> We had much better weather at sea than you had on shore. Only two days of steady rain, all the time – plenty of wind, sometimes rising to a gale – grand waves – a capital safe boat (though not quite large enough in the cabin accommodation) and a crew of the pleasantest and best men I ever sailed with. We kept to the Bristol Channel – getting as far as Milford Haven on one side, and Clovelly on the other. Upon the whole, it was a great success and I hope we shall even improve on it next year, by hiring a larger vessel and being away a longer time

Have you heard that Charley has bought another horse, and that he is going to drive himself to Lausanne?<sup>3</sup> Ha! ha! ha! Across the Alps in a one horse chaise. They have to harness bullocks to pull four horses up those passes – what can be done with one? I am going abroad next week (probably). Only to Paris – and first class all the way, with my own sittingroom at the best hotel when I get there – and every other luxury that the Capital of the civilized world can afford. No horseflesh for me – unless in the form of cookery, in which case (with a satisfactory sauce) I see no objection to it.

Another edition of The Woman in White, published while I was away!<sup>4</sup> A new edition of The Dead Secret proposed – and a new edition of Antonina announced.<sup>5</sup> So much for my literary news.

How long do you remain away? Remember me very kindly to Mrs Williamson and Mrs Armytage.<sup>6</sup> I called at Clarence Terrace yesterday. No letters, and no events of any kind.

Ever yours afftly | WC

Let me know when you come back, as soon as it is settled

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | care of Colonel Armytage | Broomhill Bank | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked as dated. In July 1858, Frances Sarah Brandling (c. 1813–87), older sister of WC's painter friend Henry Brandling, had married Henry Armytage, a retired colonel of the Coldstream Guards, who lived on the northwest outskirts of Tunbridge Wells.

2. That is, Sunday 30 September. See [0368] to Charles Ward of 14 August 1860 concerning the plans for a sailing trip with Pigott and Benham.

3. CAC wrote to HC with this information on 3 October 1860 (Morgan MA 3153/ 19), complaining that WC never wrote to him. CAC's expedition resulted in his most popular work, A Cruise Upon Wheels: The Chronicle of Some Autumn Wanderings among the Deserted Post-roads of France (2 vols, London: Routledge, 1862).

4. The fourth edition in three volumes – see Andrew Gasson, 'The Woman in White: A Chronological Study', WCSJ, 2 (1982), pp. 5–14.

5. See [0374] to Charles Ward of the previous day.

6. Mrs Williamson remains unidentified, while Mrs Armytage is Frances née Brandling.

[0376] TO CHARLES WARD, 5 OCTOBER 1860

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/23). Published: BGLL, I, p. 213.

12. Harley Street, W. | October 5th 1860

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for the letter and the information. The train returns at such an inconvenient time, and takes so long about it, that we have given up the Farnham notion on Sunday.<sup>1</sup> So come in after church if you can – and I shall then have settled the day for Paris.

Yes – I was in bed! – but I was thinking of getting up, which makes the offence comparatively venial.

Ever yours | WC

Thank you for sending the Mss to Ainsworth. If it would only please God to destroy the whole race of amateur authors, I should be a happy man<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The visit is probably connected to Caroline's daughter Elizabeth Harriet starting at the Ladies Boarding School in Farnham in October 1860. See Paul Lewis, 'Educating Elizabeth Harriet Graves', Supplement, Wilkie Collins Society Newsletter, Spring 2010.

2. Presumably the reference is to the novelist William Harrison Ainsworth (1805–82: ODNB), or his cousin William Francis Ainsworth, who together operated Bentley's Miscellany from 1854 to 1868 (Wellesley Index to Victorian Periodicals). WC had presumably been asked for literary advice by an unpublished author, and had been happy to dispose of the MS in this way.

[0377] TO SIR JAMES EMERSON TENNENT,<sup>1</sup> 8 OCTOBER 1860

MS: Huntington (HM 7259). Transcript: Kansas (MS P557:A7). Published: BGLL, I, p. 214.

12. Harley Street, W. | October 8th 1860

My dear Sir,

I am in some little uncertainty about a question of copyright in the Colonies which has been raised by my last novel "The Woman In White", and which may possibly affect other English writers besides myself. Before I act in the matter, it would, I am sure, be a great advantage to me to hear what your experience and knowledge of the subject might suggest. In an hour's conversation with you, either on Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday next, at any place and time which it may be convenient to you to appoint, on either of these three days? I am obliged to suggest this week only for the interview as I leave town on Saturday next.

Vry truly yrs | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Sir James Emerson Tennent (1804–69: ODNB), politician, traveller and author of The History of Modern Greece (2 vols; London: Henry Colburn, 1830) and Ceylon: An Account of the Island (2 vols; London, 1859), whom WC had first met in Italy – see [0158] to Edward Pigott of 4 November 1853. At this time Tennent held the post of Secretary to the Board of Trade. [0379] to Tennent of 13 October on the same subject confirms that this one is indeed to him.

[0378] TO CHARLES WARD, 10 OCTOBER 1860

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /24). Published: B&C, I, p. 190. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 214.

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>1</sup> | 10th October 1860

My dear Ward,

I forget whether I told you that I wanted the bill discounted, and the money put to my account, tomorrow, or Friday (if possible). Bradbury & Evans are to have my cheque on Saturday – and unless my balance is fortified in time, I may (as well as I can calculate) be drawing it all out! Thank God I have no more heavy cheques to write, after B & E are satisfied.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Change your mind, and come to Paris. Only £4 – there and back 1st class. £4 more for expenses – and there you are. Sell a child – terms, £10 – down! Slawkenbergius would fetch more, if disposed of by weight – but I think him too amiable to be parted with.<sup>3</sup> Try the baby<sup>4</sup> – and let us devour the proceeds at the Trois Frères<sup>5</sup>

---

1. WC uses Gothic water-marked printed paper.

2. The discounted bill was a payment from Sampson Low for The Woman in White for £250 which was credited to WC's bank account on 11 October with a bank charge of £4-3s-10d debited on the same date for the early use of the money. For the payment to Bradbury & Evans see [0380] to Evans, 13 October 1860.

3. Hafen Slawkenbergius is the fictional German author of a treatise on noses in Laurence Sterne's Tristram Shandy (1759–67). The jocular reference must be to one of Ward's older children, probably Charles Augustus (b. 1855), who was reported at birth to be 'the largest and stoutest baby ever borne' ([0219] to Ward, 20 August 1855).
4. The baby must be Alfred Garle Ward, baptised on 26 December 1859 (Baptismal Register, Paddington).
5. Les Trois Frères Provençaux, CD's 'favourite restaurant' in Paris (Pilgrim, VIII, p. 28 n. 4).

[0380] TO F. M. EVANS, 13 OCTOBER 1860

MS: Unknown. Photocopy: Private, our copy text. Published: BGLL, I, p. 215.

12. Harley Street, W. | 13th October 1860

My dear Sir,

I enclose the cheque for the Balance as stated on the amended account – £86.2.8.<sup>1</sup> Please let me have a line to say that you have received it safely.

If you can conveniently do so, you will oblige me by sending the remaining copies (220) to Messrs Sampson Low & Son, 47 Ludgate Hill – with my name written on the parcel.

Yours very truly | Wilkie Collins

F M Evans Esqre

---

1. This must concern the transfer of the publishing rights for The Dead Secret (and the surplus stock) from Bradbury & Evans to Sampson Low. WC's cheque to Bradbury & Co. for £82-2s-8d was paid from his account on 16 October 1860 (Coutts: WC).

[0379] TO SIR JAMES EMERSON TENNENT, 13 OCTOBER 1860

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 214–215.

12. Harley Street, W. | 13th October 1860

My dear Sir Emerson,

I am much obliged to you for your kind letter.<sup>2</sup> As you return to town in about a fortnight – and as I go to Paris tomorrow for the same time – I shall lose nothing by waiting to tell my story personally, and I shall gain the pleasure of seeing you, when we both get back to town. Your friendly reference to the pleasant time we all passed together in Italy, makes me especially anxious to talk the matter over, instead of writing about it. I shall be only too glad to make my troubles in the Colonies the means of renewing the happy "old times" in Italy.<sup>3</sup>

As soon as I return, therefore, I will report myself at The Board of Trade.

In the meantime | Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Sir James Emerson Tennent

---

1. Directed to 'Sir James Emerson Tennent' only.
2. The reply to [0377] of 8 October.
3. WC's trip with CD and Augustus Egg in 1853.

[0381] TO EDWARD MARSTON,<sup>1</sup> 31 OCTOBER 1860

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Extract: Marston, p. 85; Robinson 1951, p. 148. Published: Davis, pp. 221–222; B&C, I, p. 191. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 215.

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>2</sup> | 31st October 1860

My dear Sir,

I am just back from Paris – and just away again tomorrow (for three or four days) to Devonshire. If any fresh impression of The Woman in White is likely to be wanted immediately, stop the press till I come back. The critic in the Times is (between ourselves) right about the mistake in time.<sup>3</sup> Shakespear has made worse mistakes – that is one comfort. And readers are not critics, who test an emotional book by the base rules of arithmetic – which is a second consolation. Nevertheless we will set the mistake right at the first opportunity. I will call in Ludgate Hill the moment I get back.

Very truly yours | WC

The Tauchnitz Edition in Paris is out of print – not a copy of the book was to be had there for a week for love or money. They are going to dramatize the story at The Surrey Theatre – and I am asked to go to law about that. I will certainly go and hiss – unless the manager makes a “previous arrangement” with me. /<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Edward Marston (1825–1914), from 1856 a partner in the publishing firm of Sampson Low, which he eventually took over in 1881. In his volume of memoirs, After Work (1904), he states: ‘I have in my possession many most interesting letters from Wilkie Collins, they are all on business matters’ (p. 84). Unfortunately only four are cited, including this one, and many appear not to have survived.

2. Printed address in Gothic type.

3. The unsigned review by E.S. Dallas in the Times of 30 October 1860 revealed a crucial discrepancy in dates: ‘If we dared trespass upon details after the author’s solemn injunction, we could easily show that Lady Glyde could not have left Blackwater-park before the 9th or 10th of August. Anybody who reads the story, and who counts the days from the conclusion of Miss Halcombe’s diary, can verify the calculation for himself. He will find that the London physician did not pay his visit till the 31st of July, that Dawson was not dismissed till the 3d of August, and that the servants were not dismissed till the following day. The significance of these dates will be clear to all who have read the story. They render the last volume a mockery, a delusion, and a snare; and all the incidents in it are not merely improbably – they are absolutely impossible.’

4. The unauthorised dramatic version opened at the Surrey Theatre (south of the river in Blackfriars Road, Lambeth) on 3 November 1860 – whether WC attended the performance is not recorded.

[3375] TO SAMPSON LOW, 10 NOVEMBER 1860

MS: The Open University Archive (SL_31). Published: www.open.ac.uk/library/digital-archive. Published: A&C14, pp. 3-4.

12 Harley Street, W.
November 10th 1860

My dear Sir,

After carefully considering your proposal, I have come to the conclusion that I shall do best if I abstain from availing myself of it.<sup>1</sup> In the first place, I am unwilling to part Hide And Seek, and The Queen of Hearts from the other books. In the second place, although £300 may be enough for five years’ interest in The Woman in White, and ~~The Queen of H~~ The Dead Secret, if I die tomorrow, or fail with my next book – it is not more than half enough, if I live for the next five years and write ~~two~~ (in that time) two, or three, more successful stories. I do not presume to say that it is your interest to speculate on the future – but I feel sure that it is mine. I am not more than seven and thirty next birthday – I don’t want money – I have got the public ear, [del] plenty of time, and the stimulant of a great success to give me confidence in my work to come – barring accidents, there is no earthly reason why I should not be worth double what I am worth now, between this and 1865 – and I will run the risk. We will wait – as “Mr Micawber” says – and “see what turns up.”

Very truly yours

Wilkie Collins

Sampson Low Esq

P.S. I enclose the proof of The Preface corrected, and Ward & Lock’s title-page and preface, also corrected – in case you reprint them<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Although WC turned down Sampson Low here, in less than two weeks he was making an agreement with the firm – see [0384] to Low, 21 November 1860 where he accepts a related offer ahead of an equal one from Hurst & Blackett. The note to that letter gives details of the seven titles Low published. He had already made an arrangement for Antonina and The Dead Secret – see [0380] to F. M. Evans, 13 October 1860.

2. Presumably of Antonina which Ward & Lock advertised for publication in one volume but never actually issued. For details see note to [0374] to Charles Ward, 2 October 1860.

[3077] TO SIR JAMES EMERSON TENNENT, 12 NOVEMBER 1860

MS: Unknown. Extract: Maggs Bros catalogue, vol. 1243 (date unknown) no. 25.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C4, p. 2.

... I have been away in Cornwall with Dickens since my return from Paris – and this is the first opportunity of writing to you.<sup>2</sup> On what day and at what hour may I see you at the Board of Trade? I only wait to hear what time I shall least inconvenience you with my copyright grievance ...<sup>3</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. With facsimile valediction and signature.

2. WC went to Paris on 14 October and returned on the 30th. He and CD went to Devon and Cornwall on 1 November. They visited Bideford and Liskeard researching ‘A Message from the Sea’, the Christmas number of All the Year Round. They – or at least CD – returned on the 5th (Pilgrim IX pp.334–336). It is possible that WC travelled back from Cornwall later than CD. Otherwise it is not clear why he would wait a week to write to Tennent to make a pressing appointment.

3. Concerning the copyright of The Woman in White in the Colonies (Canada, Australia, New Zealand etc.), see [0377] to Tennent of 8 October 1860.

[0382] TO SIR JAMES EMERSON TENNENT, 14 NOVEMBER 1860

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 215–216.

12. Harley Street, W. | 14th November 1860

My dear Sir Emerson,

The appointment you kindly make for Thursday at two o’Clock, will suit me admirably. I will be at the Board of Trade therefore at that time.

Pray present my best remembrance and thanks to Lady Emerson Tennent and Miss Tennent. It will give me very great pleasure to dine in Warwick Square on Saturday next at 7 o’Clock.

Ever faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Sir James Emerson Tennent

---

1. Directed to ‘Sir James Emerson Tennent | 66. Warwick Square | Pimlico | S.W.’, postmarked as dated.

[0383] TO EDWARD MARSTON, MID-NOVEMBER 1860

MS: Unknown. Extract: Marston, pp. 86–87; BGLL, I, p. 216.

Mr. Blackett called here last night,<sup>1</sup> when I was out, and left word that he would return this morning; his visit has just ended, and I at once write to tell you that the object of it was to negotiate for the right of printing my novels in his ‘Standard Library.’ I of course informed Mr. Blackett that an arrangement of a similar nature was under consideration between you and myself, and that I could only entertain an offer from another publisher on the condition of first placing you in a position to make your proposal on the same basis. Mr. Blackett at once admitted the justice of this claim, authorized me to mention his name and agreed that I should tell you what the basis is on which he desires to found his proposal.<sup>2</sup>

1. Henry Blackett (1826–71), of Hurst & Blackett of Great Marlborough Street, the publishers of The Queen of Hearts the previous year – the only WC title to be issued by the firm.
2. Marston adds: ‘Mr. Collins then proceeds to state the conditions at great length ... [his] long letter was fair and candid throughout, and there was not much to complain of in a brother publisher trying to cut us out.’ (p. 87). The dating of the letter derives from Marston’s conclusion, referring to [0384] to Sampson Low of 21 November 1860: ‘The next letter, however, settled the matter.’

[0384] TO SAMPSON LOW & CO., 21 NOVEMBER 1860

MS: Unknown. Published: Marston, p. 87, our copy text; BGLL, I, pp. 216–217.

21st Nov., 1860. | Harley Street., W.

Dear Sirs,

Your offer and Messrs. Hurst and Blackett’s offer are both before me, and are both for the same amount ... Under these circumstances the publishers of the first reprint of ‘Woman in White,’ have a personal claim on me which I now accept, and I especially thank you for the very liberal provision which gives me back the Copyrights of ‘Antonina’ and ‘Basil,’ at the end of the five years’ term as a free will offering on the part of my publishers.<sup>1</sup>

I am, dear Sirs, | Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The period was later extended to six years – see [0390] to Sampson Low of 1 January 1861. The signed agreement seems not to have survived, but more of the details are revealed in [0717] to Smith, Elder of 31 December 1866, the day on which the six-year period expired. Under the agreement Sampson Low published a new ‘Cheap and Uniform Edition’ of WC’s which eventually included seven titles (Hide and Seek, The Dead Secret, The Queen of Hearts and No Name, in addition to those mentioned by WC). In the event, for reasons that are far from clear, at some point during 1865 all the rights held by Sampson Low under this agreement were transferred to Smith, Elder, and these titles started to appear under their imprint – see Gasson, pp. 136–137, 140–141. Later WC refused to have any further relations with the firm – see [0754] of 18 June 1867 to Harper & Brothers in New York, for whom Messrs Sampson Low had long acted as London agents.

[3148] TO SAMPSON LOW, 26 NOVEMBER 1860

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C6, p. 4.

26th November 1860 | 12 Harley Street

My dear Sir,

I have just received the enclosed to forward to you, from my brother who is now in Paris.<sup>1</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Sampson Low Esqre

---

1. CAC travelled round Europe after his marriage to Katie Dickens on 17 July 1860. The couple had returned from Lausanne to Paris by 19 November and stayed at the Hotel Louvois before moving around this time into lodgings at 11 Rue de l’Arcade in the Madeleine district (see CAC to HC, 9 November 1860, 19 November 1860, and 3 December 1860, Morgan MA3153/23–25). No letter from CAC to WC survives from this time. Sampson Low was publishing The Eye-Witness, a collection of essays from All the Year Round and it is possible the enclosure was a receipt or corrected proofs. CAC’s bank account records receipt of a payment from Sampson Low of £50 on 17 October (Coutts: CAC).

[0385] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 3 DECEMBER 1860

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, p. 223; BGLL, I, p. 217.

12. Harley Street, W. | 3rd December 1860

My dear Sir,

I am going to give myself a rest of some months before I write again; but when I take the pen in hand, once more – to appear periodically, in the first instance, in “All The Year Round” – there is no reason why you should not make me an offer if you think it desirable, and no reason why I should not give it all due consideration, provided the offer does not require me to part with the copyright.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Richard Bentley Esq

---

1. No Name began its serial run in CD's weekly in March 1862, and again appeared in volume form from Sampson Low.

[3149] TO JAMES EMERSON TENNENT, 3 DECEMBER 1860

MS: Yale (GEN MSS 601 p. 168). Published: A&C6, pp. 5–6.

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>1</sup> | 3rd December 1860

My dear Sir Emerson,

Ever since that pleasant dinner at your house<sup>2</sup> I have been hard at work, with Dickens, on the forthcoming Christmas Number of “All The Year Round”.<sup>3</sup> We put the finishing touches last Friday night – and, on Saturday, when my pen was my own again, I opened Lady Tennent’s album, and ventured into the good company which those fair pages disclose, with the fittest morsel I could find from “The Woman In White” copied out and signed.<sup>4</sup> If I could have made any better return for the friendly feeling which has enrolled me as a contributor to the album, I would gladly have done so – and I can only hope now that your kindness and Lady Tennent’s will take the will for the deed.

I am going out of town for a short time to get a little rest and change – and cannot therefore have the pleasure (as I had wished I had proposed) of taking the album myself to Warwick Square. It is carefully packed up, and at the disposal of the messenger whom you are good enough to say you will send for it.

I am sure you will be glad to hear that the Canadian Pirates have “acknowledged their transgression” in the matter of this same “Woman In White”. They have sent me my fair share of the profits of their edition – and have promised (like good boys) “never to do so again”.<sup>5</sup>

Believe me, Dear Sir Emerson | ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Sir James Emerson Tennent

---

1. Centred Gothic engraved address.

2. Probably on Saturday 17 November – see [0382] to Sir James Emerson Tennent, 14 November 1860.

3. ‘A Message from the Sea’ published 13 December. WC had been in Devon with CD to research the story from 1 to 5 November and wrote all of chapter IV as well as parts of chapters II and V. See The Nine Christmas Numbers of All the Year Round, Conducted by Charles Dickens. London: [Published at the Office]; and Messrs. Chapman & Hall, undated but probably in 1868, which is the only extant contemporary listing of authorship. See also Pilgrim vol. IX, p. 336, note 1, for other views, and p. xix for chronology.

4. On Saturday 1 December, WC wrote out 284 words covering more than a page of MS headed “Count Fosco at The Opera” and beginning “Not a note of Donizetti’s delicious music...” and ending “...if ever face spoke, his face spoke then, and that was its language.” | From “The Woman in White”, by | Wilkie Collins | December 1st 1860” (The Woman in White 1860 vol. III pp. 267–268). The album is with the letter at Yale.

5. Maclear & Co. of 17 & 19 King Street East, Toronto, printed and published an edition dated 1860 (pp. 243). Although the two-column format is similar to the Harper edition and the title page clearly copied from it, this edition is not illustrated and uses the London text. The payment cannot be traced in WC’s bank account, though he received an unidentified payment of £25 on 30 November. No Canadian payment appears in WC’s bank account (Coutts: WC).

[0386] TO C. E. MUDIE,<sup>1</sup> 5 DECEMBER 1860

MS: Illinois (Mudie Correspondence). Published: BGLL, I, p. 218.

12. Harley Street, W. | 5th December 1860

Mr Wilkie Collins has much pleasure in accepting the honour of Mr and Mrs C.E. Mudie’s invitation for Monday the 17th December at 8 o’clock. /

---

1. Charles Edward Mudie (1818–90: ODNB), founder in 1842 of Mudie’s Select Library at his bookshop in Southampton Row. In 1852 he moved to new premises in New Oxford Street, which were further enlarged in December 1860 by the addition of a Great Hall. The opening celebrations took place on 17 December 1860, attended by ‘nearly all the best names in literature and the trade’ (Athenæum, 22 December 1860, p. 877). For a general account of the event and an illustration, see Griest, pp. 21–2, 36.

[0387] TO JOHN LINWOOD PITTS,<sup>1</sup> 10 DECEMBER 1860

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: BGLL, I, p. 218.

12. Harley Street, W. | London | December 10th 1860

Sir,

I have great pleasure in writing these lines, to comply with the request for my autograph which you honour me by making.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

John Linwood Pitts Esqre

---

1. Unidentified autograph hunter – though the BL Catalogue does record a John Linwood Pitts, author of a number of Victorian volumes concerning the Channel Islands.

[0513] TO CHARLES WARD, 14 DECEMBER 1860<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/81). Published: BGLL, I, p. 286 (dated [December 1860–62]), amended A&C6, p. 17.

12. Harley Street, W. | Friday evening

My dear Ward,

Will you kindly put ten sovereigns in your pocket tomorrow, and bring them to me when you look in on Sunday? I will give you a cheque in exchange. I shall not be able to get to the Strand tomorrow – and a rush of small bills has utterly exhausted my modest money-box – so I have no alternative but to trouble you to bring me the money in this way.

This awful Christmas time! I am using up my cheque-book – and am in daily expectation of fresh demands on it.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC was at Harley Street for three Christmas periods – 1860, 1861, and 1862. In 1863 he was in Italy and he moved to Melcombe Place just before Christmas 1864. December 1860 is the only one in which his bank account shows a payment of £10 to Charles Ward. The cheque was debited on Monday 17 December, which fits with the Sunday meeting (Coutts: WC).

[0388] TO C. E. MUDIE, 18 DECEMBER 1860

MS: Illinois (Mudie Correspondence). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 218–219.

12. Harley Street, W. | December 18th 1860

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my apologies for my absence last night. When I accepted your kind invitation I was engaged to dinner in the neighbourhood of Sydenham – but I hoped to be able to get back to town in time to make one among your guests. My return was, however, delayed until so late an hour as to leave me, to my great regret, no chance of availing myself of your invitation, and of making your acquaintance personally, as I had hoped and wished to do.

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | C.E. Mudie Esqre

May I beg that you will kindly communicate my excuses to Mrs Mudie?

[0389] TO C. E. MUDIE, 19 DECEMBER 1860

MS: Illinois (Mudie Correspondence). Published: BGLL, I, p. 219.

12. Harley Street, W. | 19th December 1860

My dear Sir,

Many thanks for your kind suggestion. I have an appointment for the middle of the day tomorrow – but I shall have great pleasure in calling at twelve oClock (before I go to the said appointment at one) to see you, I hope and to see the new hall as well.<sup>1</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
C.E. Mudie, Esqre

---

1. See [0386] to C. E. Mudie of 5 December 1860.

[0390] TO SAMPSON LOW, 1 JANUARY 1861

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 219.

12. Harley Street, W. | January 1st 1861

My dear Sir,

Is there any reason why we should not begin the new year by completing the arrangements, proposed by you and accepted by me, in relation to the six years' lease of my copyrights, stated in your letter of the 19th of November last? If you will send me the agreement which is necessary, and if you will let me know in what order of succession you propose to publish the books, I have some leisure time at my disposal, just now, which I could devote to the requisite corrections and revisions.<sup>1</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Sampson Low Esqr

---

1. WC's letters to Sampson Low, personally or as a firm, [0422], [0438] and [0446], of 7 June, 2 September, and 10 October 1861 show him delivering the revised volumes.

[0391] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 1 JANUARY 1861

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 57–58; BGLL, I, p. 220.

12. Harley Street, W. | January 1st 1860<sup>1</sup>

My dear Mrs Ward,

I have just returned from the country, and have just been welcomed back by the sight of Alice's magnificent present.<sup>2</sup> Of all "those pomps and vanities of this wicked world" which I renounced in her name,<sup>3</sup> this especial "pomp and vanity", which I gratefully accept from my god-daughter's own hand, is one of the most beautiful things of the kind I ever saw! Seriously, I am very, very much pleased with my present, and warmly sensible of the kindness on all sides, which prompted the making it and the sending it to me. I enclose a little note of thanks to Alice, which I commit to her Mama's care.<sup>4</sup>

I have been perpetually away from town, paying a round of country visits, this autumn and winter – or I should long since have found my way to Kent Villa.<sup>5</sup> Now I am at home again, I hope to see the picture before the great dramatic event of the 15th. I well remember that the sketch promised to be the best picture that Edward has ever painted – a very fine subject treated in a very new and very striking manner.<sup>6</sup> Many happy New Years to him and to you and to everybody under your roof!

ever truly yours | WC

Clarence Terrace / | I have just called at my mother's, and have heard that the play is put off.<sup>7</sup> I hope, when I call, to hear that the children are getting on as well as we all hope and wish. If I can't get to you in a day or two, I will write to Edward. WC

---

1. Since WC did not move into 12 Harley Street until March 1860, he has clearly mistaken the date at the beginning of the New Year.
2. Alice, the Wards' eldest child, WC's godchild, now aged ten – the precise nature of the present, clearly handmade by Alice, is not clear.
3. Echoing the first promise WC must have made as godfather to Alice as part of the rite of Baptism according to the Church of England Book of Common Prayer: in the name of the child to 'renounce the devil and all his works, the pomps and vanity of this wicked world, and all the sinful lusts of the flesh'.
4. Sadly, this note to Alice has not been traced.
5. The Wards' town residence in Lansdowne Road, Notting Hill.
6. Presumably E. M. Ward's 'Antechamber at Whitehall during the Dying Moments of Charles I', exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1861.
7. Presumably a domestic performance within the Ward family scheduled to take place on 15 January, but postponed due to the bout of measles among the children – see [0392] to E. M. Ward of 9 January 1861.

[0392] TO E. M. WARD, 9 JANUARY 1861

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 64; BGLL, I, p. 221.

12. Harley Street, W. | January 9th 1861

My dear Ned,

One line to ask how the children are going on, and to say why I can't come to ask the question myself, and to see the picture as well. I have a child spending the holiday here<sup>1</sup> – and, as she has never had the measles, I am prohibited from coming to see you, until the end of this month, when the said holidays will be at an end also. We will therefore only consider my long-deferred visit to be put off till the beginning of next month – and, in the mean time, scribble me a line to say how the children are getting through their difficulties. I did not see Walker the last time he called here<sup>2</sup> – but I heard that all the children had taken the measles. Is this true?

With best love, | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The nine-year-old Harriet Elizabeth (Carrie), daughter of Caroline Graves.
2. Frederick Walker (1840–75), ARA, genre painter, watercolourist and illustrator.

[0393] TO SAMPSON LOW & CO., 12 JANUARY 1861

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 221.

12 Harley Street, W. | 12th January 1861

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for your letter, enclosing the agreement.<sup>1</sup> The arrangement you propose is perfectly satisfactory to me – and I will call in Ludgate Hill to complete it on Wednesday next, the 16th, at three o'clock.

I remain | Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Sampson Low, Son, & Co

---

1. See [0390] to the firm of 1 January.

[0394] TO CHARLES WARD, 30 JANUARY 1861

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, I, pp. 191–192. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 221–222.

12. Harley Street, W. | 30th Jany 1861

My dear Ward,

Many thanks. By all means order the book at once – if I only get one good suggestion out of the six volumes, it will be cheaply purchased at £2.2. – . If not of present use to me, it is sure to be of future use. I only hope it is not out of print.<sup>1</sup>

I have only two words to say about that ball dress, and the charming person in it – they are the words of the immortal Fielding: – “My Arse in a Bandbox!”<sup>2</sup>

Every yours | WC

---

1. The work in question has not been identified. No payment appears in WC’s bank account so presumably the debt was settled in cash (Coutts: WC).

2. From Henry Fielding’s The History of the Life of the Late Mr Jonathan Wild the Great (1743), ch. 10, ‘A Horrible Uproar in the Gate’. The ‘charming person’ has, perhaps fortunately, not been identified.

[0395] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 2 FEBRUARY 1861

MS: Huntington (HH 100, folder misdated 1886 Feb. 2). Summary: B&C, I, p. 192. Published: BGLL, I, p. 222.

12. Harley Street, W. | February 2nd 1861

My dear Hunt,

A lady who is a friend of mine (Mrs Hay)<sup>1</sup> has entreated me to intercede with you for a sight of your picture,<sup>2</sup> if the thing is possible. Mrs Hay lives at Florence – is (professionally) a painter – has missed the exhibition in Bond Street – and is obliged to go back to Italy in a fortnight. There is the case, in brief. If it is possible at this present writing, for any human individual but the engraver to see the picture – will you send the necessary “authority” to me? – and I will forward it to Mrs Hay.

If, on the other hand, the thing is a trouble and an impossibility, say so by all means – and we will let the matter drop as quietly as may be.

I hear you took up the noble art of skating, last frost. If there is any more ice this winter, let us meet, and tumble in company. The whole secret of skating consists in not being afraid of perpetual sprawling at full length. When Charley and I learnt, as lads, we had a bottle of “opodeldoc”<sup>3</sup> – stripped after a morning’s practise [sic] – and anointed each others’ bruises by the fireside. Thirty tumbles apiece, was our morning’s average, in learning the “outside edge” and “the three”.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Holman Hunt Esqre

---

1. Jane Benham Hay, painter, one of the English colony in Florence.

2. Hunt’s picture ‘The Finding of Christ in the Temple’ was exhibited and caused a stir. Lewis Carroll wrote a verse on it entitled ‘After Three Days’, dated 16 February 1861. See also [0340] to Hunt of 19 April 1860.

3. A liniment with alcohol, camphor and oils.

4. Turns in skating.

[0396] TO R. DIONIS,<sup>1</sup> 13 FEBRUARY 1861

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11, formerly laid in After Dark (1856), I). Published: Parrish & Miller, pp. 27–28; BGLL, I, p. 223.

12. Harley Street | Cavendish Square | London | 13th February 1861

Sir,

I beg to thank you for a bill for three pounds sterling (payable at sight) which reached me yesterday.

In consideration of this remittance, I give you, according to the agreement between us, my authority to translate into French, and to publish, the story entitled “Mad Monkton”, of which

I am the author.

I am much obliged to you for proposing to send me a copy of the newspaper in which the translation is to appear.<sup>2</sup> I shall read it with great interest.

All my short stories, hitherto produced in periodicals, have been republished in the two collections, called “After Dark” (the right of translating which was sold some years since), and in “The Queen of Hearts” – from which the stories in the Tauchnitz edition have been extracted, under the title of “A Plot in Private Life &c”. If, however, I should write any more short stories, in the future, I will not forget the proposal with which you have kindly favoured me.

I beg to remain, Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Monsieur R. Dionis | 22 Rue Servandoni

---

1. Otherwise unidentified French translator, though it may well have been the ‘Mme R. Dionis’ who, according to the catalogue of the BNF, translated at least three novels by Mrs Craik in the mid-1860s. If so, WC’s assumption about the sex of his correspondent is at fault.

2. The newspaper remains unidentified. In fact, an earlier French translation of the story seems to have appeared in the magazine La Revue Britannique – see [0232] to HC, 11 March 1856.

[0397] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 14 FEBRUARY 1861

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 71 (dated 14 July 1861); BGLL, I, pp. 223–224.

12. Harley Street, W. | 14th Feby 1861

Dear Mrs Ward,

I should have liked of all things to have made one of the party which you kindly invite me to join – but unlikely [sic for ‘unluckily’] Friday is one of many days on which I have got a dinner engagement. The said dinner does not begin till ½ past 7 – so I have no hope of running away and joining you at the Theatre – which I might have done if the dinner had been early.<sup>2</sup>

Pray accept my apologies therefore – and believe me

With love | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs E. M. Ward | Kent Villa | Lansdowne Road | Notting Hill | W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. The performance in question has not been identified but must have been on the following day, Friday 15 February – see [0398] to Henrietta Ward of that day.

[0398] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 15 FEBRUARY 1861

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 65; BGLL, I, p. 224.

12. Harley Street, W. | Feby 15th 1861

My dear Mrs Ward,

It is very kind of you to give me another chance<sup>2</sup> – and I shall try to show that I deserve it, by making my appearance at the supper-table on the evening which you first mention – Friday the 22nd. I will be with you as soon as I possibly can.

With best love and many thanks

Believe me | ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs E. M. Ward | Kent Villa | Lansdowne Road. | Notting Hill W.’ and postmarked ‘LONDON-W | [V] | FE 18 | 61’. Perhaps there was some delay in posting the letter.

2. Clearly Henrietta Ward had immediately offered a choice of dates for an invitation to supper, following WC’s refusal on the previous day of the invitation to the theatre party.

[3078] TO JOSEPH CUNDALL,<sup>1</sup> 15 FEBRUARY 1861

MS: Unknown. Extract: Jarndyce Catalogue, vol. 93 (Summer 1993), no. 1.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C4, p. 2.

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to Mr. Cundall, and begs to say that he will be happy to call in Bond Street at eleven o'clock on Wednesday next for the purpose of having his portrait taken.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. Joseph Cundall (1818–1895: ODNB), photographer, of Cundall, Downes & Co. of 168 New Bond Street.
  2. The Jarndyce catalogue states: '10 lines on 1p. 8vo. Section of mount along edge of verso.'
  3. WC writes on a Friday so the appointment is for Wednesday 20 February. The portrait was used for the one-volume edition of The Woman in White. For a copy of this image see <www.wilkiecollins.com>.

[3079] TO C. D. COLLET,<sup>1</sup> 16 FEBRUARY 1861

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie's (4 June 2008, LO7590, lot 140).<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C4, p. 3.

12 Harley Street, W. | February 16th 1861

Sir,

I regret that I was not able to receive you personally when you did me the favour of calling this morning.

Will you oblige me by thanking the Committee of your Association,<sup>3</sup> in my name, for the honour which their invitation confers on me?

If I could agree with the conclusions which your report sets forth, I should gladly have done my best to assist the objects of the Association. It is a matter of regret to me to differ with many gentlemen whose convictions on the subject of the tax upon paper are entitled to every respect. But, for reasons which I need not trouble you by mentioning in this letter, I cannot honestly say that I think the repeal of the Paper Duty is, in any sense, one of the urgent public wants of the present time.<sup>4</sup>

Under these circumstances, I can only again thank the Committee for distinguishing me by their proposal, and request them to accept my apologies in the same frank spirit in which I offer them.

I have the honour to be | Sir, | your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins
To/ | C.D. Collet Esqre

-
1. Collet Dobson Collet (1812–1898: ODNB) a radical and tax reformer who campaigned against the duties affecting printed publications. The tax on advertisements had been repealed in 1853 and the Stamp Duty in 1855.
  2. In an album containing approximately 140 letters from various people mainly relating to his campaign to repeal the 'taxes on knowledge'.
  3. The Association for the Repeal of the Taxes on Knowledge of which Collet was secretary from 1851 to 1870. He was probably asking Collins to speak at the Association's tenth annual public meeting on 13 March 1861. In the event George Augustus Sala spoke. See C. D. Collet, History of the Taxes on Knowledge (2 vols; London: T. Fisher Unwin, 1899), II, p. 109.
  4. At this time Collet was campaigning hard for the repeal of the final 'tax on knowledge', the Duty on Paper – an import tax which put up the price of newspapers and books. The repeal of this duty was proposed by Gladstone in the 1861 Budget and came into effect on 1 October 1861. See Collet, II, ch. 20.

[0399] TO HERBERT WATKINS, 18 FEBRUARY 1861

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 66–67; BGLL, I, pp. 224–225.

12. Harley Street, W. | 18th Feby 1861

My dear Sir,

I have seen my publishers to-day, and have put the question about my portrait to them. They are decidedly of opinion that the sale, at present, of any photographic likeness of me will interfere with the effect which they hope to produce by publishing my portrait in the forthcoming edition of "The Woman In White".<sup>1</sup>

Under these circumstances – as it is certainly my interest, with a view to the future, that my publishers should not lose by me – I have no alternative but to ask you, not to abandon your idea of publishing my portrait, but only to defer it for a short time. Within a month from the publication of the edition (which is now at press) I have arranged, in your interests, that I should be free to sit to you for a “full length”. The portrait alone, will always command a sale by being necessarily cheaper than the portrait and the book together – and I will take care that no one else produces an opposition “full length” by declining all other proposals.

Send me a line to say whether this arrangement will suit you. I am the more anxious to make it, as I should be sorry if the small likeness you took of me – which presents me at my worst – was circulated at all.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I may add that the edition will be published as early as possible in April, and that I should therefore be able to sit to you in May, just at “the height of the season”.<sup>3</sup>

To | Herbert Watkins Esqre /

---

1. Referring to the single-volume reprint of the novel from Sampson Low, published in April 1861 with a photographic portrait of the author.

2. Unidentified photograph.

3. The full-length portraits were produced in June – see [0423] to Herbert Watkins of 12 June 1861. Images available at the Lewis website.

[ 0400] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> FEBRUARY 1861

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 225.

“The poor weak words which have failed to describe Miss Fairlie, have succeeded in betraying the sensation she awakened in me. Our words are giants when they do us an injury, and dwarfs when they do us a service.”

From “The Woman in White” | (Volume 1, Page 91)

By | Wilkie Collins | February 1861

---

1. Autograph hunters frequently asked for WC to write out a favourite passage from one of his books.

[0401] TO ANNABEL MILNES,<sup>1</sup> 5 MARCH 1861

MS: Trinity (Houghton 6/80), damaged.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 225–226.

12. Harley Street, W. | March 5th 1861

Mr Wilkie Collins has great pleasure in accepting the honour of Mr and Mrs Monckton Milnes’ invitation for Thursday the 21st, at ½ past 7 o’clock.

---

1. Born Annabel Crewe (d. 1874), younger daughter of the second Baron Crewe, who married Richard Monckton Milnes in 1851. Victorian etiquette suggests that a reply to a domestic invitation would be directed to the woman of the house.

2. The lower part of the first leaf of the folding notepaper has been roughly torn away, with the remains of one diagonal stroke still visible.

[0402] TO WILLIAM SMITH,<sup>1</sup> 15 MARCH 1861

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1953/ 188E/2). Published: BGLL, I, p. 226.

12. Harley Street, W. | March 15th 1861

My dear Smith,

If I have died out of your remembrance it is no more than I deserve – but your water-colour drawings still live in my memory, and I write to remind you of a promise you kindly gave to let me see them by daylight. Will two o'clock (P.M.) suit you for the hour? And, if so, which day next week, after Monday, will be most convenient? I leave you to say.

One more question, and I have done. Mr Walter Thornbury (the writer) is at work on a Life of Turner for which he has got a heap of new materials.<sup>2</sup> A notice of the history of English Water-colour-art is a necessary portion of the design of his book – and a sight of your collection (well known to him by reputation) would very greatly assist the progress of his labours. May I bring him with me when I come? I am sure you will like him personally – and I am equally certain that he will highly appreciate an examination of the “works of reference” which your portfolios can so plentifully offer to him.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
William Smith Esqr.

-
1. William Smith (1808–76: ODNB), art dealer, who managed the Art Union of London and played a part in founding the National Portrait Gallery.
  2. George Walter Thornbury (1828–76), writer, who contributed to Household Words and All The Year Round. His Life of J. M. W. Turner was published in 1861.

[0403] TO MRS PUZEY,<sup>1</sup> 22 MARCH 1861

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 226.

12. Harley Street, W. | March 22nd 1861

Mr Wilkie Collins regrets that an engagement for the evening of Friday the 5th will deprive him of the pleasure of accepting Mr and Mrs Puzey's kind invitation.

-
1. Possibly Sophia, the wife of Robert Puzey of 16 Onsett Terrace, Gloucester Gardens – see Pilgrim, XI, pp. 178–179. Again Victorian etiquette suggests that a reply to a domestic invitation would be directed to the woman of the house

[0404] TO HARPER & BROTHERS,<sup>1</sup> 25 MARCH 1861

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, I, p. 227; Lewis website.

12. Harley Street, W. | London | March 25th 1861

Dear Sirs

This note will be delivered to you by my friend, Mr John Russell Buckler,<sup>2</sup> who is visiting America for the first time, at this critical period in the history of the United States.

Although Mr Buckler's journey is in no way connected with literature, and although his stay in New York is not likely to extend beyond a few days, I give him this letter of introduction to you, in the event of his requiring any information or advice while in your city. Any friendly assistance in this way which you can render to him, as a stranger, will oblige,

Dear Sirs, | yours faithfully | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Harper & Brothers

-
1. Powerful New York publishing house, which began to publish WC's work in 1850, when it purchased advance sheets of Antonina. WC's relations with the firm were normally conducted through its London agents Sampson Low.
  2. See [0478] to him of 3 July 1862.

[3022] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 25 MARCH 1861

MS: HSP (Dreer Collection, Eng. Prose, vol. II, p. 4). Published: A&C3, p. 37.

12. Harley Street, W. | 25th March 1861

My dear Lehmann,

Dickens and Forster are coming to dine here on Saturday the 30th at 1/2 past 6.<sup>1</sup> Will you make another in a free and easy way (No dress)? I write at once instead of waiting till Wednesday – so as to make the surer of your being disengaged.

Enclosed is a little contribution of mine to your domestic postage-stamps. It is my admission to Covent Garden, on that evening when we enjoyed one of the most refined musical treats I ever remember.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0405] to Wills of the same date.

[0405] TO W. H. WILLS, 25 MARCH 1861

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 227.

12. Harley Street, W. | 25th March 1861

My dear Wills,

Dickens and Forster are coming here to dine at ½ past 6 on Saturday the 30th – without ceremony as usual. Will you come too?

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

[0406] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 26 MARCH 1861<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (HH 107, folder misdated 1889). Published: BGLL, I, p. 227.

12. Harley Street, W. | Tuesday March 26th

My dear Hunt,

Will you come and dine here (without ceremony, as usual) on Saturday next the 30th at ½ past 6 – punctually! punctually!! punctually!!!

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Send me one line to say Yes.

---

1. Dating from the address and calendar.

[3023] TO FANNY MITCHELL, 30 MARCH 1861

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C3, pp. 37–38.

12. Harley Street, W. | March 30th 1861

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I have unfortunately no hope of being able to get to Great Stanhope Street today or tomorrow – but in the course of next week I shall be very glad indeed to call at five o'clock.<sup>1</sup> In the meantime I have read Mrs Ferguson's specimens of versification and I greatly fear that her prospect of obtaining employment in English periodicals is more than doubtful.<sup>2</sup> In these cases I always force myself to "speak out" – and though the feeling of the little poems is excellent, the expression is not calculated, I am afraid, to recommend them to Editors or to do them justice with the public. This is only my individual opinion – and I am too sincerely anxious to be of service, if I can, to any friend of your's [sic], to rest satisfied with my own impression. I will therefore submit the "specimens" to the gentleman critically appointed to read all the new contributions (in poetry as well as prose) which are offered to "All The Year Round"<sup>3</sup> – and when I have the pleasure of calling in Great Stanhope Street, I will bring you his opinion as well as mine. I hope, for Mrs Ferguson's sake, that it may contradict mine as flatly as possible!

With compliments to Mr Mitchell

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC writes on a Saturday.
2. Mrs Ferguson and her verses remain unidentified.
3. Presumably W.H. Wills.

[3120] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 2 APRIL 1861

MS: Beccles.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C5, p. 5.

12. Harley Street, W. | April 2nd 1861

My dear Sir,

I am very glad to hear that we have sold another hundred – it looks well for our future prospects.<sup>2</sup>

The Revises reached me, an hour after I saw you. The printers have been very careful – and I have no alterations to propose. For the future, the book may fairly stand as it is.

Many thanks for your offer in relation to the copies. If you will kindly put aside one copy of the 10/6 edition (which I should like to keep for the sake of the illustrations), and if you will add to it six copies of the new edition, you will have obliged me with everything I can desire.<sup>3</sup>

Very faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

---

1. This letter was in a collection of papers in the archives of the printer William Clowes. Clowes did not print the books referred to but had recently printed the three-volume edition of The Woman in White, and at this time was printing the one-volume edition of that work for the publisher Sampson Low. The new edition of Rambles was advertised in that edition – see [0415] to Bentley, 8 May 1861 – but there seems no reason for Bentley to have passed this letter to Clowes. In 1873 Clowes printed WC's Miss or Mrs? for Bentley.

2. WC refers to Rambles Beyond Railways, originally published in 1851. Bentley published a new edition of the book in 1861. The original edition had 12 lithographs by WC's friend Henry Brandling, but the plates were lost and the new edition – with two of the original chapters deleted and 'the Cruise of the Tomtit' added – was published with an engraved frontispiece and an engraved cartouche on the title page. The new edition of Rambles was printed by Savill and Edwards, Chandos Street, Covent Garden.

3. WC refers to the original large octavo volume (1st edition 1851 at 15s; 2nd edition 1852, reduced to 10s-6d) with 12 lithographs, and the smaller revised new edition (1861, at 5s) without the lithographs.

[0407] TO ÉMILE FORGUES,<sup>1</sup> 8 APRIL 1861

MS: Fales, note on flap of empty envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 228.

12. Harley Street | London

Dear Monsieur Forgues,

I enclose sheets P. Q. R. This present supply will take you rather more than half way through the book.<sup>3</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Émile-Daurand Forgues (1813–83), French critic and translator of a number of WC's novels – see [0145] to F. O. Ward of 5 March 1853.

2. Directed to 'Monsieur E. D. Forgues | 2. Rue de Tourmon | Paris', postmarked in Britain 'LONDON W | XA | AP 8 | 61' and in France 'ANGL. | 9 | AVRIL | 61 | AMB | CALAIS B'.

3. Forgues was then translating The Woman in White and the sheets in question are those of the one-volume edition published by Sampson Low in the summer of 1861. Sheet R ends on page 256 of the 494-page edition, towards the end of Marian Halcombe's diary entry for 19 June where she records the overheard conversation between Glyde and Fosco exposing their plot. In Paris the novel appeared as a serial in Le Temps from 24 April 1861. The instalments were subsequently bound up and issued as a separate volume. The French book edition was published in two volumes later the same year by J. Hetzel, with a new preface by WC. By 1881 Hetzel had issued a 10th edition.

[0408] TO ALFRED E. GALLOWAY,<sup>1</sup> 12 APRIL 1861

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 228–229.

12. Harley Street, W. | 12th April 1861

Dear Sir,

I will very readily make the inquiry which you suggest, and will let you know what answer I receive from Mr Wills.<sup>2</sup>

“The Spectator” reaches me regularly, and I am much obliged to you for sending it. So far as I am qualified to judge, the paper is excellently conducted – the literary portion of it (which I may perhaps claim to pass an opinion on) being written with an intelligence of appreciation and a fairness of judgement, which some of The Spectator’s weekly contemporaries would do well to emulate. I had the pleasure, a few days since, of mentioning what I really thought of the paper (in this particular aspect) to one of the writers in the Révue des deux Mondes,<sup>3</sup> who asked me to tell him which of our weekly journals could give a foreign critic the most reliable information on the subject of our contemporary literature.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Alfred E. Galloway Esq

---

1. Alfred Edmund Galloway (c.1825–1893), printer and publisher of the Leader in the mid-1850s (see [0215] to Edward Pigott, 2 July 1855), and ~~presumably~~ at this point involved in the production of the Spectator, the then liberal weekly review of politics and literature founded in 1828 (see [3315] to him of 9 August 1862).

2. The nature of the enquiry has not been identified, but, given the reference to W. H. Wills, probably relates to the printing of All the Year Round.

3. Probably referring to Émile Forgues.

[0409] TO ÉMILE FORGUES, 13 APRIL 1861

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 229.

12. Harley Street. London. W. | 13th April 1861

Dear Monsieur Forgues

Your interesting letter has reached me safely. I subscribe to every word you say about Balzac. It is the plainest truth and the wisest criticism.

John Forster is a very intimate and valued friend of mine. He is just now away from London – but I have sent your kind message to him in writing, and I know he will be delighted to receive it. You will, no doubt, hear from him, when he comes back. I am very glad you have so high an opinion of his works. He holds the first rank now among our living historians.

I enclose three more sheets – S.T.U. Sheet T. has been scratched over by the printers to indicate where the “setting” of the type may be improved – but it is easily legible I hope.<sup>1</sup> The entire book runs, in this edition, to 494 pages.<sup>2</sup> The end of the first volume in your translation will therefore come at page 246 – and the second volume will begin with the chapter numbered IX. on that page. If, however, it is not absolutely necessary that both the volumes should be of the same length, and if you think it desirable that the first volume should end with some stronger point in the story than the point which occurs at page 246 (End of chapter VIII), I leave the close of the volume to be decided entirely at your discretion.<sup>3</sup> Whatever you think best will, I am sure, be best for the book.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0407] to Forgues of 8 April 1861, where WC sends sheets P., Q. and R.

2. Referring to the pagination of the 1861 British single-volume edition of The Woman in White.

3. The first volume of the French edition ends on p. 402, part way through Marian Halcombe’s Narrative for 19 June, after ‘The Countess was the impediment, this time’. The second volume is of approximately the same length, ending on p. 412.

[0410] TO CHARLES WARD, 16 APRIL 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/25). Published: BGLL, I, p. 230.

12. Harley Street, W. | Tuesday 16th April

My dear Ward,

Will you come and dine here at six on Thursday next? Caroline and I have both been on the sick list since we saw you.

Ever yours | WC

The cheap edition of that eternal Woman In White promises to beat everything we have done yet. We start with 10,000 copies and Low expects to sell 50,000 before we have done! I have had to sit again – for the photographs can't keep up with us.<sup>1</sup> We publish on Chimney-Sweepers' Day,<sup>2</sup> price 6/

---

1. The one-volume edition with an oval photograph of WC by Cundall & Downes pasted into every copy.

2. That is, the First of May.

[3276] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, 16 APRIL [1861]

MS: Trinity (Crewe Bequest). Published: A&C10, p. 6.

12. Harley Street | April 16th

A photograph for your copy of the book – if it is worth the trouble of sticking it in. –<sup>1</sup>

WC

---

1. Pasted in facing the title page of a first edition of The Woman in White dedicated to Milnes – see [3275] to him of August 1860. The photograph by Cundall, Downes & Co. of 168 New Bond Street is a square print of the usually oval photograph pasted in to the first one-volume edition, which was published in April 1861. This determines the year of the letter.

[0411] TO EDWARD WALFORD,<sup>1</sup> 17 APRIL 1861

MS: Columbia (Spec. MS Coll. J. H. Samuels). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 230–231.

12. Harley Street, W. | 17th April 1861

Sir,

I regret that it is quite impossible for me to correct a production which is so essentially incorrigible as the biographical notice that accompanies your letter. I will mention the main errors, as a matter of personal courtesy towards yourself – and will leave it to you to decide whether the Memoir ought in common justice to be rewritten or not.

I was not born in 1825, but in 1824. My mother (although she is a sister of Mrs Carpenter's) is not a daughter of the late Mr Geddes the painter. At the date of the Memoir, I was “chiefly known to the public” (as every other writer is) by those works of mine which had attained the largest circulation. They were – previously to the year 1860 – “Basil”, “After Dark”, and “The Dead Secret” – not the life of my father or “Antonina” which have had fewer readers than any of my other works. “Rambles Beyond Railways” was not a “collection of prose sketches” but a narrative of a walking tour in Cornwall (the third edition of which has just been published). Before I wrote the drama of “The Frozen Deep”, I produced The Lighthouse (first played in private at Tavistock House, and then performed at The Olympic Theatre). So much for the correction necessary to the Memoir of me, as it now stands.

For the new issue of the work under your superintendence I have only to add, that my last published work is The Woman In White. This book has already gone through many editions in England and America, and has been translated into French and German.

What the meaning may be of the singular statement which charges me with “putting myself forward as a critic of art”, I cannot undertake to say! Where I put myself forward, and when, I have not the least idea. I criticise nothing – not even the peculiar form of literary art which my obliging biographer sets before me in his “The Men of the Time”.

I am, Sir, | Your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins
Edward Walford

---

1. Edward Walford (1823–97), classicist, biographer and editor. Walford included WC in his ‘Photographic Portraits of Living Celebrities, the series of five-shilling monthly numbers which ran from May 1856 to August 1859, started by Herbert Fry ... and continued by Walford from September 1856’ (Pilgrim, VIII, p. 200 n. 3). This letter refers to the entry in the Routledge biographical dictionary Men of the Time. A new revised edition was published in 1862 under the editorship of Walford – correcting the errors WC points out in the previous edition of 1857.

[0412] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, 18 APRIL 1861

MS: Trinity (Houghton 6/81). Published: BGLL, I, p. 231.

12. Harley Street, W. | April 18th 1861

Dear Mr Milnes,

Many thanks for your kind note – which reached me with the Secretary’s official announcement. I need hardly say that I have received the news of my election with very great pleasure, and that I am sincerely sensible of the honour which the Committee has kindly conferred upon me.<sup>1</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Richard Monckton Milnes Esqr | M.P. &c &c

---

1. Sponsored by Milnes, WC was elected to the Athenæum on 16 April 1861 under Rule II of the club, by invitation of the General Committee for ‘persons of distinguished eminence in Science, Literature or the Arts’. He remained a member all his life.

[0413] TO CHARLES WARD, 22 APRIL 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/26). Published: BGLL, I, p. 232.

12. Harley Street, W. | April 22nd 1861

My dear Ward,

On the other side I send the order on Hetzel which you kindly promised to forward to Paris.<sup>1</sup>

The Athenæum has been paid I suppose,<sup>2</sup> and the bill has been dishcounted [sic]?<sup>3</sup> Let me have one line to say you have received this.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The second leaf of the folding notepaper has been torn away, indicating that the order was sent. The order on the Parisian publisher Jules Hetzel presumably relates to the appearance of the French translation of The Woman in White.
2. At this time the entrance fee for the Athenæum Club was 25 gns (£26-5s) and the annual subscription 6 gns (£6-6s), which accounts for the sum of £32-11s (31 gns) paid out of WC’s Coutts account on 20 April (Coutts: WC). WC remained a member all his life.

3. On 19 April WC’s account shows £200 received from Sampson Low with a charge of £2-9-10 for immediate payment (Coutts: WC).

[0414] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, 23 APRIL 1861

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 232.

12. Harley Street, W. | 23rd April 1861

Dear Mr Milnes,

Many thanks for your kind invitation. I am sorry to say I have engagements already for Thursday evening which will not allow me the chance of presenting myself in Brook Street.<sup>1</sup> Pray make my apologies to Mrs Milnes, and

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The Milnes's London residence at 16 Upper Brook Street, in the West End of London, running between Grosvenor Square and Park Lane.

[0415] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 8 MAY 1861

MS: BL (Add. 33964, f. 244). Facsimile: Compton-Rickett, p. 109. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 232–233.

12. Harley Street. W. | 8th May 1861

My dear Sir,

One line to jog your memory. The promised account of the Rambles (2nd Ed:) has not reached me yet.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre /

P.S. I have arranged with Messrs Low to advertise our present edition of the Rambles on the fly-leaf of The Woman In White, in the last new Edition.<sup>2</sup> It comes in as a supplement to the announcement of my collected works.

---

1. Referring to the second edition published early in 1852.

2. Bentley was just publishing a new, cheaper, abbreviated edition ('our present edition') of Rambles Beyond Railways, sharing the profits fifty-fifty with WC – see the agreement dated 11 May 1861 (BL Add. 46617, ff. 256–7). The edition was advertised at 5s and contained only two black-and-white illustrations, though 'The Cruise of the Tomtit' was appended. The Woman in White was published by Sampson Low in the new uniform edition of WC's novels. The advert in question appears after p. 494.

[0416] TO CHARLES WARD, [17] MAY 1861<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/78). Published: BGLL, I, p. 233.

12. Harley Street | Friday

My dear Ward,

If you have nothing to do on Tuesday next come and dine here at 6 o'Clock. The weather obliges me to keep this week open for going to Farnham<sup>2</sup>

ever yours | WC

We bound another hundred of The Rambles on Wednesday – and sold them all the same day. I can't get my own presentation copies yet.

---

1. Conjectural dating from the publication of Rambles.

2. The visit is probably connected to the fact that Caroline's daughter Elizabeth Harriet attended the Ladies Boarding School in Farnham from October 1860 until October 1863. See Paul Lewis, Educating Elizabeth Harriet Graves, Wilkie Collins Society, May 2010.

[0417] TO LUDWIG LÖFFLER,<sup>1</sup> 20 MAY 1861

MS: Manchester (m254/ 13/2, p. 19). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 233–234.

12. Harley Street | Cavendish Square | London | May 20th 1861

Sir,

Your letter has been forwarded to me by Messrs Sampson Low & Son.

I beg to inform you that the right of translating The Woman In White into German was sold by me (when the book was published last autumn) to Messrs Voigt & Günther of Leipzig, and that the translation was published shortly afterwards by my authority.<sup>2</sup>

Under these circumstances, I can only thank you for making me the proposal which your letter contains, and which it is now too late for me to profit by.

I remain, Sir, | Your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins
Herr Ludwig Löffler

---

1. Unidentified German translator.

2. Die Frau in Weiss, trans. Marie Scott (2 vols, Leipzig: Voigt & Günther, 1862). Thus in GV, though there may have been an earlier edition. After the title page the printed dedication reads: 'To W. Henry Wills Esqre this translation is gratefully inscribed'.

[0418] TO HERBERT WATKINS, 20 MAY 1861

MS: Hanes. Published: BGLL, I, p. 234.

12, Harley Street. W. | May 20th 1861

Dear Mr Watkins,

If you are still in the same mind about taking a small whole-length Photograph of me, <sup>1</sup> I am now entirely at your service, any day you like to appoint, after Wednesday next.

Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0399] to Watkins of 18 February 1861. An image of the resulting portrait is found at the Lewis website.

[0419] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 24 MAY 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/59), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 192–193. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 234.

Friday May 24th 1861

My dear Mother,

If you receive a copy of The Daily Telegraph which I have posted to day (to Basset) and if you look at the Report of The Newsvendors' Benevolent Institution, you will find that I have come out in a new character as Chairman at a Public Festival.<sup>2</sup> The report is wretchedly meagre – but it is better than nothing – and I may tell you privately and personally that I really achieved a great success – and was followed out of the room (at the end of the proceedings) by the applause of the whole company, who stood up to cheer me. I “prepared” myself for only one toast – the toast of the evening – left all the rest to the spur of the moment, and, to my own profound astonishment, found myself speaking with the smoothness and composure of an “old hand”. I said nothing about my inexperience till the end of the evening when they drank my health and thanked me – and then I told them I would confess, when I had fairly won their approval, what I had been resolved not to acknowledge until I had won it – that this was my first public appearance as Chairman of a Meeting. This brought down a prodigious burst of cheering – and Webster (of the Adelphi)<sup>3</sup> who sat at my right hand, and “supported” me in the kindest manner “booked” me as Chairman at the next public solemnity that he might be concerned with. I tell you all this because you will be glad to hear it. The practical upshot of it is, that this newly-discovered knack of mine may really help my books, by occasionally bringing me before the public, in the speechifying capacity which Englishmen are so unaccountably fond of admiring. So there is an end of that matter.

Let me know beforehand when you come to Clarence Terrace. I am slowly – very slowly – building up the scaffolding of the new book.<sup>4</sup> Egg has come back – but I have not yet seen him (having been out when he called). We had (The Dickenses, Forster, &c) a capital day on the river, in a private steamer, with Scott Russell,<sup>5</sup> on Wednesday. Charley and Katie were “indisposed” and did not go with us – nothing very particular that I could hear of being the matter with either of them – except a cold of Katie’s. No more news. Kind regards at Basset, and congratulations on the prospect of Mrs Bullar’s return

ever afftly yours | WC

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of John Bullar Esqre | Basset Wood | near Southampton’. Postmarked: ‘LONDON | 4 | MY 24 | 61’.
  2. There were in fact rather more detailed reports of the annual meeting, held on Thursday, May 23, at the Freemason’s Tavern, of the Newsvendors’ Benevolent Institution, in the Morning Chronicle, Saturday, 25 May 1861, p. 5, and the Era, Sunday, 26 May 1861, p. 5. WC was asked to take over the role of chairman due to the indisposition of CD.
  3. Benjamin Webster (1798–1882: ODNB), actor, proprietor, manager of the Theatre Royal Adelphi during the 1860s.
  4. No Name.
  5. John Scott Russell (1808–1882: ODNB), engineer and naval architect, who had acted as railway editor on the Daily News under CD (Pilgrim, VII, p. 351 n.4),

[0420] TO E. T. SOUNDY,<sup>1</sup> 30 MAY 1861

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 234.

12, Harley Street, W. | May 30th 1861

Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter and for the little Poem enclosed, which I have read with great pleasure, and which appears to me to possess the merit – by no means a common one – of being very well adapted for music, both in sentiment and versification. I assure you I feel very sincerely the compliment which you have paid to my book – and I need therefore hardly add that I willingly accede to your proposal to mention on the title page of “Laura’s Song” that it was suggested by the perusal of my story.

I remain, Sir, | Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins
To | E.T. Soundy Esq<sup>re</sup>

-
1. Little known song-writer, who created the lyrics of ‘Bright Leaves are in the Garden’ and ‘Little Cares’. A number of his titles are found on the BL Music Catalogue.

[0421] TO CHARLES READE,<sup>1</sup> 4 JUNE 1861

MS: Noel. Published: B&C, I, pp. 193–194 (incomplete); BGLL, I, pp. 235–236. Extract: Clareson, p. 108.

12, Harley Street, W. | London | June 4th 1861

My dear Reade,

I am sincerely glad to hear that you have got some rest and change. You have the work of a writer to do in this world, as well as the work of a reformer – and you have earned (and more than earned) the right to turn your back on the annoyances, delays, and disappointments of litigation,<sup>2</sup> and to take breath again in a higher and purer atmosphere both for body and mind.

I entirely agree with you about the shipless sea at Brighton.<sup>3</sup> My usual sea-side resort of late years has been Broadstairs for the very reason that the North Foreland and the great human necessity of making “short cuts” by sea as well as by land, insure together, a perpetual procession of ships past that little seaside village, in necessarily close neighbourhood to the shore. I like Margate too – except the back settlements of the town, which, for uncompromising ghastly ugliness strike me as equal to any suburban achievements of the same kind in any part of England. But the sea-side part of the town where you are is as lively and as healthy a place to live in as one could wish to find. I shall probably be at Broadstairs this autumn – alternating hard work at a new story, with short trips to sea in the roomy old English luggers of my friends and allies the boatmen. If you could come on one of those trips, we might make a pleasant time of it. I assume – after “Love Me Little, Love Me Long” (Vol 2nd)<sup>4</sup> – that you and the sea understand each other thoroughly, and never disagree under any circumstances however stormy!

As for my present proceedings, I am slowly putting up the scaffolding of the book which is yet to be built. My poles tumble about my ears, and my lashings come undone, and my boards won't fit – in plainer words, I have cut myself out a tough job in invention and construction of story this time, but I hope to get the better of it in a few weeks more. Not a line of the book is to be periodically published – thank God – before the end of this year or the beginning of next. Dickens finishes in August – and Bulwer is to follow him (in All The Year Round) with a new story – and I am to follow Bulwer – so there is plenty of time for me, at any rate.<sup>5</sup> Give my kindest regards to Robson,<sup>6</sup> and my best wishes for his speedy recovery. I have not seen him (to speak of) since the time of my unlucky play at The Olympic<sup>7</sup> – but I have, and always shall have, the pleasantest recollections of his kindness and sympathy, and of the Sander's as well.<sup>8</sup>

Except short trips of a day or two, I shall be in town (probably) till the end of July – If you are ever near here, between this time and that, come and “report yourself” to yours ever

truly | Wilkie Collins

Charles Reade Esqre

---

1. Charles Reade (1814–84: ODNB), dramatist, novelist, journalist, non-resident fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, famed for his litigiousness.

2. Reade had written to WC from Margate, 31 May 1861: ‘My complaint was relaxed uvula brought on I believe by the worry and anxiety of Reade v. this thief and Reade v. that rogue and Reade v. the other swindler’ (Clareson, p. 108).

3. Reade had written ‘that Margate was far superior to the “shipless sea” of Brighton’ (Clareson, p. 108).

4. Published in two volumes in 1859.

5. Great Expectations ran from 1 December 1860 to 3 August 1861. Bulwer-Lytton's A Strange Story commenced the following week and ended on 8 March 1862. WC's No Name began the following week and ended on 17 January 1863.

6. According to Clareson (p. 108), Reade had written ‘that Frank Robson was recuperating ... at Margate’. If so, WC clearly took him to mean Frederick Robson, the joint-manager of the Royal Olympic Theatre – see the notes to [0297] to his partner W. S. Emden of 24 February 1859.

7. The Red Vial of 1858.

8. Unidentified – presumably referring to a family of the name ‘Sanders’ or ‘Saunders’.

[0422] TO SAMPSON LOW, 7 JUNE 1861

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, I, p. 236.

12. Harley Street, W. | Friday June 7th

My dear Sir,

I will either send you or bring you the 1st and 2nd Volumes of “Hide and Seek” corrected for the new Edition, on Tuesday next.<sup>1</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Sampson Low, Esqre

---

1. With its new sub-title, ‘The Mystery of Mary Grice’, and ‘with revised text and a frontispiece by John Gilbert’ the novel was published for the first time in a single volume by Sampson Low in 1861 (Gasson, pp. 78–80).

[0423] TO HERBERT WATKINS, 12 JUNE 1861

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:5). Published: BGLL, I, p. 237.

12. Harley Street, W. | June 12th 1861

My dear Mr Watkins,

Many thanks for the portraits which you have so kindly sent to me.<sup>1</sup> All my friends who have hitherto seen them, say they are admirable likenesses – and I who have no claim to be an authority on this point, may at least add – as an impartial opinion of my own – that they are also admirable photographs.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The full-length portraits mentioned in [0418] to Watkins of 20 May 1861, images of which can be found at the Lewis website.

[0424] TO MARY LOUISA BOYLE,<sup>1</sup> 13 JUNE 1861

MS: Harkness. Published: BGLL, I, p. 237.

12. Harley Street, W. | June 13th 1861

Dear Miss Boyle,

I return the photograph with my sign-manual attached, and with a very sincere sense of the interest which your friend pays me the compliment of taking in my books.

If you will do me the honour to look attentively at the portrait enclosed,<sup>2</sup> I think you will see that it represents a man who considers it to be rather his misfortune than his fault if he has not yet been able to pay his long-deferred visit to Miss Boyle – who hopes ere long to make his apologies personally – and who trusts in the meantime to that indulgence which the penitence of Man but too often receives from the clemency of Woman. In these terms my portrait speaks for me – and, as I am unworthy to speak for myself, I say no more.

Very sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Mary Louisa Boyle (1810–90: ODNB), writer, friend of CD, who often acted in his private theatricals, see Pilgrim, VI, p. 169 n.

2. Accompanying the letter is a photograph of WC sitting at a writing table, with his ‘sign-manual’ – ‘Wilkie | Collins’.

[0425] TO LADY LOUISA GOLDSMID,<sup>1</sup> 14 JUNE 1861

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 68–69; BGLL, I, pp. 238–239.

12. Harley Street, W. | June 14th 1861

Dear Lady Goldsmid,

There is a phrase in the Agreement – “during the legal term of Copyright” – which is new to my experience of such documents, and the effect of which, so far as I can understand it, is to oblige Miss Beaufort<sup>2</sup> to publish all editions of her book with Messrs Longman, according to the terms of the present agreement. I see nothing to prevent her from formally withholding her permission to publish a new edition – but, unless I am greatly mistaken, this exertion of the author’s authority is rendered practically useless, because the terms of the Agreement prevent Miss Beaufort from treating for any future editions of her book, with any other publishers. Every edition of the book published during Miss Beaufort’s life (and after her life, so long as the copyright term allowed by law lasts) must be published in partnership with Messrs Longman – or not published at all. That is my interpretation of the document – but it may be (and, for Miss Beaufort’s sake, I hope it is) wrong. The eye of any practical lawyer will see through the mystery of the Agreement in five minutes, and will decide whether my view is justified.

I would advise Miss Beaufort not to make more corrections on the proof-sheets of her work than are absolutely needful – as I see that her share of the profits is to be charged with the expense of making these corrections at press, when it exceeds a certain sum. This clause also is new in my experience of agreements.

All questions of advertising, of copies sent for review, &c Miss Beaufort may safely leave to the experience of Messrs Longman. Her book cannot come out with a better name attached to it than theirs – or with better trade chances than their great reputation gives. I hope her success will be so complete as to leave her no cause to regret the terms on which the book is published.<sup>3</sup> If I can be of any further use my services are willingly placed at her disposal.

I remain | Dear Lady Goldsmid

Very sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins

Miss Beaufort should always ascertain what number of copies are printed of each edition. The numbers, the price, and the form of all editions, are questions on which she is equally interested with the publishers, and in relation to which she has an equal right of decision.

-
1. Lady Louisa Sophia Goldsmid (1819–1908: ODNB), feminist and advocate of women’s education, wife and cousin of the MP for Reading, Sir Francis Goldsmid (1808–78: ODNB), the first Jewish QC; on WC’s relations with the Goldsmid family, see Gasson & Baker, pp. 184–186.
  2. Emily Anne Beaufort (1826–87), travel writer, author of Egyptian Sepulchres and Syrian Shrines, published in two volumes by Longman in 1861. She became Viscountess Strangford following her marriage in 1862 to Percy Smythe, eighth Viscount, who had written a glowing review of her book.
  3. Her next work, The Eastern Shores of the Adriatic, was in fact published in 1864 by Bentley.

[0426] TO E. M. WARD, 27 JUNE [1861]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 70; BGLL, I, p. 239. Summary: B&C, I, p. 195.

Thursday June 27th

My dear Ned,

I ought to have written to you before to account for and excuse my absence on Tuesday night. The plain truth is (though I keep it concealed from the doctor, in the hope of being able to do without him this time)<sup>2</sup> that my old enemy whose name is Liver has been attacking me lately. I went to bed on Tuesday night with a bad pain in my right side, when I ought to have been enjoying myself at your party – and, as pills and dieting don’t seem to do alone, I am going into the country tomorrow to try change of air. When I come back I shall report myself at Kent Villa. In the meantime pray make my excuses to Mrs Ward, and assure her that if I had been really well enough to come, I should most certainly not have failed.

With love to Alice and the children

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Since there is no written or printed address, the dating must be conjectural. Within the available range, 27 June falls on a Thursday only in 1850, 1861, 1867, 1872 and 1878. Together with the hand, the references to WC’s liver and the Wards’ residence at Kent Villa, plus the phrase ‘Alice and the children’, make the 1861 by far the strongest possibility. Coleman also opts for this date.
  2. Possibly Francis (Frank) Carr Beard (1814–93), FRCS, physician to the Dickens family from 1859, who started to attend WC around this time.

[0427] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 11 JULY 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/60). Published: B&C, I, pp. 196–197. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 239.

Albion Hotel | Broadstairs | Isle of Thanet | ~~12. Harley Street, W.~~<sup>1</sup>

July 11th 1861

My dear Mother,

I came here, last Friday, and propose staying till next Thursday the 18th – when I must get back to London for a week or so to collect all my literary goods and chattels for the writing of my new book. You will be glad to hear that I tried the outline of this said story upon Dickens, that he was immensely struck by it, and that he gave such an account of it to Wills in my absence, that the said Wills’s eyes rolled in his head with astonishment when he and I next met at the Office. If I can only write up to my design, I think I can hold the public fast, with an interest quite as strong as in The Woman In White, and with a totally different story.

I should like to have told you all this instead of writing it – but after hours of bewilderment over Bradshaw, I have discovered that the trains from Ramsgate only give me two chances in the day, one too early in the morning and one too late ~~at~~ in the afternoon. I must get down from London, and see you again, if I can, in that way, after leaving this place. In the meantime, write as soon as you can and let me know how you are, and whether the farmhouse is as pleasant as ever, and when Charley and Katie are expected in your neighbourhood, and how you get on for company. The only doubt I have, on reflection about your present place of retirement is that it may be a little too secluded and that you may feel lonely, now and then. Tell me how this is.<sup>2</sup>

The fine weather is tempting people to the seaside everyday – and Broadstairs is filling already. Things go on just as they did two years since – the flight of Time leaves no mark on this British watering-place. Here are the middle-aged ladies again, with the youthful strawhats, placidly unconscious of their own absurd appearance, and their own [del] disclosure of lean old legs through the fine exhibiting medium of crinoline. Here are the gentlemen looking through telescopes, the children digging perpetually in the sand, the fat-faced young English ladies reading cheap novels, the nursemaids giggling, the boatmen idling, the old women knitting, and the shopkeepers cheating – all apparently unchanged since I was here last. I have excellent rooms in the hotel, and the whole sweep of the sea confronting me, when I look up from this paper. Where I shall go for my autumn work I have not yet settled. Sometimes I think of stopping here – sometimes, of going to Scarborough – sometimes of exploring the unknown Suffolk coast, and nesting [del] quietly at Lowestoft. When I next write to you, or see you, I suppose I shall have settled something. For the present, my budget of news is at an end.

Let me have a [del] speedy answer to this – for I am really anxious to hear from you – and believe me

ever yours afftly | WC

---

1. WC draws a line through the engraved address.

2. Presumably referring to Canewood Farm, near Tunbridge Wells – see [3277] to HC, 22 July 1861.

[3277] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 22 JULY 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3150), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C10, p. 6.

Mrs Collins | at Mrs Taylor's | Canewood Farm | near Tunbridge Wells<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Postmarked 'LONDON-W | 6 | JY 22 | 61' and endorsed in Tunbridge Wells the following day. At Morgan the document is found, among other unattached envelopes without a unique MS number, between items MA 3150/88 and 3150/89.

2. On Reynolds Lane, St Johns, Tunbridge Wells.

[0428] TO GEORGE SMITH, 26 JULY 1861

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, I, p. 240, amended A&C10, p. 6.

12. Harley Street, W. | July 26th 1861

Dear Sir,

I have been away from town, and only returned last night, when I found your letter waiting for me.

If you can favour me with a call here at twelve o'clock tomorrow (Saturday) I shall be very glad to see you.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

G. Smith, Esqre

---

1. The result of this meeting was Smith's offer of £5,000 for serial and volume rights to a novel by WC – see [0429] to HC of 31 July 1861.

[0429] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 31 JULY 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/61). Published: B&C, I, pp. 197–198. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 240.

July 31st 1861

My dear Mother,

Here I am still in town, having been kept by literary business of a totally unexpected kind. Prepare yourself for an immense surprise – go out on the lawn, and take a good gasp of fresh air before you turn this page. Endeavour to consider me (if life and health last) in the light of a wealthy novelist – are you ready, after all this preparation? Then “read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest”:- First, Smith & Elder have bought me away from All The Year Round under circumstances which in Dickens’s opinion amply justify me in leaving. The said Smith & Elder offer me (in writing) for a work of fiction a little longer than The Woman In White – which /work of fiction/ is to follow the story I am now going away to write for “All The Year Round” – the sum of —

Five Thousand Pounds<sup>1</sup> | ! ! ! ! ! | Ha! ha! ha! | =

Five thousand pounds, for a /nine months or, at most, a/ year’s work – nobody but Dickens has made as much.

I am giving Low, as a mere formality, the right of bidding for this future new book, without (of course) telling him the sum I am offered. He is certain not to approach the amount which Smith & Elder propose – so the affair is (if all goes well) as good as settled.

The Story I am going to write for All The Year Round will be bid for by three other publishers – and Smith & Elder will again [~~] outbid them to get it.<sup>2</sup> The second story to follow – namely, the Five thousand pounder, – will in all probability be published as a separate serial work.<sup>3</sup> So I now stand committed (if I can manage it) to a work of fiction to be published /(after appearing in All The Year Round)/ as a book in 1862, and to a /another/ book of fiction to be published as a separate serial story, in 1863 & 4.<sup>4</sup> So that, if I live & keep my brains in good working order, I shall have got to the top of the tree, after all, before forty. Keep all this startling intelligence a profound secret from everyone but Charley – in case you see him shortly or write to him. It is very important that nobody should know it, until the agreements are signed and the whole business completed in relation to both books.~~

Have you found a house? How are you? Does the solitude of that farmhouse begin to tell [~~] on you?<sup>5</sup> Send me a line by return of post, directed [~~] here. I shall not start for Whitby till Monday next – so, if the man does’nt forget to call for this letter there will be plenty of time for you to write before I go.~~~~

Ever yours afftly | W.C

---

1. WC writes this out in large bold letters.

2. WC’s next book was No Name serialised in All the Year Round from 15 March 1862–17 January 1863 and in fact published in book form by Sampson Low in December 1862.

3. That is, in independent monthly numbers.

4. Armada, serialised in the Cornhill in monthly parts from November 1864–June 1866 and published in book form in June 1866.

5. Presumably referring again to Canewood Farm, near Tunbridge Wells – see [3277] to HC, 22 July 1861.

[0430] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 7 AUGUST 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/62) and Parrish.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 179. Published: B&C (incomplete), I, pp. 198–99; BGLL, I, pp. 240–241, amended A&C5, p. 19.

Royal Hotel | Whitby | Augt 7th 1861

My dear Mother,

I am at last established here, in excellent rooms, and in one of the finest places in England.<sup>2</sup> Three large bow windows (on one side of the sitting-room) show me the German Ocean, the pier, the cliffs, and hundreds of fishing-boats, deep-laden with herrings. On the other side of the room, two more windows look out over the town, and the ruins of Whitby Abbey (celebrated in “Marmion”) on the cliff above.<sup>3</sup> The approach to this place by railroad is unique in its beauty. The line follows the windings of a valley with the Yorkshire Moors rising on each side of it. Woody heath and a rocky stream (the Esk) kept me looking out of the carriage windows in increasing astonishment and admiration for the last hour and a half of the journey. Everything in and about this place is on the grandest scale – it is like journeying into another world, after the spick-and-span prettiness of the Southern watering places. You would be enchanted with Whitby – and I only wish you could come here, and enjoy it with me.

The five thousand pound negotiation is settled. I signed the agreement on Saturday morning. The first monthly part of the new book to be delivered in manuscript on the 1st of December 1862 – the fifteen remaining parts to follow regularly each month – and the five thousand pounds to be paid, as the novel is written, in monthly instalments – no bills at long dates, and no difficulties, or complications of any kind. Smith & Elder have dealt with me like princes – and they are also to have the story I am now going to begin for All The Year Round, at the highest price that may be offered by the other publishers, for its republication in book form. So here I am “let” (if I live) for the next three years. Keep all this a profound secret from everybody – for fear of false reports about me and “All The Year Round” getting into the papers – and also to keep Low in the dark about the sum offered to me – he has not said anything but I have reason to believe that he is finely exasperated at losing me.<sup>4</sup>

Upon the whole, I think I am glad to hear of your change of abode – it takes you more into “the world”, and more within reach of friends. Whatever you do, get a comfortable place where you settle – in a good high airy situation. You live so cheaply in<sup>5</sup> all other respects, that you can really and truly afford to pay for comfort in-doors and for a view of something better than brick houses out of doors. Write again soon – and tell me all your news, and if there is any prospect of your finding a permanent residence.

Ever yours affly | WC

Charley and Katie are at Gadshill I suppose? I heard from Charley last week, and will write to him in a day or two.

---

1. The MS is incomplete at Morgan, the missing portion being found at Parrish.

2. Despite appearances WC was travelling in company with Caroline Graves.

3. See Scott's Marmion, Canto 2 (where 'The Abbess of Saint Hilda' is described).

4. In the event Low's bid for the volume rights to the novel in All the Year Round (No Name) was successful.

5. The remaining part of the MS is found in the Parrish Collection, the torn second leaf of a note-sheet containing the final page of what was originally a three-page letter. The fit is perfect in both physical and textual terms.

[0431] TO GEORGE GREGSON,<sup>1</sup> 7 AUGUST 1861

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, I, p. 242.

Royal Hotel | Whitby | Aug<sup>t</sup> 7th 1861

My dear Sir,

We reached this place yesterday evening, and having found excellent accommodation at the Hotel, we propose making some stay here.

So far, Whitby more than answers my expectations. The situation of the place is magnificent – far finer, in my opinion, than Scarborough – and the approach to it by the railway (which is all I have seen yet) is most beautiful.

I enclose some postage-stamps, if you will kindly use them in forwarding any letters, or proof-sheets, which may be sent to me. The proofs will arrive in pamphlet form – and will merely require the correction of the address and a new stamp to reach me by book post.<sup>2</sup>

With kind regards from Mrs Collin's<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | My dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

George Gregson Esqre

---

1. George Gregson, from Liverpool, unmarried and aged 41 at the time of the 1861 Census. A dental surgeon, he was

WC's landlord at 12 Harley Street from March 1860 to December 1864, and also looked after his teeth – see to him of [0843] of 6 July 1868.

2. Referring to proofs of the first single-volume reprint of Hide and Seek – see [0438] to Sampson Low of 2 September 1861.

3. Thus for Caroline Graves, with whom Wilkie lived as husband and wife at 12 Harley Street. She was described as his spouse in the Census return of April 1861. She accompanied him to Whitby.

[0432] TO ANNABEL MILNES,<sup>1</sup> 19 AUGUST 1861

MS: Trinity (Houghton 6/82). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 242–243.

Royal Hotel | Whitby | Augt 19th 1861

Dear Mrs Milnes,

When your kind letter reached me today, I was about to write to Fryston – and to write in great disappointment, for I am afraid I shall not have the pleasure of paying you my anticipated visit. Letters reached me by yesterday's post which will oblige me to go back to London earlier than I expected,<sup>2</sup> and my engagements at this place during my short remaining stay, allow me no chance of leaving it before my return to town. I am very, very sorry to miss the pleasant days which you so kindly offer me – but I have no other choice than to ask you and Mr Milnes to accept my excuses in this letter, until I have some future opportunity of renewing them in person.

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See WC's reply [0401] of 5 March 1861 to an earlier social invitation from the wife of Richard Monckton Milnes.

2. [0434] to HC of 22 August suggests that this may have been a polite fiction.

[0433] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 20 AUGUST 1861

MS: UCLA (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, I, p. 243.

Royal Hotel | Whitby | Augt 20th 1861

My dear Sir,

Will you kindly direct one copy of the last edition of "Rambles" to be given to the Bearer.<sup>1</sup> I wish to make a present of it to a friend who is going to Cornwall,<sup>2</sup> and I am not within reach of my little store of presentation copies at home.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. The new cheaper, abbreviated edition published in May – see [0415] to George Bentley of 8 May 1861.

2. The friend in question has not been identified.

[0434] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 22 AUGUST 1861

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, pp. 199–200. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 243–44.

Royal Hotel | Whitby | Augt 22nd 1861

~~12. Harley Street, W.~~<sup>2</sup>

My dear Mother,

Two lines, before you leave Tunbridge Wells, to thank you for your letter. I assume that the project (of which I heard from Charley) of your taking a house in a kind of partnership with your present landlord is abandoned? Upon the whole I think this is as well – because it leaves you freer of responsibility. When you return in October I shall be able to see for myself how you are lodged.

I have just done the first weekly part of my new story. Names of the two heroines – Norah and Magdalen. Will that do for the women? It was no joke getting back, after my hand had been out so long, to writing fiction. I made several false starts – but have at last fairly bowled off, to my own sufficient satisfaction.<sup>3</sup> (N.B. Don't mention the said heroines' names to anybody).

I propose at the moment getting back the first week in September. Though the hotel is comfortable, the people all attention, and my rooms magnificent – the house is noisy, and working against noise is the hardest work of all. I shall get on best next month at Harley Street – and shall (perhaps) go sailing a day or two with Pigott at the end of September. You may imagine how the children interrupt me here when I tell you that among the British matrons established in the Hotel is a Rabbit with fourteen young ones. She doesn't look at all ashamed of herself – nor her husband either.

As for the place itself – the walks and drives – the more I see the more I admire.

I heard from Charley the other day – all well.

Mind you travel first class, and take care of yourself – I shall expect to hear of your safe arrival at Maidenhead, and some news of the Langtons<sup>4</sup> – whose good prospects I rejoice in.

It is (for the first time since my visit) pouring with rain which has lasted all day – I have had eight hours good work – the waiter is coming in with dinner. So good bye.

Ever affly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | 1. Rutland Cottages, | York Road | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked in Whitby the following day.

2. WC erases the embossed Harley Street address, centred, with a single line.

3. Referring to No Name.

4. See [0440] to HC, 6 September 1861.

[0435] TO CHARLES WARD, 22 AUGUST 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/27). Published: B&C, I, pp. 200–1. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 244.

Royal Hotel | Whitby | Augt 22nd 1861

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>1</sup>

You will see why this is “Private” on the next page.

My dear Ward,

Am I right in supposing that you are back at the Strand? I think so – and write accordingly. Years seem to have elapsed since I last saw or heard of you.

We came back from Broadstairs on the 18th of July – stopped in town till the 5th of Augt – then came here. This is one of the most magnificent places in England. We see the ruins of a [del] twelfth-century Abbey out of our sitting-room windows – a picturesque lively fishing town – a superb sea – lovely inland walks and drives in endless variety – such is Whitby.

This Hotel is terribly noisy – but otherwise excellent. We are lodged in the most magnificent of all the private-rooms, and enjoy the services of an excellent man cook. I have started my new story, and am just at the end of the first weekly number.

Talking of stories, I have news that will astonish you. After this book is done, I leave (with Dickens's full approval) “All The Year Round”. Smith & Elder have signed agreements to give me Five Thousand Pounds, for the copyright of a new work,<sup>2</sup> to follow the story I am now beginning and to be published either as a separate serial, or in the Cornhill Magazine, as they please. No /living/ novelist (except Dickens) has had such an offer as this for one book. If I only live to earn the money, I have a chance at last of putting something by against a rainy day, or a turn in the public caprice, or any other literary misfortune. Smith & Elder are also (as is only fair) to have the refusal of the republication of my [del] story now on the anvil at the highest terms offered for it by any other publisher. Keep all these changes and future projects a profound secret from everybody. Otherwise, misrepresentation of my withdrawal from All The Year Round might get about – and Low is so exasperated at losing me, that I want also to keep him in the dark about my new publishers' names and the price – of both which facts he is now ignorant.

We shall (please God) return probably the first week in September – to get me on with my work which I can pursue more quietly at home than here. Perhaps, we may be back earlier. In the mean time, write /here/ and tell me all your news. Also, please look at my account and tell me 1st what my present balance is? 2<sup>ndly</sup> whether [del] my Life Insurance Premium was paid to The National Provident in July last?<sup>3</sup>

How are Jane and the children? My mother is going to visit the Langtons & the Combes & afterwards to see Mrs Dyke – to return to Tunbridge Wells and settle in the best unfurnished apartments she can find. Charley & Katie are at Gadshill. Caroline sends you her kind regards – she is getting great benefit from this fine air – and so ends my budget.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC erases the embossed Harley Street address, centred, with a single line.
2. The story he was beginning was No Name and the next novel for which Smith offered £5000 would be Armada which was serialised in Cornhill.
3. WC took out a life insurance policy for £400 in July 1861. The premium of £5-9s-10d was paid on 1 July 1861 and continued each year until his death (Coutts: WC).

[0436] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 24 AUGUST 1861

MS: Unknown. On sale: Maggs Bros Ltd, Catalogue 1292 (2000), no. 34. Published: BGLL, I, p. 244.

Whitby | August 24th 1861

Dear sir,

I have been staying at this place for a short time and your note has just followed me. I have great pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of it, and in so complying with the request which you are good enough to make for my Autograph.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

[0437] TO CHARLES WARD, 26 AUGUST 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/28), damaged. Published: BGLL, I, p. 245.

Royal Hotel, Whitby | Monday, Augt 26th 1861

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for your letter. Since I wrote, my plans are changed. The noises, indoors and out, of this otherwise delightful place (comprising children by hundreds under the windows, and a brass band hired by the proprietor to play regularly four hours a day for the benefit of his visitors) are keeping me back so seriously with my work, that I must either leave Whitby or lose time which is of the last importance to me. Instead of remaining away next month I shall work quietly through the [excised text]<sup>1</sup>

... me to look at certain localities which I may want for my story. You will receive this letter, tomorrow (Tuesday) morning. Will you get three £5 notes for the enclosed cheque, and send them to me by return of post in a registered letter, so that I may receive them on Wednesday morning.<sup>2</sup> My address (on Wednesday morning only) will be,

The George Hotel | York.<sup>3</sup>

[valediction and signature excised]

If any accident should prevent your sending the money by Tuesday's post keep it back – and I must telegraph to you, if necessary – for I don't know what my address will be after Wednesday morning next.

-
1. The foot of the page has been cut away in a neat rectangle, presumably for the signature on the verso. Perhaps five or six lines of text have been lost.
  2. £15 was debited to WC's bank account as 'Travelling Exps' (Coutts: WC).
  3. See [0440] to HC of 6 September for an account of his journey back to London from Whitby.

[0438] TO SAMPSON LOW, 2 SEPTEMBER 1861

MS: Wolff Collection (1357b). Published: Wolff, pp. 260–261 ; BGLL, I, pp. 245–246..

September 2nd 1861

Dear Sir,

I have had no earlier opportunity of returning the proofs, which I now send back corrected for press to the end – except the last two pages which have been written expressly for this edition, and of which I wish to see a Revise.

I also send the Title-page, dedication, new Preface, and note for the end of the book.<sup>1</sup> If you will send the proof of these, and the Revise of pages 353 & 354, to Harley Street you shall have them back by return of post.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Sampson Low Esqre /

P.S. I enclose two suggestions for the lettering to the Illustration – leaving the choice between them to your discretion.<sup>2</sup>

“Hide and Seek”

Lettering for the Illustration

=

“..... holding the light above her, she advanced slowly from the studio doorway, with her eyes bent on the ground, searching anxiously for the missing bodkincase.

“Mat’s resolution was taken the moment he caught sight of her.” | See Page 279.

or, if this lettering is considered too long, a mere reference to the page may be substituted, thus:

—

See Page 279.

---

1. Referring to Hide and Seek in the revised single-volume edition published by Sampson Low in 1861. The manuscript material listed here is not found with the letter at Texas. On the MS in two different hands are the following notes: ‘Wilkie Collins | Hide and Seek 6pp | £6/10/-’ and ‘11 Sheets and half | 12-title | dedication | preface | contents | 2pp end | 2pp end | 5 Rms paper’.

2. The suggestions that follow are found on a separate sheet laid in to the folding notepaper, with a horizontal line between the two alternatives. Wolff comments: ‘As it turned out, the caption adopted for the illustration (steel-engraved frontispiece by John Gilbert) was neither of the above, but “Keeping well behind her, he blew out her candle just as she was raising it over her head and looking intensely at the floor in front of her.” See Page 279. This is two sentences further on than Collins’ original suggestion.’

[0439] TO CHARLES WARD, [4 SEPTEMBER 1861]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/80). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 246–247.

Wednesday

My dear Ward,

We came back on Monday evening. You are going to dine with Egg on Sunday next – and so am I. Come here in the afternoon and pick me up, if you can.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Given the Monday return and the dining engagement with Egg this seems the most likely date – see [0440] to HC of 6 September 1861.

[3080] TO MISS COOKE,<sup>1</sup> 5 SEPTEMBER 1861

MS: Unknown. Extract: Sotheby’s Catalogue N08012, NY (16 November 2005, lot 502).<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C4, p. 4.

The poor weak words which have failed to describe Miss Fairlie, have succeeded in betraying the sensations she awakened in me. It is so with us all. Our words are giants when they do us an injury, and dwarfs when they do us a service.<sup>3</sup>

From The Woman in White

By Wilkie Collins, September 5th 1861

---

1. Unidentified.

2. With envelope directed, 'Miss Cooke With Mr. Wilkie Collins's Compts'.

3. From 'The Story Begun by Walter Hartright', IX.

[0440] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 6 SEPTEMBER 1861

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, pp. 201–202. Published: BGLL, I, p. 247.

12. Harley Street, W. | September 5th 1861

My dear Mother,

I meant to have written to you days ago. After leaving Whitby I went to York, Huntingdon, Cambridge, Ipswich, & Aldborough before coming back (studying localities for my new story),<sup>2</sup> and did not get here till the 2nd of this month. I feel the change to town, all things considered, very little – and the advantage of the quiet of my own room to my work, after the distracting noisiness of English watering-places, is not to be told in words. I am nearly at the end of the second weekly part – the story, this time, being particularly hard to squeeze into the periodical instalments. It will get easier I think as I go on – and I have plenty of time before me. If I can get two more numbers done before the end of the month, I hope to go sailing for a few days with Pigott – and I must pay Sir F. Goldsmid a visit in Kent – so I am not doomed to town for the rest of the autumn. When I am once immersed in my work, I don't care where it is as long as I am quiet. I will never try it in an hotel again. On board a yacht, or in a detached house down a by-road, will be my next scenes of composition.

I saw Mrs Dickinson's death<sup>3</sup> – Domestic troubles, solitude, opium and mercury, all successfully defied till 75 is not a constitutional achievement that everybody can compass. I suppose your mind was running on Cavendish Square when you directed your letter to me. I enclose the envelope for your perusal. It is lucky that I am pretty well known, or I should not have got your letter.

Write again soon. I was sorry to hear you don't keep well. Perhaps the Oxford air will do better. My kind regards to the Langtons

Ever yours affly | WC

I hear from Dickens that Charley & Katie are flourishing at Gadshill – and mean to stay through the month. I suppose Mrs Vickress will come back at once.<sup>4</sup> Pigott desired his love. Hunt is staying at Monckton Milnes's, – one of the places I have been asked to, and obliged to give up. I hear nothing of the E. M. Wards. I am going to dine with Egg on Sunday – he is still poorly

---

1. Signed, dated, and directed to 'Mrs Collins | care of Mrs Langton | Maidenhead', postmarked the following day.

2. WC set the seaside scenes of No Name at Aldborough.

3. Mother of Frances Dickinson, who may have died abroad.

4. Unidentified, but possibly a relative or companion of Mrs Dickinson.

[0441] TO CHARLES WARD, 11 SEPTEMBER 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/29). Published: B&C, I, p. 202. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 247.

September 11th 1861

My dear Ward,

I am too hard at work to get to you in time, this week.

Will Coutts's old books, or old anythings, help you to solve this problem for me?

What day of the week was the 4th of March 1846?

I want the information for my story.<sup>1</sup> If the 4th March 1846 was a Saturday or a Sunday, it won't do for my purpose. Of course it will turn out to be one or the other! But [del] we may as well be certain.<sup>2</sup>

What days next week (I don't dine at home tomorrow or Friday) will suit you to come and take pot-luck? Our new cook comes on Monday.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. No Name.

2. In fact it was a Wednesday. Thus the opening words of No Name read: 'The hands on the hall-clock pointed to half-past six in the morning. The house was a country residence in West Somersetshire, called Combe-Raven. The day was the fourth of March, and the year was eighteen hundred and forty-six.'

[0442] TO CHARLES WARD, 13 SEPTEMBER 1861<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/30). Published: BGLL, I, p. 248.

12. Harley Street, W. | Friday 13th September

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for your letter. It has relieved me of an uncertainty. What do you say to this day week, Friday the 20th at 6? Caroline distrusts the new cook, until she has had a day or two's experience. If I don't hear from you again I will assume that Friday ~~next~~ the 20th will do.

Ever yours WC

---

1. Dating from the address and calendar.

[0443] TO MISS M. L. WRIGLEY,<sup>1</sup> 18 SEPTEMBER 1861

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 248.

September 18th 1861

Madam,

Pray accept – as part of my autograph – my apologies for this late acknowledgment of your kind letter. Absence from home has allowed me no earlier opportunity of writing these lines, and of assuring you that I am sincerely gratified to hear that “The Woman in White” has interested and pleased you, after more than one reading.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Miss M.L. Wrigley

---

1. Unidentified.

[0444] TO [GEORGINA] STEEPLE,<sup>1</sup> 9 OCTOBER 1861

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 248–249.

12. Harley Street, W. | 9th October 1861

My dear Miss Steeple,

I have just time before the post goes out, to enclose you a photographic likeness, which is considered the best that has been taken of me. The best of the larger portraits are all bound up with the cheap edition of “The Woman In White.” I hope this likeness will not be too small for a place in your collection.<sup>2</sup>

In great haste | Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Presumably Miss Georgina Steeple of Birmingham – see the envelope to her, postmarked 12 May 1860.
2. Perhaps one of the full-length photographs taken recently by Herbert Watkins – see the images and comments at the Lewis website.

[0445] TO E. B. NEILL,<sup>1</sup> 10 OCTOBER 1861

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, pp. 73–74 (dated 12 October 1861); BGLL, I, pp. 249–250.

12. Harley Street, W. | October 10th 1861

Sir,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this day's date.

There is one point, in connection with my forthcoming story, on which you have been mis-informed. It is to make its appearance, periodically, in "All The Year Round", not in "Once a Week".

Pray present my thanks to Mr Squier for the proposal which you have been good enough to forward to me in his name.<sup>2</sup> I cannot accept the responsibility of proposing terms, under the circumstances. But if Mr Squier should see no objection to making me an offer, on his side – stating a proposed amount of remuneration, and the form in which it would be paid – any communication from him shall receive my best attention, and shall be answered definitely, one way or the other.

I may add for Mr Squier's information that the first weekly number of the story will appear in March next, and that the numbers will be continued for nine months so far as I can now calculate. The story will thus be the same length as "The Woman in White". I can send the sheets a month in advance, if required for purposes of illustration – and, in the event of the book being republished here ~~before~~ some short time before its completion in "All The Year Round", the advance would be hastened accordingly, so as to not place the American journal, or the American publishers at a disadvantage.

I have the honour to remain | Sir

Your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins

To | E. B. Neill Esq

---

1. Unidentified, but presumably a London agent acting for Frank Leslie.

2. Ephraim Squier (1821–88: DAB), then chief editor with the New York publishing firm of Frank Leslie. The American serial version of No Name in fact ran in Harper's Weekly rather than in one of Leslie's journals.

[0446] TO SAMPSON LOW & CO., 10 OCTOBER 1861

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 72; BGLL, I, p. 250.

12. Harley Street, W. | October 10th 1861

Dear Sirs,

I send you by book-post the first of the three volumes of "The Queen of Hearts", corrected for the printer.<sup>1</sup> Be so good as to let me see proofs, before the new edition goes to press.

As the right of publishing "The Queen of Hearts", in three volume form, belongs to Messrs Hurst & Blackett for three years, dating from the autumn of 1859, it will perhaps be desirable, as a matter of courtesy, to ascertain that they have no objections to the publication of the present edition, before their term expires. This I leave to your discretion, after informing you of the necessary circumstances.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Sampson Low, Son & Co

---

1. The first English single-volume edition of The Queen of Hearts with a frontispiece by John Gilbert, which eventually appeared in 1862 as part of Sampson Low's Cheap and Uniform Edition. The three-volume edition from Hurst & Blackett had appeared in October 1859.

[0447] TO ANNE BENSON PROCTER, 21 OCTOBER 1861

MS: Cambridge (Add. 7633 5/55). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 250–252.

12. Harley Street, W. | October 21st 1861

My dear Mrs Procter,

Anything like the audacity of Murray's proposal I never heard before. There is only one thing for Mr Kinglake to do, in justice to himself and in justice to literature.<sup>1</sup> He should at once place Murray between the two alternatives of losing the book, or (as you suggest) buying an edition. Murray the elder thoroughly understood that a publisher's business is bold speculation. Murray the younger never had an idea of the kind in his head, and never will.<sup>2</sup> I would therefore give him the utmost he has a right to expect – the chance (if he pleases) of trying a comparatively small edition to begin with. I should propose 1500 copies. What sum of money will he give for the right of publishing that number – with the privilege if Mr Kinglake agrees and if he agrees, of publishing future editions of the same number of copies on the same terms, or of a greater number of copies on terms increased in proportion – the agreement, of course, to contain no assignment of copyright, but to be merely an agreement for the publication of one edition, and of others to follow it at the option of both parties.

If he declines this proposal, I would recommend Mr Kinglake to open negotiations with Smith & Elder. They are enterprising and liberal – they occupy a very eminent position in the publishing world – and they have means of doing justice to a book, equal if not superior to any means at Murray's disposal.

If on the other hand, Murray consents, will you let me know – if Mr Kinglake approves of it – what he offers, and I shall be able to tell you in return, and in the strictest confidence, whether it is the sum which ought to be given under the circumstances. I have no means of calculation at present by me, or I would mention what the amount ought to be in this letter. However, the important point at present is to make one bargain with him and one only – the bargain for the sale of an edition.

I see the book is already printed – but this, if it is offered to any other publisher, might easily be made a matter of arrangement. Mr Kinglake's name will be quite sufficient introduction to Smith & Elder – but if he wishes for any more formal presentation my services are at his disposal, should any such services be required

I hope to call in Weymouth Street before the week is out.<sup>3</sup> Next week, I have some idea (if I can get the time) of proposing to Lady Goldsmid to pay my promised visit – the chance may be taken from me by the printers if I delay it much longer.<sup>4</sup>

Believe me most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The precise publishing arrangements proposed by Murray remain unclear, but perhaps involved a financial contribution from the author or the outright sale of his copyright for a paltry sum. The work in question here is presumably Kinglake's The Invasion of the Crimea, his only work after Eothen. In the event it was published by William Blackwood & Sons, the first two volumes (of an eventual eight) coming out in 1863. A later edition was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 124). WC's letter was apparently forwarded to Kinglake himself. On the verso of the fifth and final page of WC's letter (which occupies a four-page folded notesheet, plus a further torn half of a second notesheet) is found the following note from Anne Procter to Kinglake, which must date from Tuesday, October 22, 1861:

My dear M<sup>r</sup> Kinglake

Wilkie is as [testy] as you are – almost. That word is put, because I don't as the children say like to even any one with you – Bryan is equally indignant –

Any Eve.<sup>s</sup> you like – but tonight – we have no visitors but you – and I should like best that you came when you felt inclined.

[E yo.] | A.B. Procter | Tuesday

2. Referring to John Murray II (1778–1843) and John Murray III (1808–92).
3. The Procters had moved from 13 Upper Harley Street to 32 Weymouth Street in early 1854.
4. Lady Louisa Sophia Goldsmid – see [0425] to her of 14 June 1861.

[0448] TO R. J. LANE, 15 NOVEMBER 1861

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 252.

12. Harley Street, W. | November 15th 1861

Dear Mr Lane,

Various interruptions keep me away from the portrait this week. But next week I am glad to say my time will be more at my own disposal. Either Tuesday or Wednesday next, between two and three o’Clock, I hope to pay my visit to your Studio.<sup>1</sup>

Don’t trouble to answer this, if Tuesday or Wednesday, at the hour I have mentioned will find you disengaged. I will interpret Silence as meaning – Yes.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

R.J. Lane Esqre A.E.

---

1. Though Lane was known as a line engraver and lithographer (see [0230] to him of 9 February 1856), he seems at this time to have been working with the photographers John and Charles Watkins of 34 Parliament Street. See [0454] to John Watkins of 28 January 1862.

[3150] TO MRS WILLIAM SPOTTEN,<sup>1</sup> 26 NOVEMBER 1861

MS: Unknown. On sale: Alexander Autographs, Stamford, CT USA (10 October 2010, Lot 891, with four other items). Published: A&C6, p. 6.

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>2</sup> | November 26th 1861

Dear Madam,

I have great pleasure in writing these lines, to comply with the request which you honour me by making.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To / | Mrs William Spotten

---

1. The absence of ‘London’ in the dateline indicates a fan in Britain and possibly in London. Although Spotten is a very unusual name in British records, the recipient has not been securely identified.
2. Embossed but not inked in Gothic type.

[0449] TO J. B. BROWN,<sup>1</sup> 12 DECEMBER 1861

MS: Illinois. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 252–253.

12. Harley Street, W. | December 12th 1861

Dear Sir,

I have had no earlier opportunity than this of thanking you for your kind letter.

The only pictures by my father, left in the possession of his family, were two half-length figures (life-size) which I now have at my lodgings here. These, and some drawings and sketches by him (reserved from the Sale of his remaining works, after his death)<sup>2</sup> I shall be happy to show you. During the present month, my engagements do not leave me a day at my disposal – but, if you will excuse my deferring the pleasure of seeing you until the new year, I shall be more at leisure next month, and will write again, and propose an early day.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | J. B. Brown Esqre

---

1. Unidentified.

2. WC was being economical with the truth as a number of WmC's paintings remained in family hands (see Baker 2002, pp. 170–175).

[0450] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 12 DECEMBER 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/63). Published: B&C, I, pp. 202–204. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 253.

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>1</sup> | Decr 12th 1861

My dear Mother,

You ought to have had a letter from me long since – but I have been to Sir F Goldsmid's, I am only a few days back, and I am up to my eyes in work. The Goldsmids gave me the kindest welcome – I found the house enormous, a park stocked with deer, & all the other luxuries and magnificences of wealthy country life, including a valet to wait on me, of twice my height and ten times my dignity. On my return home, I change the valet for the “printers devil” – my story is being set up in type, so that I may see clearly what I have done. I am slowly getting to the end of the 1st Volume – I say slowly, because I am writing with the greatest care and putting into this new book all that I have got in me to put. I think it is my best work, so far. No title fixed as yet. I have several to choose from – but I think better may be found.<sup>2</sup>

Yes: Mr Heavysides in the Christmas number (I mean “Waifs at Sea”) is my doing.<sup>3</sup> Did it amuse you. It made me laugh in writing it – which is what my own fun seldom does.

People write to me from the four quarters of the earth. I enclose one letter, the mystery of which you may be able to solve. I found it at the Garrick, waiting for me, and addressed “Mr Wilkie Collins, Author, London”. Who the deuce is my fair correspondent?<sup>4</sup>

“Terrible Company” in the Christmas number is by Miss Edwardes [sic], Charley's story about the Shadows you know. Dickens's introduction you will recognise. The long American Story is by a new hand – a young man. “Miss Kimmeens” – Dickens – and the conclusion, Dickens.<sup>5</sup> Now you are informed.

The French translation of The Woman in White is published in two handsomely printed volumes<sup>6</sup> – and The French critics are very civil – so are letters from French readers. You like a title, don't you? What do think [sic] of a French Duke, writing to me in raptures? Ha! ha! ha!

I think my country visit did me good. At any rate I am less ailing than usual – and in better spirits than usual. I have been directed by Beard to some wonderful Turkish Baths, with excellent shampoos and great care in the attendance. I don't [del] overdo the Baths – I only take them once in ten days.

Here is enough about myself even to satisfy you. The extract beneath is from this day's Times obituary

On Tuesday, the 10th inst., at 7, York-terrace, Regent's-park, William Dodsworth, in the 64th year of his age. R.I.P.<sup>7</sup>

Is this our poor old pompous Doddy? I suppose so. Twenty years ago would you ever have thought of seeing R.I.P. after his name?

If you like your present life at Southsea, I can say nothing against it. But it sounds to me, lonely – and I would rather hear of you at Miss Otters. When does she come back? You don't say. Write as soon as you know, and tell me.

The printer is after me again – I must shut up my letter, and correct his proofs.

Yours ever afftly | WC

Charley & Katie both well – I saw them a day or two since. Walker called today. He and all his house have been ill – but have turned the corner. Mrs Stringfield has been dangerously ill – and is still in a very delicate state.<sup>8</sup>

---

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper, with the address ranged right.
2. In the event, No Name.
3. Mr Heavysides appeared in WC's 'Picking Up Waifs at Sea', Chapter IV of Tom Tiddler's Ground, the extra Christmas number of All the Year Round for 1861.
4. The enclosed letter is not found at Morgan.
5. CD's contribution to Tom Tiddler's Ground was in three chapters: 'Picking Up Soot and Cinders,' (Chapter I); 'Picking up Miss Kimmeens' (Chapter VI); and 'Picking Up the Tinker' (Chapter VII). CAC's was 'Picking Up Evening Shadows' (Chapter II); that of Amelia Ann Blanford Edwards, 'Picking Up Terrible Company' (Chapter III); and that of John Harwood (the 'new hand'), 'Picking Up a Pocket-Book' (Chapter V).
6. La femme en blanc (2 vols; Paris: Collection Hetzel/E. Dentu, 1862), trans. E. D. Forgues
7. Printed extract from the 'Deaths' column of the Times (12 December 1861, p. 1a) affixed to the letter. Dodsworth was the 'spellbinding Tractarian' whose congregation HC and WmC had been members of from the early 1830s (Peters, p. 38). Dodsworth himself had joined the Roman Catholic Church from the beginning of 1851.
8. WC had acted as a witness on 4 November 1858 when Stringfield married his second wife Mary Ann Maria Teresa Garment at St Luke's, Chelsea. The nature of her illness here remains unidentified. The marriage later ran aground – see [0837] to Edward Benham, 2 June 1868.

[0451] TO CHARLES WARD, 13 DECEMBER 1861

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/31). Published: BGLL, I, p. 253.

12. Harley Street, W. | Decr 13th 1861

My dear Ward,

Here are two enclosures. 1st A cheque for £51.13.6 – which please pay into my account (being all the division which Sir E. B. L. leaves me this time!)<sup>1</sup> – and secondly a German letter, which I shall be much obliged if you will get turned into English, as I have not the least idea at present what the gentleman wants.<sup>2</sup> I am too hard at work (as you will imagine from my not appearing on Sunday) to write more.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The eighth share of the profits of All The Year Round paid by CD to WC every half year. This payment, recorded in WC's account on 13 December, for the six months to 31 October was lower than previous payments as Sir Edward Bulwer-Lytton's A Strange Story, serialized from 10 August 1861 to 8 March 1862, was less popular and sales fell. See Paul Lewis, What Wilkie Earned from 'All The Year Round', Wilkie Collins Society, August 2015.

2. Unidentified.

[0659] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, [DECEMBER 1861]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 23 (dated 1861–65), amended A&C3, p. 63.

... in the quiet easy naturally humourous [sic] line. Talking of Yankees – I have never believed in the peaceable telegrams from those ruffians across the Atlantic – and I find, in today's Times, that the signs of the future are darkening. Sooner or later, war is certain with them – and if the war comes in their present [one or more words excised] – the war [remainder of the leaf excised]

... of the sufferers by the present state of American frenzy.

I have many more things to say – but I can't think of them at a moment's notice – and I hav'nt time to write them if I could. God bless you, and goodbye for the present

Ever yours afftly | WC

---

1. Undated fragment on both sides of a single sheet of plain paper with no watermark, with text excised at the foot of the recto. The conjectural dating derives from the reference to the American Civil War and what appears to be the international diplomatic incident of early November 1861, known as the Trent Affair or the Mason and Slidell Affair. This was first reported in the Times of 28 November 1861, p. 9b and the piece WC refers to may be that in the Times of 12 December 1861, p. 9c.

[3151] TO A. W. BOSTWICK,<sup>1</sup> [1861]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C6, p. 6.

Believe me, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
A. W. Bostwick Esq<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Probably Andrew W. Bostwick (1823–1912) from New York, who is recorded in the Census of 7 April 1861 at 2 Percy Street, St Pancras in a lodging house or hotel, and described as an Editor aged 29 from the United States (RG09/100/40/1). Records in the USA confirm his unusual name and burial in Mt. Hope Cemetery, Rochester NY.
2. Dated from the only time when Bostwick is recorded in the UK.
3. The end of a letter cut off for the signature with no writing on the verso.

[2983] TO CHARLES DICKENS, [7–8] JANUARY 1862

MS: Unknown.<sup>1</sup> Cited: CD to W. C. Macready, 9 January 1862 (Morgan). Published: Pilgrim, X, pp. 10–11;<sup>2</sup> BGLL, IV Addenda, pp. 401–402.

Fechter by the bye. I have seen him in an utter and unspeakable failure.<sup>3</sup> Badly dressed even. Wrong throughout, in conception and execution. If he gave me any idea at all, he gave me the idea of a Sepoy. The play is beautifully got up; but Mr. Ryder trying to be intelligent, and relapsing into boisterous stupidity at every available opportunity – Miss Leclercq<sup>4</sup> pawing Fechter – Mr. Somebody or other acting Roderigo so that the fourth Act ended amidst the hearty laughter of the pit – Mr. Somebody else imitating Anderson (!),<sup>5</sup> in Cassio – everybody concerned doing everything with the promise of extra-ordinary intelligence, and the performance of downright stupidity – so disgusted me, that I have registered a vow to see no more of that much-injured man, Shakespeare, on the stage

---

1. Almost certainly destroyed by CD.
2. Writing from ‘Cash’s Hotel, Torquay, | Thursday Ninth January 1862’, CD introduces the extract as follows: ‘You were asking me the other day about Fechter’s Othello. This morning I have a letter from Wilkie, from which I extract a passage about it that I think will amuse you.’ This provides our conjectural dating.
3. Referring to Othello at the Royal Princess’s Theatre from 23 October 1861, adapted by the Anglo-French actor Charles Albert Fechter (1824–79: ODNB), who played the part of the Moor. The other principals were John Ryder as Iago and Carlotta Leclercq as Desdemona. The parts of Roderigo and Cassio were played by J. G. Shore and G. Jordan respectively. See the review in the Times, 24 October 1861, p. 9e, which was in general highly respectful of Fechter’s attempt to take on the role of ‘a thorough revolutionist of the drama’. The 1862 letter seems to be WC’s first extant reference to Fechter, with whom he later worked closely on No Thoroughfare (December 1867) and Black and White (March 1869), both at the Adelphi. WC again commented damningly on Fechter’s Othello in [2001] to James R. Osgood of 18 January 1882.
4. Thus for ‘Leclercq’. The misspelling was probably CD’s (Pilgrim X, p. 11 n. 3).
5. James Robertson Anderson (1811–95: ODNB), actor in Macready’s company at Covent Garden from 1837; see Pilgrim, I, p. 475.

[0452] TO [JAMES BIRTLES],<sup>1</sup> 8 JANUARY 1862

MS: Wolff Collection (1371c). Published: Wolff, p. 268 (with recipient as ‘the printer’); BGLL, I, pp. 253–254.

12. Harley Street, W. | January 8th 1862

My dear Sir,

I leave the two next Weekly Portions (7 & 8) so that not even a few hours may be lost in proceeding straight from the setting up of one number to the setting up of another. Three more weekly portions (besides the two left today) will complete the copy waiting to be set up. If you can manage to get the five Mss numbers into type in the next fortnight, it will be a great assistance to me – and I can safely promise to hurry you no more afterwards for you then have got as far in the book as I have got!<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. James Birtles seems to have been the man in charge at Charles Whiting, of Beaufort House on The Strand, printers of All the Year Round (for Chapman & Hall) – see [0482], [0791] to him of [18] July 1862, 10 December 1867, etc. In a letter to W. H. Wills of 29 January 1865, CD writes ‘Birtles is too cavalier in his posting of the proofs’, the reference accompanied by the editorial gloss ‘James Birtles, on staff of Charles Whiting, printer of AYR’ (Pilgrim, XI, p. 12).
2. No Name, which ran in All the Year Round from 15 March 1862 to 17 January 1863.

[3081] TO W. H. WILLS, 27 JANUARY 1862

MS: UCLA (Wills Papers 720/1). Extract: Blain, p. 25.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C4, pp. 4–5.

12. Harley Street, W. | Jan 27th 1862

My dear Wills,

Many thanks for your kind note, and for the returned book. I am inhumanly rejoiced to hear of that midnight sitting.<sup>2</sup> Dickens too writes me word that he likes the story and feels certain of its success.<sup>3</sup> It is a great relief to find that my work has not been thrown away.

The Title! “Under a Cloud”<sup>4</sup> (which would have been a very good one) has been used by some miscreant or other who has “said our good things before us”.<sup>5</sup> Dickens sends several titles – some very good – but I hardly think the title has been found yet.<sup>6</sup> I am going to Forster tomorrow to see if he is in town and can help us. Anyhow, the question must be decided ~~on~~, as soon as Dickens gets back. We will only consider it now deferred, until we three can get together and finally settle it at our next sitting. You and Dickens shall appoint the day. On Saturday, Sunday, and Monday next, I am disengaged.<sup>7</sup>

Ever yrs | W.C.<sup>8</sup>

Charley ought to make something good of that terrible colliery subject.<sup>9</sup>

---

1. Blain shows that after the title ‘No Name’ had been decided on, WC went through the manuscript adding references to the fact that Magdalen Vanstone had ‘no name’.

2. Presumably to read the manuscript of the opening of No Name, which Dickens had passed on to Wills – see to WC, 24 January 1862 (Pilgrim, X, p. 20).

3. See CD to WC, 24 January 1862 (Pilgrim, X, pp. 20–21) in which he praises the book highly and lists twenty-six possible titles.

4. Blain argues this was Wills’s suggestion but points out that Frederick Greenwood published a three volume novel under the title Under a Cloud: a Novel in 1860. Dickens lays claim to the title in a letter to Wills of 28 January 1862 (Pilgrim, X, p. 33) but says that he rejected it because it was ‘semi-slang’.

5. From the Latin tag, ‘Pereant qui ante nos nostra dixerunt’ (‘Perish those who said our good things before us’), attributed by St Jerome to Ælius Donatus (c. 360 A.D.).

6. WC annotates the list in CD’s letter of 24 January. See Pilgrim, X, p. 21, n. aa.

7. WC writes on a Monday so is suggesting February 1, 2, or 3. The matter was urgent as No Name was to start publication on 15 March 1862 as the lead story for the first issue of vol. VII. If the meeting took place it did not find the title. Although the whole of the first volume was set in type by 4 February the title had still not been decided and WC writes on that day “it must be settled tomorrow.” See [0455] to HC, 4 February 1862.

8. A filing note in another hand upside down on the blank fourth sheet reads: ‘Wilkie Collins | [W] 27 Jan. 1862 | With thanks for letter & satisfaction of M<sup>r</sup> Dickens’ approval of what he had written &c &c’.

9. CAC was by this time writing for All the Year Round quite frequently. WC must refer to ‘The Cost of Coal’ published in All the Year Round, 15 February 1862, VI, pp. 492–496. It is probably the piece referred to by Dickens when he writes, ‘The longer Charley Collins paper ... would be quite thrown away and lost, if delayed.’ (To Wills, 29 January 1862, Pilgrim, X, pp. 26–27) which implies that it is a news story. ‘The Cost of Coal’ is a report of the New Hartley colliery disaster of 16 January 1862, when 220 men and boys lost their lives after the steam engine broke and plunged down the pit, hitting the cage containing miners returning to the surface, and cutting off the air to the miners below who suffocated to death. Pilgrim identifies the piece Dickens refers to as ‘The Trial at Toulouse’, but perhaps only because it is the longest piece in the issue. This retells an historical event of 1847 and could happily be held over for a week. In fact CD must refer to the longer of two pieces by Charles Collins. Parrott confirms that ‘The Cost of Coal’ was indeed by CAC. The next piece CAC was to publish in All The Year Round was ‘The Best House of Correction’ two weeks later (1 March 1862, VI, pp. 537–540). This was indeed shorter – 6.25 columns compared with the 9.5 columns for ‘The Cost of Coal’ – so it was probably the shorter piece to which CD alludes.

[0453] TO BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ, 28 JANUARY 1862

MS: Unknown. Extract: Otto, p. 76, our copy text; BGLL, I, p. 254.

12, Harley Street, Cavendish Square, London, | January 28th, 1862.

I have been away from London, and have had no earlier opportunity than this of thanking you for your kind letter.

You shall have my immediate attention to any proposal which you are good enough to make to me for my forthcoming work.<sup>1</sup> I am very glad to hear that The Woman In White has proved successful in your hands.<sup>2</sup> It has largely increased my reputation here – and I am rejoiced to think that it has helped to justify your uniform liberality of conduct and feeling towards English writers.

---

1. No Name, recorded as published by Tauchnitz on 15 January 1863, vols 631–3.

2. Published by Tauchnitz on 6 September 1860, vols 525–6.

[0454] TO JOHN WATKINS,<sup>1</sup> 28 JANUARY 1862

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 254–255.

12. Harley Street, W. | 28th Jany 1862

Sir,

Mr Lane has, I think, informed you, that I proposed complying this month with the request which you were good enough to make to him, that I should “sit” in your studio.<sup>2</sup> If Thursday next, the 30th, at twelve o’clock will suit you – or in case Thursday is too dark, Friday at the same hour – I shall be very glad to call upon you, on either of these two days.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Let me have one line in the course of tomorrow to say if the proposed arrangement is convenient to you. If you wish to alter the hour, any time after twelve and before three, will suit me.

John Watkins Esqr

---

1. Of John and Charles Watkins, 34 Parliament Street, London, SW, photographers to Queen Victoria and the Prince of Wales.

2. See [0448] to R. J. Lane of 15 November 1861.

[0455] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 4 FEBRUARY 1862

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, pp. 204–205. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 255–256.

12. Harley Street, W. | 4th Feby 1862

My dear Mother,

Only yesterday, I was asking Charley if he had heard from you – so your letter could not have come at a better time.

The whole first volume of my new story is printed. You shall read it, if you like, when you come to town. Dickens, Wills, the Procters, Charley, Katie and Pigott have read it. The opinion is unanimous. Dickens perfectly certain it will make a great hit. Wills sat up till past 1 in the morning, and couldn’t sleep after it. The Procters (though The Woman In White was dedicated to them) like this book better. So do Charley and Katie. Pigott is reading it at this moment in my room and says the “female interest” is the strongest he ever met with. All these individual opinions represent thousands among the public. To have got over the strong prejudice of the Procters in favour of The Woman in White (because it was dedicated to them) is a very valuable proof that the book is (what I have tried to make it) the better book of the two. Dickens says in the strongest terms that there is no sign of The-Woman-in-White success influencing this story, which is utterly unlike the other. I lay great stress on my originality this time – for the first element of success is not to repeat the other book.

But the title – the terrible title – is not decided on yet! It must be settled tomorrow. Here are some few, out of many:–<sup>2</sup>

- 1 The Forbidden Fruit
- 2 Man And Wife
- 3 Nature's Daughter
- 4 The Beginning And The End
- 5 Behind The Veil
- 6 The Pitfalls
- 7 Our Hidden Selves
- 8 Magdalen

Which do you like? Don't let this letter out of your possession, and don't say anything about the titles. The cursed newspapers will be making premature announcements if you tell anybody anything. My five thousand pound job for Smith & Elder is known, right and left, everywhere.<sup>3</sup>

I only went to Dover for a sight of my old, old friend the sea – had two lovely days – got plenty of exercise – and am now back to begin vol 2. No other news. Let me hear when you leave Southsea. With kind remembrances to Miss Otter,

Ever affly yours | WC

-
1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | care of Miss Otter | Eastlands | Southsea | near Portsmouth', postmarked as dated.
  2. The problems of finding the title are explored in Blain, 'The Naming of No Name'. See also [2171] to James F. Rodgers, 25 June 1883. CD's suggested titles are listed in Pilgrim, X, p. 21.
  3. The payment for his next unwritten novel, which was to be Armada. See [0430] to HC, 7 August 1861.

[0456] TO SIR JAMES EMERSON TENNENT, 6 FEBRUARY 1862

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, I, p. 256; Lewis website.

12. Harley Street, W. | Feby 6th 1862

My dear Sir Emerson,

If, after opening this letter, you look at your left arm, and find written on it in flaming letters: – “Collins is a Humbug” – I shall be grieved but not surprised. Improbable as it seems, it is really the plain truth that the adjourned dinner finds me again engaged. On Wednesday the 12th, I must be in Regents Park Terrace (with an appetite and white cravat) at seven o'clock – so there is no hope for me in the direction of Curzon Street. I can only thank you for giving me this second chance, and regret that it does not happen on one or other of the only two free evenings which my memorandum book leaves at my disposal for the next fortnight.

Believe me | Dear Sir Emerson | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Sir James Emerson Tennent

[0457] TO MRS JACURE,<sup>1</sup> 13 FEBRUARY 1862

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, I, p. 257.

12. Harley Street, W. | Feb 13th 1862

My dear Madam,

Your kind note finds me, I am sorry to say, already engaged to dinner on the evening of Friday the 21st. I can only beg you to accept my excuses and my thanks, and assure you that under any other circumstances I should have gladly accepted the invitation with which you and Mr Jacure have favoured me.

I remain | My dear Madam | faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Unidentified.

[0458] TO SAMPSON LOW, 13 FEBRUARY 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 257.

12. Harley Street, W. | Feby 13th 1862

Dear Sir,

I left with you today four more weekly parts of my new story, making five parts altogether, delivered in duplicate.<sup>1</sup>

I have mislaid the note which I took, when I had the pleasure of seeing you, of our present arrangement with America – and I cannot accurately remember whether we settled that the sheets were to be sent a month in advance – or six weeks. This is of no great importance at present; but, as the story goes on, and as the press gains on me, I should like to make quite sure of the exact advance expected.<sup>2</sup> Will you let me know this? Perhaps, as a matter of business, it would be more satisfactory if the whole arrangement was plainly stated – as it had been stated on previous occasions – in a letter on your side and on mine. There is not the least occasion for a formal agreement – a letter on either side will answer the only ~~purpos~~ object required, a memorandum for you and for me.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Sampson Low Esqre

---

1. No Name, serialized in Harper's Weekly in New York simultaneously with its appearance in All the Year Round, before being issued in three volumes from Sampson Low in December 1862.

2. Generally on such arrangements, in the absence of international copyright protection in the United States, for sending early proofs (known as 'advance sheets') of new British books to authorized American publishers to forestall unauthorized reprints, see Graham Law and Norimasa Morita, 'Internationalizing the Popular Print Marketplace', Oxford History of Popular Print Culture: Vol. 6: U.S. Popular Print Culture, ed. Christine Bold (Oxford: Oxford UP, 2011), pp. 211–229.

[0459] TO ELIZABETH BENZON,<sup>1</sup> 19 FEBRUARY 1862

MS: Unknown. On sale: Dorothy L. Sayers sale, Sotheby's (19 December 2000), lot 49.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 258.

12. Harley Street, W. | 19th Feby 1862

Dear Mrs Benzon

Many thanks for your kind note. It will give me the greatest pleasure to dine with you and Mr Benzon on the adjourned day – Tuesday the 25th, at 7 o'clock.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Elizabeth Benzon (Lizbeth), sister of Frederick and Rudolf Lehmann and wife of Ernst Benzon, steel manufacturer and patron of the arts. They lived at 10 Kensington Palace Gardens, where they entertained literary, artistic and musical friends. WC and CAC were regular visitors.

2. Stuck to a blue foolscap sheet together with [0654] to Henri G. de Mussy of 13 November 1865, and other unrelated material.

[0460] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 9 MARCH 1862

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Ellis, p. 34; Coleman, p. 76 (both as 8 March 1862).

12. Harley Street, W. | March 8th 1862<sup>1</sup>

My dear Mrs Ward,

Your kind note has been delayed in reaching me – through misdirection to "11 Upper Harley Street". The right address is at the head of this letter.<sup>2</sup>

The first free evening I have is Monday (tomorrow) week – the 17th. If that day will suit you, I shall be delighted to come and dine. I have not been well since I last saw Edward and have only just begun to go out again.

If Monday week won't suit you, the Friday following (the 21st) will do as well for me. One line to say which day it shall be, and what hour, and whether I walk in (as I did last time) in my morning costume, to take up my knife and fork at your ordinary dinner – will receive (as the tradesmen say) the strictest attention from

Yours ever truly | Wilkie Collins

My best love at home. I shall be almost afraid to look at my god-daughter. Is she A Young Lady yet? And has she got taller than a certain middle-aged gentleman who answered for her at the baptismal fount?<sup>3</sup>

-
1. The body of the letter declares more than once and unambiguously that WC writes not on Saturday 8 March but on Sunday 9 March, evidence which we judge more reliable than the conflicting date heading.
  2. An odd error since WC had lived at 12 Harley Street for two years and in that time had exchanged several letters with Henrietta and her husband Edward.
  3. WC's goddaughter Alice would be thirteen in June, while WC was then thirty-eight.

[0461] TO CHARLES WARD, 17 MARCH 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/33). Summary: B&C, I, p. 205.

12. Harley Street, W. | March 17th 1862

My dear Ward,

I forgot to ask you a question yesterday, in the interests of my story.

If I write a letter today (March 17th 1862) to China – say to Shanghai, or any other settlement of mercantile Englishmen in those parts – when does the letter reach its destination? And if my correspondent in China writes back to me by the next mail, when does his answer reach London? Lastly, how often does the mail to China go? And how often does the mail from China, come here? Is it once a month, in each case? or once a week? or what?<sup>1</sup>

If you can answer these questions without any trouble – do, and you will help me.

Ever yours WC

I hope you were no worse this morning, after the dinner?<sup>2</sup>

-
1. In the ninth chapter of the First Scene of No Name (appearing in All the Year Round on 12 April 1862), Magdalen Vanstone's feckless fiancé Francis Clare is forced to go away for the purpose of 'familiarizing himself ... with the tea trade and silk trade in China for five years'.
  2. Ward and WC seem often to have dined together on Sundays – this letter is written on a Monday.

[0462] TO ALFRED-AUGUSTE ERNOUF,<sup>1</sup> 21 MARCH 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: Parrish & Miller, pp. 3–5; B&C, I, pp. 205–208 (both with recipient unidentified). Summary: BGLL, I, p. 259.

12. Harley Street | Cavendish Square | London | March 21th 1862

Dear Sir,

Absence from home has prevented me from sooner thanking you for your kind letter.

The published biographical notices of me, in England, are all more or less incorrect. I think I shall best show my sincere appreciation of the honour which you propose conferring on me and my books, by enclosing in this letter a statement written expressly to assist you. Any further information which you may require, I /shall/ gladly place at your disposal on hearing from you to that effect.

You will find my little autobiography – like this letter – written (in accordance with your kind permission) in English. Though I am a constant reader, and hearty admirer of French literature, I am sorry to say I can only write, and speak, the curious Anglo-French dialect which ~~the~~ my countrymen in general have invented for their own use on the Continent. If I ever have the pleasure of making your personal acquaintance, I shall not hesitate to trust to your indulgence for all the mistakes I may make in “gender”, “number”, and “case”. But in writing – and especially in writing to a critic – I shrink from taking those innocent liberties with the French language which so often disturb the grammatical entente cordiale between your country and mine!

Believe me, Dear Sir, | Very faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins.

P.S. Some few years since, an article relating to my earlier works, and written by my friend, M. E.D. Forgues, appeared in the Revue des Deux Mondes.<sup>2</sup> Some of the facts mentioned in that article may possibly be of service to you.

Memorandum, relating to the Life and Writings of Wilkie Collins. (1862)

=

I was born in London, in the year 1824. I am the eldest son of the late William Collins, Member of the English Royal Academy of Arts, and famous as a painter of English life and English scenery. My godfather, after whom I was named, was Sir David Wilkie, the [del] illustrious Scottish Painter. My mother is still alive.

I was educated at a private school. At the age of thirteen, I went with my father and mother to reside for two years in Italy – where I learnt more which has been of use to me, among the pictures, the scenery, and the people, than I ever learnt at school. After my return to England, my father proposed sending me to the University of Oxford, with a view to my entering the Church. But I had no vocation for that way of life, and I preferred trying ~~business~~ mercantile pursuits. I had already begun to write in secret, and mercantile pursuits lost all attraction for me. My father – uniformly kind and considerate to his children – tried making me a Barrister next. I went through the customary forms (with little or no /serious/ study), and was “called to the Bar” at Lincoln’s Inn. But I have never practised my profession. An author I was to be, and an author I became in the year 1848.

I had, in the year 1847, completed the first volume of a classical romance, called “Antonina; or, The Fall of Rome” – when my father died. I put aside the romance, to ~~write a~~ /do/ honour to my father’s genius, to the best of my ability, by writing the history of his Life and ~~Works~~ his pictures. This was my first published book. I then returned to my classical romance, completed it in three volumes, and found a publisher for it. The success (in England) of “Antonina” decided my ~~own~~ career. I became, what I am now, a writer by profession.

These are the only events worth noticing in my life. My father’s position as a painter made my early home-circumstances easy ones. He left his family (his widow, myself, and my brother) with an income to live on – which, though not the income of rich people, was sufficient for all their wants. Apart from my books – my life presents no events which have any claim /on/ ~~to~~ the public interest, or on your attention.

Works of Wilkie Collins. With the dates of publication.

=

1. Memoirs of William Collins, R. A., (1848)
2. Antonina; or The Fall of Rome. (A Romance) (1850)
3. Basil (A story of Modern Life) – (1852)
4. Hide and Seek. (Story of Modern Life) – (1854)
5. After Dark (A collection of short stories) – (1856)
6. The Dead Secret (a novel. Translated by E.D. Forgues.) – (1857)
7. The Queen of Hearts (a collection of short stories) (1859)
8. The Woman in White (“La Femme en Blanc”) (1860)
9. No Name (now appearing periodically in “All The Year Round”, and advertised to appear, in French, in Le Temps newspaper. This novel, when finished, will be of the length of “The Woman in White”. I am now (March 1862) about half way through it.)]

An account of “Antonina”, “Basil”, and “Hide and Seek”, with translated extracts, appears in the Revue des Deux Mondes.

Besides my Novels, I have written a great number of Essays, Sketches, &c &c in the periodicals conducted by Charles Dickens, called “Household Words” – and also in “All The Year Round”. These I have not yet corrected and republished.

I am also the author of three Dramas: –

1. The Lighthouse        }
2. The Frozen Deep       } [del] None of these three have been printed.
3. The Red Vial.         }

“The Lighthouse” was first acted by Amateurs, at the house of Charles Dickens, who played the principal character. It was afterwards acted in public at The Olympic Theatre.

“The Frozen ~~was also~~ Deep” was also acted by the same amateurs, before the Queen, and afterwards in public for a charitable purpose. This play has never been performed by professional actors.

“The Red Vial” was performed at The Olympic Theatre. It was not successful with the public, though greatly liked by the actors. I have written no other Drama since, and my literary [del] success has been entirely won as a novelist. If I had been a Frenchman – with such a public to write for, such rewards to win, and such actors to interpret me, as the French Stage presents – ~~every~~ /all the/ ~~story~~ stories I have written from “Antonina” to “The Woman in White” would have been told in the dramatic form. Whether their success as plays would have been equal to their success as novels, it is not for me to decide; But if I know anything of my own faculty, it is a dramatic one.

---

1. Baron Alfred-Auguste Ernouf (?1816–89), Parisian lawyer and historian, whose ‘Les Nouveaux Romanciers de l’Angleterre: Wilkie Collins’, appeared in the Révue Contemporaine, 28 (21 August 1862), pp. 724–750. See [3024] 7 May 1862, [0491] 16 September 1862 to him.

2. E.D. Forgues, ‘Études sur le Roman Anglais Contemporain: William Wilkie Collins’, Revue des Deux Mondes (15 November 1855), pp. 815–848.

[3082] TO [THE MANAGER OF THE WENHAM LAKE ICE CO.],<sup>1</sup> 25 MARCH 1862

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C4, p. 5.

12. Harley Street, W. | 25th March 1862

Mr Wilkie Collins will be obliged if the Manager will send him the same quantity of Ice as usual, either tomorrow or next day.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. An American company based in Massachusetts, it famously opened a shop in the Strand in the summer of 1844. WC’s bank account at Coutts shows annual payments to the Wenham Lake Ice Company, the first being in January 1863 for £6-11s-6d. These payments continued each year at varying amounts until the last on 14 November 1868 for £10-6s-6d.

2. This letter appears to have been kept on a spike and later cut to remove the signature.

[0463] TO E. M. WARD, 1 APRIL 1862

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 77; Ellis, p. 33; BGLL, I, p. 260.

12. Harley Street, W. | 1st April 1862

My dear Ned,

I have just got your kind letter. I am really and truly delighted to find that the opening chapters of the story have taken so strong a hold on your interest and Mrs Ward’s. It is “half the battle” to begin well, in cases where periodical publication is concerned – and, I am glad to say, that readers in general seem to be of your opinion. Results at “All The Year Round” (as stated by the publisher) are already very encouraging.<sup>1</sup>

I thought certain old remembrances of ours would be roused by that chapter about the private theatricals. I read “The Good Natured Man”, and “The Rivals” again – while I was writing it – and saw you once more in “Croaker” as plainly as I see this paper. I have been engaged in far more elaborate private theatrical work, since that time – but the real enjoyment was at the T. R. Blandford Square.<sup>2</sup>

Between work and weather I am feeling a little jaded, and am going to try for a breath of sea air this month.

With best love at home and all good wishes for the success of Mrs Ward’s picture.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | your affectionate friend | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to the serial run of No Name, beginning on 15 March.

2. Referring to the amateur theatricals around 1849 at the ‘Theatre Royal, Blandford Square’, as the back drawing room of the Collins’s family home became known. Notable performances were Richard Sheridan’s The Rivals (1775) and Oliver Goldsmith’s The Good-Natur’d Man (1768) with Ned Ward in the part of Croaker – see [0058] to Miss Clarkson, [5/12 June] 1849. The scene describing a private theatrical performance of The Rivals is found in ch. 5 of No Name.

3. Probably ‘Henrietta Maria’ (1862), exhibited in the North Room at the Royal Academy that year – see the Times, 26 May 1862, p. 10e.

[0464] TO CATHERINE DICKENS,<sup>1</sup> 7 APRIL 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 104/47). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 260–261.

12. Harley Street, W. | 7th April 1862

My dear Mrs Dickens,

I very gladly comply with your kind request. The Photograph is enclosed with my sign-manual attached.<sup>2</sup>

It is a great pleasure to me to hear that you like the new story. I am trying hard to make it my best – and I hope I shall fasten a strong hold on your interest in the chapters that are to come.

With kind regards, | Believe me

My dear Mrs Dickens | very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Catherine Thomson Dickens, née Hogarth (1815–79), who married CD in 1836 and bore him ten children. Following the separation in 1858, many of his friends kept in touch with her and she was anxious to be seen as the wronged party – as indeed she was. At this time she wrote to many people asking for a photograph and signature. She collected about 100 and made them up into an album, which formed lot 218 in Phillips’s sale in London of 24 March 2000.

2. The photograph which WC sent was the 1861 image taken by Herbert Watkins, signed and dated 1862 on the back.

[0465] TO E. M. WARD, 7 APRIL 1862

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 78; BGLL, I, p. 261.

12. Harley Street, W. | 7th April 1862

My dear Ned,

I have just a moment to say that I shall see Dickens on Wednesday next – and that everything you have said to me, shall be said to him. I know he will understand it, and I know he will be glad to hear what you say of his speech. I was prevented from going to the dinner myself – though I was down on the list of Stewards.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. CD presided at the Annual Dinner of the Artists’ General Benevolent Fund held at the Freemasons’ Tavern on 28 March 1862. For CD’s speech see K. J. Fielding (ed.), Speeches of Charles Dickens (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1960); and Pilgrim, X, p. 38 n. 5.

[0466] TO CHARLES WARD, 15 APRIL 1862

12. Harley Street, W.<sup>1</sup> | April 15th 1862

My dear Ward,

Here I am, wanting something more. Can your stationer who gets books trade price, get “Childhood And Youth”

Translated from the | Russian of Tolstoï<sup>2</sup> | Bell & Daldy, price 6/6

And when the book is got, can you send it, by foreign book-post to

Monsieur E.D. Forgues | 2 Rue de Tournon | Paris

If this is any worry [del] don’t do it – I only write [del] because I am under friendly obligation to M. Forgues (my translator) who is kindly assisting me in a dispute with a former French publisher of translations of mine<sup>3</sup> – and because M. Forgues particularly wants the book. If you look in on Sunday we can settle the question of expenses. But if you are hard at work, and this is an interruption tell me so.

Caroline and I are going to Broadstairs on Tuesday in Easter Week<sup>4</sup> – to see if I can find a quiet place to finish my book in.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC uses Gothic printed water-marked paper.

2. By Malwida von Meysenbug.

3. At this time Emile Forgues had translated The Dead Secret for Hachette (Le Secret, 1858) and The Woman in White (La Femme en blanc, 1861) for J. Hetzel. He went on to translate two more of WC’s works for J. Hetzel: No Name (Sans Nom, 1863) and The Queen of Hearts (Une poignée de romans, 1864). The only other publication of a work by WC in French at this time was Une nuit étrange, 1861, published by C. Lassalle (BNF Catalogue). It is likely that Hachette was the ‘former publisher’, though in fact the firm went on to replace Hetzel as WC’s main French publisher from 1872.

4. In 1862 Easter Sunday fell on 20th April.

[3203] TO GEORGE RUSSELL,<sup>1</sup> 28 APRIL 1862

MS: Unknown. On sale: Woolley & Wallis, Salisbury, UK (12 December 2012), lot 54, in an album of letters to Sir George Russell, p. 41. Published: A&C8, p. 6.

12. Harley Street, W. | April 28th 1862

My dear Russell,

I only returned to town from the country this afternoon at 5 o’clock, and found your letter waiting for me. In half an hour more I was at the Club – too late for the meeting, but in time to hear what a large minority (large enough to suggest a majority next time) had supported your proposal. If I had got to London earlier, I need hardly say that I should have voted with you. I see no other way of keeping the Club to its old character in the new house – or in other words, of keeping the Club together – than the way you have proposed. You will tell me, when I next see you, if you think of trying again next year?<sup>2</sup>

I am very glad to hear that No Name has fastened a strong hold on you already.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. George Russell (1828–98), third son of Sir Henry Russell, Second Baronet of Swallowfield. George inherited the title after the death of his brother Charles in 1883 and in 1885 was elected as a Conservative MP. The Russell family had travelled with the Collins family in January 1838 when they visited Pompeii and Amalfi, and WC was later invited to George’s wedding (see [0730] to HC, 26 February 1867).

2. The reference is to the Garrick Club of which WC and Russell were members. Russell’s proposal was presumably along the lines of the motion he and WC signed a year later to preserve its character (see [0533] to Millais, 6 April 1863, footnote 1).

[0467] TO CHARLES WARD, 30 APRIL 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/35). Summary: B&C, I, p. 209. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 261–262.

12. Harley Street, W. | 30th April 1862

My dear Ward,

Thanks for your note – and Caroline’s thanks for the present you kindly propose making to her. We can get no such Eau de Cologne as yours.<sup>1</sup>

Shall you come in on Sunday? I have taken Dickens’s old house (The Fort House) at Broadstairs for four months – and we leave town at the end of June.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC mentions a similar gift in [0329] to Ward of 11 January 1860.

[0468] TO CHARLES WARD, [11] APRIL 1862<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/82). Published: BGLL, I, p. 262 (dated [2 May] 1862).

12. Harley Street, W. | Friday

My dear Ward,

If you look in here next Sunday, can you, without inconvenience, put three five pound notes and ten sovereigns in your pocket, and exchange them for a cheque of my mothers (now in my possession) for £25...-..? I can’t get to Coutts’s, and I shall want the money next week.

I have been terribly harassed over my work, and am only just going straight on again,

Ever yours | WC

---

1. See the following letter [0469] to Ward for the dating.

[0469] TO CHARLES WARD, 11 APRIL 1862<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/32). Published: BGLL, I, p. 262 (dated [2 May] 1862).

12. Harley Street, W. | Friday

My dear Ward,

Since I wrote to you today, Low has sent the first quarterly payment (£125) for the advance sheets of No Name.<sup>2</sup> I can therefore draw my cheques as usual. If you will bring ten sovereigns on Sunday (instead of the amount mentioned in my other letter) I will give you my own cheque for the amount, and Low’s cheque to pay into my account.<sup>3</sup>

ever yours WC

---

1. Inferred dating based on the fact that the payment from Low mentioned in the letter was credited to WC’s bank account on Monday, 14 April (Coutts: WC).

2. As the New York publishers’ agents in London, Sampson Low were responsible for the provision of advance sheets of the novel to Harper’s in New York, and for payment of the dues. See [0458] to Sampson Low of 13 February 1862.

3. The £125 from Low is recorded as ‘rcvd’ on 14 April, while a £20 cheque was paid out to Ward on 17 April, with a balancing payment of £20 from Ward received on 30 April (Coutts: WC).

[0470] TO GEORGE RUSSELL,<sup>1</sup> 6 MAY 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 263 (as to [Charles] Russell).

12. Harley Street, W. | May 6th 1862

My dear Russell,

If you are in the Garrick neighbourhood between five and six tomorrow afternoon you will find me at the Club. Or if Saturday will suit you better, you will find me there on Saturday also at the same time. I am writing to an accompaniment of thunder, with my head muddled by a day's hard work – “So no more at present”, from yours ever

Wilkie Collins

---

1. Both George and Charles Russell were members of the Garrick Club at this time, but the recipient must be the same as [3203] of 28 April 1862.

[3024] TO ALFRED-AUGUSTE ERNOUF,<sup>1</sup> 7 MAY 1862

MS: Massachusetts HS.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C3, pp. 38–39.

12, Harley Street | Cavendish Square | London. | 7th May 1862.

Dear Sir,

Your letter has reached me today. The copy of the Revise which you have kindly sent to me, has not arrived at the same time.<sup>3</sup> I have no doubt however that I shall receive it in a day or two. The book-post is always slower than the letter-post.

“The Frozen Deep” and “The Red Vial” are written in the same general plan as The Lighthouse. In all three dramas my intention was to invent a story containing a strong human interest – to work the story out by means of characters as little theatrical and as true to everyday nature as I could make them – and, lastly, to surround events and persons thus produced with the most picturesque and striking external circumstances which the resources of the stage could realise. Thus, the story of The Lighthouse, passes in the Eddystone Lighthouse, and is illustrated by all the little picturesque circumstances of lighthouse-life. The story of The Frozen Deep (a love story) is so constructed as to connect the interest of it with the Arctic Discoveries of England – and the main collision between two of the male characters occurs in a hut of Lost Explorers in the regions of eternal frost, with all the circumstances of danger in that situation interwoven with the circumstances of the plot. The Red Vial traces the slow degrees by which circumstances distort the love of a mother for her child into the commission of a crime by the mother for the child's sake. And here the climax of the Drama is worked out in the famous “Dead-House” of Franckfort – where all bodies are laid out before burial with a bell-pull attached to their hands, so that no supposed dead person may be buried alive by mistake. Here again, all the terrible and picturesque surroundings of the Dead House are associated with the story of the drama – just as the Lighthouse and the Arctic hut are associated with the other two stories. None of these three dramas have been printed. In the present degraded state of the drama in England – degraded, I mean, in the literary sense – I have refused all proposals to publish them, or to allow them to be acted after the period of their first stage appearance. I mean to keep them till better times come – and if no better times come, I will turn them into Novels.<sup>4</sup>

So much for my Plays. No Name will I hope be finished this autumn. It is – like The Woman In White – an attempt to create a strong interest out of characters and incidents taken from modern life, without inventing any outrageous crimes, or creating any impossible people. The interest, this time, centres round a young girl. The story is told on a totally different plan from The Woman In White, and is carried out by a totally different set of characters. As far as the book has been read here, it is thought the best book of the two. I am trying hard to make it the best book.

I need scarcely say that I shall read your article with no ordinary interest. I have so hearty and sincere an admiration for French literature that I feel honestly anxious to deserve some recognition from French critics and French readers. You only do me justice in supposing that I am incapable of the folly of resenting a plain and fair statement of my faults. Criticism which frankly and intelligently endeavours (as I am sure your criticism will) to improve the artist, in the interests of Art, is, in my opinion a compliment to any man who is the object of it. When you tell me of my faults you show me, by implication, that you think I am worth improving.

Believe me, Dear sir | very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Monsieur | Le Baron Ernouf

---

1. The Parisian scholar to whom WC had written on 21 March 1862 [0462].
2. Tipped into extra-illustrated copy of James T. Fields, Yesterdays with Authors (Boston: Ticknor & Fields, 1883), extended by Curtis Guild, Boston, 1887.
3. Presumably of Ernouf's forthcoming piece on WC; see [0491] to him of 16 September 1862.
4. The Frozen Deep was indeed used for his readings in America and published in The Frozen Deep and other Stories (1874), while the plot of The Red Vial was reworked in Jezebel's Daughter (1880).

[0471] TO FANNY MITCHELL, 15 MAY 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, I, p. 263.

12. Harley Street, W. | May 15th 1862

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I accept with the greatest pleasure your kind invitation for Sunday the 25th at ¼ to 8.

Friday I am very sorry to say, finds me with an engagement in the evening afterwards – and so doubly prevents me from joining the party in Gt Stanhope Street. I need hardly say that I should have gladly made one of the guests under the circumstances.

Pray accept my apologies and believe me

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[3083] TO ANNABEL MILNES, 17 MAY 1862

MS: Trinity (Crewe Bequest, pasted into first edition of No Name 1863). Published: Reid, II, pp. 79–80;<sup>1</sup> Shore, pp. 209–210; A&C4, p. 6, amended A&C10, pp. 23–24.

12. Harley Street, W.

May 17th 1862

Dear Mrs Milnes,

I have always had a pagan tendency to believe in Fate. That tendency has now settled into a conviction. Fate sits on the doorstep at 16 Upper Brook Street, and allows all your guests the happiness of accepting your hospitality – with the one miserable exception of the Doomed Man who writes this letter. When your kindness opened the door to me, on the occasion of your “At Home”, Fate closed it again – using as the instrument of exclusion a neuralgic attack in my head. Quinine and patience help me to get the better of this, and Mrs Milnes (with an indulgence which I am penitently conscious of not having deserved) offers me a second chance. Fate, working with a Postman for an instrument on this occasion, sends me a dinner invitation for Thursday, the 22nd, one day before I receive Mrs Milnes's kind note. No guardian angel warns me to pause. I accept the invitation, and find myself engaged to dine on the 22nd – not in London, for I might then have asked permission to come to Brook Street in the evening – but at Richmond, where there is no hope for me!

I think this “plain statement” really makes out my case. I have not the audacity to ask you to accept my apologies – my aspirations are limited to presenting myself as a fit object for your compassion. The ancients, in any emergency, were accustomed to mollify Fate by a sacrifice. I am quite ready to try the experiment. If I presented myself on the door-step of your house with a portable altar, a toga, a live sheep, and a sacrificial knife – would it be convenient? I fear not! A crowd might collect, the Animals' Protection Society might interfere at the moment of divination, and Mr Milnes might be subjected to annoying inquiries in the House of Commons.<sup>2</sup> My only resource left is to ask you to exercise the Christian privilege of forgiveness, and to assure you that I deserve it by being – really, and not as a figure of speech – very sorry.

Believe me | very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Sir Thomas Wemyss Reid (1842–1905: ODNB) was a distinguished parliamentary journalist. His life of Milnes mentions several occasions when Collins was a guest at the Milnes's house. See also [0591] to Richard Monckton Milnes, 6 August 1864.

2. At this time Richard Monckton Milnes was a Member of Parliament before being elevated to the peerage as Lord Houghton in 1863.

[0472] TO J. STIRLING COYNE, 23 MAY 1862

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 263–264 (as to J. Sterling Coyne), amended A&C3, p. 62.

12. Harley Street, W. | May 23rd 1862

Dear Sir,

I regret to say that a dinner engagement for the 1st of June makes it impossible for me to join the Dramatic Authors' Society at Greenwich on Sunday week.<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

J. Stirling Coyne Esqre

---

1. The occasion in question has not been identified.

[3025] TO UNKNOWN RECIPIENT, 26 MAY 1862

MS: Parrish (5/11/AM18709). Published: A&C3, p. 39.

May 26th 1862 /

“. . . . The poor weak words, which have failed to describe Miss Fairlie, have succeeded in betraying the sensations she awakened in me. It is so with us all. Our words are giants when they do us an injury, and dwarfs when they do us a service.”<sup>1</sup>

From “The Woman In White” | By | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC copied out the same passage for another fan in February 1861.

[0486] TO FANNY MITCHELL, [SPRING 1862]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, I, p. 271 (dated [Spring-Summer 1862]).

12. Harley Street, W. | Saturday

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I am very sorry to say that I unluckily have a dinner engagement, and I can therefore only thank you for your kind invitation, and once more, by letter, wish you and Mr Mitchell the best weather and the most picturesque roads for that enviable journey on horseback! I shall look forward to the pleasure of hearing of your adventures and observations, this autumn, in Scotland – when I hope to take my journey to Caulside.<sup>2</sup>

In the mean time | Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The reference to a planned autumn visit to Scotland suggests this conjectural dating, before he left town to spend the summer in Broadsairs.

2. Probably referring to Caulside, a Dumfriesshire village in the Liddesdale valley just across the Scottish border and not far from Gretna Green.

[0473] TO FANNY MITCHELL, 7 JUNE 1862<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, I, p. 264 (dated 7 June [1862]).

12. Harley Street | June 7th

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

Many thanks for your kind note. I have an engagement to dine out of town on the 12th – but if I can get away in time, and if (under these circumstances) you will excuse me for accepting your invitation conditionally, I shall be delighted to join the party in Great Stanhope Street.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating by elimination. Within the three years when WC was at Harley Street, the letter cannot date from 1863 as WC was abroad at that time, or from 1864, given [0581] to Fanny Mitchell of 6 June 1864.

[3352] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 11 JUNE 1862<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Envelope only.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C13, p. 3.

Wednesday

The enclosed came this morning.<sup>3</sup> I have tried hard to get to Clarence Terrace – but perpetual interruptions have prevented me. I shall try again tomorrow.

WC

---

1. The postmark is a little unclear but the year is clear and the only day that could fit with the Wednesday date is 11 June. This is the last known dated letter addressed to HC at Clarence Terrace. Although CAC and Katherine lived at Clarence Terrace and HC spent a lot of time with friends she did spend occasional times there. The landlord was a Mr Wilson (CAC to HC, 17 October 1860, Morgan 3153.20) and HC's bank account records 14 approximately quarterly payments of £21 to W. or J. Wilson from 31 March 1859 to 6 August 1862 (Coutts: WmC).

2. Message written on the inside flap of an envelope directed to 'Mrs Collins | 2. Clarence Terrace | Regents Park | N.W.' with postmark 'LONDON W | 6 | JU 11 | 62' and a cancelled penny stamp.

3. Unidentified, but possibly tickets that WC had obtained for her.

[0474] TO CHARLES WARD, 25 JUNE 1862<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/36). Published: BGLL, I, p. 264.

12. Harley Street W | June 25th

My dear Ward,

I want another cheque book. If you have got nothing to do on Friday next the 27th will you bring the cheque book, and dine here quietly at ½ past 6? We are off to Broadstairs early next week. Ever yours | WC

---

1. Dating from the stay at Broadstairs (see [0476] to F. C. Beard of 30 June 1862).

[0475] TO MRS BICKNELL,<sup>1</sup> 28 JUNE 1862

MS: Glasgow (SR249, found in Forster, Life of Charles Dickens (3 vols, London: Chapman & Hall, 1872), II, p. 372). Published: BGLL, I, p. 264.

12. Harley Street, W. | June 28th 1862

Mr Wilkie Collins regrets that his absence from town next month renders it impossible for him to avail himself of Mr and Mrs Bicknell's kind invitation. He hopes that Mr and Mrs Bicknell will, under these circumstances, accept his apologies.

---

1. Unidentified – though see [0330] to her of 12 January 1860. This note would likely have been directed to the woman of the house.

[0477] TO FANNY MITCHELL, 30 JUNE 1862<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, I, p. 266.

Monday

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

Your kind note finds me on the point of leaving town. I am going tomorrow morning (to finish my new book in security from the temptations of the London season)<sup>2</sup> – and the infinite number of small things I have to do this afternoon and this evening, leave me no hope of being able to accept your kind invitation. I hope you will excuse me, under these circumstances – and excuse also my not calling to say goodbye. Time has really and truly failed me.

With kindest regards to Mr Mitchell

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Dating determined by the parallel to the situation described in [0476] to Frank Beard of the same date.
  2. This can only refer to No Name – see the similar remark in [0479] to Charles Manby of 3 July.

[0476] TO F. C. BEARD,<sup>1</sup> 30 JUNE 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: BGLL, I, p. 265.

Monday night June 30th

My dear Beard,

I called to night (after a day of unspeakable confusion, consequent on going away) to say goodbye – and saw Mrs Beard. She told me how you had been hurried and worried – and I, hurried and worried also in my way, sympathised with you.

Come and get a little quiet at Broadstairs as soon as you can, and as often as you can. If it is only for a Sunday, come. Your bed will be ready for you from Saturday next. If you have time to write beforehand, I will come and meet you at the railway. If not, descend upon us impromptu (we make no stranger of you) – and you have only to inquire at “The Albion Hotel Broadstairs” to be directed to my tower of refuge. My address is, The Fort House, Broadstairs, Kent.

We are off at 11.30 tomorrow morning. I precipitated the departure, feeling my brains melting with the effort to keep my work going, in the midst of a domestic revolution of furniture and luggage. The Goods train took ten packages today – and we take more with us tomorrow.

Goodbye for the present – and many many thanks for the manner in which you have “brought me up to the scratch” in the slashing battle (still undecided) of Collins against the Printer.<sup>2</sup> I have been a little “wild in my deliveries” this last round – but I mean to “pull myself together” for the next, and to work at “in-fighting”, the instant my gallant opponent toes the scratch.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours Wilkie Collins

I have got Dickens’s receipt for cider cake, and the Refrigerator is at this moment on its way to Broadstairs | Verb: sap.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Francis Carr (Frank) Beard (1814–93), WC’s physician and close friend for nearly thirty years; dedicatee of No Name and co-executor of WC’s will. Beard acted as doctor to CD’s family from 1859 and attended WC from 1861. He lived at 44 Welbeck Street, close to most of WC’s Marylebone addresses.

2. Over No Name as a serial.

3. Again showing WC’s affection for boxing metaphors – see [0343] to W. H. Wills of 5 May 1860.

4. The Latin saw, verbum sapienti satis est, or ‘a word to the wise is enough’.

[0478] TO JOHN RUSSELL BUCKLER,<sup>1</sup> 3 JULY 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 266–267.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | July 3rd 1862

My dear Buckler,

Your letter reached me in the confusion of moving from Harley Street to this place – and I have had no earlier opportunity of answering it.

London interruptions made me so backward with my story – that I had no choice but to get away into some quiet place, and work in peace. If any of your migrations during the summer lead you this way, don't forget the address at the head of this letter. I have plenty of accommodation for friends – and we will drink a long farewell to your bachelor existence, and all prosperity and happiness to your career as a married man.<sup>2</sup> This house stands in its own garden close to the sea – and is really a comfortable place to live in.

I could not resist celebrating your hunting breeches. I laughed a good deal in writing it, and I am glad you have matched me in reading it.<sup>3</sup> We have saved the ham for this place, and we shall drink your health when we cook it. I have no doubt it will be excellent. Caroline sends you her kindest remembrances. She has hardly done unpacking yet – the quantity of luggage we have brought with us still makes my hair stand on end when I think of it.

Send me a line a day or two beforehand, if you see your way to coming here,
And believe me | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. John Russell Buckler (b. c. 1831), a wool broker of Gannicox House, Stroud, Gloucestershire – see Slater's Directory of Gloucester, Hereford, etc. (London: Isaac Slater, 1868), p. 262, and the Census for 1861/1871. WC gave Buckler a letter of introduction to Harper's in New York, dated 25 March 1861, and he was on the list of friends for whom WC obtained tickets to the dinner to say farewell to CD before his departure to the United States (see [0782] to Charles Kent, 26 October 1867). Though Buckler was clearly a close friend, his connection to WC remains unclear.

2. On 4 September 1862 at St Matthew's, Cairncross, Gloucestershire, Buckler married Ann Vickers Strachan

3. See No Name, Third Scene, ch. 1, where Mrs Wragge, in shuffling through her trade circulars, notes one dedicated to 'Comfort in the Field. Buckler's Indestructible Hunting-breeches.' The story behind the private joke has unfortunately not been elucidated. However, this reference to rural pursuits plus the location of the two residences, less than a mile apart, strongly suggests a link to George Samuel Gregory of Beeches Green, Stroud, who WC visited with Caroline in September 1860 – see [0347] to him of 24 May 1860.

[0479] TO CHARLES MANBY,<sup>1</sup> 3 JULY 1862

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 79; BGLL, I, pp. 267–268.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | July 3rd 1862

My dear Sir,

I have left town for the season, to get time and quiet for a story which I am still engaged in writing.<sup>2</sup> When I get back, at the end of the autumn, I have an unperformed promise to sit for my photograph, waiting for fulfillment until my return. But I will not forget the application with which Mr Window has favoured me<sup>3</sup> – although I am at present obliged to defer acceding to it.

I have written to say this to Mr Window – and I need hardly add that under more favourable circumstances, I should have been glad to have readily complied with the request which you have been kind enough to make to me.

Believe me | My dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Charles Manby Esq<sup>re</sup> | &c &c &c

---

1. Presumably Charles Manby (1804–84: ODNB), FRS, Secretary to the Institute of Civil Engineers (1839–56) and friend of CD (see Pilgrim, IV, p. 495 n. 1).

2. No Name.

3. This must be the photographer Frederick Richard Window, who introduced the new portrait formats of the Diamond Cameo Carte de Visite and the Cabinet in 1864 and 1866 respectively. He belonged to the firm of Window & Grove of 63A Baker Street – on the opposite side of Portman Square to WC's residence. The firm were later known for their theatrical portraits (notably of Ellen Terry and Marie Bancroft) and advertised themselves as 'Photographers to the Royal Family'. No Window & Grove portrait of WC has been traced and Manby's connection to the firm remains obscure.

[0480] TO CHARLES WARD, 9 JULY 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/37), damaged. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 268–269.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | July 9th 1862

My dear Ward,

One or two points occur in the part of my story on which I am now at work, which you may be able to decide. Here they are.

1. How many days notice (in the case of a marriage by license) is it customary to give, when you inform the authorities at your district church that you want to be married? Do you leave word (and the license) at the vestry, two or three days before hand, or more? And must you leave the license, when you give the notice – or will saying that you have the license, and producing it on the morning of the marriage do? These points are important to me. Can you settle them?
2. Will the books of Coutts inform me how long letters took to go from England to Zurich, in the year 1847 – and to come back again from Zurich to England?
3. What is the average time consumed in the voyage from London to Hong Kong – loading a vessel there – and coming back from Hong Kong to London?<sup>1</sup>

If you can get me answers to these questions, without any trouble, you will be doing me a service. [The weather here is]<sup>2</sup> [text excised]

The Broadstairs people are complaining. This house is delightful. Have you no chance of coming here on a Saturday and going back on a Monday, before your holidays? We have all been upset by the change and the weather combined. Livers and stomachs wrong – but we are getting better.

Caroline sends her kind regards.

[valediction and signature excised]

-
1. The three points refer to various events in No Name – see [0481], WC's next letter to Ward, of 13 July.
  2. A rather lop-sided rectangle has been cut from the second leaf of the notepaper (obviously for the signature on the verso) and two lines of text are lost at this point. The text in square brackets is damaged and the reading conjectural.

[3204] TO GEORGE RUSSELL, 12 JULY 1862

MS: Unknown. On sale: Woolley & Wallis, Salisbury, UK (12 December 2012), lot 54, in an album of letters to Sir George Russell, p. 43. Published: A&C8, pp. 6–7.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | Kent | July 12th 1862

My dear Russell,

Your kind letter has just been forwarded to this place. Many thanks for it. I left town ten days since – so all attendance at the performance on my part was out of the question. I am not the less obliged by your remembrance of me.

When Cole informed me, some time since, that each of the three plays produced was under the authority of a separate manager, I privately suspected that confusion would be the result.<sup>1</sup> The only sort of government in theatrical matters is an absolute despotism. However, I [hope] the stage-performance at night succeeded, and that the results both dramatic and pecuniary were satisfactory.

I am hard at work here, making up for time lost through London interruptions. If you are in these parts, this summer or autumn, don't forget my address. I am a free man in the afternoon (though chained to my desk all the morning).

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

George Russell Esq

-
1. The plays have not been unidentified.

[0481] TO CHARLES WARD, 13 JULY 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/38). Published: BGLL, I, p. 269.

The Fort House | July 13th 1862

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for the answers – they are exactly what I wanted. If you can solve the question about the letters to Zurich in 1847 you will fulfil all my aspirations.

There is a bed for you here, if you can come next Saturday – and a trip in a lugger for Sunday, if the weather serves. This is a family house – so you need be under no fear of any scarcity of bedrooms. We have plenty of accommodation, and a view of the sea from every room.

Ever yours | WC

About the License, and the Fortnight's residence. I understand that it is necessary to live a fortnight previously in the district of the church where you are to be married. This is what you mean, I suppose? Not that you are to live a fortnight previously in the district in which the license is issued, before you can get it?<sup>1</sup>

I have just got your second letter about the post to Zurich. It is a longer time than I supposed – but continental railways were scarce in 1847. Even making allowances for this, ten days from London to Zurich and from Zurich back to London, seems long – but no doubt you are right.<sup>2</sup>

Let me know if you can come on Saturday – so that we may air your sheets. Pigott is coming also – probably by the boat at 10.a.m. You had better communicate with him, unless you prefer the train.

---

1. See No Name, First Scene, ch. 12: 'In the spring of this year they left home; they lived in London for a fortnight, in the strictest retirement; they were married by license at the end of that time'.

2. See No Name, Fourth Scene, ch. 8: 'Mr Noel Vanstone's experience was, as Captain Wragge had anticipated, perfectly competent to settle the question of time. The railway resources of the Continent (in the year eighteen hundred and forty-seven) were but scanty; and a letter sent, at that period, from England to Zurich, and from Zurich back again to England, occupied ten days in making the double journey by post.' This scene appeared in All the Year Round on 13 September.

[3278] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 14 JULY 1862

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, pp. 6–7.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | Kent
July 14th 1862

My dear Palgrave Simpson,

One line to thank you for your kind letter, and to say how glad I am to hear that your "part" justified your belief in it, and that the play altogether went off well. I was sincerely sorry to miss it – but the dire necessity of getting on a little faster with "No Name" drove me from London – and here I am, with the sea on three sides of me and a garden on the fourth, working in blessed seclusion from all London interruptions. I make a holiday of every Sunday (as a concession to the principles of a brother-writer – Moses, author of "The Ten Commandments" &c &c) – and if you feel inclined this summer or autumn to try the Kentish Coast from Saturday to Monday, let me know a day or two beforehand – and you will find a bed here very much at your disposal – I only mention from Saturday to Monday because my Sunday holiday leaves me at the disposal of my friends.<sup>1</sup> If you don't mind my being shut up till 3 P.M. the rest of the week is as much yours as Sunday.<sup>2</sup> There are some pretty walks hereabouts, and fine sailing in a lugger I can answer for, if you like the sea.

Ever yrs | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC writes on a Monday.

2. WC clearly sets out his work pattern: he sits at his desk until 3pm every day from Monday to Saturday.

[0482] TO JAMES BIRTLES,<sup>1</sup> [18] JULY 1862

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 270.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | July 17th Friday<sup>2</sup>

My dear Sir,

I fancy I have made too many corrections in the enclosed proof of No 25 to allow of your letting me have the Revises back by return of post.<sup>3</sup> If this is so, will you have them done ~~in time~~ by Monday night, and will you post one of them (on the thin paper) to this address:

Messrs Sampson Low, Son, & Co. | 47. Ludgate Hill. E.C.

=

It is very important that Messrs Low should receive a Revise of this number on Tuesday morning next.

The remaining copies of the Revise – viz: two for myself, and two on the foreign post paper,<sup>4</sup> can be sent to me here as usual, whenever it is convenient.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

I have no more copy of No 26 to send today. But you will receive a new supply on Monday.

Mr James Birtles /

-
1. On the staff at Charles Whiting of Beaufort House, The Strand, printers of All the Year Round.
  2. WC must have misdated the letter. July 17 was a Thursday in 1862, but the Fort House address and the reference to the serialization of No Name secure the letter in that year. Since mistakes in the date are more common than mistakes in the day, we must assume the letter was written on Friday 18 July 1862.
  3. Of No Name, serialized in All the Year Round, 15 March 1862 to 17 January 1863. No. 25 was published on 30 August and No. 26 on 6 September, so WC was now working a good six weeks in advance of the press. Although Sampson Low eventually published No Name in three volumes, here in their role as agents they were providing copy for Harper & Brothers in New York, who serialized the novel from 15 March 1862 to 24 January 1863.
  4. That is, on light-weight paper for sending overseas.

[0483] TO JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS,<sup>1</sup> 22 JULY 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 270–271.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | July 22nd 1862

My dear John Everett,

Your kind note has followed me here. I have fled the Metropolis to shut myself up and work at my story – which story is a Teazer, and threatens to be longer than “The Woman In White”. But for this, I should have been delighted to dine with you on Thursday.

Take a return ticket some Saturday, and come here. I make a holiday on Sunday. I have a large house with plenty of bedrooms at your disposal, and a view of the sea from every one of them. A line to appoint a day (if you can find one) will bring me to the Ramsgate station to meet you. So no more at present, from

yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. John Everett Millais (1829–1896: ODNB), Pre-Raphaelite painter. WC had known Millais intimately since the 1840s, but this appears to be the first letter to him to have survived. A note in an unknown hand on the blank leaf states: ‘Letter from Wilkie Collins to J. E. Millais, A.R.A. Given to me by Major MacBean who obtained it from Millais.’

[0484] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 28 JULY 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 166; Davis, pp. 231–232. Published: B&C, I, pp. 209–210. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 271.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | July 28th 1862

My dear Lehmann,

Here is a line to wish you most heartily a safe voyage out and a prosperous return. I need not tell you, I am sure, how sorry I am to miss the chance of having you here – and how glad I should be to hear, even at the eleventh hour, that the American voyage was put off – for Mrs Lehmann’s sake as well as for yours and for mine. But I suppose there is no hope of this.

The one chance for that miserable country on the other side of the Atlantic is, that these two [del] blatant impostors Lincoln and McClellan<sup>1</sup> will fail to get the 300,000 new men they ask for. If I thought it would be the least use, I would go down on both my knees, and pray with all my might for the total failure of the new enlistment scheme. But the devil being the ruling power in American affairs, and I not being (as I venture to hope) on particularly good terms with him – it seems hopeless on this occasion to put any trust into the efficacy of ~~des~~ fervent aspirations and cramped knees.

All I do most seriously and earnestly hope is – that you will come back with all personal anxieties in the American direction, set at rest. We will then drink confusion together to your customers for light steel and my customers for light reading.<sup>2</sup> I have hundreds of American correspondents but no friends there. If you want anything special in the literary way tell Harper of New York you are a friend of mine [del] and he will be gladly of service to you. So would Fields (of the firm of Ticknor & Fields) Boston.

Goodbye my dear fellow – and once more may you have the best of voyages out, and the speediest of voyages back again!

Ever yours most truly | Wilkie Collins

Pray thank Mrs Lehmann for her addition to your letter. I am not a good correspondent generally – but if she will write to me, [del] in these long evenings, I promise to write back. We are in nearly the same [del] situation. She is shut up with her boys,<sup>3</sup> and I am shut up with my book.

---

1. This was the period when a series of major setbacks in the Virginian Peninsular Campaign for the Union army under General George B. McClellan (1826–1885) had forced the President Lincoln to launch a massive new recruitment initiative. On WC's general attitude towards the American Civil War, see Graham Law & Andrew Maunder, Wilkie Collins: A Literary Life (London: Palgrave Macmillan, 2008), pp. 149–153.

2. Lehmann's business in the United States presumably concerned the Sheffield firm of Naylor's, steel manufacturers, whose Boston branch was managed by his brother-in-law, Ernst Leopold Schlesinger Benzon.

3. Rudolph (Rudy) Chambers (1856–1929) and Frederick (Freddy) Hope (1857–1917), the two young sons of Frederick and Nina Lehmann.

[3152] TO SAMPSON LOW, 29 JULY 1862

MS: Toledo (Maher Family Papers MSS-005, Locked Cabinet D). Published: A&C6, p. 7.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | Kent | July 29th 1862

Dear Sir,

Will you be so good, at your convenience, as to pay the second instalment of the purchase-money for American advance-sheets of “No Name”, (£125—) into my account, at the banking house of Messrs Coutts & Co Strand.<sup>1</sup>

I am now in a position to be able to consider proposals for the republication of “No Name”. These proposals are to be, on the present occasion, for the copyright of the book – and the sum offered, under these circumstances, is not to include the money received for advance-sheets to America, or for foreign translations and reprints – all of which are to be considered as previously reserved to himself by the author. The book will fill three thick volumes, and will be completed in All The Year Round, either in November or December next – I cannot yet say which.<sup>2</sup>

My present address for the receipt of letters, is at the head of this note.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Sampson Low Esqre

---

1. This second payment was credited to his Coutts account as from Sampson Low on 31 July; the first had been credited on 14 April, and the third and fourth were to be credited respectively on 16 October and 18 February 1863 (Coutts: WC; see also [0525] to Ward, 18 February 1863). This represents the total of £500 from Harper & Brothers for the serialisation in Harper's Weekly.

2. Low offered £3000 – see [0485] to HC, 12 August 1862. In fact the serialisation ended in All the Year Round on 17 January 1863, having run for 45 parts from 15 March 1862. WC finished writing the story on 24 December, and Low published 4000 copies a week later on 31 December – see [0509] to Beard, 24 December 1862 and [0510] to Wills, 31 December 1862.

[3315] TO ALFRED E. GALLOWAY, 9 AUGUST 1862

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C11, pp. 6–7.

The Fort House | Broadstairs
August 9th 1862

Dear Sir,

Your kind note has been forwarded to me at this house.

I regret to hear that your connection with The Spectator has come to an end. The marked ability with which the paper was written would have made the success of a new speculation. But a newspaper which has once sunk, is of all the weighty literary objects I know of the heaviest to lift up again. I am on every account sorry for the failing fortunes of a paper which set an excellent example of honest, as well as able, journalism.<sup>2</sup>

Pray accept my thanks for the courtesy which placed me on your Free List,

And believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Alfred E. Galloway Esqre

---

1. Tipped into an extra-illustrated copy of Frank Archer, An Actor's Notebooks (London: Stanley Paul, [1912]), fp. 280, together with 22 further letters and cards from writers and others, generally those mentioned in the volume.

2. In January 1861, the liberal weekly Spectator had been taken over by the journalists Meredith White Townsend (1831–1911: ODNB) and Richard Holt Hutton (1826–1897: ODNB), and their strong support for the North in the American Civil War led to a downturn in the paper's circulation; however, this proved short-lived, and the Townsend-Hutton editorship continued successfully for over a quarter of a century. Moreover, the weekly still thrives today, though now as a conservative organ. Galloway's departure from the journal may then have been due to other factors. He appears in the 1861 Census living in Finsbury with his wife Ellen, with his occupation given as Newspaper Manager (RG 9; Piece: 148; Folio: 105; Page: 55), while in the 1871 and 1881 Censuses he appears as a Journalist. Despite the formal salutation, WC had known Galloway from his days with the Leader in the mid-1850s; see, for example, [0190] to Pigott, [1854].

[0485] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 12 AUGUST 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/64). Published: B&C, I, p. 210. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 271.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | August 12th 1862

My dear Mother,

I have delayed answering your letter, until I had some news to tell you. I have only today completed the sale of the copyright of "No Name". Low has outbidden everybody – and has offered the most liberal price that has ever been given for the reprinting of a work already published periodically – no less a sum than Three Thousand Pounds!! Add to this, [~~the~~] receipts from "All The Year Round" and from America, and the amount reaches Four thousand, six hundred. Not so bad, for story-telling! I have had some worry and anxiety in the course of the negotiations, with the dire necessity of working all the time. It is an immense relief to have got it over – and I am on many accounts glad that Low is the successful man. Not a hope of the story being done before the end of the year!<sup>1</sup>

We have had some fine, and some furiously stormy, weather here. The place is full of the usual seaside people.

Write soon, and tell me how you are at Basset. I am scribbling this after a long day's work – and I must get out and walk it off. Give my kind regards to the Bullar's. When you leave Basset where do you go next?

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. The serialization of No Name in All the Year Round was eventually completed on 17 January 1863, though WC completed the composition on Christmas Eve, 1862 – see [0509] to Beard, 24 December 1862.

[0487] TO SAMPSON LOW & CO., 1 SEPTEMBER 1862

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, p. 272.

Broadstairs | Monday, September 1st 1862

Dear Sirs,

The next weekly number of “No Name” – sent in advance to America – will reach you for next Saturday’s mail, instead of for tomorrow’s mail. By this arrangement, I shall get a few days’ needful rest – and Messrs Harper will have weekly Part 31 (which is published in London, Wednesday October 8th) sent by the mail of Saturday September 6th

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Sampson Low, Son & Co

[0488] TO CHARLES WARD, 11 SEPTEMBER 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/39). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 272–273.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | Sept 11th

My dear Ward,

Will you pay the enclosed cheque into my account? Pigott will present you with one signed by me for the same amount.<sup>1</sup>

Also, when you are passing the Burlington Arcade, will you look in at Jeffs’s<sup>2</sup> – buy the number for Sept 1st 1862 of The Révue Contemporaine – and give Jeffs my address here, to send it by book-post. There is a review of my Life & Writings in the Révue Contemporaine – and the author has written to ask my opinion on it.<sup>3</sup> The copy he sent to England has not reached me – and I must read the notice before I can answer the letter.

Lovely weather here today. We are going out sailing again. Tomorrow, Pigott and Henry Bullar leave me, and I return to my work. We went on Wednesday to Canterbury & dined at The Fountain – finishing the landlord’s last bottle of the famous old East India Sherry. Strange to say we failed to find [St Crumpus on The Stairs].<sup>4</sup> Send me a line to say the cheque reached you safely – and believe me, Ever yours

WC

It may be as well to look into the table of Contents before you buy the Révue, as my correspondent does not mention the date of the number – and I only guess it to be the 1st of this month. The article may have appeared in August.

I enclose a letter from the greatest ass in existence. The latter part of it is in German. Will you send me back the letter, with an English translation, when you write?<sup>5</sup> I am almost as bad with my commissions as poor George Thompson!<sup>6</sup>

---

1. WC’s account records a cheque for £25 to Pigott being cashed on 12 September, and a cheque for the same amount from Pigott being paid in on 15th October (Coutts: WC).

2. Jeffs ran the London outlet of the Parisian firm of Hachette, Librairie et Cie – see [0264] to Charles Lahure of 4 September 1857.

3. See [0491] to Alfred-Auguste Ernouf of 16 September 1862. The Révue Contemporaine was a prestigious Parisian literary monthly issued from 1852.

4. Unidentified – perhaps a personal joke.

5. WC’s second postscript was clearly added later – it is written in a more cramped hand with a different pen. The letter half in German has not been traced.

6. See the account of Thompson’s death by suicide in [0373] to HC of 12, 13, 15 September 1860.

[0512] TO CHARLES EDWARD BENNETT,<sup>1</sup> 12 SEPTEMBER 1862

MS: Lewis Collection. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 286. Published: A&C11, pp. 19–20.

12. Harley Street
September 12th 1862

Dear Sir,

I very gladly write these lines to comply with the request which you honour me by making, and to thank you for your kind letter. I owe a heavy debt of obligation to the sympathy and kindness of my American readers – and I should be miserable indeed, if I were not gratified by their friendly remembrance of me, at a time when their country is distracted by the most terrible war that has happened in my time.

I have read with great interest the news which you kindly give me of the state of this hideous struggle as it now stands. My horror of all war, my firm conviction that the remedy of fighting is the most devilish and the most useless of all remedies, may be misleading me – but it seems to my mind the interest of America, the interest of Liberty, and the interest of Humanity, that this strife should end – no matter how it ends. Better your one Republic should be two than that the cause of Freedom should suffer in American hands.

Believe me | dear sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To/ Charles Edward Bennett Esqre

-
1. Unidentified, but clearly an American fan asking for a response.
  2. For an earlier comment on the American Civil War, see [0484] to Frederick Lehmann, 28 July 1862. There is an analysis of WC's general attitude towards the American Civil War in Graham Law & Andrew Maunder, Wilkie Collins: A Literary Life (London: Palgrave Macmillan, 2008), pp. 151–153.

[0489] TO CHARLES LEVER,<sup>1</sup> 12 SEPTEMBER 1862

MS: Houghton (HEW 7.1.1), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 273–274.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | September 12th 1862

Dear Mr Lever,

This letter will be presented to you by a very old and dear friend of mine – Mr Edward Pigott – who proposes visiting Spezzia, and who is anxious to become personally known to you.<sup>3</sup> Mr Pigott is the chief writer on foreign politics in The Daily News – and in that capacity has a more than ordinary interest in visiting Northern Italy at the present time.<sup>4</sup>

I heartily wish I could present my friend personally. But I am hard at work in the retirement of this little Kentish watering place, and I give Mr Pigott these lines, because I am really sure that the introduction will be an agreeable one on both sides. Perhaps I almost need an introduction myself – it is so long since I have had the pleasure of seeing you. In this case, I can only refer you to Jack Hinton, Charles O'Malley, and a few other old friends of yours, who will vouch for me that they are old friends of mine too, and who will help to keep me in your remembrances until you give me the opportunity of making up for lost time when you are next in England.<sup>5</sup>

Believe me | Dear Mr Lever | Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Charles Lever Esqre | &c &c &c

-
1. Charles James Lever (1806–72: ODNB), Anglo-Irish novelist, author of Charles O'Malley (1841), Jack Hinton (1842) and other novels. His A Day's Ride: A Life's Romance began in All the Year Round, 18 August 1860 and ran until 23 March 1861.
  2. Signed and directed to 'Charles Lever Esqre | &c &c &c', headed 'Forwarded by Edward F. Pigott Esqre'.
  3. From 1858 until 1867, when he transferred to Trieste, Lever occupied a consular position in what is now called La Spezia, about 50 miles down the coast from Genoa. CD wrote: 'There is nothing in Italy, more beautiful to me, than the coast-road between Genoa and Spezzia' (Pictures from Italy (London, 1846), ch. IX).
  4. The Daily News, a liberal newspaper, which began publication 21 January 1846 with CD as editor. Italy was on the verge of civil war during the summer and autumn of 1862. A friend of the great composer Verdi wrote: 'Garibaldi is now in open revolt and is creating an army around himself ... We are living in a tremendously difficult moment' (Carlo Tenca to Clara Maffei, 10 August 1862: cited in Mary Jane Phillips-Matz, Verdi: A Biography (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1993), p. 452).
  5. WC refers to the heroes of Lever's most famous works.

[0490] TO W. H. WILLS, 14 SEPTEMBER 1862

MS: Unknown. Published: Lehmann, pp. 36–37, our copy text; Priestley, pp. 105–106; BGLL, I, pp. 274–275.

The Fort House, | Broadstairs, | September 14th, 1862

My Dear Wills,

Do you, or does Mrs Wills,<sup>1</sup> or does any kindly Scot to whom you can at once apply without trouble, know anything of the neighbourhood of Dumfries?<sup>2</sup> My story will take me there next week. I am a total stranger to the locality, and I have no time to go and look for myself.

I don't want any elaborate description. I only want answers to these questions:

Is the neighbourhood of Dumfries – say for five miles around – hilly or flat? Barren and healthy, or cultivated and fairly stocked with trees? Is it pretty scenery or not? Is it like any neighbourhood of any English town? Is it sprinkled with villages? Or is it lonely? Are there any pretty cottages on the banks of the Nith in which I could put a married couple, anxious to escape observation, in their honeymoon? If so, what is the name of any village which could be near the said cottage? If the Nith won't do, the cottage can be put anywhere – north, south, east or west – as long as it is a few miles from Dumfries. Am I right in supposing Dumfries to be a thriving manufacturing town? And if so, what does it manufacture? Lastly, is there any mortal book which you can send me by book-post, and from which I could crib the local knowledge which I want?

Meditate, I beseech you, on these questions – and forgive 'No Name' for worrying you as well as me.

If the worst comes to the worst, I must write from pure imagination; and won't the letters come pouring in then to correct my mistakes! There is nothing the British reader enjoys so much as catching his author in the wrong.

Where is Dickens? Will he be at Gadshill this week, and at the office on Wednesday? If this is so, I will send him up my second volume to read. I hear gladly from Beard who has been staying here, that Georgina is better.<sup>3</sup>

I have been taking a holiday, and am hard at work again. If you see Reade, tell him to be of good cheer. I shan't have done before the end of the year – perhaps not before the end of January. They seem to like the story, and be d—d to them. The women write me letters begging for more each week. I wish they may get it!

Will you come here and tell me about Dumfries? One of my servants was kicked out yesterday, and the other is going to-morrow; but if you don't mind waiting on yourself, I'll black your boots. –

Ever yours | W. C.

-
1. Wills was married to Janet Chambers, sister of Scottish publisher Robert Chambers, and aunt of Nina Lehmann.
  2. Noel and Magdalen Vanstone spend their honeymoon at Baliol Cottage, Dumfries, in the first chapter of the Fifth Scene of No Name.
  3. Georgina Hogarth, CD's sister-in-law, now acting as housekeeper at Gad's Hill Place.

[0491] TO ALFRED-AUGUSTE ERNOUF,<sup>1</sup> 16 SEPTEMBER 1862

MS: Houghton (Autograph File C). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 275–276.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | Kent | September 16th 1862

My dear Sir,

Some delay has occurred in forwarding your kind letter, and the copy of the Revue Contemporaine, to this seaside place, where I am staying for the autumn.

I have only read the article which you have devoted to my writings and myself, today. Pray accept the sincere expressions of my thanks for the justice and the generosity of the criticism, and for the generosity of its tone towards the writer criticised. I assure you I feel honoured by having deserved such a recognition from French criticism as you have given me. You have told me of my faults tenderly and kindly, and you have given me credit for my merits with the warm sympathy of a man who can appreciate as well as criticise. There is not a page of the review which I could wish unwritten. I again thank you heartily – not for myself only, but for English literature as well.<sup>2</sup>

If I had any unpublished manuscripts by me, I would gladly owe you one more obligation – the obligation of being interpreted as well as criticised by your pen. But every page of my writing, for years and years passed, has been printed and published already – and my next book, after “No Name” is finished, is already bought, before I myself have the least idea what that book is to be!<sup>3</sup> I am a slow workman, with an empty portfolio, who sincerely wishes that he could offer something more than his excuses to the Revue Contemporaine.

Believe me, My dear Sir, | With sincere regard

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Monsieur | Le Baron Ernouf

---

1. The French scholar to whom WC had first written on 21 March 1862 [0462].

2. See Alfred-Auguste Ernouf, ‘Les Nouveaux Romanciers de l’Angleterre: Wilkie Collins’, Révue Contemporaine, 28 (21 August 1862), pp. 724–750.

3. Armada, eventually completed in 1866.

[0492] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 OCTOBER 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/65). Published: B&C, I, p. 211. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 276.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | October 1st 1862

My dear Mother,

I am glad to hear there is an end of your lonely occupation of the house,<sup>1</sup> and a prospect of /your/ paying another country visit. Give my love to Charley & Katie, who are back by this time I hope safe and sound. If it is any consolation to you, after the weather in London, to know that even here – in this house on the very edge of the sea – the atmosphere, until yesterday, has been [~~del~~] /the atmosphere/ of a vapour-bath – take that consolation. Three nights since the whole eastern horizon was ablaze with sheet lightning – no thunder, no rain, and not a breath of air.

They are going to begin printing No Name in book-form already! Low writes me word that there is a magnificent opportunity for us in December and entreats me to enable him to publish by that time. I mean to try what I can do. My own anxiety to finish the story is as eager as Low’s anxiety to publish it. I have a letter from Dickens about the 2nd vol, which I will keep to show you. If I was the vainest man alive, I could not have written of the book or thought of the book, what he has written and thought of it.<sup>2</sup>

I am a little headachy and tired – and I am going out to have a tepid salt-water bath. I swear by tepid salt-water baths – they soothe while you are in them, and they invigorate afterwards.

Goodbye for the present. Let me hear how you get on at Lady Lilford’s.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. HC’s London residence at this time seems to have been at 5, Hyde Park Gate South – see [0497] to her, 6 November 1862.

2. CD wrote to WC, 20 September 1862: ‘I have gone through the Second Volume [of No Name] at a sitting, and I find it wonderfully fine. It goes on with an ever-rising power and force in it that fills me with admiration. It is as far before and beyond The Woman in White as that was beyond the wretched common level of fiction-writing ...’ (Pilgrim, X, p. 128).

3. Referring to the younger sister of Henry Brandling, Emma Elizabeth Brandling (1826–84), who in 1859 had married the prominent ornithologist Thomas Littleton Powys, eldest son of the Third Baron Lilford. On the latter’s death in 1861, Lady Lilford and her husband (now the Fourth Baron) resided principally at Lilford Hall, Oundle, Northamptonshire.

[0493] TO CHARLES WARD, 6 OCTOBER 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /40). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 276–277.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | October 6th 1862

My dear Ward,

Here is another postage-question for you to solve: –

A letter is posted at Dumfries (N.B.) on the 3rd of November 1847, in time for that day's post to London. Does the letter reach London, and is it delivered on, the morning of the next day (the 4th) – as would be the case now? If not, when would the letter posted at Dumfries on Nov 3rd reach its address in London?<sup>1</sup> If Dumfries postal arrangements, fifteen years ago are difficult to discover – from Glasgow to London, at the same period, would do for my purpose. You must have plenty of letters to refer to from Glasgow to the Strand, in the year 1847.

Your letter (all right about the repayment to my account, and many thanks) does not say whether you can come here again. Can you manage next Saturday, the 11th? I mention the day, because the Saturday after, the house may be full, and the Saturday after that, we may be back at Harley Street. There is a necessity – if I can manage it – for publishing No Name in December,<sup>2</sup> and I must be back in town for the greater convenience of the book-printers and the All The Year Round printers. I am frightfully hard at work – but I shall make next Sunday, & Saturday afternoon, holidays – let me know if you can come, when you solve the postal question.

Caroline is much better, and sends her kind regards.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. See No Name, Between the Scenes (Fifth and Sixth), which appeared in All the Year Round on 22 November, in which a letter is sent from Dumfries to St John's Wood on 3 November 1847 and arrives on the morning of 5 November.
  2. No Name was published in three volumes, by Sampson Low, in the second half of December – see Gasson, pp. 14–15.

[0494] TO F. C. BEARD, 10 OCTOBER 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15), incomplete. Extract: Baker 2001, p. 506. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 277–278.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | Friday Oct 10th 1862

My dear Beard,

Is there any hope of you being able to come here tomorrow (Saturday)? I ask the question rather selfishly – for my stomach and nerves are terribly out of order again. Yesterday at 1 o'Clock P.M. I had to give up work with a deadly “all-overish” faintness which sent me to the brandy bottle. No confusion in my brain – but a sickness, faintness, and universal trembling – startled by the slightest noise – more nervous twittering last night – little sleep – sick feeling and taste of coffee – I seem to digest after dinner pretty well – but at night, or towards the small hours, wake as if I had got drunk. Bowels fairly often – and kept open when constipated by your pills, and sometimes by a mild pull of Old Marshall Hall's.<sup>1</sup> – My stomach wants tone, and my nerves want soothing and fortifying at the same time. If you are too much engaged to come tomorrow, will these particulars enable you to send me a prescription?

My own idea is to hasten my return to town – so as to be immediately under your eye. I have got all I can from this place – and the possibility of my breaking down at the close of my book, is not only a prospect of miserable loss to me, but to others whose money is embarked on No Name, in England and out of it. If I can be strung up for another six weeks' work, I shall be safely landed. My notion is unless I feel a great change next week for the better, to get back on or about Saturday the 18th. In the meantime, a little medicine is very necessary. Don't think of coming here at any inconvenience to your patients and yourself. This letter will enable you to send me [incomplete]<sup>2</sup>

1. Proprietary medicine based on Aloes, employed as a purgative; listed in the British Pharmaceutical Codex (1911) as Pilulae Aloes Dilutae. Marshall Hall (1790–1857) was the physician who discovered reflex muscular action.
2. WC reaches this point at the bottom of the last leaf of the four-leaf notepaper. The additional sheet containing the ending of the letter is not found in Parrish.

[0495] TO CHARLES WARD, 14 OCTOBER 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/41). Summary: B&C, I, pp. 211–212. Published: BGLL, I, p. 278.

The Fort House | Broadstairs | Oct: 14th 1862

My dear Ward,

Will you kindly look at my account, tomorrow, and after tomorrow (if no payment appears) until Saturday next to see whether Low has remembered to pay in £125? – and will you, in commercial phrase, “advise me of the same”? Low has assured me of the payment this week<sup>1</sup> – but he may forget it in the hurry of business, and I want to be sure on this point, before I pay for the Fort House.

I am sadly fagged with my work – I hope to God I shall finish in six weeks time.<sup>2</sup> We shall probably meet in London next week. The press is getting so near me – that I can’t afford to allow for the necessary delays of the post.

I was very sorry you could not come last Sunday – but you lost nothing. Except a gleam in the middle of the day, it rained incessantly – and the sand and sewage retired in the morning, even out of your reach. I never saw so low a tide.

Ever yours | WC

I have sent that cheque to Pigott (who has returned) to be re-indorsed – and have told him to pay it in to you for my account.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. The third quarterly payment for the advance sheets of No Name – see [0468] to Charles Ward, [2 May] 1862 and [3152] to Sampson Low, 29 July 1862 note 1.

2. In the event WC did not finish the novel much before Christmas – see [0509] to F. C. Beard of 24 December 1862.

3. For £25 paid into WC’s account on 15 October (Coutts: WC).

[0496] TO ANTOINE CARLIER,<sup>1</sup> 30 OCTOBER 1862

MS: Birmingham UL (US47/233), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 278–279.

12. Harley Street, W. | October 30th 1862

Dear Sir,

The right of translating all my published works into French has been already purchased from me by a Paris publisher. Some of my novels – such as The Dead Secret – The Woman In White – No Name (now in course of publication and translation) have been already translated into French. Others are still to be translated. I am not sure in which category to place After Dark – I only know that the right of translating it has been purchased.

Under these circumstances I have no other alternative than to decline the proposal with which you have favoured me.

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

Monsieur | Monsieur [sic] A Carlier

---

1. Otherwise unidentified Frenchman, ‘Professor of Languages’ in Norwich, married to an Englishwoman of the town named Mary Ann (Census 1861).

2. Directed to ‘Monsieur | Monsieur [sic] A. Carlier | 4 Tamworth Terrace | Kirthanks Road | Norwich’, postmarked as dated.

[0497] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 6 NOVEMBER 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/66), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, p. 212. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 279.

12. Harley Street | Thursday

My dear Mother,

I had taken no news for good news and had hoped you were away at Lilford.<sup>2</sup> I am very sorry to find how matters really are.<sup>3</sup> On Saturday, I dine with Egg – and will call and see how you and Charley are on my way. The weather has upset me as well. I am no exception to the family – cold in the head, cold in the throat, cold in the chest – internal upset as well – ha! ha! ha! I am getting used to it – and I laugh like a fiend over my own maladies. There is only one true friend to the afflicted in body – and his name is Brandy And Water – and he comes with particular healing on his wings when he is Hot.<sup>4</sup> Lay this advice to heart, and tell Charley to ponder it, too.

Goodbye till Saturday. Get better.

Ever your affly | WC

Look out for a drunken Scotch coachman in my next number.<sup>5</sup> I think he will make you laugh.

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | 5. Hyde Park Gate South | Kensington Gore | W.', with postmark 'LONDON.W.C. | Z | NO 6 | 62'.

2. See [0492] to HC, 1 October 1862.

3. That is, that HC is still alone in London.

4. WC facetiously misquotes Charles Wesley's well-known hymn 'Hark the Herald Angels Sing' (1839), where the third stanza begins, 'Hail the heav'n-born Prince of Peace! | Hail the Son of Righteousness! | Light and life to all He brings | Ris'n with healing in His wings'.

5. An elderly coachman 'preceded by a relishing odour of whisky' acts as a witness to a will in the instalment of No Name appearing All the Year Round, 15 November 1862, pp. 220–222.

[0498] TO HERMAN KINDT,<sup>1</sup> 13 NOVEMBER 1862

MS: Columbia (Spec. MS Coll. Rider Haggard). Published: BGLL, I, p. 279.

London – | 12. Harley Street. W. | 13th November 1862

Sir,

I have had no earlier opportunity than this of answering your kind letter, and of assuring your friend, through you, that I gladly write these lines – not as my Autograph only, but also as my acknowledgement of the generous reception which "The Woman In White" has met with from my German readers.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Her [sic] Herm: Kindt

---

1. Herman Kindt, intermediary with Georg Kestner, Secretary of the Hanoverian Legation at Wetzlar, son of Charlotte Kestner (1753–1828), who before her marriage had a love affair with Goethe.

[0499] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 13 NOVEMBER 1862

MS: Houghton (fMS Eng 945 (69)). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 279–280.

12. Harley Street, W. | 13th November 1862

My Dear Lehmann,

I had the pleasure of meeting Mr Fields when he was last in England<sup>1</sup> – and I very gladly write these lines, to recal myself to his memory, as well as to comply with the request for my autograph which he has honoured me by making through you.

My whole collection of photographic portraits of myself, large and small, is just now exhausted. But I have promised to sit again, when "No Name" is done – and I will not forget to send one of the new portraits to Mr Fields.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Frederick Lehmann Esqre

---

1. James Thomas Fields (1817–81), partner in the Boston publishing firm of Ticknor and Fields, editor of the Atlantic Monthly from July 1861 to July 1871. (Many of his papers are now in the Houghton collection at Harvard.) Fred Lehmann was then on a business trip to the United States (see [0484] to him of 28 July 1862).

[0500] TO NINA LEHMANN, 13 NOVEMBER 1862

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins),<sup>1</sup> our copy text. Published: Coleman, p. 80; BGLL, I, p. 280.

12. Harley Street, W. | 13th Nov 1862

My dear Mrs Lehmann,

One line to thank you for your kind note, and to wish you a pleasant time at Paris. I have got downstairs to-day – very, very weak, but decidedly I hope on the road to recovery.

I send with this the promised autograph for Mr Fields.<sup>2</sup> Please give it to Lehmann – and with love to all.

Believe me, | Yours ever, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Typed note on the transcript at Texas reads: ‘(small note-paper | envelope abb. 3½ X 2)’.

2. [0499] to Fred Lehmann, 13 November 1862, constitutes WC’s response to the request for an autograph which the Boston publisher had made via Nina’s husband.

[0501] TO GARDNER A. FULLER,<sup>1</sup> 16 NOVEMBER 1862

MS: Unknown.<sup>2</sup> Published: Wilkie Collins, No Name (Boston: Gardner A. Fuller, 1863), I, p. x, our copy text; BGLL, I, pp. 280–281.

London, Sixteenth November, 1862

My Dear Sir:

I have to acknowledge the receipt of the steel engravings and proof sheets of ‘No Name’ and thank you for the courtesy of sending them.

I congratulate you on the exquisite portrayal of character, and the beautiful typography of this work; indeed the whole design of the ‘Illustrated Library’ meets with my warmest approval.

I enclose a late Photograph, of the appropriate size, for the proposed engraving.<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Boston publisher.

2. Given that WC had already accepted £500 for the advance sheets of No Name from Harper’s in New York (see [0750] to W. H. Wills of 14 May 1867), who published the work both as a serial and in volume, it seems likely that the Fuller edition was unauthorized, and thus that this published letter is a fabrication. The style is certainly uncharacteristic.

3. No Name was issued in two separate volumes in Fuller’s Illustrated Library, the first volume containing a notice promising the publication of the second. An extremely poor portrait of the author appeared in the second volume, accompanied by a signature that looks likely to be a forgery – an image is available at the Lewis website.

[0502] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 17 NOVEMBER 1862

MS: Private (incomplete).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 281–282.

12. Harley Street, W. | 17th November 1862

My Dear Palgrave Simpson,

I am very glad to hear that you are going to repeat the “Aaron Gurnock” success:<sup>2</sup> my impression is that The Lighthouse was only sold to the Olympic for a term of years – that this term has expired<sup>3</sup> – and that when you have my authority to act the piece, you have every authority needful. But as I cannot at this moment lay my hand on the agreement, it may be as well for form’s sake and for courtesy's sake, if you write a line to Mr Emden.<sup>4</sup>

I have been very ill – confined to my bed, and only just out of it. If I am able to face the night air in the evening of the performance, I need hardly tell you ...

[remainder of the letter missing]

---

1. The second leaf of the WC's notepaper has been torn away, cutting off the letter in the middle of a sentence.
2. Aaron Gurnock, Head Lightkeeper, the part played by CD in the original production at Tavistock House, 16–19 June 1855. Simpson played the part of Aaron Gurnock on numerous occasions in amateur productions. For example, at the Royal Bijou Theatre, Lambeth School of Art, in May 1865, using the stage name, Mr Paul Grave – see the programme reproduced in Gasson, p. 5. Simpson continued to play the part under his own name at Sir Percy Florence Shelley's Boscombe Theatre between 1867 and 1881.
3. The term was in fact two years from 8 August 1857 – see [0265] to W. S. Emden of 5 September 1857.
4. Emden was manager at the Royal Olympic Theatre until 1864.

[0503] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 18 NOVEMBER 1862

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/67), valediction and signature excised, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 212–213.
Summary: BGLL, I, p. 282.

12. Harley Street | W. | Novr. 18th 1862

My dear Mother,

I have nothing to say, and no time to say it in. But I must just write to tell you I was very glad to hear of your safe arrival at Lilford Hall. You are well out of London this month – and you are much stronger I hope by this time. As for me, my history is a total blank, filled up with scribbling over sheets of paper all day, and marking and countermarking on printers [sic] proofs all night. Another three numbers I hope and trust will see me at the end. And what I shall do then – whether I shall go mad with the [del] sudden emptiness of head, caused by having nothing to think of, or whether I shall go to Paris and forget myself and my book in that city of dissipation, or whether I shall go to Cowes and look over all the yachts, which the winter-time gives me my pick of them, with a view to future cruising – is more than I can say. Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof.

Nothing stirs the stagnation of London but Bishop Colenso.<sup>2</sup> A bishop who does not believe in Moses and who writes a book to say so, is ~~considered~~ an Episcopal Portent which makes clergy and laity stare alike. I have not read the book – but the sale is said to have been prodigious.

The Lehmanns are gone to Paris. Ward's boy has come back from his first voyage with an excellent character. Egg has departed for [del] another Winter at Algiers. Charley I have seen nothing of, and you probably know more about him than I do.

Write again, and tell me how you are, and how long you remain at Lord Lilford's. My kind regards to Lady Lilford & Henry and Miss Laura.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Lilford Hall | Oundle | Northamptonshire'. Postmarked 'LONDON-W | 5 | NO 19 | 62' and endorsed 'A | OUNDLE | NO 20 | 62'.

2. John William Colenso (1814–1883: ODNB), Anglican bishop of Natal. The first part of his The Pentateuch and Book of Joshua Critically Examined, appeared from Longmans in 1862, and stirred up a lively controversy in the press.

3. Lady Lilford was the married Emma Brandling – see [0492] to HC, 1 October 1862. Henry is presumably her brother Henry Brandling, who illustrated Rambles Beyond Railways, while Miss Laura remains unidentified. The bottom half of the final leaf of the letter has been torn roughly way (presumably for the autograph) and the valediction and signature are lacking.

[0504] TO SIR EDWIN LANDSEER,<sup>1</sup> 18 NOVEMBER 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 282.

12. Harley Street, W. | November 18th 1862

Dear Landseer,

I have been very ill – confined to my bed – and I am only now emerging again on the remote confines of health. If, in consideration of this, you will let me accept your kind invitation conditionally, I will do my best to get strong enough to sit at your friendly table on Thursday next. In the meanwhile, many thanks,

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Sir Edwin Landseer R.A. | &c &c &c

---

1. Sir Edwin Henry Landseer (1802–73: ODNB), RA, distinguished animal and portrait painter.

[0505] TO W. H. WILLS, 21 NOVEMBER 1862

MS: Morgan (MA Unassigned).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 282–283.

12 Harley Street | W. | 21st Nov<sup>r</sup> 1862

My dear Wills,

Many thanks for your letter, and for the payment to my account at Coutt's of £118. 2. 2 – being the eighth of my balance of A.Y.R. to the end of my term.<sup>2</sup>

Mr Bernard is certainly giving me plenty for my money!<sup>3</sup> I wish I could write chapters as fast as he writes acts. Perhaps you will kindly do the same with the Ms of the play as it comes in, as was done with the dramatised version of Great Expectations? All I want, as you know, is my legal protection from the British Manager and Dramatists.

I have been suffering since you called here – but I hope and believe I have turned the corner now. I don't expect to be well, until I have got the weight of No Name off my shoulders. Please God I shall be done with it in three numbers more – counting from N<sup>o</sup> 40.<sup>4</sup>

I am glad to hear you had a merry time of it in Paris.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

W.H. Wills Eq<sup>te</sup>

---

1. Morgan Accession Number formerly 'Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/13'.

2. WC's contract with CD for his work on the staff of All the Year Round (which included writing No Name), WC received seven guineas a week and an eighth share of the profits. This final payment was for half of one eighth due to the shortened period to the end of his contract. See [0364] to CD, 7 August 1860, [0750] to Wills, 14 May 1867, and Paul Lewis What Wilkie Earned from 'All The Year Round', WCS, August 2015.

3. William Bayle Bernard (1807–75: ODNB), prolific Anglo-American dramatist. He produced a quick five-act dramatization of No Name with WC's consent to protect the copyright of the dramatic version. It was never commercially performed and WC produced his own successful dramatization in 1870. See [1019] to George F. Rowe, 22 August 1870.

4. In fact it took another five.

[0506] TO MARK LEMON, 27 NOVEMBER 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 283.

12. Harley Street, W. | 27th November 1862

Dear Lemon,

The enclosed sketch has been sent to me, on behalf of the designer, by an old friend,<sup>1</sup> who has requested me to offer it to Mr Punch. I send it to that illustrious potentate's Prime Minister,<sup>2</sup> to take its chance. Perhaps you will kindly give it a look, and decide whether it will do or not?

I hope you have resisted the hardships of an English November better than I have. The Sick List has claimed me – and I am only beginning to get back to the regions of Health.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Mark Lemon Eqre

1. The sketch, designer and the old friend alike remain identified.
2. Referring to Lemon himself, still editor of the humorous weekly Punch, or the London Charivari.

[0507] TO [EDWIN WAUGH],<sup>1</sup> 3 DECEMBER 1862

MS: Boston (Ch. H. 11. 49.) Published: BGLL, I, pp. 283–284.

3rd December 1862

Dear Sir,

Pressure of occupation has allowed me no earlier opportunity of replying to your letter.

I have already assisted, as far as lies in my power, to increase the fund for the relief of the distress in Lancashire.<sup>2</sup> This circumstance and the absolute necessity of my getting a little needful rest, after my present labours are brought to an end, will I hope plead my excuse for not personally assisting the project which you mention to me.

I am a little inclined to doubt whether the difficulty of collecting the essays will not prove to be greater than you anticipate – and I think you will meet with many cases like mine, in which the contribution to the Fund (derived from the proceeds of literary exertion) has been already sent in. But I have no desire to discourage an effort which originates in a motive entitled to every respect – and I sincerely hope, if the project is carried out, that the result may prove me and my doubts to be both in the wrong.

I regret to say that it is not in my power to render any assistance to the biographical work which you have in contemplation.

Believe me | Dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

E[dwain Waugh] Esqr<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Edwin Waugh (1817–90: ODNB), son of a Rochdale shoemaker, author of many tales of local life, including Sketches of Lancashire Life and Localities (1857) and Home-Life of the Lancashire Factory Folk during the Cotton Famine (1867), both collections of sketches reprinted from the Manchester Examiner and Times.

2. Presumably the Lancashire Cotton Districts Relief Fund, supporting the cotton workers made unemployed when the American Civil War affected the supply of raw cotton to Lancashire.

3. All but the initial capital of the addressee's name has been erased, but the remaining traces and the content of the letter make this reconstruction highly likely.

[0508] TO CHARLES A. CALVERT,<sup>1</sup> 17 DECEMBER 1862

MS: Huntington (HM 36057). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 284–285.

12. Harley Street, W. | 17th December 1862

Sir,

I have reasons for not wishing The Red Vial to be again performed in public – except under circumstances which would enable me personally to superintend the rehearsals. I beg leave therefore, with many thanks, to abstain from availing myself of your proposal. The theatrical version of “No Name” is a bona fide play, written by a dramatist of established reputation.<sup>2</sup> Its prospects of representation on the stage entirely depend on the nature of the offers which may be addressed to me by the London managers. I don't desire to keep a dramatised version of the book off the stage – I only desire to keep my own literary property in my own possession.

I have the honour to be | Sir | Your obd svt | Wilkie Collins

Charles A. Calvert Esqr

---

1. Charles Alexander Calvert (1828–79), actor and impresario who managed the Theatre Royal, Manchester, from 1859 and later the Prince's Theatre there, where he staged elaborate Shakespearian productions from 1864 to 1877.

2. Referring to William Bayle Bernard's adaptation of No Name – see [0505] to W. H. Wills of 21 November 1862.

[0509] TO F. C. BEARD, 24 DECEMBER 1862

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: B&C, I, pp. 213–214. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 285.

Tuesday Decr 24th 1862

My dear Beard,

You will be almost as glad as I am to hear that I have Done!<sup>1</sup>

– for you have had no small share in the finishing of the book. I ended at two o’Clock this morning. I suppose you dine at home on Christmas Day? We are going to dine at Verrey’s at six (Pigott with us). As you are a “family man” I dare not say – “come too!”

I shall be at home tomorrow if you are passing this way before three o’Clock. I feel dreadfully fagged

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Written in extremely large letters in the middle of the new line. No Name was published in 3 vols, 31 December 1862. It was dedicated ‘To Francis Carr Beard; (Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of England) In Remembrance of the Time when the closing scenes of the story were written’.

2. Verrey Brothers, the confectioners who operated a café restaurant at 229 Regent Street, frequented by WC and CD.

[2989] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, [25] DECEMBER 1862

MS: Unknown. On sale: Catalogue of Myers & Co., Autumn, 1955. Summary: A&C1, p. 49.

Summary: Signature, subscription and date cut from a letter, Christmas 1862.

[0510] TO W. H. WILLS, 31 DECEMBER 1862

MS: Unknown. Published: Lehmann, pp. 39–40, our copy text; Davis, p. 233; BGLL, I, p. 285.

12, Harley Street, W., | Decr. 31st, 1862.

My Dear Wills,

I have this day sent you (to Regent’s Park Terrace) a copy of ‘No Name.’ We published to-day – an edition of four thousand copies. At five this afternoon only four hundred were left. This is a rattling good sale to begin with.

I heard at the office to-day that you kindly put everything in proper train with Mr. Bernard, and that nothing was wanted but the last act. Perhaps the end of the story staggers my worthy collaborator? Or perhaps the festivities of the season are a little in his way? I have promised Emden at the Olympic a first look at the Drama as soon as it is done. The sage Low recommends our sending a copy to the British Museum as a solemn act of publication. What do you think?<sup>1</sup>

My liver still torments me, and the fiend rheumatism gnaws at my right knee. –

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – I had just hobbled out, unluckily, when you called.

---

1. W. B. Bernard, No Name: A Drama in Five Acts, was published by George Holsworth, at the Office of All the Year Round in 1863 (1 vol., 60 pp. in pink paper wrappers). It was also issued as the undated no. 104 of De Witt’s Acting Plays, New York (Sadleir 1922, p. 152; and Parrish & Miller, pp. 50–51).

[0511] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, LATE 1862<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 75; BGLL, I, p. 286.

12. Harley St. | Wednesday

My dear Lehmann,

I am delighted to hear of your safe return. We all missed you sadly at Westbourne Terrace on your wedding anniversary.<sup>2</sup>

I wish I could make one at the dinner on Saturday – but another dinner engagement has unluckily got fast hold of me. I can only thank you, and “grin and bear it.”

Ever yours
WC

---

1. Presumably written on Lehmann’s return from his visit to the United States in 1862 (see [0484] to him, 28 July 1862, and after the tenth anniversary of his marriage in November 1852.

2. The Lehmann’s residence at 139 Westbourne Terrace.

[0514] TO RICHARD BENTLEY, 5 JANUARY 1863

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: Davis, p. 234; BGLL, I, p. 287.

5th January 1863

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind wishes, which I assure you I heartily reciprocate.

At present, I can say no more than that I am sensible of the friendly feeling towards myself which has led you to contemplate a renewal of our former literary connection. The copyright of the next work of fiction which I am to write, when I have rested sufficiently from my past labours, is secured under agreement to a publishing house which opened negotiations with me on the subject more than a year and a half since. With this engagement still unfulfilled, and with the prospect of its occupying me for the next two years, I can only again thank you for your letter, and ask leave to wait a little before I look any farther into the future.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. Shortly after No Name appears in volume from Sampson Low, Bentley writes to try to establish an interest in his next novel, though Armadale had already been sold outright to Smith, Elder. WC’s next new work to appear from Bentley was in fact Poor Miss Finch in 1872.

[3353] TO JOHN COUBROUGH,<sup>1</sup> 5 JANUARY 1863

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C13, p. 4.

12 Harley Street. W.

5th January 1863

Sir,

I have great pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of your letter, and in so complying with the request which you honour me by making.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To/| John Coubrough Esqre
&c —

---

1. John Coubrough (c.1842-1921) of Blanefield House, Strathblane, Stirlingshire, was the son of the owner of Blanefield Printworks, which printed calico. He later took over management of the firm with his younger brother Anthony. He was an avid collector of autographs and was 20 or 21 when this letter to WC was written. It comes from a 98-page album. Inside the front cover is pasted the Blanefield heraldic device on a bookplate at the top of which is handwritten ‘John Coubrough 1863’. It contains around 200 autographs and letters, some addressed to him at Blanefield House. Also pasted inside the front cover is a newspaper clipping – undated but presumably from much later – which states his collection of autographs and letters was “as important as any in the West of Scotland.” He went on to become a pillar of Strathblane society, serving as a county councillor and magistrate. He never married and remained in the family home, which he enlarged and developed, and where he died on 6 November 1921 leaving £4,270-17s-5d. The album was sold at Bonhams, Knightsbridge (sale 25354, 27 March 2019, lot 191) for £7,562.

[0515] TO SAMPSON LOW & CO., 5 JANUARY 1863

MS: Unknown. Published: Marston, p. 86, our copy text; BGLL, I, p. 287.

47, Ludgate Hill<sup>1</sup> | January. 5, 1863

Received from Messrs. Sampson Low, Son, and Marston, for the copyright of 'No Name.'<sup>2</sup>

|                      |        |   |   |
|----------------------|--------|---|---|
| Cash                 | 500    | 0 | 0 |
| Per note at 3 months | 500    | 0 | 0 |
| „ „ „ 6 months       | 1,000  | 0 | 0 |
| „ „ „ 9 months       | 1,000  | 0 | 0 |
|                      | £3,000 | 0 | 0 |

(Signed) Wilkie Collins

---

1. Address of Messrs Sampson Low, Son, and Marston.

2. The four payments were duly credited to WC's account at Coutts's on 5 January, 8 April, 8 July, and 8 October 1863 (Coutts: WC). See also [0369] to HC, 22 August 1860 n. 3.

[0516] TO JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD,<sup>1</sup> 15 JANUARY 1863

MS: Fales. Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 180. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 288–289.

12. Harley Street, W. | 15th January 1863

Private

My dear Mr Hollingshead,

I have given the proposal which you kindly communicated to me my best and most careful attention.<sup>2</sup>

Two considerations have occurred to my mind in thinking the subject over, which it is right that you should know – for they have mainly decided me on sending you the present answer. The first of these considerations refers to my agreement with Messrs Smith & Elder. The second is connected with the more personal question of my own health.

Without stopping to discuss the letter of the agreement to which I have just alluded, in its bearing on [Messrs Strahan's]<sup>3</sup> proposal – I may say at once that I consider myself bound to interpret this document by the spirit and intention of it. It is clear to me that whatever influence my reputation may possess with the reading public, is an influence which was understood, at the time, to be unreservedly secured to Messrs Smith & Elder, during the period contemplated by my agreement with them. The appearance of my name on the Title of one journal, and the appearance of my story in the pages of another, represent a division of my literary resources, which was certainly not contemplated when I engaged to become a contributor to the Cornhill Magazine. There is here, therefore (as I think), one serious obstacle in the way of my accepting [Messrs Strahan's] proposal.

But even if the difficulty which I feel here could be removed, a second and an equally serious obstacle would remain.

Valuable as I know your co-operation would be to me, I could not consent, in justice to [Messrs Strahan] and in justice to my own sense of responsibility to undertake the conductorship of the new journal, unless I exercised a regular supervision over the contents of each week's number before publication, and unless I rendered such assistance to my fellow-labourers in the way of suggestion (where suggestion was wanted), as might assist in giving the journal a character and position of its own in the public estimation. In the present state of my health – which is very far from satisfactory or assuring – I should not be equal to meet such a demand on my resources as this (and I know, by experience, that the demand would certainly come), at a time when the mental strain of writing a long serial story, in a form of publication out of my customary practice, would be laid on me for many months together. The necessity of husbanding my energies for the present, is a necessity which I have good reason to know is not to be trifled with.

Under these circumstances, I can only come to the conclusion that I must refrain – in justice to [Messrs Strahan], in justice to Messrs Smith & Elder, and in justice to myself – from accepting the proposal with which you have favoured me. Pray communicate to [Messrs Strahan] the expression of my sincere thanks and assure them that I really feel sensible of the gratifying confidence which they have been willing to place in my reputation and my abilities. I have tried to deserve that confidence, and I conscientiously believe that my decision – adverse though it is – is, under all the circumstances, a decision in their interests as well as in mine. I sincerely trust the new Journal will secure a Conductor who can come to it with undivided energies, who can write in it himself from the outset, and who can (by these means) help to make it one of the conspicuous “successes” of periodical literature.

Believe me | dear Mr Hollingshead,
Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
To John Hollingshead Esqre

-
1. John Hollingshead (1827–1904: ODNB), bohemian journalist, who contributed regularly to Household Words, Cornhill and Good Words. Always a stout champion of the rights of the author and the freedom of expression, he was to become an innovative and imaginative theatre manager.
  2. As what follows makes clear, the proposal was for WC to conduct a new literary miscellany with the assistance of Hollingshead, to be started up by the Scottish publisher Alexander Strahan. This could not have been the evangelical monthly Good Words, as Robinson assumes (p. 180), since that journal had been running successfully since 1860, firmly under the editorial control of the Rev. Norman Macleod. Rather it must have been the racier Argosy, which Strahan eventually founded at the beginning of 1865 with the subtitle ‘A Magazine of Tales, Travels, Essays and Poems’, with Isa Craig as its first editor, and with Charles Reade’s Griffith Gaunt as its first serial story. In the event, the magazine was sold to Mrs Henry Wood in 1867, in whose hands it became a rather more staid affair.
  3. The name of the publishers has been erased throughout the letter, apparently by a later hand rather than that of WC, but remains legible in almost all cases.

[0517] TO CHARLES WARD, 15 JANUARY 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/42). Summary: B&C, I, p. 214. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 289–290.

15th January 1863

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for both your notes, which reached me together. The information about the Hotel du Louvre is everything I wanted – and leaves me no difficulty but the difficulty of knowing when I can go to Paris.<sup>1</sup>

For the last three days the gout has confined me to my chair. It is as much as I can do, with pain and difficulty, to get up and down one flight of stairs. This said pain must have muddled my memory – for I certainly thought I had written to you about my mother. I got a letter from her on Monday, begging me not to go to Oxford until she got better or worse – and being afraid to vex or excite her in her present state I remained (anxiously enough) at home. Since then, better news has come, thank God. My mother writes herself, and the doctor writes also, to say that she is mending slowly. She is still too weak to leave her bed – except when she is carried for a little while, wrapped in blankets, to the fire – but the more alarming symptoms are abating. She is willing to see me now – and as soon as my foot will let me move, I shall go to Oxford.<sup>2</sup> If you come on Sunday, I may perhaps have more news.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. In the event his next visit to Paris was in the spring of 1865.
  2. See [0518] to HC of the following day.

[0518] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 16 JANUARY 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/68). Published: B&C, I, pp. 214–215. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 290.

16th January 1863

My dear Mother,

I need hardly tell you how glad I am to hear the good news that you are beginning to get a little better at last. The beginning is everything. If you can get sleep, and if you can only take nourishment with some regularity, you will now, I hope and trust, make daily advances nearer and nearer to recovery. The great [del] object is to help you in gaining strength, by every possible means – and this I am sure will not be forgotten by the doctor, and by the good friends who are nursing you.

You would have seen me instead of my letter – but for the Gout! It has caught me at last in the right foot, after threatening me, as you know, for many years past. When I [del] have got over it, the doctor declares I shall be infinitely better in health than I have been for a long time back – the suppressed mischief being what has done me harm on former occasions. It is not a violently inflammatory attack. The pain in the foot is easily kept under by a simple poultice of cabbage leaves covered with oiled silk – and I am getting the better of it already. The only real inconvenience is the present impossibility of wearing anything on the gouty foot, /or of using it/, which necessarily keeps me from Oxford, and keeps me at home. But this will be over I hope in a few days more.

In the meantime, if you find yourself in the course of the next three or four days able to write, literally only three or four lines, without inconvenience – you know how glad I shall be to hear that you are making further progress on the way to recovery.

Ever affly yours | WC

[0519] TO CHARLES WARD, 16 JANUARY 1863<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /43). Published: BGLL, I, p. 290.

Friday 16th Jany

My dear Ward,

If you can come on Sunday, can you without inconvenience bring me ten sovereigns and a new cheque-book (paid for)? Taking in return a cheque for ten pounds, and two shillings for the book.<sup>2</sup> I am too much crippled to get to Coutts's tomorrow

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the gout attack.

2. A duty of a penny on every cheque had been introduced by Disraeli in 1858. In fact WC's cheque to Ward recorded on 19 January was for £10-4s, so perhaps he got a book of 48 rather than 24 cheques as anticipated (Coutts: WC).

[0520] TO F. C. BEARD, 30 JANUARY 1863

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: B&C, I, pp. 215–216. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 291.

12. Harley Street. W. | 230th Jany 1863

My dear Beard,

The sight of your handwriting again, is the pleasantest and most reassuring sight I have seen for many a long day past. That expression of your opinion [del] of the prescription shall be held sacred. It does not in the least surprise me. He is so kind and good, and so full of sincere sympathy for both of us, that it pains me to say it – but the words must be spoken. He has done and can do nothing for me.<sup>1</sup>

Today, the gout has seized on my left foot /, without leaving my right/. I am so utterly crippled that I cannot even get down stairs into the dining-room. Both feet in pain – both feet nearly helpless. Elliotson came here today.<sup>2</sup> I told him this – I said “I am so weak, I have no writing power left in me – give [me] a tonic – I must have strength.” [He]<sup>3</sup> has prescribed simple “Wormwood,” the other medicine to be taken with it, if it agrees with me – to be left off, if it does not. Caroline to Mesmerise my feet, and to Mesmerise me into sleeping so as to do without the opium!

I must be carried to you in a day or two, if my feet get no better. In the meantime, I can only keep my strength up as well as I can, by taking nourishment, at short intervals. I am doing this with fair success, and am stronger to day. There is nothing else to be done.

You say nothing about yourself – but your being able to write is a good sign. Is the Erysipelas abating? I hope and trust it is. Don’t exert yourself, don’t move (even to a chair) too soon.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The medic who wrote the prescription that Beard passed his opinion on has not been identified.
2. John Elliotson (1791–1868: ODNB), Professor of Medicine, University of London, a pioneer of medical hypnosis, who saved Thackeray's life in 1849.
3. The corner of the page has been torn, removing the opening words of the first two lines, so ‘me’ and ‘He’ are both conjecturally restored.

[3026] TO A. VOGUE,<sup>1</sup> 2 FEBRUARY 1863

MS: HSP (Society Collection). Published: A&C3, pp. 39–40.

12. Harley Street, W. | 2nd February 1863

Dear Sir,

I have much pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of your kind letter, and in thereby complying with the request which you are so good as to make to me.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | A Vogue Egre

---

1. Unidentified.
2. Clearly a request for WC’s autograph.

[0521] TO MRS MACDONALD,<sup>1</sup> 4 FEBRUARY 1863

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 291.

4th February 1863

Madam,

I have much pleasure in writing these lines, to acknowledge the receipt of your kind note, and to send you the Autograph which you request of me.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mrs Macdonald

---

1. Otherwise unidentified autograph hunter.

[0522] TO F. C. BEARD, 5 FEBRUARY 1863<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Extract: Baker 2001, p. 506. Published: BGLL, I, p. 291.

12. Harley St | W. | Thursday | ½ p 6 P.M.

My dear Beard,

The Mesmerism has prevented me from keeping my appointment – the “Secretary” not having been able to come here and “manipulate” until ½ past 5<sup>2</sup>

So far, your prediction is verified. It has begun well.

I want to hear how you have borne the journey into the city. Can you send me word? Or better still (if you are not suffering) can you come here and tell me over a cigar?

Ever yours | WC

Caroline is apparently going to have another nervous-hysterical attack. She was up all last night with the “palpitations.”<sup>3</sup>

P.S. | A verbal answer, if you are very tired

---

1. Dating suggested by Peters (pp. 257, 460 n. 21), and confirmed by the relation to WC’s letters to Beard, [0520] of 30 January and [0523] of 7 February 1863.

2. WC tried to give up laudanum during 1863 with the aid of hypnosis (mesmerism) by John Elliotson.

3. Peters (p. 257) interprets Caroline’s attacks as a result of the sessions of mesmerism. This paragraph and postscript are written at an angle on the third page of the letter.

[0523] TO F. C. BEARD, 7 FEBRUARY 1863<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: BGLL, I, p. 292, amended A&C5, p. 19.

12. Harley St | 7th Feby

My dear Beard,

I should never have proffered that trifling loan, if the money had not been entirely at your service, and if I had not felt that was much better employed in sparing you small worries about small nothings, instead of lying idle at Coutts’s. Therefore, the cheque is enclosed with the greatest pleasure.<sup>2</sup>

I am certainly better – did without the opium last night. My foot is on the boiled brick at the moment. I hope to be with you about five – perhaps a little before, perhaps a little after. The uncertainty of my feet, produces the uncertainty about time. They are so damnably weak this morning that I have not yet succeeded in getting down stairs.

Ever yours | WC

I am very sorry to hear of that pain at night. I had hoped the pain-stage was passed.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Dating from the address, WC’s account at Coutts, and the description of his health.

2. WC’s bank account shows a debit to F.C. Beard for £25 on 7 February 1863, though the purpose of the loan remains unclear (Coutts: WC).

3. Beard himself was also ill.

[0524] TO F. C. BEARD, 8 FEBRUARY 1863<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: BGLL, I, p. 292.

Sunday

My dear Beard,

I am certainly getting on. Less pain again last night – natural sleep – little to complain of but “fidgets”. I hope and trust that the gout has, at last, done its damndest. No chance of my getting out yet. I must get my feet strong enough to take me downstairs first.

I was sorry to hear last night that you had been seeing too many people and trying to do too much. Pray take warning – pray don’t try to get back to your profession too soon – and don’t come out until you are stronger. No hurry – no hurry!

Caroline has taken some of the medicine – and seems the better for it. She will be very glad to profit by your suggestion and to call tomorrow & report herself.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The dating is suggested by Peters (pp. 220, 458 n. 47).

[0525] TO CHARLES WARD, 18 FEBRUARY 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/44). Summary: B&C, I, p. 216; BGLL, I, p. 293.

12. Harley Street | W. | 18th Feby

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for the banking book. There is not the least need for my troubling you about money matters. Today or tomorrow, Low will pay in the fourth and last instalment of the purchase-money for the American advance sheets of No Name<sup>1</sup> – which with the present balance will raise my credit to close on three hundred pounds. With the Christmas Bills all paid, this is plenty.

I write in bed – with my right foot plaguing me this time by way of a change.

I have heard from my mother. She is safe at Bournemouth. Of course, as the Collins family were travelling on the line, the engine broke down, and the train was three hours late – but Charley was with my mother and she appears to have borne the accident and the delay pretty well.

Ever yours | WC

Please send me a line to say when the payment is made to my account. Thanks for “Miss Acton” from Caroline.<sup>2</sup> We will settle when I see you

---

1. That is, for £125, as recorded in WC’s account on 18 February (Cutts: WC).

2. Presumably a copy of Miss Acton’s Cookery Book, by Eliza Acton, a new enlarged edition of which was published by Longmans in 1863. Sold at 7s-6d, this compendium of ‘Modern Cookery for Private Families’ contained thirty-two sections as well as ‘copious introductory chapters on trussing and carving’ – see the advertisement in the Times, 18 February 1863, p. 9f.

[0526] TO WILLIAM WRIGHT,<sup>1</sup> 23 FEBRUARY 1863

MS: Unknown. On sale: Henry Sotheran Ltd, 1990. Published: BGLL, I, p. 293.

12. Harley Street, W. | February 23rd 1863

Sir,

I very gladly write these lines to comply with the request for my autograph which you have favoured me by making through my friend Mr Procter.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | William Wright Esqre

---

1. Unidentified.

2. Bryan Waller Procter, husband of Anne Benson Procter.

[3376] TO JOSEPH CUNDALL,<sup>1</sup> 28 FEBRUARY 1863

MS: Lewis Collection (L2948). Published: A&C14, pp. 4-5.

12. Harley Street | W.
Feby 28th 1863

Dear Sir,

I am sorry to say that I am not at present in a condition to sit for my portrait – except a highly-flattered one. I have been suffering from a severe attack of rheumatic gout – and I am as yet only well enough to move with the help of two sticks, and to get out for a drive in the middle of the day with my feet propped up on the front cushion of the carriage.<sup>2</sup> But I will not forget your letter, and as soon as I am more advanced towards recovery, I will call and speak to you on the subject of [del] my portrait.<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Joseph Cundall Esqre

1. Joseph Cundall (1818–1895: ODNB), photographer, of Cundall, Downes & Co. of 168 New Bond Street. Cundall took the images which were pasted opposite the vignette frontispiece of the one volume edition of The Woman in White (Sampson Low, 1861). See [3078] to Joseph Cundall, 15 February 1861, for a letter referring to his first sitting for them.
2. Compare WC's letter three days later ([0527] to W. P. Frith, 3 March 1863) 'I can manage a ride in a carriage, with my miserable feet propped up on the front seat'.
3. Although WC sat several times for the photographic portraits for the one-volume The Woman in White, this letter may refer to a separate portrait for a CDV which Cundall took of WC sitting in a chair published around 1864. Collins was 'too ill' to do much at this time before he went to France and Germany looking for a cure for his gout in the thermal springs. It is possible the appointment was kept in August or September when he was back in London. If not, then it would have been in March 1864 (or later after further trips). Shortly before that he had told his mother 'I must sit again to Cundall & Downes. All the /"negatives"/ of the/ photographic portraits in The Woman In White are exhausted by the large sale – and, this time, I will take care that some really good likenesses are produced' ([0565] to Harriet Collins, 8 January 1864).

[0527] TO W. P. FRITH,<sup>1</sup> 3 MARCH 1863

MS: NAL (MSL/1922/186/36). Published: BGLL, I, p. 294.

12. Harley Street W. | March 3rd 1863

My dear Frith,

I return Mrs Frith's album – having made my little addition to it with the greatest pleasure.<sup>2</sup>

By slow, slow degrees I am getting better. I can manage a ride in a carriage, with my miserable feet propped up on the front seat. As soon as these said feet will bear a little more exertion, I hope they will carry me into your studio. In the meantime I am very glad to hear that you like the beginning of "No Name".<sup>3</sup> You will find, as you go on, that I fire off all my biggest guns later in the book.

Pray make my remembrances to Mrs Frith, and believe me

Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. William Powell Frith (1819–1909: ODNB), RA, distinguished narrative painter, who studied with CAC and was a close friend of WC and Edward Ward.
  2. Presumably an autograph note for Frith's wife, Isabelle Jane Frith, née Baker – see [0774] to her of 11 October 1867.
  3. Frith must not have seen the serial version but be reading the novel for the first time in book form.

[0528] TO HENRY MORGAN,<sup>1</sup> 12 MARCH 1863

MS: Unknown. On sale: Sotheby's Catalogue, London (16 December 1996), lot 135; Sotheby's Catalogue, London (15–16 July 1998), lot 105. Published: BGLL, I, p. 294.

12. Harley Street, W. | 12th March 1863

Dear Sir

Illness which keeps me confined to the house has prevented my answering your letter by an earlier mail. All the Carte-de-Visite portraits of myself are exhausted and in the present state of my health I am unable to "sit" for another series, but I am able to send enclosed a "proof" of one of the portraits which illustrate "The Woman in White" (the Cheap Edition) and which is generally considered to be an excellent likeness.

I remain faithfully | yours | Wilkie Collins

Henry Morgan Esq

-
1. Unidentified fan requesting a photograph.

[0529] TO SMITH, ELDER & CO., 17 MARCH 1863

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 81; BGLL, I, p. 295.

12. Harley Street. W. | March 17th 1863

Dear Sirs,

The enclosed letter (which you have kindly forwarded to me) addresses me in the purely fictitious character of “Editor of The Cornhill Magazine”.<sup>1</sup>

It has fortunately not been necessary to trouble you with any of the other letters which have been written to me (in consequence I suppose of absurd newspaper reports)<sup>2</sup> under the same mistaken notion. But as this particular letter refers to a question of a lost manuscript, I have thought it right to re-enclose the writer’s statement for your perusal.

I remain Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Smith, Elder, & Co

---

1. Thackeray had been editor of the Cornhill Magazine from its first issue in January 1860, but had resigned the position in April 1862. Thereafter, ‘[b]eginning with the number for June, 1862, the Cornhill was edited by a series of informal committees variously composed of George Henry Lewes, Frederick Greenwood, and Edward Dutton Cook, with [George] Smith as permanent chairman. Although Frederick Greenwood did a large share of the editorial work from the time of Thackeray’s resignation through 1864, and was nominally sole editor from 1864 through 1868, there seems little doubt that Smith continued personally to secure for Cornhill most of its important contributors’ (Wellesley Index to Victorian Periodicals). WC had signed the Armada agreement on 3 August 1861 (see [0430] to HC, 7 August 1861), though there was to be a lengthy delay in the submission of the manuscript, so that the serial run in Cornhill did not begin until November 1864. There was never any suggestion that he would take on an editorial role.

2. None of these reports has been traced.

[0530] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 19 MARCH 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/69), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 216–217. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 295.

12. Harley Street | W. | March 19th 1863

My dear Mother,

I am glad to hear you are going to the Bullars in April – for you will want a little “company” after your seclusion at Bournemouth, and you will be staying with friends /at Basset Wood/ who have a real regard for you.

As for me, I have been picking up information about German Baths from a visitor to the Baths who knows them by experience. My present idea is to go next month (when I am strong enough for the hateful railway travelling, which disgusts and depresses me /even/ when I am in health) to Brussels, and thence to Aix-la-Chapelle, where there are famous Baths for rheumatic unfortunates – an excellent hotel – and a thoroughly competent doctor to advise about the bathing – when to bathe, how long, and so on. If Aix La Chapelle does not suit me, I shall go farther on to Wildbad in the Black Forest, and try a famous spring there. I shall take a German travelling-servant with me, supplied from Coutts’s own register of couriers, for I am in no case to fight with the small worries of travelling – and I propose being away until the beginning or middle of June, travelling the latter part of the time, I hope, for pleasure as well as for health. Such are my plans at present. Before I go, I shall come to you at Bournemouth. My friend (and doctor) ~~Beard~~ Mr Beard will go with me – he wants to see Bournemouth, in order to be personally familiar with a place which he is constantly sending his patients to – and he will take all possible care of me on the road. We should like to put up at the hotel – have two good bedrooms – breakfast and dine in the coffee room. While Mr Beard is walking about, I shall be with you. We shall get to Bournemouth I hope either Saturday the 28th or Saturday the 4th April, and stay till Monday. I will write again when the day is fixed. If I give you three days notice, will it be enough to secure beds at the Hotel? We don’t want to go into lodgings. Write and tell me about this.

Ever affly yours WC
/The/ Smith & Elder’s book is put off again – not by any means given up.<sup>2</sup> They have behaved most kindly and considerately about it.

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Mrs Gavin | Commercial Road | Bournemouth’. Postmarked faintly “LONDON-W | 7 | MR 20 | 63’ and endorsed in Bournemouth on the same date.
2. Armada, as it turned out.

[0531] TO CHARLES READE, 31 MARCH 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 80). Published: B&C, I, pp. 217–218. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 295.

12. Harley Street | W. | 31st March 1863

My dear Reade,

First and foremost accept my congratulations on your start in “A.Y.R.”.<sup>1</sup> Very fresh and individual – clearly and suggestively written – and the characters living creatures. You have begun excellently. Bravo, Bravo, Bravo! There is my criticism.

Secondly, read the enclosed extract.<sup>2</sup> The writer of the original letter, my friend (and translator) M.E.D. Forgues – 2 Rue de Tournon, Paris – has written to another friend of mine – Mr Pigott (formerly of “The Leader” – now of “The Daily News”) – with a message from a French publisher about your books. As Mr Pigott does not know you personally, he applies to me – and hence the roundabout manner in which this foreign overture reaches you. If I can give you any information, I am to be found here before two – or after six. Between these hours, I take a drive in the fresh air, and a dip in “D<sup>r</sup> Caplin’s Electro-Chemical Bath”<sup>3</sup> – out of which I hope I am getting strength enough to go abroad on Monday week, April 13th. If you think it worth while to entertain the proposal, strike for Cash – It is “Very Hard Cash” to be got. But even a Frenchman yields if you only squeeze him hard enough. As for my friend Forgues – who as you will see is only ambassador in this matter – he is a gentleman, an admirable English scholar, and a translator who has not his equal in France. But the question of the proposed abridgement is another matter – and as M. Forgues says himself, a very difficult and delicate one. I can only say again – if I can be of the least use, come here and talk it over.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Charles Reade Esqre

-
1. Reade’s ‘Very Hard Cash’, serialized All the Year Round, from 28 March 1863 over forty instalments.
  2. The enclosure is not found at Morgan.
  3. Referring to the Royal Hygenic Gymnasium, of 9, York Place, Portman Square, run by Jean François Isidore Caplin, M.D., author of The Electro-Chemical Bath, for the Extraction of Mercury, Lead, and Other Poisonous Substances from the Human Body: In Palsy, Scrofula, Rheumatism and Other Complaints, and the Relation of Electricity to the Phenomena of Life, Health and Disease (London: William Freeman, 1856). A copy of the revised edition of 1868 was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 87).

[3354] TO UNIDENTIFIED CORRESPONDENT, MARCH 1863

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C13, p. 4.

March 1863

Wilkie Collins

-
1. Written on a small cut piece of card pasted onto the front free endpaper of Vol. II of a first edition of No Name. There is a line above the signature and the date is below it. See also [3355] and [3372] below.

[0532] TO F. C. BEARD, 4 APRIL 1863

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: B&C, I, p. 218. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 296.

12 Harley St | W. | Saturday

My dear Beard,

My back is painful again – and I had a restless night. But I managed to walk a quarter of an hour yesterday on the high road, and I shall try again today. I will call at Welbeck Street at or a little before four o’Clock this afternoon on the chance of seeing you before I go to the Bath.<sup>1</sup>

I have /been/ dreadfully /shocked &/ distressed [del] by news which I am sure you will hear with sorrow. Your opinion at Broadstairs of poor dear Egg, was only too well founded. Last night, Holman Hunt brought me the news of his death at Algiers. It is in the Times /Obituary/ this morning.<sup>2</sup> Nothing can replace the loss – he was a man in ten thousand. It is a [del] calamity, in every [del] sense of the word, for everyone who knew him,

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Presumably Dr Caplin’s Electro-Chemical Bath – see [0531] to Beard, 31 March 1863.

2. Death notice on front page of the Times, Saturday, 4 April 1863: ‘On the 26th March, at Algiers, Augustus Leopold Egg, R.A., aged 46.’

[0533] TO JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, 6 APRIL 1863

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Extract: Millais, I, pp. 281–282. Published: Coleman, pp. 82–83; BGLL, I, pp. 296–297.

12. Harley Street, W. | 6th April 1863

My dear Jack,

I have been miserably ill with rheumatic gout ever since that pleasant dinner at your house – and I am only now getting strong enough to leave England in a few days, and try the German Baths.

Read the enclosed address when you have five minutes to spare – and if you agree with it, and feel no objection, put your signature next to mine. I was to have spoken in favour of the proposal at the Meeting – but this, and all other speakings (and writings) have been put an end to for the present by my illness. All I can do is to sign, and to send the address for your approval. Many other well-known members of the Club will sign – but your name, as representing the painters, is a most important one to gain if you will give it. In any case – signature or no signature – please let me have the address back. Unless something is done, the old Club will fall to pieces in the new house – and it seems a pity to let it go without an effort to save it.<sup>1</sup>

I hear great things of a certain picture of yours – but there is no chance of my getting to see it.<sup>2</sup> If I am alive I hope to be back in June and see it at the Academy. All the little strength I have got is now wanted for preparations for the start.

Poor dear Egg! No such heavy distress as that has tried me for many and many a year past – and I know how you must have felt it too.<sup>3</sup>

Pray give my kindest remembrances to Mrs Millais,<sup>4</sup>

& believe me | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. In the Lewis Collection is found the printed copy of a ‘New Rule’ to be proposed at a meeting at the Garrick Club at 3pm on Monday 27 April [1863], signed by twelve members including Walter Lacy, Samuel Lucas, John Everett Millais, George Russell and Benjamin Webster, with WC’s name at the head of the list. On the document are extensive annotations in the hand of Walter Lacy, who clearly planned to speak in support of the motion, which was intended ‘to preserve as far as possible the original constitution of the Club ... [and] to restore the influence of the Literary, Artistic, and Dramatic element in our Society to something like its former proportions’. The Garrick Club was at that time scheduled to move from its old premises at 35 King Street to a new building at 15 Garrick Street. See [0572] to George Russell, 4 April 1864.

2. Probably ‘The Eve of St. Agnes’, exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1863.

3. Referring to their mutual friend, the painter Augustus Egg, who died in Algiers on 26 March 1863 – the news was announced in the Times on 4 April. See [0532] to Frank Beard of 4 April.

4. Millais had married Effie Ruskin in July 1855, following the annulment of her marriage to John Ruskin. See [0881] to her of 7 April 1869.

[3355] TO UNIDENTIFIED CORRESPONDENT, 10 APRIL 1863

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C13, p. 5.

April 10th 1863 /

Wilkie Collins

---

1. Written on a small cut piece of paper, with the date below the signature, pasted onto the front free endpaper of Vol. I of a first edition of No Name. See also [3354] above and [3372] below.

[0534] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 21 APRIL 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/70). Published: B&C, I, pp. 219–220. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 297.

Aix La Chapelle | April 21st 1863

My dear Mother,

I got your letter – and was very glad to get it – to day. Since I wrote from Dover, here is the narrative of my proceedings.

On Tuesday (the 14th) I crossed to Calais – a perfectly calm sunshiny passage – and met Edward Cooke,<sup>1</sup> the painter on board. Went on the same day by railway from Calais to Lille – a flourishing French manufacturing town, with picturesque streets and a few old buildings – a good hotel, and no drawback but a fiercely-snoring Frenchman in the next bedroom at night. The next day; Wednesday, to Ghent – steady rain falling – slept at Ghent – went on the next morning to Liège, another manufacturing town, famous for cutlery & ironwork. I hobbled out here to see the [del] “Prince Bishop’s Palace” (celebrated in Quentin Durward) – [del] not very [del] interesting outside, but the inner courtyard one of the finest [del] pieces of ancient architecture I have seen for many a ~~day~~ long day past. From Liège (on Friday) to this place.

There is only one drawback to Aix la Chapelle – it is down in the bottom of a valley, shut in on all sides by hills. Otherwise, a fair and prosperous city – making cloth & needles & looking glasses, in factories some of which are actually buildings architecturally pleasant to look at. Beautiful drives all round the neighbourhood – carriages & horses which would pass muster perfectly in England – and two of the best hotels in Europe, both belonging to the same proprietor.<sup>2</sup> As for your eldest son, he is as well known here as in London. [del] German readers, French readers, American readers – all vying in civilities and attention. I am already engaged to be photographed by the local artist, and have promised autographs in all directions. Keep this to yourself – it would look like vanity to other people, but I know you will like to hear it, and therefore it slides into my letter. On Saturday last – after ~~an~~ a visit from /the local/ physician – I tried my first bath. The water at 98 degrees, and cooled down to that from the temperature in the earth – the smell of sulphur unmistakeable – the taste like a decoction of rotten eggs. For the first day, no remarkable effect followed. But on Sunday, Monday, and today, I was allowed to take the Douche, and to have the warm sulphurous water poured on my weak back & leg & foot in a continuous stream. The result has been decidedly satisfactory even after three times trying only. My back is stronger – my flesh is firmer already – and with perseverance, I really hope these springs will prove, in my case as in the cases of hosts of others, to have been well worth the visiting. I drive out every day to the hills – and exercise my feet on the highest ground where the road is dry, and the air bracing. The length of my stay here of course depends on the progress I make towards recovery. I have no present intention of leaving, and my address until further notice is: –

Monsieur Wilkie Collins | Nuellens Hotel | Aix la Chapelle | =

I hope some of the Bullar family will soon return to Basset – for I don’t quite like the notion of you being left alone, in that large house: it sounds dreary. However, I am glad to hear that your neighbours and our military namesake (who seemed to me to be a pleasant good tempered man)<sup>3</sup> don’t forget you – and I am equally glad to know that the Slough offer was promptly refused.<sup>4</sup> Ladies who ~~keep to~~ take in boarders, under the pretence of “their homes being too large for them”, are ladies I don’t believe in. Write again soon, and I will write again soon on my side.

Ever affly yours WC

P.S. The courier does admirably – an attentive competent servant, who saves me worlds of trouble.

-
1. Edward William Cooke, RA (1811–1880: ODNB), painter and etcher of marine subjects and architectural views.
  2. Entry for Aachen/Aix-la-Chapelle, Bradshaw’s Illustrated Hand-book to Germany (1867), p. 30: ‘Hotel du Grand Monarque and Hotel Nuellens; both kept by M. Dremel.’
  3. This military Collins remains unidentified.
  4. The lady from Slough whose home was too large for her has also not been identified.

[0535] TO CHARLES COLLINS, 22 APRIL 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3152/5). Published: B&C, I, pp. 220–221. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 297.

Aix La Chapelle | Wednesday April 22nd 1863

My dear Charley,

I got here last Friday and began bathing on Saturday – after an interview with the local doctor. So far, the process seems to be certainly doing me good. The baths are strongly sulphurous, and come so hot out of the earth that they must be cooled before use. I get into the water, up to my middle – an amiable elderly German gets in with me – ~~he~~ puts the rose of a gigantic watering pot on to the end of [del] /a/ pipe which communicates with a cistern at the top of the bath house – turns a cock – and lets a mitigated stream of hot sulphurous water down on my back and legs, ~~all~~ shampooing both with great dexterity. We shout to each other in the French language – our only means of communication – and after ten minutes under the falling water, he leaves me for another ten minutes to sit down in the warm bath and compose myself, after which another man wraps [del] me in a scorching hot linen toga – and the process is ended. Besides this, I drink in bed, every morning before breakfast, a tumbler of the water from the spring – it is steaming hot, perfectly bright and clear, and in taste like the worst London egg you ever had for breakfast in your life. [del] Strange to say, it does not make me sick – and, stranger still, half an hour afterwards it leaves me with a very respectable relish for my breakfast. This completes the curative process. The doctor [del] (senior physician at Aix La Chapelle) proposes no medicine. He is a jolly German with a huge pair of gold spectacles, and a face like an apple – and he smokes his cigar with me every morning after breakfast, like a man who thoroughly enjoys his tobacco. He allows of all wines, provided they are of the best vintages (and my landlord here has not a drop of liquor that is not excellent) – all cookery provided it is thoroughly good – “Snacks” and luncheons, provided they don’t come within less than two hours of the bath, [del] are included in his large toleration. Upon the whole, he is a model physician – and [del] where I really want his advice (in the matter of the Baths) he has twenty years experience to offer me.<sup>1</sup>

This place is a strange mixture of new and old. A Cathedral in which Charlemagne was buried – and Factories which might have been built yesterday. Wide clean streets, with prosperous private houses and about a musket shot away from them, a [del] lovely old German-moated Grange. It is not a gay place – and it is down in a hollow with hills all around. But if I can only get well in it, I am willing to think it Paradise. My stay is of course uncertain – but I shall be here long enough to receive your answer, at any rate[.] Write and tell me how you are, and what you think of doing – and address the letter

Monsieur Wilkie Collins | Nuellens Hotel | Aix La Chappelle.

I have heard from Mother, who reports you better. Send her this letter when you have read it. I have written to her but have not said so much about the bathing as I have said here.

My best love to Katie

---

1. WC had left England a week earlier on Tuesday, 14 April; on the previous Saturday (the 11th) his bank account was debited with £100 for ‘Travelling Exps’. On 21 May it records a payment of £100 to Mons<sup>r</sup> C. Wintgens, presumably for services such as those described here (Coutts: WC).

[0536] TO NINA LEHMANN, 29 APRIL 1863

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 176–7; Davis, pp. 235–236; Baker 2001, p. 509. Published: Lehmann, pp. 44–46; B&C, I, pp. 221–223. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 297.

Nuellens Hotel, Aix la Chapelle | April 29th 1863

My dear Mrs Lehmann,

Under any circumstances, I should have written to tell you all my news, and to ask for all your news in return. But a letter from my brother telling me that you too have been ill, puts the pen at once into my hands. I gather from what Charley says that you are now better – but I want to hear about you and yours from yourself – and I am selfishly anxious for as long an answer as you can send, as soon as you can write it. There is the state of my mind, expressed with the most unflinching candour!

As for me, I am all over sulphur, inside and out – and if ever a man felt fit for the eternal regions already, I (in respect to the sulphurous part of the Satanic climate) am that man. The invalid custom here is to rise at seven in the morning – to /go out and/ drink the water /hot/ from the spring – and to be entertained between the gulps with [~~] a band of music on an empty stomach. You who know me, will acquit me of sanctioning by my presence any such uncomfortable proceeding as this. I have an excellent courier, ~~and~~ I send him to the spring with a stoppered bottle, and I drink my water horizontally in bed. It was nasty enough at first – but I have got used to it already. The next curative proceeding discloses me [~~], towards the afternoon, in a /private/ stone pit, up to my middle in the hot sulphur spring – more of the hot water is pouring down on me from a pipe in the ceiling – a worthy German stands by my side, directing the water in a continuous shower on all my weak points, with one hand, and shampooing me with the other. We exchange cheerful remarks in French (English being all Greek to him, and German all Hebrew to me) – and oh don't we massacre the language of our lively neighbours. In mistakes of gender, I am well ahead of the German – it being an old habit of mine, and of my love and respect for the fair sex, to make all French [~~] words about the gender of which I feel uncertain, feminine words. But in other respects [~~] my German friend is far beyond me. This great creature has made an entirely new discovery in the science of language – he does without Verbs. “Trop fort? Bon pour vous fort – [~~] Trop chaud? Bon pour vous chaud. Promenade aujourd'hui? Aha! Aha! bon pour vous promenade. [~~] Encore la jambe – encore le dos – frottement, ah, oui, oui, frottement excellent pour vous. Repos bon pour vous – a votre service, Monsieur – bon jour!” What an excellent method! do think of it for your boys – I would practise it myself if I had my time to begin over again. The results of all these sulphurous proceedings – to return to them for the last time, before I get to the end of my letter – are decidedly encouraging in my case, so far. I can't wear my boots yet – but I can hobble about with my stick much more freely than I could when I left London – and my general health is benefiting greatly by the change. As for the rest of my life here, it is passed idly enough. The hotel provides me with a delightful open carriage to drive out in – contains a cellar of the best Hock and Moselle wines I ever tasted – and possesses a Parisian cook who encourages my natural gluttony by a continuous succession of entrées which are to be eaten but not described. My books have made me many friends here – who supply /me/ with reading and make me presents of excellent cigars. So upon the whole I get on well enough – and as long as the Baths do me good, so long I shall remain ~~here~~ at Aix la Chapelle.~~~~~~~~~~~~

Here is a nice egotistical letter! But what else can you expect from a sick man? Write me another egotistical letter in return telling me about yourself, and Lehmann, and Lehmann's time for ~~returning~~ /coming home/,<sup>1</sup> and the boys – and believe me,

Ever most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. From his trip to the United States – see [0484] to Fred Lehmann, 28 July 1862.

[0537] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 21 MAY 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/71). Published: B&C, I, pp. 223–224. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 297.

Address – Monsieur Wilkie Collins | Hotel de l’Ours | Wildbad
Wurtemberg | Germany | May 21st 1863

My dear Mother,

Here I am, in The Black Forest! A mountain stream rushes by my window – huge, precipitous hill-sides, clothed with impenetrable fir-trees to the very top, shut in the view. More hill-sides rise opposite to /them/ – and the [del] narrow [del] green valley, and the rushing little stream, wind in ~~out~~ and out, for miles and miles together, with a village of quaint gabled cottages scattered here and there by the water-side to enliven the native solitudes of the Forest. Wildbad is one of these villages – with all the luxuries of civilisation added to it, in the shape of Baths and Hotels. Here are [del] gorgeous drawing-rooms, accomplished French cooks, Banquets, and ornamental Bills of Fare. Here is a strident brass band which plays God Save The Queen perpetually in homage to British strangers. And, most important of all, here is a Bath House, as big as Buckingham Palace, and infinitely superior to it in architectural beauty. It is strange to see all this magnificence, side by side with the unpretending picturesque little native village – and stranger still, to think that some of the acutest forms of human misery, represent the dismal foundation on which the luxury and the grandeur are built up. Paralysis comes here, and pays the bills which encourage the enterprising landlord to add to the size of his [del] /palace of an/ hotel. Rheumatism puts its aching hand in its pocket with a groan, and justifies the Town-Council in keeping up the splendour of the Bath-House. It is only the beginning of the season now – but oh dear me! the number of people I have seen already halting on crutches, hobbling on sticks, rolling silent in smooth Bath chairs! The only place in which I have not had my felt shoes well stared at, is this place. They are used to felt shoes, to pale faces, distorted figures, and [del] crippled walkers. A well-dressed stranger, with the free use of all his limbs, would be the right man to astonish the natives of Wildbad.

I got here yesterday, and tried my first bath this morning – after a good night’s rest, the first for many weeks. The difference in the water here, and at Aix la Chapelle, is as complete as difference can be. At Aix the water was turbid – here, it is clear as glass. At Aix, it stank (of sulphur) – here, it is without odour of any kind. You lie down on a bed of clean delicious sand, and the hot spring bubbles up under you – [del] bubbles so fast, that the whole water of the bath is calculated to be changed every five minutes. Scientific men [del] disagree, as usual, about the curative quality in the water. Some think the earthy fire that warms the spring communicates an electric influence to the water. Others decry the electricity, and set up theories based on the scientific (or chemical) analysis of the springs. I know nothing about it – except that the bath is clean and warm and comfortable, that it has certainly cured many bad rheumatic cases, and that I mean to give it a fair chance of curing me. If I don’t find myself better after a fortnight, I shall leave Wildbad, and come back to England about the middle of June. If I advance, and discard my felt shoes – which is my criterion of a cure – I shall probably make a longer stay. In any case, I have a good doctor here – and my general health is excellent. My miserable feet still “kick” at any extra exertion, and my rheumatic muscles still indicate the changes in the weather with the most deplorable accuracy. Otherwise, I have nothing to complain of. The local physician examined me in bed this morning, and declared all my “organs” to be as healthy as could be wished.

Let me hear from you, by return of post. In these wild regions – far from railways – the post is, I suspect, uncertain. I shall be anxious for news as soon as I can get it, of you and your goings on. Tell Charley I will write to him ~~soon~~ in a day or two.

Ever afftly yours | WC

[0538] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 2 JUNE 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/72). Published: B&C, I, pp. 224–226. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 297.

Hotel de l’Ours | Wildbad | Wurtemberg | June 2nd 1863

My dear Mother,

My plans for returning are [del] settled at last. The doctor directs me to take [del] twenty four Baths in all. More than this would do me harm, and less would not give the waters a fair [del] trial. I am more than half way through my baths today – and the last of them will have been taken on the 13th of this month. I shall leave immediately afterwards, and, if all goes well, I shall be back in London on the 17th or 18th.

Therefore, I have felt all the inconvenience – I might say the actual pain [del] – produced by these extraordinary waters, on first attacking the constitution, and none of the benefit. But there are signs and tokens that the reward of my martyrdom is at hand. You may imagine how welcome it will be, when I tell you that my back has been quite as /bad as/ it was when I left England – and that my feet are still troubling me as they troubled me two months since. Every lurking ache and pain (which I believed to be an ache and pain cured), has been roused and forced to alert itself. The result of this [del] bodily revolution – for it is little less than a revolution – will be, the doctor hopes, and thinks, to make a new man of me. I shall be obliged he [del] says to return to Wildbad /next year/ to /let the waters/ complete their ~~and~~ work – and it is quite possible that I may have a short, sharp, and roaring fit of gout which will [del] be of inestimable benefit to me, if I will be a good patient and grin and bear it. In the meantime, if I don’t go away relieved of my present troubles, I shall feel the relief a fortnight or three weeks later. Such are the doctor’s prognostications. I may as well feel the benefit of the baths in England as not – and I must see Mr. Smith (Smith & Elder) on the subject of the new book.<sup>1</sup> So I return at once – to stay no very long time in London, but to try my old friend the sea, both for bathing and sailing, and a “supplement” to the Wildbad waters which my medical adviser strongly recommends. [del] There are my plans and prospects, so far as I know them. We shall see what the future brings forth.

I think I should have proposed returning here, if the doctor had not suggested it. The beauty of the place, the interest and variety of all the walks and drives, the comfort of the hotel, ~~and~~ the extraordinary kindness and civility of all the people with whom I am brought in contact, the bracing delicious freshness and purity of the air – are some of the attractions which make Wildbad irresistible. There is occupation of the literary sort too for a rainy day – a snug little library, [del] with four thousand volumes of English and French books, and The Times, All The Year Round, and The Illustrated London News into the bargain. There is a linen draper who sends for the summer fashions to Baden-Baden – and who combines a haberdashery department and a cigar department as well – all in one little shop. There is a local shoemaker who is a man of genius, and has made me a pair of soft slippers, adapted to tender feet, which fit to a miracle. As for my landlord, whatever I ask him for, he produces as composedly as if we were in Paris or London – and when I want money, he turns banker in a trice and becomes Coutts’s correspondent at Wildbad as well as the host of the principle Inn! Half the people in this hotel, are people who have come here for the second time – and, after a fortnights [sic] experience of the place I, for one, don’t wonder at their returning to it.

[del] Send [del] Charley [del] this letter, so that he may know my plans for returning – and give my kindest remembrances to the Bullars. If you don’t hear from me again, conclude that I am safely returning and that you will get a letter from Harley St. next. There will be time for you to write to me again, before the 13th, if you write soon. It is close on ten o’clock, and I am so sleepy, I must say goodnight. I hope I shall get to Basset soon after I return.

Ever your affly WC

Charley’s letter from Gadshill reached me safely<sup>2</sup>

1. *Armada*le.

2. To flag his postscript, written vertically up the left margin of the final page, WC draws a dotted saltire.

[0539] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 18 JUNE 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/73), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 226–227. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 297.

Hotel de la Ville de Paris | Strasbourg | Thursday. 18th June 1863

My dear Mother,

Here is another “Report”, to announce that I have got thus far on my homeward journey. After I wrote to you, my arrangements for leaving Wildbad were altered by the doctor, who strongly recommended me to take four baths more than ~~those~~ the number at first prescribed, to make sure of the after-effect, and to give the waters the utmost possible chance of routing the gout from its last lurking-places. Of course I submitted – and here I am, after twenty-eight baths, unquestionably better, and on the road, I hope, to recovery at last. It is impossible to say for certain, just yet, how the Wildbad experiment will end – for I am still feeling the severe curative process of the Baths. The curative result, ~~may~~ cannot be expected to assert itself completely for another fortnight or three weeks – but the doctor when I parted from him spoke of my prospects in a tone of cheerful certainty which was encouraging to say the least of it. I am to go back next year for five weeks – and there, for the present, is an end of Wildbad.

I go on to Nancy (not a woman, I beg you to understand – but a place!) tonight. Then to Paris – then to Boulogne – then to England – and I hope to be back in London on Monday or Tuesday next, when you shall have news of my return.

I have had a most kind and friendly letter from Mr Smith (of Smith & Elder) allowing me until the 1st of December /next/ to send in the first number of the new story for the Cornhill – and, what is more, for that same story, I have Got an Idea! So, if the summer sees me [del] on my legs, the autumn will see me [del] (and God knows how I long for it) back at [del] my work – but taking that work easy, as the popular phrase is, in the strictest sense of the word. If the sympathies of my readers /at Wildbad/ can help me to get well, I ought to be a marvel of health. Visitors of all /sorts and/ [del]<sup>2</sup> conditions showed me extraordinary kindness. Whatever the critics may say, ~~the~~ readers are certainly grateful for a story that interests them. So don’t mind what the Quarterly Review,<sup>3</sup> or any Review says. Or rather, do as I do – don’t waste your time in reading them.

Ever affly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of John Bullar Egre | Basset Wood | near Southampton | England’, with ‘L’ Angleterre’ added above. Postmarked ‘STRASBOURG | 18 | JUIN | 63’.

2. Heavily erased line.

3. Probably a reference to H. L. Mansel in his anonymously published ‘Sensation Novels’, Quarterly Review 113 (April 1863) pp. 481–514, which includes adverse comments on No Name (pp. 495–497).

[0540] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 2 JULY 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/74), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 227–228. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 298.

12. Harley Street. W. | July 2nd 1863

My dear Mother,

Enclosed is a letter thanking old Mr Bullar for his interest in me. I am tied to no time for beginning – all I am asked to do is to tell Smith & Elder whether they may advertise me in October next, as ready to begin with the new year.<sup>2</sup> I am to say Yes, or say No – exactly as I think best – and which of the last two answers I ~~am to~~ /shall/ give, I don’t know myself at present – I am waiting for the after-effect of the Baths. One result has already come – I can walk better. If other good results follow, I may venture to work again. If not, I shall be obliged to say “No” – ~~and~~ for any sacrifice is preferable to the sacrifice of another break-down. I don’t say all this to old Mr Bullar – for he is evidently persuaded that, well or ill, I must take my own brains out of my head, [del] for a year, and supply the vacuum with the brains of a phlegmatic man who has not passed the last ten years of his life in a condition of constant mental activity. This is simply impossible.

All I can say, and all you must say to other people, is that I am not bound to begin by any given time, and that I will not begin until I feel myself fit for it. I walked yesterday to the Serpentine – rested – and walked back again! An amazing achievement for me. If I can keep it up “Tony Lumpkin will soon be his own man again”.<sup>3</sup>

Here are my plans for the summer and autumn. I am going next week to Gadshill for a few days – then perhaps if the Lehmanns are at their county house, I may go for another day or two, and see them. Next, if all goes well, I think of going with Pigott to Cowes, and trying to find a roomy comfortable vessel to hire for a month. Before I leave Cowes, I shall of course come and see you at Basset. My next “pitch” (as the strolling players call it) will be the Isle of Man – [~~] where I want to look at the scenery &c with a view to my next book. The Isle of Man will bring me (especially if I sail there deliberately in my own vessel) to the September time, when I am to say Yes or No to Smith & Elder. If Yes, I shall /necessarily/ be well enough to face the English winter. If my health forces me to say No, I shall fly South, with my honest and excellent Courier who is heartily attached to me. All this part of my plan is sufficiently in the clouds as yet – I can settle nothing positively until the next two months are passed. In the meantime, I am decidedly getting better – and that is enough for the present.~~

As for your plans, of course you must do what you really like best. But wintering at Basset, alone in that large house, requires a little consultation and consideration. We shall have time for this when I see you.

You say nothing about [~~] Lady Lilford. If you are going there, write and tell me when.<sup>4</sup> Of course, I will write again, before my trip to Cowes. It will probably take place in this month – about the middle.~~

Is old Mr Bullar, “The Reverend”? If he is, destroy my envelope and redirect it for me. My address, as you will see, is simply “John Bullar Esqre”.<sup>5</sup>

Charley was here yesterday, looking tolerably well. He had no message but his love
Ever affly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of John Bullar Esqre | Basset Wood | near Southampton’, and signed ‘Wilkie Collins’ in the lower left corner. Postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 4 | JY 2 | 63’ and endorsed in Southampton the following day.

2. Referring once more to the scheduling of the serialization of Armada in Cornhill Magazine published by Smith, Elder.

3. Referring to the conclusion of Goldsmith’s comedy She Stoops to Conquer (1773), where, on discovering that he is of age and free to ignore his mother’s wishes regarding marriage, the scapegrace declares, ‘Witness all men by these presents, that I, Anthony Lumpkin, Esquire, of Blank place, refuse you, Constantia Neville, spinster, of no place at all, for my true and lawful wife. So Constance Neville may marry whom she pleases, and Tony Lumpkin is his own man again.’

4. Henry Brandling’s sister Emma, now married to Baron Lilford of Lilford Hall, Oundle, Northamptonshire – see [0492] to HC, 1 October 1862.

5. John Bullar Sr (1778–1864: ODNB), the eminent Southampton schoolmaster, was not in fact a minister of the Anglican church but an elected deacon of the dissenting chapel at Above Bar. WC’s letter to Bullar regarding health matters has not been traced.

[3084] TO JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, EARLY JULY 1863<sup>1</sup>

MS: Unknown.<sup>2</sup> On sale: Christies (12 November 2007, LO5141, lot 139). Published: A&C4, p. 7.

... (under the name of Magdalen) who is to appear in your illustration<sup>3</sup> – and read the chapter towards the end of Vol II which describes the scene at the window.<sup>4</sup> There ...

... before you put her on paper.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating and recipient from content. This letter is almost certainly that to Millais referred to in [0543] to Sampson Low Jr of 11 July 1863.

2. Fragment only, approx. 7x9cm, cut from a letter on pale blue laid paper.

3. Millais drew the frontispiece to the 1864 one-volume edition of No Name, which shows Magdalen at the window at the pivotal moment when she contemplates suicide.

4. In fact the scene is described at pp. 37–39 in Vol. III of No Name as published by Sampson Low in late 1862.

[0541] TO JANE WARD, 9 JULY 1863

MS: Iowa. Published: BGLL, I, p. 298.

Gad's Hill Place | Higham by Rochester Kent.

Thursday July 9th 1863

My dear Jane,

One line more – just before post-time – to say that I am obliged to return to town earlier than I had anticipated, and that any answer you receive from Liverpool,<sup>1</sup> will probably reach me soonest, if it is sent to Harley Street (No.12)

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The earlier letter and the reference to Liverpool have not been identified.

[0542] TO LOUIS DÉPRET,<sup>1</sup> 11 JULY 1863

MS: Berg, associated envelope in Parrish.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 298–299.

12. Harley Street | Cavendish Square | London | July 11th 1863

Sir,

I have been absent from London – or I should sooner have thanked you for your kind letter, and for the copy of Le Nord which accompanied it.

I have read your Review of “La Femme en Blanc”, with great interest and great pleasure.<sup>3</sup> It is written in a spirit of just and generous consideration towards the author and the work, of which, I assure you, I am heartily sensitive. You have added in no small degree to the obligations which I am glad to owe to French critics and to French readers.

Pray accept the expression of my thanks and the assurance of my sincere esteem.

Very faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Monsieur | Louis Dépret | &c &c &c

---

1. Louis Dépret, Parisian writer, translator and critic of English literature, who published Chez les Anglais (Paris: 1879).

2. Directed to ‘Monsieur Louis Dépret | 23. Rue Bréda | Paris’, postmarked as dated. An unknown hand has inserted in the outer margin of the letter the probable provenance: ‘Mrs. Charlotte Floersheimer Nov. 27 ’50’.

3. Dépret’s review of the French translation of The Woman in White has not been tracked down, but Le Nord is probably the weekly newspaper published in Brussels from July 1855.

[0543] TO SAMPSON LOW JR,<sup>1</sup> 11 JULY 1863

MS: Yale (removed from a first edition of No Name). Published: BGLL, I, p. 299.

12. Harley Street | W. | July 11th 1863

My dear Sir,

Mr Millais has been away in Scotland, and I have been in Kent – or you would have sooner heard from me on the subject of the Illustration to “No Name”.<sup>2</sup>

Mr Millais writes me word that he will “be delighted to do the Illustration” (the nature of which I explained to him in my letter), and that “he will do his very best.” He returned to town at the close of the present week – to remain a month in London. You will then be able to communicate with him easily – in the event of my going away again before I have time to call on him. Any letters addressed here, will be forwarded after me as regularly as possible.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Sampson Low Esqre Jun<sup>r</sup> /

P.S. I have requested Mr Millais to communicate with your House on the subject of Terms. If I can do more to help the negociation let me know – and it shall be done

---

1. Sampson Low Jr (1822–71), a partner in his father’s publishing house.
2. See [3084] to Millais, early July. Millais drew the frontispiece, engraved by John Saddler (1813–92), for the 1864 single-volume edition of No Name (reproduced in Gasson, p. 115). It illustrates the dramatic moment (in Fourth Scene, ch. 13) where Magdalen Vanstone decides to take a fatal dose of laudanum if an odd number of ships passes her window in ‘one half hour’.

[0544] TO ELIZABETH BENZON, 12 JULY 1863

MS: Houghton (HEW 16.3.16). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 299–300.

12, Harley Street | W. | Sunday July 12th 1863

Dear Mrs Benzon,

Pray accept my apologies for not having sooner answered your kind letter, and pray tell Mr Benzon how sorry I was not to see him when he called here. I have been away from London for some days past – and I am going away again for a cruise at sea. But the early part of the week is at my own disposal – and I therefore gladly accept your kind invitation for Tuesday the 14th. This time – although I am still under the doctor’s care – I hope there is a fair chance of my not being again disappointed when I promise myself the pleasure of an evening in your house.

With best remembrances to Mr Benzon
Believe me | Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[0545] TO THOMAS BEARD,<sup>1</sup> 14 JULY 1863

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 300.

12. Harley Street | W. | 14th July 1863

My dear Beard,

I enclose the two photographs – with a penitent acknowledgement that they ought to have been in your hands a fortnight since.

I hope I am in a fair way of getting a vessel and of being at sea in a weeks time.<sup>3</sup> I wish you could come with me!

Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Thomas Beard Esqre

---

1. Thomas Beard (1807–91), journalist, old friend of CD, elder brother of WC’s physician Frank Beard.
2. Directed to ‘Thomas Beard Esqre | 42. Portman Place | Maida Hill | W.’, postmarked as dated.
3. See [0546] to HC of 4 August 1863.

[0546] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 4 AUGUST 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/75), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 228–229. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 300.

12. Harley Street. W. | Augt 4th 1863

My dear Mother,

Another disappointment! I have tried the sea-experiment, and it has failed. All my nervous pains and susceptibilities to changes in the temperature increased as soon as I left the shore. For ten days and nights I stuck by the vessel in spite of them. But time did nothing to acclimatize me to the penetrating dampness of the sea-air – and yesterday Pigott and I left the vessel together. ~~The~~ A better yacht of her size I never sailed in. All the accommodations below perfectly comfortable – high winds and high seas now and then, but not a drop of rain – an excellent captain and crew – in short, everything right and good except my obstinate beast of a back, which registered (in pain) every shift of the wind to North or East all through the voyage. We sailed along the Dorsetshire and Devonshire coasts and back, touching at Swanage, Weymouth [~~del~~] Teignmouth, and Torquay – and got back to Cowes last Sunday morning. There is the history of the cruise, and there the result of another useless attempt to take “the short cut” on the road to health.

The next thing to be done is to run for it before the winter sets in. I shall try Naples first, and Sicily if Naples wont do – and I shall get away by the beginning of October, I hope, at latest, taking my papers with me so as to work if I am well enough when I once get settled. In the meantime, I am going to the Isle of Man to look at certain localities which I may want to turn to literary account one of these days. When I get back I shall come and see you – some time in September most likely. Keep me informed as to your movements (if you leave Basset) so that I may know what to do – and let me have a line to say how you are as soon as you get this.

[~~del~~] Don't be downhearted about me. I sleep better than I did, and I am not at all out of spirits. Doctor William Bullar has got well again with time and rest – and I must follow his example.<sup>2</sup> Nothing shakes my resolution to pull myself through this mess – and you will see I shall do it. If the sea-experiment had succeeded, I might have been tempted to get to work again too soon. As it is, I shall give myself more time, and shall have all the better chance when I do begin. I am not forty yet – and I can afford to wait.

My kind regards to all at Basset. Write this week. Next week will see me on my way to the Isle of Man – to immerse myself in local superstitions and to study the habits of the famous tailless cats of Manx birth and breeding.

Ever your affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of John Bullar Esqre | Basset Wood | near Southampton’ and signed ‘Wilkie Collins’ in the lower left corner. Postmarked ‘LONDON-W | XA | AU 4 | 63’.

2. The third son of John Bullar Sr, Dr William Bullar (1810–69), of Basset Wood and the Royal South Hants Infirmary, who around 1860 had travelled abroad to try to recover his health (Henry Dayman, The Beloved Physician (1869), p. 12), but died on 29 August 1869 within a few months of his older brother Dr Joseph Bullar (deceased 18 May 1869).

[0547] TO CHARLES WARD, 4 AUGUST 1863<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/76). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 300–301.

12. Harley Street | W. | Tuesday night

My dear Ward,

I got back again yesterday. Have you anything to do on Sunday next? If not, come here at six and we will dine either in this house or at Verey's – if the carpets are up, decidedly at Verey's.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Send me a line to say yes. Also please direct your stationer to get me trade price, a book in one volume – | “Strange Things Among Us.” | Chapman & Hall | Piccadilly<sup>3</sup>

There are some things in the volume which may be interesting and useful to me.

I am trying hard to get away on Wednesday week.<sup>4</sup>

Don't let me forget again to repay you the money for the bill stamp.<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Dating from the relationship to [0546] to HC of the same date.

2. Thus for Verrey Brothers, the Regent Street restaurant, patronized by WC and CD – see [0509] to Frank Beard of 24 December 1862.

3. By Henry Spicer, first published in 1863. For WC's copy, once owned by Dorothy L. Sayers, see Baker 2002, #456, p. 152, where it is suggested that WC might have used the book as a source in writing Poor Miss Finch (1872).

4. To the Isle of Man, though in the event he did not get away until late August.

5. Perhaps simply the 2d stamp on a receipt.

[0548] TO W. S. EMDEN, 19 AUGUST 1863

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, I, p. 301.

12. Harley Street. W. | August 19th 1863

My dear Mr Emden,

Your kind note finds me slowly recovering from a long and most severe attack of rheumatic gout – in other words, useless for the present to the Olympic Theatre. I am ordered to pass the winter abroad, and am forbidden to use my pen, until I am a much stronger man than I can claim to be at present. If “The Frozen Deep” could be publickly performed as it stands, this would be of little consequence. But the play requires great alteration, and considerable re-writing, to give it a fair chance of success on the public stage – and I am now unluckily quite unfit to make the needful changes. All I can do now, is to assure you that I will keep your letter in mind, and to add that I sincerely regret this lost opportunity of being of service to the Theatre.<sup>1</sup>

Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

W. S. Emden, Esqre

---

1. WC revised the play in 1866 and it was then revived at the Olympic (see [0704] to John Palgrave Simpson, 12 September 1866).

[0549] TO GEORGE REDFORD,<sup>1</sup> [6–20 AUGUST 1863]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, I, p. 302; Lewis website.

12. Harley Street W. | Thursday

My dear Redford,

Many thanks for your kind letter. I shall be delighted to dine at Cricklewood tomorrow, as you propose – and I will write to my “messmate” to pick me up on his way to you. If the sea had only agreed with me, you would have had a cabin on board the yacht at your disposal to get well in. I am very glad to hear however that you are already improving at home.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Just before your letter arrived, Pigott had brought me the formidable news of the fullness of the Isle of Man.

---

1. George Redford (1816–95), surgeon and art critic, a close friend of Edward Pigott, and also a good friend of WC (see his letter [X008] to Carrie Graves of 25 September 1889. In 1888 Redford published the two-volume Art Sales, listing pictures sold at auction in London up to 1887. Wilkie was a subscriber to the volumes, which devoted four pages to the pictures of WmC (Baker 2002, #410, p. 142).

2. Dating from the references to the sailing trip with Pigott and the forthcoming visit to the Isle of Man. See the letters to HC of [0546] 4 August, and [0553] 1 September 1863.

[0550] TO T. H. HILLS,<sup>1</sup> 21 AUGUST 1863

MS: Melbourne (M 4277).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 302–303.

12. Harley Street | W. | August 21st 1863

My dear Mr Hills,

Mr Beard willingly approves of my trying the prescription which you have so kindly sent to me. I enclose it, in order to save you the trouble of referring to your books again before making up the lotion. Please leave directions that it may be returned to me – for I shall take it abroad in the capacity of travelling companion.

With many and sincere thanks,

Believe me | most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

T.H. Hills Esqre

---

1. Thomas Hyde Hills (1815–91), ‘pharmaceutical chemist; at this time sole proprietor of John Bell & Co., of 338 Oxford St and 2, 4 and 6 Hills Place, Regent Circus, Fellow of Linnaean Society’; friend of CD, Millais and Landseer (Pilgrim, VIII, p. 665 n. 1 and IX, p. 256 n. 3).

2. A note attached to the letters found at Melbourne reads: ‘William Wilkie Collins | Four letters to T. H. Hills, concerning his health and certain invitations. Dated 1863–70. The last is written in another hand, but signed by Collins, who was suffering from gout at the time. Presented by E. Leigh Atkinson, Esq., Ravenswood. 10/5/24.’

[0551] TO SAMPSON LOW & CO., 22 AUGUST 1863

MS: Wolff Collection (1369c). Published: Wolff, p. 266; BGLL, I, p. 303.

12. Harley Street. W. | 22nd August 1863

Dear Sirs,

After the liberal promptitude with which you have met my wishes, it does not become me to return your kindness by starting any fresh scruples on my side. I can only hope that the sale of the book may be large enough to justify you (commercially speaking) in accepting my proposal. And I therefore beg to acknowledge your letter of the 21st, as notifying your favourable reception of my offer, and constituting you the publishers of My Miscellanies on the terms suggested by myself.<sup>1</sup>

I remain Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Sampson Low, Son & Co /

P.S. I propose leaving town tomorrow for a short time. In the course of a few days you shall have the copy for Vol I. by post.

---

1. My Miscellanies, a collection of twenty-four articles and stories from Household Words and All the Year Round, was issued in two volumes from Sampson Low in November 1863. The terms are not known, but one of the motives behind the volumes must have been to generate income during WC’s long period of illness with little in the way of new publications.

[3279] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 24 AUGUST 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C10, p. 7 (dated 22 July 1861).

Mrs Collins | care of John Bullar Esqre | Basset Wood | near Southampton

---

1. Postmarked ‘LONDON-W | [?] | AU 24 | 63’ and endorsed illegibly. At Morgan the document is found, with another unattached envelope without a unique MS number, at the end of the series of letters to his mother, after item MA 3150/117.

[0552] TO CHARLES WARD, 29 AUGUST 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/45). Published: B&C, I, p. 230. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 303.

Fort Anne Hotel | Douglas | Isle of Man | Saturday, August 29th 1863

My dear Ward,

Here we are at last! I had to send a special commissioner from Liverpool to engage apartments – and he has found them in a damp house, with an Eastern aspect. To complete the favourable circumstances under which I am beginning my investigations in the Isle of Man, the air is bitterly cold – and my miserable back suffers in consequence.

I can tell you nothing yet but that the island is very grand from the sea – and that we see the fine Bay of Douglas from our windows. My first excursion is to be made tomorrow – and as soon as I have seen what I want for my purpose I shall come back. It is too late in the year to be visiting northern islands in my rheumatic condition. C. and the child well<sup>1</sup> – passage from Liverpool rainy for half the way across, but calm. Crowds in the steamer, crowds here – all Lancashire goes to the Isle of Man, and all Lancashire is capable of improvement in looks and breeding.

About that business of the Frenchman and the bill. If it is necessary for me to draw the bill, and if you get this letter in time to answer it by Tuesdays [sic] post, send me the bill to sign – for I shall in all probability not leave this certainly before Thursday. If time fails us, perhaps you will kindly write to Hetzel and say that circumstances have compelled me to be absent from London for a few days since I wrote to him, and that immediately on my return I will attend to his letter.<sup>2</sup> If he has paid the money into Lafittes well and good. If he makes “a statement” instead, keep it till I come back. If he has taken no notice – damn his eyes, and wait till I [del] return!

Ever yours WC

N.B. No antiquities in Douglas. Every third shop a spirits shop, and every second inhabitant drunk.

---

1. Caroline Graves and her daughter Harriet (Carrie), now aged twelve.

2. Referring to the Parisian publisher, Jules Hetzel, and presumably relating to the French translation of No Name.

[0553] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 SEPTEMBER 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/76), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 231–232. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 303.

Fort Anne Hotel | Douglas | Isle of Man | September 1st 1863

My dear Mother,

It is, I believe, perfectly easy to travel to Jericho, Hong Kong, or The Sandwich Islands. The one inaccessible place left in the world is the Isle of Man. I think I told you that the landlord of one of the hotels here never answered my letter, and that the communication by electric telegraph with this place is at an end through the breaking of the submarine cable.<sup>2</sup> These were the London difficulties. The Liverpool difficulties came next. ~~When I go~~ I had to send a special messenger from Liverpool to see if apartments were to be got anywhere – the hotels being literally crammed with thousands of rough & ready visitors from the manufacturing districts. The man went one day by steamer – and returned the next, three hours after his time, in consequence of a gale of wind. There was only one ~~place~~ house which could receive me – a house with a bitter cold Easterly aspect. Away I went the next day, in the most horribly crowded passenger-steamer I ever sailed in. Rain half the way across – and no room below, if I had been inclined to venture there. Tide out when we got here – disembarkation in boats – fearful noise and confusion – an old lady tumbled into the water and fished up again by her venerable heels. I waited – as I always do in these cases until this hubbub was over – bribed a sailor – and got myself and my baggage comfortably into a boat. Mounted a rock by a slippery path – passed through a staring line of Lancashire readers – found myself here. Nothing that I wanted (in the literary way) at this place.) Consulted the landlord – and drove off to a remote quarter of the island. Crowds here again – landlord distracted – got rooms at last – and next day started in a boat for the place I wanted to see – the Calf of Man separated from the Island by a sound. Boat a dirty little fishing boat – crew a man for one oar, and two boys for the other. Pulled out of the bay and found a heavy sea and a smart south west wind. Valiant crew just able to keep the boat’s head to the sea, and no more. I saw we should be wet through, and should take hours before we got to our destination. Ordered them to return – and consulted the landlord. “Can’t do it landlord.” – “I thought not, sir.” “Can ~~we get~~ I get near the place by land?” “Yes sir”. “Have you got a carriage?” “Got a jaunting car, sir”. [del] “And a horse?” “Yes, Sir”. “Put the horse to then”. Out came the car with an Irish boy to drive. Set off at a gallop – mounted a hill – descended again by a /road/ [del] all rocks and ruts – I had to get down and walk from sheer inability to bear the jolting. At last we reached the place – wild & frightful, just what I wanted – everything made for my occult literary purposes.<sup>3</sup> I forgave the Isle of Man on the spot – and today I have returned to this hotel. A day or two’s rest after all this exertion, will bring my stay here to an end – and I shall be back in London, if all goes well, next week. Direct your answer therefore to Harley Street – and tell me when I can come and see you before the end of this month. A time when there are no visitors will be best – and a time when I can see Henry, if he is with you.<sup>4</sup> Let me know about this – and tell me also whether you have got the copy of my father’s will. I shall not be leaving England until the end of the month – so there is plenty of time to make our arrangements. You shall hear all about the Isle of Man when I see you.

Ever affly yours WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of John Bullar Esqre | Basset Wood | near Southampton’. Postmarked ‘DOUGLAS ISLE OF MAN | B | SP 2 | 63’ and endorsed ‘SOUTHAMPTON | B | SP 4 | 63’.

2. To link the Isle of Man and the mainland telegraphically, in August 1859 a submarine telegraphic cable had been laid between St Bees, Cumbria, and Cranstal, near the northern tip of the island, with overhead cables erected on to Ramsey and Douglas. However, the currents at Cranstal proved too strong and the cable had eventually to be relaid further south.

3. See the scenes in the first book of Armada describing the sailing trip of Allan Armadale and Ozias Midwinter to the Isle of Man, which evoke ‘the black precipices of the islet called the Calf, separated from the mainland by the dark and dangerous channel of the Sound’ (Ch. 3 ‘Day and Night’).

4. This must be Henry Bullar.

[0554] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 27 SEPTEMBER 1863

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 304–305.

12. Harley St. W. | Sept 27th 1863

My dear Mother,

My luck is against me still. The doctor at Wildbad prognosticated that I should have another attack of gout with “the fall of the year” – and the doctor has turned out right.<sup>2</sup> The seizure was not a severe one this time. Local sweating, and powerful remedies have today succeeded in restoring my great toe to its customary proportions – the enemy is once more driven out – and I have nothing to do now but to get a little accession of strength (after my physicking) by means of a tonic, and to run for it, before the weather gets any colder. Mr Beard thinks that I may safely start on Saturday next – but unfortunately he forbids all travelling in the meantime. From now to Saturday, I must keep quiet, and “collect my forces”. Unless my departure is again delayed, therefore, I am afraid I have no chance of accepting Mrs Phillipson’s kind invitation<sup>3</sup> – and of bidding you goodbye once more, as I had hoped and planned to do when I left Basset. Perhaps it is best as it is – the least dreary way of saying goodbye is the way on paper.

Mind you write to me before Saturday, to tell me your plans, if you can – and if not, to tell me where I can address to you, with the certainty that the letter will be forwarded. If you don’t hear from me again (from this house) assume that I have got away on Saturday – and in that case, you shall hear from me, from Paris. The course is all ready – and my preparations are reasonably well advanced.<sup>4</sup> My journey will be a very easy one. I have discovered that there is a steamer direct from Marseilles to Civita Vecchia – which will save a world of travelling fatigue, expense and worry.<sup>5</sup> Railroad from Civita Vecchia to Rome – railroad from Rome to Naples – and there I stop.

It will be a great relief to me to hear that you are settled comfortably for the winter. Take care of yourself, and live well, and don’t save money at the expense of your own comfort. Goodbye for the present, and God bless you.

Ever yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

What shall I do with your ring? Shall I put it by for you, in my strong box? Or shall I trust it to the post? If you don’t absolutely want it, perhaps the safest way will be to put it by.

The collection of my articles is nearly through the press. I will tell Low that you will write to him for your copy, when the book is published.<sup>6</sup> The advertisements will tell you when. Address Messrs S. Low, Son & Co | 47 Ludgate Hill | London. E.C.

My compliments to Mrs Phillipson and thanks for her invitation.

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of J. Phillipson Esqre | Bramshaw House | Lyndhurst Road | Hants’, postmark obscured. The connection between HC and the Phillipsons, who resided in the middle of the New Forest, remains unclear; the householder then was John Tharp Burton Phillipson (1799–1881), whose second marriage was to Caroline Giffard Lethbridge (1823–93) in Paris in 1849. Caroline Giffard Phillipson was a writer, author of the verse collections Lonely Hours (1856), and Songs of Italy (1862), and the novel Ethel Beranger (1858).
  2. On his medical visit to Wildbad, see to HC of [0537] 21 May and [0538] 2 June 1863.
  3. The Phillipsons are not referred to elsewhere in the letters.
  4. On 1 October WC took from his bank account £20 for travelling expenses and £100 in Circular Notes, i.e., notes which he could cash at foreign banks as he travelled (Cutts: WC).
  5. In the event WC did not take this route – see [0557] to HC of 24 October 1863.
  6. My Miscellanies, published in two volumes by Sampson Low in November 1863.

[0555] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 29–30 SEPTEMBER 1863

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 305.

12. Harley St. W. | September 29th 1863

My dear Mother,

Another line to say that you must write to Charles Ward at Cutts’s when “My Miscellanies” are published, for your copy. I have directed all the presentation copies to be sent for distribution to Charles Ward – as they will be all in the confusion of moving soon, at the publishers, to make way for the new railway bridge across Ludgate Hill.<sup>2</sup>

I enclose a French review of the W. I. W which may amuse you.<sup>3</sup> My foot is better – and the arrangements for my departure on Saturday are all made.

Sept 30th.

Your letter received. I am very glad to hear that you are going at once to Tunbridge Wells. I will address all my letters to care of Mr Pott & c until I hear from you again. “Post Restante, Rome” – will be my address for the next three weeks. My foot is better – I am able to walk again, and am nearly ready to go. On Saturday night I hope to be sleeping at Boulogne. Goodbye again

Ever yours affly | WC

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Arthur Pott Esqre | Bentham Hill | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 4 | OC 2 | [63]’ and endorsed ‘TUNBRIDGE WELLS | A | OC 3 | 63’. Colonel Henry Armytage of Broomhill Bank, Tunbridge Wells, had died in 1863, and his widow, Frances Sarah née Brandling, older sister of WC’s painter friend Henry Brandling, had married again to Arthur Pott, a former high sheriff of Kent resident at Bentham Hill, not far from her previous home at Broomhill Bank.
  2. The new viaduct opening at the lower end of Ludgate Hill to carry the London, Chatham and Dover Railway, which blocked the view of St Paul’s from Fleet Street; Sampson Low’s premises moved from 47 Ludgate Hill to 14 Ludgate Hill, where they remained only until 1867.
  3. This might be the review in Le Nord – see [0542] to Louis Dépret of 11 July 1863.

[0556] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 8 OCTOBER 1863

MS: Huntington (HH 82). Published: BGLL, I, p. 306.

Hotel Bristol | Place Vendome | Paris | Thursday Oct 8th 1863

My dear Hunt,

A line to tell you where to inquire for me at Naples – when you go there this winter, which I hope and trust you will, for it will be a great pleasure to see you in those “foreign parts”.<sup>1</sup>

We are travelling very slowly to humour my unlucky nervous system,<sup>2</sup> which is upset by hurry of any kind. On Saturday week we propose embarking from Marseilles in the direct boat to Civita Vecchia – then to Rome – stay at Rome a week or ten days, to renew my old acquaintance with St Peters and the Colosseum and to make a passing call or two on the Campagna – and then on Southward by railway. This will bring us to Naples about the end of this present month or the beginning of November – and my address at Naples will be always discoverable by inquiry of

Messrs Iggulden & Co, the bankers, at the entrance to the Villa Reale Gardens.<sup>3</sup>

So much for my plans as far as I know them. I feel the better already for the change of air and scene.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. There is no mention of a trip to Italy at this time in Hunt.
  2. The trip was made with Caroline Graves and her daughter. (Note, though, that in the following letter to his mother [0557] he uses the first person singular throughout.)
  3. For WC's account of his similar trip ten years before, see [0158] to Edward Pigott of 4 November 1853.

[0557] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 24 OCTOBER 1863

MS: Pembroke. Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 183. Summary: B&C, I, pp. 232–233. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 306–308.

Savona<sup>1</sup> | Saturday Oct 24th 1863

My dear Mother,

Have you heard through Charles Ward (to whom I wrote from Mentone) – or from Charley (to whom I told Ward to send my letter when he had read it) of my change of plans?<sup>2</sup> If not, I must tell you that I gave up the voyage from Marseilles to Civita Vecchia, in doubt of the weather – which did not incline me to commit myself two days beforehand to taking a cabin and paying an exorbitant sum of money for it. So I decided on travelling to Genoa by vetturino, and following our old route when we were in Italy.<sup>3</sup> Everything is changed since that time – except the lovely scenery. The old Corniche road of our experience is replaced by a new highway infinitely less dangerous and quite as interesting as our route in my father's time. Nice is no longer recognisable. Immense hotels have sprung up, fronting the sea – a public walk has been made along the shore – and the town is three times the size it was in our time. My first stage, after Nice, was to Mentone, and my next to San Remo. I wanted to see both these places, and to ascertain whether they would suit me, in case of disturbances in South Italy driving me northward again in the winter. Of the two, San Remo pleased me most – but both are so like little “gardens of Eden” that it is hard to choose between them. I saw them at the best time, under every possible advantage – the lemons and olives ripening close to the sea, the sky cloudless, the air so soft and warm that the opening of all the windows became a matter of absolute necessity. Two hours before I descended to Mentone, I had been shivering in the bitter wind on the tops of the mountains – and here I found people sleeping in the sun on the kerb-stone of the public street. But the position of San Remo is the most picturesque of the two, and the climate is even warmer than at Mentone. At San Remo tropical palmtrees grow in full luxuriance – and the town climbs a hill-side in a succession of winding streets every one of which is a picture in itself. There is a new, and a very good hotel, opened lately, out of the noise of the town, looking over the olive groves and the Mediterranean – and to this I shall certainly return if anything happens to drive me away from Naples. There is nothing threatening as yet – but in a newly-established kingdom, and with a lazy population which is being forced by a conscription to serve in the Italian army, there may be disturbances lurking in the future.<sup>4</sup> We shall see.

In the meantime, here I am – at the last stage of my vetturino journey – in this ancient city and seaport, with Genoa visible out of my windows in the blue distance. I am giving the horse (and myself) a day's rest, and I go on tomorrow to Genoa. Thence, if the present delicious weather continues, I shall take the steamer along the coast to Leghorn – and from Leghorn I shall coast it again to Civita Vecchia, which the railway has put within two hours' reach of Rome. My stay at Rome will probably not be a long one. About the 5th or 6th of November will probably find me on my way to Naples. Until that time, my address is: – M. Wilkie Collins, Poste Restante, Rome. After that time, “care of Messrs Iggulden & Co, bankers, Naples”.<sup>5</sup> So now you know where to write to me – for the next two months at least.

As for my health, the mild climate is certainly doing me good. I walk up the hills on the road, faster than the horses can walk after me – and I don't get into bed at night, with the infirm deliberation of a man of seventy or eighty years old. My principal annoyance has been – and this alone will show you how much better I am – from the Musquitos. But I have set my invention at work, and have found out a protective nightdress for the face and hands. I have got a small muslin balloon which ties under my beard, and encloses my whole head and face – without touching nose eyes or mouth, and I have had the sleeves of my night-gown sewn up with a couple of old ~~laee~~ cambric pocket-handkerchiefs. In this extraordinary costume, I can hear the musquitos humming all round me with the most supreme indifference. When I wake, in the grey of the morning, I see them crawling over my muslin balloon and my cambric mufflers, trying hard to find a way in – failing at every point – stopping to consider in “indignation-meetings” of twos and threes – expressing their sentiments in a sound like a very small wind at a very great distance – and then flying away in disgust.

I am at the bottom of my paper and I am going out to look at the curiosities of Savona. So goodbye for the present. Mind you write soon, and tell me all about yourself and your winter plans.

Ever yours affly | WC

-
1. Savona is about 25 miles west of Genoa on the Mediterranean coast.
  2. The letter to Ward has not been traced.
  3. That is, by horse-drawn carriage, as during the Continental travels of the Collins family for two years from September 1836. See Peters, pp. 37–49, and Memoirs, II, pp. 76–154.
  4. Referring to the creation in 1861 of the Kingdom of Italy in the south under Victor Emmanuel II of Sardinia, thanks largely to the military successes of Garibaldi.
  5. See [0159] to CAC of 13 November 1853 for an account of WC's previous encounter with the Igguldens in Naples.

[0558] TO CHARLES WARD, 2 NOVEMBER 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /46). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 308–309.

Hotel des Iles Britanniques | Rome<sup>1</sup> | November 2nd 1863

My dear Ward,

I got here yesterday and have received your letter and enclosures. Many thanks.

Inside this half sheet of paper, I send a cheque addressed to you or “Order” for £25 – making up the £100, which is heartily at your service.<sup>2</sup> Glad to hear that Toby has emerged in safety from “the dangers of the seas”.<sup>3</sup>

I will write to you at greater length tomorrow – so as to make the second letter, in case of postal irregularities, advise you of the receipt of this. ~~If you only receive the~~

Caroline & Carry both well

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The same hotel in the Piazza del Popolo, by the northern gate into Rome, which WC, CD and Augustus Egg had stayed at in 1853.
  2. Recorded as paid to ‘C Ward’ on 9 November; WC had paid him the first £75 on 29 September (Courtts: WC). It is not clear when the sum was repaid.
  3. Probably a reference to the Ward's eldest son (christened William Charles Frith in 1847, but generally known as Toby), who enlisted in the maritime marine. WC cites here the opening stanza of the song ‘The Bay of Biscay, Oh’: ‘Ye gentlemen of England who live home at your ease, | It's little do you think of the dangers of the seas’.

[0559] TO CHARLES WARD, 4 NOVEMBER 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/47). Published: B&C, I, pp. 233–235. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 309.

Hotel des Iles Britanniques | Rome | November 4th 1863

My dear Ward,

By yesterday's post, I sent you a line or two, enclosing a cheque dated Novr 2nd 1863, and addressed to you or order, for £25-. If you don't get the cheque in due course, stop the document, and let me know – and I will send another.<sup>1</sup>

You did quite right to accept Tauchnitz's offer – which I consider to be a very fair one. Thank you also for writing to Trubner /& Co/ about that American proposal. I will communicate with them from this place leaving the thing open – for I must not commit, myself before a line of the new book is written.<sup>2</sup> The unfortunate lady must have her reply as well. It is my next book she wants to translate (not The Woman in White). Let me [del] produce the book first – “piano! piano!” as we Italian travellers say.

Since I wrote to you from Mentone, the hardships of travelling have given us a taste of their quality. We got to Genoa most prosperously – from Genoa by sea to Leghorn, and still nothing to complain of – from Leghorn to Pisa (to wait for the French boat to go on to Civita Vecchia) and still all was sunshine. But at Pisa the weather changed. The [del] sirocco brought rain, fog, damp – and the pangs of Sciatica wrung me in both hams at once. It was the turn of my fellow-travellers next – when we got on board the boat for a [del] night-voyage to Civita Vecchia. As ill-luck would have it, the wind got up. It blew fresh – and the two Carolines suffered sea-martyrdom. Caroline Junior had a comparatively easy time of it, and fell asleep in the intervals of retching – but Caroline Senior was so ill that she could not be moved from the deck all night, and she has hardly got over the effect of the voyage yet. The sea (as usual) did me good – but I have registered a vow to take my companions no more [del] night-voyages [sic].

We are in great comfort here. An excellent “apartment” of five rooms on the first floor – a good cook – and a comfortable carriage to drive out in, make our Roman sojourn pleasant enough. But the weather – on which I depend so much that I can't keep perpetually talking about it – still has a grudge against me. Rain and thunder – have given place today to a cold North-East wind. The model climate which is to cure me, is not found yet. My foot /still/ troubles me – but the sciatica is gone, so I don't complain. This wonderful place is just what it has been ever since I can remember it – the Ruins, the Churches, the Streets, the very house I lived in with my father & mother twenty five years ago – all look as if I had left them yesterday. I see no change anywhere except on the Pincian Hill – and there it is a change for the better, the public garden and park being greatly improved in the laying out. The /one/ ~~great~~ annoyance of Rome (to my mind) is the French garrison which makes incessant martial noises with drums and bugles all over the quiet old city. Two ferociously-conceited little warriors were marching briskly about the sacred neighbourhood of the Colosseum yesterday, practising [del] bugle-calls with might and main, and enjoying their own noise as only Frenchmen can – and, not far off, an awkward squad was actually being drilled under the very arches of the old Temple of Peace. Nothing is serious to /a/ Frenchman, except soldiering – and nothing astonishes ~~them~~ /him/ but the spectacle of ~~their~~ /his/ own bravery.

We are going to the Opera tonight. I have got the best box in the theater [sic] big enough to hold six people – for £1– !!! No ticket delivered – the key of the box is handed to me by the box-keeper when I pay the money in the morning at the office – and we walk in at night when we like and open the box door for ourselves.

I have made so many plans /already,/ and then unmade them again (is unmade grammar? I think not) that I hardly like to write positively about the future. But I think I am certain to be here until Monday next at any rate. After that, the chances are that I shall be on my way to Naples. So when you next write, address to me “care of Messrs Iggulden & Co, bankers, Naples” – and I shall be sure of getting the letter. In the mean time, I have no new commissions to trouble you with. The “Miscellanies” represent the only business-transaction I have left behind me – and this you are already kindly prepared to look after when the time comes.<sup>3</sup> Give my best love to all at home, and tell me when you next write that Coosey is strong and well again.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours WC

---

1. See [0558] to Ward, 2 November 1863, note 2.

2. Still referring to Armada.

3. My Miscellanies, two volumes of selected articles and stories from Household Words and All the Year Round, appeared from Sampson Low in early November 1873. Ward was handling the presentation copies – see [0555] to HC, 29–30 September 1863.

4. ‘Coosey’ is a term of endearment for Ward’s eldest daughter Margaret – see [0773] to HC, 11 October 1867.

[0560] TO JOSEPH SEVERN,<sup>1</sup> 6 NOVEMBER 1863

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 309.

Hotel des Iles Britanniques | November 6th 1863

Dear Mr Severn,

I was very sorry not to find you at the Consulate today, after having already missed you when you kindly called here. If I were only travelling for my pleasure, I should remain long enough in Rome to pay you another visit. But I have been suffering from a very severe attack of rheumatic gout – the doctors have ordered me to try a winter in Naples – and I am going on immediately. I hope to return to Rome, however, in the spring, and to have another opportunity of renewing an old friendship which will always be associated, in my mind, with a very happy past time.<sup>2</sup> Meanwhile,

Believe me | Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Joseph Severn Esqre | H. B. M. Consul

---

1. Joseph Severn (1793–1879: ODNB), British artist resident in Rome, then acting as British Consul. He had come out with Keats in 1821 and had helped the Collins family during their stay in the 1830s (see Peters, p. 41).

2. WC in fact renewed his acquaintance with Severn on his return to Rome – see [0565] to HC of 8 January 1864.

[0561] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 13 NOVEMBER 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/77). Published: B&C, I, pp. 235–238. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 310.

Hotel d’Angleterre | Chiaia | Naples | November 13th 1863

My dear Mother,

I got your letter, addressed to me at Iggulden’s, yesterday. I also received your other letter (from the Poste Restante) /at/ Rome. From Rome I wrote to Charley and told him to send my letter on to you.<sup>1</sup> So much for the family correspondences, to begin with. As far as I know, none of our letters have missed us.

And now, what have I got to write about? Nothing but the weather. It is tiresome in the last degree to be perpetually dwelling on this one subject – but everything I do is decided by the state of the [del] atmosphere, and all my worst existing difficulties, are difficulties set up by the rain and the wind. My letter to Charley will have told you what the weather did with me at sea. At Rome, I found the sun again – ~~hot~~ /heat,/ boiling ~~hot~~ /heat,/ on one side of a street, and deadly chilling damps (in the shade) on the other. For a [del] week, I waited in expectation of a shift of the wind from the north-east quarter in which it obstinately hung. Out every morning, [del] in the track of the sunshine – bathed in perspiration – back again as fast as I can, to shift my clothes and rub myself down before I get chilled – out again in a carriage to avoid more perspirations – drive into the Campagna to get all the sunshine without any mixture of shade – clouds to windward, & showers following each other in /great/ sheets of [del] moisture – back again to the hotel – sun comes out once more – tired of driving, tired of walking – go and look at a church – driven out by the damp – go and look at the Colosseum, driven out by the damp – go home to dinner – shut the windows, on account of the evening chill – an hour later, atmosphere insupportably heavy, open the windows again – shut them again – and so on till bedtime. ~~After~~ A week of this was enough for me – and I left Rome. Severn called on me /before I went away [del]/ – and I called on him – and both times we missed each other.<sup>2</sup> Mr and Mrs Rudolph Lehmann I met in the street<sup>3</sup> – and heard /from them/ of Janet Chambers’ death.<sup>4</sup> I saw no one else before my departure.

And how did I get to Naples? Of course I got to Naples in the rain. Furious, drenching, tropical rain – and no shelter whatever for anybody at the terminus. And here I am, in splendid apartments looking out on the sea. And what have I seen? Squalls of rain and wind, with watery glimpses of sunshine between whiles – Capri appearing and disappearing in mist – the Mediterranean leaping in white angry waves – Vesuvius shrouded in inky clouds – men-of-war steamers (assembled here to be reviewed by the King) making for the harbour, with their topmasts struck and their bows pitching furiously into the furious sea. A public ball was given last night in honour of the King’s presence. I was offered a ticket and wisely declined. Why wisely? Because it blew a hurricane /and it was doubtful if the coachman & horses could have faced the storm./ Hail battered like musket shots against the windows! [del] Lightning illuminated the whole seaward view from Sorrento to Baiae! What woke me this morning? My worthy travelling-servants [sic] knuckles on the door??? Pooh! pooh! Thunder. What do I find inside my window, on getting up? – A pool of rain-water. What am I in at this moment? Another perspiration. The rain is over, and a faint sun is shining, and a hot damp Sirocco wind is blowing. Are my legs on, or off, my body? They feel off, and I hav’nt energy enough to care about looking for them. I am going out as soon as I have done this letter – and I have just laid a dry flannel waistcoat across the chair, in anticipation of my return. Who is to help writing about the weather under such circumstances as these? Everybody says nothing like it ever happened before. Everybody says – “wait, and the climate must recover itself.” Well, I will wait, as long as my flannel-waistcoats hold out. When they are all drenched together, it will be time to [del] go on, and discover an opportunity of drying them in some other [del] part of the globe.

Doctor Strange called on me today, and sent you all sorts of kind messages.<sup>5</sup> He is very little altered. I asked after Mrs Strange. Dead! [del] /Just as I had/ made up a miserable face, [del] and said I was very sorry – the doctor informed me he ~~was~~ had married again! So I made up a jolly face, and said I was very glad. The doctor has given up practice. He too says the weather is without precedent – and he warns me against Palermo, which he declares to be relaxing. So that refuge is taken away, and there is really nothing left for it but to wait here in the hope of a change for the better.

The Igguldens I have not yet seen.<sup>6</sup> But Doctor Strange reports them to be all alive and hearty – except the youngest son, Laurence, who died some time since of consumption. I am going to the bank – the Igguldens bank [sic] – to get some money – and I will keep this letter open, so as to tell you any news I hear from our old Neapolitan [sic] friends.

I have just come back from the bank. Years have told on Iggulden – he looks shrunken, and he speaks feebly. All his children are away in England – he and Mrs Iggulden are left the Darby and Joan of Naples. [del] /Many/ friendly messages to you and Charley. I have promised /to call/ on Mrs Iggulden and on Mrs Turner (whose son is a partner in the bank).<sup>7</sup> Upon the whole, raking up these ashes of old friendships is melancholy work. Iggulden was (to my astonishment) struck by my size, which he appeared to associate in some way with the success of my books. He gave me some orange-blossoms – and we parted very tenderly.

Naples – as far as the rain has allowed me to see it – is not much changed. The Villa Reale is twice the size it was in your time, and the Toledo is lit with gas. But the hideous deformed beggars are still in the streets (though the Government professes to have removed them) – Punch squeaks and rootle-tootles all over the city – vagabond cabmen drive after you go where you may, grinning and shouting and insisting on your getting into their mangy little vehicles – no two members of the populace can meet in the street and talk about any thing without screeching at the tops of their [del] voices, with their noses close together and their hands gesticulating madly about their heads. Here are all the old stinks flourishing – all the fruit-stalls and iced-water stalls at all the old corners of the streets – here are the fishermen with the naked mahogany legs – here are the children with [del] a short shirt on, and nothing else, and here are their fond mothers hunting down the vermin in their innocent little heads. Political convulsions may do what they please – Bourbons may be tumbled down and Victor Emmanuels may be set up<sup>8</sup> – Naples keeps its old cheerful dirty devil-may-care face in spite of them.

When you next write – and don’t let it be long before you do – address to me at this hotel. It was a great pleasure to hear that you are so comfortably settled, with so many friends about you. Your letter satisfies me that you have done the right thing in settling where you are. Go on and prosper, and believe me

yours ever affly WC

P.S. I am getting ideas – as thick as blackberries – for another book. But say nothing about it yet. My general health is infinitely improved – and my rheumatic twinges are only what I must expect while the damp weather lasts. I really hope and believe I shall come back [del] well.<sup>9</sup>

1. The letter to CAC has not been traced.
2. See [0560] to Joseph Severn, 6 November 1863.
3. Rudolf Lehmann (1819–1905), portrait painter, older brother of Frederick Lehmann, who in 1861 had married Nina Lehmann's sister, Amelia Chambers. WC consistently misspells the name 'Rudolph'.
4. Janet (often called Jenny) Chambers, whose sudden death is reported here, was Nina Lehmann's sister, the twin of Eliza Chambers. See [0345] to her, 15 May 1860.
5. The English doctor called in to treat WmC during the 1838 family visit (see HC, Manuscript Journal, (MSL/1914/1915), National Art Library, Victoria and Albert Museum).
6. See [0159] to CAC of 13 November 1853 for an account of WC's previous encounter with the Igguldens in Naples.
7. Mrs Turner has not been identified.
8. Victor Emanuel II (1820–1878), King of Sardinia from 1849, had assumed the title of King of Italy on 17 March 1861, following Garibaldi's conquest of the Bourbon Kingdoms of Naples and Sicily.
9. WC writes his postscript vertically up the left margin on his fourth and final page, with the final words curving round to conclude horizontally along the top of the page.

[0562] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 22 NOVEMBER 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/78), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 238–240. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 310.

Hotel d'Angleterre | Naples | 22nd Nov<sup>r</sup> 1863

My dear Mother,

Some news for you. Naples does not suit me, and I am going to leave it on Tuesday or Wednesday next, for Rome, on my way to Florence. After having made all my arrangements for wintering here – liking this part of Italy and this scenery as strongly as I do – it would be idle to say that I am not [del] disappointed by the change which is forced on me in my own plans. There is no help for it. I have remained long enough to know that this place is doing me harm instead of good. For the last week, the weather had not merely improved – it has been lovely – and day by day in [del] spite of the blue sky and the soft air I am getting weaker. The climate is too relaxing for me. My appetite is beginning to fail me – I don't sleep so well as I did – and my foot, which accurately follows the state of my general health, is getting stiff and painful again. It was impossible to foresee this – it was impossible to know how the experiment would turn out until the experiment was tried. The knowledge is gained now – South Italy won't do for me.

Will Sicily do? No – the medical men here (who are not in attendance on me, mind) say that Palermo is more relaxing at this time of year than Naples. A friend of /Holman/ Hunt's – a /Scotch/ physician who has been four years at Naples<sup>2</sup> – tells me composedly to turn my back on Europe altogether, and go to Cairo – where the air is dry and exhilarating, and where the temperature keeps (in winter) at one cool medium for months together. I dare say, this is good advice – but there are many reasons why I can't take it just now. My own idea is to try Florence – because it is inland, because it is (I hear) well drained – and because I feel that I want stringing-up with a little brisk bracing cold air. Of course, if I find such a winter there as we found when we /were/ [del] in Italy – I shall leave again. Florence is on the way, from this, to Mentone and San Remo, where I am sure of a mild atmosphere. But my confidence in mild sea-side atmospheres is shaken – and I /am/ determined to try a cold place next. I am not afraid of simple cold – it is cold complicated by damp and fog that hurts me. You shall hear how I get on when I reach Florence. I shall stay three or four days at Rome, and one or two more at Sienna – and take it very easy on the road. If you have not already written to me before you receive this, direct your letter to Poste Restante, Florence. If you have written I am sure to get your letter, forwarded by the landlord here. Don't suppose I am likely to be laid up again. I am not giving Naples time to lay me up – I am going before the enervating climate can fasten its hold and get me down.

I have very little news. Driving out, and sitting out in the open air – the air poisoned with the infernal stinks of Naples – walking a little and talking a little [del] represent my present existence. I dined with Doctor Strange and his second wife – very cordial and pleasant. I have also seen Mrs Iggulden who sends you many kind messages. She doesn't look a year older, and she received me as if we had parted yesterday. Her conversation was almost [del] exclusively devoted to her own latter end. She lives for Mr Iggulden, and as soon as she has settled him properly in his grave, the only prospect she can look to with the least satisfaction is the prospect of her own death. Such are the sentiments of this excellent woman! Sophy (the tall daughter) is dead as well as Laurence – and the youngest daughter is sent to England to keep her out of a Neapolitan love [del] entanglement. I suppose these family misfortunes have soured good Mrs Iggulden about herself and her destiny. I persisted in making bad jokes all through the interview – and I think I did her good.

Yours ever affly WC<sup>3</sup>

I suppose you have got “My Miscellanies” by this time. Charles Ward writes me word that the first edition was all cleared off on the day of publication.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Mr Wells | Bentham Hill Cottage | Tunbridge Wells | England’, with ‘Inghilterra’ added above, and postmarked in Naples ‘23 | NOV | 63’.

2. The name of Holman Hunt’s physician friend eludes us.

3. The final two sentences and the valediction are squeezed down WC’s left margin on the final page of the notepaper.

4. WC squeezes the postscript in to the left of the address on the front page, encircling it with a curving line.

[0563] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 4 DECEMBER 1863

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/79). Published: B&C, I, pp. 240–241. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 310.

Hotel des Iles Britanniques | Rome | December 4th 1863

My dear Mother,

Here is another report, in case you are anxious about me, to say that I am better in Rome, and that in Rome I mean to remain – on the profoundly wise principle of letting well alone. I felt the change beginning as I approached this place in the railway. The horrible Neapolitan exhaustion and depression, seemed to be oozing out of me like the valour of “Acres” in the Rivals<sup>1</sup> – and a brisk cold atmosphere stole refreshingly into its place. The North wind was blowing at the time – in other words, there was just the dry, sharp cold in the air that I wanted. My spirits, my appetite, my capacity to sleep, all rallied – and my foot got better exactly in proportion as I got better generally. I still feel my rheumatic pains – but I also feel the strength to battle with them. So while the “cold weather” lasts, I shall certainly stay in Rome. If there is a change to relaxing, rainy South winds, and if the change seems likely to be permanent – I shall have to go /northward/ again to Florence or Turin. But for the present my address is at this hotel – and I have written to Florence to have my letters /~~(which have been forwarded from Naples)~~/ forwarded back here. This uncertainty about my ~~forward address~~ /own plans and movements/ is inconvenient enough – but there is no help for it. Now the Neapolitan scheme has failed, I can make no plans beforehand. I must stop in a place while it suits me – and go on when it suits me no longer – and my letters must dodge me as well as they can. For the present, there is no doubt about Rome being the place for me.

I have no news. Thus far, I have kept myself to myself – and I doubt if anybody in Rome knows I am here. Ideas are coming to me thicker & thicker for a new book – and while I am putting them down and considering and re-considering them “company” only distracts and worries me. I think I am going to hit on a rather extraordinary story this time – something entirely different from anything I have done yet.

Rome is positively crammed with English. I hear our national language, I see our [del] plump clear national physiognomy everywhere. The Theatres are all shut in anticipation of the Carnival – but a band plays on the Pincian, and a caravan of wild beasts [del] is exhibiting in the Piazza del Popolo just outside my window – and with these “Gaieties” Rome is contented until the New Year comes.

If you have written to Naples, /or to Florence – / I shall probably get your letter /sent back/ from Florence in a day or two. If you have not written lately, let me have a letter here.

Ever yours affly W.C.

I will write and tell Charley my last change of plans (!) by tomorrow’s post.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The ridiculous Bob Acres in Sheridan’s The Rivals (1775) who, believing he must fight a duel with a rival for the hand of Lydia Languish, finds his courage ‘oozing out at the palms of his hands’.

2. Such a letter to CAC has not been traced.

[0564] TO ANNE BENSON PROCTER, 16 DECEMBER 1863

MS: Trinity (Houghton CB341–2/1). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 310–313.

Hotel des Iles Britanniques | Rome | Decr 16th 1863

My dear Mrs Procter,

The only apology I can make for not having written to you before, is contained in the narrative of my travels. So here is the narrative, to begin with.

Do other people who make elaborate plans beforehand, always end by upsetting their own arrangements as soon as the time comes for putting the plans in action? It is one of my innumerable infirmities to do this, at any rate. I began practically contradicting myself at Paris. I had planned only to pass through, on my way Southward – and I stayed there a week. What for? For the worst possible reason, in the case of a man travelling for health – for the pleasure of going to the play. At the end of the week, my sense of duty – much debilitated by my illness, having never been very strong at the best of times – came languidly back to me and I went on to Marseilles. At Marseilles Plan number Two sternly confronted me – and Plan number Two had my back immediately turned on it for its pains. I had positively settled to go to Rome by sea – from Marseilles to Civita Vecchia. But the wind was blowing, the waves showed their white edges, and the prospect of two nights and a day in a crowded steamer with nine-tenths of my fellow-passengers sick, and myself not able to join them, daunted me. The man to be pitied in these circumstances, is the exceptional man who doesn’t share the general infirmity that surrounds him. Fortified by these moral convictions and filled with a sage distrust of the weather, I cast my maritime arrangements appropriately to the winds and the waves, and went on to Genoa by land. I passed Mentone on the way – a lovely place, beautifully sheltered, but, as I venture to think, something relaxing and damp. Here, I met with the mosquitoes in multitudes, and invented on the spot an anti-mosquito night-cap with a protective muslin mask for the face – a “Work” of mine which I am really proud of. My principal impression of Genoa (where all the hotels are on the port) was the impression of deafening and maddening noise – the result, I was gently reminded, of the vast commercial importance of the place, a most convincing and satisfactory explanation no doubt to a mercantile man with a pecuniary interest in the noise, but not at all comforting to a sour-tempered literary traveller who has upset all his own plans and is surveying foreign parts with a set of smashed nerves. I got into a boat in the harbour. “Sea-sickness”, I said to myself “is noisy, and especially when it proceeds from foreign stomachs. But Genoa is noisier still. I will go by sea to Leghorn.” Behold me on board an Italian steamer – a nice new boat, with very few people on board. A calm sea, a fine night-passage, no uproarious stomachs, everybody good-tempered and agreeable. I asked nothing better than to go on again, the next night, in the same boat from Leghorn to Civita Vecchia. But here the existing political state of Europe stepped in and set up an obstacle. The Pope won’t allow the King of Italy’s steamers to enter his harbour with their flags flying – and the King of Italy’s steamers won’t submit to the indignity of lowering their flags to please the Pope. It was necessary to wait until a pious French steamer (pleasing in the eyes of the Pope) touched at Leghorn. I waited close by, at Pisa, and got the sciatica from the damp of the place, for my pains. In three days the French steamer arrived – crammed with passengers principally English. I never saw so many ugly women together before in my life. Wherever I looked, there was a Gorgon with a hat and feathers on, and Murrays Guide in her hand.<sup>1</sup> A cabin to myself was not to be had for love or money. I was specially favoured in being allowed a mattress on the main-cabin floor. If the ~~night~~ evening had not been fine, I should have been ashore again. As it was, I trusted the weather – and finely the weather paid me off for suspecting it at Marseilles. Two hours after sailing, the wind rose, the vessel pitched, and the very results followed which it had been the one object of all my ingenuity to avoid. I had been previously driven from the deck by hearing one of the Gorgons tell another of the Gorgons that I was on board, that she knew me (I never saw her before in my life), and that she would introduce me to her friend as soon as I made my appearance. When the ~~night~~ darkness came, I ventured up – but the sciatica sent me down again, and I passed the night on my mattress, with emetic human misery prostrate all around me. So did retribution overtake me for changing my plans, and such is the vanity of all human attempts to effect a judicious compromise with Fate. Well – morning came, and the Pope’s harbour received me, and the Pope’s railway took us to Rome. On I went, like the Wandering Jew, from Rome to Naples. Naples was the great end and object of my journey. Here was my winter’s rest, and here was recovery waiting for me at last. I entered Naples, in high triumph and self-satisfaction – for I felt that, in this case at least, I had held with a stern and virtuous consistency to my original plans. And what was the result? Another overthrow of all my arrangements – my misfortune, this time, observe, and not my fault. I felt ill the first day, and the second and the third – but I attributed it to the stormy rainy weather. Let me wait a little, I thought, till the climate recovers itself. The climate did recover itself – and the weather became the weather of one of our fine English summers. Day after day of blue skies and bright sunshine, and soft breezes. And day after day, I sank and sank in spite of it. My spirits, my sleep, my appetite, all my energies, steadily failed me – all the old nervous pains came back, and the old lameness in my foot was worse than ever. After a fortnights endurance, I ran for it, while I had strength to travel. Old resident friends and new resident friends, medical and not medical, helped me with every sort of information. I learned that if Naples relaxed me at this time of year, Sicily would relax me still more. Capri, Sorrento, and the other places about the Bay were only variations of the Neapolitan climate. A dry bracing air was what I wanted – I came back to Rome – at Rome I have remained, getting stronger & better every day in the dry North wind which blows at this time of year – and from Rome I write to Mrs Procter, heartily wishing I had been well enough to have written before. So much for my travels – if you can only read them. And so much for my apology – if you will only accept it.

For the present, I am fixed here, and my address is at the head of this letter. My plans now are to travel northward when I move next keeping inland – and to get back to England early in the spring, if I go on improving as I am improving now. I don’t regret having tried Naples, for it was impossible to foresee the failure of the climate in my unlucky case, and I should not have been satisfied without trying the experiment. The English winter, I am now afraid of, solely on account of the piercing damp – but I hope and trust I shall come back and thrive in the English spring.

In the meantime, do write me a nice long letter – for I am anxious to know how you all are, and especially what news you can tell me of Miss Procter.<sup>2</sup> Give my love to Procter<sup>3</sup> – and with heartiest good wishes for you all, believe me ever yours truly

Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to the popular series of travel guides to Italy, published by John Murray from the eighteenth century, which competed with Baedeker. The seventh edition (1864) of Murray’s Handbook of Rome and its Environs described WC’s hotel, located in the north of Rome by the Borghese park, in this way: ‘The Hôtel des Iles Britanniques, kept by Freytag, in the Piazza del Popolo, under the Pincian Hill, also very clean and good, with an excellent cook ... no table-d’hôte’ (p. 8).

2. Her daughter, the poet Adelaide Anne Procter, who died of tuberculosis on 2 February 1864 at 32 Weymouth Street, where she had been confined to her room for over a year.

3. Her husband, Bryan Waller Procter.

[0565] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 8 JANUARY 1864

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/80). Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 185. Published: B&C, I, pp. 241–243. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 313.

Hotel des Iles Britanniques | Rome | Feast of St Collins | (8th Jan'y 1864)

My dear Mother,

If your reckoning is right – which I have a melancholy satisfaction in doubting – I am now writing to you at the mature age of Forty. Mercy on us! Who would ever have thought it? Here is “forty” come upon me – gray hairs [del] /springing/ fast, especially about the temples – rheumatism and gout familiar enemies for some time past – all the worst signs of middle-age [del] sprouting out on me – and yet, in spite of it all, I don't feel old. I have no regular habits, no respectable prejudices, no tendency to go to sleep after dinner, no loss of appetite for public amusements, none of the melancholy sobrieties of sentiment, in short, which are supposed to be proper to middle age. Surely, there is some mistake? Are you and I really as old as you suppose? Do review your past recollections, and see whether you are quite sure that there is no miscalculation and no mistake.

I have got all your letters. Your last reached me yesterday. Don't suppose I am in any want of money – I am not the less obliged by your proposal, but I have a thousand guineas at Coutts's, and if I can only go on, as I am going on now, I shall soon make some thousands more. No fear at present of my being [del] worried by want of “means”. As to the photograph, get it copied (if you like) by a photographer at Tunbridge Wells. Sending to Aix la Chapelle would be expensive & troublesome, and would probably lead to some absurd mistake. If you will take my advice, however, you will wait till I come back – when I must sit again to Cundall & Downes.<sup>1</sup> All the “negatives” of the/ photographic portraits in The Woman In White are exhausted by the large sale – and, this time, I will take care that some really good likenesses are [del] produced. But when am I coming back? Well, I hope in March next. I shall probably – but mind nothing is certain in relation to my movements – leave Rome towards the close of this month, and saunter back by Florence, Bologna, Parma, Milan, Turin, and so over Mont Cenis into France. My stay at Florence will be long or short as I find the place suit me. I have dreams (between ourselves) of beginning my new story there – I mean beginning to write it, after I have constructed the framework here.<sup>2</sup> But all this is pure speculation. All I can say now is that I see no reason why I should not be back in England in March.

The weather here is simply perfect. Now and then a day of damp South or West Wind – but generally dry cold bracing frosty North breezes. Last Sunday snow fell, and actually remained unmelted on the roofs of the houses. The circumstance was extraordinary enough to be noticed in the official report of the Roman Observatory! As early as nine in the morning, the Pincian Hill was [del] crowded with the Romans, surveying the amazing spectacle of snow all round them – and showing the whitened church cupolas to their children who had never seen them whitened before. Day after day of crisp air and cloudless skies has followed the snow. Invigorated by the blessed dryness of the atmosphere, I can walk for two hours at a time, and can “bully” my foot at last, in return for the “bullying” which my foot has inflicted on me. On the day of the snow, I went to one of the churches here, and found children preaching – children of five, six and seven years old, who had learnt their little sermons and little gesticulations and genuflections and crossings, and let them off at the congregation with perfect solemnity and composure. As each child ended, the congregation cried “Bravo!” – and the next child (male and female indiscriminately) popped up into the temporary pulpit like a Jack in the Box. I ventured on asking a Priest near me/ [del] (I am on excellent terms with the Priests as we all take snuff together) – what it meant. He said – “You read the New Testament my dear sir? You remember the passage: Out of the mouths of Babes and Sucklings &c&c?<sup>3</sup> Very good! There are the Babes and Sucklings! And what have you got to say against that?” I had nothing to say against it – and I cried “Bravo” with the rest of the congregation.

I have been answering your last letter but one – but not your last, telling me of Thackeray’s death.<sup>4</sup> I had seen the news some days before in “Galignani”, and had tried hard to hope it was a false report – but the next day’s paper cut the hope from under me. I am heartily sorry for his poor children and for Charley and all his intimate friends. I, as you know, never became intimate with him – but we always met on friendly and pleasant terms. He has left a great name most worthily won, and he has been spared the slow misery of a lingering death-bed. These are the consolations for his loss – which his family and his old friends will feel when Time has helped them. I can say no more.

While I write of this great loss to English literature,<sup>5</sup> I am reminded of a little loss to myself which has happened since I last wrote to you. Poor Nidecker, my travelling-servant, died in this hotel about a fortnight since. A week after he took to his bed (under an attack of gastric fever) he was no more. I did all that I could have done for a relative of my own. The English clergyman, the English Doctor, and the landlord of the hotel all helped me. He sank so rapidly that there was no time to speak to him about his friends or his affairs. The law of Rome obliged us to bury him (in the Protestant Cemetery) four and twenty hours after the breath was out of his body. His nearest relative has been discovered since by examination of his papers and has been written to. And so I have lost a faithful servant, who was really attached to me. I was with him a few hours before his death, and almost his last coherent words in this world were words which thanked me for the care I was taking of him.

When I go on to Florence I can engage a well-recommended man from this place. Until that time – as I don’t care to have a stranger about me – I decline all offers from travelling servants of all nations.

I keep out of [del] the so-called “Gaieties” of Rome – dinners, balls, & so on. When I want evening amusement, I can get a numbered stall in the best operatic theatre for two shillings English. No infernal fuss and expense and evening costume – and very fair singing and dancing – a good orchestra – & Verdi’s music. I am a constant member of the audience, and bless my stars that I am in Rome, and not in London, where they won’t let me into the Opera unless I spend a guinea and put on a pair of black trousers first. I see Severn and the Rudolph Lehmanns (Mrs Rudolph has just had another girl quite successfully)<sup>6</sup> – and I exchange cards with polite residents – and plead illness when there is a threatening of anything more serious than cards, and so manage to lead my own life at Rome in my own way. I leave you to whirl in the vortex of Society, and to represent your vagabond eldest son [del] among Persons of Quality. Joking apart, I am [del] really delighted to hear that you are so comfortable and happy and so well surrounded by friends at Tunbridge Wells. I hope it won’t be very long now before I am able to ~~come~~ judge of all your little [del] luxuries for myself. And<sup>7</sup> so goodbye for the present. My love to Charley & Katie. Let Charley know you have heard from me.

Ever yours affly WC

P.S. | When you write again – if you write towards the end of the month – I think it will be safest to address me at Poste Restante Florence<sup>8</sup>

---

1. Photographers of New Bond Street, London: they produced in oval format the tip-in photograph for the frontispiece of the one-volume edition of The Woman in White (Sampson Low, 1861), the only such use in WC’s novels.

2. Still referring to Armada.

3. ‘Yea; have ye never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?’ (AV, Matthew 21:16, echoing Psalms 8:2).

4. Of a stroke on 24 December 1863 at the age of fifty-two.

5. Compare WC’s comments in a private conversation not long after the death of Dickens, as reported in John Bigelow’s diary entry of 24 July 1870: ‘I met Wilkie Collins at the table of a common friend. ... Collins said Dickens always denied that Thackeray belonged to the order of literary men; that he was a gentleman who took to writing; that he was not a novelist, merely an essayist; that his so-called novels were only a series of essays, and the essays were all that was good in them.’ (Bigelow 1913, IV, pp. 382–383).

6. Compare [0561] to HC, 13 November 1863.

7. WC squeezes the remaining text of the letter and the valediction up the left margin of his final page.

8. WC squeezes his postscript in to the left of the address on the front page, encircling it with a curving line.

[0566] TO CHARLES WARD, 14 JANUARY 1864

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/48).<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 186. Published: B&C, I, pp. 244–246. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 313.

Hotel des Iles Britanniques | Rome | January 14th 1864

My dear Ward,

Your letter, enclosing a /my/ second Letter of Credit for £500, reached me safely this morning.<sup>2</sup> A few days previously, I also received the snuff – and my bereaved Nose has been in a state of placid cheerfulness ever since. There was some trouble (all taken off my hands by Freeborns)<sup>3</sup> in finding the precious canister, in consequence of nobody knowing exactly where it was – not even the people who wrote to tell [del] me that it had arrived, and who could not produce it on demand accompanied by payment of the money! The administration of salt and tobacco had'nt got it – nor the Custom House – nor the Messageries Office. At last it turned up (God knows how) at the railway station, and nobody could account for its being there when it did turn up. This is how we do business in Rome. No matter – I have got it. Take my blessing for sending it!

As to Poole, don't trouble further in this matter. Let it rest until I get back. No bill came into my hands – but it may have been lost in the unutterable confusion of my departure from England.<sup>4</sup> I can't swear to anything under those circumstances – and I am sorry you have had the [del] trouble of sending a second time and copying an extract from my letter. Damn all money matters! I wish we paid as the patriarchs did, with a drove of oxen or a sack of corn. The currency here – but for my excellent friend Mr Ercole Junior at Freeborn's – would drive me distracted. There is one price for the Pope's gold, and another for Victor Emmanuel's, and another for Louis Napoleon's and another for silver – and I have opened an account with Freeborn, and have got a primitive Roman cheque book – and when I don't make mistakes (which I generally do) I get paper-money to pay in, and paper money is at par, and I save I don't know how much, and there is my Financial Statement for the present Session!

My little domestic landscape begins to look brighter at last. Caroline is very much better – able to walk out, [del] and beginning to show some faint signs of colour in her cheeks. She wants to be at home again (how like cats women are!) – and bids me to tell you with her kind regards that she wishes she was pouring you out a glass of dry Sherry on a nice gloomy English Sunday afternoon. Caroline Junior has had a dirty tongue – but we threw in a little pill and fired off a small explosion of Gregory's powder – and she is /now/ in higher spirits than ever, and astonishes the Roman public by her essentially British plumpness of her cheeks and calves. As for me, I go on thriving in the cold – and I am at work again constructing my story. If I know anything about it, I have got a fine subject this time – something entirely new at any rate. And so The Times is beginning to pat me on the back – is it?<sup>5</sup> Well, we shall see what they say to my next book if ~~they live to~~ I live to write it!

I encountered the Pope yesterday, in the Trastevere on the other side of the Tiber in a street about the width of Cranbourn Alley. An outrider in green came clattering by to drive all vehicles out of the way, or the state coach could not have got by at all. He was followed by a fat member of the Guardia Nobile, with his legs almost bursting out of his blue breeches, and his cheeks quivering like jelly as the horse shook him in the saddle. Then two dragoons – then the state Coach, an amazing vehicle of the period of two hundred years since – the Pope smiling at the window with the most perfect good humour, and comforting himself with a pinch of snuff. I had just closed my own box – and I felt a sympathy with his Holiness which no words can describe.

How you would enjoy this place! Can't you get sent on some commercial mission while I am here? The same day I saw the Pope, I saw a church founded in the year 224 (what do you think of that for antiquity?) – with splendidly preserved Mosaic pictures six hundred years old – and with the stone /exhibited/ (a spanker, I can tell you!) that was hung round the neck of St Calixtus before the Pagans pitched him head [del] foremost into a well.<sup>6</sup> The Columns of the church were of red granite from an old Temple, and the ceiling of gold was designed by Domenichino. It was /a/ dim and solitary – a mysterious awful and ancient place. I said to myself, “if Ward was here, I should never get him out again.”

I was shocked by coming suddenly on the news of Thackeray’s death in Galignani. It is a terrible loss. We can only remember, as some consolation now, that he lived long enough to do the work of a great writer, and to leave to his children and his country a great name.

Today’s post brought me also a letter from Nidecker’s brother saying he had heard of the death through “Messrs Coutts”, and thanking /me/ for what I did to try and comfort and save the dead man. I am glad to have got the letter and to know that his nearest relative approves of my conduct.<sup>7</sup> The rest is now in the hands of the Swiss Consul, to whom the brother has communicated through the Swiss Confederation.

The note below, is only a line to my mother to tell her, on second thoughts, that she had better send her next letter here, instead of to Florence as I had told her in my last.<sup>8</sup> Since I wrote, I have found so much to do in sketching the outline of my book, that I doubt whether I shall have done in time to go to Florence as early as I had planned. If there is any serious change in the weather to drive me /away/ (of which there is no prospect at present) the landlord here will forward all my letters. So write to this address till further notice – and cut off and enclose the scrap below to my mother, or ask one of the girls to do it if you are busy. My love to them, and to their mother. No other commissions for you but this.

Ever yours WC

-
1. Written on very thin blue onionskin paper.
  2. The phrase ‘second letter of credit’ refers to the fact that such instruments were sent separately in two halves for security reasons; the sum WC had access to this time was thus £500 rather than £1000. However, WC had had access to credit before this date as at least three entries in his account indicate. Letters of Credit specified the towns and banks where money could be obtained in local currency – see Galton’s Guide to the Unprotected, pp. 59–61. Several sums paid to names that could refer to foreign banks are recorded over the following weeks including: Fr Safesse, £80 on 21 March, Fenzi & Co £150 on 31 March, and Detta Co £250 on 5 April (Coutts: WC).
  3. English bank in Rome, situated near the Scalinata di Trinità dei Monti (Spanish Steps), to which a payment of £40 is recorded on 10 January, presumably for cash against WC’s existing credit.
  4. Presumably referring to Henry Poole & Co., tailors of 4 Old Burlington St and 32 Savile Row, Piccadilly (Kelly’s Post Office Directory, 1862, 1864), to whom WC’s bank account shows him making five payments between 1862 and 1865, including one for £15-8s-6d on 8 January 1864 (Coutts: WC).
  5. Presumably referring to the joint review of Reade’s Hard Cash and Braddon’s Miss Marchmont, ‘Novels in Season’, Times (2 January 1864) p. 6b-d, which commented that, ‘The novels of the so-called sensation school all want the gloss and bloom which thought imparts to a narrative, and we cannot say that Miss Braddon is in this point better than Mr. Wilkie Collins, the acknowledged chief of the school.’
  6. At this point, WC draws a horizontal line across the leaf and writes ‘see over’ within a loop, continuing on the verso. The rest of the page (around one quarter of the area) is neatly cut away, though none of the text of the letter is missing. The piece cut away is also found at Morgan, and constitutes [0567] to HC, 14 January 1864.
  7. On the death of WC’s travelling-servant Nidecker, see [0565] to HC, 8 January 1864.
  8. See [0567] to HC, 14 January 1864.

[0567] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 14 JANUARY 1864

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/81).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, p. 244. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 313.

Hotel des Iles Britanniques | Rome | Janry 14th 1864

My dear Mother,

Only a line to say that on second thoughts I think you had better continue to write to me here. I doubt if I shall lay the foundation of my new book – a very difficult job this time – soon enough to leave for Florence this month. The bright cold weather continues – and I go on getting steadily stronger. So consider my departure put off for the present. If any serious change in the weather does drive me away, the landlord here will carefully forward all my letters. But while the dry air lasts I shall stick to Rome. No other news.

Love to Charley. Ever your affly
WC

---

1. A small strip of paper neatly cut from the foot of [0566] to Charles Ward of the same date.

[0568] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 27 FEBRUARY 1864

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/88), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 313.

Mrs Collins | care of Mr Wells | Bentham Hill Cottage
Tunbridge Wells | England | Inghilterra

---

1. Postmarked 'FIRENZE | 27 | FEB' with no clear indication of the year, but clearly endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE WELLS | A | MR 2 | 64'. At Morgan the envelope is found with [0625] to HC, 27 February 1865.

[3316] TO DOCTOR [RICHARD] DEAKIN,<sup>1</sup> FEBRUARY 1864

MS: Unknown. On sale: Houle Rare Books & Autographs, California (September 2017, inventory #224949, <https://www.abaa.org/book/257274449>).<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C11, p. 7.

Rome
February, 1864

To Doctor Deakin
from Wilkie Collins

---

1. Given the name and location, presumed to be Richard Deakin M.D. (1818–1873), physician and botanist, whose best-known work was Flora of the Colosseum of Rome (London: Groombridge, 1855).
2. According to the bookseller, who provides the transcription and confirms that the name is 'Deakin' (rather than 'Deakins' as initially suggested), this is an inscription on the half-title page of the first one-volume edition of The Woman in White (London: Sampson Low, 1861).

[0569] TO W. S. EMDEN, 28 MARCH 1864

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, I, p. 314.

12. Harley Street, W. | 28th March 1864

My dear Sir,

I have only just got back from abroad,<sup>1</sup> and have found your kind letter waiting for me.

The change has, I am glad to say, certainly done me good – but I am not yet in such “good working order” as I could wish to be. With the doctors warning me to be careful how I use my pen too freely at first – and with my publishers waiting for a novel which I promised them two years since<sup>2</sup> – I am afraid there is no chance at present of my being of use to the Theatre. But I will not forget your letter, and I will hope sooner or later for a chance of being of some service to you.

I saw the Ticket of Leave Man before I left England<sup>3</sup> – and I heartily congratulate you on a success which the Theatre has thoroughly deserved.

The piece was played by everyone concerned in it with an artist-like finish and completely delightful to see.

Believe me | very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

W.S. Emden Esqre

---

1. From the Italian expedition with Caroline and her daughter which had begun on 3 October 1863; WC withdrew £10 in cash from his bank two days later on 30 March (Coultts: WC).
2. Armada, beginning in the Cornhill in November 1864.

3. Tom Taylor's adaptation from the French, The Ticket of Leave Man, opened at the Olympic on 27 May 1863 and proved one of the most perennially popular of Victorian dramas (Nicoll, II, p. 593).

[0570] TO COUTTS & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 28 MARCH 1864

MS: Coutts (20291/4).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 314.

London 28th March 1864

Mess<sup>rs</sup> Coutts & C<sup>o</sup>

I request you will be good enough to pay my Income Tax under Schedule D as it may become due from time to time upon the application of the Collector.<sup>3</sup>

[stamp]<sup>4</sup> Wilkie Collins

-
1. The first extant letter to WC's bankers at the western end of the Strand.
  2. Written in a secretarial hand on a paper slip and signed by WC. Like others found in the Coutts archives, the MS is marked by the bank for filing purposes; here: 'Wilkie Collins Esq' and 'Put in L/CB<sup>k</sup> fo 213'.
  3. Schedule D included profits and would have covered all WC's net income from writing. In fact he paid his first income tax of £21-7s-6d on 10 January 1864, and this new permission seems simply to have authorised his bank to pay the tax in future without further consultation (Coutts: WC). See [0950] to Charles Ward of 19 January 1870.
  4. A mauve penny postage stamp endorsed 'WC | 28/3 | '64'.

[0571] TO ERNST BENZON,<sup>1</sup> 4 APRIL 1864

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 315.

12. Harley Street. W. | April 4th 1864

My dear Mr Benzon,

I gladly accept your kind invitation for Thursday next at seven. Tonight unluckily I am already engaged to dinner. Your note found me just writing to Lehmann to say that Thursday was my only disengaged evening this week – and to ask if we could not meet on that night! I will now add a postscript to say that I am engaged to you.

I tried hard to get to Kensington Palace Gardens yesterday<sup>2</sup> – but the time failed me, or rather the terrible London distances were not to be conquered. Pray accept my apologies for tonight and believe me

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Edmund Ernst Leopold Schlesinger Benzon (d. 1873), the husband of Elizabeth Benzon née Lehmann. He was the successful manager of the American affairs of the engineering and bell-making firm of Naylor Vickers. Benzon brought his brother-in-law, Fred Lehmann, into partnership with the Vickers family and he and Lehmann worked in Liverpool in 1853, subsequently moving to Sheffield and then to London in 1858 to develop the firm's City office. The firm became Vickers, Sons and Co. Ltd in 1867.
  2. The Benzons lived at 10 Kensington Palace Gardens – see [0459] to Elizabeth Benzon of 19 February 1862.

[0572] TO GEORGE RUSSELL,<sup>1</sup> 4 APRIL 1864<sup>2</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 315–316 (as to George [Russell]); Lewis website.

12. Harley Street. W. | Monday. April 4th

My dear George,

Dickens's answer has just reached me.<sup>3</sup> We meet at my rooms here, at three o'clock, on Friday next.

I forgot to tell you that the Shakespeare Dinner is put off till the new house is ready.<sup>4</sup> What on earth will they do next?

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The recipient must again be George Russell, third son of Sir Henry Russell, Baronet of Swallowfield (see [0470] to him of 6 May 1862). Russell became acquainted around this time with CD, who supported his proposals to reform the Garrick Club (Pilgrim, X, p. xi).
2. Dating from the address and the calendar.
3. The letter is not found in Pilgrim and remains untraced.
4. Referring to the annual event on or around Shakespeare's birthday (23 April) at the Garrick Club, of which CD, WC and Russell were all members at this time. The Club was moving from its old premises at 35 King Street to a new building at 15 Garrick Street, but the work was delayed and in the end the Club did not move until 4 July 1864 (see the Illustrated London News, 16 July 1864, and R. A. Hough, The Ace of Clubs: A History of the Garrick (London: Deutsch, 1986), p. 25). As a result of the dinner being put off, WC, CD, John Forster and Robert Browning went out of town to celebrate the anniversary. See CD to Frith, 13 April 1864, Pilgrim, X, p. 381.

[0573] TO FREDERIC OUVRY,<sup>1</sup> 4 APRIL 1864

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins).<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, pp. 85–86; BGLL, I, pp. 316–317.

12. Harley Street, W. | April 4th 1864

My dear Ouvry,

I return the License (having taken a copy of the wording for my own private information) – with my best thanks for your kindness in trusting me with the document.<sup>3</sup> The Story now simmering in my head requires me to be accurately right about the form used in the “Description” of the contracting parties<sup>4</sup> – and the first time I have the pleasure of seeing you, I suspect you will be persecuted by questions relating to the description attached to your name and to Mrs Ouvry's in the License. Did you (I ask myself in despair) live in the “District of All Saints Paddington” at the time, when you applied for the License – or did you intend to live there after your marriage? – or were you born there? And why (I add, with both hands entangled madly in my hair) do I find (the bridegroom being described as living in one parish), the bride described, in defiance of the laws of Time and Space, as living in two Parishes at once? Never let your good nature tempt you again into helping a literary man to write his book. You never get rid of him afterwards – and the more you grant, the more the ungrateful wretch asks, at the first available opportunity.

I think I have discovered the meaning of The Archbishop's Seal – which dangles at the end of the license and looks, to my perverted imagination, good to eat. Is not the Brazen Serpent typical of the happy mixture of audacity and cunning by which “Manners Sutton” contrives to get such a very large Income as Seven thousand a year, out of such a very small capital to trade on as the “Reasonable Desires” of his fellow creatures?<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours, | Wilkie Collins

Frederic Ouvry Esqre

---

1. Frederic Ouvry (1814–81), from 1837 partner in the law firm of Robinson, King, and Ouvry. Ouvry was CD's solicitor – see Pilgrim, VII, p. 273 n.1.

2. A signed envelope, unstamped and unpostmarked, directed to ‘Frederick Ouvry Esqre | 66. Lincoln's Inn Fields | W.C.’, was auctioned to an unknown owner on eBay, August 2004. The envelope is likely to be associated with either this letter or that of the following day [0575].

3. Ouvry himself must have been married without banns by Special License and has lent WC his own marriage document in response to a request for help with the intricacies of English marriage law.

4. See the conversations between Allan and Neelie in Armada, Book Third, ch. 11, ‘Love and Law’.

5. Marriage by Special License occurs when special authority for a wedding to take place without banns is issued by the Office of the Archbishop of Canterbury in London, in the form of a document which is sealed with the official seal of the Archbishop. This seal combines images of Christ crucified and a brass serpent suspended from the Cross, embodying the words of Jesus in John 3:14–15, ‘as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so must the Son of man be lifted up’ (AV). The aristocratic Right Reverend Charles Manners-Sutton (1755–1828: ODNB) was Archbishop of Canterbury from 1805 to his death. The heir at this point was his grandson Charles John Manners-Sutton (1812–69), the second Viscount Canterbury. Though WC's specific purpose in mentioning Manners-Sutton at this point is not entirely clear, he seems generally to be mocking the extremely large income which the lords spiritual make from leading a Church dedicated to serving ‘the poor in heart’.

[0574] TO CHARLES WARD, 5 APRIL 1864

MS: Harrowby (ff. 350–1). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 317–318.

12, Harley Street W | April 5th 1864

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for the second certificate – it is exactly what I wanted and what, so far as I can now tell, will exactly fit my story. I ought to have told you last night that Ouvry not only sent me the License (which I have copied and returned to him) but also kindly wrote me a letter of explanation on a point which was not quite clear to me.<sup>1</sup> I am now armed with my information on this marriage business, at all points – so thank you again.

I saw Miss Bailey<sup>2</sup> safe home to her own door after that pleasant evening – and then walked in defiance of the rain as long as my feet would hold out.

I am glad Charley is coming back. I told my mother (in a letter) you were kindly going to try Walter<sup>3</sup> – because I knew she would be glad to hear that the attempt at least was made.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. See [0573] to Frederic Ouvry of the previous day.

2. Unidentified, though see the reference to Bailey in [0194] to Edward Pigott of 3 February 1855, and [0643] to George Bailey and John Grant of 21 June 1865.

3. Perhaps referring to John Walter II, proprietor of the Times, concerning a possible approach by Ward to request a review of CAC's novel The Bar Sinister in his newspaper. See [0576] to HC, 20 April 1864.

[0575] TO FREDERIC OUVRY, 5 APRIL 1864

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 87; BGLL, I, p. 318.

12, Harley Street, W. | 5th April 1864

My dear Ouvry,

My best thanks to you for lighting me out of the fog. The lady and gentleman whose marriage I am contemplating, have both arrived in London and lived in the parish of London in which the marriage is to be celebrated, three weeks before the License is applied for and the ceremony performed. Under these circumstances (thanks to your letter) I now know I can do exactly what, in the interests of the story, I wanted to do – viz.: Let them be both described in the License as of the London parish in which they have been living for the fifteen preliminary days and more. Total absence of any official or other reference in the License to the Bridegroom's place of residence in the country, previous to his three weeks ante-nuptial sojourn in London, is one of the imperative necessities of the story – and this I now understand to be provided for (in the case supposed) by the law as it stands, and the custom as it obtains. What I want him to do in the book, is what he would do (in this matter of “describing” himself) under the fostering care of Doctors Commons in real life.<sup>1</sup> This is a great relief, and again I say – with the sentinel in Hamlet – “much thanks.”<sup>2</sup> There is no other point I need trouble you about. Both the contracting parties are of age – and there are no impediments of any sort or kind to their lawful marriage.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Frederic Ouvry Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. Again see the discussions about marriage by special license between Allan and Neelie in Armada. Doctors Commons was the area close to St Paul's Churchyard which gave its name to the society of ecclesiastical lawyers responsible for administering canon law, which was disbanded by the Court of Probate Act of 1857. The institution had been mocked in 1850 by CD in David Copperfield.

2. ‘For this relief much thanks’ – Francisco in Hamlet, I.i.8.

[0576] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 20 APRIL 1864

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, pp. 246–247. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 319–320.

12. Harley St. W. | April 20th 1864

My dear Mother,

I was very glad to get your letter – and to hear that the Influenza had come and gone. I believe you may thank your pure dry air for its going.

As for me, I have waited to write until I had actually begun. After much pondering over the construction of the story, I positively sat down with a clean sheet of paper before me, and began to write it on Monday last.<sup>2</sup> So far my progress is slow and hesitating enough – not for want of knowing what I have to do, but for want of practice. After a year and a half of total literary abstinence, it is not wonderful that my hand should be out. Patience and time will I hope soon give me back my old dexterity – and meanwhile it is something to have begun.

I am going to drop the dinners gradually. Talking of dinners, there is one I can't drop, which you may like to hear of. The Royal Academy have woke up at last to the knowledge that your eldest son is a literary man – and have asked him to their Grand Dinner this year.<sup>3</sup> I shall go some hours before the time – and see the Exhibition, with no crowd in the way.

Charley I saw last night – and thought him looking better, though he is still a little troubled by his cough. They have had visitors to see the house, but no formal proposals to take it yet.<sup>4</sup> I have read Charley's book – and have really liked it.<sup>5</sup> There are excellent things in it – I hope and trust the sale will encourage him to go on, and do better still. When I next see Mr Smith I will ask about the sale. I sent you a very fair notice in a rising paper called "The Reader" – and Ward has sent you another in "The London Review".<sup>6</sup>

Write again soon. My kind remembrances to Rosa, if she is still with you.<sup>7</sup> Henry Bullar talks of coming with me the next time I pay you a visit.

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | care of Mr Wells | Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells', postmarked as dated.

2. Referring to Armada.

3. On the afternoon of Saturday 30 April. See the lengthy report in the Times, 2 May 1864, p. 8a–d. CD, Trollope and Disraeli were also present, and John Forster gave a speech in which he spoke in praise of 'that son of a former member of this Academy, who, claiming to be remembered for "No Name," has here a special title to remembrance in right of two of the greatest names familiar to these walls'.

4. Perhaps the Collins family home in Clarence Terrace, near Regents Park.

5. The Bar Sinister: A Tale (2 vols, London: Smith Elder, 1864).

6. Substantial and generally positive reviews of The Bar Sinister appeared on 16 April 1864 in both the Reader (pp. 483–484) and the London Review (p. 421). Both were short-lived literary weeklies: the Reader ran from 1863–7, while the London Review ran from 1860–9 before being incorporated into the Examiner (see Waterloo).

7. John Bullar Jr's 'bright, independent-minded wife, Rosa, who became a good friend of Harriet' (see Lycett, p. 56).

[0577] TO W. WHITAKER COLLINS,<sup>1</sup> 20 APRIL 1864

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 88; BGLL, I, p. 320.

12. Harley Street. W. | 20th April 1864

My dear Mr Collins,

Pray accept my thanks for your kindness in sending me my letter. Nothing is so impenetrable as stupidity – and I begin to despair of our ever persuading certain people that we are two Mr Collinses, and not one.

I have just got back from a six months tour in Italy, undertaken – and successfully I am glad to say – with the object of shaking off a severe attack of rheumatic gout.

Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

To / | W. Whitaker Collins Esqre

---

1. William Whitaker Collins (born c.1817) was a widowed civil engineer (Census 1861), who shared with WC the name W. W. Collins. The letter indicates this was not the first time he had redirected wrongly delivered letters.

2. Directed to 'W. Whitaker Collins Esqre | 2. Hereford Square | Brompton | S.W.', postmarked as dated.

[0578] TO ROUTLEDGE, WARNE & ROUTLEDGE, 21 APRIL 1864

MS: Unknown. Facsimile: Robinson 1951, p. 181, our copy text. Published: BGLL, I, p. 320.

12. Harley Street. W. | 21st April 1864

Gentlemen,

On the other side, I return you the notice of my life for the new edition of “Men of the Time”.<sup>1</sup> I have made certain alterations and additions – but by removing two sentences at the end (which it is not absolutely necessary to retain) I have avoided increasing the length of the notice, while I have I hope added to its fulness and accuracy.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To / | Messrs Routledge Warne & Routledge

---

1. The seventh edition of Routledge’s biographical dictionary, Men of the Time: A Dictionary of Contemporaries, was published in 1867. WC had insisted that his entry be rewritten for the 1862 edition – see [0411] to Edward Walford, 17 April 1861.

[0579] TO FANNY MITCHELL, [APRIL 1864]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, I, p. 321.

12. Harley Street. W. | Friday

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I need so much of your indulgence already for not having called before this in Great Stanhope Street, that I am really ashamed to ask for more indulgence still now I have received your kind letter. But the truth is that, though I have got great advantage from my residence in Italy, I have not succeeded in entirely parting company with my old enemy. Threatenings of gout have been showing themselves lately in one of my feet – and the doctor has issued his edict forbidding me to dine out for the present. He has no fear of my being confined to the house again, and he encourages me to walk as ~~long~~ much as I can. But he condemns me to a system of diet too merciless to be submitted to the compassionate observation of my friends, until a certain threatening blush in my foot has taken its departure. Pray forgive me once more. I shall be able to call I hope in a few days – carefully choosing my time after the luncheon hour.

Meanwhile, with my kindest remembrances to Mr Mitchell,

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the address, plus the recent return from Italy. See [0576] to HC, 20 April 1864, concerning giving up dining out.

[3153] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, 4 MAY 1864

MS: Massachusetts HS (Theodore F. Dwight Papers, Box 2). Published: A&C6, p. 8.

12. Harley Street. W | May 4th 1864

Dear Lord Houghton,<sup>1</sup>

One line to excuse my absence today – after accepting your kind invitation. My native land has welcomed me back by giving me a bad cold in my throat and chest – and I am forbidden to go out today, except under the penalty of making bad, worse.<sup>2</sup>

Pray present my excuses to Lady Houghton until I can call – I hope in a few days – and offer them for myself.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
The Rt Honble | Lord Houghton

---

1. Richard Monckton Milnes was created Baron Houghton on 20 August 1863 (ODNB).

2. In fact WC had returned from six months in Italy towards the end of March – see [0569] to W. S. Emden, 28 March 1864.

[0580] TO [JOHN] WATKINS,<sup>1</sup> 4 MAY 1864

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 321–322.

12. Harley Street. W. | May 4th 1864

Dear Mr Watkins,

The weather will apologise for my absence – and I need say nothing of a bad cold which makes me anything but a good subject for Photography this morning.

Towards the latter part of this month, I shall be in town with – what I have not got now – a clear morning to place at your disposal. I will write again to appoint a day – on the understanding next time, that we try morning after morning till the weather is weary of persecuting us.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Probably John Watkins, the photographer of Parliament Street (see [0454] to him of 28 January 1862), though it might also be his namesake Herbert Watkins, photographer of Regent Street to whom WC seems to have last written in [0423] of 12 June 1861.

2. Photographic plates were still relatively slow and good external light conditions were necessary for a successful session. Photographers often erected glass towers above their premises to catch the necessary daylight.

[3027] TO GEORGE SMITH, 11 MAY 1864

MS: NLS (Smith, Elder Archive, MS. 43104). Published: A&C3, p. 40.

12. Harley Street. W. | 11th May 1864

My dear Smith,

I enclose a letter & poem from a namesake of mine (whom I don't know from Adam) who addresses me as Editor of the Cornhill Magazine. I have merely written back to dissipate his delusion, and to say that I have returned his contributions to Messrs Smith & Elder.<sup>1</sup>

The infernal East Wind has given me a bad cough and cold – but I am at work in spite of it, and am getting towards the close of the first monthly number of the new story. It is slow work at first – for the form is new to me, and I feel my long want of practice with the pen.<sup>2</sup> But I am steadily “under weigh” and I feel myself getting into better and better working order. As soon as the number is done, you shall have it.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – Here is a petition. You kindly offered me, a few copies of the Library Edition of After Dark (to range with Low's editions) some little time since. I am making up, and am going to have half bound, on a plan of my own, four sets of my complete novels for presents to certain old friends – and if you will help me with four copies in the matter of “After Dark”, the series will be complete.<sup>3</sup>

1. The Collins in question remains unidentified. At this time George Smith was one of the editors of the Cornhill.
2. The first part of Armadale, serialised in the Cornhill in November 1864. Since WC's previous serial novels had appeared in CD's weeklies, he had not written in monthly numbers before; moreover, he had not written for some time after a lengthy period convalescing on the Continent.
3. For later requests by WC concerning specially bound sets, see [1329] to Smith of 5 May 1873, and [1636] to Andrew Chatto of 4 July 1876.

[3317] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 14 MAY 1864

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (25 September 2017, #33238974937, George Houle). Published: A&C11, p. 8.

May 14th 1864

Very sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins

1. From the format, a note for an autograph hunter. The date is written below the valediction with a diagonal line drawn across the bottom right-hand corner.

[3205] TO MICHAEL T. BASS,<sup>1</sup> MID MAY–EARLY JUNE 1864<sup>2</sup>

MS: Unknown. Published: Bass, pp. 41–42, our copy text. Reprinted: the Musical World (16 July 1864) p. 451; Pilgrim, X, pp. 38–39; A&C8, pp. 7–9.

Sir,

Your undersigned correspondents are desirous to offer you their hearty thanks for your introduction into the House of Commons of a Bill for the Suppression of Street Music;<sup>3</sup> and they beg to assure you that, in the various ways open to them, they will, out of Parliament, do their utmost to support you in your endeavour to abolish that intolerable nuisance.<sup>4</sup>

Your correspondents are, all, professors and practitioners of one or other of the arts or sciences. In their devotion to their pursuits—tending to the peace and comfort of mankind—they are daily interrupted, harassed, worried, wearied, driven nearly mad, by street musicians. They are even made especial objects of persecution by brazen performers on brazen instruments, beaters of drums, grinders of organs, bangers of banjos, clashers of cymbals, worriers of fiddles, and bellowers of ballads; for, no sooner does it become known to those producers of horrible sounds that any of your correspondents have particular need of quiet in their own houses, than the said houses are beleaguered by discordant hosts seeking to be bought off.

Your correspondents represent to you that these pecuniary speculations in the misery they endure are far more destructive to their spirits than their pockets; and that some of them, not absolutely tied to London by their avocations, have actually fled into the country for refuge from this unmerited persecution – which is none the less grievous or hard to bear, because it is absurd.

Your grateful correspondents take the liberty to suggest to you that, although a Parliamentary debate undoubtedly requires great delicacy in the handling, their avocations require at least as much, and that it would highly conduce towards the success of your proposed enactments, if you prevail on its opponents to consent to state their objections to it, assailed on all sides by the frightful noises in despite of which your correspondents have to gain their bread.

(Signed): – Charles Dickens. | Alfred Tennyson. | John Everett Millais. | Francis Grant. | John Forster. | J.R. Herbert. | John Leech. | W. Holman Hunt. | Wilkie Collins. | J.E. Horsley. | W.P. Firth [sic for 'Frith']. | F. Seymour Haden. | R. Doyle. | T. Carlyle. | Alfred Wigan. | W. Boxall. | George Jones. | Alfred Elmore. | Thomas Faed. | John Phillips. | Thomas Creswick. | James Sant. | E.M. Barry. | J.H. Robinson. | S. Cousins. | L. Stocks. | W.C. Dobson. | Thomas Woolner.<sup>5</sup>

1. Michael Thomas Bass (1799–1884; ODNB), wealthy brewer, grandson of William Bass, founder of the brewing firm in Burton, Derbyshire. Michael T. Bass was a philanthropist, and served as Liberal MP for Derby, 1848–83. On his campaign to suppress street musicians as public nuisances, see: John M. Picker 'The Soundproof Study: Victorian Professionals, Work Space, and Urban Noise', Victorian Studies, 42:3 (Spring 2000), pp. 427–45; and the same author's

Victorian Soundscapes (Oxford: Oxford UP, 2003), ch. 2.

2. As reprinted in Street Music in the Metropolis, the letter carries no date; most of the thirty or so other letters of support included in Bass's book (in Chapter II. Sufferers from Street Music, pp. 6–43) are dated and range from 4 May to 14 July. Pilgrim dates the letter 'Early May', but this seems to us rather early given the time necessary to organize a letter with more than two dozen signatories. When Dickens wrote to John Leech on 16 May (Pilgrim, X, p. 396) it seems likely that the letter had not yet been sent to Bass, yet when he wrote to J.E. Horsley on 10 June (Pilgrim, X, pp. 403–404) it seems clear that the letter had already been received by Bass.

3. Bass's Street Music (Metropolis) Bill, 27 & 28 Victoria c. 55, was introduced on 3 May 1864, had its third reading on 18 July, and received Royal Assent on 25 July.

4. One notable gesture of support by Dickens was the inclusion of the satirical piece, 'The Battle of the Barrels' by Andrew Halliday in All the Year Round (11 June 1864), pp. 421–424. Bass, p. 40, himself refers to the letter headed by the signature of Dickens as one 'which cannot fail to have the greatest weight and authority', and adds, 'I only hope that I may have an opportunity of reading it to the House of Commons'.

5. Though the letter seems to have been drafted by Dickens himself, it was presumably signed by each of the other twenty-seven correspondents, since, in the version appearing in Bass's book, only twelve of the names are accompanied by an address. WC's personal animosity towards the nuisance of street music was perhaps first articulated in 'Sea Breezes with the London Smack', Household Words (4 September 1858), pp. 244–247, where it was referred to as 'those hateful London tunes' performed by the 'musical foreign invader'. See also [0437] to Charles Ward, 26 August 1861: 'The noises, indoors and out, of this otherwise delightful place (comprising children by hundreds under the windows, and a brass band hired by the proprietor to play regularly four hours a day for the benefit of his visitors) are keeping me back so seriously with my work, that I must either leave Whitby or lose time'.

[0581] TO FANNY MITCHELL, 6 JUNE 1864

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, I, p. 322.

12. Harley Street. W. | June 6th 1864

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I shall be delighted to accept your kind invitation for Wednesday next, the 8th, at 8 o'clock. My best thanks for your kind readiness to humour my "infirmities" – but (unless some new malady finds me out between this and Wednesday) I hope I shall be able to enjoy a very fair share for an invalid of all the good things on your table. The gout and I have parted company again, for the present – and the doctor's muzzle is removed from my mouth, under protest.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[3206] TO GEORGE RUSSELL, 6 JUNE 1864

MS: Unknown. On sale: Woolley & Wallis, Salisbury, UK (12 December 2012), lot 54, in an album of letters to Sir George Russell, p. 47. Published: A&C8, p. 9.

12. Harley Street. W.
June 6th 1864

My dear George,

Many thanks for your note. I am surprised at nothing which is done by these two gentlemen – or by a good many others of a like way of thinking. When you see your way to a certain means of smashing the Club to atoms, let me know and I will help you. In the meantime, I leave the little puddle in King Street to stink without any further stirring on my part.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The two gentlemen are unidentified but WC was in a long dispute over the Garrick Club constitution. The club was due to move from 35 King Street to new premises at 15 Garrick Street but the move was delayed, finally happening on 4 July. See [0572] to Russell, 4 April 1864.

[0582] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 11 JUNE 1864

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/82), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 322–323.

12. Harley Street. W. | June 11th 1864

My dear Mother,

I send you four autographs on the other leaf – and I enclose two photographs (done by another photographer), which seem to me to be the best likenesses yet produced of me.<sup>2</sup>

Make yourself easy about the yacht – there is no chance of my being able even to think of it for a year yet. Also, the carpets and curtains are given up – for I am not sure whether I shall not move away into suburban London before another year is over my head.

I am getting on smoothly with No 2. It turns out (from the experience of printing No 1 that I shall not have anything like so much to write each month as I supposed. Two weekly parts in All The Year Round – will be enough for the “Cornhill” monthly portion. Mr Smith is very much pleased with the first part,<sup>3</sup> so things look well enough to begin with.

I am glad to hear John Bullar is better. I have no news from Charley. It was sciatica that pain I had, when I was with you. A couple of pills and one dose of quinine, cured it. No Colchicum.<sup>4</sup>

Yours ever affly | WC

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Mr Wells | Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked as dated.
  2. The second leaf containing the autographs has been cut away unevenly and the photographs are not found with letter. The photographs in question were possibly those taken by John Watkins – see [0580] to him of 4 May 1864.
  3. George Smith, of Smith, Elder.
  4. An extract of meadow-saffron which was then the standard remedy for gout, which Peters describes as ‘an effective drug, but one with the unpleasant side effects of nausea and vomiting’ (p. 258).

[0583] TO COUTTS & Co., 20 JUNE 1864

MS: Coutts (20291/1). Published: BGLL, I, p. 323.

12. Harley Street | London | June 20th 1864

Gentlemen,

I shall be obliged if you will pay, on my account, the sum of two hundred and sixty four francs (French money) to Monsieur F. Bourgeois, 50 Rue Napoléon, Boulogne-sur-Mer.<sup>1</sup>

I remain, Gentlemen, | your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins
To Messrs Coutts & Co.

-
1. . The purpose of the expenditure remains unidentified – though WC probably passed through Boulogne on his return from Italy in March 1864. On 28 June 1864 a payment to ‘F Bourgeois Rcd’ is recorded in his account – for £10-10s-9d which is the appropriate amount for 264 francs (Coutts: WC).

[0584] TO FANNY MITCHELL, 23 JUNE 1864<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, I, p. 323.

12. Harley Street. W. | Thursday June 23rd

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I very gladly accept your kind invitation for Monday next the 27th at 8 o’Clock punctually
Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Dating from the address and calendar.

[0585] TO HENRY H. PEMROSE,<sup>1</sup> 28 JUNE 1864

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 323–324.

12. Harley Street. W. | June 28th 1864

Sir,

I have great pleasure in writing these lines, and in so complying with the request for my Autograph which you have honoured me by making

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Henry H. Pemrose Esq

---

1. Unidentified.

[0586] TO MRS CAMPBELL,<sup>1</sup> 1 JULY 1864

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 324.

12. Harley Street. W. | July 1st 1864

My dear Mrs Campbell

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter and invitation. I am unluckily engaged to go out of town – and I can only ask you to receive my apologies, until I can call in Princes Terrace and make my excuses in person.

I am very sorry you should have had so much trouble in finding me out. My life in London, ever since my illness took me abroad a year since, has been very much the life of a sort of town-gipse, “here today and gone tomorrow” – and I have been particularly unlucky with Directories. The Blue Book has put down my landlord and has left me out, and the Red Book has attached me to the wrong number.<sup>2</sup>

With many thanks again | Believe me

Yours most truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. This is probably Maria Campbell née Stone, wife of William George Campbell (c. 1810–81, Times obituary, 16 June 1881, p. 10e), resident of 12 Prince’s Terrace, Knightsbridge (London Post Office Directory, 1865), who was on the Lunacy Commission with Bryan Waller Procter from 1845 (see [0366] to Anne Benson Procter, 8 August 1860).

2. Referring to the London society directories Gardiner’s Royal Blue Book and Webster’s Royal Red Book.

[0587] TO COUTTS & Co., 11 JULY 1864

MS: Coutts (20291/2). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 324–325.

12. Harley Street | London. W. | 11th July 1864

Gentlemen,

You will oblige me by paying from my account to the account of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, at the London & Westminster Bank, the sum of Fourteen Guineas, – being my entrance money and first annual subscription as a member of that Club.<sup>1</sup>

I shall also be obliged if you will continue to pay the future annual subscriptions of Four Guineas, on my account, as they fall due – until further notice.

I remain, Gentlemen, | your obedient servant,

Wilkie Collins | [stamp]<sup>2</sup>

To Messrs Coutts & Co

---

1. Referring to the prestigious racing club at Ryde, Isle of Wight, founded in 1845. The payment of £14-14s to the Club is recorded in WC’s account the next day, 12 July. The last annual payment to the club of £4-4s was on 1 January 1877 (Coutts: WC).

2. Endorsed ‘W C | 11/7/64’.

[3280] WILLIS & SOTHERAN,<sup>1</sup> 19 JULY 1864

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay, January 2016 (#141882441709, keithhartwell@blueyonder.co.uk). Published: A&C10, p. 7.

12 Harley Street. W
July 19th 1864

Dear Sirs,

I enclose a cheque for the amount of my account.<sup>2</sup> Please return me the bill receipted.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Willis & Sotheran

---

1. Bookdealers of Covent Garden and Charing Cross.

2. A cheque to Willis & Co for £10-3s was debited to WC's account on 21 July 1864 (Coutts: WC).

[0588] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 19 JULY 1864

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/83), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 247–248. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 325.

12. Harley Street. W. | July 19th 1864

My dear Mother,

It is all very well for you to talk of heat – but if you only felt the difference between Tunbridge and London! I am writing in a profuse perspiration, with the window wide open, and without an idea in my head. What have I done since [del] we went to Hastings? Well – I came back to a heap of dinners – the last of the season. Also, to a proof of my second number which I had to pull to pieces again – and which it took me two days to set right. Next came number 3, which I am nearly half way through already. When it is done, I go to Norfolk to study for number 4.<sup>2</sup> Piggott and Charles Ward go with me, and we shall get some sailing. Then I go for a day or two to Lord Houghton's in Yorkshire – then come back to some /quiet/ seaside place (if there is such a thing to be found) on the East Coast to go on with my work. And these are my plans, so far as I know them. I shall try hard to get a day with you before I go to Norfolk – but I can't tell yet when I shall have done the number. You shall hear when I am near the end of it.

I met the Dickenses on Saturday at Wills's – and Miss Hogarth told me Charley was [del] certainly better for his stay at Gadshill.<sup>3</sup>

[del] Danger in railways from murdering men is nothing – if you don't carry a banker's bag.<sup>4</sup> But danger from virtuous single ladies whose character is “dearer to them than their lives”, is serious. I won't travel alone with a woman – I promise you that. “The British female” – judging by her recent appearances in the newspapers – is as full of “snares” as Solomon's “Strange Women”<sup>5</sup> – a mixture of perjury and prudery, cant and crinoline – from whom (when we travel in railways) may the ~~L~~ Guard deliver us!<sup>6</sup>

Write again soon – and, if you feel hot, try a bottle of Sauterne from Hastings – four pinches of snuff – and a mild cigar.

Yours ever affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Mr Wells | Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells’ and postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 7 | JY 20 | 64’.

2. Referring to the numbers of Armada in the Cornhill which eventually appeared from December 1864 to February 1865.

3. Georgina Hogarth (1827–1917: ODNB), CD's sister-in-law acting as housekeeper at Gadshill – see [1009] to her, 20 July 1870.

4. WC is referring to the robbery and murder on the North London Railway of banker Thomas Briggs which was reported in the Times a few days earlier as ‘one of the most atrocious crimes that probably ever disgraced this country’ (11 July 1864, p. 9a). There had been several assaults on the railways in the previous twelve months (see, e.g., Times, 20 July 1863, p. 12c). Victorian carriages were separated into compartments with no corridor or connection between them and no means of summoning the guard for help. On 14 July Alexander Baillie Cochrane, MP, suggested to the House of Commons that there should be a law making such communication systems compulsory but the Government demurred (Times, 15 July 1864, p. 6d).

5. ‘But king Solomon loved many strange women ... [who] turned away his heart after other gods’ (AV, I Kings 11:1–4).

6. WC was not the only man to feel apprehensive about being shut in a passenger railway compartment with an unknown woman. In a report to the Board of Trade on the need for a communications system in passenger trains, Inspector Captain Tyler wrote that gentlemen passengers ‘refused to travel singly with a stranger of the weaker sex, under the belief that it was only common prudence to avoid all risk of being accused for purposes of extortion or insult or injury’ (cited in P.S. Bagwell, The Railway Clearing House, London, 1968, pp. 194–195).

[0589] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 26 JULY 1864

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/84), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, p. 248. Published: BGLL, I, p. 325.

12. Harley Street | W. | Tuesday July 26th

My dear Mother,

I think I shall be able to come to you for the day, on Thursday next – travelling by the same train as usual. Send me a line to say if you will be at the cottage on Thursday. If you have an engagement to any of your friends, which it would be inconvenient to put off – don’t put it off.

Pigott & I go to Yarmouth on Saturday – and I want Friday for preparations.

I have done the hardest chapter in my book. Whether it will make enough for a number, I can’t tell till I see it in print.<sup>2</sup> My mind is made up to go from Harley Street. I have lost at different times, five working days since I saw you, through nothing but pianos at the back of the house and organs, bagpipes, bands and Punches in front. There is nothing for it but the Temple.<sup>3</sup>

Yours ever affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Mrs Wells | Bentham Hill Cottage | Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked as dated.

2. Probably Book 1, ch. 3 of Armada, which appeared with ch. 2 as the third monthly number in the January 1865 issue of the Cornhill.

3. That is, to rent quiet rooms among the chambers of the Temple, well away from the Strand and down by the river. WC appears not to have carried out this plan.

[0590] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, 27 JULY 1864

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1943.1). Published: BGLL, I, p. 326.

12. Harley Street W. | July 27th 1864

Dear Lord Houghton,

May I accept your kind invitation to Fryston on the 10th of August – to arrive that day, to stay the 11th and 12th, and to return to the heavy oar which I pull in the Galley of Periodical Literature on the 13th? If I remember right, Knottingley is your station, and I can get a fly there to bring me on to Fryston.<sup>1</sup> My route will probably be across country from the coast of Norfolk. But the wind is tempered to the shorn (travelling) lamb by Bradshaw<sup>2</sup> – and I don’t despair of finding my way in good time to your hospitable house.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Houghton’s estate Fryston Hall, near Knottingley, Yorkshire. See [0366] to Anne Benson Procter of 8 August 1860, concerning an earlier visit when there was some confusion over the name of the railway station and the house.

2. The guide to railway time-tables.

[0591] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, 6 AUGUST 1864

MS: Houghton.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Peters, p. 294. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 326–327, amended A&C4, p. 31.

Victoria Hotel | Great Yarmouth | Sunday August 6th 1864<sup>2</sup>

Dear Lord Houghton,

I have been cruising about this coast for the last week – and I propose starting from Yarmouth, to pay my visit to Fryston on Wednesday next. If the train is punctual (a very serious “if” on the Great Eastern Railway) I shall get to Peterborough in time for the two o’clock train, which reaches Knottingley at 4.44. If there is delay, I must get on from Peterborough by the 4.30 train, which reaches Knottingley at 7. Long and painful study of Bradshaw has convinced me that these are my two alternatives. By one or other of the trains therefore – by the earlier of the two, I hope – I shall have the pleasure of presenting myself at Fryston on Wednesday next.<sup>3</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
The Rt Honble | Lord Houghton | &c &c &c

1. A note pasted above the letter reads ‘Wilkie Collins | Author of The Woman in White &c &c’.
2. In fact 6 August 1864 was a Saturday not a Sunday. WC says he plans to arrive at Fryston on ‘Wednesday next’ which was therefore 10 August. That chronology contradicts information published towards the end of the century by Thomas Wemyss Reid: ‘On the 8th of August Mr Bunsen visited Fryston, where he found, among other guests Dr. Smith (of the dictionaries), Mr. Venables, Mr. Spedding, Mr. W. B. Donne, and Mr. Wilkie Collins.’ (Reid, II, p. 127). It is not clear where this specific date comes from. George von Bunsen was invited ‘from the 6th to the 20th August’ (Houghton to Bunsen 13 July 1864 op. cit. II p. 126). Reid claims to have had access to ‘some thirty thousand letters addressed to Milnes’ (Reid, I, p. xv). Perhaps it is an example of what Reid calls in his introduction ‘the deficiencies and imperfections of this narrative.’ (Reid, I, p. xvi).
3. Citing this letter, Peters surmises that this might have been the moment he met Martha Rudd, who was to become his lover and the mother of his children. She writes: ‘Perhaps the train was late, and Wilkie filled in the time at the Inn next door. As he had charmed the kitchenmaid Virginia in Paris twenty years before, so, with the advantages of fame and maturity, he now made a lasting impression on a girl [Martha Rudd] not much older than his adopted daughter’ (p. 294).

[0592] TO E. M. WARD, 6 AUGUST 1864

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 89; B&C, I, pp. 248–249. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 327.

Victoria Hotel | Great Yarmouth | August 6th 1864

My dear Ned,

I have only just heard from Charles [del] – who is here with me<sup>2</sup> – that Mrs Ward has been seriously ill, and that you are still in some anxiety about her. If it is any trouble to you to write, ask Fanny<sup>3</sup> to send me a line to say – I hope and trust – that Mrs Ward is going on favourably. This is Charles’s inquiry as well as mine – and you have his sympathy as well as mine, under a domestic anxiety which we both hope to hear has now ceased to be an anxiety any longer.

I am down here cruising at sea, and studying localities ~~to~~ (inland) for my new book.<sup>4</sup> On Wednesday I go away for a short visit to Yorkshire – but return here on the Saturday following.

With best love | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins
E.M. Ward Esqre R.A.

1. Directed to ‘E.M. Ward Esqre R.A. | Kent Villa | Landsdowne Road | Notting Hill | London. W’ and postmarked ‘YARMOUTH | D | AU 7 | 64 | NORFOLK’.
2. On the otherwise blank fourth page of WC’s letter appears the following note from Charles Ward to his younger brother:

Dear Ned

It was only through Jane that I heard of Henrietta’s illness. Pray let us know how she is progressing – favourably I sincerely trust. I had not the slightest idea that there was cause for anxiety. I hope most unfeignedly that she is now better

Ever yours affectionately | CJ Ward

The nature of Henrietta Ward’s illness has not been clarified, though she was well enough to undertake social engagements only a few weeks later – see [0603] to her, 15 November 1864.

3. Housekeeper with the Wards – see [0799] to Henrietta Ward, 28 December 1867.

4. For the Norfolk Broads scenes in Armadale.

[0593] TO CHARLES DICKENS, 8 SEPTEMBER 1864

12. Harley Street. W. | Thursday Sept 8

My dear Dickens,

I shall never get to Gadshill at all, if I wait for a proper opportunity. Have you got a bedroom empty (in which I can do a little work) on Saturday next? And, if so, may I come on that same Saturday – by the 4.5 Express to Gravesend – for two or three days?<sup>1</sup> I have got a “move” before me later in the month, and I have not the least idea where I shall go or what I shall do next.<sup>2</sup>

Ever your afftly | WC

-
1. Though no reply from CD appears in Pilgrim, WC seems to have stayed at Gadshill from around Saturday to Wednesday, 10–14 September – see [0594] to HC, 9 September, and [0595] to W.H. Wills, 16 September.
  2. From Harley Street to, in the event, 9 Melcombe Place in December 1864.

[0594] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 9 SEPTEMBER 1864

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/85), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 249–250. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 327.

12. Harley Street. W. | 9th Sept 1864

My dear Mother,

I am not surprised to hear that St Leonards did’nt agree with you.<sup>2</sup> After our Hastings experience you never ought to have gone there.<sup>3</sup> I am glad you are back again in your own bracing air. But how strange that you should be in another hotel. You are becoming a perfect commercial traveller! Will you notice, while you are at Rutland & Sceptre whether it is quiet.<sup>4</sup> Any cocks and hens, dogs, children, musical instruments, snorers next door to your bedroom, and so on? I might do a little writing there, later in the year if it was quiet.

In the meantime, I am going tomorrow to Gadshill for a few days, taking my work with me. ~~Their~~ The oppressive atmosphere weighing on us, just now, as you know never agrees with me. I must see if the Kentish air will relieve my muddled [del] head – and besides I have long owed Dickens a visit. I shall be back about the middle of next week – and the week after, I hope I shall have finished the number, and be able to make some arrangements for having a day or two with you.

Charley was here the other day, in better spirits and I think looking better. He and Katie are to be at Gadshill to say goodbye while I am there. Whether the dull [del] little watering-place in central France to which he is going will do for him, I doubt, simply because it is dull. But, being so far on the way, he can go on to Nice, which is lively – or to San Remo which is beautiful.<sup>5</sup> It is a great thing to have got the responsibility and expense of that miserable house off his shoulders. The ~~fr~~ mere freedom from that anxiety is I think sure to do him good.<sup>6</sup>

Write and tell me when you are back in your own cottage. I am making my own flesh creep with what I am writing just now of the new book.<sup>7</sup> Whether the public flesh will follow my example remains to be seen. Millais can’t do the illustrations – but a very good design for the first number has been done by Mr Thomas<sup>8</sup>

Ever yours affly WC

At the end of this month you will have the remaining numbers of the book to read, all corrected and complete.<sup>9</sup>

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Mr Wells | Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 7 | SP 10 | 64’, and endorsed ‘TUNBRIDGE WELLS | B | SP 10 | 64’.
  2. HC had been staying at the Sussex Hotel, St Leonard’s, and was still there in early September: see CAC to HC, 1 September 1864, directed to ‘Sussex Hotel, St Leonard’s’. CAC writes ‘I am glad you are safe at St. Leonard’s’, though he adds ‘I am sorry to hear of your weakness’ (Morgan MA 3153.32).
  3. The earlier visit to Hastings has not been identified, though compare the phrase ‘since we went to Hastings’ in [0588] to HC, 19 July 1864.
  4. Neither the hotel nor its location has been identified.
  5. CAC’s subsequent letters to HC indicate his trip began in late September and included Frankfurt, Strasburg, Wiesbaden, Geneva, Lyons, Cannes, Nice, and Mentone (Morgan MA. 3153.33–3153.40).

6. CAC was renting 5 Hyde Park Gate and, on 1 September 1864, wrote from there to HC: ‘The House is let! There is fighting going on among agents about the things which the new Tenant will take ... but still a great thing is accomplished’ (Morgan MA 3153.32).

7. Probably the wreck episode and Allan Armadale’s dream in Armadale.

8. George Housman Thomas (1824–1868: ODNB), wood engraver and illustrator.

9. WC adds the postscript down the left margin on the final page.

[3028] TO FREDERICK ENOCH,<sup>1</sup> 15 SEPTEMBER 1864

MS: HSP (Gratz Collection 10/28). Published: A&C3, pp. 40–41.

12. Harley Street, W. | September 15th 1864

Dear Sir,

Will you be kind enough to send a messenger tomorrow – or the next day, if it is more convenient – any time between 11 and 3 o’clock to take some copy to the printers? It is part only of the new number<sup>2</sup> – but I am anxious, as I may be leaving town shortly, to save time this month in the “setting up”. There will be no need to send me any proof until the copy for the whole number has been received complete.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Frederick Enoch Esqr /

P.S. There will also be a corrected proof (of No 3) to go back

---

1. Frederick Enoch (d. 1905), a native of Leamington, formerly private secretary to Sir Arthur Helps (Clerk to the Privy Council, 1860–75), who, as the BL Catalogue attests, also wrote poetry and words for music. At this time Enoch was on the editorial staff of the publishers Smith, Elder, whose Cornhill Magazine was to start carrying Armadale as a serial in November 1864. This is one of a series of fifteen surviving letters from 1864–6 concerning the publication of Armadale by Smith, Elder as serial, two-volume novel and play, where the salutation ‘Dear Sir’ shows the letters were addressed neither to George Smith (‘My dear Smith’ by this stage), nor to Messrs Smith, Elder & Co. impersonally (‘Dear Sirs’). Some, as here, are explicitly directed to Enoch ([0622], [0623] 21, 22 February, [3320] 11 April 1865, [3030] 7 December 1865; [0664] 13 February, [0669] 23 March 1866); others bear no explicit indication of the recipient ([0629] 9 March, [0636] 21 April, [0655] 19 November 1865; [0660] 12 January, [3013] 14 March, [0674] 15 April, [0686] 14 June, [0695] 6 July 1866), but there can be no doubt that they are directed to the same man.

2. The postscript suggests that this is likely to have been the fourth serial instalment of Armadale, appearing in February 1865.

[0595] TO W. H. WILLS, 16 SEPTEMBER 1864

MS: Private, on Garrick Club notepaper. Published: BGLL, I, pp. 327–328.

12. Harley Street, W. | Sept 16th 1864

My dear Wills,

I am just back from Gadshill, and as I hear from Dickens that you are boldly resolved to face all the risks of being seconded by me in the Candidates’ book at the Garrick, I have this day put you down, and Dickens will add his name on the Proposer’s line when he is next in London.<sup>1</sup>

If I am in town when your election comes on, I will let you know – and I will go and vote and speak for you if you like – or stop away, if you like, which (after what happened to Lehmann in consequence of my recommendation) would I think be the best course I could take in your interests<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Despite this support, plus thirty-seven other signatures, Wills was ‘blackballed’ at a Committee Meeting on 25 February 1865 and both WC and CD resigned from the Club. See WC to the Secretary of the Garrick Club of that date.

2. Lehmann had been proposed on 3 March 1864, but was rejected at a Committee Meeting held on 4 June 1864. In a personal communication to the editors, Marcus Risdell of the Garrick Club writes: ‘Exactly what constituted Collins’s support, as referred to in the letter to Wills, is not recorded; his signature is not amongst those on Lehmann’s candidates page, and he was absent from the meeting at which he was blackballed. However it was, and still is, the custom for members to write letters of support for a candidate, and this is possibly the support that Collins provided. However, why he did not sign Lehmann's candidates page is a mystery, as he had the opportunity to do so when he attended his last committee meeting on 7th May – perhaps he had too much to drink and forgot! Frederick Lehmann was never elected and I can find no record of him being proposed at another time.'

[0596] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 24 SEPTEMBER 1864

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, I, pp. 250–251. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 328.

12. Harley Street. W. | London<sup>1</sup> | Saturday Sept 24th | 1864

My dear Ted,

I can only write a few lines in answer to your kind note – and knowing your affectionate regard for me, I am afraid I shall disturb you. My illness declared itself on Monday /last/ – the Gout has attacked my brain. My mind is perfectly clear – but the nervous misery I suffer is indescribable

Beard has no fear of the attack proving absolutely dangerous – but he cannot yet decide when I can work again, or what is to be done about the Cornhill. With Smith away, and the first number made up on the 1st of next month, the disaster is complete – unless I take a turn for the better, in the next few days.<sup>2</sup>

For the present, keep all this a profound Secret, on the chance of my rallying back to my work. If I can conceal my condition from my mother, I must. I have concealed it so far.

Come in /when you get back/ and say goodbye, if you can. If not, God bless you.

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. London is inserted between the two lines as if an afterthought. Judging from the final paragraph, Pigott, now acting as political correspondent of the Daily News, may have been back at the family home in Somerset prior to going overseas.

2. In the event the serialization of Armada in the Cornhill Magazine commenced as agreed in the issue for November 1864.

[0597] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 19 OCTOBER 1864

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/86), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 251–252. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 328.

The Lord Warden Hotel | Dover | October 19th 1864

My dear Mother,

Here is a little report of me since I left you. I got to this hotel on Saturday – and found Dickens and Miss Hogarth established in the best rooms in the house, with another equally good room reserved for me. The sea is close under the windows, and the ~~sea~~ wash of it in my ears at night has had the effect of [del] /giving me/ such nights' rests' [sic] as I remember having when I was a boy – but very seldom since. I keep perpetually out in the air – take tepid warm salt-water baths – do nothing but idle, when I am indoors – and, as a necessary result of all three sanitary proceedings, feel very greatly the better for my trip to Dover. But it won't do to stay here too long. The relaxing effect of all these southern watering-places, always tells on me as soon as the first influence of the change is over – and I am going back to Harley Street tomorrow (Thursday) while I [del] have yet my benefit from Dover, without drawback of any sort from the softness of the air. [del] My next move will be probably (as you know) to Sir F. Goldsmid's – and then I must get back to work.

Talking of work, Dickens has read my proofs, and is greatly struck by them. He prognosticates certain success. Miss Hogarth could'nt sleep till she had finished them – and (to quote quite another sort of opinion) Mr Smith tells me that the Printers are highly interested in the story. I set great store by getting the good opinion of these [del] /latter critics – for/ it is no easy matter to please the printers, to whom all books represent in the first instance nothing but weary hard work. Upon the whole, therefore "Armada" seems to promise fairly enough at starting. I have lost my blotting paper, and am obliged to shift my pages to suit my wet ink.<sup>2</sup> But there is not much more for me to say. Not many people here – the winter season not having yet begun. No public news, and many of ~~my~~ our friends still away from London. By-the-bye (if you have not heard again from Charley since I left) Miss Hogarth has heard from Katie of their safe arrival at Wiesbaden – with their next proceedings in the clouds as usual. They were vibrating, between Cannes and Palermo(!) in /considering/ their future plans, when Katie wrote.

Shall I find a letter when I get back tomorrow to tell me how you are? If not, write to Harley Street soon [del], and don't forget what I told you about driving out & getting the air. I may bring a Brougham and Coachman with me next time, if you don't employ that basket carriage a little oftener!

Ever your affly | WC<sup>3</sup>

-
1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells', with Dover postmark largely torn away, but endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE WELLS | A | OC 20 | 64'.
  2. That is, on the folding notepaper, WC writes his numbered page 2) in portrait format on the third page, and his numbered page 3) in landscape format on the second page, with 'see page 4' below a line in the bottom left corner.
  3. The final sentence and valediction are written down the left margin of the fourth and final page, which is numbered 4) at the top.

[3318] TO MISS BECK,<sup>1</sup> 21 OCTOBER 1864

MS: Unknown. On sale: Sotheby's (22 February 1972, lot 615). Published: A&C11, p. 8.

Catalogue entry: '1 page, 8vo, 21 October 1964, to Miss Beck, as his contribution to her collection of autographs, stained, traces of former mount.'

-
1. The identity of this autograph hunter is otherwise unknown.

[0598] TO W. MARPLES,<sup>1</sup> 21 OCTOBER 1864

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 328.

12. Harley Street. | London | October 21st 1864 /

Sir,

I send you with pleasure my contribution to your collection of Autographs.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W. Marples Esqre

-
1. Otherwise unidentified autograph hunter.

[0599] TO GEORGE SMITH, 26 OCTOBER 1864

MS: NLS (MS 23180/138). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 328–329.

12. Harley Street. W. | October 26th 1864

My dear Smith,

The Paris publisher (to whom I am bound, as I have mentioned in the little memorandum I gave you, under an old agreement) has written to request that I will forward him the monthly parts of "Armada" for translation into French. Will you kindly give directions to send them to this address: –

Monsieur J. Hetzel | 18. Rue Jacob | Paris.

=

I have instructed Mr Hetzel to pay the purchase-money for the translation (due when the book is completed) to your House. It is a mere trifle. But the agreement expires with this book – and, if I live to write another for you, we will make the Frenchman “sweat for it”!<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The house of J. Hetzel & A. Lacroix issued a French translation of The Queen of Hearts (as Une Poignée de Romans) followed by The Woman in White, No Name and Armada, the last in two volumes, translated by Emma Allouard. Hachette had issued The Dead Secret in 1858 and resumed the role from The Moonstone onward.

[0600] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 3 NOVEMBER 1864

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/87), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 252–253. Summary: BGLL, I, p. 329.

12. Harley St. W. | Thursday | Nov<sup>r</sup> 3rd

My dear Mother,

I have only a moment to scratch a few lines, and to enclose a letter for Charley from Miss Thackeray<sup>2</sup> – for you to forward to Charley’s next address. It is too late to send it to Geneva. He seems to be going on well – that is one comfort.

As for me my [del] digestion is out of order, and my head suffers accordingly. It is not eating & drinking – but the horrible East wind stopping up my skin, and /by so stopping it,/ collecting my bile. But I get on with my work – approaching the middle of the new number already. I am glad you like the look of the 1st number and illustration. It is too early yet to know how it has done – I have seen nothing but a favourable notice of my start in today’s [sic] Morning Post.<sup>3</sup>

I have been dreadfully shocked and distressed by poor Leech’s death. I heartily liked him and we had many nervous troubles in common.<sup>4</sup> My doctor [del] thinks I had /better/ not risk attending the funeral. I will call and ask after poor Mrs Leech, the next day. Charley will be grieved to hear it, I know.

No more time – paper – or news. Write again soon.

Ever yours affly WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells’, with stamp and postmark torn away, and a Tunbridge Wells endorsement largely obscured, though ‘NO’ and ‘64’ remain visible, together with a red stamp ‘CHARING CROSS | NOV 3 | 64’.

2. See [0601] to her, 3 November 1864.

3. See ‘The Magazines’, Morning Post (3 November 1864) p. 2b: ‘The Cornhill offers the long-expected and most welcome attraction of the opening chapters of a new work by Mr. Wilkie Collins. “Armada” begins very well indeed. The author commences lavishly, for in the instalment for this month, which contains “the first book,” he gives his readers the history of one life in its entirety, and the greater part of two others. The style has all the author’s accustomed power, decision, originality, and suggestiveness.’

4. John Leech (1817–1864) illustrator and artist, who died on 29 October and was buried on 4 November at Kensal Green cemetery; the ODNB records that Leech ‘developed a sensitivity to street noise, particularly music (a frequent subject of his work).’

[0601] TO ANNE THACKERAY,<sup>1</sup> 3 NOVEMBER 1864

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 329.

12. Harley Street | W. | Nov<sup>r</sup> 3rd 1864

Dear Miss Thackeray,

I have sent your letter by today’s post to my mother, who will probably hear sooner what my brother’s next address is than I shall, and who will take care that your letter is immediately forwarded

So far, our accounts (of both of them) are certainly encouraging<sup>2</sup>

very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Anne Isabella Thackeray (1837–1919: ODNB), novelist, eldest daughter of William Makepeace Thackeray, friend of CD's daughter Kate.

2. Of Charles and Kate Collins, then travelling on the Continent – see [0600] to HC of the same day.

[0602] TO W. P. FRITH, 8 NOVEMBER 1864<sup>1</sup>

MS: NAL (MSL/1922/186/45). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 329–330 (dated 8 November [1864]).

12, Harley St | Tuesday Novr 8th

My dear Frith,

I am keeping out of all engagements generally – having my gout and my book to deal with together. But I can't resist the pleasure of dining at your house. On Thursday next at seven therefore I shall be delighted to take my place at your table.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

W.P. Frith Esqre RA

---

1. The only Tuesday, 8 November when WC was living at Harley St.

[0603] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 15 NOVEMBER 1864

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 90; BGLL, I, p. 330.

12 Harley Street | W. | Nov<sup>r</sup> 15th 1864

Mr Wilkie Collins has much pleasure in accepting Mr and Mrs E.M. Ward's kind invitation for Tuesday the 29th at ½ past 7. /

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs E.M. Ward | Kent Villa | Lansdowne Road', with no stamp or postmark. According to Victorian etiquette, a reply to such a social invitation would be directed to the woman of the household.

[0604] TO THOMAS CRESWICK,<sup>1</sup> 18 NOVEMBER 1864

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, I, p. 330.

Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells | 18th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1864

My dear Sir,

Your kind invitation has been forwarded from my rooms in town to this place. As my ill-luck will have it, I am already engaged to a dinner-party in the country on Wednesday the 23rd<sup>2</sup> – and I can only therefore thank you for your note, and beg you and Mrs Creswick to accept my apologies. I don't know how you feel about it – but when I think of this new obstacle interposing between me and my place at your hospitable table, I begin to believe in Fate!

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Thomas Creswick Esqre RA

---

1. Thomas Creswick (1811–69: ODNB), distinguished landscape painter and etcher, elected to the Royal Academy in 1851 after being made an associate in 1842.

2. This engagement remains unidentified.

[0605] TO ANNE THACKERAY,<sup>1</sup> 22 NOVEMBER 1864

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, I, p. 330, amended A&C3, pp. 62–63; Lewis website.

12. Harley Street. W | Nov<sup>r</sup> 22nd 1864

Dear Miss Thackeray,

I wish I could help you to find Mary out.<sup>2</sup> But so far as I know that excellent girl has (in the language of Mr Carlyle) “vanished into infinite space”.<sup>3</sup> If my mother (to whom I shall be writing in a day or two) can help in finding the lost trace, I will let you know immediately.<sup>4</sup> I am always delighted to be of any service to you that I can – however little.

It is very kind of you to help in making Nice agreeable to Charley and Katie. I have been recommending them to go to Rome if the Nice climate won’t do.<sup>5</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0601] to her of 3 November 1864.

2. Perhaps the Collins family servant referred to in, e.g., [0367] to HC of 10 August 1860.

3. While, echoing Hamlet’s ‘count myself a king of infinite space’ (II ii 274), Carlyle employs the phrase ‘into infinite space’ with some frequency, we have not been able to locate in his writings the precise phrase cited here by WC. Perhaps the closest call occurs in the opening chapter of The French Revolution (1837): ‘all Dubarrydom rushes off, with tumult, into infinite Space; and ye, as subterranean Apparitions are wont, vanish utterly, – and leaving only a smell of sulphur!’

4. The topic is not mentioned in the next known letter to HC, dated 18 December 1864 [0613].

5. CAC and his wife Katie were travelling in Europe. Exactly how Miss Thackeray helped them in Nice is not clear, though CAC wrote to HC on 14 November from Hotel Chauvain, Nice, mentioning a letter she had earlier directed to him in Cannes from Miss Thackeray who is ‘back again in London . . . and much with Mrs Leech who they say is suffering terribly’ (Morgan MA3153). The couple remained in Nice until after 29 November, before travelling to Mentone in France.

[0606] TO SHERIDAN MUSPRATT,<sup>1</sup> 23 NOVEMBER 1864

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, p. 331.

12. Harley Street W. | Nov<sup>r</sup> 23rd 1864

Dear Sir,

I have great pleasure in enclosing my contribution to your collection of photographic portraits<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Doctor Sheridan Muspratt

P.S. I am not sure whether Mr Dickens is at Gadshill just now. A letter to the Office of All the Year Round would be sure to find him.

---

1. James Sheridan Muspratt (1821–71), founder of the College of Chemistry, Liverpool.

2. Directed to ‘Doctor Sheridan Muspratt | College of Chemistry | Duke Street | Liverpool’.

3. No photograph is found with the letter.

[0607] TO HENRY BULLAR,<sup>1</sup> 8 DECEMBER 1864

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 331.

12. Harley St. W. | Dec 8th 1864

My dear Henry,

I yesterday heard from my mother (who, if all goes well, has today gone to visit the Langtons in the Bayswater quarter)<sup>2</sup> that Joseph has been suffering from fever.<sup>3</sup> I hope and trust it is nothing at all alarming. Send me one line to say how he is. I don’t like the word “fever” associated with an old friend

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Henry Bullar (1815–70), WC’s long-standing friend and sailing companion, dedicatee of My Miscellanies (1863).

2. HC’s old friends, of 8 Cornwall Gardens, Bayswater – see [0613] to HC of 18 December 1864.

3. Henry’s brother Joseph, with whom he had published A Winter in the Azores (London, 1841). The doctors William and Joseph Bullar both died in 1869.

[0608] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 11 DECEMBER 1864<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 91; BGLL, I, p. 332. Extract: Ellis, p. 34 (concatenated with letter of 9 March 1862).

12. Harley St. W. | Sunday. Decr 11th /

My dear Mrs Ward,

I am far from well (though I don't tell my mother so) and I am refusing most of the dinner invitations which reach me. But your kind note is irresistible, and I shall be only too glad to see another glimpse of those happy old times at your always pleasant table on Wednesday next at a ¼ to 7.

With kindest remembrances, | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating determined by the address and the calendar.

[0613] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 18 DECEMBER 1864<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Summary: B&C, I, p. 253. Published: BGLL, I, p. 334.

12. Harley St. W | Sunday Decr 18th

My dear Mother,

I hoped to have called at Mrs Langton's today – but the weather stops me.

Those giddy symptoms that I told you of, rather increased after I saw you. My friend Beard himself suggested consulting Doctor Radcliffe – the great authority now on brains and nerves.<sup>3</sup> The doctor came yesterday – and to my great relief arrived at the same conclusion as to what was the matter with me which Mr Beard had reached before hand. He declared there was not the least reason for any alarm about my work. I was suffering he said from “gouty irritation” which had upset the nerves for a time only. He assured me, and afterwards privately assured Mr Beard in consultation that there was nothing whatever seriously wrong with me. I am put under a “new treatment,” with a change, to help it, in all my habits. Dine lightly at two – work from four to 7 or 8 oClock – go out – come back for supper at ½ p 9 or 10. Bed between 11 & 12. Light breakfast – read and idle between breakfast and two oClock. Eat light things – game poultry – eggs, farinaceous puddings – no lean meat – claret & hock to drink – and for the present no exciting myself with “Society” and dinner parties. Give Mrs Langton & her daughters my kind regards, and tell them how I am dieted and disciplined for the present.

I propose, if all goes well, moving on Wednesday next to No 9 Melcombe Place, Dorset Square, (for the time being). Later in the week, I hope I shall get to see you at Wards.<sup>4</sup> Most of my things have gone before me – and the move is being accomplished without trouble. Write and tell me you have got this.

Yours ever affly WC

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the address.

2. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Mrs Langton | 8. Cornwall Gardens | Cornwall Road | Bayswater W.’, postmark obscured.

3. Dr Charles Radcliffe (1822–89: ODNB), ‘one of the earliest investigators ... of the electrical physiology of muscle and nerve’.

4. It is not clear whether the reference is to Charles or Ned Ward.

[0609] TO F. C. BEARD, MARCH–LATE DECEMBER 1864<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 332–333 (dated March–mid December 1864).

12. Harley Street | Monday

My dear Beard,

If you could only say tomorrow instead of today, I should reply “with the greatest pleasure.” Yesterday, I dined with Dickens – and so missed you when you called – and today I am already engaged to dine at The Garrick. Tomorrow is my only chance of seeing Tom this week<sup>2</sup> – for on Wednesday I go to my mother at Tunbridge Wells.

I will keep tomorrow open, on the chance of its suiting – any hour of the night will suit me.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Dating from the notepaper (watermarked ‘JOYNSON | 1864’) and WC’s period of residence at Harley Street. WC visited HC in Tunbridge Wells too frequently during this period for this to be of any assistance with dating.
  2. Presumably Frank Beard’s elder brother Thomas.

[0610] TO F. C. BEARD, MARCH–LATE DECEMBER 1864<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, I, pp. 332–333 (dated March–mid December 1864).

Wednesday | ½ p. 12

My dear Beard,

I am only just up – and I have such a number of things to do before I leave at three that there is no hope of my being able to get to you. But I came home with you last night – and your prevalent idea then was Brandy and Water. My prevalent idea was fresh air – and I walked obstinately for an hour and a half, after leaving you. Plenty of sleep and no head-ache are the blessed results. I am glad to hear that the evening’s ventilation bears the morning’s reflection with you too – but there is no doubt the one defect of Tom’s charming room is the gas.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

On the point of going. I have left directions for the wine to be delivered to you. | WC

-
1. Dating from the relation to the previous letter [0609].
  2. Directed to ‘F. Carr Beard Esq | 44. Welbeck Street | Cavendish Square | London | W.’, with no postmark.
  3. Peters (p. 381) noted WC’s dislike of gas lighting and in the 1880s in a lighthearted essay, ‘The Air and the Audience’, he claimed lack of oxygen led to lapses of memory; republished as ‘The Use of Gas in Theatres’ in the Mask of October 1924, and WCSJ, 6 (1986), pp. 19–26.

[0611] TO CHARLES WARD, MARCH 1860–LATE DECEMBER 1864<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/79). Published: BGLL, I, p. 333 (dated March 1860–mid December 1864).

12. Harley Street. W. | Wednesday

My dear Ward,

The moist oppression of the weather has so knocked me up that I have not been able to work or to thank you for your note, before today. I am very glad you warned me – I will draw no cheques before the 19th.

I have only smoked one of P.C.’s cigars.<sup>2</sup> It was strong – but, as I thought, not at all a bad one.

You must come and take pot-luck as soon as I can set you the example of eating & drinking. At present, I am existing upon the flavourless-wholesomes mildly mitigated by sherry & water.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Dating only from the period of residence at Harley Street.
  2. Unidentified – though perhaps a reference to Peter Cunningham.

[0612] TO FANNY MITCHELL, MARCH 1860–LATE DECEMBER 1864<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, I, pp. 333–334 (dated March 1860–mid December 1864).

12. Harley St | W. | Saturday

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

Many thanks for your kind letter. I shall be delighted to dine in Great Stanhope St tomorrow (Sunday) at ½ p 7 punctually.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating only from the period of residence at Harley Street.

[0614] TO THE EDITOR OF THE AUTOGRAPHIC MIRROR,<sup>1</sup> 30 DECEMBER 1864

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, I, p. 335.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | Decr 30th 1864

Sir,

I willingly comply with your request by sending you the enclosed page from the original MS. of Armadale – my last work of fiction, now appearing in The Cornhill Magazine. The page is from the first monthly part.<sup>2</sup>

I must beg you, when the facsimile of any part of the page which you may desire to reproduce is completed, to let me have the original back (directed to me at the address at the head of this letter). I am obliged to ask to have it back, because I preserve the original Mss of all my books.

I beg to remain | Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
The Editor of | The Autographic Mirror

---

1. Unidentified. The Autographic Mirror: Autographic Letters and Sketches of Illustrious and Distinguished Men of Past and Present Times; Sovereigns, Statesmen, Warriors, Divines, Historians, Lawyers, Literary, Scientific, Artistic, and Theatrical Celebrities was published on Saturdays from 20 February 1864 to the end of June 1866, the issues being collected in four volumes. Published by Cassell, Petter & Galpin in London, New York and later Paris, it reproduced handwritten letters and documents of famous people using ‘the new photolithographic process’ printed by Vincent Brooks of Charing Cross. Initially it drew on the ‘Collection of the editor’, but later sought out manuscripts as in this letter.

2. WC’s contribution was published in vol. 2 (7 January–24 June 1865), p. 195, with half a column about Collins on p. 83. Both passages were translated into French. The extract is a heavily amended MS page which formed 510 published words starting at the second paragraph of the Prologue, ch. 3, ‘The Wreck of the Timber Ship’, with the words “‘I must see Mrs. Armadale,” said Mr. Neal’ and ending with ‘One by one he meditated the words he should say when the wife ...’. The extract is signed ‘Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins’.

[0615] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 4 JANUARY 1865

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 3.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | Wednesday Jany 4th

My dear Mother,

I am glad you have got to Putney safely.

Are you aware that next Sunday is my birthday? And will you ask Mrs Bullar,<sup>2</sup> with my kind regards, if I may lunch at Fairfax House, on that day between one & two – supposing that luncheon (which is my light dinner) is going on at that hour? I am resting (while the new number is being set up at the printers’)<sup>3</sup> and Sunday is one of the days which I have all to myself. Next week, towards the 9th or 10th, I shall be at work again.<sup>4</sup> I am rapidly getting right, keeping out as long as possible in the air, and going to no parties of any sort or kind.

Send me a line about Sunday. I have three or four hours entirely at your disposal that day.

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Mrs John Bullar | Fairfax House | Putney. S.W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. That is, Rosa Bullar, with whom HC was then staying.
3. Part 6 of Armada, appearing in the Cornhill in April 1865.
4. That is, he would start work on the following Monday or Tuesday.

[0616] TO THE EDITOR OF THE AUTOGRAPHIC MIRROR, 31 JANUARY 1865

MS: Harkness. Published: BGLL, II, p. 3.

9 Melcombe Place N.W. | Jany 31st 1865

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to the Editor of the Autograph Mirror [sic], and begs to thank him for a presentation copy of that publication, and for the return of one of the manuscript leaves of “Armada.”<sup>1</sup>

-
1. See [0614] to the same correspondent, 30 December 1864.

[0617] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 2 FEBRUARY 1865

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 3–4.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | Thursday Feby 2nd

My dear Mother,

I kept the Cornhill hoping to bring it down to you. But this number has been a tough one – and I shall only finish today or tomorrow.<sup>2</sup>

Shall you be at home on Saturday next? If you are, I will come to you by an early train for the day, and bring the Cornhill, and the Autographic Mirror with a fac-simile page of the manuscript of “Armada” – printed to feed the curiosity of collectors.<sup>3</sup> I am obliged to ~~say for~~ come for the day only, because I have threatenings of rheumatism since the thaw – and I am afraid they may develop, if I sleep out, this damp weather. They are only threatenings, and I am in all other respects wonderfully well.

Let me know if Saturday will do, and if you want any more wine before you change your lodgings.<sup>4</sup>

I have not got a railway Guide – but I will write tomorrow, so as to let you know on Saturday morning what train I come by. If it is fine, and you could meet me at the Station, I should like to see the lodgings, before you take them. For if I like them, I should have a notion of taking a room for myself, in which I could come, and work occasionally. More of this when we meet.

I have just got the Guide, and can tell you at once about the train. If nothing stops me, I will start by 8.55. from Charing X which reaches T. Wells at 11.13. in the forenoon – so as to have a long day.<sup>5</sup> Think about coming to meet me and showing me the lodgings – and do just what you like. Dinner at 3.

Write me one line to say you have got this.

Yours ever affly WC

I return Charley’s letter. He is evidently in better spirits – and that is a great thing at Mentone.<sup>6</sup>

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked as dated.
  2. Part 7 of Armada, appearing in the Cornhill in May 1865.
  3. See to the Editor of the Autographic Mirror, [0614] 30 December 1864 and [0616] 31 January 1865.
  4. The new lodgings were with the Seaman family at Elm Lodge, Mount Ephraim, Tunbridge Wells – see [0625] to HC, 27 February 1865.
  5. Charing Cross, London, to Tunbridge Wells.
  6. The letter from CAC is not found at Pembroke.

[0618] TO RICHARD BENTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 6 FEBRUARY 1865

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 4–5.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | Feby 6th 1865

My dear Sir,

I don't think I have had any account sent me of the last Edition of "Rambles Beyond Railways" (I mean the third with the two woodcut illustrations) since that Edition was published.<sup>2</sup> Will you be kind enough to direct that an account be sent to me, at the address at the head of this letter?

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Richard Bentley Esqre

---

1. This appears to be WC's last extant letter to the ageing publisher, who was seriously injured in a railway accident at Chepstow in 1867 and died in 1871.

2. The edition had in fact been reprinted in 1863, apparently without WC's knowledge – see [0627] to George Bentley of 8 March 1865.

[0619] TO E. M. WARD, 10 FEBRUARY 1865<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 84 (dated '10 July [1863]'); BGLL, II, p. 5.

9 Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | Friday Feby 10th

My dear Ned,

I forgot to put your night down in my book – and the consequence of that piece of stupidity is the second stupidity of not being sure of the evening. Am I right in supposing it to be Tuesday next about 8? If I am right, don't trouble to answer this. Silence means Yes.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the address.

[0620] TO JOHN PAGET,<sup>1</sup> 16 FEBRUARY 1865

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 5.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Feby 16th 1865

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my best thanks for the documents in the "Talbot Case",<sup>2</sup> which have reached me safely today, and which I shall read with very great interest.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
John Paget Esqre

---

1. John Paget (1811–98), barrister, author of a series of pamphlets about the Talbot divorce suit (see the BL Catalogue).

2. Notorious Irish divorce case just prior to the passage of the Matrimonial Causes Act – see Divorce in 1857, the Talbot Case: Letters by "Cujus" (London: Ward & Lock, 1857). WC does not seem to have used the information directly in his fiction.

[0621] TO HENRY F. CHORLEY,<sup>1</sup> 21 FEBRUARY 1865

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:6). Published: BGLL, II, p. 6.

9, Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Feby 21st 1865

My dear Chorley,

I am sorry to say that I can't accept your kind invitation. I leave town on Saturday next, and have no prospect of being back again in less than ten days' time. Under these circumstances, I can only thank you, and beg you to accept my apologies.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Henry F. Chorley Esqre

---

1. Henry Fothergill Chorley (1808–72), music and literary critic of the Athenæum from 1833. Friend of CD from about 1855 and occasional contributor to Household Words and All the Year Round. Generally published unfavourable reviews of WC's novels in the Athenæum, being particularly harsh on Armada.

[0622] TO FREDERICK ENOCH,<sup>1</sup> 21 FEBRUARY 1865

MS: Morgan (Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/14). Published: BGLL, II, p. 6.

9, Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Feby 21st 1865

Dear Sir,

Will you kindly ask the Printers to let me have the Revises of Part 7 (I posted the corrected proof to you) on Thursday next if possible?

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

F. Enoch Esqre.

---

1. See [3028] to him of 15 September 1864.

[0623] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 22 FEBRUARY 1865

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11, formerly laid in Armada (1866), II). Extract: Parrish & Miller, p. 57. Published: BGLL, II, p. 6.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Feby 22nd 1865

Dear Sir,

Many thanks for the Revises of Part 7 of Armada.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Frederick Enoch Esqre

[0624] TO THE SECRETARY OF THE GARRICK CLUB, 25 FEBRUARY 1865

MS: Garrick. Published: BGLL, II, p. 7.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Saturday Feby 25th 1865

Sir,

I beg to inform you that it is my intention to withdraw from the Garrick Club.<sup>1</sup>

I have therefore to request that you will remove my name from the Members' List.

I remain, Sir, | Your obt servt | Wilkie Collins

To | The Secretary of The Garrick Club

---

1. WC had been elected to the Garrick Club on 3 June 1854, proposed by CD and seconded by Shirley Brookes. The previous autumn CD and WC had put forward W. H. Wills, the sub-editor of All the Year Round, for membership – see [0595] to Wills of 16 September 1864. However, the application was rejected as he 'was lacking both in social and literary distinction – Mr. Wills, Forster used to call him' (Guy Boas, The Garrick Club, 1831–1947 (London: Garrick Club, 1948), p. 55). As a result both WC and CD resigned with effect from 18 March 1865 (see [0630] to the Secretary of the Garrick Club, 10 March 1865).

[0625] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 27 FEBRUARY 1865

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/88).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 254–255. Summary: BGLL, II, p. 7.

Hotel du Helder | Rue du Helder | Paris | Monday. Feby 27th 1865

My dear Mother,

There is only one thing to say about the journey here – it could hardly have been easier and pleasanter if it had been a journey in the summer. The passage across was one of the calmest passages I have ever made – nobody sick anywhere on board. We got to this excellent hotel after a slow and safe railway journey from Calais in time for an [del] excellent dinner.<sup>2</sup> It is one of the small hotels in which the landlord looks personally after the comfort of his guests, and the servants wait on you as if you were at home. If you ever alter your mind and come with me to Paris, we will stay here. They have some brandy fifty years old – will that induce you to come some day?

The weather is not very cheerful – the air damp, the sky overcast, and the streets muddy. But Paris looks as crowded and as a vividly animated out of doors as ever. Our places at the theatres are obliged to be taken some days beforehand – and the restaurants and cafés seem to be fuller than ever of people with nothing on earth to do but to dine, smoke, talk, and drink coffee.

I have been here too short a time to have anything else to say about Paris – except that the change has done me good already. My book is as entirely off my mind here, as if my book was done.

Write as soon as you can, and let me know how you go on at the new house, and how you feel, you change of place. Everything seems to have begun so well at Elm Lodge that I am in hopes we both did a very wise thing when we entered Mr Seaman's doors.<sup>3</sup> Are there any noises? I ask this with a view to my work, when I come back.

We have settled at present to return on the 8th of March. You shall hear again, if we keep to that day – my impression is that we shall.

Mind you write soon. Ever yours aftly | WC
The last I heard of Charley (from C. Ward) they were still at Mentone.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Letter at Morgan accompanied by envelope constituting the only trace of WC's letter to his mother from Florence on the same date the previous year. See [0568] to HC, 27 February 1864.

2. WC's travelling companion on this trip to Paris remains unidentified; there is no record of him using the first person plural in letters to HC with reference to Caroline.

3. Seaman was the owner of Elm Lodge, Mount Ephraim, Tunbridge Wells, in which WC's mother had just taken up residence.

4. WC adds the postscript down the left margin of the final page.

[0626] TO THE SECRETARY OF THE GARRICK CLUB, 5 MARCH 1865

MS: Garrick. Published: BGLL, II, p. 7.

Hotel du Helder | Paris | March 5th 1865

Sir,

I beg to confirm that part of Mr Dickens's letter (dated the third of this month) which relates to myself, and which has been written in my absence from England. Mr Dickens has expressed my own wishes, and has acted with my ~~full~~ entire approbation.<sup>1</sup>

I remain Sir | Your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins
To | The Secretary of The Garrick Club.

---

1. CD's letter of 3 March asked the Secretary to withhold his resignation to give him one last opportunity of visiting the Club: 'I have it in charge from Mr. Wilkie Collins who is in Paris, to prefer the same request to you on his behalf for the same reason' (Pilgrim, XI, p. 23).

[0627] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 8 MARCH 1865

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, II, p. 8.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. N.W. | March 8th 1865

My dear Sir,

I have been in Paris for the last week – or I would have thanked you sooner for the account and the cheque enclosed.<sup>1</sup>

Will you be so good as to let me know of what number of copies the present, or new, issue of “Rambles Beyond Railways” is composed, at what price it is sold, and when it was published?<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
George Bentley Esqre

-
1. As no payment from Bentley is credited to WC’s bank account around this time, it is likely that the cheque was made out to cash (Coumts: WC).
  2. Probably referring to the 1865 reprinting of the illustrated edition of 1861, advertised at 6s.

[0628] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 8 MARCH 1865

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 8–9.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Wednesday ~~Feb~~ 8 March 8

My dear Mother,

We got back to London last night, after another comfortable crossing of the generally comfortable channel.

I am over head and ears in arrears of letters, “club”-difficulties, (the eternal “Garrick” again),<sup>2</sup> and all the other small worries which accumulate in one’s absence. But I shall have got through it all in the course of the week – and I propose coming to you on Monday or Tuesday in next week, and trying how I can work at Mount Ephraim. Write and tell me what you say to this, and how you are – and let me have “a plain statement” of the condition of your cellar, and of anything you can think of which may be got at Fortnum & Mason’s.<sup>3</sup>

I have – as I wish to encourage you to spend money – bought you a purse at Paris which it is quite a luxury to open. We went to the theatre every night. Dreadful, is’nt it?<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours affly | WC

Is there an arm chair in my bedroom in which I can write with support for my head at the back?
Any news of Charley?<sup>5</sup>

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Harriet Collins | care of Mr Seaman | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked as dated.
  2. See [0626] to the Secretary of the Garrick Club, 5 March 1865.
  3. The luxurious food emporium founded in Piccadilly in 1707.
  4. WC’s travelling companion on this trip to Paris has not been identified.
  5. CAC had written to HC on 12 February 1865 from Mentone, Switzerland (Morgan MA 3153/40).

[3121] TO EDWARD MOXON & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 8 MARCH 1865

MS: Dunedin. Published: A&C5, pp. 5–6.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. N.W. | March 8th 1865

Gentlemen,

I must beg you to excuse this late acknowledgment of your letter, which reached me some days since in Paris. Circumstances have prevented me from writing to you before today.<sup>2</sup>

In the present state of my literary engagements, it is not in my power to receive the proposal to which your letter refers. The work of fiction which I am now writing (“Armada”) will, if all goes well with me, continue to appear in the pages of “The Cornhill Magazine”, for more than a year to come, from the present time – and it is understood between the publishers and myself that while “Armada” is in process of periodical issue, no other new novel of mine shall be offered to the public.<sup>3</sup>

Under these circumstances, I can only thank you – which I do very sincerely – for the gratifying confidence which you have been willing to place in my abilities and my reputation.

I remain, Gentlemen, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs | Edw<sup>d</sup> Moxon & Co

-
1. Edward Moxon (1801–1858) was a poet and publisher of poetry whose business continued under his name after his death. The nature of the proposal is unknown, but seems to concern the publication of a new novel.
  2. WC was just back from a week in Paris.
  3. Armada was published in the Cornhill Magazine from November 1864 to June 1866.

[0629] TO FREDERICK ENOCH,<sup>1</sup> 9 MARCH 1865

MS: Birmingham UL. Published: BGLL, II, p. 9.

9. Melcombe Place | 9th March 1865

Dear Sir,

I have received the proofs safely – the Illustration is returned with the lettering – and with the proof for press of No 6.<sup>2</sup> The note referring to the error could not be better placed than it is.<sup>3</sup>

I will write to Paris to have the proofs returned. Many thanks.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. On the recipient, see [3028] to Enoch of 15 September 1864, note 1.
  2. Of Armada, then running in the Cornhill (November 1864–June 1866), with the illustrations by George H. Thomas subsequently used in the first edition in two volumes. Number 6 included Book 2, chs 3–4 (as in the volume edition) and was published in April 1865. It featured an illustration lettered ‘I addressed myself to the master of the house’, showing Allan on his round of visits to the gentry of Thorpe Ambrose.
  3. The correction is in Cornhill, XI, p. 385 at the foot of the first page of the instalment, and reads ‘PRINTER’S ERROR. – In the portion of “Armada” published in last month’s number, at page 262, for – “here I am, at my very best, a good sixteen years older than he is,” read: – “here I am, at my very best, a good six years older than he is.”’

[0630] TO THE SECRETARY OF THE GARRICK CLUB, 10 MARCH 1865

MS: Garrick. Published: BGLL, II, p. 10.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | March 10th 1865

Sir,

I beg to inform you that you are now at liberty to communicate to the Committee my withdrawal from the Garrick Club.<sup>1</sup>

Your obt servt | Wilkie Collins

To | The Secretary of | The Garrick Club

-
1. WC’s resignation is recorded in the Membership Book as effective from 18 March 1865. A similar letter was written by CD the day before (Pilgrim, XI, p. 26).

[0631] TO GEORGE SMITH, 11 MARCH 1865

MS: NLS (MS 23180/140). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 10–11

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | 11th March 1865

My dear Smith,

It has just occurred to me (now I have left the “Garrick”) that you are in the Candidates’ book, and that I am your seconder. I believe my having belonged to the Club at the time I seconded you, is enough – but if I am wrong, shall I get you another “second”? or will you leave it to Trollope? or will you apply to another of your own friends in the Club? Whatever you think best, I will do. I touch the question of a friends’ election at that place, now, with some misgiving after what has happened.<sup>1</sup>

I got back on Tuesday, and am now going away again for a week at Tunbridge Wells. My address will be Elm Lodge, Mount Ephraim, Tunbridge Wells.

Will you kindly direct the clerk in whose department it lies to look over the payments made thus far for Armadale, and to see what they amount to? I am in a state of perplexity over my bankers' book – performing feats in simple addition but failing to make the payments and the numbers sent in arrange themselves symmetrically on the same level. It is quite possible I am mistaken, for I know about as much of arithmetic as a savage. But I make it: – Monthly Numbers Printed, 8. Payments £1500. Am I right or wrong?<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to the rejection of the application for membership of W. H. Wills – see [0624], [0626], [0630] to the Secretary of The Garrick Club, 25 February, 5 and 10 March 1865. In the event Smith was elected on 1 April 1865 and remained a member until his death in 1901.

2. Smith, Elder had agreed to pay the £5,000 for serial and volume rights of Armadale in monthly instalments – see [0430] to HC, 7 August 1861. By this date only five parts had been published, though WC would have written and proofed eight, and just four payments had been credited to his bank account totalling £1500. The payments did arrive irregularly, beginning with £500 on 13 July 1864. There were five for £500 and ten for £250. The final payment of £250 on 20 April 1866 brought the total to £5000 (Coutts: WC).

[3207] TO GEORGE RUSSELL, 12 MARCH 1865

MS: Unknown. On sale: Woolley & Wallis, Salisbury, UK (12 December 2012), lot 54, in an album of letters to Sir George Russell, p. 39. Published: A&C8, pp. 9–10.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W.
March 12th

My dear George,

You are always heartily welcome (as you know) to any little service which it may be in my power to render you. As it is, no service has been wanted – and you have had the will without the deed.

I think the matter could have ended in no better way. May your future [seat] in the Committee be an easier one – and may that wretched Club prove more capable of reforming itself than I believe it to be!<sup>1</sup>

I am here in a street running out of Dorset Square, until I can find Chambers to suit me – no easy matter as it turns out, in my case.<sup>2</sup> If you ever lose yourself north of the New Road, give me a look-in.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

George Russell Esqr

---

1. The Garrick Club. See previous letters to Russell.

2. WC had moved to 9 Melcombe Place on 21 December 1864 and stayed there for nearly four years, until late in August 1867.

3. New Road had been renamed Marylebone Road late in 1857.

[0632] TO COUTTS & CO., 13 MARCH 1865

MS: Coutts (20291/3).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 11.

London 13th March 1865

Mess<sup>rs</sup> Coutts & Co

Discontinue the payment of any further subscription on my account to the Garrick Club.
Wilkie Collins

---

1. Written in a secretarial hand on a paper slip and signed by WC.

[0633] TO ELIZABETH BENZON, 16 MARCH 1865

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 11.

Elm Lodge, Mount Ephraim, Tunbridge Wells 1 | March 16th 1865

Dear Mrs Benzon,

I am here until Tuesday next – and I only regret it (for this dry inland air always agrees with me) because I shall lose the pleasure of accepting your kind invitation for Sunday next. Pray accept my best thanks and forgive my unavoidable absence.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC was clearly staying with HC.

[0634] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 4 APRIL 1865

MS: Morgan (MA 4500), with photograph.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 11.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. N.W | April 4th 1865

My dear Sir,

If Thursday next at 12 will suit you, it will suit me. My address is as above.

After Thursday, I shall be out of town.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Of WC with his left hand against an upright chair and in his right hand a book, the Herbert Watkins image of 1861 – see the Lewis website.

[3319] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 11 APRIL 1865

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C11, p. 8.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W.
11th April 1865

Dear sir,

Many thanks for the proofs of No 9.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

F. Enoch Esqre

Excuse this half sheet, it is the nearest morsel at hand.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. One of the series of letters about the proofs of Armadale (see [3028] to Enoch, 15 September 1864). The ninth monthly instalment appeared in the Cornhill in July 1865.

2. On half a sheet of paper, torn neatly on the fold down the left-hand side.

[0635] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 13 APRIL 1865

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 12–13.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | Thursday April 13

My dear Mother,

An immense success last night.<sup>2</sup> Not a hitch anywhere. I had to give the people time to applaud at the end of almost every sentence I spoke in the principal speech. And when my health was proposed, and I got up to thank them the noise was deafening. Buckstone and I did all the speaking.<sup>3</sup> The room was frightfully hot – the dinner attendance being very large – and a great gathering of ladies to hear and see. I was nervous before the speaking began – feeling that the success of the thing rested mainly on my unlucky shoulders. But as soon as I got on my legs, I recovered my self-possession – and I really did astonish them. So much for this last new experiment on the public.

The reports in most of the papers this morning are wretchedly incorrect. – I send you the Daily Telegraph which contains the nearest approach to what I did say.<sup>4</sup> The reporters wanted a copy of my speech – but I had nothing but notes only intelligible to myself. Otherwise, my very words might have appeared. “The Era” (weekly theatrical paper) published next Saturday will contain the fullest report – and this you shall have. The Era reporter told me he had got the speech verbatim.<sup>5</sup>

Ever affly your | WC

Never mind about the clothes’ brush. I have got one to bring with me next time

I am not half as much worn out to-day, as I expected to be – and am resting my brains. Thank you for looking so soon to all these things – but I won’t take your spring mattress. No!

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked as dated.
  2. Then one of the vice-presidents of the Royal General Theatrical Fund, WC acted as Chairman at its Twentieth Anniversary Festival, held on the evening of 12 April 1865 at the Freemasons’ Tavern, Great Queen Street: ‘E. M. Blanchard, the dramatic critic reported that he was a good chairman and made an excellent speech’ (Robinson 1951, p. 189).
  3. J. B. Buckstone (1802–79: ODNB), actor and dramatist, then Honorary Treasurer of the Royal General Theatrical Fund.
  4. The Daily Telegraph (13 April 1865, p. 3c–d) devoted a column and a half to the event.
  5. The speeches were indeed reported in full in the theatrical weekly paper the Era (15 April 1865, pp. 5–6). The Era account is reprinted in Proceedings of the Twentieth Anniversary Festival of the Royal General Theatrical Fund (London, 1865), together with a letter of thanks from the Honorary Treasurer.

[0636] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 21 APRIL 1865

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, II, p. 13.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Friday April 21

Dear Sir,

Many thanks for the Revises of No 9 which reached me yesterday.<sup>1</sup> There is a trifling error in the numbering of the part at the top, to which the reader’s attention may be drawn. It is numbered X instead of IX.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Of Armada in the Cornhill. The ninth monthly number was published only at the beginning of July 1865 so these are early proofs – WC needed to send copy to the printers well in advance to allow time for the illustrator to choose a subject. The instalment comprised Book Fourth, chs 10–12, though this became Book Third, chs 10–12 in the volume edition, where ‘Prologue’ was used to designate the section originally called ‘Book the First’.

[0637] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 22 APRIL 1865

MS: Huntington (HH 83). Published: B&C, I, pp. 255–256. Summary: BGLL, II, p. 13.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. N.W. | April 22nd

My dear Holman

Have I the face to write to you? Yes – for it is not my fault. I have removed from Harley St to the address above, I only got your letter ~~yesterday~~ today. When I am in town, I am here and always glad to see you. At other times I am with our dear old mother at Elm Lodge, Mount Ephraim, Tunbridge Wells, where you will be also always welcome, as you know.<sup>2</sup> [del] Sunday I go to Slough to dine. Monday, I go to Elm Lodge to stay till Saturday. Saturday, I come back to town to the R.A. Dinner<sup>3</sup> (if the Gout does’nt [sic] trip me up). These are my present engagements. Shall I be too late to see the picture on Sunday week?<sup>4</sup> I am afraid so. Is it too late to help in finding the title. [sic] Write to me at – or come to, which would be much better – our little snugery at Tunbridge Wells next week – and if the title is not yet found I will cudgel my brains till it is found.

I saw your “Afterglow in Egypt”<sup>5</sup> – and thought it magnificent. Really a noble picture mentally and technically. I have asked after you perpetually. The answer has always been “He is down in the country at a portrait.” Our mother has your photograph, but never expects to see you again.

Charley is certainly better, and is coming back next month.<sup>6</sup> He writes in good spirits and has finished a new novel.<sup>7</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Address next week | Elm Lodge Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells.

Come down if you can, and choose your own day. Bed if you like.

=

On and after this day week (Saturday) address 9 Melcombe Place

-
1. Dating from the first April at Melcombe Place, to which WC had moved on 21 December 1864.
  2. HC was very fond of Hunt as the references in this letter to ‘our mother’ imply. At least two of the letters written by CAC to Hunt contain lengthy postscripts by HC. In one letter, 7 February 1855, she begins the note, ‘My dear son No. 4 ...’ (Huntington HH, 68).
  3. Each year the Royal Academy held a dinner before its annual Summer Exhibition.
  4. That is, on Sunday, 30 April 1865. The painting in question has not been identified.
  5. One version of this picture is now in the Southampton City Art Gallery, another in the Ashmolean, Oxford.
  6. CAC went abroad on 26 September 1864 to Wiesbaden and later stayed in Mentone to write. He then travelled back slowly via Paris. See CAC to HC, 25 September 1864, and 12 February 1865, Morgan (MA3153/33 and 40).
  7. At The Bar which was serialised in All the Year Round from 23 September 1865.

[0638] TO JOHN CALLCOTT HORSLEY,<sup>1</sup> 1 MAY 1865

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 13.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | May 1st 1865

My dear Horsley,

I am too hard at work to get to Kensington today. Accept my excuses, and believe me

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

John Callcott Horsley Esq | R A

-
1. John Callcott Horsley (1817–1903: ODNB), RA, English narrative painter, son of William Horsley, the composer.

[0639] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 2 MAY 1865

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/89), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, I, pp. 256–257. Summary: BGLL, II, p. 13.

9 Melcombe Place | N.W. | Tuesday May 2nd

My dear Mother,

Here is news of Charley with a vengeance! He will be at Tunbridge Wells by the latter end of the week, I should think. If he is, give him /(& his wife if she comes)/ my room – for I am afraid I shall not be able to get away this week and I have written my apologies to Mrs A. Pott accordingly.<sup>2</sup> As to next week, if Charley is still with you (which I hope he will be) give me the little back room. I want nothing but pillows, and I won’t have you turned out of your room. My hope is that I shall have got the number done, and /shall/ come on Monday next for a holiday. The rain in the air [del] rouses my rheumatism but I am otherwise going on famously. No harm from the Academy Dinner. Many inquiries after you. Old Pickersgill made quite a scene about me and my books – wrung my hand a dozen times across the table – and implored me to come & see him!<sup>3</sup> Exalted Functionaries sitting near us, stared till I thought their eyes would drop out. I left directions here (being in a violent hurry) to send you the Times report of the dinner,<sup>4</sup> and I hope you got it. An excellent exhibition.

Write and tell me how you feel about Charley. Don’t excite yourself – take it easy. I am just going to work.

Ever yours affly WC<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'LONDON-NW | 1 | MY 2 | 65', and endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE WELLS | A | MY 3 | 65'.
2. That is, Frances, sister of Henry Brandling who had married Arthur Pott of Bentham Hill, Tunbridge Wells, in 1863 – see [0555] to HC, 29–30 September 1863.
3. William Pickersgill (1782–1875: ODNB), portrait painter.
4. On Saturday, 29 April 1865 – see 'Banquet at the Royal Academy', Times, 1 May 1865, p. 6a-d, in which WC is mentioned only among the list of those attending.
5. WC squeezes the final paragraph and valediction down the left margin of the final page of the letter.

[0640] TO HENRY H. MURRAY,<sup>1</sup> 5 MAY 1865

MS: Unknown. On sale: Richard Ford, London, 2003, 2004. Published: BGLL, II, p. 14.

May 5th 1865

Sir,

I have much pleasure in writing these lines, and in so complying with your wish to possess my autograph

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Henry H. Murray Esqre

---

1. Unidentified.

[3122] TO THE REV. CHAUNCY TOWNSHEND,<sup>1</sup> 2 JUNE 1865

MS: Dunedin. Published: A&C5, p. 6.

9. Melcombe Place. | Dorset Square N.W. | 2nd June 1865

My dear Mr Townshend,

I should have been delighted to avail myself of your kind invitation, if I had not unluckily already accepted an engagement for Monday the 5th. As it is, I can only thank you and beg you to accept my apologies.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The last known letter from WC to Chauncy Hare Townshend who died in 1868. See [0239] to Townshend, 5 June 1856, note 1.
2. WC's engagement on 5th June is unclear but appears to have been out of London. See [0641] to Reade, 11 June 1865.

[0641] TO JOHN EDMUND READE,<sup>1</sup> 11 JUNE 1865

MS: Unknown. Photocopy: Ross, our copy text. Published: BGLL, II, p. 14.

Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | June 11th 1865

Dear Sir,

I am seldom in London now, and I only came to town for a day or two last night, and found your kind letter here, with the presentation copy of the last edition of your Poetical Works which accompanied it.<sup>2</sup>

Pray accept my best thanks for your volumes, as well as for your friendly expressions towards myself. And allow me to add my congratulations on the appearance of this last and completest edition of your Poems.

It is given to few men to devote themselves as you have done to the highest of all forms of Art – and it is given to fewer still to see the monument of that devotion complete in their own lifetime.

Believe me dear sir | very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
John Edmond [sic] Reade Esq

---

1. John Edmund Reade (1800–70: ODNB), Byronic poet from Bath.
2. The Poetical Works of John Edmund Reade (3 vols, London, 1865), found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 141).

[0642] TO ALICE WARD,<sup>1</sup> 14 JUNE 1865

MS: Private. Published: B&C, I, p. 257. Summary: BGLL, II, p. 14.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. N.W. | June 14th 1865

My dear Alice,

Will you accept a small pair of earrings [sic] – as some assistance to you in “renouncing the pomps and vanities of this wicked world”<sup>1</sup> at your first ball on Monday next,<sup>2</sup> offered by your affectionate godfather | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – The jeweller has promised to send the earrings [sic] to Kent Villa today.

---

1. WC's god-daughter, Alice Jane Ward (b. 1849), daughter of Charles and Jane Ward, who would celebrate her sixteenth birthday on Monday, 19 June 1865.
2. Again echoing the first promise WC must have made as godfather to Alice as part of the rite of Baptism according to the Church of England Book of Common Prayer.

[0643] TO GEORGE BAILEY AND JOHN GRANT,<sup>1</sup> 21 JUNE 1865

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 15.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | June 21st 1865

Dear Sirs,

I accept with great pleasure your kind invitation to the dinner at the Greyhound on Saturday the 15th July.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs George Bailey | & | John Grant

---

1. Both unidentified, though Bailey might be the man mentioned in [0194] to Edward Pigott of 3 February 1855, while Grant might be a relative of Billy Grant who died in 1866 (see [0683] to HC, 4 June 1866).
2. The venue has also not been identified.

[0644] TO B. W. BALL,<sup>1</sup> 26 JUNE 1865

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 94 (as to Benjamin West Bell); BGLL, II, p. 15.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W | June 26th 1865

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your letter, and for the extract from the Times<sup>2</sup> – which I had not previously seen, and which certainly adds another very interesting “case” to the instances of suspended animation already on record. I think we may congratulate each other on having silenced our enemy in the omnibus – so far as “The Dead Hand” is concerned at any rate<sup>3</sup> – thanks to the greediness of the young gentleman who eat too much rhubarb tart!<sup>4</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
B. W. Ball Esqre

---

1. Unidentified. The HRC card index at Texas suggests that this is the New England poet Benjamin West Ball (1823–1906); Coleman suggests Benjamin Bell (1810–83), founder of the Edinburgh Eye Infirmary. Neither seems at all likely.
2. See ‘Suspended Animation’, in the Times, 14 June 1865, p. 14f, with a Newcastle Chronicle byline, which concerns ‘a boy named Batey, about 12 years of age’ who ‘went to bed after partaking rather heavily of some rhubarb-tart’. For several days everyone thought him dead but he awoke about half an hour before the post mortem was due to start feeling extremely hungry.
3. Referring to ‘Brother Morgan’s Story of the Dead Hand’ in The Queen of Hearts (1859), where the plot turns on a man thought to be dead but in fact in a state of suspended animation. This was first published as ‘The Doctor’s Story’, part of ‘The Lazy Tour of Two Idle Apprentices’ written jointly with CD (Household Words, 10 October 1857, XVI, pp. 340–349).
4. As often, WC uses the archaic past tense ‘eat’ instead of the more familiar ‘ate’.

[3281] TO MRS M. UNDERHILL,<sup>1</sup> 30 JUNE 1865

MS: eBay, August 2015 (#400985046161, in large lot). Published: A&C10, p. 8.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | London
June 30th 1865

Dear Madam,

Pray excuse an unavoidable delay on my part in acknowledging the receipt of your note, and in then complying with your wish to possess my Autograph.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Mrs M. Underhill

-
1. Otherwise unidentified, but from the form of the return address an autograph hunter living outside London.

[0645] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 JULY 1865

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/90).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 16.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | July 1st 1865

My dear Mother,

I send you by today’s book post the July number of the Cornhill. The number for October is just finished in manuscript. So I keep my advance you see.

The yachting is given up – the elections preventing Pigott from getting more than two or three days holiday, till late in the autumn.<sup>2</sup> We are thinking of going to Yarmouth for those two or three days, on this day week (Saturday the 8th) & returning on Tuesday the 11th. At Yarmouth we can get the best boats, and can be out on the sea all day. I want the sea badly – to freshen me after my work.

And about Elm Lodge?<sup>3</sup> I am going to dine on Monday with the Deanness – on Wednesday with the Lehmanns at Highgate – on Friday with my publisher. – Mrs E. declares she will have a day with you, after Monday. If she can manage it, I will escort her on Tuesday or Thursday (my only free days in the week) – but I suspect it is doubtful whether she can get away. You shall hear after Monday. In any case, if you see your way to having somebody in my room between this & the middle of the month, send the invitation. I shall come down I hope for a long stay a day or two after Yarmouth. And I shall try & get to you for the day, or for the day & one night next week (whether Mrs E. comes or not) to bring you some books before I go to the seaside. If anybody is staying with you, I will have the small room. I shall prefer it.<sup>4</sup>

Send me a line to say how you are, and if this complication statement [sic] of my arrangements is intelligible. My love to [Charley].<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours aftly | WC

---

1. At Morgan there is also an unattached envelope without a unique MS number, at the end of the series of letters to WC’s mother, after item MA 3150/117. This is directed to ‘Mrs Harriet Collins | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells’, with postmark illegible but a faint endorsement at Tunbridge Wells, where the digits ‘2’ and ‘65’ are just visible. This seems likely to be the matching envelope.

2. Pigott was still working as a political correspondent of the Daily News.

3. WC's mother was then still staying at Elm Lodge, Mount Ephraim, Tunbridge Wells.

4. Here both 'the Deanness' and 'Mrs E.' refer to WC's friend Frances Dickinson, who, by marrying Gilbert Elliot, the Dean of Bristol, on 3 November 1863, became Mrs Elliot. For an account of her visit to HC in July 1865, see Peters, p. 331.

5. The closure of the letter is written hastily and the name might also be read as 'Harry', but the reference is probably to CAC who was undoubtedly staying with HC in Tunbridge Wells the previous month – see [0639] to HC, 2 May 1865.

[0646] TO W. H. WILLS, 23 JULY 1865<sup>1</sup>

MS: Johns Hopkins (in extra-illustrated copy of John Forster, Life of Charles Dickens, 2nd edn (London: Chapman & Hall, 1872), III, p. 54). Published: BGLL, II, p. 17.

Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells | Sunday July 23

My dear Wills,

I am hard at work here,<sup>2</sup> and I shall not be able to leave for the Guild party on Saturday next.<sup>3</sup>

Is it true that you have no poor members to put into the houses now they are built? If it is, I should like to have some talk with you, when we are both next in town, about a poor author who might possibly be qualified for one of the houses, and whose entrance-money I would pay, if he was thought a "worthy object".<sup>4</sup>

Your ever, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the calendar and HC's lodgings.

2. With his sick mother, writing Armada.

3. On Saturday 29 July members of the Guild of Literature and Art, founded in 1850 by CD and Bulwer-Lytton, went to see three Gothic style houses built on land near Stevenage given by Lytton for the Guild's use. It acted as an insurance society for writers and also provided houses for needy or retired writers and artists, built on Bulwer-Lytton's estate at Knebworth, Hertfordshire; CD made a speech afterwards at Knebworth. See Pilgrim, VI, p. ix, and also VI, p. 852 for the Guild's Prospectus.

4. The author in question remains unidentified.

[0647] TO T. W. ANGELL,<sup>1</sup> 5 AUGUST 1865

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 17–18.

Royal Hotel | Lowestoft | Aug 5th 1865

Dear Sir,

I have just received your kind note – and I beg permission, through you, to make my acknowledgment to the Members of the Arts' Club for the honour that they have conferred on me.

I will take care that my entrance fee and subscription are paid as you direct.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

T.W. Angell Esq

---

1. Victorian painter, then Secretary of The Arts' Club, the exclusive Mayfair club founded in 1863 in Hanover Square, which moved to its present address of 40 Dover Street in 1896. WC perhaps joined the Club as a substitute for the Garrick, which he had resigned from in March. For a history of the Club, see Bernard Denvir, A Most Agreeable Society (London: Arts Club, 1989).

2. See [0648] to Coutts & Co., 16 August 1865, for the membership fees, which were five guineas entrance plus five guineas subscription per year.

[0648] TO COUTTS & Co., 16 AUGUST 1865

MS: Coutts. Published: BGLL, II, p. 18.

[stamp]<sup>1</sup> | London. 16th August 1865

Gentlemen,

Please pay to the Union Bank,<sup>2</sup> Argyll Place, Regent Street, the sum of Ten Guineas – being my entrance fee and subscription to The Arts' Club.<sup>3</sup> And be good enough for the future to pay my annual subscription to the same Club, viz: – Five Guineas – on the 1st of July, until further notice.<sup>4</sup>

Wilkie Collins
Messrs Coutts & Co

-
1. A mauve penny stamp endorsed 'WC | 16 Aug | 1865'.
  2. The Union Bank of London, now absorbed into the Royal Bank of Scotland.
  3. See [0647] to T. W. Angell of 5 August 1865.
  4. Debited to WC's bank account on 19 August. Only three more payments to the Arts Club are recorded, the last of £6-6s on 29 April 1869 (Coutts: WC).

[0649] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 17 AUGUST 1865

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, p. 258. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 18–19.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | 17th Augt 1865

My dear Mother,

The number is done at last, and I must go on tomorrow and begin the next, or lose one of my three months of advance, which I won't do yet if I can help it.<sup>2</sup>

I am better – but there are certain small derangements about me which are not quite set right yet. I hope to get to T. Wells in a week's time – or possibly less. But don't make any preparations or upset any arrangements for going to Bentham Hill. In the present backward state of my work, I cannot yet be certain of my arrangements. I will write again in a few days – after I have cut out the work to be done in the next number, and seen my doctor once or twice more.

London is not so bad in August. It is wonderfully quiet – all the people who interrupt are away – and the post is delightfully slow in bringing letters. Charles Ward is back, and Pigott is here tied to the paper.<sup>3</sup> All our other friends are away – and I roam the empty streets, and inhale the delightful London air (so much healthier than those pretentious humbugs the seaside breezes!), and meet nobody, and come back with the blessed conviction that I have not got to “dress” and go out to dinner, and feel that London in August is London under a most attractive aspect.

My love to Rosa.<sup>4</sup> I had hoped she would have got stronger in your bracing air. If she would only write a serial story, she would find it impossible to be ill long – the printers would not allow it!

Talking of printers, Charley's new title is certainly not a good one.<sup>5</sup> But I don't think it matters. Any title will do – if a book succeeds – and no title will do if it doesn't.<sup>6</sup>

Yours ever affly | WC

I hope you have been to the theatre at the Wells, and taken Rosa there with you. A civilized example of that kind is much needed by the pious barbarians in your parts.

-
1. Directed to 'Mrs Harriet Collins | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked as dated.
  2. This must refer to the November and December numbers of Armada (Parts 13 and 14) – see [0645] to HC of 1 July 1865, where he mentions finishing the October number.
  3. The Daily News.
  4. The wife of John Bullar – see [0576] to HC of 20 April 1864.
  5. At the Bar, serialized in All the Year Round from 23 September 1865, and published in two volumes by Chapman & Hall in 1866.
  6. These comments are in sharp contrast to WC's own concern to find the right title for his own books. See, for example, [0455] to HC of 4 February 1862; see also the discussion in Blain.

[0650] TO CHARLES WARD, 17 AUGUST 1865

MS: Harrowby (f. 50). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 19–20.

9 Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | Augt 17th 1865

My dear Ward,

I have made two vain attempts to get to Coutts's before 4. The order for the Arts Club is on the other side.<sup>1</sup> Will you see if Smith & Elder have made any payment since: – “June 21st 1865.<sup>2</sup> £500?” That is the last credit in my banking book. If you can come on Sunday I will give you the banking book.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

C. & the child have come back, both languid & dismal.<sup>3</sup> I am myself far from well.

---

1. The second leaf of the folding note paper has been torn away, but is clearly [0648] to Coutts & Co. dated 16 August 1865.

2. The payments from Smith Elder were sporadic. There was one of £500 on 21 June and another which WC had apparently not seen of £250 on 14 July (Coutts: WC). See [0631] to George Smith, 11 March 1865, n. 2.

3. Referring to Caroline and Carrie Graves, who have clearly been away for a summer holiday.

[3029] TO UNKNOWN RECIPIENT, 22 AUGUST 1865

MS: Parrish (5/11/AM14749). Published: Parrish & Miller, p. 57 (dated 22 August 1885); A&C3, p. 41.

August 22nd 1865 /

“I must go” he said, as he turned wearily from the window, “before she comes to the house again. I must go before another hour is over my head.” With that resolution he left the room; and, in leaving it, took the irrevocable step from Present to Future.

From “Armadale” (Book III Chapter XIII)<sup>1</sup> | By | Wilkie Collins

---

1. As in the Cornhill serialization (Cornhill, XII, Book the Third, Chapter XIII, p. 200) which was published in the August issue. In the first volume edition (Armadale, London: Smith, Elder 1866), Book the First was renamed Prologue so this extract is found at vol. I, Book the Second, Chapter XIII, pp. 299–300.

[0651] TO THE REV. DR DEEMS,<sup>1</sup> 5 OCTOBER 1865

MS: Fales. Published: Coleman, p. 95; B&C, I, pp. 258–60. Summary: BGLL, II, p. 20.

Elm Lodge – Mount Ephraim | Turnbridge Wells | England. | Oct: 5th 1865

Dear Sir,

I have had no earlier opportunity than this, of replying to your letter.

I think I can give, what is called, a practical answer to the question prompted by your kind interest in my book. Neither “The Woman In White”, nor any other of my serial stories, [del] were completed in manuscript, before their periodical publication. I was consequently obliged to know every step of my way from beginning to end, before I started on my journey.

To make this plain, by an instance. When I sat down to write the seventh weekly part of “The Woman In White”, the first weekly part was being published simultaneously in “All The Year Round”, and in “Harper's Weekly”.<sup>2</sup> No after-thoughts in connection with the first part, were possible under the circumstances – and the same rule applied of course week after week to the rest of the story. I had no choice, but to know what to do before hand throughout the whole story – and months before a line of it was written for the press, I was accumulating that knowledge in a mass of “notes” which contained a complete outline of the story and the characters. I knew what Sir Perceval Glyde was going to do with the marriage-register, and how Count Fosco's night at the opera was to be spoilt by the appearance of Professor Pesca, before a line of the book was in the printers [sic] hands. The minor details of incident, and the minuter touches of character, I leave to suggest themselves to me at the time of writing for [del] publication. But the great stages of the story, and the main features of the characters, invariably lie before me on my desk before I begin my book. In the story I am now writing (“Armada”), the last number [del] is to be published [del] several months hence – and the whole close of the story is still unwritten.<sup>3</sup> But I know at this moment who is to live and who is to die – and I see the main events which lead to the end as plainly as I see the pen now in my hand – as plainly as I see the ground laid, months since, in the [del] published part of the story, for what (if I am spared to finish it) you will read months hence. How I shall lead you from one main event to the other – whether I shall dwell at length on certain details or pass them over rapidly – [del] how I may yet develop my characters and make them clearer to you by new touches and traits – all this, I know no more than you do, till I take the pen in hand. But the characters themselves were /all/ marshalled in their places, before a line of “Armada” was written. And I knew the end two years ago in Rome, when I was recovering from a long illness, and was putting the story together.<sup>4</sup>

Such is the best explanation I can offer of all that is explainable in the mental process which produces my stories. I beg you will accept it as an acknowledgment on my part of the interest you feel in my books, and as some small repayment (made through you) of the debt of obligation which I owe to my American readers.

Believe me | Dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | The Rev<sup>d</sup> D<sup>r</sup> Deems | &c &c &c

-
1. Charles Force Deems (1820–1893), Methodist minister, and precocious author of The Life of Dr Adam Clarke (1840) and The Triumph of Peace and other Poems (1840). In 1868 he was to found the Church of the Strangers, New York, and later authored Jesus (1872) and A Scotch Verdict in Evolution (1885).
  2. On 29 November 1859.
  3. Armada began in the Cornhill in November 1864 and ran for twenty months until June 1866.
  4. WC was in Italy during the winter of 1863 and the spring of 1864.

[0652] TO MRS MONCTON,<sup>1</sup> 20 OCTOBER 1865

MS: Lewis. Published: BGLL, II, p. 20; Lewis website.

I have great pleasure in complying with Mrs Moncton’s wish to possess my Autograph.
Wilkie Collins | Tunbridge Wells | October 20th 1865

-
1. Probably the wife of John B. Moncton of 43 Russell Square, who later served on the ‘Bellew Fund’ committee with WC – see [1449] to Thomas Dixon Spain of 16 May 1874.

[0653] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 28 OCTOBER 1865

MS: Pembroke, with envelope,<sup>1</sup> and associated document.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 20–21.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Saty Oct 28th

My dear Mother,

The letter you forwarded to me the other day was from my correspondent at Newcastle on Tyne<sup>3</sup> – who has redeemed his promise, and sent me the Story of Tunbridge Wells. I enclose it, and you will see (if you can make it out!) that the circumstances are really curious. Keep the narrative somewhere safe for me, till I get back to Elm Lodge. And, in the meantime, make the inquiry of Mr Seaman which my correspondent tells me (in his letter, not forwarded in this) that he wants made. Here it is: – Is there now residing at T. Wells a person named Edmund Lewis, son of Benjamin Lewis, who was forty years ago the head Baker in the town?<sup>4</sup>

That is all! Let me hear how the inquiry ends, and how you are getting on.

I am “doing well” as they say of the lying-in ladies – and hope to have done the number in a week.<sup>5</sup> Met Frith yesterday who asked after you – am going to dine with Billy Grant on Monday<sup>6</sup> – have heard from Lehmann that Charlie & wife are at the Langham Hotel – shall see

C. Ward tomorrow.

Yours ever affly | WC

I have got all the law-difficulties of Armadale settled to the end by my friend Benham – who tells me that an indignant letter has been addressed to some newspaper about my voluptuous treatment of the character of Miss Gwilt. Hooray!<sup>7</sup>

You will have the new Cornhill in a day or two. WC

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Harriet Collins | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked as dated.
  2. A seven-page manuscript in an unknown hand, recounting the droll story of an indigent gentleman who went unsuccessfully on the stage at Tunbridge Wells, where he met a young heiress who fell in love with him but died just before she came of age.
  3. The ‘correspondent at Newcastle’ is perhaps B. W. Ball, to whom WC had written on 26 June 1865 concerning a story of suspended animation in the Times ([0644]).
  4. The results of the enquiry remain unknown, while WC seems never to have used the ‘story of Tunbridge Wells’.
  5. This must be the January number of Armadale (Part 15) – see [0655] to Frederick Enoch of 19 November 1865.
  6. Family friend who died the following year (see [0683] to HC, 4 June 1866).
  7. For an account of contemporary reactions to Lydia Gwilt in the press, see the Introduction to Armadale, ed. John Sutherland (London: Penguin, 1995), pp. xix–xx.

[0654] TO HENRI G. DE MUSSY,<sup>1</sup> 13 NOVEMBER 1865<sup>2</sup>

MS: Unknown. On sale: Sotheby’s, Dorothy L. Sayers sale (19 December 2000), lot 49. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 21–22.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Nov 13th

Dear Dr Mussy,

Many thanks for the book.<sup>3</sup>

I am going into the country, tomorrow and I shall take it with me and read it with great interest. On my return to town, I will leave it at your house.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Henri Gueneau de Mussy, 4 Cavendish Place, who qualified in Paris in 1844 and became a Fellow of the Royal College Physicians in London in 1860. He wrote papers on pulmonary apoplexy, rheumatism, and lead poisoning (Medical Directory, 1870, p. 84). He acted as physician to CAC and his wife Kate – see [0714] to Nina Lehmann, 9 December 1866.
  2. WC was at 9 Melcombe Place in November only in 1865. In November 1866 he was still in Italy.
  3. Unidentified. No volumes by de Mussy appear in the BL Catalogue or seem to have been found in WC’s library at his death (Baker).

[0655] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 19 NOVEMBER 1865

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, II, p. 22.

Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells | Sunday Nov 19th

Dear Sir,

If you don’t get the Revises of monthly part 15 (the last printed)<sup>1</sup> in time to send them here by Monday’s post, please let me have them at 9. Melcombe Place.

I leave here for town on Tuesday afternoon.

Yours faithfully | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Of Armadale in the Cornhill – Part 15 (comprising Book Third, chs 11–13 in the volume edition) appeared in the January 1866 issue.

[3377] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 28 NOVEMBER 1865

MS: Unknown. On sale: Heritage Auctions (9–10 June 2021, lot 45666). Published: A&C14, p. 6.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins | Novr 28th 1865 /

---

1. In the format of an autograph for a collector. Affixed to the first of the new front blanks in The Woman in White, New York: Harper & Brothers, 1860. Not otherwise associated with the book. Sold with [3381] to unidentified, 4 February 1871.

[0656] TO J. H. NIGHTINGALE,<sup>1</sup> 30 NOVEMBER 1865

MS: Morgan (MA 4500). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 22–23.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square, London, | Nov 30th 1865

Dear Sir,

I am a diligent reader of the Facts which you send round to the newspapers – for they are of great importance to my Fiction.

I had seen the account of the strange series of deaths on board the “Armadale” and had satisfied myself that any coincidences in the Story were prosaic and probable by comparison with such a coincidence as was presented to me in the newspaper.

But I am indebted to your kindness for the report of the Inquest, which completes the narrative, and which will take its place with a manuscript collection of strange (and true) events presented to me at various times by the hearty good will of my readers.<sup>2</sup>

Pray accept my thanks, | and believe me

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | J.H. Nightingale Esqre

---

1. Joseph Henry (‘Joe’) Nightingale (1827–1882: ‘Death of Mr J.H. Nightingale’, Manchester Courier, 24 January 1882, p. 7), of the Liverpool news agency of Lee & Nightingale, a well-known local figure and frequent contributor to the local press, whose collected papers are now held in Liverpool Central Library. Pilgrim records seven brief letters from CD to Nightingale between 14 December 1852 (Pilgrim. VI, p. 830) and 22 April 1870 (Pilgrim. XII, pp. 511–512).

2. WC refers to the coincidence mentioned here in the Appendix to the first edition of Armadale in two volumes in 1866:

In November, 1865, – that is to say, when thirteen monthly parts of “Armadale” had been published; and, I may add, when more than a year and a half had elapsed since the end of the story, as it now appears, was first sketched in my note-book – a vessel lay in the Huskisson Dock, at Liverpool, which was looked after by one man who slept on board, in the capacity of shipkeeper. On a certain day in the week, this man was found dead in the deck-house. On the next day a second man, who had taken his place, was carried dying to the Northern Hospital. On the third day, a third ship-keeper was appointed, and was found dead in the deckhouse which had already proved fatal to the other two. The name of that ship was “The Armadale.” And the proceedings at the Inquest proved that the three men had been all suffocated by sleeping in poisoned air!

I am indebted for these particulars to the kindness of the reporters at Liverpool, who sent me their statement of the facts. The case found its way into most of the newspapers. It was noticed – to give two instances in which I can cite the dates – in The Times of November 30th, 1865, and was more fully described in the Daily News of November 28th, in the same year.

[0657] TO [NINA LEHMANN],<sup>1</sup> 6 DECEMBER 1865<sup>2</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 97 (as to Henrietta Ward); B&C, I, p. 260 (also as to Henrietta Ward). Summary: BGLL, II, p. 23.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Gdns. N. W. | Wednesday Decr 6th

I have been here – Syren of the Pianoforte – with my back tied up in knots by neuralgic rheumatism, ever since I last saw (and heard) you [del]. I am going tomorrow to comfort the old lady at Tunbridge Wells.<sup>3</sup> And, if I am not utterly crippled, I will come back by Sunday next at seven.

My own hope is that the change of air may do me good. But the infernal damp is mischief to a wretch of my constitution – and I sometimes doubt if I shall be able to tide over [del] the English winter, unless the frost comes. Well is the typical Englishman nick-named “John Bull”. The nervous system of a Bull, is the necessary nervous system for any man who lives in this island. Oh my country, between November and February, how I hate you!

Yours ever affly | WC

---

1. Nina Lehmann was in WC’s view an expert pianist (see Lehmann, Ancestors and Friends, p. 161) – hence ‘Syren of the Pianoforte’, which perhaps refers to a recent domestic performance. She is also the only female friend he wrote to around this time with this intimate valediction, and often without salutation..
2. Dating based on the watermark ‘JOYNSON 1863’ – 6 December was a Wednesday in 1865 and not again until 1871, by which time WC had moved to Gloucester Place.
3. WC’s 73 year old mother who was staying at Elm Lodge.

[3030] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 7 DECEMBER 1865

MS: Massachusetts HS. Published: A&C3, p. 41.

9, Melcombe Place | N.W. | Decr 7th 1865

Dear sir,

The duplicate proofs for February have reached me safely,<sup>1</sup> in good time before I go away today.<sup>2</sup>

Many thanks.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Frederick Enoch Esqr

---

1. Of Armada serialised in the Cornhill.
2. To Tunbridge Wells to see his mother.

[0658] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 9 DECEMBER 1865

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, II, p. 23.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | London | Decr 9th 1865

Dear Sir,

I have been away from London, or I would have sooner complied with the request which you make to me on behalf of your German friends.

On the next leaf you will find a few lines, signed as you request.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The second leaf of the notepaper has been torn away but was probably simply an autograph or a brief quotation from one of WC’s novels.

[0660] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 12 JANUARY 1866

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 24.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | 12th Jany

Dear Sir,

It was the March part that I proposed to make longer – and this has been done by the addition of “Book 5. Chapter I” – the proof of which I have received.

I am sorry that you should have been put to any trouble in this. I thought I had made it understood that March was the number to be lengthened. The lengthening of Febry is impossible – and the number can go to press therefore just as it now stands.<sup>1</sup>

I enclose the Illustration lettered.<sup>2</sup>

Yours faithfully | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The February 1866 instalment of Armadale (Part 16) comprised Book Third, ch. 14 of the volume edition, while that for March contained both Book Third, ch. 15 and the first part of Book Fourth, ch. 1 (up to the October 13 entry from ‘Miss Gwilt’s Diary’).
2. The illustration by George H. Thomas for the February number bears the lettering ‘The End of the Elopement’, and shows the hero slumped in a chair, hands in pockets, with Midwinter and Lydia Gwilt leaning over him in concern.

[0661] TO FANNY MITCHELL,<sup>1</sup> 25 JANUARY 1866

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 24–25.

9 Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. NW. | Janry 25th 1866

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I have been ill again, since I last had the pleasure of hearing from you – or I should have made my appearance in Great Stanhope St some days since. As your kindness and Mr Mitchell’s give me “another chance” I will do my best this time to take advantage of it – and I hope and trust I shall have the pleasure of sitting at your friendly table on Sunday Feby 4th, at 7.30 punctually.

With many thanks, | believe me | very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I write with a bad pen, and a rheumatic arm. Pardon the blots of infirmity!

---

1. The wife of Alexander Mitchell, MP for Berwick-on-Tweed, resident at 6 Great Stanhope Street – see [0337], WC’s first surviving letter to her, of 23 March [1859–60].

[0662] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 6 FEBRUARY 1866

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, I, p. 254 (dated 6 February 1865). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 25–26.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Tuesday Feby 6th

My dear Mother,

I have got a quarter of an hour to myself, at last, and I use it to write to you. Between work, and evening engagements, I am living rather in a whirl just now – but it seems to agree with me. My friend Beard has hit on a fortifying compound of drugs, Quinine, Acid, and Dandelion, that has done me infinite good. Seven and twenty pages of No 18 are done and in the printer’s hands – but I must extend the number to three pages more, to leave myself elbow room in 19 & 20. So much for “Armadale”.<sup>2</sup>

I have an idea of trying to get to you on Monday next, the 12th – to go back the following Saturday, the 17th, when I have a dinner at Sir F. Goldsmid’s, which I ought to go to for they have most kindly overlooked all my shortcomings in regard to former invitations.<sup>3</sup> However, I shall have five days at Elm Lodge, and that is better than nothing.

Let me hear if this plan interferes with any projected visit to B. Hill<sup>4</sup> – and we will alter the arrangement.

Another of my plans (still in the clouds) is to go to Paris again with Lehmann towards the latter part of the month.<sup>5</sup> I am going to dine there tomorrow quietly, to see if we can manage it – and you shall hear more, when I know for certain how this Paris project ends. I certainly want a change – and I think it would give me a fillip for the last two numbers, in which I must put out all my strength.

I called on Charley & Katie a week ago, and found them both, not only well, but Fat! Charley had not then heard from Chapman & Hall. He promised to let me know when something was settled – but I have received no news from him yet.<sup>6</sup> We shall meet next Sunday at Highgate, when there is a dinner party. What can I bring you? Write and tell me.

Ever affly yours WC

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Harriet Collins | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells.', with no visible postmark, but franked twice on the reverse, 'CHARINGCROSS.-W.C. | C 7 | FE 7 | 66', and endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE-WELLS | B | FE 7 | 66'.
2. The last three monthly numbers of the novel in the Cornhill from April to June 1866; the April number occupied pp. 439–468 in the magazine.
3. See [0425] of 14 June 1861 to Lady Louisa Goldsmid, wife of Sir Francis Goldsmid.
4. That is, Bentham Hill Cottage.
5. The plan was postponed due to Nina Lehmann's illness – see [0666] to HC of 17 March 1866.
6. This must refer to CAC's latest novel At the Bar, published in two volumes by Chapman & Hall in 1866.

[0663] TO F. C. BEARD, 8 FEBRUARY 1866

MS: CDM. Published: BGLL, II, p. 26.

Thursday<sup>1</sup>

My dear B.
 Many thanks.
 Tell Dickens I will be at Verrey's at 7 [o'clock] with pleasure.<sup>2</sup>
 Ever yours | WC

-
1. Dating from CD's note to Beard of 8 February 1866 suggesting the arrangement (Pilgrim, XI, p. 133, also found at CDM).
  2. WC misspells Verrey's – the restaurant at 229 Regent Street – in the same way as CD (Pilgrim, XI, p. 153 n. 8).

[0664] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 13 FEBRUARY 1866

MS: Morgan (Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/9). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 26–27.

Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells | 13th Feby

Dear Sir,

The illustration has followed me here, today. I return it at once, lettered.<sup>1</sup>

I also enclose the first 24 pages of part 18 corrected for Revise. No need to send me the Revises, until the additional copy which I left for you yesterday, has been set up and corrected so as to make the number complete at press.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Frederick Enoch Esq<sup>re</sup>

-
1. This must be George H. Thomas's plate for the March number of Armadale in the Cornhill (corresponding to Book Third, ch. 15 and Book Fourth, ch. 1 in the volume edition). This bears the lettering 'Father and Son', and shows the Bashwoods at the breakfast table in the inn on the Thames.
  2. Part 18 was the penultimate part and appeared in May 1866.

[3031] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 14 MARCH 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: UPenn. Published: A&C3, pp. 41–42.

9. Melcombe Place | March 14th

My dear Sir,

I was in a hurry this afternoon or I should have tried to get through the closed door.

I enclose the Illustration (one of the very best, I think, that has appeared) with the lettering.<sup>2</sup>

Many thanks for the book-proofs. I have very few alterations to make. You shall have the first volume for the printers in a few days.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | If “Armadale” is not republished in three volumes, please let me know. If I don’t hear from you, I will assume that the book will appear in the usual form of three volumes.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. Year dating based on the reference to the volume publication of Armadale.
  2. Probably the plate for the April number of the Cornhill.
  3. In fact published in two volumes, in June 1866.

[0665] TO ALICE WARD,<sup>1</sup> 14 MARCH 1866

MS: Bodleian (MS. Autogr. b.9, pp. 1493–1496). Published: BGLL, II, p. 27.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Wednesday March 14th

My dear Alice,

I have only today returned from a visit to my mother at Tunbridge Wells – or I should have sooner thanked you for your letter and your Mama for her kind remembrance of me. The only free day I have this week is Friday next. If that will suit you, I shall be delighted to see the picture between 4 & 5 (or nearer 5), and to dine with you all quietly afterwards.<sup>2</sup>

If Friday will not suit you, let me know what day next week will do. If Friday, at the time I have mentioned, is convenient, please send me one line to say so.

Your affectionate godfather | Wilkie Collins

-
1. WC’s goddaughter was now around seventeen years old.
  2. Referring to Henrietta Ward’s painting ‘Palissy the Potter’ – see [0666] to HC of 17 March 1866.

[0666] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 17 MARCH 1866

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 27–28.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Saturday March 17

My dear Mother,

A word to say that I am going on steadily with the number<sup>2</sup> – and that my head is better than it was.

Here, my good news ends. Paris, with the Lehmann’s, is put off – poor dear Mrs Lehmann being very ill – one of the lungs affected, and the doctor declaring that it is likely to be a long illness. I have seen her – and she is as cheerful as ever, but when she will be able to travel nobody knows.

A complete set of “Armadale” has been sent to me to correct for the book – so you needn’t hurry to get back our copies of the set of numbers in the Cornhill. The book is to be published in two thick volumes (no doubt for the sake of the Illustrations). I should have thought three would have paid better – but S & E know best.<sup>3</sup>

I dined with the E. M. Wards quietly last night. She has painted by far her best picture. “Palissy the Potter”, ~~breaking his~~ in the midst of his starving children, at the moment when he has broken his works in despair.<sup>4</sup>

Alice is going to send you a photograph of herself – which I chose.<sup>5</sup> What I shall do when this book is done, I don’t now know. Wait till the book is done.

How are you getting on – and when do you go to Bentham Hill? Let me hear.

Yours ever affly | WC

I am taking my work easy, and don’t expect to be done before Easter.<sup>6</sup> You shall have the Sat<sup>d</sup> & Athenaeum on the Monday or Tuesday.<sup>7</sup>

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked as dated.
  2. Presumably the last part of Armadale (Part 20), to appear in the Cornhill in June 1866. Smith, Elder & Co. published both the Cornhill and Armadale in volume form. The Cornhill illustrations, by George Housman Thomas (1824–1868), were also used in the book. Why Armadale should call for a two-volume rather than a three-volume edition is not clear. WC's three previous novels had been published in All The Year Round and as triple-deckers without illustrations.

3. Henrietta Ward's painting was sent to the Royal Academy that year; a reproduction appeared in the Illustrated London News on 18 August 1866.
4. WC's goddaughter, Alice Ward.
5. Easter Sunday fell on 1 April in 1866 and Armadale was finished on 12 April – see [0673] to HC of that date.
6. WC refers to the two weekly review papers, the Saturday Review and Athenæum.

[0667] TO ALICE WARD, 19 MARCH 1866

MS: Bodleian (MS. Autogr. b.9, pp. 1497–1501). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 28–29.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | 19th March

My dear Alice,

Judging by the handwriting on a certain envelope which the post has brought me, I believe you have kindly taken the trouble to send me back a lost and dreary-looking pair of gloves.<sup>1</sup> It is one of your godfather's innumerable weaknesses to be perpetually losing his gloves – but he very seldom meets with a young lady who is merciful enough to help him to find them again. Accept the sincere expression of his gratitude and of his resolution, the next time he sees you, to put himself and his gloves entirely under your charge. In the meantime, believe him to be

Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC must have left his gloves behind when visiting the Wards for dinner on Friday 16 – see [0665] to Alice of 14 March.

[3378] TO ELIZABETH BENZON, 22 MARCH 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection (L2940). Published: A&C14, p. 6.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W.
Thursday. March 22nd

Dear Mrs Benzon,

I am a little worn out by work that must be finished – and I am living the life of a hermit till the work is done.<sup>2</sup> But I can't resist your kind letter – and I most gladly accept the Sunday dinner ~~on~~ at 7 o'clock.

Vry truly yours| Wilkie Collins

---

1. That year is the only one at Melcombe Place in which 22 March was a Thursday.
2. WC was finishing the last monthly part of Armadale for Cornhill Magazine, where it appeared in the June number, and correcting proofs for volume I of the two volume edition. See [0666] to Harriet Collins, 17 March 1866, and [0669] to Frederick Enoch, 23 March 1866.

[0668] TO F. V. PHILLIPS,<sup>1</sup> 23 MARCH 1866

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 98 (tentatively dated 25 March 1866); BGLL, II, p. 29.

9 Melcombe Place | Dorset Square NW. | March 23rd 1866.

Dear Sir

Your kind letter has only reached me to-day.

I am greatly obliged to you for drawing my attention to an official regulation of which I was not aware – but in conforming to which I have unquestionably, like other English writers, a direct personal interest. My idea, until you informed me better, was that all foreign reprints were absolutely forbidden – as foreign reprints – to be brought into England.<sup>2</sup>

I have communicated with my publishers in regard to the necessary notice<sup>3</sup> – and once more thanking you,

I remain | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
F V Phillips Eq.

---

1. Otherwise unidentified ‘gentleman connected with the Custom House’ – see [0669] to Frederick Enoch of the same date, which clarifies the nature of Phillips’s approach to WC.
2. Although the 1842 Copyright Act (5 & 6 Victoria c.45, s.XVII) prohibited the importing of foreign reprints of English copyright works ‘for sale or hire’ on pain of their confiscation and a fine of £10 plus twice the value of the books, Phillips had informed WC that the customs authorities had to be specifically notified that copyright pertained in the works in question. Here the Tauchnitz Collection of British Authors were the reprints at issue.
3. See again [0669] to Frederick Enoch, on the staff of Smith Elder, and Co.

[0669] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 23 MARCH 1866

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 30.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | March 23rd

My dear Sir,

If you can send a messenger here on Monday morning next, the copy for the 1st Volume of “Armada” in book-form will be ready for the printers on that day.<sup>1</sup>

Will you also kindly communicate to the Publishing Department, that I have received a letter from a gentleman connected with The Custom House, informing me that the Tauchnitz Editions of my books are constantly brought into England in the luggage of travellers, and allowed to pass into circulation here, in consequence of “the absence of notice of the subsistence of copyright in my works, required by the existing regulations to prevent introduction of foreign reprints”<sup>2</sup>

The notice, it appears, is to be given to “the Commissioners of H. M’s Customs.” Whether I am bound to give it for the works of mine of which I still possess the copyright – or whether Messrs Smith & Elder, as my publishers, can give it for me, as well as for themselves, I am not aware. But we are clearly suffering a loss in consequence of the absence of the notice, and it seems desirable to do something in the matter as soon as may be.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Frederick Enoch Eqre

---

1. Published in two volumes by Smith, Elder in June 1866.

2. See [0668] to F. V. Phillips of the same date.

[0670] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 26 MARCH 1866

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/91), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 273. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 30–31.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square NW | Monday March 26

My dear Mother,

You will be looking for a report from me in the intervals of packing. I am wonderfully well, considering the work I have got to do. And as to the work, I am better than halfway through the last number. I should have been nearer the end, if I had not encountered difficulties in reconciling necessary chemical facts, with the incidents of the story. But Hills has helped me nobly, and the difficulties are vanquished, and I hope and trust I shall have written the last lines early in next month.<sup>2</sup>

Let me hear how you are, and how you get on with the preparations for moving. Charley (whom I saw yesterday at the Benzon’s) tells me he will be with you on the 31st.

Mrs Lehmann is much better – able to get out for a drive. Lehmann begins to talk of Paris again.

I have no news. I refuse most invitations, and stick to my work.

Ever yours affly | WC

P.S. I have sent you the Sat<sup>y</sup> Review<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked on the following day.
2. Thomas Hyde Hills, the chemist; see [0550] to him of 21 August 1863.
3. It seems unlikely that WC sends the copy of the weekly Saturday Review on account of a particular article. A review of Elizabeth Gaskell's Wives and Daughters happened to appear in the issue of 24 March 1866, pp. 360–361; Armada was not reviewed there until 16 June, pp. 726–727.

[0671] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 APRIL 1866

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/92), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 273–274.

Sunday April 1

My dear Mother,

A line to keep you going. I shall be done – barring accidents – in a week more. I have also bought in £300 more – and am now possessed of £1500 in the Funds.<sup>2</sup> About as much saved from “Armada” as Marshall & Snellgrove make in a quarter of an hour by the brains and industry of other people.<sup>3</sup> If I live, I will take a shop – and appeal to the backs or bellies (I have not yet decided which) instead of the brains of my fellow creatures.

I am reported “dead” in France – and a Frenchman writes to say that he has betted ten bottles of Champagne that I am alive – and to [del] beg I will say so, if I am!

Give my love to Charley if he is with you – and send me a letter.

Ever yours afly | WC

You will have the Saty tomorrow or next day.<sup>4</sup> Did you get the Cornhill? Was there ever such a dull Magazine? I wonder anybody reads it.

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'LONDON-N.W | 7 | AP 2 | 66', and endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE WELLS | B | AP 2 | 66'. The envelope also bears a note in HC's shaky hand beginning 'Sons letters ...'.

2. The reference is to an investment in government bonds. On 20 March he bought £300 of Consols – government bonds which paid a fixed rate of 3% interest. Their price rose and fell and he bought them at £87<sup>1</sup>/<sub>8</sub> per £100 with 7s-6d brokerage fee, making £261-15s debited to his account. This was the last of six purchases with the Armada money beginning in 25 October 1864. It amounted to £1500 of Consols at a total cost to him of £1336-6s-3d (Coutts: WC). Peters (p. 270) gets it wrong, claiming that, with his earnings from Armada, WC 'could afford to buy £300 of wine...and invest £1,500 in the Funds', but this must be based on a misreading of 'more' as 'wine'.

3. Thus for Marshall & Snellgrove, the large department store opened in 1851 on the north side of London's Oxford Street, on the corner with Vere Street.

4. Clearly referring to a copy of that week's Saturday Review.

[0672] TO FELIX MOSCHELES,<sup>1</sup> 10 APRIL 1866

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 31–32.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Tuesday April 10th

My dear Sir,

Your kind note finds me working all through the daylight (and after the daylight has gone) at the last Chapters of a long Serial Story. I had hoped to have done today in time to see your picture – but I have not reached the end yet. And if I finish tomorrow or next day, the picture will be gone!<sup>3</sup>

Pray accept my excuses and believe me

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

F. Moscheles Esqre

---

1. Felix Stone Moscheles (1833–1917), portrait painter exhibiting at the Royal Academy from 1862–87. He was the godson of Felix Mendelssohn and son of Ignaz Moscheles (1794–1870), eminent German pianist and composer, who settled in London in 1821 and taught at the new Royal Academy of Music, his pupils including CD's older sister Fanny.

See Felix Moscheles, Fragments of an Autobiography (London: J. Nisbet, 1899). Moscheles seems to have been related to the Benzons and thus, by marriage, to the Lehmanns.

2. Directed to 'F. Moscheles Esqre | Cadogan Gardens | Sloane St | S.W.', postmarked the following day.

3. Referring to the painting 'Paul and Florence Dombey' – see CD's letter to Moscheles of 12 April 1866 (Pilgrim XI, p. 182).

[0673] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 12 APRIL 1866

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/93), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 274.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Thursday April 12th [del]

My dear Mother,

Here is something to start you pleasantly on your move tomorrow:

I Have Done<sup>2</sup>

!!!

It has been a tremendous job – nearer 50 pages than 30 – and we have had to enlarge the /19th/ number which you have read. But done it is – and done well, though I say it that should'nt!

I shall see Lehmann about Paris tonight or tomorrow. [del] If [del] you don't hear from me again assume that I have gone – and that my next letter will be from Paris.<sup>3</sup>

We shall not be away more than ten days – and then I can see the new lodging.

Yours ever affly | WC

I will tell them to send you the proof, when ready, at Mr Pott's.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Direct to 'Mrs Collins | Elm Lodge | Mount Ephraim | Tunbridge Wells', postmark obscured, but endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE WELLS | AP 13 | 66'.

2. Written in large bold letters. WC thus finished writing Armadale six weeks before the final instalment was published in the Cornhill.

3. His next letter to HC was in fact [0675] of 22 April, direct from a Paris hotel.

4. Referring to the residence at Bentham Hill, Tunbridge Wells, of Arthur Pott and his second wife, Frances Sarah née Brandling, older sister of WC's painter friend Henry Brandling. See [0555] to HC, 29–30 September 1863, n. 1.

[0674] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 15 APRIL 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 32.

9. Melcombe Place | Sunday April 15

My dear Sir,

I leave for you, with this, the proof of the last number corrected<sup>2</sup> – and corrected copy for the reprint – to the end of the interleaved Volume sent to me.

Please let me have the Revises of the last number, at Melcombe Place, as soon as convenient.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. If the proof of the May number has gone to America as it originally stood, it may be well to see that the chapter since included in it (Chapter II.) is sent also, or added to the advance proof of the last number.<sup>3</sup> And the same precaution may be necessary in the case of the French Translator – unless he only receives the story in its published form.

---

1. Dating from the address and the calendar.

2. The June number of Armadale for the Cornhill.

3. The May number eventually comprised the continuation of Book Fourth, ch. 3 and Book Last, chs 1–2 of the volume edition. In America the novel was serialized in Harper's New Monthly Magazine a month behind the Cornhill.

[0675] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 22 APRIL 1866

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 275. Published: BGLL, II, p. 33.

No 139 Westbourne Terrace W<sup>1</sup>
Hotel du Helder | Rue du Helder | Paris | Sunday, April 22nd 1866

My dear Mother,

Lehmann has lent me a sheet of notepaper – and I use it to tell you of our safe arrival. We had a lovely passage across – but, as usual, the long railway journey afterwards tired me.

They are rather more dissipated than ever in this City of Pleasure. A grand morning concert to-day – and Races at the Bois de Boulogne, among other Sunday amusements. The heavens smile on these anti-Sabbatarian proceedings. The warmest sun I have felt this year is shining to-day – and the balmiest air blows – and everybody is smartly dressed and in charming spirits. It may all be very wrong – but it is indescribably pleasant to a man who has just got rid (as I have) of a heavy responsibility. I am quite content to idle about in the open air, without going anywhere or seeing anything in particular. And yet, such is the perversity of mankind, I am half sorry too to have parted from my poor dear book.

We shall not stay here more than a week. Lehmann wants to get back to his wife (who is improving wonderfully at Broadstairs)<sup>2</sup> – and I must see if I can turn “Armadale” into a play, before the book is published in the middle of May, and before the theatrical thieves are beforehand with me.<sup>3</sup>

Send me a few lines here by return of post to say how you are, when you leave B. Hill, and whether you received my proofs safely. My own idea is that I have never written such a good end to a book, as I have written this time. At any rate, I never was so excited, myself, while finishing a story, as I was this time. Miss Gwilt’s death quite upset me.

My kind regards to all at Bentham Hill.

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. Written on the Lehmanns’ headed notepaper, with the address banner erased.

2. On Nina Lehmann’s illness, see [0666] to HC of 17 March 1866.

3. In fact, the dramatic version was only completed in June – see the letters to Frederick Enoch, [0686] of 14 June and [0695] of 6 July 1866.

[3356] TO [FREDERICK ENOCH], [1864-APRIL 1866]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C13, p.5.

...out [you] [illegible] ... the “Postscript” can be printed (if necessary) in<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Addressee (Smith, Elder’s printer – see [3028] to him of 15 September 1864) and date are informed speculations. Armadale contains many postscripts and was published in Cornhill November 1864 to June 1866. The paper appears to be of this period, but the scrap is too small to be completely certain.

2. The bottom lines of a letter on this small scrap which has been cut for the signature on the reverse.

[0676] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 MAY 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, II, p. 34.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | 1st May

My dear Mother,

I am safe back from Paris – and anxious to hear how you are getting on in the new lodging.<sup>2</sup> The heat was frightful in Paris, and Lehmann and I both felt the oppression of it severely. Now, here is the bitter cold again – and as a matter of course I am feeling that, in my head and throat. How are you bearing these villainous vicissitudes of temperature?

I am expecting the last sheets of the book every day.<sup>3</sup> Shall you be ready for me – say, next week? Any time will do for me.

(In great haste) | Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. Dating from the address and the reference to the trip to Paris with Fred Lehmann.
2. At Prospect Hill, Southborough, near Tunbridge Wells – see [0682] to HC of 31 May 1866.
3. Armada in volume form.

[0677] TO LADY LOUISA GOLDSMID,<sup>1</sup> 15 MAY 1865/1866<sup>2</sup>

MS: Private. Published: B&C, I, p. 257 (dated 15 May 186[5]).

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | May 15th

My dear Lady Goldsmid,

Many thanks for the card “to remind” which you have kindly sent to me. This time, I will be worthier of your indulgence. If I am alive, it ~~will appear~~ is needless to say how gladly I shall take my place at your table. If I am not alive, be so good as to look towards the conservatory, when the butler comes round for the first time with the champagne. You will perceive a Luminous Appearance – with an empty glass in one hand, and a blessed rosary for Miss Jekyll<sup>3</sup> in the other. That will be Me.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0425] to her of 14 June 1861.
2. Dating from address and watermark. WC uses paper watermarked ‘JOYNSON | 1865’, with an embossed emblem consisting of triangles and a hexagon of dots in the top left hand corner of the first page.
3. Gertrude Jekyll (1843–1932: ODNB), garden designer and artist, whose paintings were exhibited at the Royal Academy from 1865 – she is mentioned again in [0708] to Lady Goldsmid, 28 September 1866.

[0678] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 21 MAY 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 92 (dated [1865–7]); BGLL, II, p. 34.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | May 21st

My dear Mrs Ward,

It is almost needless, I hope, to tell you that I say Yes to your kind note with the greatest pleasure. The occasion of the Christening is one of those happy occasions which your old friend would be sorry indeed to miss. I will be with you on the 7th of June at two.

I have just come back from a visit to my mother – She is well & happy in a nice little country cottage two miles from Tunbridge Wells<sup>2</sup>

ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The dating is determined by the address and the fact that the christening of the Wards’ youngest son Stanhope took place on 7 June 1866 – see [0679] to HC of the following day.
2. Again see [0679] to HC of the following day.

[0679] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 22 MAY 1866

MS: Pembroke, with envelope,<sup>1</sup> and newspaper cutting. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 35–36.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | May 22

My dear Mother,

I sent you two papers yesterday – and to-day I enclose an account of the sale of Mr Young’s Pictures – Ventnor, for which my father got 170 gs sold for 975!!!! The Skittle Players (400 gs) fetched 1,200!! And as they were both bought by Agnew the dealer, they will be sold on for more still! Here are pictures that have kept up their reputation with a vengeance! The increase in the case of “Ventnor” is beyond anything I ever heard of – even in these times.<sup>2</sup>

My interminable First Act is done at last, and going to the Printers.<sup>3</sup> I shall learn to-day whether the book is, or is not, published yet.

On Friday, I shall perhaps go to Portsmouth to Dickens, and come back the next day.<sup>4</sup> Mrs E. M. Ward has invited me in a very warm letter to her baby's christening on June 7th – Lord Stanhope is to be a godfather.<sup>5</sup> What do you think of that!

I got a touch of Sciatica the day I came back – but it has gone again, and the gout has gone with it. I shall rattle off the rest of the play, I hope, in no time.

How are you going on?

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Prospect Hill | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells', postmarked as dated.

2. The sale of the collection of pictures of George Young was held at Christie's on 19 May 1866. Both the WmC paintings were bought by the London dealer Thomas Agnew, while at the same sale Constable's Hay Wain was bought for 1,300 guineas. See the article 'Modern Pictures' in the Times, 21 May 1866, p. 12e, which is the cutting WC sends to HC (also found at Pembroke). The Skittle Players and Undercliff – near Ventnor, Isle of Wight had originally been exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1832 and 1845 respectively and George Young bought them both in 1844/5. WC's surprise and annoyance at the price WmC's pictures fetched – with no benefit to his family – continued. He clearly kept cuttings of future picture sales and in 1884 he annotated the list of WmC's pictures in a copy of his Memoirs with the prices they had fetched and sent it to A. P. Watt – see [2373] to Watt, 27 November 1884 – though the book is signed 21 April 1885 (Private; see also Baker 2002, pp. 165–175). He suggested that the artist's heirs should benefit, not the owners. He annotated the picture Early Morning – Cromer: 'This picture under the title of "Cromer Sands" – was sold by auction (Christie and Manson) at the sale of Mr Gillott's Collection after his death, for Three thousand six hundred guineas. (Date of the sale, Saturday April 27th 1872). Price received for this picture from Mr Gillott (see above) three hundred guineas. Profit on the transaction, Three thousand, three hundred guineas (!) to the representatives of Mr Gillott.'

3. Of the dramatic version of Armadale.

4. WC did make the trip. 'Wilkie is here', CD wrote to Georgina Hogarth from Portsmouth on Friday 25 May (Pilgrim, XI, p. 204).

5. Philip Henry Stanhope, fifth Earl Stanhope (1805–75: ODNB), historian, who helped create the National Portrait Gallery.

[0680] TO FLORENCE DORAN,<sup>1</sup> 23 MAY 1866

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:7). Published: BGLL, II, p. 36.

9. Melcombe Place. N.W. | May 23rd 1866

Dear Miss Doran,

I have great pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of your kind note, and in so complying with your wish to possess my Autograph. With kind regards to Doctor Doran,

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. This must be Florence Doran, only daughter of the historian Dr John Doran (1807–78: ODNB), who, as a regular contributor to (and later editor of) the Athenæum, was a friend of Henry Chorley.

[0681] TO ISABELLE OPPENHEIM,<sup>1</sup> 29 MAY [1866]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 36.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | May 29th

Dear Mrs Oppenheim,

Your kind invitation is not to be resisted by a man who combines, as I do, respect for "principle" with attachment to pleasure. I shall be delighted to dine with you and Mr Oppenheim on June 9th.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Isabelle Oppenheim, née Frith (b. 1846), eldest daughter of the painter W.P. Frith and his wife Isabelle Jane. On 13 October 1864 at All Saints' Church, Kensington, Isabelle had married the wealthy German Jewish banker Charles Augustus Oppenheim (1837–78), residing with him first at 29, Hamilton Terrace, St John’s Wood (see [0709] to her of 8 October 1866), and, by the time of his untimely death in December 1878, in Great Cumberland Place, near Portman Square. On Charles Oppenheim’s financial dealings, see Gasson & Baker, pp. 186–187, and Lycett, pp. 264–265. The Oppenheims had three children, in November 1865, February 1868, and October 1871. Well after her husband had died, as ‘I. Frith’, Isabelle Oppenheim published the excellent biography, Life of Giordano Bruno, the Nolan (London: Trubner, 1887).

2. The date and address suggest 1866 as the likeliest year.

[0682] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 31 MAY 1866

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/94), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 36–37.

9. Melcombe Place | Thursday May 31

My dear Mother,

How is your thumb, and how are you generally? I was thinking of coming to ask these questions for a day or two at the end of this week – but calling today on Charley, I found him anxious to see you, and left him intending to go to Southborough on Tuesday next. So I retire for the present, in his favour. But if anything stops him, let me know – and I may come and take you by surprise, in that case, before Thursday next. On Thursday I must go to Mrs E. M. Ward’s Christening<sup>2</sup> – but I might steal some time between Monday and Thursday, if Charley should fail you. Write anyway and tell me how you are.

I sent you some magazines & so on. The 2nd act of the play is at the printers – and the 3rd act will be soon done.<sup>3</sup> I had a very hearty welcome from Dickens at Portsmouth. He asked after you.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Prospect Hill | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-S.W. | 7 | JU 1 | 66’, endorsed ‘TUNBRIDGE WELLS | B | JU 1 | 66’.

2. See [0678] to Henrietta Ward of 21 May.

3. Referring to the dramatic version of Armadale.

4. See [0679] to HC of 22 May 1866.

[0683] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 4 JUNE 1866

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/95), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 275–276.

9 Melcombe Place | Monday June 4

My dear Mother,

I send you by today’s [sic] post two [del] reviews. “The Athenaeum” in a state of virtuous indignation.<sup>2</sup> “The Reader” doing the book full justice, and thoroughly understanding what I mean by it.<sup>3</sup>

Dickens and Forster have both written to me about the last chapter. Here is Dickens: –

“I think the close extremely powerful. I doubt the possibility of inducing the reader to recognize any touch of tenderness or compunction in Miss Gwilt after that career, and I even doubt the lawfulness of the thing itself after that so recent renunciation of her husband – but of the force of the working out, the care and pains, and the art, I have no doubt whatever. The end of Bashwood I think particularly fine and worthy of his whole career.”<sup>4</sup>

And here is Forster: –

“It is a masterpiece of Art which few indeed have equalled to bring even pity and pathos to the end of such a career as hers. You certainly have done this – and this single page in which it is done is the finest thing in the book.”<sup>5</sup>

=

This is of course only for your eye. You wanted news of “Armadale” – and here it is.

Poor dear Billy Grant (of whose illness I told you) died on Saturday at his father’s house. Another old friend gone! His brother wrote to me with very little hope a week since. The malady was a tumour – and the weakness following the dispersion of it has been fatal.<sup>6</sup>

I saw Mrs Elliot yesterday.<sup>7</sup> She sends her love, and is resolute to see pay you a visit, when I go next to Prospect Hill.

Ever your affly | W.C

Henry Bullar is going abroad, and taking Edith with him. They go with William to Wildbad. Henry wants me to join him afterwards in Switzerland.<sup>8</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Prospect Hill | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 7 | JU 5 | 66’, and endorsed ‘TUNBRIDGE WELLS | B | JU 5 | 66’.

2. See H. F. Chorley’s unsigned review in the Athenæum, 2 June 1866, pp. 732–733.

3. See the Reader, 2 June 1866, pp. 538–539.

4. CD’s letter to WC is not found in Pilgrim, and seems not to have survived.

5. Forster’s letter also has not been traced.

6. WC seems to have dined with Billy Grant a little more than six months earlier – see [0653] to HC, 28 October 1865.

7. ‘Mrs Elliot’ is the married Frances Dickinson. She had visited HC at Tunbridge Wells earlier – see [0645] to HC, 1 July 1865, and Peters, pp. 330–332.

8. Edith must be Henry Bullar’s niece, Edith Penelope Bullar, daughter of the barrister John Bullar Jr, then in her early twenties, while William is Henry’s older brother, the doctor. The two men at least seem to have been in poor health: William and Henry died in 1869 and 1870 respectively, while Edith was still alive and living in Southampton with two of her sisters at the time of the 1911 Census. WC writes his postscript down the left margin of the first page of the letter.

[0684] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 6 JUNE 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 93 (dated ‘6 June [1865–7]’); BGLL, II, p. 37.

9 Melcombe Place | Wednesday

My dear Mrs Ward,

Many thanks for your kind reminder. I will be with you at two tomorrow. But I have a dinner engagement in the evening which will make me a deserter, I am sorry to say, from that pleasant party afterwards. Pray accept my excuses and believe me, | very truly yours | WC

---

1. The Melcombe Place address limits the dating only to the period December 1864 to August 1867, but the internal reference to a reminder concerning an invitation at two o’clock makes it highly likely that WC writes the day before the christening of the Wards’ sixth and last child, Stanhope, on 7 June 1866. See [0678] to Henrietta Ward of 21 May 1866 and [0679] to HC of 22 May 1866. Coleman also seems to conclude that this letter relates to the christening party, though he is uncertain of the year in question.

[0685] TO FANNY MITCHELL, 7 JUNE 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 38; Lewis website.

9. Melcombe Place | June 7th

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

It is very kind of you to give “Armada” a place on your bookshelves.

I am unfortunately already engaged to dinner on Sunday – or I should have been delighted to dine in Great Stanhope Street. I hope early next week to be able to call. I have been very little in London since I last had the pleasure of seeing you.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the publication of Armada.

[3173] TO [JANE ELLEN] FRITH,<sup>1</sup> 11 JUNE 1866

MS: Unknown.<sup>2</sup> On sale: Hartley's Auctions (14 September 2011, lot 736). Published: A&C7, pp. 37–38 (as to Miss Frith).

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | June 11th 1866

Dear Miss Frith,

I send with this six autographs. If more are wanted, you have only to say so

You have by this time, I hope, decided on making something for the reverend gentleman's benefit. I venture to suggest as new and appropriate, a Purple Pulpit Cushion with this inscription worked on it in letters of gold:—

“May you soon be | A Bishop!”

=

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. One of the five daughters of the artist W.P. Frith and his wife Isabelle Jane. At this time, Isabelle (20) had been married for close to two years, Jane Ellen was around 19, Mary Louisa 16, Alice 13, and Mary Fanny 11. Thus, Jane Ellen (1847–1923), who married in August 1869, seems the most likely candidate here, while [1044] of 27 December 1870, also addressed to Miss Frith, must be to one of the younger sisters.

2. Tipped into front free endpaper of Rambles Beyond Railways (New Edition, 1865), with ownership inscription of ‘W. Ward Jackson M.A. | Normanby Hall | 1870’. This must refer to Rev. William Ward Jackson (1805–74), of Normanby, Ryedale, North Yorkshire, who may be the ‘reverend gentleman’ referred to in the letter (see: <www.normanbyhistorygroup.co.uk/article-normanby-time-line.php>). Both of Jane Ellen's parents hailed from Yorkshire.

[0686] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 14 JUNE 1866

MS: Huntington (HM 33787, bound in MS of Armada, HM 33786, II). Published: BGLL, II, p. 38.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | June 14th

My dear Sir,

I send with this, acts one and two corrected for press – and the Mss of Act III. There will be a fourth act still to come, before the Drama can be completed. It has been a much harder task to turn the work into a play than I anticipated.<sup>1</sup>

When the drama is done, I shall only want Twenty-five copies struck off. I mention this now, in case the printers may find it convenient to go to press at once with the two first sheets, so as to “distribute” the type. The third act shall be returned for press as soon as I get it in proof.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC was writing a dramatic version of his novel Armada to frustrate the pirates. It was ‘Published for the Author’ by Smith, Elder in July 1866 in a seventy-six-page pamphlet with pink wrappers as Armada: A Drama in Three Acts (Sadleir 1922, p. 152; Parrish & Miller, pp. 58–59). It was never produced, though WC's later stage version Miss Gwilt ran successfully, opening in Liverpool on 9 December 1875 and then at the Globe in London from 15 April 1876 (see Peters, p. 277).

[0687] TO ELLIOTT & FRY,<sup>1</sup> 25 JUNE 1866<sup>2</sup>

MS: Morgan (Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/8). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 38–39.

Melcombe Place | N.W. | Monday June 25th

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to Messrs Elliott & Fry and begs to thank them for the photograph which they have kindly sent to him. Mr Collins will be glad to fulfil his engagement to sit, on Wednesday next at 1 o'clock, if that appointment will suit Messrs Elliott & Fry

---

1. Elliott & Fry, photographers of 55 Baker Street, London, close to Melcombe Place.

2. Dating from the address and calendar, plus the reference in the following letter.

[0688] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 27 JUNE 1866

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 39.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | London | June 27th 1866

Dear Sir

Pray excuse this late reply. Absence from London has allowed me no earlier opportunity than this of answering your letter. I am going, today, to perform an old promise to sit to Messrs Elliott & Fry, and I have no doubt that my portrait (in their Series of Literary Men &c) will be obtainable by the public immediately

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC is presumably writing in response to a request for a photograph.

[0689] TO MISS SPEED,<sup>1</sup> 30 JUNE 1866

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 39–40, amended A&C6, p. 19.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | June 30th 1866

Dear Miss Speed,

A day's rummaging among my letters, ending in much tearing-up, in many desperate attempts at arrangement, and in sincerest wishes that Rowland Hill had never hit on his grand discovery of penny postage, has ended in throwing a few letters up to the surface which may be worth putting into your book. I send you Dickens Charles Reade and Robert Browning among the authors. Wilkie, Landseer, and Haydon among the painters<sup>2</sup> – all letters (these three last) written to my father. Sir Robert Peel among Statesmen,<sup>3</sup> and Charles Kean among actors.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Daughter of friends of WC's friend and solicitor Edward Benham (see [0718] to Mary Anne Benham, 2 January 1867). WC sent her more autographs the following year – in [0732] of 30 March 1867.

2. Sir David Wilkie (1785–1841: ODNB), RA, a friend of WmC and WC's godfather after whom he was named; probably Sir Edwin Henry Landseer (1802–73: ODNB), RA, though possibly his brother Charles (1799–1879); Benjamin Robert Haydon (1786–1846), an artist much admired by WmC (see WC's Memoirs, I, p. 62).

3. Sir Robert Peel was a patron of WmC, buying four of his paintings.

[0690] TO CHARLES READE, 3 JULY 1866

MS: Noel. Extract: Claeson, p. 108. Published: BGLL, II, p. 40.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W | July 3rd 1866

My dear Reade

The gout (which upsets my head as well as my foot) bothered me so when I was with you today, that I forgot one of the things I had to ask you. I think I told you that the terms I suggested to Mr Coleman were to be terms “by the night”.<sup>1</sup> But we came to no conclusion about what they were to be – and he is to come to me on Friday or Saturday to settle this, if he is in town. I have mislaid your letter ~~about~~ telling me what ought to be done under these circumstances. But, (since I came home) inspired by Potash,<sup>2</sup> I have recovered memory enough to remember that you said either £1.10. or £2 – a night. Will you, like a good fellow, tell me which sum I ought to stipulate for? It is needless to add that I shall of course not refer to you in this matter when I make the arrangement with Mr Coleman. I only want to know what I ought to ask.

Another “act of oblivion” strikes me with horror. I am afraid I forgot to take leave of your American friend!<sup>3</sup> If he has ever had the gout, he will set my unintentional rudeness down to the right account. If he has not had the gout, I can only appeal to him as a Christian and beg him to forgive me.

I am going to bed with a burning foot and a muddled head – but not the less for that,
Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Coleman was apparently a Yorkshire theatre proprietor – see [0710] to John Palgrave Simpson, 12 October 1866 – interested in hosting a provincial tour of The Frozen Deep. No payments recorded as from Coleman are found in WC's bank account (Coutts: WC).
2. Probably Potassium Iodide, intended to reduce the pain caused by gout – see [1095] to Walter Lacy of 23 May 1871.
3. Unidentified.

[0691] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 3 JULY 1866

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 40–41.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Tuesday July 3

My dear Palgrave Simpson,

There is a fatality against my seeing you in “The Lighthouse”.<sup>1</sup> This morning, I woke with an attack of gout in my right foot – and the doctor threatens me with being “laid up” – if I don't take the necessary physic and keep quietly at home for the next three or four nights. My foot pains me enough to back the doctor – so here is another chance lost!

Think of me, and pity me, when “Aaron Gurnock” is bringing the house down tonight.<sup>2</sup>
Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. A long-running amateur production – see [0502] to Simpson of 17 November 1862.
2. The part of the head lightkeeper, played by CD in the original Tavistock House production, and by Simpson here.

[0692] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 4 JULY 1866

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/96), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 276–277.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | July 4

My dear Mother,

I send you “The Argosy” by this post.<sup>2</sup>

How are you? Any more whitlows?<sup>3</sup> Write and tell me.

As for me, I have had the gout plaguing me again. All my engagements have had to be put off or declined. I am living by rule, and getting cured without Colchicum<sup>4</sup> and in a week's time, I hope to come to you – before going to the seaside.

I shall bring you a copy of the play.<sup>5</sup> A provincial manager is already in treaty with me for the right of acting it in the country at the opening of the “winter season” – and after it has been produced in London. The manager in London I shall communicate with, before I see you next week.

“Armadale” (the book) has, I hear, fully satisfied the publishers in the matter of sale – ~~The~~ /thus far./ /The/ numbers are not “returned” yet to the West-End Department in Pall Mall. But a great pressure was put upon “Mudie” by my faithful public – and an unexpectedly large demand was the consequence.

Charley has been complaining a little – but is better again. I saw them both yesterday, in very good spirits – just back from a visit to Mrs Sartoris.<sup>6</sup> The sudden change in the weather from hot to cold has been trying everybody in London. Yesterday, it was cold enough here, for some people to have fires – and I found it necessary to shut the window! This is July!!!

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Prospect Hill | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-W | X4 | JY 4 | 66’, and endorsed ‘TUNBRIDGE WELLS | A | JY 5 | 66’.

2. The Argosy (1865–1901) was a sixpenny literary monthly (subtitled ‘A Magazine of Tales, Travels, Essays and Poems’), initially published by Alexander Strahan and edited by Isa Craig. From its first issue in December 1865 to November 1866 it serialized Charles Reade’s controversial novel of sexual jealousy, Griffith Gaunt.
3. In [0696] to HC, 8 July 1866, WC records that HC’s whitlow problem (viral infection of the tip of a finger or toe) has already cleared up.
4. This standard gout remedy is also mentioned negatively in [0582] to HC, 11 June 1864.
5. Armada.
6. Daughter of the actor Charles Kemble – see [0694] to her of 5 July 1866.

[0694] TO ADELAIDE SARTORIS,<sup>1</sup> 5 JULY 1866<sup>2</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 42.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | July 5th

Mr Wilkie Collins accepts with great pleasure the honour of Mrs Sartoris’s invitation for the evening of Thursday the 12th July.

On Wednesday the 11th, an engagement will prevent Mr Collins from availing himself of Mrs Sartoris’s kindness.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. Adelaide Sartoris, née Kemble (1814–1879: ODNB), younger daughter of Charles Kemble, the actor, had been a professional singer until her marriage to Edward John Sartoris in 1842; see Pilgrim, VII, p. 185 n. 1.
  2. Dating from the address and the internal references to the calendar.
  3. The invitation was to private theatricals on two evenings in which Katie Collins was to appear – see [0696] to HC of 8 July 1866.

[0693] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 5 JULY 1866

MS: Lewis Collection (bound into extra-illustrated copy of Frank T. Marzials, Life of Charles Dickens (London: Walter Scott, 1887), pp. 114–115). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 41–42.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | July 5

My dear Palgrave Simpson,

Here I am again! This time, it is to ask a question.

A friend of mine has written an opera-book, at the request of certain music sellers who commissioned him to produce the work, who have received it, and who have expressed themselves perfectly satisfied with it. The time has now come for the author to ask for his price (a matter not hitherto settled or even entered on, as I understand, between him, and the music sellers); and the question is what ought the demand to be? The Libretto is in four acts – and the author has only produced one other work of the same sort, set to music, and performed at a country “Festival.”<sup>1</sup> I am utterly ignorant in these matters. Can your dramatic experience tell me what is the average price paid for an English libretto in four acts by the English music-sellers? Or what is the average price asked, by the average English librettist? My friend is very modest about his claims – but he wants to ask the fair remuneration for a work executed on commission, and received by the person commissioning it.

Forgive my troubling you about this. I ought perhaps to add that the musical part of the enterprise (with which my friend has nothing to do) has broken down – and that the sooner he sends in his demand the better.

How did the Lighthouse go off?<sup>2</sup> Had you a good audience? And did you act to your own satisfaction? Starving and physic are helping me to get my foot into an old patched boot – but I am still feeling the horrid depression which gout and gout’s remedies always produce.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The friend was Frederick Enoch, poet and member of the staff of Smith, Elder – see [0695] to him of the following day. The libretto in question has not been securely identified, but the other work referred to is the cantata The Bride of Dunkerron, with words by Enoch set to music by Henry Smart, performed at the Birmingham Music Festival on 9 September 1864 – see the review in the Times of the following day, p. 9c. A later printed version of the work is found in the BL, along with Enoch's King René's Daughter: A Cantata for Female Voices (London, [1871]).

2. See [0691] to Palgrave Simpson of 3 July 1866.

3. Probably laudanum. WC had given up taking the standard remedy for gout, Colchicum (extract of meadow saffron), because of the side effects of nausea and vomiting. See [0692] to HC, 4 July 1866.

[0695] TO FREDERICK ENOCH, 6 JULY 1866

MS: Huntington (HM 33788, bound in MS of dramatic version of Armada, HM 33786, II). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 42–43.

9 Melcombe Place | N.W. | July 6th 1866

My dear Sir,

Many thanks. I have no doubt the 25 copies will be amply sufficient for my purpose.<sup>1</sup> It would have been impossible to keep the type standing till the play might be produced – for it will certainly not be performed before the “winter season.” In the meantime, I am much obliged to you for the trouble you have taken about this little matter. The Drama is very nicely & neatly got up. If the actors do their parts as well as the printers – I shall have no reason to complain.<sup>2</sup> When quite convenient perhaps you will kindly let me know in what amount I am indebted to The Printing Department for this service?

I am expecting an answer from a friend whom I have consulted (of course without mentioning names) on the subject of your Opera<sup>3</sup> – as soon as I hear from him, you shall hear again from me.

Faithfully yours | WC

---

1. Of the dramatic version of Armada – see [0686] to Enoch, 14 June 1866.

2. The play was never performed commercially in this form and was not licensed by the Lord Chancellor.

3. The friend was John Palgrave Simpson – see [0693] to him of 5 July 1866.

[0696] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 8 JULY 1866

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/97), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 277–278.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Sunday July 8

My dear Mother,

I send you the play by book-post.<sup>2</sup> Don't let anybody see it – for there may be changes made in it yet.

Yesterday, I sent you The Reader – and on Friday next, I propose being with you at Southborough. I would have come earlier in the week – but Mrs Sartoris has asked me to some private theatricals in which Katie appears, on Wednesday and Thursday evenings.<sup>3</sup> I have accepted for Thursday /– being engaged on Wednesday –/ and I know you will like me to bring you a report of your daughter-in-law's appearance on the private stage.

I will send Ben with the cards to inquire after the public servant.<sup>4</sup>

As for Mrs Gray, I want her address.<sup>5</sup> She has been “letting me off” at some people who have a job for her, and who have asked me, through a mutual friend where she lives. Send me the information by return of post.

I think you in the back drawing-room and Mrs Gray in the [del] front drawing-room would make a very nice subject for a farce. I'll propose it to Buckstone,<sup>6</sup> if you will go. I met Henry Gray,<sup>7</sup> the other day. He has a picture-dealer's shop in Old Cavendish St. “Gray and Jones, Picture-dealers, and Photographic Miniature Painters” – such is the inscription! His eyes were rayless – his cheeks were haggard – his beard was mangy – and he chuckled feebly when I congratulated him on being a married man.

Send me the title of that book of Mr Aidé's that you want.<sup>8</sup> Careful dieting, and refusal of all invitations have checked the gout – with a little assistance from Potash of course.

I shall stay with you, I hope, from Friday next to the following Friday. Saturday the 21st is the day at present fixed on for going to the sea-side and getting a week's boating.<sup>9</sup>

Count the cheap claret again, please. I want to know how many bottles are left, and tell me if I can bring anything down besides the book. Glad to hear the whitlows are gone. Ever yours affly

WC

-
1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Prospect Hill | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'LONDON-W | 7 | JY 9 | 66', and endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE WELLS | B | JY 9 | 66'.
  2. Armadale.
  3. See WC's reply to his invitation to the theatricals in [0694] to Adelaide Sartoris, 5 July 1866.
  4. Neither Ben nor the public servant in question can be identified.
  5. Referring to HC's sister Catherine Geddes (1796–1882) who in 1816 married John Westcott Gray, a Salisbury artist. See Clarke, p. 222, n. 42, and Whitton, pp. 14–15.
  6. Referring to John Baldwin Buckstone (1802–1879: ODNB), comedian and dramatist.
  7. Henry Gray was WC's cousin, one of the nine children of John Westcott and Catherine Gray.
  8. Charles Hamilton Aidé (1826–1906: ODNB), novelist, poet, composer; the title in question cannot be identified.
  9. See the report on the boating trip with Benham and Pigott in [0701] to HC, 24 July 1866.

[0697] TO CHARLES READE, 9 JULY 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: Noel. Extract: Clareson, p. 110. Published: BGLL, II, p. 43.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | July 9th

My dear Reade,

I send you my play by book-post today. You will see one "cut" suggested in Act I – and I shall bring Act III closer here and there. Remember this when you read it – and tell me what you think of my chance if I get on the stage. Also, give me any suggestions which occur to you – who look at the piece with a fresh eye.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Dating from the notepaper (with watermark 'JOYNSON 1865') and the reference to the dramatic version of Armadale.

[0698] TO W. H. WILLS, 14 JULY 1866

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11), folded and directed.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 43–44.

Saturday July 14th | 1866

My dear Wills,

Will you oblige me by giving early consideration to the article which accompanies this note? It is written by a gentleman who was once a schoolfellow of mine, and whose literary projects I am anxious to assist to the best of my ability<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. To: 'W. H. Wills Esq | Office of | All The Year Round | 26 Wellington St | Strand W.C.', with neither stamp nor postmark.
  2. Neither the article nor the schoolfellow have been identified.

[0699] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 17 JULY 1866

MS: Sydney (Mitchell Library A27, p. 42).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 44.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

July 17th 1866

1. Probably David Scott Mitchell (1836–1907), after whom the State Library of New South Wales is named. Mitchell was an obsessive collector of books and manuscripts: see the Australian Dictionary of National Biography entry by G.D. Richardson (URL: <http://adb.anu.edu.au/biography/mitchell-david-scott-4210>).
2. An autograph stuck into album of D. S. Mitchell.

[0700] TO HENRIETA WARD, 18 JULY 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 340 (dated [1849–66]); BGLL, II, p. 44.

Prospect Hill | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells
Wednesday July 18

My dear Mrs Ward,

Your kind invitation has followed me to my mother's little cottage here. I have unfortunately an engagement to dine at Hampstead on Friday the 27th – and I have therefore no choice but to thank you and Edward, and to ask you to accept my excuses.

My mother joins me in best love to all.

Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating based on the calendar, plus the information that HC was staying at Prospect Hill in July 1866, and WC visited her from around Friday 13 to the following Friday – see [0696] and [0701] to HC of 8 and 24 July.

[0701] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 24 JULY 1866

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/98), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 278–279.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | July 24

My dear Mother,

We got back last night, after a great success. It ended in our going where we ought to have thought of going in the first instance – to [del] Ryde. Pigott and I belong to the yacht club<sup>2</sup> – and we introduced Benham as a visitor – slept at lodgings provided by the club – breakfasted and dined excellently at the club – had a boat provided by the club – and, in short, found everything we wanted ready and waiting for us, weather included. Saturday, Sunday and Monday, all three fine days, with a steady breeze and a smooth sea! – My luck seems, as they say, “on the turn”.

Today [del] is overcast and threatening in London. I hope your lawn party won't be damped, and the Honourable Mrs Cropper disarranged, by any untimely fall of water from that sky which bends over Mrs Cropper's head and which is, or ought to be, the occasional object of Mrs Cropper's devout contemplation.<sup>3</sup>

I have no settled plan beyond going for a day or two to Gadshill next Saturday. Tell me how you are, and whether you have, or have not, decided to ask Jane,<sup>4</sup> so that I may make my arrangements accordingly for [del] going to see you again.

I send you a Saturday Review, which Pigott brought for railway reading on the journey down. Nobody at the Hampstead party, but one guest besides myself.<sup>5</sup> We were very cosy and cordial at one end of a long table laid for many visitors.

Ever affly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Prospect Hill | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’ and postmarked ‘LONDON-N.W | X | JY 24 | 66’, endorsed at Tunbridge Wells on the following day.

2. WC had joined the Royal Victoria Yacht Club on the Isle of Wight two years earlier – see [0587] to Coutts & Co. of 11 July 1864.

3. Presumably referring to the seventh child of Lord Denman, Margaret Denham (b. 1815), who in 1848 married for a second time to Edward Cropper, son of James Cropper (1773–1840: ODNB), and was prominent in the anti-slavery movement (see Pilgrim, VI, p. 824 n. 5). WC seems to have agreed with Lord Macaulay, brother of her first husband, who thought her ‘foolish, exacting and quarrelsome’ (The Letters of Thomas Babington Macaulay, ed. Thomas Pinney (Cambridge: CUP, 1974–81), VI, p. 239).

4. Presumably referring to WC's cousin Jane Carpenter, née Carpenter.
5. [0700] to Henrietta Ward, 18 July 1866, mentions a dinner appointment in Hampstead on July 27; either that was brought forward or this is another such appointment.

[0702] TO [EDWARD] WALFORD,<sup>1</sup> 1 AUGUST 1866

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 45.

9 Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | August 1st 1866

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to Mr Walford, and regrets that his engagements (which will immediately take him away from London) will prevent him from complying with Mr Walford's request.<sup>2</sup> Under these circumstances, he hopes that Mr Walford will accept his apologies.

-
1. Presumably Edward Walford, to whom WC had written on 17 April 1861 ([0411]), pointing out the many errors in his entry in the current edition of the biographical dictionary Men of the Time. Walford had rewritten the entry for the new edition of 1862.
  2. The specific nature of Walford's request remains unclear.

[0703] TO JOSEPH STRINGFIELD,<sup>1</sup> 16 AUGUST 1866

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 45, amended A&C6, p. 19.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | Thursday Augt 16th 1866

My dear Stringfield,

The sight of your handwriting is like a pleasant revival of the old times.

I am only in town till Saturday morning – and I have a dinner engagement unluckily tomorrow (Friday). Can you come, and lunch here tomorrow (Friday) at 2 or ½ past? It is the only way in which we can meet this time, I am afraid.

I have moved from Harley S<sup>t</sup> – and only got your letter here today.

My kindest remembrances to Mrs S. and my love to Florry.<sup>2</sup> If she will only tell me what book she would like, she shall have it when I come back to London.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Joseph Stringfield (1819–1869), physician resident in Weston-super-Mare, who WC had visited regularly in the 1850s in the company of Edward Pigott – see [0103] to Pigott of 22 December 1851, for example. Shortly afterwards Stringfield fell foul of the law – see [0837] to Edward Benham of 2 June 1868. The Medical Directory records his death at Weston-super-Mare on 11 August 1869.
  2. Stringfield's wife Mary Ann and their six-year-old daughter Florence (Census 1861, Weston Super Mare, 65 High Street).

[0704] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 12 SEPTEMBER 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: Shakespeare (Autograph Coll. A2, p. 120). Published: BGLL, II, p. 46.

FARLEY HILL COURT | READING<sup>2</sup> | Wednesday Sept 12

My dear Palgrave Simpson

Your kind letter reached me here yesterday – but a long drive to a distant house, and a late return, have allowed me no opportunity of thanking you for it until this morning. You have guessed right about the theatre. But I have another dramatic project to consult you about – in which your experience will be of great use to me, and I know you will “let me have it for the asking”.<sup>3</sup>

In this same matter time is of some importance. I return on Friday next. Have you any engagement for that evening? If not, will you eat your dinner with me at 7, at 9. Melcombe Place, Dorset Square? (N.B. No “company” and no “dress”).

If you are unluckily engaged, at what time on Saturday could we conveniently meet at the Athenaeum – or can I come to Alfred Place?<sup>4</sup>

Send me one line (to 9. Melcombe Place) to say (I hope) that you will come and dine on Friday.

In the meantime, I despatch to you by “book-post” a corrected copy of “Armada in 3 Acts” which I brought here with me.<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

J. Palgrave Simpson Esq

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the reference to Melcombe Place.

2. Farley Hill Court, the home of Frances Elliot née Dickinson, where WC stayed from time to time. See his letters [0235] of 19 March 1856, [0705] of 15 September 1866, [0755] and [0756] of 1 and 7 July 1867.

3. Possibly The Frozen Deep – see [0706] to Palgrave Simpson, 16 September 1866, and [0710] to him of 12 October 1866.

4. 9 Alfred Place West, South Kensington, Simpson’s home address.

5. WC had already shown his dramatic version of the novel to CD, who responded in some detail (CD to WC, 10 July 1866, Pilgrim, XI, pp. 220–222).

[0705] TO CONSTANCE LENNOX,<sup>1</sup> 15 SEPTEMBER 1866

MS: Lewis Collection Published: BGLL, II, pp. 46–47; Lewis website.

9, Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. NW | Sept 15th 1866

Dear Miss Lennox,

I have sent specimens of three different “portraits of a gentleman”, in three different states of photographic suffering, to Farley Hill,<sup>2</sup> and I have begged Messrs Elliot to place at your disposal any one of the portraits which you may honour with your choice.<sup>3</sup>

With kindest remembrances to all at Swallowfield,

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Miss Constance Lennox

---

1. Constance Charlotte Elisa Lennox (c. 1844–1925), daughter of Arthur Lennox, the seventh son of Charles Lennox, fifth Duke of Richmond, Lennox and d’Aubigny. On 5 March 1867 she married George Russell, third son of Sir Henry Russell, second Baronet of Swallowfield. George inherited the title in 1895. Collins was invited to the wedding, but was in Paris attending to the French production of Armada. See [0730] to HC, 26 February 1867.

2. WC had stayed at Farley Hill Court (the home of Frances Dickinson), near the village of Swallowfield, for about a week, returning to London on Friday 14 September, the day before this letter was written. On 12 September [0704] he had written to John Palgrave Simpson referring to ‘a long drive to a distant house’ – perhaps referring to his visit to Swallowfield.

3. Thus for Elliott & Fry, photographers – see [0687] to them of 25 June 1866.

[0706] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON,<sup>1</sup> 16 SEPTEMBER 1866

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 47–48.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W.
Sunday. Sept 16th 1866

Ecce iterum Crispinus!<sup>2</sup> I forgot about “Armada”, in talking of “The Frozen Deep”. Do you mind sending the copy I forward by this bookpost, to Miss Herbert,<sup>3</sup> if she is in town – or when she returns to town? As I am a stranger to her, it may be easier and pleasanter for her (and for me) if she says what she thinks about the play, in the first instance to you. If you feel any difficulty about this, you know me well enough to feel no scruple about saying so.

The “Frozen Deep” business is apparently settled. The terms we discussed are accepted by Wigan<sup>4</sup> – and the production of the piece now depends on the run of Tom Taylor’s play, with which the Olympic opens.<sup>5</sup> I have stipulated that if we start before Christmas, we shall start in November – so as to be beforehand with the dull time.

I am going tomorrow to the neighbourhood of Tunbridge Wells.<sup>6</sup> Address, care of Mrs Anderson | The Terrace
Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells.

=

Return to town on Friday – away again with Pigott on Saturday for two days' sailing off
Ryde – then back again here. Do you and the sea agree? If you do, will you come with us?

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The identification of the recipient derives from the relationship to [0704] to Simpson of 12 September 1866.
  2. 'Look! It's Crispinus again!' Crispinus was a hate figure of the satirist Juvenal: the quote is the opening of Satires 4.
  3. Possibly Louisa Herbert, who played Lady Audley in George Robert's dramatic adaptation of Mary Braddon's Lady Audley's Secret in 1863.
  4. Horace Wigan (1815/16–85: ODNB), younger brother of Alfred Sydney Wigan, actor, who in 1864 took on the management of the Olympic Theatre in the Strand. Wigan played Lieutenant Crayford in a revival of The Frozen Deep at the Olympic, from 27 November 1866.
  5. The White Boy, by the prolific dramatist Tom Taylor (1817–80: ODNB), which opened at The Olympic on 27 September 1866. The revival of The Frozen Deep ran from 27 October to 15 December 1866, with the leading roles played by Henry Neville and Lydia Foote.
  6. To stay with HC.

[0707] TO JOHN ELLIOTT,<sup>1</sup> 21 SEPTEMBER 1866<sup>2</sup>

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 48.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Sept. 21st

My dear Sir,

The bearer of this letter – Mrs Slade – is a lady whom I have known for many years. She has had a long experience in photography, and especially in the department of photographic printing.

Mrs Slade is now in London, with a view to offering her services to a photographic establishment. If additional assistance in the “printing” Department, should be wanted by your Establishment during the coming season, and if it is in your power to avail yourself of Mrs Slade's services, I am sure that you would have no cause to regret giving her a trial<sup>3</sup> – and I may add that you would oblige

Yours faithfully | Wilkie Collins

J. Elliott Esqre

-
1. Of the photographers Elliott & Fry, 55 Baker Street, Portman Square, W. – see [0687] to them of 25 June 1866.
  2. Dating from the address and the connection with the photographer. WC uses notepaper water-marked: 'JOYNSON | 1865'.
  3. The recommendation seems to have been fruitful – see [0721] to HC of 8 January 1867.

[0708] TO LADY LOUISA GOLDSMID,<sup>1</sup> 28 SEPTEMBER 1866

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 49.

9 Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. NW, | Sept 28th 1866

Dear Lady Goldsmid,

Your kind letter finds me just recovering from one of those severe colds which it is the privilege of “this great country” to confer on the fortunate people who dwell in it. The time I have devoted to face-ache sore throat and so on, is just the time I had hoped to devote to my visit to you and Sir Frances [sic]. On the 17th of next month, I am going to Italy – and between this and then there is a play of mine to be put in rehearsal at the Olympic theatre, for the forthcoming winter. But in spite of these, and sundry other little impediments, I hope and trust to be able to pay a visit to Newnham Paddox about the time you have indicated.<sup>2</sup> It can only be a flying visit of a day or two, I am afraid, under the circumstances – but, if I may count on your indulgence to excuse this, even a day or two is better than no visit at all.

I will write again as soon as I am sure of my day – and after I have seen Mrs Procter,<sup>3</sup> who is coming (or has come perhaps) to town.

In the meantime, with kindest remembrances to Sir Francis and Miss Jekyll,<sup>4</sup>

Believe me | very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0425] to her of 14 June 1861.

2. Newnham Paddox, near Coventry – see [0710] to Palgrave Simpson, 12 October 1866. WC stayed there at least from Friday 12 October to Monday 15.

3. Anne Benson Procter; see [0338] of 26 March 1860 and [0447] of 21 October 1861, both to her.

4. See [0677] to Lady Louisa Goldsmid, 15 May 1865/66.

[0709] TO ISABELLE OPPENHEIM, 8 OCTOBER 1866

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 49–50.

9 Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | October 8th 1866

Dear Mrs Oppenheim

I have just returned from a round of visits in the country – and have found your kind letter waiting for me.

On Thursday next, I am engaged to go to some friends in Warwickshire<sup>1</sup> – and I am afraid I have no chance of getting back to London as soon as Saturday. Next week, about the 16th or 17th, I go to Italy – to return before Christmas, I hope. Under this combination of obstacles – and with a play of mine (“The Frozen Deep”) to put in rehearsal at The Olympic Theatre before I start – what can I do but thank you heartily for your invitation and trust to your kindness to accept my excuses?

I will report myself at Hamilton Terrace when I return to England – and I hope you and Mr Oppenheim (to whom I beg my best remembrances) will “give me another chance”.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0710] to Palgrave Simpson of 12 October 1866.

2. The Oppenheims resided at 29, Hamilton Terrace, St John’s Wood.

[3174] TO CHARLES READE, 12 OCTOBER 1866

MS: Private.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C7, pp. 38–39.

Newnham Paddox<sup>2</sup> | Lutterworth | October 12

My dear Reade

I am here visiting some friends until Monday morning next – when I go to town to a rehearsal of The Frozen Deep<sup>3</sup> – then to my mother at Tunbridge Wells to say goodbye – then on Wednesday off to Italy. The hurry-scurry of all my proceedings lately has left me only this opportunity of thanking you – and of sending you Mrs Graves’ thanks – for the proofs of “Griffith Gaunt”.<sup>4</sup> You know I have a very high opinion of the merit of the book – and I think the close quite worthy of the rest. The interview between Mercy<sup>5</sup> and Mrs Gaunt strikes me as specially excellent – wonderfully observed, and done with that suppression rather than exertion of strength, which only a thorough artist can accomplish. You will be abused and misrepresented. But let the geese gabble as their nature is. Your work is true work – and true work lives.

Now for what I have to write before I go – first about you and then about me.

I have put you down and proposed you (Oct 10th) in our Candidates Book at the Athenaeum – and Dickens has with the greatest pleasure seconded you. Nothing now remains but for the Committee to do their duty, and bring you in at the next special election. I hope we shall welcome you as a member before you are many months older.

Sending you back by book-post the proofs of Griffith Gaunt, I also send two copies of The Frozen Deep. One unmarked and one marked with our stage alterations at The Olympic. If you and Mr House can kindly do anything for me in America – the sooner, the better – for the piece will be produced immediately at The Olympic. I accept beforehand any terms you can secure for me in my absence. My bankers are Coutts & Co – and my friend Mr Charles Ward at Coutts’s manages all my business – So much for that matter!

No – a word more. I must send the play to our friend Coleman,<sup>6</sup> and I am afraid I shall be off before it is possible to conclude matters with him. Here again, I must ask you to help me - and here again, if I refer Coleman to you, I have at least the grace to leave you quite unfettered. Any terms you would take are terms I take too. I don’t apologise for giving you this trouble. I know you won’t mind it – and you know I would do as much for you.

So goodbye for six weeks or so. I will report myself when I come back.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

If you get this on Monday – a line to 9. Melcombe Place to say you have got it would find me before I go. If you want more copies of The Frozen Deep, you have only to let Mrs Graves know it, and you can have them.<sup>7</sup>

If any difficulty arises about making my bargain with Mr Coleman while I am a member of the Dramatic Authors’ Society, I have left a letter of resignation in the hands of Mr Charles Ward, Messrs Coutts & Co 59. Strand. – which letter Mr Ward will send in, whenever it is necessary<sup>8</sup>

---

1. Inserted into an extra-illustrated copy of Memoirs.

2. Newnham Paddox in Warwickshire; see [0710] to Palgrave Simpson, 12 October 1866.

3. The professional production of The Frozen Deep opened at the Olympic Theatre on 27 October 1866.

4. Charles Reade’s Griffith Gaunt; or Jealousy was published in 1866.

5. Mercy Vint, an innkeeper’s daughter who is bigamously married to the eponymous hero.

6. Coleman, a Yorkshire Theatre proprietor; see to Reade [0690] 3 July 1866.

7. The PS is squeezed in at the foot of the page and then up the left-hand side.

8. This further PS is squeezed in on the first page above the address which WC surrounds with a curved line. See [0710] to Palgrave Simpson of this date.

[0710] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 12 OCTOBER 1866

MS: Lewis Collection (in extra-illustrated copy of W. P. Frith, My Autobiography and Reminiscences (3 vols, London: Bentley, 1887), I, pp. 266–267). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 50–51; Lewis website.

Newnham Paddox | Lutterworth<sup>1</sup> | October 12th 1866

My dear Palgrave Simpson

I am on a visit here till Monday next – and on Wednesday I go to Italy

The free moments in this house are the only free moments I have had for some time past – or you would have received “The Frozen Deep” before this. Better late than never – I now send you a copy by book-post.

I hope to be back in December. The play will be produced at the Olympic as soon as possible.<sup>2</sup> If country managers apply for it, under these circumstances, I am sure you will not object to give Charles Ward – who manages everything for me in my absence – the benefit of your experience, if he wants a word of advice. I am already in treaty with “Mr Coleman” of York and Leeds – and am leaving Charles Reade to conclude the negotiation in that quarter – as Charles Reade brought us together.<sup>3</sup> In the case of any other managers, I leave copies of the piece at Charles Ward’s disposal – and he will only have to consult you as to the nightly terms he shall ask. They like their parts at The Olympic – and are resolute to do their best.

Can I do anything for you at Florence or Rome? Write at once to 9. Melcombe Place, if I can.

Ever yours Wilkie Collins

N.B. If my resignation at The Dramatic Authors is necessary to my contemplated negotiations with country managers – my resignation is left in Charles Ward’s hands,<sup>4</sup> and can be sent in when necessary.

P.S. I send you an unmarked copy of The Frozen Deep – the stage changes at The Olympic being unimportant.

---

1. Newnham Paddox, near Lutterworth, Warwickshire, was until 1952 the seat of the Earls of Denbigh. The eighth Earl at this time was Rudolph William Feilding (1823–92). WC was staying at Newnham Paddox at the invitation of Lady Goldsmid – see [0708] to her of 28 September 1866. The notepaper has an embossed oval device in the middle of the first page of a lion rampant in an oval with the inscription round it, reading ‘QUIS SIMILIS TUI IN FORTIBUS DOMINE’ (‘Who is like unto thee, O Lord, among the gods?’, Exodus 15:11, from Jerome’s Latin Vulgate).

2. The first fully professional performance of the play was at the Olympic Theatre on 27 October 1866. It ran until 15 December but WC complained he did not make sixpence out of it. See to [0714] Nina Lehmann, 9 December 1866.

3. See [0690] to Reade of 3 July 1866.

4. That is, from the Dramatic Authors’ Society – though we are unclear why this should be necessary. Simpson took on the Secretaryship of the organization in 1868.

[0711] TO JOHN BULLAR,<sup>1</sup> 13 OCTOBER 1866

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 99–100; BGLL, II, p. 51.

Newnham Paddox | Lutterworth<sup>2</sup> | Oct 13th 1866

My dear Bullar,

My first spare moment for sending you the Autographs is a moment at this house where I am paying a visit of two days before starting for Italy on Wednesday next.

I enclose for your friend – Dickens, Eastlake (the late President of the R.A.),<sup>3</sup> Charles Reade (the novelist), and the late Albert Smith.<sup>4</sup> More should have been sent – if I only had the leisure to turn my letters over. But just now, Time and I are running a race – and Time is getting the best of it.

My love to Henry (who is going on well I hope) and to Joseph<sup>5</sup> – and best regards to The Captain,<sup>6</sup> and Mrs Collins.<sup>7</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. John Bullar (1806–67), barrister who lived in Southampton, friend of WC’s parents.

2. See [0710] to Palgrave Simpson of the day before for the details. WC also uses the same embossed paper.

3. Sir Charles Lock Eastlake (1793–1865: ODNB), painter, President of the Royal Academy from 1850.

4. Albert Smith (1816–60: ODNB), journalist, dramatist and novelist – see [0256] to him of 8 June 1857.

5. John Bullar’s younger brothers, WC’s barrister friend Henry and Joseph, the doctor.

6. Probably Captain Otter – another friend who lived in the same area.

7. HC, who was then perhaps staying with the Bullars.

[0712] TO NINA LEHMANN, 26 OCTOBER 1866

MS: Parrish (Box 5/15). Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 196–197. Published: B&C, II, pp. 279–281.

Milan. Oct 26th 1866

My dear Padrona,<sup>1</sup>

Are you angry with me for leaving your charming letter so long unanswered? You well might be – and yet it is not my fault. I have been living in a whirlwind, and have only dropped out of the vortex in this place.<sup>2</sup> In plainer English, the first quarter of an hour which I have had at my own disposal since you wrote to me, is a quarter of an hour tonight, in this very damp and very [del] dreary town. Last night my travelling-companion (Pigott) and I, went to a public ball here. We entered by a long dark passage – passed through a hall ornamented with a large stock of fenders grates and other ironmongery for sale on either side – found ourselves in a [del] spacious room lit by three oil lamps, with two disreputable females smoking cigars, ten or a dozen depressed men – about four hundred empty chairs in a circle – one couple polking in that circle – and nothing else, on my sacred word of honour, nothing else going on! Tonight, I am wiser. I stay at the hotel, and write to the Padrona.

Let us go back to England.

How came I to be so dreadfully occupied when your letter /reached/ [del] me? Surely, I need not tell you, who know me so well, the particular circumstance in which my troubles took their rise. Of course, I caught a cold. Very good. I had four different visits to pay in the country, and they had to be put off till I was better. I also had a play (“The Frozen Deep”) accepted at the Olympic Theatre, and to be produced at Christmas. I also had my engagement with Pigott to go to Rome on a certain day. Very good again. It turned out, as soon as I was better, that all my four visits must be paid together in ten days – in consequence of the infernal cold seizing on me by the nose, teeth, face, throat, and chest, in succession, and keeping me at home till the time for going to Italy was perilously near at hand. To make matters worse, the play with which the Olympic season opened, proved a failure, and “The Frozen Deep” was wanted in October instead of at Christmas. I paid a visit in the country – and came back to London, and read the play to the actors. I paid another visit, and came back, and heard the actors read their parts to me. I paid another visit, and came back to a first rehearsal. I paid a last [del] visit, and came back to see the stage “effects” tried – and went away again to say goodbye to Mama Collins at Tunbridge Wells – and came back again to “sketch” the play bill and hear the manager’s last words – and went away again to Folkestone and Boulogne – and stopped in Paris a day to discuss the production of my other play “Armada” on the French stage, with my good friend Regnier, of the Theatre Français – and went away again through Switzerland and over the Splügen with Pigott, whose time is limited, and whose travelling must not be of the dawdling and desultory kind – and [del] /so it happens that/ tomorrow night, if all goes well, I shall be at Bologna, while The Frozen Deep is being performed for the first time in London, and the respectable British Public is hissing, or applauding me, as the case may be. In the midst of all this, where is the time for me to write to the best of women? There is not time, but between ten and eleven tonight at the Albergho Reale in Milan. Have I justified myself? Hein?

Well, and what next? I don’t exactly know. We were to have gone and stayed with Thomas Trollope in his new villa at Florence. But [del] a woman has got in the way. [del] A charming person of the sex was governess to [del] the daughter of Thomas Trollope, widower – and Thomas Trollope is going to marry her tomorrow at Paris – and so, there is an end of the Florence scheme.<sup>3</sup> I don’t complain – I am all for Love myself – and this sort of thing speaks volumes for women, for surely a man at a mature age, with a growing daughter, does’nt marry again without knowing what he is about and without remembrances of Mrs Number One, which surround as with a halo Mrs Number Two? But this is mere speculation. Let me get back to facts. We shall go all the sooner to Rome, I think – and when we leave Rome towards the end of next month, and take the Steamer for Marseilles, I will write again, and say my last word about a visit to Pau. If I can come (though it may be only [del] for a few days), depend upon it, I will – for I long sorely to see you again. It will all depend on my letters from London and Paris next month – and as soon as those letters are received, you shall hear from me once more.

In the meantime, need I say how glad I am to hear such good news of you? You know how glad I am. But are you learning to take care of yourself for the future? Don’t say “Stuff!” Don’t go to the piano (especially as I am not within hearing), and forget the words of wisdom. Cultivate your appetite – and your appetite will reward you. Purchase becoming (and warm) things for the neck and chest. Rise superior to the devilish delusion which makes women think that their feet cannot possibly look pretty in thick boots. I have studied the subject – and I say they can. Men understand these things. Mr Worth of Paris dresses the fine French ladies who wear the “Falballá”, and regulates the fashions of Europe.<sup>4</sup> He is about to start “comforters” and hob-nail boots for the approaching winter. In two months’ time it will be indecent for a woman to show her neck at night, – and if you don’t make a frightful noise at every step you take on the pavement, you abrogate your position as woman wife and mother, in the eyes of all Europe. Is this exaggerated [sic] ? No! a thousand times no! It is horrible – but it is the truth.

Has Fred returned to you? If he has, give him my love, and ask him to bring you to Rome in the middle of next month. Oh dear! dear! how pleasant it would be if we could all meet in the Forum! But we shan't. Kiss Miss Lehmann for me – and give my love to the boys.<sup>5</sup> The lamp is going out, and I must start early tomorrow morning, and there is nothing for it but to repeat that everlasting business of unbuttoning and going to bed. Goodbye for the present.

Yours affly | WC

---

1. This is the first of many letters where WC uses this affectionate nickname to address and refer to Nina Lehmann.
2. This trip to Italy in the autumn of 1866 was WC's fourth.
3. Thomas Adolphus Trollope (1810–1892: ODNB), elder brother of Anthony and himself a novelist, had long been a resident among the British community in Florence. In Paris on 29 October 1866 he married his second wife Frances Eleanor née Ternan (?1834–1913), novelist, who was then governess to his twelve-year-old daughter, Bice (Beatrice). They lived at the Villa Ricorboli, Florence, until 1873. Fanny Trollope was also the elder sister of CD's young mistress, Ellen Lawless Ternan (1839–1914: ODNB).
4. Father of haute couture, the Englishman Charles Frederick Worth (1825–95: ODNB) opened his own fashion house in 1858 in Paris at 7 Rue de la Paix, in partnership with Otto Bobergh, having previously worked as a designer at the House of Gagelin which supplied the trousseau for the newly wedded Empress Eugénie. Here, 'Falballá' (often written 'falbala' or 'furbelow' in English) refers to a gathered flounce, frill or ruffle, typically on a petticoat.
5. The Lehmann's only daughter, Nina Fredericka Mary Teba, was born on 15 October 1861. Her three older brothers, Rudolph Chambers, Frederick Hope, and Ernest Benzon, were born respectively in 1856, 1857, and 1859.

[0713] TO FREDERICK LOCKER,<sup>1</sup> 27 NOVEMBER 1866

MS: Houghton (MS Eng 875(30)). Published: BGLL, II, p. 52.

Hotel des Iles Britanniques | Rome | November 27th 1866

Dear Mr Locker,

I tried hard to get to the Via Condotti yesterday – but the various small worries incidental to (travelling) humanity got in my way and stopped me. You will be merciful I am sure – and will, on this occasion, take the will for the deed.

Pray accept my renewed thanks for your Poems. I have been dipping into the book already<sup>2</sup> – at all sorts of unholy hours when Sleep and I have failed to come to any sort of understanding together. “My Mistress's Boots” “My Neighbour Rose” “The Housemaid” and “The Grandmother” seem to me (among others) to be touched with an especial grace and lightness of hand. The suggestion, rather than the expression, of feeling in these verses – a very subtle and difficult thing to manage, in any form of Art – is, to my thinking, most happily accomplished.

I am away to Civita Vecchia this evening. Depend on my posting your letters – and believe me

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

F. Locker Esqre

---

1. Frederick Locker (later Locker-Lampson; 1821–95: ODNB), poet and book collector, elder brother of Arthur Locker, editor of the Graphic. For details of Locker's book-collecting activities, see Barbara Quinn Schmidt, 'Frederick Locker-Lampson' in W. Baker and K. Womack (eds), Nineteenth-Century British Book-Collectors and Bibliographers (Detroit: Gale Research, 1997), pp. 258–264.

2. WC's library contains a copy of A Selection from the Works of Frederick Locker (1865) in Moxon's Miniature Poets Series (Baker 2002, p. 129).

[3208] TO UNIDENTIFIED, 27 NOVEMBER 1866

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (2011).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C8, p. 10.

very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | November 27th 1866

---

1. Apparently cut from a letter, on blue paper. Mounted with a modern copy of Millais's portrait and with [3232] to Unidentified, unknown date.

[0714] TO NINA LEHMANN, 9 DECEMBER 1866

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lehmann, pp. 51–54; BGLL, II, pp. 52–55; Lewis website. Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 198–199; Davis, p. 247.

9. Melcombe Place, Dorset Square, London | Decr 8th 9th 1866

Injured, and admirable, Padrona!<sup>1</sup> observe the date, and address!!

What does it mean? Am I a wretch unworthy of your kindness, unworthy of your interest? I affirm with the whole force of my conviction that I am only the unluckiest of men.

Hear me!

I had made all my arrangements for returning by way of Pau,<sup>2</sup> and was on the point of writing to you to say so when letters arrived for me from Paris and London.

The letter from Paris, only informed me of a difficulty. The letter from London announced a Disaster.

My collaborator in the new French dramatic version of Armadale was at a standstill in Paris for want of personal explanations with the author of the book.<sup>3</sup> He had urgent reasons for wishing to see me as soon possible. Having laid this letter down, I took up next the letter from London. It was from the manager of the Olympic Theatre – and it announced the total failure (in respect of attracting audiences) of The Frozen Deep!<sup>4</sup> Not a sixpence made for me by the play (after all the success of the first night!) – the account books of the theatre waiting to be examined by me – and the manager waiting to know what was to be done next! There was nothing for it but to resign myself to the disappointment of missing my visit – and to get back to Paris and London as fast as I could. I caught the steamer at Civita Vecchia – went to Leghorn – from Leghorn to Marseilles – Marseilles to Macon (to rest after ten hours shaking on the railway) – Macon to Paris. At Paris, a long day's work with my collaborator, which put things right again. Next day, from Paris to London. Next day, investigation of the accounts of the Theatre – plain evidence that the play has not even paid its expenses – no alternative that I can see, or the manager either, but to put “The Frozen Deep” on the shelf by, or before, Christmas. Such is my brief narrative of disaster. Now you know the facts, will you be a dear good soul, and forgive your faithful Wilkie? When a man's affairs are all going wrong in his absence abroad – what is the man to do? He can do nothing but go back.

You will want to know why we have failed in this miserable manner. The play is (I am told – for I have not yet had the courage to go and see it) beautifully got up, and very well acted. But the enlightened British Public declares it to be “slow”. There isn't an atom of slang or vulgarity in the whole piece from beginning to end – no female legs are shown in it – Richard Wardour does'nt get up after dying and sing a comic song – sailors are represented in the Arctic regions, and there is no hornpipe danced, and no sudden arrival of “the pets of the ballet” to join the dance in the costume of Esquimaux maidens – finally, all the men on the stage don't marry all the women on the stage, at the end – and nobody addresses the audience, and says: – “If our kind friends here to-night will only encourage us by their applause, there are brave hearts among us which will dare the perils for many a night yet, of – The Frozen Deep!”

For these reasons, best of women, I have failed. Is my tail put down? No – a thousand times, No! I am at work on the dramatic “Armadale” – and I will take John Bull by the scruff of the neck, and force him into the theatre to see it – before or after it has been played in French, I don't know which – but into the theatre John Bull shall go. I have some ideas of advertising next time that will make the public hair stand on end. And so enough, and more than enough, of theatrical matters.

Oh, I wanted you so at Rome – in the Protestant Cemetery – don't start! No ghosts – only a cat. I went to show my friend Pigott the grave of the illustrious Shelley. Approaching the resting-place of the divine poet, in a bright sunlight, the finest black Tom you ever saw, discovered at an incredible distance that a Catanthropist had entered the Cemetery<sup>5</sup> – rushed up at a gallop with his tail at right angles to his ~~back~~ spine – turned over on his back, with his four paws in the air – and said in the language of cats: – “Shelley be hanged! Come and tickle me!” I stooped, and tickled him. We were both profoundly affected.<sup>5</sup>

Is this all I have to tell you about Rome? By no means. Then why do'nt I go on and tell it. Because it is five o'clock the British muffin-bell is ringing – the dismal British Sunday is closing in – I have promised to dine with the Benzons (where I shall meet Fred),<sup>6</sup> and to take Charley & Katie (who is in Dr Mussy's hands again)<sup>7</sup> on my way. I must walk to keep my horrid corpulence down – and the time is slipping away – and, though I want to go on talking to you, I must submit to another disappointment, and give it up.

Will you write, and say you have forgiven me? The most becoming ornament of your enchanting sex is – Mercy. It is the ornament, dear lady, that you especially wear! (Mercy on me, I am drifting into the phraseology of Count Fosco!). Let me revert to W. C. again. Will you ask me to come and see you when you are back in the fine weather at Woodlands?<sup>8</sup> Do, please – for it is'nt my fault that I am in London instead of in Pau. I must work and get some money, now my play has declined to put a halfpenny in my pocket.

Yours ever affctly W. C.

-
1. The first occurrence of WC's pet name for Nina Lehmann is found in [0712] to her of 26 October 1866.
  2. Nina Lehmann spent much of 1866/7 in Pau in south-west France due to ill health. Overlooking the Pyrenees, Pau had become very popular with the English for the supposed curative powers of its mild climate – at one time it was called 'La ville Anglaise'.
  3. François Régnier, leading French actor with the Comédie Française, who worked with WC on a number of plays. See [0763] to him of 30 August 1867.
  4. The Frozen Deep closed at the Olympic Theatre on 15 December.
  5. Jokingly malformed by analogy with 'philanthropist' (a lover of mankind), the term 'catanthropist' (a cat lover) is a WC invention and does not appear in any dictionary.
  6. Nina's husband Fred's sister Elizabeth and her husband Ernst Benzon.
  7. Henri G. de Mussy – see [0654] of 13 November 1865 and [0844] of 8 July 1868, both to him.
  8. The house of Frederick and Nina Lehman, Woodlands, Southwood Lane, Highgate. It is mentioned in WC's letters from 1866 to 1870 and he occasionally stayed there, writing seven letters in all from that address.

[0715] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 14 DECEMBER 1866<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 55–56.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Friday Decr 14

My dear Mother,

I am very unwilling to give up going to see you tomorrow. But I am afraid you are right about the damp – even here in London, it has given me a cold in the chest and head. You shall have your own way, therefore, though it does “go against the grain” with me to give it to you. We will say the Friday before Christmas Day, instead of tomorrow. This will give you plenty of time to air & warm everything – and will give me a chance of a change to dryness in the weather. If it will only be a frosty Christmas this year we shall have nothing left to desire. N.B. Accept Alderman Salomon's invitation for me with thanks.<sup>2</sup>

Mind you keep your promise to let me know twice a week how you go on.

I will send you some papers tomorrow. By this post, I send you a German “Punch”, published in Berlin.<sup>3</sup> Look for the facetious illustrations of The Woman in White – which is the rage at Berlin now as a play. The people in the pit do really – as in the illustration – follow the play with the book in their hands! Let me have the paper back on Tuesday or Wednesday next – it is lent to me by Lehmann, who is going to Paris next week, and who wants to take it to his wife.

I hear poor accounts of Katie. She is evidently in a state of nervous exhaustion. I saw her in bed last Sunday – and gave her two Roman scarfs, for the neck and waist. She was very much pleased with them.

Tell me of anything I can send down to you.

Yours ever affly | WC

---

1. Dating from the calendar and address

2. WC refers to Sir David Salomons, (1797–1873: Boase), philanthropist, campaigner for Jewish rights and MP for Greenwich (1851–55; 1859–73). He was appointed the first Jewish Lord Mayor of London in 1855 and made a Baronet in 1869. Since 1829 his country residence had been at Broom Hill, Southborough, near Tunbridge Wells. For a portrait, see Plate III in M. D. Brown, David Salomons House: Catalogue of Mementos (London: printed privately, 1968). See [1222] to Salomons, 10 April 1872. See also Gasson & Baker, pp. 181–182.
3. The German periodical in question has not been identified.

[0716] TO LYDIA FOOTE,<sup>1</sup> 17 DECEMBER 1866

MS: TPC (S.324–1989). Published: Homewood, p. 110; BGLL, II, p. 56.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Dec<sup>r</sup> 17th 1866

Dear Miss Foote,

I cannot allow “The Frozen Deep” to disappear from the bills of the Olympic Theatre without congratulating you sincerely on your performance of the part of “Clara.” In the first act especially, you played with a truth, grace, and simplicity – and you managed the difficult transitions from one emotion to another with an artist-like subtlety – which fulfilled, and more than fulfilled, the highest expectations I had formed of you. Whatever reasons I may have seen on the stage for the disastrous result of the experiment from which we had all hoped so much, I saw nothing in your performance that disappointed me – and I thank you as heartily as if we had achieved a great theatrical success.

Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

Miss L. Foote

---

1. Lydia Foote (born Lydia Alice Legge; c. 1844–92), actress who played Clara Burnham in The Frozen Deep at the Olympic Theatre from 27 October 1867 and Anne Silvester in Man and Wife at the Prince of Wales’s Theatre from 22 February 1873.

[0717] TO SMITH, ELDER & CO., 31 DECEMBER 1866

MS: NLS (MS 23180/144, 146), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 56–57.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. N.W. | December 31st 1866

Dear Sirs,

A short time since, I wrote to Mr Smith on the subject of certain copyrights in my books which revert to me this day.<sup>2</sup> As I have not received any answer from Mr Smith, and as some steps ought now to be taken in the matter, I think it desirable to send a second statement of the circumstances, addressed to the publishing department of your Firm.

The works in question are : – Antonina – Basil – Hide And Seek – The Queen of Hearts – The Dead Secret – and The Woman In White.

The copyrights of the first two of these works (“Antonina” and “Basil”) were repurchased by me, under my agreement made with Messrs Low for the first publication of my books in one volume form. The other four novels have always remained my copyrights, and were “leased” for a term only under the above-mentioned agreement with Messrs Low – whose interest in my books was transferred to your House.

Will you be good enough to let me know, as soon as you conveniently can, what arrangement, in respect to these six novels, you think it would be more to your advantage and to mine to propose for the future?<sup>3</sup>

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Smith Elder & Co

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘Messrs Smith, Elder & Co | 65. Cornhill | E.C.’, postmarked ‘CHARING CROSS W.C. | 7 | JA 1 | 67’.

2. WC’s letter to George Smith has not been traced.

3. All six works mentioned here had been issued until 1864 in Sampson Low’s Cheap and Uniform Edition (along with

No Name, which WC overlooks). From 1865 onwards, Smith, Elder issued these works in a variety of single-volume editions. As [0720] and [0721] to HC of 6 and 8 January 1867 reveal, Smith, Elder declined to make an offer for the copyrights, noting that current sales were ‘slow’, prompting WC to consider opening negotiations for serial publication in the penny journals (see Peters, p. 279).

[0718] TO MARY ANNE BENHAM,<sup>1</sup> 2 JANUARY 1867

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 57–58, amended A&C6, p. 18.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Dec Jany 2nd 1867

Dear Mrs Benham,

I well remember having the pleasure of meeting Mr and Mrs Speed and Miss Speed at that pleasant dinner at Syon Lodge – and I am much obliged to you for sending me the invitation.<sup>2</sup>

But there is an obstacle in the way of my accepting it – for which I alone am to blame. In plain English, the 8th of January is my birthday – and I stand pledged to celebrate the evening by going to a “Pantomime” and eating a supper!<sup>3</sup> I have written to make my apologies to Mrs Speed – and I can only hope for “better luck next time.”

All the best wishes of the season to you and your’s!

Believe me | Dear Mrs Benham | Yours vly truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Mary Anne Benham neé Shoppee (b. c.1823), wife of WC’s lawyer and agent, Ebenezer (later Edward) Benham (1823–71) whom she married on 17 June 1846. See [0719] to him of 5 January 1867.

2. The dinner was possibly in June the previous year – see [0689] to Miss Speed, 30 June 1866. Ebenezer/Edward and Mary Anne lived at Syon Lodge, Isleworth, west of London (Census 1861 and 1871).

3. With Charles Ward and Edward Pigott. See [0721] to HC, 8 January 1867.

[0719] TO EDWARD BENHAM,<sup>1</sup> 5 JANUARY 1867

MS: Glasgow (891117/1). Published: BGLL, II, p. 58 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, pp 18–19.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | January 5 1867

My dear Benham

I want very much to speak to you about my “copyrights” and about certain literary projects that I am meditating.<sup>2</sup> Can you drop in to dine here either Wednesday or Thursday next at 7?<sup>3</sup>

Or, if you are engaged or don’t care to go out this cold weather at night – when can I see you without interrupting business at Essex St?

But we should be more snug over a cigar, in a couple of arm-chairs here.

Send me a line.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. This letter is the first from WC among the more than 150 in the Collins file at Benham & Tindell, now found at the Mitchell Library, bound in two red leather volumes. Ebenezer Benham (c.1823–1871) founded the solicitor’s firm under his name in 1848. He specialised in copyright and patent law (see: <www.monro-fisher-wasbrough.com/history.html>). Ten years later he was joined as a partner by William F. Tindell and the firm changed its name to Benham & Tindell. The office was at 18 Essex Street, off the Strand, and Benham lived there at first (1851 Census HO107/1512/27/5) before moving out to Syon Lodge (1861 Census RG9/772/59/12). He was WC’s sailing companion in September 1860. Probably soon after 1861 he changed his name from Ebenezer to Edward (see Census 1871 RG10/1313/56/19 and Calendar of the Grants of Probate, London: 1871, p. 244, granted 30 June 1871). From the beginning of 1868 WC’s business seems to have been handled largely by Tindell. Benham died unexpectedly of small-pox and fever on 30 April 1871 (death certificate), perhaps contracted in Spain – see [1033] to Tindell, 25 October 1870.

2. See [0717] to Smith, Elder & Co. of 31 December 1866.

3. WC writes on the Saturday.

[0720] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 6 JANUARY 1867

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, pp. 281–282. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 58–59, amended A&C6, p. 19.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | Sunday Jany 6th

My dear Mother,

How did you get through the cold and the snow? They both exactly suited me – and now there is a thaw.

Send me a line to answer this question, and to wish me many happy returns of the day on Tuesday. On the eighth you may perhaps remember, I shall have reached the age of 36.<sup>2</sup>

The filth of London today, with the melted snow, exceeds belief. I never saw the streets so empty as they were during the frost. The cold quite seemed to frighten people. I took immensely long walks – and quite enjoyed it.

Smith & Elder made me no offer for the copyrights. The market has, I suppose, been overstocked with my books. What am I to do next, you will ask. I am going to open communications with the penny journals (the proprietors of which applied to me a year or two since) – and we shall see what an entirely new public has to say to me.

In the meantime I am going to add to “The Rogue’s Life” – make a two volume novel of it<sup>3</sup> – and astonish the ideotic British Reader with a lively book from the first page to the last. If “The Woman In White” – with which I shall start the other experiment – takes with the penny public, I will write a new book for them. I have got the idea of the new book and my friend Benham, who is legally connected with the proprietors of some of these journals is coming this week to settle the thing with me. You shall hear how it ends.<sup>4</sup> I am full of ideas for books and plays. The Smith & Elder mess has fired me – Smith, mind, writes most kindly, lamenting the “slow sale”, and the impossibility of his making me an offer which I should think it worth while to accept. I have got my name and my brains – and I will make a new start, with a new public!

Yours ever affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | at Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-N.W | 7 | JA 7 | 67’.

2. Since there is no doubt about the dating of the letter, this must be taken as a jest – WC was in fact going to be 43 on 8 January 1867.

3. This plan was not in fact carried out.

4. See [0719] to Edward Benham of the previous day – in the end, nothing seems to have come of the approach to the penny journal proprietors either.

[0721] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 8 JANUARY 1867

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 282. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 59–61.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Jany 8th 1867

My dear Mother,

Our letters have crossed again. I was delighted to hear that you got through the cold weather so successfully. How I got through it you know already. Well, here I am at another birthday! I am going to have C Ward and Pigott and the doctor (if he can come) to dinner – and I am going out to take a walk in the middle of the day, which you will I am sure think an excellent method of celebrating the present anniversary.

Now to answer your letter.

- 1 Very glad to hear that I have been able to help Mrs Slade in any way.<sup>2</sup>
- 2 Astonished at your not liking the photograph!<sup>3</sup> Scabby? It seems to me Lovely! But tastes differ. I am to be done again, with a biography, by another photographer as soon as I can summon the courage.<sup>4</sup> We will see how he succeeds.
- 3 The Cornhill for January. I brought it with me when I came at Xmas, and left it on the stand near the door in the drawing-room. Look again, and look at the date at the top of the cover. The first picture is a man hugging a woman – No! worse, a woman hugging a man! with a bedroom candlestick in his hand.<sup>5</sup> If you have lost the mag – you shall have another. Let me know.

- 4 Frozen Deep. Keep your copy. I have more here. NB. I have a splendid idea for boiling down the Lighthouse The Frozen Deep and the Red Vial into One Novel.<sup>6</sup> If the penny journal takes to the Woman in White, the penny journal shall have the new Novel. It will be just the thing for them.
- 5 Armadale. Many thanks. Regnier has got his copy. Your copy is your's only – it has your name inscribed in it. Did I tell you that the dramatic version of the book by an American lady has been a great success in New York? I am going to start on the 3rd act of Regnier's version and mine – and to finish (after doing Act 4 here) in Paris under Regnier's eye – if all goes well.<sup>7</sup>
- 6 I have sent you the Illustrated London News. Observe the Fashions!
- 7 I am your affectionate son

WC

You must'nt revile S & E. I suspect old Low of "flooding the market" with my books – and then selling them to S & E. It is not their fault that the sale is "slow". All they have done is to risk their money most liberally on me – and I am afraid not to be gainers by it.

We shall see one of these days, what the books will do in another form, and at another price.

-
1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | at Mr Anderson's | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells', postmarked as dated.
  2. WC had recommended her to the photographer John Elliott – see [0707] to him of 21 September 1866.
  3. Probably one of the set of likenesses by Elliott & Fry of 55 Baker Street.
  4. The references to the new biography and second photographer elude us.
  5. Illustration to Trollope's The Claverings, running as a serial from February 1866.
  6. Again nothing seems to have come of WC's 'splendid idea'.
  7. This American dramatic version has not been traced, while the French version with Régnier may never have been performed – see [0763] to Régnier of 30 August 1867.

[0722] TO FANNY MITCHELL, 12 JANUARY [1865–67]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Houghton (Autograph File C). Published: BGLL, II, p. 61.

9, Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W | Jan'y 12

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I have a dinner engagement, I am sorry to say, on Saturday next – so I can only thank you and ask you to accept my apologies.

I hope to be able to call in Great Stanhope Street in a few days, and repeat my excuses. In the meantime, with my best remembrances to Mr Mitchell, believe me

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Dating from the address only.

[0723] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 15 JANUARY 1867

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 61–62.

9. Melcombe Place | January 15th 1867

My dear Mother,

You will see in your newspaper tomorrow morning an account of a terrible accident on the ice in the Regent's Park. Here is a line to tell you that I have not had any time for skating – and shall not have any time for skating. Also, that Charley is equally busy – and that he told me, the last time I saw him, that he thought himself too old for skating. So don't be afraid that your sons – whatever else may happen to them – will tumble through the ice and be drowned.

The accident happened between 3 & 4 this afternoon. I only hear tonight, what I hope may be the most exaggerated accounts. Four hundred people all in the water together – and a hundred at this moment (ten o’Clock p. m.) not got out of the water. But at any rate, it is serious – and several unhappy fools, who rushed headlong into manifest danger, are drowned.<sup>2</sup>

How do you get on in the cold? Have you received two newspapers I sent you? I have begun the new “Rogue’s Life” – and am going to begin the 3rd act of the play. Also, Benham has undertaken to propose the republication of The Woman in White to one of the penny journals, the proprietor of which he knows. So you see I am “going ahead”.

Write, and tell me how you are.

Ever affly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | at Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-S.W | 7 | JA 16 | 67’. Both envelope and notepaper embossed with Athenæum Club seal.

2. The accident took place on the afternoon of January 15 – see the article ‘Fearful Accident in the Regent’s Park’ in the Times, 16 January 1867, p. 9c–d, where it is reported that eight bodies had been recovered by 8 o’clock on the evening of the disaster.

[0724] TO SMITH, ELDER & CO., 16 JANUARY 1867

MS: NLS (MS 23180/149, 151), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 62.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Jany 16th 1867

Dear Sirs,

I return you the letter which you kindly forwarded to me. It is written, as you will see, under the impression that I am the Editor of the Cornhill Magazine; and it contains a manuscript Poem, which I also enclose.

I take the present opportunity of requesting – if you publish a cheap edition of “Armada” – that you will kindly allow me to see the proofs. I have no alterations to make; but one or two “clerical errors” have crept into the two volume edition which I should like to have the opportunity of correcting. And I might possibly add a sentence or two to the original preface which would assist a certain class of readers to understand the purpose of the book.<sup>2</sup>

I remain | Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Smith Elder & Co

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘Messrs Smith Elder & Co | 65. Cornhill | E.C.’, postmarked ‘LONDON NW | JA 17 | 67’.

2. The first single-volume edition of the novel, with no change to the original preface, appeared in the autumn of 1867 – see [0776] to Smith, Elder of 18 October 1867.

[0725] TO JANE BIGELOW,<sup>1</sup> 28 JANUARY 1867

MS: Unknown. On sale: Catalogue of Lion Heart Autographs (October 2003), p. 61 (facsimile), our copy text; Galerie Bassenge, 2009. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 62–63.

Monday, January 28th 1867 /

“Think of her as you thought of the first woman who quickened the pulses within you that the rest of her sex had no art to stir. Let the kind, candid blue eyes meet your’s, as they met mine, with the one matchless look which we both remember so well. Let her voice speak the music that you once loved best, attuned as sweetly to your ear as to mine. Let her footstep, as she comes and goes, in these pages, be like that other footstep to whose airy fall your own heart once beat time. Take her as the visionary nursling of your own fancy; and she will grow upon you, all the more clearly, as the living woman who dwells in mine.”<sup>2</sup>

From “The Woman In White” | By | Wilkie Collins

Copied for Mrs Bigelow, | at Palace Gate House, | London.

1. Jane Tunis Bigelow, née Poultney (1829–89), of Baltimore, Maryland, who had married the American lawyer and diplomat John Bigelow on 11 June 1850 – see [3124] to him of [13–17 May] 1868. WC became firm friends with the couple after meeting them, on the day WC writes, at dinner at Palace Gate House, John Forster’s residence (see [0727] to HC of the following day; also Pilgrim, XI, p. 496 n. 4).
2. The quotation, from ch. 8, describes Walter Hartright’s first meeting with Laura Fairlie.

[0726] TO ELIZABETH SMITH,<sup>1</sup> 28 JANUARY [1865–67]<sup>2</sup>

MS: UNC (Smith, Elder Records, 11038/8). Published: BGLL, II, p. 63.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | Jan 28th

Dear Mrs Smith,

I heartily wish I could thank you personally, at Brighton, for your kind letter. But if the gout (which has been tormenting me again lately) will let me leave London, I am engaged at the beginning of next month to pay a visit in the neighbourhood of Tunbridge Wells. Unwilling as I am to miss the opportunity which you and Mr Smith have kindly given to me, I am afraid I have no alternative, under these unlucky circumstances, but to ask you to accept my apologies.

With kind regards to Mr Smith.

Believe me | very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Born Elizabeth Blakeway, who had married George Smith the publisher in 1854.
  2. From the address only. Visits to HC and attacks of gout are so frequent during this period that they are of little assistance with the dating.

[0727] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 29 JANUARY 1867

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 64.

9. Melcombe Place | Jan 29th

My dear Mother,

For the last three days, I have been trying in vain to find time to write – and now I scratch a line at the Club.

I was very glad to hear that you were supporting the frightful ~~cold and~~ changes between heat and cold, with an equal mind and body. I have had a cold in the face and teeth – which lasted a day or two – but nothing worse. Charley – whom I have frequently seen – I have just come from now. He is certainly better. I left him sitting up by the fireside at his tea. His stomach is getting better able to digest – and, as he digests better, he will soon get stronger. I left him in good spirits – and Katie in good spirits too.

I have sent you the Cornhill & the London News. Dined yesterday with Forster – and met Mr & Mrs Bigelow (the late Ambassador and Ambassadors of America at Paris).<sup>2</sup> Most charming people – the lady pretty, sprightly, unaffected – and so fond of my books that you would have been charmed with her too.

The third act of the play will be finished in two days. The 1st & 2nd acts have been copied (by Charles Ward) and sent to Paris – where they will be turned back into French by Régnier himself.<sup>3</sup> Also the opening chapters of the re-written “Rogues Life” are begun – So the mill is going.

The other day an American composer and giver of entertainments who has been all over the world called – with a letter of introduction from Charles Gray!!!<sup>4</sup> C. Gray is now in China! Hooray!

Tell me about your plans, and whether you are going to stay at Ben Hill<sup>5</sup> – so that I may settle about coming to see you again. Write soon.

Yours ever affly | WC

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | at Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-N.W |

- 6 | JA 30 | 67'. Both envelope and paper have the Athenæum Club seal.
2. In fact John Bigelow was Consul-General in Paris during the Civil War. Collins later corresponded regularly with Jane Bigelow especially, and visited the couple during his trip to the USA.
3. The dramatic version of Armada – see [0721] to HC of 8 January 1867 and [0763] to Régnier of 30 August 1867.
4. The son of HC's sister Catherine Gray née Geddes, then in his mid-thirties.
5. That is, at Bentham Hill Cottage, owned by the Wells family.

[2990] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 12 FEBRUARY 1867

MS: Unknown. On sale: Puttick & Simpson (sold to Woodhouse for 10s, 11 November 1915, according to E. H. Courville in Autograph Prices Current, I, August 1914-July 1916). Published: A&C1, p. 49.

Summary: 'A.L.s. 3 pp. 8vo. Feb. 12, 1867, mentioning Chas. Reade, Dickens and his reading tour etc, etc.'

[0728] TO F. C. BEARD, 13 FEBRUARY 1867

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: BGLL, II, p. 65.

9. Melcombe Place | Feby 13th 1867

My dear B.

I tried hard to get to you today, and thank you for your note – but I was carried off to Sloane St, to see my brother who is still far from well. From that time to this – an unholy hour of the night – I have been “here, there, and everywhere”.

I have got a dinner to go to tomorrow – and Friday I leave London to go and see my mother, near Tunbridge Wells. I return next week, and go to Paris on Saturday – but I will “make” time to look in on you before I go.

When I come back from Paris, you must assist at a tasting of that “Burgundy”.

Yours ever | WC

P.S. I did not get to your street on Sunday night till 11.30 (!) – when, I hope and trust, you were fast asleep.

[3085] TO CHARLES READE, 13 FEBRUARY 1867

MS: Parrish (II, 21/15, Reade vs. Seaman).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C4, pp. 7–8.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Feby 13th

My dear Reade,

Dickens's own work has hitherto got in the way of his reading yours. He is going to take “Griffith Gaunt” with him, on his present trip, and to write to me as soon as he has read it. In the meantime, he begs me to “say everything that is brotherly in Art” from him to you.

He will be reading in Scotland during the present sitting of the Court. But I hear from Mr Keen that the action is not likely to be tried this month. So there is nothing lost any way.

Dickens also writes that he “doubts such evidence (as his or mine) being allowed – on the ground that the onus probandi<sup>2</sup> lies with the reviewer and that it is not disproof that is required”. I am not lawyer enough to know whether there is, or is not, force in this point. I only mention it for consideration.<sup>3</sup>

On Friday (15th) I go to stay for a few days with my mother.<sup>4</sup> All letters forwarded from 9. Melcombe Place, if you want to write to me. On Saturday 23rd, I go to Paris.<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Four-page cream folded notepaper with embossed Athenæum Club seal. Superscript to right of seal reads: ‘13 Feby 1867 | Reade | Seaman | Reade’.

2. Onus probandi – burden of proof (Latin).

3. As recounted in Malcolm Elwin's Charles Reade: A Biography (1931), pp. 185–187, Reade's Griffith Gaunt, which ran as a serial in the Argosy in Britain and the Atlantic Monthly in the United States from January 1866, had been described in the New York weekly The Round Table as 'vicious and immoral', whereon Reade undertook a libel action through the Wall Street lawyer William D. Booth (see [0738] to him of 15 April 1867) and won nominal damages. The Round Table comments were also reprinted in the 'Literary Gossip' column of the London Review on 11 August 1866, and Reade commenced a similar action against the manager, Isaac Seaman, through his legal representatives, Laurie and Keen, of 3, Deans Court, Doctors Commons. Both CD and WC were asked to attest in court to the novel's virtues, though the action was eventually withdrawn on the journal's publishing a favourable review of Griffith Gaunt. For CD's letter to WC of 12 February 1867, see Pilgrim XI, pp. 312–313; after reading Griffith Gaunt, Dickens confessed to WC that he found some of the scenes 'extremely coarse and disagreeable' and would find it difficult to speak for the novel in court (20 February 1867, Pilgrim, XI, pp. 317–318).
4. WC seems to have returned to town around 20 February; see [0729] to Felix Moscheles of that date.
5. WC writes [0730] to HC from Paris on 26 February.

[3209] TO GEORGE RUSSELL, 19 FEBRUARY 1867

MS: Unknown. On sale: Woolley & Wallis, Salisbury, UK (12 December 2012), lot 54, in an album of correspondence to Sir George Russell, p. 45. Published: A&C8, pp. 10–11.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W.
Feby 19th

My dear George,

I heartily congratulate you on your new honours and your coming marriage.

As very ill-luck will have it, all my arrangements are made for going to Paris on Saturday the 23rd. If it was only pleasure I could put it off. But I am "dramatising" my last book for the French stage – and my "collaborateur" is waiting to see me at the earliest moment, and time is of some importance to us in the present state of the business.<sup>1</sup> I can only ask you to accept my thanks – and my excuses. You know I should be only too glad to dine if I could.

Another reason for my not delaying is – that the sooner I go the better chance I shall have of getting back in time to see my old friend married. I will leave no stone unturned to leave Paris in time for Tuesday 5th March. Send me a line to Melcombe Place to say where we rejoice, and what the hour is.<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. The French dramatisation of Armada created with his 'collaborateur' François Régnier.

2. In fact WC did not make it. See [0730] to HC, 26 February 1867: 'I doubt whether I shall get back in time for George Russell's marriage'; and [0731] to HC, 11 March 1867: 'I am back again in London'.

[0729] TO FELIX MOSCHELES,<sup>1</sup> 20 FEBRUARY 1867<sup>2</sup>

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 65.

9 Melcombe Place | N.W. | Feby 20th

Dear Mr Moscheles,

I have just returned to town. Very sorry to have missed you when you called

On Saturday morning next, I go away again, to Paris. And I therefore hasten to return you the Admission to Mr Schultz's Entertainment<sup>3</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The portrait painter – see [0672] to him of 10 April 1866.

2. Dating from the references to the return to town and the planned trip to Paris (see the preceding and following letters). Paper water-marked 'JOYNSON 1865'.

3. Unidentified.

[0730] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 26 FEBRUARY 1867

Hotel du Helder | Rue du Helder | Paris | Feby 26th 1867

My dear Mother,

I have got half an hour to spare before I go to my friend Regnier for the usual day's work on the play<sup>1</sup> – and I employ the half hour in reporting my safe arrival in Paris to you.

The day of my journey was simply perfect, as far as weather went – and weather goes a long way, with me. A calm sea – a brilliant sun – and (to my surprise) only a moderately-filled steamer. I found two nice little rooms (sitting room and bedroom), and a hearty welcome, waiting for me here. The rheumatism plagued me a little on the journey – but four and twenty hours in the dry air of Paris relieved me of it entirely. And I am in every way, the better for the change.

The play promises to do great things. The first act, in French, has been read to one or two good judges privately. [del] They are quite astonished at the originality of it – and they predict a great success, if we can go on as we have begun. We can go on – I venture to think – better than we have begun. But we must work for it. The second act must be in great part re-written – in order to adapt itself to the last two acts of the play. The third will only want a few corrections. The fourth is just begun – and the fifth we are now engaged in putting together. I shall take the 5th act – that is to say, the sketch of it – back with me, and write it in London[.] But the rest must be done here, while I can be in daily communication with my collaborateur. I doubt whether I shall get back in time for George Russell's marriage<sup>2</sup> – but we shall see what can be done in the next three or four days. [del] Everything that can be sacrificed to the play, must be sacrificed to it. A great chance is open to me – and I must make the best possible use of it. Regnier talks already of our dramatising The Woman In White next. Successful play-writing means making a fortune here – and there is no really great French writer now in our way.

The Carnival is supposed to be going on in Paris. On the Saturday night of my arrival, the Boulevards were hardly passable, for the crowds – and five public masked balls were all going on together! Last night, I was at the first representation of a new opera. You never saw a theatre so full in your [del] life – and the intense interest of the whole audience in the new musical and dramatic event was something quite electrifying. It turned out to be but a poor work after all. I was more pleased with the enthusiasm which the people showed for Art – simply for Art's sake – than with anything else that I saw or heard in the theatre.

My half hour is wearing away – and I must soon close my letter. Write here on the 1st, 2nd, or 3rd of March, – and I am sure to get your letter. I saw Charley the night before I left – and found a very decided change in him for the better. The diet here would soon cure him. I have breakfasted this [del] morning on eggs and black butter, and pigs' feet a la Sainte Ménèhould! Digestion perfect. St Ménèhould lived to extreme old age on nothing but pigs' trotters.<sup>3</sup>

Mind you write, and let me hear how you are.

Yours ever affly | WC

---

1. Armada.

2. George Russell, the third son of Sir Henry Russell, Second Baronet of Swallowfield, married Constance Charlotte Elisa Lennox on 5 March 1867. George became the Fourth Baronet on the death of his brother Charles in 1895. In January 1838 during their Italian tour, the Collins family had visited Pompeii and Amalfi with Sir Henry and his eldest son Henry (who died in 1847).

3. Ménèhould was a female fifth-century saint of the Roman Catholic church who gave her name to a town in the Champagne region where the local delicacy is pigs' trotters.

[3379] TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS, 26 FEBRUARY 1867<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection (L2815). Extract: in The Bookseller, CXI (30 March 1867), p. 203.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C14, pp.6-10.

To the honourable the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament assembled:

THE HUMBLE PETITION of an Association of Certain Men of Letters, Dramatic Authors, and Composers of Music, represented duly by the undersigned, being French citizens,

Sheweth—

That in the year 1852 a Convention was exchanged and ratified between France and Great Britain relating to Copyright in Works of Literature and the Fine Arts, and to the right of representing dramatic works and musical compositions, wherein it is agreed that the authors and composers of the one country may have, under certain conditions, all the rights and privileges which authors and composers of the other country possess and enjoy therein.<sup>3</sup>

That the said Convention expired (Article XIV.) in 1862, but has remained and remains in vigour from year to year until either of the contracting powers notify to the other its termination. That independently of the right of publishing dramatic works in the book form, there is attached to them and to musical compositions a separate and distinct right of public performance, in which resides their chief value. That Article IV of the Convention provides for an interchange of the said rights of public performance in the following words, amongst others, “It is understood that the protection stipulated by the present article is not intended to prohibit fair imitations or adaptations of dramatic works to the stage in England and France respectively, but is only meant to prevent piratical translations. The question whether a work is an imitation or a piracy shall in all cases be decided by the Courts of Justice of the respective countries, according to the laws in force in each.”

That the managers of English theatres have caused to be made translations of dramatic works, the property of some of your Petitioners, and said works have been performed and continue to be performed in England, but called “fair Imitations” or “adaptations;” nevertheless it is of notoriety in Great Britain that said translations are piratical translations.

That some of your Petitioners, having detected a particular and flagrant case of piratical translation, founded thereon an action-at-law, and the matter was tried before an English jury. But because of the ambiguity of the above-mentioned words in the Convention, the action at law failed and the Petitioners were defeated of justice. And your Petitioners verily believe that the said words do virtually abrogate the true spirit and intention of the convention and render it a dead letter.

That the works of English dramatic authors have been performed in France, but the rights of the English dramatic author have been and are fully recognised to his profit and credit, the French tribunals accepting the spirit and intention rather than the letter of the law.

Your Petitioners, therefore, humbly solicit that steps may be taken, either to modify the above ambiguous clause (for which modifications there is a special provision in the Convention, Article XIV.), or to erase the same, or in any other wise to help your Petitioners as in your wisdom and justice you may deem proper and right.<sup>4</sup>

And your Petitioners will every pray, &c., &c., &c.

LOCKROY, President; ALPHONSE ROYER, Vice-President; FERDINAND LANGLE, Vice-President; EMILE DE NAJAC, Secretary; EDOUARD PLOUVIER, Secretary; VICTORIEN SARDOU, ALEXANDRE DUMAS, Fils, T. ADENIS, PAUL SIRAUDIN, E. BOULANGER, VARIN, F. A. GEVAERT, CH. GOUNOD, LAMBERT THIBOUST,<sup>5</sup>

Signing for and representing AUBER, ROSSINI, VERDI, E. AUGIER, E. ABOUT, PONSARD, ARAGO, A. DUMAS, VICTOR HUGO, THEOPHILE GAUTIER, ALPHONSE KARR, A. MAQUET, MEYERBEER, OFFENBACH, SAINTINE, GEORGE SAND, UCHARD, and one thousand and eighty literary men forming the Society.

Your most obedient servants<sup>6</sup>

[Copy 1]

[rectangular excision]

George J. Vining
Royal Princesses
Theatre
Martha Oliver
Royalty Theatre

Geo W Lovell
Ruth Herbert
Royal St James's
Theatre
Tom Taylor X
Dion Boucicault
Charles Reade
Wilkie Collins<sup>7</sup>
Arthur S. Sullivan
Sefton Parry
Royal Holborn
Theatre
Frederick Gye
Royal Italian Opera

Jules Benedict
Edmund Yates
John Hollingshead
Charles Lamb Kenney
F. B. Chatterton
Theatre Royal
Drury Lane
Th P Chappell
G. J. Hepler
Robt. Cocks & Co.
Cramer [& Co.]

[Copy 2]

M. W. Bayley
Mr D Davison
[illegible]
T. W. Robertson
Howard Glover

[Copy 3]

Marie Wilton
Henry J. Byron

---

1. The printed document is in the standard form of a public petition presented to the House of Commons. It is available in three cropped copies found loose in an album of autographs of political and theatrical figures where the remainder of the collection dates from 1918 to 1926. The cropping has in general been made in such a way as to leave intact the hand-written signatures on the verso of each copy.

2. The following paragraph, referring to the Liberal MP for Southwark, John Locke (1805-1880: ODNB), appeared in the columns devoted to 'Parliamentary Intelligence: House of Commons. Tuesday, Feb. 26.' in The Times (27 February 1867), p. 6c:

PETITIONS. Mr. LOCKE presented a petition from members of an association of men of letters, dramatic authors, and composers of music in France, complaining that under the Convention of 1852, relating to copyright in works of literature and the fine arts, and to the right of representing dramatic works and musical compositions, entered into between this country and France, French dramatic authors and composers do not enjoy the same rights and privileges in England as are enjoyed by English dramatic authors and composers in France, and praying that the House will grant them relief. The petition was read at the table.

Towards the end of March 1867, the petition was published in large part in The Bookseller, introduced by these words: INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT LAW.—Some French dramatic authors, feeling themselves aggrieved by the liberties English playwrights take with their productions, have petitioned the House of Commons for protection. The document, presented by Mr Locke, professes to be—

Fragments of text missing from the printed petition due to cropping have been restored from the version appearing in the Bookseller; here they appear in italics.

3. The Convention was signed by both parties on 3 November 1851 and legally ratified the following year; in Britain this was effected by Act of Parliament (15 & 16 Victoria, cap. 12); see 'Correspondence between the Foreign Office and Her Majesty's Representative Abroad, and Foreign Representatives in England, on the Subject of Copyright, 1872-75', House of Commons Parliamentary Papers, Commercial. No. 14 (1875). Copyright. (C1285), pp. 1 & 25.

4. Though a Bill to effect the requested amendment to 15 & 16 Vict. c. 12 was drafted as early as February 1868, the required legislation was not in fact enacted until August 1875 (see HCCP: C1285, pp. 4 & 25-26). These Parliamentary Papers mention that the initiative of February 1868 was in response to 'the representations of the French Government, supported by the Society of British Dramatic Authors themselves', though there is no specific reference to the petition in question here (see 'Memorandum respecting the Literary Convention of 1851, Communicated to, May 9, 1873 Mr. Kennedy by the French Commissioner, May 9, 1873.', HCCP: C1285, pp. 4-7).

5. The above fourteen signatories were all then officers of the French Société des Auteurs et Compositeurs Dramatiques (1829-); see Annuaire de la Société des Auteurs et Compositeurs Dramatiques I (1867), p. 1. Joseph-Philippe Simon (1803-91, known as Lockroy) was President from late 1866 to 1867, following the death in September 1866 of the previous president, Léon Gozlan. The same volume of the Annuaire includes a French translation of the 1867 petition by Locke to the House of Commons, together with a paragraph of explanation (pp. 174-175); there, it is stated that the petition was drafted and submitted at the suggestion of Dion Boucicault, who had promised to garner support through the publication of critical articles in British journals. We have not, however, been able to locate any such articles.

6. This single line of printed text is found on the verso of only one of the cropped copies of the petition, though the nature of the cropping suggests that it may originally have appeared on all; indeed, it is quite possible that there may have been one or two additional lines of text above it. Be that as it may, the signatures appended must be taken to indicate approval by representatives of the British theatrical world for the petition. Indeed, the signatures on the verso of the printed petition were by no means the first public expressions of support for revision of the clause in the 1852 act concerning ‘fair imitations or adaptations’; for example, at the beginning of the decade Charles Reade had written an irate book appealing to Parliament to ‘cleanse the country of ... [this] unwise iniquity’ (The Eighth Commandment, London: Trubner, 1860, p. 1). Ironically, WC himself had recently been in Paris adapting Armada for a French production by François Regnier; then he had been ‘presented to some of the great French authors, and honoured with some very pretty compliments’ – see [0731] to Harriet Collins, 11 March 1867.

7. Although the signatories on the printed Petition are all French citizens, the hand-written signatures of WC and twenty-six other English dramatic authors, theatrical managers, and actors are found on the reverse of the three copies of the petition in the autograph album. In turn, these different copies bear twenty (including WC), five (headed by the printed text ‘Your most obedient servants’), and two signatures; on the copy with the largest number of signatures, six are followed by the name of a London theatre in another hand and underlined. This copy also features a rectangular excision which might have carried two or three more signatures. The extant signatures include those of several individuals who WC knew well, including George Vining, Dion Boucicault, Charles Reade, Edmund Yates, John Hollingshead, Charles Kenney, and Marie Wilton who, in December that year, was to marry Squire Bancroft. Tom Taylor’s signature also appears but is flagged with a dotted saltire, although the accompanying note is missing.

[0731] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 11 MARCH 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/100), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 284–285.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Monday March 11

My dear Mother,

I am back again in London, safe and sound. The sudden change in the weather – from mild heat to bone-searching cold – was frightful at Paris. Everybody felt it – in everybody’s weak place. I got the rheumatism of course and had a smartish attack which hurried me back to London – in case of a lay-up. However, the weather softened a little at the end of last week – and [del] as events [del] proved, I physicked myself in the right way. The attack has threatened and has gone off again.

All that I went to Paris to do, I have done. We have put together a completer outline of our fifth act (the great difficulty) – and have made a new second act, also in outline. These, I have come back to write for the stage – and when that is done, my troubles (so far as the play is concerned) are at an end. Regnier will do all that must be done to put the play on the stage.

I had a very pleasant time in Paris, before the rheumatism. Was presented to some of the great French authors, and honoured with some very pretty compliments – saw some excellent acting – received every imaginable kindness from my good friend Regnier – and in short made “a great success” of the trip.

I have got you two pairs of boots. One /pair/ for your dinner-parties. One for waking in. I tried them on. You can have the heels shaved down, if you like – it was impossible to get them without high heels. But in other respects, I think they will do. And observe, they are Cheap!<sup>2</sup> Both pairs cost together only 22 shillings.

I heard from Charley at Paris – who wrote alarmed by a false report of my being laid up with gout. I hope he will soon be able to go and see you.

Send me a line to say how you are – and whether you have had the Athenaeum regularly.

Yours ever affly | WC

Shall I send you the boots by rail – in a small parcel?

I enclose a newspaper criticism on the performance of “Armada” at New York.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | at Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-N.W |

X | MR11 | 67', and endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE WELLS | A | MR12 | 67'.

2. The word is written in large, bold characters and underlined three times.

3. The newspaper cutting is not found with the holograph letter at Morgan. WC writes this second postscript in a small hand, squeezed in to the left of the address on the front page.

[0732] TO MISS SPEED,<sup>1</sup> 30 MARCH 1867

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 101; BGLL, II, p. 66.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | March 30th 1867

Dear Miss Speed,

Here are William the Fourth,<sup>2</sup> Russell – the Times correspondent,<sup>3</sup> Anthony Trollope, and Shirley Brooks<sup>4</sup> – all the autographs I can find at present.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0689] to her of 30 June 1866.

2. The letter from the dead king (who reigned 1830–37) was presumably to WmC, who sold George IV two pictures in 1818 and 1825. WC's generosity in casually giving away such documents is remarkable.

3. William Howard Russell (1820–1907: ODNB), war correspondent, knighted in 1895.

4. Charles William Shirley Brooks (1816–74: ODNB), journalist and man of letters.

[0733] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, MARCH 1867

MS: Unknown.<sup>1</sup> On sale: eBay, September 2002, item 1855313925. Published: BGLL, II, p. 66.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | March 1867

---

1. A fragment only, no address or other text.

[0734] TO [JOSEPH] HOGARTH,<sup>1</sup> 1 APRIL 1867

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 66.

9 Melcombe Place, | Dorset Square, | NW | April 1st 1867

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to Mr Hogarth, and will be obliged if Mr Hogarth will direct the photographs to be sent to him at the above address – without framing – whenever it is convenient.

---

1. Possibly Joseph Hogarth, printseller of the Haymarket.

[0735] TO JAMES HOLDEN,<sup>1</sup> 3 APRIL 1867

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 67.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | London | April 3rd 1867

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my best thanks for the compliment that you are so good as to pay to me and to my books.

Your Poems will find me at the address at the head of this letter.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

James Holden Esq

---

1. A poet resident at 161 Townhead, Rochdale, Lancashire – see [0736] to him of 6 April 1867.

[0736] TO JAMES HOLDEN, 6 APRIL 1867

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 67.

9 Melcombe Place | Dorset Square NW. | April 6th 1867

Dear Sir,

Your volume reached me safely this morning.<sup>1</sup>

I beg to thank you for this token of your goodwill, and to congratulate you on possessing tastes which lead you to cultivate Literature in your leisure hours.

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

To | James Holden Esqr Jr

---

1. A presentation copy of Holden's privately printed Poetic Zephyrs (Bury, 1866), which reveals the marked influence of Robert Burns and includes a signed photographic portrait of the young author, is recorded in WC's library (Baker 2002, p. 118). Holden seems to have sent copies of this substantial volume of forty-five poems occupying 240 pages to a number of celebrities, including Matthew Arnold (see The Letters of Matthew Arnold: Vol. 3, 1866–1870, ed. Cecil Yelverton Lang, U. Press of Virginia, 1998, pp. 214, 219), and the then president of the United States (see The Papers of Andrew Johnson: Vol. 15, September 1868–April 1869, ed. Paul H. Bergeron, U. of Tennessee Press, 1999, pp. 548–549).

[0737] TO SMITH, ELDER & CO., 8 APRIL 1867

MS: NLS (MS 23180/ 154, 156), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 67–68.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | April 8th 1867

Dear Sirs,

I am sorry to trouble you again about my books. But I find that I cannot make arrangements for their republication in a new form, unless I am formally, as well as actually, in possession of the copyrights, and unless I know what "stock" is left on hand, and what value is placed on the stereotyped plates.<sup>2</sup>

If you will refer to the Agreement, you will find that there is a clause providing for the "re-assignment" of four of the copyrights, and for the "assignment" of two others, to me, on the 31st of December last.<sup>3</sup> How this is to be done, I don't know. I only know that it appears to be necessary, as a matter of business, that these re-assignments and assignments should be made.

There is also a clause in the agreement permitting me – if I wish it – to purchase the stock on hand and the Stereotype Plates. Will you kindly inform me what stock there is on hand now, and what price you place upon it? And will you further let me know at what sum you value the Stereotype Plates?

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Smith Elder & Co.

---

1. Signed and directed to 'Messrs Smith Elder & Co | 65. Cornhill | E.C.', postmarked as dated.

2. Again relating to WC's (abortive) plans to republish his earlier novels in the penny journals.

3. See [0717] to Smith, Elder of 31 December 1866 for the works in question.

[0738] TO WILLIAM D. BOOTH,<sup>1</sup> 15 APRIL 1867

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 68–69.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | London | April 15th 1867

Sir.

Mr Charles Reade has sent me your letter of the 25th March 1867, requesting me to execute the document you enclosed, in order to lay the foundation for the trying of a test case –

so as to have some question of copyright in which American managers are interested, definitely settled.<sup>2</sup>

I have executed (and enclose with this) the document you wish me to sign – with a slight modification introduced by my legal adviser for the purpose of protecting me from any liability, if the right to assign does not exist by American law.

In signing, however, I am bound expressly to inform you that I entirely decline to enter upon any litigation – or to authorise you or any one to do so for me. If Mr Wallack<sup>3</sup> should desire to restrain other theatres from performing the piece, any proceedings he may feel inclined to take for that purpose, must be taken in his own name, on his own account, and at his own risk and expense.

I remain, Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Wm D. Booth, Esq

---

1. New York lawyer specializing in copyright issues, who later acted on a number of occasions as WC's legal representative in the United States – see [1024] of 20 September 1870 and [1345] of 24 May 1873, both to him, and also [1050] to T. W. Robertson of 11 January 1871.

2. The precise nature of the test case in question is not clear, though it presumably had to do with the performance of one of WC's plays in New York. No communication with Charles Reade on the subject seems to have survived.

3. Presumably J. Lester Wallack (1820–88), then manager of Wallack's Theatre, on Broadway near Broome St.

[0739] TO SMITH, ELDER & CO., 20 APRIL 1867

MS: NLS (MS 23180/159, 161), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 69.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | April 20th 1867

Dear Sirs

I beg to thank you for your letter of the 18th Inst – and to assure you that I sincerely regret, on your account, as well as on mine, the discouraging result of your negotiation with Messrs Low.<sup>2</sup>

My capacity to avail myself of the proposal which you have kindly made to me, depends mainly on arrangements which I hope to be able to conclude for the republication of the books in a new form. As soon as it is possible, under these circumstances, to write to you more definitely – and I will do my best to bring the matter to a speedy conclusion – you shall hear from me again.<sup>3</sup>

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Smith Elder & Co

---

1. Directed to 'Messrs Smith Elder & Co | 65. Cornhill | E.C.', postmarked 'LONDON W | Y7 | AP 22 | 67'.

2. The aim of the negotiation is uncertain, but it is clear that WC remained at loggerheads with Sampson Low – see [0754] to Harper & Brothers of 18 June 1867.

3. Smith, Elder's proposal seems to have been to sell back to WC the copyright of No Name which the firm had purchased from Sampson Low in 1865 – see [0764] to Smith, Elder of 30 August 1867.

[0740] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 22 APRIL [1865–67]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Northumberland (SANT/BEQ/4/pp162b). Published: BGLL, II, p. 69.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | April 22nd

Dear Sir,

The note which you sent to me – and which I return to you in this – is in Mr Charles Dickens's handwriting.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the address only.

[0741] TO FANNY MITCHELL, APRIL [1865–67]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, II, p. 70.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Saturday

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I most gladly accept your kind invitation for the 2nd May at 7.30 punctually.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. From the address and internal reference to the date.

[0742] TO JOHN ELLIOTT,<sup>1</sup> 2 MAY 1867

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 70.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | May 2nd 1867

My dear Sir,

The bearer of this letter is my brother – Mr Charles Collins. He wishes to ask you a question on a subject connected with photography. If you will kindly give him the benefit of your experience, in this matter, you will oblige

Yours faithfully | Wilkie Collins

J. Elliott Esqre

---

1. See [0707] to John Elliott, 21 September 1866.

[0743] TO JOHN WATKINS,<sup>1</sup> 2 MAY 1867

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 70.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square N.W. | May 2nd 1867

My dear Sir,

This letter introduces to you my brother – Mr Charles Collins. He wishes to consult you on a matter connected with practical photography – and I am sure you will allow me to refer him to you as a “competent authority”.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

J. Watkins Esqre

---

1. The society photographer – see [0454] of 28 January 1862 and [0580] of 4 May 1864, both to him. CAC was presumably seeking information for ‘A New Portrait-Gallery’ in All The Year Round, 31 August 1867, XVIII, pp. 229–232, which was about the need for a gallery to preserve photographic likenesses and for which he needed some technical information.

[0744] TO FANNY MITCHELL, 5 MAY 1867<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, II, p. 71.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Sunday May 5th

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

The only sensible person in this house is the dog! I never heard that Mr Mitchell had been so kind as to call with your note – until it was too late to thank him. I was then informed that the dog had, most properly, done his best to welcome the visitor of whose presence I was unaware. He has “retrieved” a variety of domestic articles in his time – but if he has in any respect “retrieved” my reputation he has done me a service for which I am heartily obliged to him.<sup>2</sup> If Mr Mitchell ever comes my way again, I can only entreat him – through you – to remember that I am never “engaged” for him – though I may be writing (as I was that morning) in a ragged dressing-gown, with the wreck of a late breakfast on the most untidy table that ever was seen.

Whether you will ever give me a chance of dining in Great Stanhope Street again, depends, not on my merits, but on your mercy. I have but one virtue left – I believe in your mercy.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the address and the calendar.

2. This may be the young Tommy, WC’s Scotch terrier, who died in 1885 – see [2461] to Frank Beard of 31 August 1885.

[0745] TO W. H. WILLS, 8 MAY 1867

MS: Johns Hopkins (in extra-illustrated copy of Forster’s Life of Charles Dickens, 2nd edn (London: Chapman & Hall, 1872), III, p. 49). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 71–72.

Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | May 8th 1867

My dear Wills,

Can you send me “The Island of Silver Store”?<sup>1</sup> Dickens gave me his Ms, and mine, of that Christmas Number, bound – and my part of the Ms compared with the printing will assist me in “casting off” the quantity of writing that I must do, this time.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. A chapter of the 1857 Christmas number of Household Words, ‘The Perils of Certain English Prisoners’, written jointly by CD and WC. CD wrote the chapter in question and it seems that WC wants to estimate how his manuscript converts into pages of print for their current joint enterprise, No Thoroughfare, the 1867 Christmas number of All The Year Round. CD had written to WC on 1 May 1867 suggesting that they collaborate once again (Pilgrim, XI, p. 360). (Note that in his next letter [0749] to Wills, of 13 May 1867, WC is negotiating the remuneration for his upcoming serial, The Moonstone.)

[0746] TO W. P. FRITH, 9 MAY 1867

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 186/37). Published: BGLL, II, p. 72.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. N.W. | May 9th 1867

My dear Frith,

When you take your walk – of the constitutional kind – do you ever wander into this neighbourhood? I want a word from you, (in Charley’s interests) touching the present value of certain small pictures and sketches by my father. Send me one line to say what day, and what hour of the day, will entirely suit you. You are not to put yourself to the smallest inconvenience. You are only to come here when you may as well walk this way as any other.

I hear “Hymns of Praise” sung everywhere, by all sorts of voices, about your picture!<sup>1</sup>

Yours ever Wilkie Collins

W.P. Frith Esqr RA

---

1. Probably ‘Charles II’s Last Whitehall Sunday’ (1867).

[0747] TO FANNY MITCHELL, 10 MAY 1867

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, II, p. 72.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | May 10th

Dear Mrs Mitchell,

I have just had the pleasure of seeing Mr Mitchell, and of assuring him that I gladly accept your kind invitation for Tuesday the 14th at 8 o’Clock.

“The perfect dog” begs me to thank you for your notice of him. He adds that he is conscious of deserving it – and then looks expressively at me!<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the address and the calendar, in addition to the relation to the previous letter.
2. Presumably Alexander Mitchell had brought a treat for the dog when he called, in response to WC’s winsome letter to her of 5 May ([0744]).

[0748] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 11 MAY 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/101). Published: B&C, II, pp. 285–286.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | May 11th 1867

My dear Mother,

I have been too busy to write before today – between my negotiation with All The Year Round, and my readings at in the Club Library of works that I must consult for my new book.<sup>1</sup> They leave me to ask my terms at All The Year Round – for doing half the Christmas Number, and for giving them the periodical right of publishing my new book.<sup>2</sup> I have sent in my terms (basing my demand on what Smith & Elder gave me) for doing half the Christmas Number. Forty-eight of my written pages will fill half the Christmas number – and these, at the Smith & Elder rate, are worth £400. I have not yet heard from Wills. He only got my proposal yesterday.<sup>3</sup> The other matter of what I am to ask for the serial publication of my story is not yet settled. But it is not to begin, before next November – and whereas “No Name” ran to 45 numbers – this book is only to run to 26.<sup>4</sup> So, at any rate, I am taking it easy this time. You shall hear again as soon as the terms /for both works/ are settled at All The Year Round.

As for the play – I am going to post it to Paris and have done with it, this day!<sup>5</sup>

Charley and I have tossed for the pictures, and Frith is coming today to value Charley’s half. Charley won the toss and chose first (to my astonishment!) the upright Sorrento – / (with the chestnut tree) – / leaving the sea-Sorrento (afterwards repainted large for Gibbons) to fall to me. We then went on alternating. Charley chose next, the small park-paling landscape, with the shadows on the road (near Hendon I think). I followed, and took the /Roman/ boy’s Heads! Charley followed with /and took/ the green pool & weeds. I took next the Devonshire stream. Charley took the (upright) Bembridge Sands. I took the trees at Pond St. Charley took the copy from De Hoog. I took the portrait of my grand mother. And there it ended. I am quite content, and so is he.<sup>6</sup> You must certainly come to town – and see my Sorrento in its new, and beautiful, frame!

I am afraid you have been suffering dreadfully from the heat – and the Potts gone away, just when you ought to have been staying there, and sitting in their cool garden!<sup>7</sup> For myself, copious perspiration, and invincible unwillingness to walk have been the principle [sic] symptoms. As soon as I can finish the bargaining for my book &c – and my reading of the necessary works – I will be back at Southborough. In the mean time, write – only a few lines – to tell<sup>8</sup> me how you are. I ~~will~~ send the Athenaeum.

Yours ever affly WC

---

1. Notes survive concerning at least some of the works WC consulted at the Athenæum Club library: Encyclopaedia Britannica (8th edition, 1855), C. W. King’s The Natural History of Gems (London, 1865), Theodore Hook’s The Life of General Sir David Baird (London, 1832), and J. Talboys Wheeler’s The History of India from the Earliest Ages (London, 1867). These notes are held in the Morris L. Parrish Collection, Princeton; see the introduction to John Sutherland’s edition of The Moonstone by (OUP, 9), and William Baker, ‘Wilkie Collins’s Notes for The Moonstone’, Victorians Institute Journal, 3 (2003), pp. 187–205.

2. The Christmas Number of All the Year Round for 1867 was No Thoroughfare, written jointly by CD and WC, while the ‘new book’ is The Moonstone, in the event serialized in All the Year Round from 4 January 1868.

3. For his contribution to No Thoroughfare, Wills in fact offered £300 which WC accepted; see [0749] to Wills, 13 May 1859. He was paid in two portions – £150 as part of the £1000 from Wills on 16 August 1867 (see note 5 below) and a payment of £150 made on 12 December 1867 (Coutts: WC).

4. In fact The Moonstone was serialized in All The Year Round in 32 numbers from 4 January to 8 August 1868. WC’s bank account records a single payment from Wills of £1000 on 16 August 1867 which was £850 for The Moonstone and the first half of the £300 for No Thoroughfare. Six monthly payments of £42 (40 gns) from December 1867 to May 1868 are more likely to be for his stint as conductor of All The Year Round in Dickens's absence in America (Coultts: WC). See [0757] to HC, 18 July 1867, on The Moonstone fee, and [0789] to HC, 26 November 1867, on conducting All The Year Round.

5. Probably the collaboration with Régnier for a French stage version of Armada!e; see [0763] to him of 30 August 1867. Since no record of its performance in Paris has been found, this may never been completed.

6. Lycett (p. 272) accounts for this division of WmC paintings as follows: 'In order to raise money for his brother, Wilkie offered to share their father's remaining paintings between them (the idea being that Charley could sell those he did not want).' Few if any of the ten WmC paintings described here seem to be found in the table of 'Pictures Painted by William Collins, R.A.', in Memoirs, II, pp. 341–352, though some seem to be repetitions. Moreover, other paintings listed there as 'in the possession of the painter's family', notably 'The Virgin and the Child' (1843), 'A Patriarch' (1844), and 'Antonio' (1845), seem not to have been part of the division, though all three were present in WC's collection at his death. (They are numbered 64–66 in the Christie's auction list, 'The Collection of Modern Pictures, Water-Colour Drawings & Engravings of Wilkie Collins, Deceased', 22 February 1892 – see Baker 2002, pp. 165–175). This also reveals that the five of his father's pictures selected by WC here were all preserved in his collection. In the 1890 Christie's auction listing they appeared, in the same order that WC chose them here, thus: '48. Sorrento, Vesuvius in the distance – painted on the spot'; '49. Two Studies of the Head of a Roman Youth'; '50. A Devonshire River Scene'; '52. Trees at Hampstead'; and '61. Portrait of the Artist's Mother'. The first was repeated by WmC in much larger format as 'Scene from the Caves of Ulysses at Sorrento' for the Royal Academy exhibition of 1841, and sold to John Gibbons for £200 (see Memoirs, II, pp 190–191, 349). CAC's five choices are not so easy to identify, though the 'upright Sorrento' seems to be a repetition of that described in Memoirs, II, p. 205, while the 'copy from De Hoog' (thus for Pieter de Hooch, 1629–84) may be taken from that acquired by Sir Robert Peel in 1825 (see Memoirs, I, p. 264).

7. That is, Frances and Arthur Pott of Bentham Hill, Tunbridge Wells – see [0555] to HC, 29–30 September 1863. HC was then in fact staying with the Andersons in nearby Southborough.

8. From here WC writes his final words and the valediction down the left margin on the final page.

[0749] TO W. H. WILLS, 13 MAY 1867

MS: Morgan (MA Unassigned),<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 286–287.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. N.W. | May 13th 1867

My dear Wills,

The point you mention had escaped me. I at once admit that there is no difference – so far as you are concerned – between the absolute sale of my work in MS to a publisher, and the absolute sale to "All The Year Round."

I might mention, at the same time, that it is to be said, on my side, that the sale remains – in your case as in the publishers – an absolute sale, so far as I am concerned.

But I feel that an arrangement which publicly associates my name with Dickens's and which privately associates me with him in the production of a work of fiction, is an arrangement which appeals to me on no ordinary grounds, and which I cannot consent to regulate by any ordinary considerations.

I accept unreservedly the pecuniary point of view as you put it – and I will write my half of the forthcoming Christmas Number for Three hundred pounds.<sup>2</sup>

very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | The other question, about the Serial story is not so easily settled. I ought to have remembered – when I suggested consulting the "No Name" precedent – that the literary commodity purchased of me then was my time, and, not the right of periodically publishing my book.<sup>3</sup> Your accountant's figures – quite right as far as they go – don't represent a third of the sum that I actually received for "No Name". Dickens cheques, in payment of my shares of the profit necessarily [del] do not appear – and the fact that my salary and my profits were going on – not only while the book was being published in your journal – but also while I was thinking it out, and writing it for press – are [del] facts unregistered by the accountant, because the accountant knows nothing about them. I will try once more to send you a statement of the figures from my banking book – and of the time from my old diaries.<sup>4</sup> But I am not quite sure that I can undertake the responsibility of asking terms, because my estimate this time cannot be based on actual facts and figures – and the

Virginity of a new book is as difficult a thing to sell – (with or without benefit of clergy) as the Virginity of a new Girl!<sup>5</sup>

-
1. Morgan Accession Number formerly ‘Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/15’.
  2. In pencil, not in WC’s hand, above ‘hundred’ is written ‘No Thoroughfare’. WC had asked Wills for £400 – see [0748] to HC, 11 May 1867.
  3. At the time of the serialization of No Name, WC was both a paid member of the magazine’s editorial staff and a shareholder. See Paul Lewis, What Wilkie earned from ‘All The Year Round’, WCS, August 2015. As [0757] to HC of 18 July 1867 suggests, in the event WC was paid £850 by All the Year Round for British serial rights to The Moonstone.
  4. See [0750] to Wills, 14 May 1867.
  5. A couple of decades later, in his notorious series of articles exposing child prostitution in London entitled ‘The Maiden Tribute of Modern Babylon’ in the Pall Mall Gazette, 6–10 July 1885, W.T. Stead described in detail the purchase of a thirteen-year-old girl for only £5.

[0750] TO W. H. WILLS, 14 MAY 1867

MS: Illinois. Published: Davis, pp. 330–331 n. 23 (dated 14 May 1876); BGLL, II, pp. 73–74.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | May 14th 1867

My dear Wills,

Inside this you will find, the “Dates” and “Figures” of the “No Name” time – as nearly as I can give them. I don’t know whether they will suggest to you a proposal for the right of periodically publishing my forthcoming Story.<sup>1</sup>

The Story will not be less, I think, than 26 Weeks – but I don’t guarantee that it may not be a little longer.

Yours very truly | WC

Figures<sup>2</sup>

Copy of | Accountant’s Statement. A. Y. R.

=

For “No Name” (during publication in A.Y.R.) Mr Wilkie Collins

|                                                        |         |       |   |
|--------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------|---|
| was paid – at 7.7. a week (45 weeks from March 1862 to | L.      | s.    | d |
| Jany 1863) _____                                       | 330...  | 15... | – |
| And at the end of the Story _____                      | 100...  | –...  | – |
|                                                        | £430... | 15... | – |

Note

The above figures represent “All The Year Round” as actually giving me less for the unrestricted right of periodical publication in England, than Harper of New York gave me for the periodical right, subject to the disadvantages of American competition! Harper gave £500 for the advance sheets. You will see – as nearly as I can reckon it – what A.Y.R really did, on the other side.

W. C’s Statement

=

1. While writing “No Name” for press, before publication in AY.R –

|                                                                                                                                    |        |       |   |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------|-------|---|
| 7 ..7.. – a week for seven months(from Augt 1861 when I began to write to March 9 1862when the first number was published) | £.     | s.    | d |
|                                                                                                                                    | 220... | 10... | – |

2. Accountant’s Statement (see the other side) during publication of “No Name” _____

430...15...–

3. Dickens’s Cheques: –

In payment of my share of the Profits
From Augt 1861, when I began writing the book, to Jany 1863 when the publication of it ended in A. Y. R.: –

|                            |       |                         |
|----------------------------|-------|-------------------------|
| Decr 13 th 1861 | _____ | 51...13...6             |
| June 16 1862               | _____ | 220... –... –           |
| Nov 20 1862                | _____ | 118... 2... 2           |
|                            |       | £ 1041... 0... 8 |

N. B. – I have no record of the time – earlier in 1861 than August – when I was writing the sketch of the book (before beginning it for press), and when the weekly salary, and share in profits were still going on.

2nd Note. After finishing “No Name” in Ms, I believe I did no more work for A. Y. R. The press caught me up (through illness) and I “broke down” completely, soon after writing the last line of the book.

---

1. WC carefully details what he received for the periodical publication of No Name back in 1861–63, in order to increase the remuneration he is offered for The Moonstone, serialized All The Year Round, 4 January to 8 August 1868.

2. The two ‘Statements’ are written respectively on the left and right centre pages of the folding notepaper, divided by a vertical line.

[0751] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 30 MAY 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/102), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 287–288.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Thursday. May 30th 1867

My dear Mother,

What do you say to my coming to see you at Southborough on Tuesday 4th June? Tell me if this will do – and also if anything more is wanted besides pens and brandy.

Charley has, I suppose, written to tell you of that Dickens has added to – or rather doubled – Katie’s marriage portion. This certainly comes at the right time – is liberal and just – and suggests that Charley’s luck (if you believe in luck as I do) is at last on the turn.

I shall have the first weekly number of my new book to read to you when I am at Southborough.<sup>2</sup> Yesterday, I dined with the Lehmanns. She is not very well – the detestable weather, varying between raw cold and debilitating heat, is evidently too much for her.<sup>3</sup> She sends you her love. The house is doubled in size – and most beautifully decorated.

I have no engagement after Monday [del] next till the Wednesday week June 12th – when I have accepted an invitation from the E.M. Wards to dinner. Richmond – whom I saw the other night – sends you his love, and says his daughters want very much to see you again.<sup>4</sup>

Yours ever affly | WC

I sent you the Cornhill the other day.

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Mr Andersons | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, and postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 7 | MY 31 | 67’, with Tunbridge Wells endorsement illegible.

2. The first installment of The Moonstone, which did not appear in All the Year Round until 4 January 1868.

3. Clearly referring to Nina Lehman – see [0712] to her of 26 October 1866.

4. Presumably referring to George Richmond, the portrait painter, whom WmC and his family had met in Italy and who provided information for WC’s biography of his father; see [0035] to him of 20 May 1847. According to the 1861 Census, Richmond and his wife Julia lived together with four daughters, Julia (27), Laura (25), Edith (21), and Cecilia (20).

[0752] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, MAY 1867

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 75; Lewis website.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | May 1867

---

1. A signature only, possibly cut from a letter, perhaps simply an autograph.

[0753] TO JANE BIGELOW, 18 JUNE 1867

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 75–76.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | London. | June 18th 1867

My dear Mrs Bigelow,

I was away from London when your kind letter came – or I should have thanked you sooner for so pleasantly reminding me of that happy evening at Forster’s.<sup>1</sup>

I send you two Photographs<sup>2</sup> – for I really don’t know myself which is the best likeness, and I want you to have the best. Both are signed.

My only hope, this summer, is to see your country home in imagination. I am beginning a new story – the first weekly part of which will be published in England and America towards the close of the year.<sup>3</sup> A dramatic version of “Armadale” will probably be performed (in French) in Paris about the same time – written by Regnier (of the Theatre Français) and myself.<sup>4</sup> So I am fixed in Europe, for 1867. But I hope I shall last a little longer than that – and I don’t give up the hope of seeing you and Mr Bigelow when my literary fetters have fallen off, and I may come to a free country in the appropriate character of a free man.

I hope my new story will, in some degree justify your good opinion of my stories that have gone before it. This time, I am going to try to interest you in a nice girl who submits to a very awkward sacrifice and does something very generous – all for love. She is, I think, to be dark – as a set-off against poor “Miss Gwilt,” whom I persist in thinking a hardly used woman. Black hair (I hear) is to be brought into fashion – against red – in Paris, next season – so my dark young lady has a chance of appealing to the newest and freshest sympathies of the sex – which is a great point.

Pray remember me kindly to Mr Bigelow, and believe me
most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0725] to her of 28 January 1867.

2. Not with the letter.

3. The Moonstone, serialized simultaneously in All The Year Round and Harper’s Weekly from 4 January 1868 – though, as the letter to them of the same day shows, negotiations with Harper’s had hardly begun.

4. In December of 1866 WC ‘stopped in Paris to show the play [Armadale] to Régnier. Together over the next year, they reshaped and expanded it, from three acts to five’ (Peters, p. 277). See also [0763] to Régnier of 30 August 1867.

[0754] TO HARPER & BROTHERS,<sup>1</sup> 18 JUNE 1867

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins).<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, pp. 102–103; Farmer 1999, pp. 594–595; BGLL, II, pp. 76–77.

All The Year Round Office<sup>3</sup> | 26. Wellington Street | Strand London | June 18th 1867

Dear Sirs,

I am beginning a new serial work of fiction<sup>4</sup> – and I offer to your Firm the first opportunity of making me a proposal for the “advance sheets” for publication in America.

My new novel will be published (in the first instance) in England, in “All The Year Round”. The first weekly number will appear – so far as I know now – towards the close of the present year.

The work will extend – so far as I can now calculate – to from 26 to 30 weekly parts.

Will you kindly let me know, at your earliest convenience, what sum you will offer (in English money) for the advance weekly proofs of this new story, and in what form you propose to pay the money?

I must request that you will be so good as to communicate with me in this matter, directly, and not through your London agents. Circumstances have occurred which prevent me from renewing any literary or business relation with the firm of Messrs Sampson Low, Son & Co.<sup>5</sup> In the event of our agreeing upon terms, if there is any difficulty in your transmitting the necessary remittances directly to me in England, I shall be happy to refer you to a Firm in New York, the members of which will receive whatever money is due to me, on my account.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Harper

---

1. Distinguished New York publishing house, which began to publish WC in 1850, when it purchased advance sheets of Antonina. WC's first extant letter to the firm is [0404] of 25 March 1861.
2. Like most of the letters to the New York publishers, the MS is endorsed in another hand, presumably that of a clerk. Here the endorsement reads: 'Wilkie Collins | June 18/67'.
3. Though he ceased to work on the staff of All The Year Round in 1861, in the second half of 1867 he seems to have returned frequently to the office in connection with the composition for the journal of both the serial The Moonstone and the extra Christmas number No Thoroughfare, composed jointly with CD.
4. The Moonstone.
5. The publishers Sampson Low also acted as London agents for Harper's. WC's argument with the firm relates to their handling of the cheap edition of his novels. See [0721] to HC of 8 January 1867, where he writes 'I suspect old Low of "flooding the market" with my books', or [1255] to George Bentley of 30 September 1872 where he recalls 'Mr Low's premature cheap issue of my books'.

[3282] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 23 JUNE 1867

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, p. 8.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W.
June 23rd 1867

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compts to ...<sup>2</sup>
... prevent him from being present at the dinner on Saturday next.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. From the dateline a correspondent in London. The fragment is a small cut piece, 74x113mm. Across the top is written in pencil: 'Wilkie Collins – Author of Woman in White &c &c'.
2. The small cut slip ends at this point. The missing portion presumably reads along the lines '[name] but [regrettably] [reasons]'.
3. This line is on the verso which has been glued to an album sheet but is legible through the recto. WC writes on a Sunday so the invitation relates to Saturday, 29 June.

[0755] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 JULY 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/ 103), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 288.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square | N.W. | Monday July 1st

My dear Mother,

I am safe back tonight, from Gadshill. You will be glad to hear that Dickens is delighted with my new story. He thinks the old man excellent – and he predicts that this will be the most successful book I have ever written. The grand point of the story – about three parts of the way to the end, took him – when I told it roughly, viva voce – as completely by surprise as if he had been an ordinary novel reader. You may imagine, from this, what the effect will be on the general reader. I certainly never expected to [del] astonish Dickens with [del] /an effect/ in a novel – which is carefully prepared for, and which is yet invisible till it comes.<sup>2</sup>

There was no company at Gadshill. We were very merry – and it was a very pleasant time.

Next week, I must go to Farley Hill – having found another letter here to remind me from Mrs E.<sup>3</sup> Sunday [del] next, there is a dinner at Lehmanns. Landseer, Millais, Charley, Katie,

&c&c. Lehmann gives me, I am sorry to say, a poor account of his wife.

Write when you have time, and tell me how you are. I have put off the publication of my story till the new year, I hope, if somebody can be found to write a short story to fill up the time. This would get me half through my work, before the public see it.

There is a chance of my getting a large sum from America, this time – [del] /from/ a new paper, which wants to publish my new book.<sup>4</sup>

Yours ever affl | WC<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson's | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'LONDON-N.W | 7 | JY 2 | 67', and endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE WELLS | B | JY 2 | 67'.

2. CD had written to Wills on 30 June 1867 with praise only a little less fulsome:

I have heard read the first 3 Nos. of Wilkie's story this morning, and have gone minutely through the plot of the rest to the last line. Of course it is a series of "Narratives", and of course such and so many modes of action are open to such and such people; but it is a very curious story – wild, and yet domestic – with excellent character in it, great mystery, and nothing belonging to disguised women or the like. It is prepared with extraordinary care, and has every chance of being a hit. It is in many respects much better than any thing he has done.

(Pilgrim, XI, p. 385).

3. Mrs Frances Elliot, née Dickinson, now married to Gilbert Elliot, Dean of Bristol who lived at Farley Hill Court.

4. Referring to Harper's Weekly in which the serial appeared simultaneously with All The Year Round (see [0786] to Harper & Brothers, 12 November 1867). As [0757] to HC of 18 July 1867 shows, WC was paid £750 for American serial publication.

5. WC writes his last paragraph and closure down the left margin of the final page of the letter.

[0756] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 7 JULY 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/104), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 77–78.

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square. N.W. | Sunday July 7

My dear Mother,

An enthusiastic American has sent me my photograph across the Atlantic for me to write my name under it. He also wants an autograph of my father's – his collection containing painters and musicians as well as writers. Can you find and send me a note of my father's without trouble?

My address from Tuesday to Friday next, will be Farley Hill Court, near Reading.<sup>2</sup> I wish you were coming too. There is a superb lawn – adorned by some of the finest trees in England. I shall have finished another number of my story before I go – and I shall dawdle about and do nothing in the open air, at Farley Hill.

Poor dear Mrs Lehmann! She has another attack of inflammation of the lungs – and the doctor talks of a new banishment, just as the new house is completed. I am going to dine quietly with Lehmann today – to keep his spirits up. The "company" that had been invited are all put off.<sup>3</sup>

How do you go on? There is a horrid thunderous oppression here in the air.

Ever yours aftly WC

I have settled nothing about a new place of abode yet.

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson's | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'LONDON-N.W. | 7 | JY 8 | 67'.

2. The family home of Frances Elliot, wife of the Dean of Bristol.

3. On Nina Lehmann's earlier attack, see [0666] to HC of 17 March 1866. Peters comments: 'Wilkie's affection was deepened when Nina, who was in poor health, was diagnosed as possibly consumptive. For some time the Lehmanns' strenuous social life was curtailed, and Nina, a pianist of concert standard, was forbidden to play. She spent much time in Switzerland with her children' (p. 271).

[0757] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 18 JULY 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/105), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 289.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | July 18th

My dear Mother,

I am in a whirl of work. A difficult part of the story to manage. A bargain with America for the advance-proofs (£750!) – making with “All The Year Round” £1600 for the periodical use of the story only.<sup>2</sup> Another bargain with America still to settle for a short original story.<sup>3</sup> A new place of residence still to find – I think it will be Cornwall Terrace.<sup>4</sup>

These things keep me in town this week – and next week, I am to get a little sailing with Pigott. But, after that, I shall get to see you, I hope, and, in the mean time, Charley proposes going to you on Monday next, he tells me. He dines with me on Saturday next.

Send me a line to say how you are. London is topsy-turvy with excitement about illustrious foreigners.<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours affly | W.C

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘CHARING CROSS | 7 | JY 19 | 67’, and endorsed in Tunbridge Wells on the same day.

2. So WC was paid £850 by All The Year Round for the serial publication of The Moonstone.

3. No such publication has been identified.

4. In fact, WC was to move to Gloucester Place later in the summer.

5. The allusion may be to press coverage of the Paris Exhibition (‘Exposition Universelle d’Art et d’Industrie’) from April to November 1867, which also encouraged an increase in overseas visitors to London.

[0758] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 20 JULY 1867

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Brussel, p. 13; Coleman, pp. 104–105; Farmer 1999, pp. 595–596; BGLL, II, pp. 78–79.

All The Year Round Office | 26 Wellington St | Strand London | July 20th 1867

Dear Sirs,

I accept the second of the proposals with which you favour me in your letter dated the 2nd of this month – choosing, of the two alternatives contained in that proposal, the alternative of sending you a copy of the original Ms of my forthcoming story in two halves.<sup>1</sup>

I understand that I am to send you from London the first of those halves, containing (say) from 13 to 14 weekly portions, forty days before the first weekly portion is published in England. This, allowing the average of ten days for transmission, would place the first half of the Ms in your hands in New York, one month before any part of it is published here. The second half is to be sent, according to the same arrangement, forty days before the 14th, or 15th number (as the case may be) is published in England.

For the Ms, divided into these two halves, I am to receive seven hundred and fifty pounds sterling (£750). £375, payable in a bill of exchange to my order on Barings, on receipt of the first half of Ms – and £375, payable in the same manner, on receipt of the second half. I suggest, as the sum is thus halved, that the period for which the bill of exchange is to be drawn should be, if possible, 30 days, instead of the 60 days which you propose, if I sent the whole Ms at once, and receive the whole sum at once.<sup>2</sup>

I have one condition to add on my side. It is this: – That you shall only print and publish the periodical instalments of the story from the printed proofs, which I will send to you regularly. The copy of the Ms is only to be used by you for the purpose of illustrating the story – and, except in the event of miscarriage of the proofs, it is not to be printed from.

I make this stipulation in your interests, as well as mine – for it enables you to publish my story with my last corrections. These corrections will not affect the scenes which your artist may choose for illustration, but they will very often, by apparently trifling means, assist the influence of the story on the reader’s mind.

On the Ms, as on the proofs, the weekly dates of publication in England will be indicated at the beginning of each weekly number, so that there may be no mistake made, in any case, about the dates of publication and the weekly quantity published in America – which are, of course, exactly to follow the dates of publication and the quantity published in England.

I shall be obliged if you will acknowledge the receipt of this letter, and inform me that you interpret, as I interpret, the arrangement entered into between us for my new story.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Harper & Brothers | &c &c &c | New York

---

1. Concerning The Moonstone.

2. In fact WC received two unequal payments: a £500 ‘Bill on Baring Bros’ credited on 6 May, 1868 and a £250 ‘Bill on Barings’ on 4 September 1868 (Coumts: WC).

3. These detailed arrangements represent a good example of the care needed for the successful sale of ‘advance sheets’ by a British author to an American publisher. On the legal issues involved, see Nowell-Smith, ch. 4.

[0759] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 27 JULY 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/106), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 289–290.

9. Melcombe Place | N.W. | Saturday July 27

My dear Mother,

Many thanks for the cases. [del] You shall have back the canvas & cord.<sup>2</sup> The Cornwall Terrace plan has broken down. Somebody else was after the house – and I suspect that Somebody “bid the highest figure”.

There is another chance at Gloucester Place, Portman Square.<sup>3</sup> Pending this negotiation, I am going today to sail, off Ryde with Pigott & C. Ward – to return next Tuesday. On the Saturday, after that, I go to Mrs Elliot and Lady Downshire,<sup>4</sup> if possible – and, after that, I hope to the Dowager Duchess of Southborough – Anderson Palace – whose eldest son (having to leave his present residence in ten days, and not having found another yet) appears likely to end as an outcast in the streets.

Charley was here yesterday to take away his pictures.<sup>5</sup> I hear that he, and Katie are going to see you Thursday next – to stay till the 12th. About the /end/ [del] of their visit will, according to my calculation, be [del] the beginning of mine. So you will have a succession of visitors. I enclose a letter just received from H. Bullar. John’s case seems serious.<sup>6</sup>

You shall hear of course, the moment my habitation is settled, if it ever is. In the mean time, go on addressing me here.

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, and postmarked ‘LONDON-W | Z | JY 27 | 67’.

2. WC was preparing to move.

3. This time the negotiation was successful and WC moved the following month.

4. The two ladies lived around five miles apart, outside Reading, Berkshire. Mrs Elliot is the married Frances Dickinson, resident with her husband the Dean of Bristol at Farley Hill Court, Swallowfield, to the south. Lady Downshire was the daughter of Field-Marshal Viscount Combermere, the Hon. Caroline Frances Stapleton-Cotton (1815–93), who in 1837 married the Irish peer Arthur Hill, Fourth Marquess of Downshire, whose English residence was at Easthampstead Park, Bracknell, to the southeast. Lady Downshire was a correspondent of CD – see to her of 26 September 1866 (Pilgrim XI, p. 248). (In B&C, II, p. 290, the name was misread plausibly as ‘Lady Devonshire’. However, around this period there seems to have been no Lady Devonshire: CD’s patron the Sixth Duke of Devonshire (1790–1858) never married, while the Seventh (1808–91) was a widower whose wife died in 1840.)

5. See [0748] to HC, 11 May 1848.

6. Henry Bullar’s letter, from Switzerland and dated 25 July, is also found at Morgan. It concerns the poor health of his older brother John Bullar (1806–1867), the barrister, who died later in the year.

[0760] TO FANNY MITCHELL, [1859–JULY 1867]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/6). Published: BGLL, II, p. 80.

Friday

Dear Mrs Mitchell

Alas! I am engaged! I write in great haste, as I hear Kinglake<sup>2</sup> is waiting for your servant. I will call and make my apologies

Yours very truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. These dates seem to be the limits of the period when WC dines regularly with the Mitchells. No letters to her from Gloucester Place exist.
  2. This must be the author Alexander William Kinglake (1809–91), with whom WC was acquainted (see 0220] to HC of 2 September 1855 and [0447] to Anne Procter of 21 October 1861) and who was presumably also one of the guests at Mrs Mitchell's gatherings.

[0761] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, [DECEMBER 1864–JULY 1867]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Private, on a visiting card. Published: BGLL, II, p. 80.

To report myself much better and to thank you sincerely once more

M<sup>R</sup> WILKIE COLLINS

9. Melcombe Place | Dorset Square

-
1. Dating from the address only. The card has the name only printed on it; the rest is in WC's hand, the message in pencil and the address in ink.

[0762] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 24 AUGUST 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/107), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 290–291 (dated [3 August 1867]).

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W. | Saturday<sup>2</sup>

My dear Mother,

I am delighted to hear this good news about Charley. His luck is on the turn, and the ball is at his foot at last. Hooray!<sup>3</sup>

On Tuesday next I am to complete the purchase of the house at the lawyers in Gray's Inn. Later in the week, I shall probably be at Gadshill again – for a second consultation about the Christmas Number. If I can get out to you [del] afterwards – across country – I will. It depends on how things get on here. I am gradually settling down – but the workpeople are slow, and my pictures and books – and my bath and my drains – are still to be arranged. No bad smells – only alterations and improvements which it is as well to make once for all, before I am [del] settled.

How do you bear the heat? Your back room helps you, I hope.

Ever affly yours | WC

You shall hear again as soon as I have heard from Dickens

-
1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson's | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells', and faintly postmarked 'LONDON-W | W 2 | AU 24 | 67'.
  2. Dating from the postmark and the calendar, as well as WC's move to Gloucester Place. This is the first letter addressed from his new home.
  3. CAC and his wife had recently visited HC at Southborough – see [0759] to HC, 27 July 1867. The nature of the good news is unclear, but perhaps concerned the stability of CAC's health or finances.

[0763] TO FRANÇOIS RÉGNIER,<sup>1</sup> 30 AUGUST 1867

MS: CF (loose in envelope 'Wilkie Collins – Régnier', within box file 'Régnier – Sociétaires').<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 80–82.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.

Augt 30th 1867

My dear Regnier.

Observe the address at the top of this letter! I have left Melcombe Place – driven away by the noises – and have got into a new house.

Between the worry of finding this same new house, and the hard thinking and working needed by the new book which I am writing, I have had no earlier opportunity than this of telling you of my change of abode. It is so long since I have heard from you, that I forget whether I owe you a letter – or whether you owe me one. Let us forgive each other!

While I am in London, establishing myself in my new domicile, you are I suppose in the country – and glad enough to get away from Paris, in the year of the Exhibition? It has made my head ache, and my feet throb with fatigue only to read of the Exhibition.<sup>3</sup>

How is our Drama going on? Are you finding the process of turning an English play into a French play, more easy as it proceeds? the more of it you do? The story appeared to me to be carried on regularly and clearly, in the two last acts – and that is the French art, not the English – so I hope you may find it easier as you get on. Don't trouble to send any of it here – for, I hope to be in Paris in October next. If you are there too, at that time, we can look over it together.<sup>4</sup>

I have heard no dramatic news from Paris – except that Hernani has been a great success – and that in spite of the play not being very well acted. – Charles V, and Hernani were reported to me as modern Parisian gentlemen, in spite of their costumes.<sup>5</sup> Well acted, or indifferently acted, I should like to have seen it – for the play is a great work.

Let me hear from you soon, my dear Regnier – and remember me kindly to Madame Regnier and your son and daughter.<sup>6</sup>

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

---

1. François Joseph Philoclès Régnier de la Brière (1807–85), leading French actor of the Comédie Française and a close friend and collaborator of WC, who consistently omitted the acute accent from the actor's family name. They had first met in the 1850s – see the notes to [0131] the letter to E. M. Ward of April 1851–July 1852, and [0200] to Pigott of 22 February 1855. In 1875 WC dedicated The Law and the Lady to the French actor and a copy of Régnier's Comédies was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, pp. 142–143). According to contemporary accounts found at the CF, Régnier was rather short, had a deep voice, fine taste and an immense capacity for work.

2. All five of the letters to Régnier found at CF are stamped 'COMEDIE FRANÇAISE *BIBLIOTHEQUE*', in red ink within an oval.

3. The second Exposition Universelle de Paris, dedicated to agriculture, industry and the arts, covered 42 hectares of the Champs de Mars; it was open from 1 April to 3 November 1867 and attracted 11 million visitors.

4. The continuing story of Régnier's attempts to write a French version of Armadale. See [0714] to Nina Lehmann of 9 December 1866, [0721] and [0727] to Harriet Collins of 8 and 29 January 1867, and [0753] to Jane Bigelow of 18 June 1867. There is no evidence that WC visited Paris in October 1867, and it remains unclear whether the play was ever completed or performed – see [1901] to Frederick Enoch of 24 February 1880.

5. Victor Hugo's Hernani – ou l'Honneur Castilan. The character Don Carlos was supposed to represent Charles V of France, while Hernani himself was a bandit. The production to which WC refers has not been identified.

6. Régnier's wife was named Fleure and his son Henri. It is unclear whether WC had first met Régnier's family during his stays in Paris to discuss the dramatization of Armadale (in December 1866 and February 1867), or earlier during one of the actor's many professional visits to London.

[0764] TO SMITH, ELDER & CO., 30 AUGUST 1867

MS: NLS (MS 23180/164, 167), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 82–83.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square W. | Augt 30th 1867

Dear Sirs,

I re-enclose the little account, with a cheque for the amount.<sup>2</sup>

Will you kindly cause my address in your books to be altered to the address at the head of this letter, to which I have recently removed.

I regret to say that I have not succeeded in disposing of my collected works on terms which it is proper for me to accept. The fact of my books being in the market – after having had the “imprint” of your house on their title-pages – is inevitably and necessarily against them. I am engaged in writing a new work of fiction which will appear, periodically, in “All The Year Round”.<sup>3</sup> If this succeeds, the publishers will recover their lost confidence in ~~our~~ my previous works – and I may become once more a saleable commodity in the English book-market.

In the meantime, it is perhaps desirable – as a matter of business, and in the event of my death – that you should carry out the terms of Messrs Low’s agreement, and assign to me the copyrights of those books which reverted to me at the close of last year.<sup>4</sup> I am not rich enough to purchase, on the terms which you were so good as to offer me, the copyright of “No Name” the Stereo: plates, and the Stock in hand. I can only regret that you have been losers by me – and can only try what writing a new book may do towards reminding the public that there have been other books written before it, by

Yours faithfully, | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Smith Elder & Co

-
1. Directed to ‘Messrs Smith Elder & Co | 65. Cornhill | E.C.’, postmarked ‘LONDON W | 7 | SP 2 | 67’
  2. Across the page above the handwritten address is added in a small unknown hand: ‘Ch. £9.5.6 Cr Wilkie Collins Repts Sep 2/67’. This might be the account for the printing of the twenty-five copies of the dramatic version of Armada – if so, Smith, Elder were very late sending it out (see [0695] to Frederick Enoch of 6 July 1866). The amount of £9-5s-6d was debited on 4 September from WC’s bank account as to ‘Smith & Co’ (Coutts: WC).
  3. The Moonstone.
  4. See [0717] to Smith, Elder of 31 December 1866.

[0765] TO HARRIET COLLINS, [2] SEPTEMBER 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/108), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 291 (dated 1 September). Published: BGLL, II, p. 83.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W. | Monday Sept 1st <sup>2</sup>

My dear Mother,

I am going to Dickens (to work on the Christmas Number) on Tuesday next<sup>3</sup> – and from him (at last!) I am coming on across country to you. Either Thursday or Friday next will be the day. I will try for Thursday, if we can get what we have to do, done. And I will write again from Gadshill.

I am beginning to settle down. In another ten days, most of the workmen will be out of the house. The pictures are hung. I have had the frames re-gilt and they look beautiful. The prints and drawings must wait till I get back from Southborough.

Address me up to Tuesday morning in London. After Tuesday, at Gadshill. I hear Charley and Katie are there. How have you borne the heat? I am melting at this moment.

Ever yours affly | WC

I sent you the Cornhill yesterday. The Athenaeum has been, in the confusion, forgotten.

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-SW | 7 | SP 2 | 67’, endorsed ‘TUNBRIDGE WELLS | S | SP 2 | 67’.
  2. Clearly an error by WC – the first day of September 1867 was a Sunday. The postmark and endorsement both help to confirm the correct dating as Monday 2 September 1867.
  3. Referring to the collaboration between CD and WC on No Thoroughfare, the 1867 Christmas number of All The Year Round.

[0766] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 4 SEPTEMBER 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/ 109), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, pp. 291–292. Published: BGLL, II, p. 84.

Gad’s Hill Place, | Higham by Rochester, Kent
Wednesday Sept 4

My dear Mother

I got your letter here this morning.

I am obliged to go to London tomorrow to get some books which it turns out I shall want to consult in a coming part of the Christmas Number. I shall leave this – so as to get to town before twelve – and shall then go (later on the same day), from London, to you. Expect me tomorrow (Thursday) by the train which leaves Charing Cross at 4.5. and gets to T. Wells at 5.34. This will bring me to Southborough in good time for dinner with you at ½ past 6, tomorrow, (Thursday, as aforesaid)

Yours ever affly | WC

---

1. CD's Gothic printed stationery, directed to 'Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson's | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'ROCHESTER | C | SP 4 | 67'.

[0767] TO GRANTLEY BERKLEY,<sup>1</sup> 5 SEPTEMBER 1867

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 84.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square. W.<sup>2</sup> | September 5th 1867<sup>3</sup>

Mr Wilkie Collins begs that Mr Grantley Berkeley will accept his best thanks for the presentation copy of "Anecdotes of The Upper Ten Thousand". Absence from London has allowed Mr Collins no earlier opportunity of making his acknowledgments than this.

---

1. The Honourable George Charles Grantley Fitzhardinge Berkeley (1800–81), author of Anecdotes of the Upper Ten Thousand (2 vols, London: Bentley, 1867).

2. Printed address in roman type, centered. This is the earliest example of the first headed paper at this address.

3. The date is at the foot of the second page.

[0768] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 10 SEPTEMBER 1867<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 204; Davis, p. 252. Published: B&C, II, p. 292.

Southborough | Tuesday, September 10th

My dear Fred,

Have you made up your mind that I am a Humbug? Naturally, you have.

Weeks since, you write me a kind letter from Rothsay<sup>2</sup> – giving me delightful accounts of the Padrona, and asking me /to/ join you. And that letter remains unanswered to the present date!

Disgraceful!

What is the cause of this ungrateful silence?

The cause is, | 90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W.

=

When your letter reached me, I had an old house to leave – a new house to find – that new house to bargain for, and take – lawyers and surveyors to consult – British workmen to employ – and, through it all, to keep my own literary business going [del] without so much as a day's stoppage. Is there no excuse in this? Ach Gott! Ya-voll! Si-gewiss!<sup>3</sup>

Here then is a letter of apology which – if Mamie Dickens's information is correct – ought to meet you on your return to Woodlands.<sup>4</sup> My best love and congratulations to the Padrona. The same from Mama Collins – with whom I am staying to get a little quiet for working in. I return on Thursday next. Come and see me on my new perch. The dining-room is habitable – and the drawing-rooms are getting on.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the move to Gloucester Place.

2. Thus, presumably, for Rothsay, the main town on the island of Bute, off the west coast of Scotland.

3. 'Oh God! Yes, sir! Certainly!' – WC's clumsily humorous attempt at German, which was, of course, Lehmann's native language.

4. The Lehmann's residence at Highgate.

[0769] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 12 SEPTEMBER 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/110), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Pudney, p. 45. Published: B&C, II, p. 293.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square. W. | Sept 12th 1867

My dear Mother,

I am safe back again among the British Workmen. The statement now is that they will be done in a week. Ha! ha! Never mind. A certain necessary place has got the most lovely new pan you ever saw. It's quite a luxury to look into it.

I have left your note at Fortnum's. Am just back from dining at the Club with Dickens. We have created some sweet things, for the forthcoming number.<sup>2</sup> Dickens most kindly offers to see Chapman himself about my copyrights on Monday next – (if Chapman is in town) – you shall hear the result.<sup>3</sup>

I have written to Smith & Elder to say that I will give evidence if needful against the ruffian who has taken my name and my books in vain. We must stop him – or Heaven only knows what he [del] may do next in the character of my self-appointed agent.<sup>4</sup>

I am at the end of my news. A kitten who has drifted into the house from some unknown mother is galloping over my back and shoulders, which makes writing difficult – and it is time to go to bed.

Hart sends his love.<sup>5</sup> He will soon be at Southborough.

Write soon.

Ever your affly | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson's | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'LONDON-W | 7 | SP 13 | 67', and endorsed in Tunbridge Wells on the same day.

2. Referring to No Thoroughfare, the special 1867 Christmas Number of All the Year Round.

3. Referring to cheap railway editions of WC's already published novels – see [0771] to HC, 25 September 1867.

4. WC's letter to Smith & Elder has not been traced, and his spurious literary representative has not been identified.

5. Presumably Solomon Hart, the painter.

[0770] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 16 SEPTEMBER 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/ 111), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 85.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square. W.

Experiences of a Barrister
Schillers Ghost-Seer
Hawthorn's Twice-Told Tales
The Female Detective
Doctor Basilius by Dumas | (English translation)
La Beata by Thomas Trollope<sup>2</sup>

=

My dear Mother,

I have turned up the above choice and varied works, in tattered bindings. Shall I send them to you?

Yours ever aftly | WC

I have got your letter.

I have also sent you some pills (compound Rhubarb) by post.

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson's | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'LONDON-W | 7 | SP 16 | 67' and endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE WELLS | S | SP 16 | 67'.

2. Between the items in this heterodox list, WC draws a short sloping line under the first couple of letters of each title.

Experiences of a Barrister is likely the work published anonymously by Samuel Warren in 1856; The Female Detective is probably the collection of tales edited by Andrew Forrester in 1864. None of the items on the list is recorded as being in WC's library at the time of his death (Baker).

[0771] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 25 SEPTEMBER 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/ 112), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 293–294.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | 25th Sept 1867

My dear Mother,

I was just thinking of writing to you, when your letter came this morning, and gave me some news of you.

I have been staying with the Lehmanns at Highgate – out of the way of the hammering here. They were very kind – gave me a delightful room to write in – and surrounded me with luxuries and comforts. Last night, I came back – and found that the top story of the house was done at last. The end of the week, I am told, will see the end of the workmen all over the house. I take your gloomy view – and don't believe it.

My servants are models of human excellence. They work hard – never grumble – submit to everything. I am going to give them a new gown apiece, in recognition of their extraordinary merit.

Smith (the great railway bookseller) is in treaty for my copyrights /in combination/ with Chapman & Hall. If we come to terms, [del] having Smith interested in my books, will insure the pushing of them [del] at every railway station in England.<sup>2</sup>

We are getting on with the Christmas Number – more than half done. Dickens is greatly harassed about finally deciding on the American tour. On Monday next, he must definitely decide – Yes, or No.<sup>3</sup>

An American newspaper proprietor has asked me to propose terms for writing a short story for him. I have told him that he must propose the terms to me.<sup>4</sup>

I will keep those books I proposed sending to you – at your disposal.<sup>5</sup> Charley will hardly get into his new house, I should think, on Michaelmas Day.

You did quite right to move the bed into the back-room. My writing-room will be the front bedroom next time, I should think, now the grocer has broken out into building at the back. [del] Watch the house in front – and let me know when the hammering is over there – so that I may pick my time for coming to see you again. Also, don't<sup>6</sup> imagine that I am harassed. I am like old Mrs Dickinson<sup>7</sup> – I possess a “sublime composure”. Nothing upsets me.

Ever affly yours | WC

The Athenaeum only costs 3<sup>d</sup>. I sometimes do read it. Nothing will induce me to save 3<sup>d</sup> a week. It's an idiosyncrasy of mine. In a few days, I shall send you some more brandy.<sup>8</sup>

1. Letter accompanied by envelope addressed to 'Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson's | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'LONDON-W | 5 | SP 25 | 67'.

2. The cheap 'yellowback' format for reprint fiction, printed from stereotype on brittle paper and flimsily bound in strawboards covered with glazed yellow paper with a striking illustration on the front, emerged around 1854 with the 'Select Library of Fiction' from Chapman & Hall, who in 1859 joined with W. H. Smith to create a distinctive series for the latter's nationwide railway bookstalls. See Charles Wilson, First With the News: The History of W.H. Smith, 1792–1972 (London: W. H. Smith, 1985), pp. 88–90. In the event, however, WC's reprints were not taken over by Chapman.

3. CD travelled to America on his reading reading tour from November 1867 to April 1868.

4. The proprietor in question has not been identified.

5. See [0770] to HC, 16 September 1867, where the books in question are listed.

6. The remaining words and the closure are written down WC's left margin on the last page of the letter.

7. See [0440] to HC, 6 September 1861, on the death of old Mrs Dickinson.

8. WC writes the postscript above and between the printed address on the first page of the letter.

[0772] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 OCTOBER 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/ 113), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 294–295.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Sqr | Tuesday Oct 1

My dear Mother,

I have just ordered Justerini & Brooks<sup>2</sup> to send you, by S.E. Rail tomorrow morning 6 Bottles of Brandy.

I have no small cases – and I dare’nt send you a whole dozen of my brandy – for you would be horrified at the quantity. Justerini’s Brandy is excellent – quite as good as mine and liked better by many people. Don’t turn up your eyes about the expense – it is the expense of six bottles instead of twelve. So it is a saving.

Charley will be with you on Wednesday. He will no doubt tell you what he thinks about the will.<sup>3</sup> I saw him yesterday. While he was with me, enter the Revd Alexander Geddes from Lincolnshire (!!!!).<sup>4</sup> The Revd gentleman thinks of adding to his Income by Literature, and came to ask my advice. He described himself as rather a pretty hand with the pen – but as not exactly knowing what to write about!

Yours ever affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked, ‘LONDON-W | 7 | OC 2 | 67’, and endorsed in Tunbridge Wells on the same date.

2. Justerini & Brooks, Pall Mall and the Strand, was a ‘foreign liquor & wine & brandy merchants’ (Kelly, 1860) which WC used from 1860 to 1879. The next payment to the firm after this letter appears to have been £55-18s-6d on 10 February 1868.

3. Regarding HC’s will, see [0793] to HC, 12 December 1867.

4. Presumably Alexander Geddes, who, at the time of the 1861 Census, was an unmarried, thirty-three year-old curate in Ropsely, Lincolnshire, resident at the Rectory House. He was WC’s cousin and HC’s nephew, the son of her only brother and youngest sibling, Alexander James Geddes, who had married Mary Croft Letterman in 1827, and had had six children.

[0773] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 11 OCTOBER 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/114), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 295–296.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | October 11th 1867

My dear Mother,

I am going to Gadshill this afternoon, with Dickens, to finish the Christmas number. Yesterday I dined, and slept, at Lehmann’s[.] I don’t know whether Charley & Katie are still at Gadshill.

What I have room for, I will “warehouse” with pleasure. I have an airtight cupboard (which locks) in the yard – and this is almost the only /really/ empty place in the house. I should /think/ the cupboard will hold all you /& Charley/ want to send here. Let me hear before the things come[.] /Of course, your book-folios shall be kept in-doors. Works of art I have plenty of room for.<sup>2</sup>

Next week, I hope I shall be back at work on my serial story. Keep me informed when the hammering is over – so that I may see you as soon as I can. I shall probably bring C. Ward with me next time, for a few days. He is copying my Serial Story, to send to America – and he can get two days holiday, and work under my inspection. You can easily get a bedroom for him next door, I suppose?

I have given € Margaret Ward a new silk dress – and have got in exchange for it, your portrait by Mrs Carpenter. The one, nearly profile – still like you after all these years! Coosey / (who had it as a gift from her grandmother)/ wanted to give it to me for nothing – but I insisted on the dress. The portrait will hang in my study. I wonder whether you remember it?<sup>3</sup>

Write soon – Every affly yours – WC

Brandy & peppermint for the gripes

-
1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson's | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'LONDON-W | 5 | OC 11 | 67', and endorsed 'TUNBRIDGE WELLS | A | OC 12 | 67'.
  2. The insertion is added in the space at the top of the page, with the place of insertion marked by a dotted saltire and an extended line, the cross being repeated at the head of the inserted text.
  3. 'When [Holman] Hunt saw her portrait by her sister, Margaret Carpenter, showing her in all her girl-like beauty, "the portrait explained the riddle"' of why S.T. Coleridge 'had singled her out at an evening party and had talked with her for twenty minutes "in the highest strains of poetical philosophy"' (Clarke, p. 56). Margaret Ward (famously known as 'Coosey') is the eldest daughter of Jane Ward, whose mother was Mrs Margaret Carpenter, WC's aunt.

[0774] TO ISABELLE FRITH,<sup>1</sup> 11 OCTOBER 1867

MS: NAL (MSL/1922/186/53). Published: B&C, II, p. 296 (as to Mrs W.P. Frith).

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square. W. | October 11th 1867

My dear Mrs Frith,

I accept your kind invitation for Friday the 18th at 7 with the greatest pleasure.

The address at the head of this letter is the last new spot in which I have pitched my tent. This time, I have been obliged to "buy a lease" – so there is some reasonable prospect (unless my new lease ruins me in alterations and repairs) of my being settled at last!

With kindest remembrances to all.

Believe me | Most truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Isabelle Jane Frith, née Baker (1823–80), daughter of a York stockbroker, who on 26 June 1845 had married the painter William Powell Frith, RA (see [0527] to him of 3 March 1863), bearing him five daughters and seven sons between 1846 and 1860. For much of their marriage Frith maintained a younger mistress, Mary Alford, with whom he had another seven children, the first born in 1856, and whom he married on his wife's death. (The ODNB entry for William Powell Frith refers to his first wife as 'Isabella', though 'Isabelle' predominates in the public records.)

[0775] TO CHARLES KENT,<sup>1</sup> 18 OCTOBER 1867

MS: Huntington (HM 18606), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 86.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square. W. | October 18th 1867

My dear Sir,

I say Yes with the greatest pleasure to both the requests which you favour me by making.<sup>3</sup> May I suggest – if it is not done already – adding the name of Mr Charles Reade (the distinguished novelist) to the list of Stewards?<sup>4</sup> I have not communicated with Mr Reade on the subject – but I think there can be no doubt that he would gladly add his name to the names of the other literary men on the list.

Vy truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

Charles Kent Esq<sup>re</sup>

-
1. The first of many letters to William Charles Mark Kent (1823–1902: ODNB), editor, journalist and contributor to both Household Words and All The Year Round.
  2. Signed and directed to 'Charles Kent Esqre | Temple | E.C.', later redirected in another hand to '1 Campden Grove | W.' Initial postmark 'LONDON W | OC 19 | 67'.
  3. Apparently to be a steward and to be on the committee for the dinner held on 2 November 1867 to honour CD before his departure for the USA on 9 November.
  4. CAC was also a steward and wrote to Kent on 24 October 1867: 'I should wish by all means that my name should be on the list of stewards at the dinner to Mr Dickens and shall be obliged by your forwarding me a ticket for the dinner whenever they are issued' (Huntington HM 18605).

[0776] TO SMITH, ELDER & CO., 18 OCTOBER 1867

MS: NLS (MS 23180/ 170, 172), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 87.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | October 18th 1867

Dear Sirs,

After some delay, the answer has been received from the publishing house to which I proposed the sale of the complete series of my works.

The offer made is, I regret to say, one which it is quite impossible either for you or for me to accept.<sup>2</sup>

Under these circumstances – so far as my copyrights are concerned – I have determined to wait, until I have raised their value in the bookmarket, or until some proposal for reprinting them is made to me which places a sum of money at my disposal that I can accept. The books have had a large sale. And what they have had – if I live to write more books – they may have again.

So far as your part of this literary property is concerned, I have only to thank you again for offering me the opportunity of repurchasing it – and to leave you, of course, to deal with it now as you think best.<sup>3</sup>

I remain | Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Smith Elder & Co.

P.S. I see you have advertised a cheap edition of “Armadale”. I should be glad to see the proofs. One or two trifling errors found their way into the editions in two volumes.

-
1. Directed to ‘Messrs Smith Elder & Co | 65. Cornhill | E.C.’, postmarked ‘LONDON SW | 5 | OC 18 | 67’. Both envelope and notepaper are embossed with an Athenæum Club seal.
  2. The publishers in question were Chapman & Hall – see [0769] and [0771] of 12 and 25 September 1867, both to HC.
  3. Smith, Elder continued as before to issue single-volume editions of WC’s works.

[0777] To CHARLES KENT, 22 OCTOBER 1867

MS: Huntington (HM 18607), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 87–88.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Tuesday Oct 22

My dear Sir,

I will attend the Dinner Committee tomorrow (Wednesday) at 4 o’clock.<sup>2</sup>

Yours vly truly | Wilkie Collins

(In great haste)

-
1. Signed and directed to ‘Charles Kent Esqre | Temple | E.C.’, postmarked ‘LONDON-W | Z | OC 22 | 67’, with embossed device of the Athenæum Club on the flap.
  2. For the Dickens Dinner on 2 November. See [0775] to Kent, 18 October 1867.

[0778] To CHARLES KENT, 24 OCTOBER 1867

MS: Huntington (HM 18608), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 88.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Thursday October 24th

My dear Sir,

I regret that I have been unavoidably prevented from attending the Committee today.<sup>2</sup> At the next meeting, I hope you will see me in my place at the table.

In the meantime – as the tickets are no doubt now in course of disposal – I write to ask you to put me down for two places in the Ladies’ Gallery.

I also report, seven of my personal friends as having given me their names for Dinner-Tickets, and as being anxious to sit near me, at whichever of the side table places you may allot to yours

Very truly | Wilkie Collins

Charles Kent Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. Signed and directed to 'Charles Kent Esq | Temple | E.C.', postmarked 'LONDON-W | Z | OC 24 | 67', with embossed device of the Athenæum Club on the flap.
2. The meetings seem to have been very frequent – see [0777] to Kent of 22 October 1867.

[0779] TO EMIL LEHMANN,<sup>1</sup> 25 OCTOBER 1867

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 88–89.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | London October 25th 1867

My dear Sir,

In reply to your letter of the 19th of this month, I beg to say that I am ready to concede to you the exclusive right to translate my new forthcoming work of fiction into the German language, and to publish that translation in Germany, for thirty five pounds sterling.<sup>2</sup>

Pray accept my thanks for the kindness with which you have assisted me in this matter, and believe me

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To Doctor Emil Lehmann

---

1. Emil Lehmann (1829–1898), younger brother of Frederick, a lawyer and a leading member of the Jewish community in Dresden.
2. Lehmann's translation of The Moonstone appeared as Der Mondstein in 1869 from the Berlin house of Janke, following serialization in Roman-Magazin des Auslandes, 7–12 (July–December 1868).

[0780] TO JAMES PAYN,<sup>1</sup> 25 OCTOBER 1867

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 89.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | 25th October 1867

My dear Payn,

Will you dine here, on Thursday October 31st at ½ past 6?

(Memorandum! – Evening dress not admitted)

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. This is the first recorded letter to WC's friend James Payn (1830–98: ODNB), prolific novelist and journalist, whose first article was published in CD's Household Words. He edited Chambers's Journal from 1857 to 1874, where most of his novels were serialized during that period. Thereafter he acted as reader for Smith, Elder and took on the editorship of the Cornhill from 1883 to 1896.

[0781] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 26 OCTOBER 1867

MS: Morgan (MA 3150/ 115), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 296–297.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | October 26th 1867

My dear Mother,

I have sent your letter to Charley. He will be as sorry as I am to hear that the change to Bentham Hill has done you no good this time. I shall be anxious to hear how you are when you have got back – and when you can receive me.

Dinners, public and private, to Dickens on his departure, are filling my engagement book. On the 31st, (the only day he has) he dines here to warm the house. On November 2nd I must go to the public dinner to him, of which I am a steward. On the 5th, Beard gives him a farewell dinner. On the 8th, I have promised (at Dickens's request) to go /with him/ [del] to Liverpool, and see him off on the morning of the 9th – Saturday.

Suppose I [del] go to you on Monday November 11th? The knocking will surely be over, and the new servant found, by that time? or I could be with you, for a day and a half, before that /time/ – arriving on Wednesday 6th, and returning on Thursday night /(7th),/ to be ready for the journey to Liverpool on Friday morning (8th) – and then going back again to you, for a week at least, on Monday 11th. After this last date, I am free. Tell me what you think about it. I have got back again to work on my book – and I hope I shall have some more to read to you when we meet. If I am not utterly mistaken, this last new story of mine will be a “hit”.<sup>2</sup> You will not be sorry to hear that (on consideration) I have taken the clergyman out of the story – he is Mr Godfrey Ablewhite now, instead of the Reverend. And his line in life is – to manage and advise Ladies’ Charities. He is the inevitable gentleman who sits at the Ladies’ Committees, and helps them through the business – and I don’t think he has been done in fiction before.<sup>3</sup>

[del] Write a few lines soon | every yours affly | WC<sup>4</sup>

Your portrait is hung in my study – and looks very well. It is the portrait in the white dress – but cut short off – as to the dress – at the bosom.<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | near Tunbridge Wells’, with a postmark too faint to decipher, but clearly endorsed ‘TUNBRIDGE WELLS | A | OC 27 | 67’.

2. The Moonstone.

3. Ablewhite is describes as follows in ch. 8 of the house-steward Betteredge’s narrative:

He was a barrister by profession; a ladies’ man by temperament; and a good Samaritan by choice. Female benevolence and female destitution could do nothing without him. Maternal societies for confining poor women; Magdalen societies for rescuing poor women; strong-minded societies for putting poor women into poor men’s places, and leaving the men to shift for themselves; – he was vice-president, manager, referee to them all. Wherever there was a table with a committee of ladies sitting round it in council there was Mr. Godfrey at the bottom of the board, keeping the temper of the committee, and leading the dear creatures along the thorny ways of business, hat in hand.

4. WC writes his valediction and signature down the left margin on the final page.

5. WC adds his postscript above the printed address (black, centred, Roman type) on the first page.

[0782] TO CHARLES KENT, 26 OCTOBER 1867

MS: Huntington (HM 18609), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 89–90.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | October 26th 1867

My dear Sir,

The following gentlemen have asked me to get them dinner-tickets,<sup>2</sup> and to place them near me:–

Mr Thomas Beard

Mr F. Carr Beard.

Mr F. Lehmann

Mr E. Benzon

Mr V. Prinsep.

Mr J. Payn

Mr E. Foster

Mr J. R. Buckler

=

I also beg to be put down for two tickets to the Ladies’ Gallery.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Charles Kent Eqre

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘Charles Kent Eqre | (Committee Room of The Dickens Dinner) | Freemason’s Tavern | Gt Queen St W.C.’, postmarked as dated, with embossed device of the Athenæum Club on the flap.

2. See [0778] to Kent of 24 October 1867

[0783] TO EDMUND ROUTLEDGE,<sup>1</sup> 1 NOVEMBER 1867

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 106; BGLL, II, p. 90.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | 1st November 1867

Sir,

I am not quite sure that my present literary engagements will allow me to undertake any new work. But I will not decide, until I have first heard the details of the proposal which you are so good as to make to me. I shall be happy to see you here, on Monday afternoon next, (November 4th) at 4 o'Clock.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Edmund Routledge Esqre

---

1. Edmund Routledge (1843–99), author of books on sport and for boys, second son of the publisher George Routledge, who was best known for his shilling reprint series, the 'Railway Library'. WC had corrected his own entry in the biographical dictionary Men of the Time published by the firm – see [0411] to Edward Walford of 17 April 1861, and [0578] to Routledge etc. of 21 April 1864. Edmund had become a partner in the firm when it was renamed George Routledge and Sons in 1865. The nature of his proposal here has not been clarified, but it was presumably unsuccessful as no works by WC appeared under the firm's imprint until towards the end of the century.

[0784] TO EDMUND ROUTLEDGE, 1 NOVEMBER 1867

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 90.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 1st November 1867

Sir,

Since I wrote to you to-day by an earlier post, I have been reminded of an engagement on Monday afternoon which had escaped my memory. Will you kindly consider our appointment as made for Tuesday afternoon at four o'Clock – instead of Monday?<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Edmund Routledge Esqre

---

1. WC writes on Friday, so he is engaged on the afternoon of Monday 4th and offers to see Routledge on Tuesday 5th.

[0785] TO CATHERINE DICKENS, 11 NOVEMBER 1867

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, II, p. 91.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | 11th Nov 1867

Dear Mrs Dickens,

Many thanks for your kind note. It will give me the greatest pleasure to be one of your guests on the 19th at 7 o'clock.<sup>1</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Catherine's estranged husband CD had sailed for America on 9 November 1867. It is of note that two days after his departure Catherine is inviting WC and other friends round for dinner. Catherine had written to CD on 4 November to wish him well – see his reply of 5 November 1867, Pilgrim, XI, p. 472.

[0786] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 12 NOVEMBER 1867

MS: Unknown. On sale: Sotheby's (New York, 9 December 2022, lot 1028). Published: Coleman, pp. 107–108; Farmer 1999, pp. 597–598; B&C, II, pp. 297–298 as Parrish, and in BGLL, II, p. 91 as Parrish (Box 5/2), which is in fact a photocopy. Amended: A&C14, pp. 30–31.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W.
London. November 12th 1867

THE MOONSTONE, | a New Serial Story | by | WILKIE COLLINS<sup>1</sup>

Dear Sirs,

I send you above,<sup>2</sup> a proof of the Title. It has only just been decided on, and it has not yet been advertised in England. So far as I know, your advertisement of the title will appear simultaneously with the advertisements here.

The first weekly part of the story will be published in “All The Year Round”, on Wednesday January 1st 1868.<sup>3</sup> We shall therefore appear on both sides of the Atlantic on New Year’s Day.

I send you (under another cover) by this mail – Tuesday November 12th – a first portion of the first half of the MS copy of the story. This instalment leaves England [del] /50 clear days/ before the first weekly part is published in England. The quantity of MS now sent comprises at least seven weekly parts of the story. The remainder of the first half of the complete MS. copy shall follow as rapidly as possible. It proceeds more slowly than I had anticipated, from two causes. My own MS for the press here is so altered and interlined as to be very difficult to read – and the literary necessities of this story force me to [del] correct and re-correct the first half, with a special view to what is to come in the second. If I am a few days later than the 30 days advance with what is to come, I hope you will take into consideration that I have been a few days earlier with what is already sent.

With regard to the printed proofs, I hope to begin sending them to you in a week’s time, or less. The alterations which you will find, here and there, between the proofs and the MS – though important in a literary point of view – are not likely to embarrass ~~you~~ the illustrator.<sup>4</sup> They are alterations in the form only. The substance of the book (as presenting subjects for illustration) will remain the same in MS as in print.

Mr Charles Dickens (who left for America by the steamer of the 9th Nov<sup>r</sup>) will call on you, while he is in New York – and will kindly [del] say for me anything I may have to say here.

Please acknowledge the receipt of the /first/ portion of MS copy, and the receipt of this letter.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. Printed on four strips of blue paper, apparently cut from All The Year Round, pasted between the date line and the salutation and taking up most of the first page. Attached to the letter, between the date line and the salutation.

2. Although All The Year Round and Harper’s Weekly carried a Saturday date, both were in fact on sale the previous Wednesday. See William Baker, ‘Wilkie Collins’s Diary for 1868: Nine Months in the Life of an Author’, Victorians Institute Journal, 33 (2005), p. 201.

3. That is, William Samuel Lyon Jewett (see [0818] to Harper & Brothers, 30 January 1868).

[0787] TO BENJAMIN WEBSTER,<sup>1</sup> 16 NOVEMBER 1867

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 91–92.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Novr 16th 1867

My dear Webster,

Some misunderstanding appears to have happened about Miss Leclercq’s engagement at the Adelphi to play in “No Thoroughfare”.<sup>2</sup> She has not yet, as I hear, been informed that she is engaged – and, with other proposals before her, she naturally feels in some difficulty about her position.<sup>3</sup>

A line from you to Miss Leclercq will set this right. Please write that line as soon as possible – and so secure us the “cast”, exactly as we decided on it with Dickens and Fechter at “All The Year Round”.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. The first act is done. I begin Act 2 tomorrow. I have put some new lines into “Bintrey’s” mouth, which I think will tell on the audience.<sup>4</sup>

-
1. Benjamin Nottingham Webster (1798–1882: ODNB), actor, proprietor and manager of the Theatre Royal Adelphi until his retirement in February 1874.
  2. No Thoroughfare, the collaboration between CD and WC for the 1867 Christmas number of All The Year Round, subsequently adapted for the stage. The play opened at the Adelphi on 26 December and ran for over 150 performances. Webster played the head cellarman, Joey Ladle, while the leading role, Obenreizer, was taken by the Anglo-French actor Charles Albert Fechter (1824–79).
  3. The part of Marguerite was indeed played by Carlotta Leclercq. See [1323] to her of 19 April 1873.
  4. Bintrey, the lawyer in No Thoroughfare, was played by George Belmore.

[0788] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 18 NOVEMBER 1867<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 109; BGLL, II, p. 92.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Monday Novr 18

My dear Mrs Ward,

Your kind note finds my evening on Wednesday, unluckily, engaged already. Accept my thanks and my excuses. I am overwhelmed with work and engagements for the next fortnight.<sup>2</sup> After that, I hope you will take pity on me, and give me another chance.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Dating determined by the address and the calendar.
  2. See [0879] to HC of 26 November 1867 for the details.

[0789] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 26 NOVEMBER 1867

MS: Pembroke with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 92–93.

90, Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | Novr 26/67

My dear Mother,

How are you going on? And where are you? Your last letter, forwarded to me by Charley, appeared to suggest that you might escape the infernal hammering by going to Bentham Hill? I hope you have done so – for no nerves can endure hammering. When will it be over? And when can I come? In a week or ten days more? Write and tell me. We really must fix sometime. I shall forget how to play Cribbage.

I am finishing the 3rd act of the play<sup>2</sup> – conducting All The Year Round<sup>3</sup> – and correcting The Moonstone for its first appearance in London and New York<sup>4</sup> – all together. My very minutes are counted. I have never been so busy in my life. And I keep quite well.

No time to add more. Write a line by return of post

Yours ever affly | WC

Charley’s first article comes out in the December Cornhill.<sup>5</sup> You shall have it the moment it comes to me.

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘TOO-LATE | C 5 | NO 26 | 67 | LONDON’, and endorsed ‘TUNBRIDGE-WELLS | B | NO 27 | 67’.
  2. The dramatic No Thoroughfare.
  3. During CD’s absence in America.
  4. That is, the serial appearances in All The Year Round and Harper’s Weekly, both of which were to begin on 4 January 1868.
  5. The first five chapters of ‘Some Chapters on Talk’, Cornhill, 16 (December 1867), pp. 719–738. The remaining chapters appeared in the issues from January to March 1868.

[3123] TO JAMES BIRTLES,<sup>1</sup> 5 DECEMBER 1867<sup>2</sup>

MS: Garnett. Published: A&C5, p. 7.

Thursday eveng Dec 5 | THE ATHENAEUM<sup>3</sup>

Dear Sir,

I find that the last page of act 4, and the first page of act 5 are together.<sup>4</sup> To make the Revise of act 4 complete I enclose you the revised first page of act 5. There is no need (if it is inconvenient) to make the corrections on this first page – till you get all act 5 for Revise. I only want a completely corrected act 4 when you send to Gloucester Place tomorrow.

Faithfully yrs | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0791] to Birtles, 10 December 1867, note 1. Although no name appears on the letter it can only be to him in the context of the surrounding letters.

2. Although the year is not on the letter it is certain. The only years when WC was at Gloucester Place in which 5 December fell on a Thursday were 1867, 1872, and 1878. Of these three the only year when he was involved in writing a five act play was 1867. In addition, the device of The Athenæum is identical to that on [0789] to HC, 26 November 1867. At this time WC had just moved to Gloucester Place and seems to have spent considerable time at the Athenæum Club to avoid the hammering of the workmen at his new home. See [0789] to HC, 6 December 1867.

3. Oval device of the Athenæum Club; WC joined the club 16 April 1861 and remained a member all his life.

4. Of No Thoroughfare, about to be performed at the Adelphi Theatre from 26 December. WC had to read the whole play to the actors on 11 December. See [0791] to Birtles, 10 December 1867.

[0790] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 6 DECEMBER 1867

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 299. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 93–94.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Friday, Decr 7th 6th

My dear Mother,

If I had time, I would run down to Southborough and kill the grocer. Your account of the hammering horrifies me. It is impossible you can be well, with such a nervous aggravation going on next door. Will you try that hotel at Hastings, which you and I went to? If you will, say the word, and any day after Tuesday next, I will pack up and go with you.

The play is done. Webster and Fechter are coming here on Monday to make the final corrections with me.<sup>2</sup> On Tuesday the 10th I am to read it to the actors. On the 26th it must be performed in public. How we shall get through the stage preparations in 15 days – the play being in 5 acts and 15 scenes – I don't know. But as Doctor Johnson said – “Sir! what must be done, will be done!”<sup>3</sup>

After Tuesday, I shall have three or four days to myself – and then I shall be wanted at the rehearsals. But for the cursed hammering, I might spend those days with you, and get back quietly to my interrupted work at The Moonstone. I must take that up again immediately, or I shall be losing my advance on the printers. One thing I have determined to do, which is to dine with you on Christmas Day. Hart is going to the Alderman's. Ask the Alderman to ask us also – and let us be jolly.<sup>4</sup> Another of my plans is to go to you next Saturday week the (14th) [sic] with a return ticket to Monday. This will be cheap, observe! I shall be wanted at the rehearsals on the week days – but I can spend a quiet Sunday with you, and have a quiet game of cards on the previous Saturday evening. I will write again about the train I travel by. There will be no knocking on Sunday morning – and the earlier I am knocked up on Monday morning – the better.

I have written your address myself on an envelope of All The Year Round. The Christmas number will be sent to you, I hope, in a day or two. If not, let me know.

I have let my stables for £40 a year. So there is my rent lowered to a very payable figure.<sup>5</sup> The next thing is to pay the Xmas bills for doing up the house. Some of the people will wait. In the spring I shall have plenty of money.<sup>6</sup>

I must now correct “The Moonstone”, and The Play, to go to New York by tomorrow's mail. Dickens will get up the play in New York, and bring it out on the same night when it is brought out here. This will get us some money from America. In London we have 10 per cent on the money taken every night. The theatre holds two hundred pounds. That is £20 a night between us. £60 a week each.<sup>7</sup> And remember we come out in the Christmas holidays – when the people all go to the theatre. The “Armadale” play is also being finished in Paris. So the deuce is in it, if the stage doesn’t bring me in some money now!

Glad to hear my title is liked. The Moonstone will make a play too. Write soon.

Ever yours afftly WC

P.S. – My doctor has just been to see how I am getting on. He is astonished at the manner in which I sustain my work – and attributes it to these large airy rooms, and to this dry soil.<sup>8</sup>

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked as dated.
  2. No Thoroughfare which opened at the Adelphi Theatre on 26 December and ran for 151 performances closing on 20 June 1868 (see <https://www.umass.edu/AdelphiTheatreCalendar>).
  3. From Johnson’s account to Sir Joshua Reynolds of how the Rambler received its title, as cited in Boswell’s Life of Samuel Johnson: 1750: Aetat. 41.
  4. The references must be to the politician David Salomons (referred to as ‘Alderman Salomon’ in [0715] to HC of 14 December 1866); see also [1316] to the painter Solomon Alexander Hart, 8 April 1873.
  5. WC’s rent for Gloucester Place was £175-10s a year, so £40 represented a 23% reduction. In the event he experienced a lot of problems in collecting the payments.
  6. WC’s worries about money here must be related to the loan mentioned in [0793] to HC of 12 December 1867.
  7. In fact WC was sent a total of £1001-18s-6d by the manager Benjamin Webster between December and July, which represents an average of £6-12s-8d per night for the whole run; Webster sent a further payment of £65-17s on 29 October which may or may not be related (Coutts: WC)
  8. Referring to WC’s large new residence at Gloucester Place. Damp seems to have been a family concern. In August 1840 his father moved the family from 20 Avenue Road to 85 Oxford Terrace due to fears of damp clay soil affecting the gout in his eyes (Memoirs, II, p. 166).

[3002] TO CHARLES DICKENS, [6–7] DECEMBER 1867

MS: Unknown.<sup>1</sup> Cited: CD to WC, 24 December 1867 (Morgan). Published: Hutton, pp. 176–178; Pilgrim, XI, p. 520; A&C2, p. 62 (dated [6] December 1867).<sup>2</sup>

... at your sole discretion ...<sup>3</sup>

-
1. Presumably destroyed by CD. This seems likely to be a letter of some length to CD in Boston, accompanying a copy of the completed dramatic version of No Thoroughfare. CD had written from Boston to WC on 28 November 1867 (Morgan), requesting as soon as possible not only details of the construction, staging and costumes, but also a completed playscript, in order to begin negotiations with theatres in New York such as that of Lester Wallack (1820–1888: ANB), on the corner of Broadway and Thirteenth Street.
  2. The revised dating is based on WC’s comment in [0790] to HC, 6 December 1867: ‘I must now correct ... The Play, to go to New York by tomorrow’s mail.’
  3. In his Christmas Eve response to WC’s letter, after praising the play’s construction but questioning its length, CD responds to specific queries about the staging – concerning the mechanism of the clock, whether Vendale and Marguerite should remain on stage, whether Obenreizer should die on stage, and whether the part of Mme D’Or is necessary. CD then continues: ‘But my dear boy, what do you mean by the whole thing being left “at my sole discretion”?’ Is not the play coming out, the day after tomorrow???’ The London production at the Adelphi indeed opened on Thursday, 26 December, and, at the time of writing, WC assumed that the play would begin simultaneously in New York, telling his mother in [0790], ‘Dickens will get up the play in New York, and bring it out on the same night when it is brought out here.’ Patently such a schedule was impractical. In the event, despite the success of the Adelphi production, there seems to have been no authorized performance of the play in the United States, though unauthorized dramas based on the Household Words narrative opened as early 30 December 1867 in Boston (at the Museum Theatre: Pilgrim XI, p. 521n1) and 6 January 1868 in New York (at the Park Theatre, Brooklyn: Gasson, p. 117).

[0791] TO JAMES BIRTLES, 10 DECEMBER 1867

MS: Stanford. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 94–95.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Tuesday Decr 10

Dear Sir,

I have kept the boy, while I transferred the corrections of the first 4 acts to a clean copy.<sup>1</sup>

If I can have 3 new Revises tomorrow (Wednesday) morning between 11 & 12, I will call for them myself at Beaufort House. If there is not time – then I must take back the corrected revise sent herewith – and let you have it again, later in the day. I read the play to the actors tomorrow (Wednesday) at 12 – and my own corrected copy is illegible.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mr Birtles /

You shall have the corrected 5th act tomorrow afternoon – after the reading.

---

1. Birtles (see [0482] to him of [18] July 1862) worked for Charles Whiting of Beaufort House, The Strand, printers of All The Year Round (for Chapman & Hall), who privately issued No Thoroughfare: a Drama in Five Acts for acting purposes in ninety pages towards the end of 1867.

[0792] TO [JAMES BIRTLES], [12 DECEMBER 1867]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 95.

Office of All the Year Round, | ... | N<sup>o</sup>. 26 Wellington Street, Strand;
London. W.C. 186<sup>2</sup> | Thursday 3 o'Clock

Please send me Six copies of the complete Revise – the last Revise, now making, of the whole play.<sup>3</sup> As soon as possible.

Wilkie Collins

---

1. Both recipient and date are conjectural but the circumstantial evidence is compelling – see [0791] to Birtles of 10 December and [0793] to HC on identical stationery of 12 December 1867, which indicates that WC was indeed at 26 Wellington Street on the date in question. As he explained in [0789] to HC on 26 November 1867, WC was ‘conducting All The Year Round’ during CD’s reading tour of North America.

2. On printed office stationery with the date line left incomplete.

3. No Thoroughfare.

[0793] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 12 DECEMBER 1867

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 300. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 95–96, amended A&C6, p. 19.

Office of All the Year Round, | ... | N<sup>o</sup>. 26 Wellington Street, Strand;
London. W.C. Thursday Decr 12th 1867

My dear Mother,

I snatch one moment to say – that my innumerable worries of work will not let me away on Saturday next. – So, to my great vexation, I must again put off my visit for a little. At Christmas – if I am alive – nothing will stop me. And I may come before that with a “document” for you to sign. When you talked about making your will some time since, I sent a copy of Mrs Davis’s Will to my lawyers.<sup>2</sup> They have discovered a clause in it, which, if nothing is done to set it right, leaves Charley or me – if we die before you – without any interest in the money which we can leave by will. To obviate this – and to save you the trouble and ceremony of making a regular will, my lawyers have drawn a deed for you to sign. Stripped of technicalities which we can none of us understand, the deed binds us all three to do two things. 1st Charley and I resign our reversionary interest in Aunt Davis’s money, to you. 2<sup>ndly</sup>. You secure to yourself the yearly income from the five thousand pounds, during your life; and after your life you absolutely leave the five thousand pounds in equal half shares to Charley and to me. The practical result of this (to take Charley’s case) is – that, if Charley died before you, he could leave his half share to his wife. As things stand he could not do this. As things stand, I cannot guarantee the repayment of what is not yet worked out of my loan here – supposing I died tomorrow.<sup>3</sup> This difficulty can be entirely obviated by your signing the deed and our signing it. And the sooner it is done the better.

I hope I have made the point quite clear to you. If not, tell me.

I will bring the deed down, and go back next day, writing again to tell you of the day.

The play is rehearsing – Such work! I am to see the new scenery on Saturday evening. And there is a rehearsal at 11, on Monday morning. So you see I must give up my proposed visit to you, this week.

Write and tell me you have received and understand this

Ever yours affly | WC

I sent you the American announcement of the Moonstone. If you receive a circular from the Bank of England, asking if you have sanctioned the issue of a power of attorney, you need take no notice of it. It is only a part of the deed business – a mere formality.

-
1. Office stationery, directed to ‘Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson’s | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked as dated.
  2. Referring to HC’s aunt, Mary Easton, who married Robert Davis in 1811 and died in 1840.
  3. According to Peters (pp. 285–286), the £800 loan was towards the purchase of the lease at Gloucester Place – see also [0848] to Edward Benham of 19 July 1868.

[0794] TO ISABELLE FRITH,<sup>1</sup> 15 DECEMBER 1867<sup>2</sup>

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 186/54). Published: BGLL, II, p. 97.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | December 15th

My dear Mrs Frith,

Pray forgive this late answer to your letter. I am so overwhelmed with work that my very minutes are counted. It has been decided – at a consultation of the person’s interested – to issue no free admissions on the first night except those which must be given to the newspapers.<sup>3</sup> It is the only way – in this case – of avoiding the giving of offence. Everybody is placed on the same footing, and Nobody is under an obligation to support the piece – unless the piece really deserves it.

Many thanks for your kind invitation. I dine with my mother on Christmas day.

(In haste) | Yours very truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Wife of W. P. Frith – see [0774] to her of 11 October 1867.
  2. Dating from the play.
  3. No Thoroughfare opened at the Adelphi on 26 December 1867.

[3342] TO JAMES BIRTLES, [EARLY TO MID–DECEMBER 1867]

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C12, p. 4.

Mr James Birtles
Beaufort House
Strand

Wilkie Collins<sup>2</sup>

-
1. Envelope front only on blue paper probably enclosing revises. See [0791] to Birtles 10 December 1867 and [3123] and [0792] to Birtles of 5 and [12] December 1867.
  2. The signature is at the bottom left of the page, partly enclosed in a curved line.

[0795] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 20 DECEMBER 1867<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, pp. 300–301. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 97–98.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | Friday Decr 20

My dear Mother,

I scratch one line – in the midst of the turmoil of the play – to say that you may rely on my coming to you on Christmas Day – if not before.

The delays and difficulties of this dramatic work have been dreadful. I have had to write a new 5th Act – which has been completed to-day – and the play must be performed on Thursday next, with a Sunday and Christmas Day between!<sup>2</sup>

If I can write again, I will. If not, let us leave it that I certainly come on Christmas Day. And, if I am not wanted on the next Monday's or Tuesday's Rehearsal that I come before. Your much-bothered son has hardly got a minute he can call his own. But the writing of the play is at last complete – so my principal worry is at an end. How I shall enjoy a little quiet with you!

Send me a line between this and Christmas Day. I have got your heart-burn lozenges – and some chocolate for you which Charley brought from Paris. Can I bring anything else which will go into my hand-bag?

Yours ever afftly WC

Charley proposes crossing to you from Gadshill on Friday in Christmas week.

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the clear references to No Thoroughfare.

2. In 1867 Christmas Day fell on a Wednesday, with the play opening on Thursday, 26 December.

[0796] TO ISABELLE OPPENHEIM, 22 DECEMBER 1867

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 98.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Sunday Decr 22

Dear Mrs Oppenheim,

I have something very unpleasant to do on Thursday evening next – I have to submit to what is called “the ordeal of public opinion”. Thursday night is the first night of the dramatic version of “No Thoroughfare” at the Adelphi. If I am in London at all – which as the time draws nearer, may be doubtful – I must be within easy reach of the Theatre, in case of any hitch in the performance.

Under these circumstances I hope I may count on your indulgence if I ask you to accept my thanks and my apologies,

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[0797] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 23 DECEMBER 1867<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 98–99.

Monday evening | Decr 24 23

My dear Mother,

One line to say that I hope to be with you tomorrow (Tuesday). It is impossible for me to fix the train – for I don't know when the rehearsal will let me away. But I will be with you as early as I can. I will not forget the Eau-de Cologne.

Ever yours affly | WC

Have some good mutton chops – nothing more. They can be cooked after I come.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the context.

2. WC writes his postscript opposite the valediction and signature at the foot of the third page, the upper part of which has been roughly torn away. No text appears to have been lost.

[0798] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 27 DECEMBER 1867

Office of All the Year Round, | ... | N<sup>o</sup>. 26 Wellington Street, Strand;
London. W.C. Decr 27th 1867

My dear Mother,

I have a moment to tell you that the Play last night was an immense success. The audience were delighted – and the actors were excellent.<sup>1</sup> I have got the proofs which you sent me back quite safe.

Charley is, I suppose, with you to-day.

If you can write, tell me how you are, and what day next week I may come back to you? I sincerely hope and trust you are not suffering so much as when I was with you.

Love to Charley | Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. The first night of No Thoroughfare at the Adelphi.

[0799] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 28 DECEMBER 1867<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 110; BGLL, II, pp 99–100.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Saturday Decr 28

My dear Mrs Ward,

My address is above. Ask Fanny to “make a note of it” in the housekeeping book,<sup>2</sup> and tell Edward to chalk it up on the walls of the Studio. We shall be all right after that! I ~~have written~~ will write to thank Mrs Casella. I am obliged to go out of town next Thursday. Better luck next time.

I am as bad as my godchild!<sup>3</sup> A second look at your letter informs me that Mrs Casella’s night was last Thursday. Last Thursday was the first night of our play at the Adelphi – and I was obliged to be at the theatre. We had an immense success.

In great haste | Yours ever | WC

---

1. Dating from the address and calendar, plus the relation to the following letter to Mrs Casella.

2. Fanny was housekeeper with the Wards – see [0592] to E. M. Ward of 6 August 1864.

3. Alice Ward, now aged eighteen, who was presumably to blame for the mistake regarding WC’s new address. WC had already written to Henrietta Ward since his move – [0788] on 18 November 1867.

[0800] TO MRS CASELLA,<sup>1</sup> 28 DECEMBER 1867

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, II, p. 100.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Dec<sup>r</sup> 28th 1867

Dear Madam,

I received Mrs Wards’ letter, informing me of your kind invitation only the day before your party. Many occupations have prevented me from writing earlier to thank you, and to beg you to accept my apologies.

The night of the 26th was the first night of a new play (produced at the Adelphi Theatre) of which I am one of the authors – and I was obliged to be present during the representation.

I am obliged to leave London early next week, and am unable to call and personally make my excuses.

With kind remembrances to Mr Casella

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mrs Casella

---

1. Unidentified acquaintance of Henrietta Ward (see [0799] to her of the same date). However, given the rarity in and around London at this time of the family name (likely of Italian origin), this might well be Maria Louisa Casella née Tagliabue, resident of Highgate, wife of Louis Pascal Casella (born Luigi Pasquale, 1812–1897: ODNB). Casella was a distinguished inventor and manufacturer of scientific instruments (thermometers, in particular) whose workshop was then in Hatton Garden. It should be noted, however, that the Casellas are not mentioned in Henrietta Ward's Memories of Ninety Years (1924).

[0801] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 30 DECEMBER 1867

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 301. Published: BGLL, II, p. 100.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Monday Decr 30

My dear Mother,

I shall be back with you on Thursday (Janry 2nd) – in time, I hope, for plain dinner at ½ past 6. I hope and trust I shall find you better.

The play is bringing money. It is a real success – we shall all be rich.

I shall bring the papers for you to sign which I told you of. What else can I bring? Send me a line to say. Any chance yet of the move to Mrs Wells?<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson's | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells', postmarked 'LONDON-W | XA | DE 30 | 67'.

2. Wife of the owner of Bentham Hill Cottage.

[0802] TO [E. M. WARD], [1863–67]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 339 (undated); BGLL, II, p. 101.

... respectfully to doubt whether the colour of her money is a colour you will ever see.

I don't give this as good advice. It is only what, I think, I should do myself. The legal bearings of the subject, I am pretty sure of – for Dickens and I consulted a lawyer about it some time since.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. MS fragment written on paper embossed with Athenæum Club seal. The torn side of the sheet suggests this is the conclusion of a three-page letter written on folding notepaper. The document is found in the file of undated letters to E. M. Ward at Texas, and the valediction 'Ever yours' is that regularly used with the painter. The dating limits are WC's election to the club in April 1861 and the death of CD in June 1870, but we have found examples of WC using this kind of Athenæum stationery only in the middle of the decade.

2. Given the reference to 'her money', the legal issue might that of a wife's financial irresponsibility prior to the Married Women's Property Act of 1882; the payment in question might well be for one of Ward's paintings.

[0803] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 1 JANUARY 1868

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 301. Published: BGLL, II, p. 101.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Wednesday 1st January

My dear Mother,

A line to say that my visit to you must be on Friday instead of tomorrow (Thursday). A host of things to do have turned up – which I want all tomorrow to get through.

I will bring Nepenthe<sup>2</sup> and some of my brandy on Friday. I hope and trust the new year will bring a little ease to those miserable pains that torment you.

In haste | Yours affly ever | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Collins | Mr Anderson's | Southborough | Tunbridge Wells', with postmark 'LONDON-W | 6 | JA 1 | 68'.

2. A sedative drug.

[0806] TO CHARLES WHEATLEIGH,<sup>1</sup> 4 JANUARY 1868

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 102–103.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | London January 4th 1868

Sir,

At the suggestion of Mr Dion Boucicault,<sup>2</sup> I send you with this letter, a printed copy of the dramatised version of “No Thoroughfare” – recently produced at the Adelphi Theatre in London.<sup>3</sup>

On Mr Dickens’s behalf, and on my own behalf, I offer you the right of representing this play at San Francisco on the same terms as those which you have accorded to Mr Boucicault. You will receive a letter from Mr Boucicault on the subject.

My letter will be detained at New York, as I am not quite sure whether Mr Dickens – who is now in that city – may not have made arrangements which include California in the American representation of this piece, before Mr Boucicault and I met to discuss the question of [treating] with your Theatre. If you receive these lines and the play, you may take it for granted that Mr Dickens has not made any arrangements, at the date when this reaches him, for the performance of “No Thoroughfare” in California, and that I am therefore perfectly free to treat with you in his name and in mine.

I remain, Sir, | Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins
C. Wheatleigh Esqre

---

1. The actor Charles Wheatleigh (1823–95), who arrived in San Francisco from Australia in 1861.

2. The Anglo-Irish dramatist who wrote such long-running plays as London Assurance and The Corsican Brothers. WC had once been rather dismissive of his work – see [0196] to Edward Pigott of 6 February 1855.

3. The play ran there until 20 June 1868.

[0807] TO NINA LEHMANN, 10 JANUARY 1868

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5).<sup>1</sup> Published: Lehmann, p. 57; Baker 2001, pp. 508–509. BGLL, II, p. 103.

January 10th 1868 | 90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W.

To Mrs Lehmann.

=

“In Vino Veritas”

While drinking healths on New Year’s Eve,

I promised all you ask’d me.

Next day excuses you receive

Which say you overtask’d me.

Ungrateful man! my lady cries,

With falsehood’s mark I brand him!

To which your humble slave replies,

Pray, madam, understand him!

The wine once in, the truth comes out,

(This proverb may assist you)

When sober, I can pause and doubt;

When not – I can’t resist you!

W. C.

---

1. WC uses printed portrait-format notepaper. He writes the date above the printed address, but turns the paper round, to leave the address on his right hand, and inscribes the poem in landscape format. If any other message accompanied the poem, it seems not to have survived.

[3003] TO CHARLES DICKENS, 10 JANUARY 1868

MS: Unknown.<sup>1</sup> Cited: CD to Charles Fechter, 24 February 1868 (MS unknown). Extract: Hogarth & Dickens, II, pp. 361–363; Pilgrim, XII, pp. 56–57; A&C2, pp. 62–63.

... Here Fechter is magnificent. ...

... Here his superb playing brings the house down. ...

... I should call even his exit in the last act one of the subtlest and finest things he does in the piece. ...

... You can hardly imagine what he gets out of the part, or what he makes of his passionate love for Marguerite. ...<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Apparently a letter of some length, presumably destroyed by CD.

2. Referring to No Thoroughfare running at the Adelphi, with Charles Fechter playing Obenreizer to Carlotta Leclercq's Marguerite. CD introduces his quotation of WC's comments with: 'Wilkie has uniformly written of you enthusiastically. In a letter I had from him, dated the 10th of January, he described your conception and execution of the part in the most glowing terms.' The paragraph written by CD concludes: 'These expressions, and many others like them, crowded his letter.' CD had earlier written to WC: 'Your letter dated on the eleventh reached me here [Philadelphia] this morning. . . I am indeed delighted by your account of the Play, and do begin to believe that I shall see it! Every word of your account of your last visit "Behind", I have read – and shall read – again and again.' (31 January 1868, Pilgrim XII, pp. 30–31). Despite the slight uncertainty concerning the date, this is likely to refer to the same letter from WC.

[0808] TO SIR EDWIN LANDSEER,<sup>1</sup> 13 JANUARY 1868

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 103.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Janry 13th 1868

My dear Landseer,

A memorandum for you. You dine here (of course not in evening costume) on Saturday at ½ past 5. To go to the play. We won't wait a minute for Forster!<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The animal painter – see [0504] to him of 18 November 1862.

2. The planned expedition was to see No Thoroughfare – see [0811] to William Holman Hunt of 16 January 1868.

[0809] TO HARRY,<sup>1</sup> 14 JANUARY [1868]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Brigham Young (Mss 2262). Published: BGLL, II, p. 104.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | January 14th

My dear Harry,

I send you the autographs, with great pleasure, on the other leaf.<sup>3</sup>

My love to all at home.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Unidentified but probably a family member – see [1101], a similar note to Harry of 4 July 1871. WC had two cousins on his mother's side named Henry – Henry Gray (1823–98) and Henry William Geddes (1838–1908). Another possibility is Edward Pigott's nephew Henry D. Pigott, then around eighteen years old – see [2154] to him of 10 May 1883.

2. Dating from the printed notepaper with a centred heading in Gothic typeface, which indicates the earliest period of his stay at Gloucester Place.

3. The second leaf of the notepaper is not present.

[0810] TO T. H. HILLS, 15 JANUARY 1868

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 104.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W. | Wednesday | Jany 15th

My dear Hills,

I have been in such a whirl of work that half my friends don't know where to find me in my new abode – for want of information from me.<sup>1</sup>

Have you got anything to do on Saturday night next? If not, come (no evening costume, mind!) and dine with me at half past five sharp. You will meet E. Landseer, Forster, and my brother – and we all go after dinner to the play at the Adelphi (author's box).<sup>2</sup>

A line to say yes. Also many thanks for my new Almanac

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC had moved to Gloucester Place five months earlier.

2. To see No Thoroughfare.

[0811] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 16 JANUARY 1868

MS: Huntington (HH 89, folder misdated 1873), in pencil. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 104–105.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Thursday Jany 16

My dear Hunt,

Are you disengaged next Saturday evening – the 18th?

If you are, come here and dine (no evening costume) at half past five punctually. You will find Edwin Landseer, John Forster, and Charley – and we all go afterwards to the Adelphi – to see “No Thoroughfare” by C Dickens and by

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

Send me one line to say Yes, I hope.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. In the event, WC was forced to cancel the engagement due to the sudden illness of HC – see [0813] to Hunt of 18 January 1868.

[0812] TO HARRIET COLLINS, 17 JANUARY 1868

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 302. Published: BGLL, II, p. 105.

90, Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W. | January 17th 1868

My dear Mother,

It was a great relief to me and to Charley to hear that you had made the move, and established yourself again under Mrs Wells's care. I am not surprised to hear that you are terribly fatigued by the exertion. But when you have rested I hope and trust you will begin to feel the benefit of this change. Let me hear – in two lines – how you go on – and how soon you will let me come (or let Charley come) and see you in the new place. Remember that the quiet and the freedom from London interruptions are sure to help me to get on with my work. Also – when you can write without too much trouble – let me hear when it will be convenient for me to send a small supply of brandy and wine to Bentham Hill Cottage.

The play goes on wonderfully. Every night the Theatre is crammed. This speculation on the public taste is paying, and promises long to pay me, from fifty to fifty-five pounds a week. So make yourself easy about my money matters.

I am getting to nearly half way through The Moonstone.

No more news at present. Goodbye.<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever affly WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Collins | care of Mr Wells | Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells’, postmarked ‘LONDON-

S.W | X | JA 17 | 68'. The letter itself is on headed paper: 'Athenæum Club | Pall Mall S.W.'.

2. This is WC's last known letter to his mother. She became seriously ill on the following day and died on 19 March. WC dedicated The Moonstone to her memory.

[0813] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 18 JANUARY 1868<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (HH 90, folder misdated 1873 Jan. 18). Published: B&C, II, p. 302.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Saturday Jan 18 | ½ p 2

My dear Hunt,

My dear Mother is I am afraid sinking. A telegram calls me away to her instantly.

You will understand, and feel for me.

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating is fixed by the sudden decline in HC's health.

[0814] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL,<sup>1</sup> 19 JANUARY 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/2). Published: B&C, II, p. 303.

Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells | Sunday Jan 19th2

My dear Tindell,

I have been summoned away from London by the serious illness of my mother. If she is no worse, between this and then, I hope to get to London on Wednesday next, and to see Mr Boucicault.<sup>3</sup> In that case, I will call on you about the assignment of copyright for Australia,<sup>4</sup> on Wednesday at 5 – or soon after.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. William Frederick Tindell (c. 1828–86), solicitor, of the firm of Benham and Tindell, of Essex Street, off the Strand, who seems principally to have handled WC's account from around this time. According to the 1861 Census, he was born in Wellington, Shropshire, and was then residing at 3 Sussex Villas, Richmond, Surrey, with his wife Louisa and two young daughters. Although he was long WC's confidant and friend, in 1877 his professional role was taken over rather abruptly by the young Henry Powell Bartley, solicitor of Somerset Street, Portman Square, not long before his marriage to Carrie Graves.

2. The dating is secure, deriving from both the calendar and his mother's illness.

3. See [0806] to Charles Wheatleigh, 4 January 1868, concerning Boucicault's help in arranging a staging of No Thoroughfare in San Francisco.

4. Again concerning the dramatic version of No Thoroughfare.

[0815] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 21 JANUARY 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 106.

Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells Tuesday Jan 21st 1868

My dear Tindell,

I send you enclosed the extract from the Register at Stationers Hall. This must be despatched to Australia with the assignment of copyright. You will see that I am registered as the sole proprietor of the copyright.<sup>1</sup> So there will be no difficulty about my signing the assignment as sole negociator with the Australian manager.<sup>2</sup>

It is impossible for me yet to say when I may return to London. I can only hope that you may be able to manage this matter for me – without much trouble.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Though the narrative version of No Thoroughfare was written in collaboration with CD (then absent in the United States), the stage adaptation was by WC alone and the printed version was registered solely in his name.

2. The Australian stage production of No Thoroughfare has not been traced, although the original narrative was serialized in the Australasian from 25 January to 28 March 1868 – see Johnson-Woods, p. 96.

[0816] TO E. M. WARD, 21 JANUARY 1868

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 111; Ellis, p. 41; B&C, II, p. 303.

Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells | Jan'y 21st 1868

My dear Ned,

You will all be grieved, I know, at the miserable news which I have to tell you. My dear old mother is dying. She is perfectly conscious – perfectly clear in her mind. But the internal neuralgia from which she has suffered so long, has broken her down – and at her great age, there is now no hope. Charley is with me here. All that can be done to soothe her last moments is done. The end may be deferred for a few days yet – but it is now only a question of time.<sup>1</sup> I can write no more.

Give my love to all.

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins.

---

1. She in fact lived on for nearly another two months, eventually passing away on 19 March, aged 77.

[0817] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 28 JANUARY 1868

MS: Huntington (HH 84). Published: B&C, II, p. 304.

Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells | Jan'y 28th 1868

My dear Hunt,

On Saturday last, I persuaded my poor mother to see another doctor – my friend Frank Beard. He has relieved the most alarming symptoms – and he leaves her out of immediate danger. But at her age, and in her state of weakness, there is no knowing from day to day, what may happen. She sends you her kindest love, and often talks of you. I remain here till Charley comes next week to take my place – He is far from well himself. My mother has the best of good and kind nurses. We are obliged to keep her quiet – and to deny admittance to her room to everybody.

I am (luckily) obliged to work – in other words obliged to resist the suspense and distress of this anxious time. All the [del] leisure I can spare from my mother, must be devoted to my book.<sup>1</sup> Hence this short letter – and the time that has passed before I could thank you for your kind and brotherly words.

Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The serialization of The Moonstone had begun in All The Year Round on the first day of the year. For the composition of the novel see William Baker 'Wilkie Collins's Diary for 1868: Nine Months in the Life of an Author', Victorians Institute Journal, 33 (2005), pp. 197–227.

[0818] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 30 JANUARY 1868

MS: Parrish (Box 5/2).<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 212–213. Published: Parrish & Miller, p. 74–75; Coleman, p. 255; Farmer 1999, pp. 598–599; B&C, II, pp. 304–305.

Bentham Hill Cottage, near Tunbridge Wells. | England | January 30th 1868

Dear Sirs,

Your kind letter has reached me at a time of painful domestic anxiety. The dangerous illness of my mother has called me to her cottage in the country – and I am working at my story, as I best can, in the intervals of my attendance at her bedside. Mr Dickens had already written to tell me of the liberal manner in which you had met my proposal. And now your letter comes, telling me of an additional concession to my convenience, at a time when your consideration for me speaks with especial friendliness, and when I assure you I feel encouraged in no ordinary degree by the kindness of my American publishers.

You will receive with this a corrected revise of the twelfth weekly part of The Moonstone, and a portion of the thirteenth weekly part. The completion of the thirteenth weekly part will follow, I hope, by Tuesday's mail. But for the inevitable delay in transmitting the manuscript and receiving the proofs by post, caused by my absence from London, you would have received the whole weekly part by the mail of February 1st. I will arrange to send slips (for the convenience of your artist) by every mail, so long as my mother's critical condition obliges me to remain here. And I will be careful – as I have hitherto been careful – to forward the duplicates regularly, in case of accidents by the post. After the next two or three weekly portions, I shall hope to be able to send you, beforehand, a list of subjects for the artist, /referring to/ [del] to a part of the story which is already settled in detail, and in relation to which he may feel secure against any after-alterations when I am writing for press.

The two numbers of the Weekly have reached me safely. The illustrations to the first number are very picturesque – the three Indians and the boy being especially good, as I think. In the second number, there is the mistake (as we should call it in England) of presenting “Gabriel Betteredge” in livery. As head-servant, he would wear plain black clothes – and would look, with his white cravat and grey hair, like an old clergyman.<sup>2</sup> I only mention this for future illustrations – and because I see the dramatic effect of the story (in the first number) conveyed with such real intelligence by the artist that I want to see him taking /the right direction,/ [del] even in the smallest technical details.<sup>3</sup>

You may rely on my sparing no effort to study your convenience, after the readiness that you have shown to consider mine. I am very glad to hear that you like the story, so far. There are some effects to come, which – unless I am altogether mistaken – have never been tried in fiction before.

Believe me | Dear Sirs | With sincere esteem & regard
Truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. Formerly laid in US first edition of The Moonstone (New York: Harper, 1868).

2. In the 11 January 1868 issue of Harper's Weekly, Gabriel Betteredge is shown wearing a short dark waistcoat, knee-pants, hose, and a long white coat.

3. The artist was William Samuel Lyon Jewett (1834–76), who from 1859 provided illustrations for both Harper's Weekly and Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper. See his obituary in the (Jersey City) Evening Journal, 24 July 1876.

[0819] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 1 FEBRUARY 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/4). Published: BGLL, II, p. 107.

Bentham Hill Cottage | near Tunbridge Wells Saturday Feby 1st 1868

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks for the duplicate, which I return – signed & witnessed – by post, not having the means of sending to the railway today.<sup>1</sup>

If my mother is no worse on Monday, I am going to town for a few days, to settle about the performances of “No Thoroughfare” in the country (Manchester, and the [great] towns).<sup>2</sup> There may be more business here – in which case I will of course let you know. I am glad to find “B & T”,<sup>3</sup> taking such an interest in the drama. “This, without prejudice” (as we lawyers say). If you don't hear from me to the contrary, 90 Gloucester Place, will find me next week up to Friday or Saturday. But it all depends on my poor dear mother's frail hold on life.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Perhaps regarding the assignment of copyright for Australia – see [0815] to Tindell of 21 January 1868.

2. On the three-week run of the No Thoroughfare at Manchester, see [0838] to Benjamin Webster of 2 June 1868.

3. Benham & Tindell.

[0820] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 4 FEBRUARY 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/5-6), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 108.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Tuesday Feby 4

My dear Tindell,

Can I see you in Essex Street – if I call at 5 tomorrow Wednesday? If not, will 5 on Thursday suit you better? Work keeps me from calling earlier.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to 'Wm F. Tindell Esq | 18 Essex Street | Strand | W.C.', postmarked as dated.

2. On the reverse is written in pencil in another hand, presumably Tindell's: 'I can see you on Thursday at five of the clock'.

[0821] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 5 FEBRUARY 1868<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/7). Published: BGLL, II, p. 108.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Wednesday night Feby 5th

My dear Tindell,

I am unexpectedly prevented from keeping our appointment for tomorrow (Thursday, at 5). I will write again, and make another appointment – or call and hear when I can see you. Don't trouble to answer this – or to telegraph – I am too uncertain to decide on my own movements. I will write again.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating is secured by the calendar, the headed notepaper, and the relationship to the letter of the previous day.

[0822] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 13 FEBRUARY 1868

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 108.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Feby 13th 1868 /

---

1. Probably a simple autograph, since the signature is just below the printed heading. A line has been roughly drawn across the sheet, with the bottom half cut off along it.

[0823] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 21 FEBRUARY 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/8).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 306.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Feby 21st 68

My dear Tindel [sic]

Thank you for the [del] /draft/ licence. I am still miserably weak and ill. I can only move from one room to another on the same floor. Could you manage to meet Fechter here, say between six and seven on any evening next week[?] I am quite helpless, and can only move in the matter in this way,<sup>2</sup>

Yours truly, | Wilkie Collins.

1. In the hand of Caroline Graves, corrected and signed by WC.
2. Concerning provincial stagings of No Thoroughfare – see [0826] to Tindell, 23 February.

[0824] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 22 FEBRUARY 1868

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins).<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 114; Farmer 1999, pp. 600–601; B&C, II, pp. 306–307.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. <sup>2</sup> | London | Saturday Feby 22nd 1868

Dear Sirs,

You will, I hope, receive with this a roughly-corrected proof (for the artist) of weekly portion 15 of “The Moonstone”.<sup>3</sup> Receiving this – you will receive, so far as I can now calculate, one full half of the book.

This [del] weekly part, and the last, have been partly dictated, partly written by me, in intervals of severe pain from a rheumatic attack – which has tortured my eyes this time as well as the rest of my body.<sup>4</sup> I am now getting better – with little to contend against but the weakness caused by [del] the suffering – and by the action of the remedies employed. Rather better accounts of my mother have, I am glad to say, cheered me on my sick bed. Assuming that I have had my share for the present of the afflictions of human life – I shall hope to get on faster into the second half of “The Moonstone” than with the first. “Miss Clack’s” narrative will be finished in one or two more weekly parts. And “Franklin Blake’s narrative” will follow it. In this part of the story, I hope to be able to send the artist some subjects beforehand.

I send with part 15, a [del] duplicate of Revised part 14 – and a duplicate of the corrected slip in part 13. You now have all my latest corrections – and the American and the English publications of “The Moonstone” [del] are literally the same.

Depend – barring accidents – on my steadily doing my best to increase the present advance. I have declined all new proposals made to me here – I am to work uninterrupted at The Moonstone until it is done.

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins
Messrs | Harper & Brothers

---

1. Letter endorsed ‘Wilkie Collins | Feb. 22/68’.

2. WC uses Gothic printed paper, address centred.

3. Second period, Chapter II, published in Harper’s Weekly on 11 April 1868. There was one illustration focusing on Rachel Verinder: ‘She stopped – ran across the room – and fell on her knees at her mother’s feet.’ The initials WJ (for William Jewett) are visible.

4. ‘Five manuscript pages of Miss Clack’s narrative are in Carrie’s hand. It was the first time she had written from his dictation’ (Peters, p. 296).

[0825] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, [22 FEBRUARY] 1868

MS: Huntington (HH 85).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 307.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. <sup>2</sup> | Saturday<sup>3</sup>

My dear Hunt

I was very sorry to miss /seeing/ you again last night. The gout has come to keep the rheumatism company – and I sleep badly – and the doctor says I must keep quiet an hour or two before going to bed. If you /ever/ take your walk this way, after the light fails for painting, do look in – and tell the servant that you are to come up. Between 6 & 8 is my good time.

Accounts of my mother still tell me that she is keeping her hold on life and suffering less than she did.

Yours affly | W. Collins

---

1. In pencil in large letters.
2. Centred plain black engraved type.
3. Tentative dating based on the address, and the relative states of health of HC and WC. His mother is holding on, and the author is back working in London, but is again a prisoner of the gout. This is also the date adopted in the archive record at Huntington.

[0826] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 23 FEBRUARY 1868<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/9). Published: BGLL, II, p. 109.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Sunday Feby 23

My dear Tindell,

I have got your kind letter.

I need not, I find, trouble you to come here next week. Fechter has been with me to-day. And I now learn for the first time that certain influential country managers have refused to accede to the terms proposed to them. This throws us out for the present. We are determined to have our terms – but are not yet determined on our line of conduct. I say “we” because the ten per cent depends on the terms.<sup>2</sup> It ca’nt be paid on the terms these said managers want us to accept.

You shall hear as soon as I know how it ends. I am much better today.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins.

-
1. Dating from the address, calendar and relationship to [0823] to Tindell of 21 February 1868.
  2. It seems that Benham & Tindell were acting as WC’s theatrical agents in return for a 10% commission.

[0827] TO EMIL LEHMANN, 25 FEBRUARY 1868

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 110.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. | Feby 25th 1868

My dear Sir,

I send you, this day, by book-post, proofs of “The Moonstone”, from weekly part 7. to weekly part 13. both inclusive.<sup>1</sup>

As this supply of proofs is considerably in advance of the portion of the story actually published, I must request you to kindly consider what I now send as privately sent to help you forward with the translation – and as something which is only to be seen by your eye and mine.

Send me one line to say you have received the proofs safely,

and believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I am slowly – very slowly – getting better.

-
1. For the German translation, see [0779] to Emil Lehmann of 25 October 1867.

[0828] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 29 FEBRUARY, 3 MARCH 1868

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with associated envelope at Collamer.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 115; Farmer 1999, p. 601; BGLL, II, pp. 110–111.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | London Feby 29th 1868

Dear Sirs,

Your letter of the 19th reached me this evening – too late for acknowledgment by today’s mail.

I am not only gratified – I may really say I am affected by the generous interpretation of the relations between us which has given me more than my due, after I have given you less than your’s. I acknowledge the receipt of the Five hundred pounds which I have this day received from you “on account,” not only with a sincere sense of your liberality, but with sincere pleasure in accepting an obligation [blot] which I owe to your friendly regard for me, and to your sympathetic appreciation of the merits of my Story. Thank you heartily – I say no more.<sup>2</sup>

I ~~send~~ have sent you by today's mail, a Revise of weekly part 15 – and the greater part of weekly portion 16. A severe return of the rheumatism for the past two days, stopped my pen altogether. Today, I am a little better, and in better working trim. Tuesday's mail will, I hope, bring you the complete weekly part 16, to print from.

Many thanks for the number of the "Weekly" – which I have looked at with great interest.<sup>3</sup> Before this letter goes on Tuesday, I will add to it, for the assistance of the artists, such subjects for future illustration as I can be sure of at this moment.

Believe me Dear Sirs | Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs | Harper & Brothers

Tuesday, March 3.<sup>4</sup> Complete Weekly Part 16 to print from sent with this, and subjects for artists. Also correction of an error in part 11.

---

1. Signed and directed to: 'Messrs Harper & Brothers | Franklin Square | New York (City) | United States | America', with the postmark obscure, but bearing the following note: 'By mail of Saturday Feb 29 | 68 | 16th Part'.

2. Harper's were only legally obliged to send WC £375 at this juncture – see [0758] to Harper & Brothers, 20 July 1867 – and the fifteenth instalment (marking the expected halfway point in the serial) had only been sent to America a week earlier – see [0824] to Harper & Brothers, 22 February 1868.

3. That is, a further issue of Harper's Weekly containing an illustrated instalment of The Moonstone.

4. The post for the United States left twice a week, on Saturday and Tuesday. WC begins his letter on the Saturday evening, too late for the Saturday post, and adds the postscript before posting the letter in time for the Tuesday post.

[0829] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 19 MARCH 1868

MS: Huntington (HH 86).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 307.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | March 19th 1868

My dear Hunt,

One line to tell you that my dear mother died at 3 this morning.

I am still too ill to have any hope of joining poor Charley in following her to the grave.

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. On thick black-edged unheaded mourning paper.

[0830] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 21 MARCH 1868

MS: Huntington (HH 87).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 308.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | March 21st 1868

My dear Hunt,

Thank you for another proof of your affection which is very welcome to me in this grief.

I have sent your note on to Charley. I am sure it will be a comfort to him to see the face of a dear old friend whom my mother loved, and whom we loved, on the day of the funeral.<sup>2</sup> He will write you word of the day and hour<sup>3</sup> – which I do'nt yet know – and I can tell you about trains &c You will represent me.

Yours ever afftly | WC

---

1. Written on thick black-edged printed mourning paper.

2. Having been informed in [0829], 19 March 1868, that WC was too ill to travel to his mother's funeral, Hunt must have immediately offered to attend in his place.

3. We have been unable to ascertain the precise date and place of HC's funeral, though it is assumed that both Hunt and CAC attended.

[3210] TO GEORGE RUSSELL, 26 MARCH 1868

MS: Unknown. On sale: Woolley & Wallis, Salisbury, UK (12 December 2012), lot 54, in an album of correspondence to Sir George Russell, p. 49. Published: A&C8, p. 11.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portland Square. W.
March 26th 1868

My dear George,

I am still very ill – so completely crippled by the rheumatic gout that I can only get from my bed to my chair. But I am sufficiently myself to feel the kindness of a dear old friend like you very tenderly and very gratefully. My mother's death is the bitterest affliction of my life – and a pang has been added to that affliction by my miserable inability to follow her to the grave.<sup>1</sup> I have only my few old friends left now – and I think, when I do get well, we shall be closer friends than ever.

Pray thank Mrs George Russell for her kind remembrance of me in my trouble, and Believe me

yours affly | Wilkie Collins

What I say for myself, I say also for my mother, in these lines.

---

1. HC died on 19 March 1868. See [0829] and [0830] to William Holman Hunt, 19 & 21 March 1868, who attended with CAC and – judging from this letter – perhaps Russell as well.

[0831] TO CARL BUCHHEIM,<sup>1</sup> 16 APRIL 1868

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 111–112.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | April 16th 1868

Sir,

I accede with much pleasure to your proposal to make an Extract from “Armadale” for the purpose which you mention.

As the ~~book~~ copyright of this book belongs to Messrs Smith & Elder, it may be perhaps desirable that you should inform them of your contemplated publication of the Extract – adding of course, if you think fit, that you have my permission, as the author of the book.

I remain, Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Professor Buchheim | &c &c &c

---

1. Professor Carl Adolf Buchheim, language educator; compiler of Materials for German Prose Composition; or, Selections from Modern English Writers (London: Bell & Daldy, 1868).

2. WC uses black-edged paper following the death of his mother on 19 March, as he does almost invariably during the twelve-month period of mourning.

[0832] TO G. H. LEWES,<sup>1</sup> 20 APRIL 1868

MS: Wolff Collection (1368d). Published: Wolff, p. 266; BGLL, II, p. 112.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W.<sup>2</sup> | April 20th 1868

My dear Lewes,

Pigott tells me you are kindly ready to give me a look-in here, and to help me with your knowledge to plane away a certain physiological knot which threatens to start up in the texture of my new story.<sup>3</sup>

I want to leave you perfectly free to come here when you happen to be passing my way – and I also want to be sure of not missing you. So I write to say, that on fine days your old friend is assisted into a little carriage (in the character of an ill-preserved man of eighty) and takes a drive between 2 & 4 P.M.

Before 2, or after 4, choose your own time and you will be sure to find me here.

With best remembrances to Mrs Lewes,<sup>4</sup>
Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. George Henry Lewes, whose writings had become increasingly concerned with problems of physiology and psychology, and with whom WC had worked on the Leader back in the 1850s – see [0123] to him of 29 March 1852.
2. Gothic type, centered.
3. Referring to The Moonstone, in the Preface of which WC states that he ‘first ascertained not only from books, but from living authorities as well’ the likely consequences of Ezra Jennings’s experimental administration of opium to Franklin Blake in the closing scenes of the novel. Having published The Physiology of Common Life in 1859, Lewes was by then a specialist in physiology and psychology, and was already well advanced in his major contribution to the subject, Problems of Life and Mind (1873–9). See Wolff, p. 266.
4. George Eliot, whose relationship with Lewes dated back to 1854.

[0833] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 6 MAY 1868

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 113.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | ~~April~~ May 6th 1868

Dear Madam,

I write one line, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, and to tell you that – up to this date – your manuscript has not reached me.

Pray excuse this hasty letter. I write with many occupations crowding on me together.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Presumably an unpublished author.

[3124] TO JOHN BIGELOW,<sup>1</sup> [13–17] MAY 1868<sup>2</sup>

MS: Unknown. Extract: Bigelow 1913, IV, p. 182;<sup>3</sup> A&C5, p. 7.

You have sent Dickens back to us looking younger than he did before he went away.<sup>4</sup> Remembering the American Notes and Martin Chuzzlewit, I think it hardly possible to overrate the sense, moderation, and generosity which the American people have exhibited in their reception of him. I know of no other country in the world in which the national appreciation of literary genius would have been so simply, so heartily, and so nobly shown.

---

1. John Bigelow (1817–1911: ANB), of New York, lawyer, journalist and diplomat. WC became friends with Bigelow and his wife Jane after dining with them in London at John Forster’s residence on 28 January 1867 – see [0725] to her of the same day. In a letter from a Liverpool hotel the following day, Bigelow refers to the delight of both WC and Forster in a manuscript of Benjamin Franklin which he had just received from America and shown to them (Bigelow 1913, IV, pp. 24–26).

2. Dating based on a delivery period to the USA of 10–14 days.

3. Introduced with the following words: ‘Wednesday, May 27th. Received a note from Wilkie Collins, in which he said:’.

4. Referring to Dickens’s tour of the USA from 2 December 1867 to 20 April 1868. Dickens arrived back in the UK at Liverpool on 1 May.

[0834] TO [JAMES BIRTLES],<sup>1</sup> 21 MAY 1868<sup>2</sup>

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 113.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Thursday May 21

Dear Sir,

Please send me tomorrow (Friday) all you have got set up of the new part (27)<sup>3</sup> – including the 3 sides of copy sent this afternoon. I should be glad to have the proof as soon as possible.

If you send by messenger, let him wait, in case I have any copy to send back.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Based on the contents, the letter must be to a member of staff at Charles Whiting of Beaufort House, The Strand, printers of All The Year Round (for Chapman & Hall), and is therefore most likely to be to Birtles – see [0791] and [0792] to him of 10 and 12 December 1867.

2. WC uses black-edged Gothic printed mourning paper, thus securing the letter in 1868.

3. The instalment of The Moonstone, which appeared in All The Year Round on 4 July 1868.

[0835] TO ISABELLE OPPENHEIM, 23 MAY 1868<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 113–114.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Saturday May 23

Dear Mrs Oppenheim,

It is very kind of you to give me a chance. I will do my best to get better, and I will write and report myself a day or two before.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC uses black-edged printed mourning paper, thus securing the letter in 1868.

[3154] TO THEODORE F. DWIGHT,<sup>1</sup> 25 MAY 1868

MS: Massachusetts HS (Theodore F. Dwight Papers, Box 2). Published: A&C6, p. 8.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W.<sup>2</sup> | London. May 25th 1868

Dear Sir,

The pressure of many occupations has allowed me no earlier opportunity than this of acknowledging the receipt of your letter, and of so complying with your wish to possess my autograph.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Theodore F Dwight Esq

---

1. Theodore Frelinghuysen Dwight (1846–1917), librarian and autograph collector, was born in Auburn, New York. At one time he worked for G. P. Putnam in New York as secretary to the historian George Bancroft, and later (1875–1888) became librarian and chief of Bureau of Rolls at the Library, Department of State, Washington, D.C. After that (1888–1892) he was in charge of the Adams family archives and secretary and proof-reader for Henry Adams during his completion of his History of the United States. He served a short time (1892–1894) as librarian of the Boston Public Library before moving to Switzerland as American Consul (1904–1914). Fourteen boxes of his papers are now archived at the Massachusetts Historical Society. See: <www.masshist.org/findingaids/doc.cfm?fa=fa0230>.

2. Written on full mourning paper after the death of WC's mother.

[0836] TO NINA LEHMANN, [MAY] 1868<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 116; B&C, II, p. 308 (with the typescript at Texas as copy text).

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W.<sup>2</sup> | Friday

Dearest Padrona

Your note, and your charming flowers, and your nice eggs, came like three angels, after the ~~weath~~ thunderstorm had torn my wretched shattered nerves to pieces. Thank you a thousand times! I am having a hard fight of it to finish my book in my exhausted state. I shall have done I hope next month – and then I shall be at your entire disposal. Come when you like – only mind it is before 4. I am carried out to be aired at 4.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Dating from the reference to completing The Moonstone the following month.

2. WC uses black-edged mourning paper with the printed address centred.

[0837] TO EDWARD BENHAM, 2 JUNE 1868<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/10). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 114–115 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, p. 19.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | June 2

My dear Benham,

A little bit of inquiry for your clerk to do.

Last June, Mr Smith, Solicitor, of Weston-Super-Mare,<sup>2</sup> and Wilkie Collins became bail at the Marlborough St Police Court for the good behaviour of Joseph Stringfield during one year.<sup>3</sup> The time expires this month – but I don't know on what day this month. Can your clerk find out, by applying at the Clerk's office, Marlborough St Police Court? Amount of bail, £250 each.

Between ourselves, I want to steer Stringfield, till the time is out. He writes to say he will not move in his affairs until the time is out. But I think he ante-dates the time.

If there any difficulty about this, don't trouble to stir in the matter. I will try and find out in some other way. In haste,

Ever yours, | WC

---

1. Dating from the black-edged mourning paper, following HC's death on 19 March 1868.

2. Perhaps William Smith, solicitor, of 4 Ellenborough Park, Weston-Super-Mare, and thus a near neighbour of Joseph Stringfield at that time. According to the 1871 Census, born in Clifton, Gloucestershire, Smith was then aged 42, and married with six children.

3. A physician in Weston-super-Mare, Stringfield was an old friend – see [0103] to Edward Pigott of 22 December 1851 or [0450] to HC of 12 December 1861. According to the report in the Times of 5 June 1867, p. 11d, Stringfield was charged with threatening to kill the solicitor who was acting for his estranged second wife, Mary Ann Maria Teresa née Garment. Married on 4 November 1858 in London with WC as a witness, and now the father of three, Stringfield was reported to drink heavily and regularly abuse his wife and children. In November 1866 his wife left him, later taking the children away with her to London, where she instituted proceedings for divorce on the advice of the solicitor William Watkins. Stringfield wrote a series of abusive letters to Watkins, culminating in that of 31 May 1867, in which he swore: 'I give you notice that if I cannot have access to my children within a reasonable time, which will give you an opportunity to prepare your soul for eternity, I will shoot you, so help me God' (Times, 5 June 1867, p. 11d). Stringfield was bound over to keep the peace, and on 28 June his wife was granted a judicial separation and custody of the children, with the court accepting her submission that Stringfield was 'a man of intemperate habits' who had regularly ill-treated his family, and that he would even take 'the young children out with him to public houses and make them tipsy' (Times, 29 June 1867, p. 14c). The Obituary section of the Medical Directory for 1870 records Stringfield's death on 11 August 1869 (p. 1040). Some eighteen years younger than Stringfield, Mary Ann subsequently married Michael Daly in 1882 and died on 29 August 1908.

[0838] TO BENJAMIN WEBSTER,<sup>1</sup> 2 JUNE 1868<sup>2</sup>

MS: CDM (B406). Summary: BGLL, II, p. 115. Amended: A&C13, pp. 15-16.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 2nd June 1848 [sic]

My dear Webster

Our profits on the three weeks performances of No Thoroughfare at Manchester,<sup>3</sup> after deducting Mr Leclercq's salary,<sup>4</sup> are:—

|                      |                 |
|----------------------|-----------------|
| 20 per cent on       |                 |
| first weeks receipts | £63.13.6        |
| second Do Do         | £34.19. -       |
| third Do Do          | £21.10.6 |
| Divide into          | £120. 3. -      |
| three shares         | £40. 1. -       | to yourself, to Fechter, and to Dickens and Collins sharing together.<sup>5</sup>

My bankers will pay the £40.1. to your bankers tomorrow.<sup>6</sup> Mr Calvert's illness appears to have been fatal to /our receipts/, for the 2nd and 3rd week at Manchester.<sup>7</sup> The piece began at Birmingham last night.<sup>8</sup> I have got the official returns from Manchester (since Fechter left) if you would like to see them.

How are you going on at the Adelphi?<sup>9</sup> If the piece is still doing badly,<sup>10</sup> I suggest introducing a Swiss ballet into the fourth act. Twelve nice girls, with short, transparent petticoats, endeavouring to seduce Joey Ladle<sup>11</sup> — there is the subject for the ballet!

Ever yours

Wilkie Collins

Can you tell me the names of Fechter's bankers in London?<sup>12</sup>

---

1. See [0787] to him of 16 November 1867.

2. WC clearly writes '1848' but the reference to No Thoroughfare, the full mourning paper (for his mother) on which it is written, and WC's bank account (Coutts: WC) all secure the year as 1868. It is not clear why WC would make such an error.

3. The play opened at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester on Monday 11 May and ran for three weeks, closing on Saturday 30 May. The provincial tour continued to Birmingham, Newcastle, and Glasgow, with the proceeds divided similarly.

4. Arthur Leclercq, was the acting-manager for WC and CD on the provincial tour and lived at 5 Park-cottages, Park-village East, London NW (Era 9 August 1868, p. 1e). Another Leclercq, Charles, played Joey Ladle (Newcastle Guardian and Tyne Mercury 1 August 1868, p. 1e), with one review noting that his 'quaint humour is in admirable keeping with the part' (Manchester Times, 16 May 1868, p. 4f). They were brothers and were linked in one notice: 'Arthur and Charles Leclercq are specially engaged' (Cardiff and Merthyr Guardian, Glamorgan, Monmouth, and Brecon Gazette, 31 October 1868, p. 5a). Their sister, Carlotta Leclercq, was an actress and known to WC. They were the children of Margaret Burnet and Charles Clark (1797-1861) a pantomime and ballet artist, and all adopted his stage surname (ODNB). Carlotta played Marguerite in the original Adelphi production of No Thoroughfare – see [0787] to Benjamin Webster, 16 November 1867.

5. There is curved line drawn from the end of the sum to the words 'to yourself' on the next line. In other words, the theatre kept 80% of the receipts. The remaining 20% was shared between Webster and Fechter who got a third each while CD and WC shared the final third, getting get one sixth each. WC's accounts show that he indeed received three payments on 1 June of the amounts as listed, marked 'Of Princes Theatre, Manchester'.

6. WC paid £40-1s to Webster's bank Ransom & Co. on 4 June having paid half that – £20-0s-6d – to CD on 3 June. CD also banked at Coutts hence the speed of transfer. Fechter's share of £40-1s was paid to him on 25 June (Coutts: WC), presumably after Webster gave WC the bank details – see also note 12 below.

7. Referring to the Manchester actor-manager Charles A. Calvert – see [0508] to him of 17 December 1862. He played the play's villain, Obenreizer, to great acclaim when the play opened (Manchester Times, 16 May 1868, p. 4f) but was clearly indisposed for the final two weeks of the run. The figures show that receipts fell by 45% in week two and by another 38% in week three, a 66% fall in total.

8. It opened at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham on Monday 1 June and ran until Saturday 20 June. It then ran in six other theatres. WC made about £50 from the whole provincial run. See Paul Lewis, The Dramatic No Thoroughfare – Performances and Pay (Wilkie Collins Society, 2021).

9. No Thoroughfare had opened at the Adelphi in London on 26 December 1867 closing after 151 performances on 20 June 1868.

10. Webster's payments to WC for No Thoroughfare at the Adelphi declined from around £60 a week at the start of the year to little more than £12 at the end. WC received around £935 from Webster in connection with that production (Coutts: WC).

11. WC's jokey comment refers to the fact that Webster played the part of Joey Ladle at the Adelphi.

12. A later payment (3 March 1869) to Fechter was made to 'Lond. Sc Wm B&C a/c C Fechter Esq' (Coutts: WC).

[0839] TO HARPER & BROTHERS,<sup>1</sup> 6 JUNE 1868

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins).<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 68; Farmer 1999, p. 602 (both as to 'Tinsley's'); BGLL, II, pp. 115–116.

90, Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. | June 6th 1868

Dear Sirs,

I have only a moment before post to say that I hope to finish "The Moonstone" at the 32nd or 33rd Weekly Part.<sup>3</sup> Also, that I send you with the usual proofs, a re-corrected portion, of the first part of the story – which will be followed here in the reprint in book-form, and which you will do well to follow also in your reprint. The remaining part of the story – by far the larger part as you will see – remains unaltered – and will be reprinted as it now stands in the periodical form.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Internal evidence is compelling that the letter was directed to WC's American publishers rather than to Tinsley as Coleman assumes. The phrase 'followed here in the reprint in book-form' can only refer to the Tinsley three-volume edition, while 'your reprint' must refer to the Harper single-volume edition. This is supported by the inclusion of London in the address line, the phrase 'only a moment before post' which implies an overseas mailing, and the reference to 'usual proofs' which must indicate the copy for the serial publication in Harper's Weekly.
2. Endorsed on the final leaf in an unknown hand in Harper house-style: 'Wilkie Collins. | June 6/68'.
3. WC in fact concluded the serial with Part 32, published on 8 August 1868 in both All The Year Round and Harper's Weekly.

[0840] TO GEORGE M. TOWLE,<sup>1</sup> 26 JUNE 1868

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 116.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | June 26th 1868

Sir,

I must beg you to excuse this late reply to your letter. My occupations have allowed me no earlier opportunity of answering it than this.

I shall be glad to see you, if you can conveniently call here on Tuesday next, June 30th, between 12 and 1. P.M.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Geo: M. Towle Esqre | &c &c &c

---

1. George Makepeace Towle (1841–93), American author, translator, politician, and journalist, on the editorial staff of the Boston Post, 1871–1876. He translated Jules Verne's works into English, notably Around the World in Eighty Days. In 1870 he wrote a lengthy appreciation of WC; see [0978] to Towle, 21 May 1870. Towle was at this time the United States Consul in Nantes in France but was later promoted to be Consul in Bradford, Yorkshire, a post he took up on 22 August 1868, remaining in the post until 1870 (Nicholas M. Keegan, US Consular Representation in Britain since 1790, London, 2018, Chapter 9).

[0841] TO EDWARD BENHAM, 28 JUNE 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 116 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, p. 19.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | Sunday. June 28th 1868

My dear Benham,

I will either bring you, or send you, the conclusion of "The Moonstone" between 2 & 3, tomorrow (Monday).<sup>1</sup> Depend on this, and make your appointment with Mr Tinsley accordingly.

I sent more copy to the Printers (Savill & Edwards) on Friday last, before I got your letter.

Yours ever | WC

I suppose I shall be better, when all this is over.

---

1. The final instalment of the serial version did not appear in All The Year Round until 8 August 1868, by which time the three-volume edition from Tinsley had been available for at least two weeks.

[0842] TO J. STIRLING COYNE, [MAY 1859–JUNE 1868]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 117 (as to J. Sterling Coyne), amended A&C3, p. 63.

... without qualification of any kind.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

J. Stirling Coyne Esqre

---

1. Dating based on the relationship to Joseph Stirling Coyne (1803–68), Irish playwright, Secretary of the Dramatic Authors' Society, from 1856 until not long before his death on 18 July 1868 – see [0302], WC's first letter to him of 6 May 1859.

2. Only the closing phrase, valediction, and signature on a rectangle of paper cut neatly from the foot of a letter, presumably for the autograph.

[3357] TO GEORGE W. CHILDS,<sup>1</sup> 7 JULY 1868

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C13, pp. 5-6.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square. W.<sup>2</sup>
London. July 7th 1868

Sir,

I beg to return you my thanks for a presentation copy of “The Public Ledger Building” which has reached me today,<sup>3</sup> thanks to Messrs Trubner of London.<sup>4</sup> Pray accept my congratulations and, Believe me,

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | George W. Childs Esqre

---

1. George William Childs (1829–94: ANB), bookseller, author, biographer, then newspaper proprietor and editor. In 1864 with the help of his friend Anthony J. Drexel, Childs bought the (Philadelphia) Public Ledger. On 19 October 1873 WC was entertained by Childs and his wife Emma at their home ‘Wootton’, in the then brand-new suburb of Bryn Mawr, Philadelphia – see [1382] to George W. Childs, 21 October 1873, Hanes pp. 39 and 104, and ANB.

2. Written on headed paper with full mourning border for the death of WC's mother on 19 March 1868.

3. On 20 June 1867 Childs opened a new building for the Ledger on the corner of 6th and Chestnut Street and described the event in his book The Public Ledger Building, which he published in 1868. It is not clear why he sent a copy to WC. Childs recalls that ‘It was through Dickens that I became acquainted with Willkie Collins, one of the most agreeable men I ever met’ (George W. Childs, Recollections, Philadelphia 1890, p. 36). They may have met at Gad's Hill which Childs visited in early November 1868 (Recollections, pp. 33-34, and Pilgrim XII, p. 214) though that is four months after this letter. The volume was in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p.140).

4. Trübner & Co., 60 Paternoster Row, were booksellers with connections to the USA. See [0559] to Charles Ward, 4 November 1863 and [1796] to Trübner & Co., 19 November 1878. Trübner published ‘Considerations on the Copyright Question Addressed to an American Friend’ in 1880.

[0843] TO GEORGE GREGSON,<sup>1</sup> 8 JULY 1868

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 117.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | 8th July 1868 Wednesday

Dear Mr Gregson,

My labours are over at last, and I take this first opportunity at my disposal of consulting you about my teeth. Between the necessity of working, the necessity of resting, and the necessity of getting a certain daily dose of fresh air in a carriage – I have literally not had half an hour to spare since I last had the pleasure of seeing you.

Will you send me one line to say at what hour after twelve tomorrow (Thursday) I can call in Harley Street, with the best chance of seeing you. Any time from twelve to four or five will suit me.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC's dentist and former landlord at 12 Harley Street – see [0431] to him of 7 August 1861.

[0844] TO HENRI G. DE MUSSY,<sup>1</sup> 8 JULY 1868

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 117–118.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | July 8th 1868

Dear Doctor de Mussy,

I have received a very alarming account of my brother today in a letter from Dickens.<sup>2</sup>

This afternoon, I called, with my friend Mr F. Carr Beard, in the hope of finding you at home, and of hearing what you thought of my brother's case, and whether you would be able to see him at Gadshill. I also wished to ask you – though I am sure the question is hardly necessary – whether you would have any objection to my brother being examined by Mr Beard, with a view to your afterwards consulting together. If you are going to Gadshill, it would be well perhaps if Mr Beard and I could arrange to accompany you. Perhaps, you will kindly send me a line to say what your plans are in this matter – assuming that your engagements will allow you to go to Gadshill.

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Physician to Charles and Kate Collins – see [0714] to Nina Lehmann, 9 December 1866.

2. CD's letter is not found in Pilgrim, and does not appear to have survived. CAC and Katie must then have been staying at Gad's Hill.

[0845] TO WILLIAM TINSLEY,<sup>1</sup> 11 JULY 1868

MS: Morgan (MA 2509, the first four pages of the letter) and Parrish (Box 4/11, the fifth and last page). Extract: Davis, p. 258. Published: B&C, II, p. 309.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W.<sup>2</sup> | Saturday 11th July 1868

Dear Sir,

Many thanks for the Subscription List of “The Moonstone”.

Both you and I might have good reason to feel discouraged, if this List indicated anything more important than the timidity of the Libraries – and possibly the poverty of the Libraries as well. As things are, we have only to wait a few weeks – until the book has had time to get talked about. I don't attach much importance to the Reviews – except as advertisements which are inserted for nothing. But the impression I produce on the general public of readers is the lever that will move anything – provided the impression be favourable. If this book does what my other books have done, in the way of stimulating the first circle of readers among whom it falls – that circle will widen to a certainty. It all depends on this. If ~~Mr~~ Mudie is right in believing 500 to be a sufficient supply – then (judging from past experience) three fourths of my readers have deserted me! I, for one, won't believe this – and I am glad to find, from the close of your letter, that you have not lost confidence in the book either. It is (in the opinion of more than one good judge) the best book I have written. I believe it myself to have a much stronger element of “popularity” in it than anything I have written since “The Woman in White”. That book, Mr Mudie, and the Librarians took in dribblets – just as the public forced them. And this book, let us hope, will be another example of that sort of legitimate sale which<sup>3</sup> springs from a genuine demand.

I have also to thank you for sending me my “authors' copies” – which came here safely yesterday.<sup>4</sup>

Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins

W. Tinsley Esq<sup>re</sup>

P.S. The “No Name” figures were 1st Edition. Four thousand copies, all sold.

2nd Edition. Five hundred copies. This proved to be over-printing. The 500 copies hung on hand, and diminished, instead of adding to, the profits.

---

1. William Tinsley (1831–1902), of Tinsley Brothers, London publishers from 1858. Their biggest success was with Mary Braddon's sensational Lady Audley's Secret in 1862, while the monthly house journal Tinsley's Magazine started up in 1867. The agreement with WC for the publication of The Moonstone in volume form Tinsley himself later described as ‘a regular corker; it would pretty well cover the gable of an ordinary-sized house’ (Edmund Downey, Twenty Years Ago (London: Hurst & Blackett, 1905), p. 25).

2. WC uses black-edged printed mourning paper.

3. At this point WC starts a fresh leaf of headed notepaper which he numbers ‘2’ within a curving line, centred above the printed address: this is the portion of the MS found in the Parrish Collection.

4. Tinsley eventually issued The Moonstone in three volumes in an edition of 1,500 copies in mid-July 1868 (‘Ready this day', Times, 15 July 1868, p. 13b). The Moonstone was listed in the Athenæum on 11 July and in the Publisher's Circular as published between 1 and 14 July 1877 (Topp, Vol. III, p. 46).

[0846] TO EDWARD BENHAM, 16 JULY 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 118 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, p. 19.

18 Essex Street<sup>1</sup> | July 16th 4. 20. P.M.

My dear Benham,

I came on here from Coutts's in the hope of expediting the immovable administration business<sup>2</sup> – to the extent of signing the powers of attorney. Useless! I am just too late to find either you or Tindell.

I am going to stay for a few days with Frederick Lehmann Esqre
Woodlands | Southwood Lane | Highgate N.<sup>3</sup>

If the "Powers" can be sent to me this week, that is the address. I shall possibly stay longer – but next week it will be best to direct to Gloucester Place, "to be forwarded".

Yours ever | WC

-
1. The business address of Benham & Tindell.
  2. Presumably the administration of HC's estate.
  3. WC's next two letters to Benham are addressed from Woodlands. HC left no will and WC and CAC were appointed administrators of her estate by letters of administration dated 31 May 1868.

[0847] TO EDWARD BENHAM, 18 JULY 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/13). Published: BGLL, II, p. 119 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, p. 19.

Woodlands | ~~90, Gloucester Place.~~ | ~~Portman Square.W.~~<sup>1</sup>
Saturday July 18

Mr dear Benham,

I will call in Essex Street between 4 & 5 on the afternoon of Monday next (the 20th) – to hear what you propose doing about the "distringas"<sup>1</sup>

I shall most likely be going abroad before the end of the month – and I propose returning here on Tuesday next. So Monday afternoon is my only ~~present~~ chance of seeing you at present. If 4 to 5 won't suit let me hear (at Gloucester Place) what hour will. I hope to get home between 3 & 4 on Monday.

Yours ever | WC

-
1. WC puts two vertical bars through the printed address of the black edged full mourning paper.
  2. Legal term meaning a writ of distraint, from the Mediaeval Latin word with which the document traditionally began ('Thou shalt distraint ...'). In this case the writ prevented WC from selling certain stocks – see [0848] to Benham of the following day.

[0848] TO EDWARD BENHAM, 19 JULY 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/14–15). Published: B&C, II, pp. 310–311 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, p. 19.

Woodlands | ~~90, Gloucester Place.~~ | ~~Portman Square.W.~~<sup>1</sup>
Sunday July 19th 1868

My dear Benham,

I got your letter here last night.

This time, it does certainly appear to me that the misunderstanding ~~began~~ begins in your room at Essex St. When we /were/ speaking of the security which I could give to your client, and afterwards when I was signing the necessary papers, you never informed me that you contemplated putting a distringas on £5000 of stock, as additional security for a loan of £800!<sup>2</sup> When the brokers discovered the “Distringas”, it seems to me that it was the duty of my bankers to inform me of it.

However, as this is now arranged, it is useless to dwell on it any longer – except with a view to the future. Half the £5000 (odd) belongs to my brother – and he wishes to reinvest it. If you had maintained the “distringas” – or if you were to put it on again – would he be able to [del] /re-invest/ without asking your leave or the leave of your client? If he is not at perfect liberty to do what he likes with his own (in consequence of my having borrowed money, of your client) pray tell me so – and I will pay the £800 back at once. The loss of 3 or 4 months of interest is of no great importance.

As for myself again, I suppose I am not at liberty to reinvest my half of the £5000, under any circumstances whatever. [del] Am I at liberty to sell out £800 to repay your client – or any part of that sum, supposing I can’t make it up? And when I pay the money back do I receive back the paper which I ~~received~~ signed, giving /making over to/ your client my share in this little inheritance?<sup>3</sup>

I write these questions, instead of going to Essex St as I proposed, and putting them viva voce – because your letter renders the interview which I contemplated unnecessary. Also because I want tomorrow afternoon for a consultation with Mr Fechter, on the subject of a play founded on “The Moonstone”. I shall probably be detained in town until Wednesday by this dramatic matter – so there will be plenty of time for you to send me a line to say how I stand – and how my brother is or is not affected by my position towards your client.

I go abroad on the 1st August<sup>4</sup> – and I want to go, leaving my poor mothers [sic] affairs, my brother’s affairs, [del] and my affairs, settled. ~~If the~~ In the present high state of the Funds – the repayment of the £800 may be commercially to my advantage. For the sacrifice of a few months of interest-money may be less than the sacrifice of selling out next winter when the funds may have dropped again.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. WC uses headed black-edged paper, striking two vertical lines through the printed Gloucester Place address, and writing the true address above.

2. Regarding both the £5000 inheritance shared between WC and CAC, and the loan of £800 by WC (towards the purchase of the lease at Gloucester Place, according to Peters, pp. 285–286) see [0793] to HC of 12 December 1867. The identity of Benham’s client who loaned the £800 to WC is unclear.

3. In the event, WC paid £800 to Benham on 24 September presumably for him to repay the loan (Coutts: WC). It came from money he inherited following the death of his mother.

4. Regarding the trip abroad, see [0850] 28 July, and [0851] 18 August, both to Charles Ward.

[3283] TO W. P. FRITH, 27 JULY 1868

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, pp. 8–9.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup>
Monday Jul 27th 1868

My dear Frith,

One line to say that I have not forgotten your kind invitation. But I have returned to town today, with my foot once more useless to me. Whether it is gout, or whether I have been using the foot too much, I cannot say till the doctor sees me. The fact is that I cannot cross the room without help and that the pleasure of dining with you, this month, is another pleasure sacrificed to the demon who tortures me.

I must get away from England, if I am carried away, as soon as this new disaster is set right. And I hope you will give me another chance, when we all return to London.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. On black-edged mourning paper, following the death of his mother on 19 March.

[0849] TO EMILY CLUNES,<sup>1</sup> 28 JULY 1868

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 119–120.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | London. July 28th 1868

My dear Mrs Clunes,

My poor mother mentioned to me, during her last illness, certain little legacies which she wished to leave. Among them, was a legacy of Fifty Pounds to you. The lawyers have only now completed the business arrangements so as to enable my brother and myself to fulfil our mother's last wishes.

I enclose a cheque for £50. – made payable to yourself or order. Please sign your name at the back of the cheque, before it is presented for payment, and let me have a line to say that you have received it safely.<sup>2</sup>

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

Mrs Clunes

---

1. Emily Elizabeth Guest Clunes née Geddes (c. 1805–88), WC's aunt, the youngest sister of HC, who married Deane William Clunes (b. 1803) in late 1839.

2. The cheque, drawn on the Executors of William Collins account which HC had used during her life, was paid on 18 August (Coutts: Exors WmC).

[0850] TO CHARLES WARD, 28 JULY 1868

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/49). Published: B&C, II, p. 311.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W.<sup>1</sup> | 28th July 1868

My dear Ward,

I have got your kind letter of the 25th telling me of the safe receipt of Jane's cheque,<sup>2</sup> and about the safe receipt from Charley of the Power for Mrs Davis's money.<sup>3</sup> So far, so good.

But, as to the two Powers which followed the Power for Mrs Davis's money – and which I received, the next day after executing Mrs Davis's Power – here is Charley, hesitating to sign and “wanting to know the reason why”. I signed – knowing that the Powers come from Coutts's – without looking at them. But Charley wants preliminary explanations which I am quite unable to give. I have no choice but to follow you in your holiday – most unwillingly – with a new worry connected with this endless business.<sup>4</sup> I enclose Charley's letter – in the hope that you may be able to quiet his mind in three lines – or that you can instruct Mr Shannon to do so in a note which it would take you two minutes to write.

Our places are taken in the Antwerp Steamer for Sunday next. But it is doubtful if Lehmann can go. I shall hear tomorrow.<sup>5</sup>

My foot has been bad again – and is mending again. I hardly know what I shall do – except that I must get away – if Lehmann fails me. The child of the partner who was to have taken his place is dangerously ill.

Anyway, I am here till Saturday.

Yours ever | WC

I will send a photo to Jane – of course!

P.S. I have, of course, written to Charley that our banks can neither sell out nor buy in, without a written order authorizing it from ourselves<sup>6</sup>

---

1. On black-edged printed mourning paper.

2. Presumably a cheque from WC to his cousin representing a legacy under HC's will.

3. For details concerning Mrs Davis's money, see [0793] to HC, 12 December 1867.

4. We are uncertain of the precise nature and purpose of the two Powers coming from Coutts, but generally regarding the settlement of HC's will and the related financial arrangements of WC and CAC, see Clarke, pp. 116–117.
5. In the event Lehmann did travel to Switzerland (see [0851] to Ward, 18 August 1868). Here WC's page ends and he writes below a line 'see page | 4'. WC then starts a new leaf, writing and underlining '4' at the top of the paper.
6. Second postscript written above the printed address on WC's first leaf.

[0851] TO CHARLES WARD, 18 AUGUST 1868

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /50). Published: B&C, II, p. 312.

St. Moritz | Tuesday August 18th 1868

My dear Ward,

As I calculate it, this letter will probably meet you on your return to the Strand. Will you, as soon as you conveniently can, go to Gloucester Place, and open my letters? They are all put together in a drawer of my study table (by the window in the back drawing-room) – the drawer on your left hand as you sit down at the end of the table at which you used to write for me when we had copying to do. Any letters which require answers, you will /kindly/ [~~] answer, perhaps, in three lines – just saying that I am in Switzerland and am expected back in September. There may be cheques in [~~] /some/ of the letters, and possibly a remittance (which ought to be at once acknowledged) of £250 from America.<sup>1</sup> Will you take [~~] care of these pecuniary documents for me, in your desk, until I get back? and if there is a letter from Fechter, [~~] will you forward it – also if there is anything else in my correspondence which I ought to know, will you write me word – at Baden? Address~~~~~~~~

Mr Wilkie Collins | Poste Restante | Baden-Baden | Germany.

I expect to be at Baden on the 25th /of this month,/ and to stay till the 26th or 27th – not later probably than the 27th. You will calculate if there is time for you to write to me under these circumstances. If I don't find a letter from you at the Poste Restante, I will assume that there is not time – and will write again telling you what my plans are for returning, either in the first or second week in September – I have not yet settled which.

This place has done great things for me. Exquisite scenery, and mountain air blowing over glaciers and through pine woods. I don't meddle with the baths and waters – I take the air alone – and [~~] it costs me a guinea a day for the privilege of breathing it, in an "apartment" of three rooms only. The people here make hay while the sun shines – we are a helpless crowd of foreigners at St Moritz, completely at the mercy of the Swiss inhabitants.~~

Lehmann and his eldest boy are living in a house close to mine.<sup>2</sup> We leave this together on Saturday next the 22nd, and travel to Baden (probably) in company. There Lehmann leaves me, and rushes home as fast as the trains can take him – which is considerably faster than I can travel.

I hope you are all the better for your holiday. My love to Jane and the girls.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. The second part of the £750 paid by Harper & Brothers in New York for the serial rights of The Moonstone (see [0854] to them, 12 September 1868).

2. The eldest boy was Rudolph Chambers Lehmann, born in 1856.

[0852] TO EDWARD BENHAM, 9 SEPTEMBER 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/16). Published: BGLL, II, p. 120 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, p. 19.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Wednesday Sept 9

My dear Benham,

I got back last night – better & stronger generally – but with my bad foot still as obstinately incurable as a bad foot can be.

Your letter reached Baden, after I had left. It was sent back after me – and I have read it this morning.

Tinsley's proposal is (I quite agree with you) not to be thought of for a moment. Is it possible that the agreement allows him to propose his own terms of payment to us? I suppose the truth is, that he may or may not – at his own sole discretion – publish a new edition. In this case, he has us at his mercy.<sup>1</sup>

Shall I call on you in Essex St.? If so, send me word what day and hour in the afternoon. If you can come here after business, you are sure to find me any evening. Pot-luck at 7.

Yours ever | WC

Perhaps, it is now too late to do anything. The chance of selling a new edition may be lost. Any way let us meet and see what can be done.

---

1. The dispute concerned the payment for the second impression of the triple-decker. See Tinsley's Random Recollections of an Old Publisher (2 vols, London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent, 1900), I, pp. 114–115; and Peters, pp. 307–308, for accounts of how the issue was resolved.

[3086] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 9 SEPTEMBER 1868

MS: Unknown. On Sale: Heritage Auction Galleries, 3500 Maple Avenue, 17th Floor, Dallas, Texas 75219–3941 (Books & Manuscripts no. 683, 4 June 2008, lot 57412). Published: A&C4, p. 8.

[Dated this] 9th [day of] September [186]8

[Signed] Wilkie Collins<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Tipped into a presumably unrelated copy of the 1868 Harper edition of The Moonstone between the frontispiece and the title page.

2. WC has filled in a printed form the purpose of which is unclear.

[0853] TO MISS ELMORE,<sup>1</sup> 11 SEPTEMBER 1868

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 121.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W. | September 11th 1868

Dear Miss Elmore,

Pray excuse this late acknowledgment of your kind note.

I have been travelling abroad for the last six weeks – and I only returned to England and to my letters on Tuesday last.

With kindest remembrances to your father.

Believe me, | Vy truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Probably a daughter of Alfred Elmore (1815–81: ODNB), historical painter of Irish origin, who first exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1834 and was elected an Academician in 1857. He belonged to the artistic circle that included Augustus Egg, William Frith and Edward Ward.

[0854] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 12 SEPTEMBER 1868

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Extract: Coleman, p. 118.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 121–122.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London September 12th 1868

Dear Sirs,

I have just returned to England, after travelling in Switzerland for the last two months, and have just read the letters which you addressed to me in my absence. It was impossible to forward my correspondence to me – as I was travelling for my health, and was uncertain of the length of my stay in any one place. Under these circumstances, I am sure you will excuse this late acknowledgement of your letters on my part.

My friend, Mr Ward, has done for me all that is necessary, in the business-part of the transaction between us. I find the balance of the purchase-money for the advance sheets of “The Moonstone” (£250.-.-) paid, and placed to my account with my bankers – and I have therefore only to thank you for the receipt of the complete sum agreed on between us (£750.-.-).<sup>2</sup> Let me add my renewed acknowledgments for the personal kindness which encouraged me during the trying time when I was writing my book – and I shall have said all that I need say, as to the past.

As to the future, I sincerely hope that “The Moonstone” will succeed in America, in its book-form. It has done, and is still doing, very well in England, as a republication. You may rely on hearing from me when I next find myself contemplating the production of a new novel. You shall have the longest notice I can give you, as well as the first offer of the advance sheets.

Believe me | Dear Sirs | Very Truly Yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

-
1. Coleman concatenates the beginning of the first and the end of the third paragraph, omitting the second.
  2. £500 had been paid in February – see [0828] to Harper of 29 February 1868.

[0855] TO HARRY [LEMAN],<sup>1</sup> 12 SEPTEMBER 1868

MS: Unknown. Photocopy: in copy of The Moonstone, Sotheby's, London (17 July 1997), lot 85. Published: BGLL, II, p. 122.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | 12th Sept 1868

I am myself about to dramatise “The Moonstone”. My first rough draft of the contemplated play is already drawn out.<sup>2</sup> Under these circumstances, it is not possible for me to comply with your request. I beg you to accept my excuses, and remain, faithfully yours,

Wilkie Collins.
To Harry [Leman], Esq.

-
1. Unidentified dramatist – there is some doubt about the name.
  2. In fact WC's dramatic version of The Moonstone was not performed until 1877 – see Gasson, p. 108.

[0856] TO EDWARD BENHAM, 25 SEPTEMBER 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/17). Published: B&C, II, p. 313 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, p. 19.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | 25th Sept 1868

My dear Benham,

Here is an entirely new official monster, terrifying me with mysterious formulas. Can we set him at defiance? or (better still) can we cheat the revenue? Will you do what is best? or will you tell me how to do it? I am sorry to trouble you – but I don't know whether this last “officer” ought to be pitched into the waste paper basket or not.<sup>1</sup>

I have [del] begun the electric baths. Rating the pores of my skin at only 7 million – I have had 7 million currents of electricity running through me for 45 minutes.<sup>2</sup> The result is great cheerfulness and great disinclination to pay inland revenue.

WC

-
1. Again concerning the administration of his mother's will – see [0857] to Benham later on the same day.
  2. From this point on, the closure is squeezed vertically down WC's left margin.

[0857] TO EDWARD BENHAM, 25 SEPTEMBER 1868

MS: Glasgow (891117/18). Published: B&C, II, p. 313 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, p. 19.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square.W.<sup>1</sup> | 25th September 1868

My dear Benham,

By all means let your office do what is necessary with the inland revenue. I had thought that we were at the end of our troubles – but this administration business is an exception to all other mortal affairs – it never comes to an end.

You are quite right to turn the screw on Tinsley. We ought to know whether he has, or has not, done with the book.<sup>2</sup>

I want to find out what “Mrs Yelverton’s” grievance is – in “a nutshell” – with a view to making it the starting point in a play (this between ourselves). Can you tell me, in what point her marriage, was “null and void”?<sup>3</sup> If a letter will do, I need not bother you by coming to Essex Street – or if you can come here and dine at 1/2 p 5 on Monday /next/ – it will be better still. If not, I can come to you on Monday /next/ at 3. At 4, I take my Bath[.] At 5, I get out – amidst thunder & lightning. At 1/2 p 5, I am ordered to dine – with thunder in my stomach & lightning in my head.

Ever yours | WC

One line, in answer, will be enough.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Black-edged mourning paper with printed address, centred.

2. The notorious Yelverton Marriage Case (John Thelwall v. William Charles Yelverton, Dublin Court of Common Pleas, 1861), which exposed an injustice deriving from anomalies in the marriage laws of Ireland, Scotland, and England. WC was to exploit the details of the case in Man and Wife, initially planned as a play but first written as a novel. There, in the prologue, the young lawyer Delamayn encourages John Vanborough to have his twenty-year marriage with Anne Silvester annulled, by invoking a statute invalidating any marriage performed by a Catholic priest in Ireland between a Catholic and a former protestant whose conversion dated from less than a year before the ceremony. The statute was castigated by the Commission on the Laws of Marriage, which reported in 1868 (see WC’s Preface to Man and Wife), and finally repealed in 1870.

3. Postscript above the printed address on the opening page.

4. Still referring to the question of the second edition of The Moonstone in three volumes; 500 copies with minimal changes were indeed eventually printed (Gasson, p. 107).

[3125] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 17 NOVEMBER 1868

MS: Lewis.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C5, p. 8.

Very truly yours<sup>3</sup> | Wilkie Collins | November 17th 1868

---

1. Taken from an album apparently owned by Mrs [Elizabeth?] Collinge, dated 1866. A few of the autograph letters were written to Miss Ashby and Miss Facy.

2. The bottom portion of a standard letterhead with mourning border, which Wilkie has completed at the top with a thin black line.

3. A signature for an autograph hunter. Pasted onto a sheet with a contemporary note apparently taken from a biography ‘Wilkie Collins born in London 1824 | Author of “Antonina, or The Fall of Rome” “After Dark” “The Dead Secret” “The Woman in White” &c &c.’

[0858] TO HORACE WIGAN,<sup>1</sup> 25 NOVEMBER 1868<sup>2</sup>

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 123.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>3</sup> | Wednesday November 25th

Dear Wigan,

Have you an empty box, or two places, at The Olympic, tomorrow (Thursday) night? I want to see The Yellow Passport,<sup>4</sup> and to take a friend with me – if there is room for us.

If not, this letter will at any rate serve the purpose of telling you that I have moved from Melcombe Place to Gloucester Place.<sup>5</sup>

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. Horace Wigan (1815/16–85: ODNB), actor-manager who was lessee of the Olympic from 1864 to 1866 and then remained as Webster’s acting manager.
2. Dating from the calendar and the play.
3. This is the earliest example of the Gothic centred half-mourning paper.
4. The Yellow Passport by Henry Neville, the English version of Victor Hugo’s Les Misérables, which opened at the Royal Olympic Theatre on 7 November 1868.
5. WC had moved to Gloucester Place more than a year earlier, in August 1867.

[0859] TO JAMES PAYN, 30 NOVEMBER 1868<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 342 (no year given); BGLL, II, p. 123.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Monday Novr 30th

My dear Payn

I forgot to tell you (when you come tomorrow, Tuesday, at 7) not to trouble to dress.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Possible years at the Gloucester Place address when 30 November fell on a Monday are 1868, 1874 and 1885. The black-edged printed notepaper points unmistakably to November 1868, still less than a year after HC’s death.

[0860] TO FELIX MOSCHELES,<sup>1</sup> 7 DECEMBER 1868

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 123–124.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th December 1868

Dear Mr Moscheles,

I have, unfortunately, a dinner engagement for Friday – and as this dinner is for ½ past 7 there is no hope of my being able to join the Séance. Pray accept my thanks and my excuses.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

I have changed my residence – to the address at the head of this letter.

---

1. The painter – see [0672] and [0729] to him of 10 April 1866 and 20 February 1867, respectively.
 2. Directed: ‘Felix Moscheles Esqr | Cadogan Gardens | Sloane Street | S.W.’, postmarked on the following day.

[0861] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 9 DECEMBER 1868

MS: Texas (W. Collins Misc TA).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 124.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

December 9th 1868 /

---

1. Apparently a dated autograph only, written at the head of a single sheet of blackedged unheaded notepaper.

[0862] TO NINA LEHMANN, 28 DECEMBER 1868

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 119; BGLL, II, p. 124.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 28 Decr 1868

With the greatest pleasure, dearest Padrona! Depend also on my not forgetting the Gin.

I want to take Rudy and Freddy to the Pantomime<sup>1</sup> – and I want you and Fred to come here and bring them to dinner. We will try to get Charley and Katie<sup>2</sup> – and go in a strong body. You shall settle the night and the theatre, on the last day of the old year.

Yours ever | WC

1. Nina Lehmann's two sons.
2. CAC and his wife.

[0863] TO [CHARLES WARD],<sup>1</sup> [APRIL–DECEMBER 1868]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Pembroke, fragment in mirror image only.<sup>3</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 124–125.

... you will allow me, in consideration of cotton and a black silk covering sewn on to my hat) to Gadshill, to stay till Monday and see if the change will do me good generally. I don't believe in short changes of air – but I can but try. When I get back next week you must come and take potluck. I will write and propose a day. In the mean time I wish Jane (and you) well through your [troubles]<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours WC

-
1. The recipient remains conjectural. However, the valediction is one only used by WC with close friends, while the only person referred to as Jane throughout WC's correspondence is Charles Ward's wife.
  2. The dating is also conjectural. The letter cannot date before June 1857 when CD started spending much of his time at Gad's Hill Place and it was only in May 1859 that WC started signing himself 'WC' to Charles Ward – prior to that he only used 'WC' to HC and CAC. WC was a frequent visitor to Gad's Hill Place at least until the mid 1860s, but he did visit afterwards and was there not long before CD's death on 9 June 1870. Crucially, we have taken the phrases 'a black silk covering' and 'see if the change will do me good' to refer to the period of mourning following his mother's death on 19 March 1868 and the period of his own ill health that accompanied it. WC was definitely at Gad's Hill during the summer of 1868 – see [0844] to Doctor de Mussy of 8 July 1868.
  3. The excised second leaf of a sheet of folding notepaper, which retains a mirror impression of the text on one side of the missing leaf. Written on the reverse of the surviving leaf is a note, probably in the hand of Caroline Graves: 'Keates has Read all up to Harley Street days' and may refer to Caroline's reading of WC's letters, possibly after his death.
  4. The reading is uncertain and there are few surviving letters to Charles Ward of around this period to help to elucidate the allusion.

[0864] TO NINA LEHMANN, 3 JANUARY 1869<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 120; BGLL, II, p. 125.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Sunday night

A line, dearest Padrona, to say that I have discovered Fechter's address<sup>2</sup> – and have written to him to say that Annette (the cook) will find you at home any morning, this week.<sup>3</sup> (N.B. you know, as an excellent Christian, that Sunday is the first day of the week).

If I am wrong tell me what mornings will do – and I will send another line to Fechter.

½ past 4 on Saturday. Lord! what good soup that was!

Yours ever affy | WC

-
1. Dating from [0865], the following letter to Nina Lehmann of 4 January 1869.
  2. Charles Fechter, the actor.
  3. Presumably WC was recommending the Lehmanns to take on Fechter's cook on his departure.

[0865] TO NINA LEHMANN, 4 JANUARY 1869<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 125–126.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Monday Jan 4

Dearest Padrona, I have just seen Fechter – he has called here. The great culinary artist is dismissed in disgrace. You must not think of engaging her. She has done all sorts of dreadful things. Alas! such but too frequently is the fatal gift of Genius! I wish I knew of another cook to recommend – but, unless you will take me, I know of nobody. And I am conscious of one serious objection to myself. My style is expensive. I look on meat simply as a material for sauces.

Yours affly | WC

---

1. Dating from the address and calendar, together with Fechter's departure for the United States at the end of 1869.

[0804] TO NINA LEHMAN, 4 JANUARY 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Published: B&C, II, pp. 301–302 (as to Frederick and Nina Lehmann, dated 4 January 1868). Summary: BGLL II pp. 101–102 (dated 4 January 1868), amended A&C5, p. 19.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th Jany 1868<sup>1</sup>

The Collins-Lehmann Correspondence No 3. Lock Fred up – or he will be taking places!<sup>2</sup>

Stop! Stop! Stop! Don't, for God's sake, go to the Pantomime at the Royal Alfred Theatre,<sup>3</sup> before Saturday. I want to take you there. I hear it is a good Pantomime – it is also close by. Dinner on Saturday /punctually/ at five, instead of half past 4.

The Surrey business has broken down – as I guess. A note from The inimitable Reade informs me that he encloses a letter from the manager which “is without a parallel in his (Reade's) experience.” Of course, there is no letter enclosed!!! But I infer that we are treated by this atrocious manager with the utmost contempt. Oh Heavens! have we lived to be rejected by a transpentine Theatre?<sup>4</sup> But, no matter, we gain half an hour, for dinner time on Saturday – and we have only a little distance to go /to the Theatre/ – and we shall do as well in Marylebone as in Surrey – if I am only in time to stop you and Fred from seeing that Pantomime also – without me!

Yours affly | WC

P.S. | The Royal Alfred Theatre is in Church Street, Portman Market. A gorgeous building. Opened by his Royal Highness Prince Alfred in person. There!

---

1. Although WC has dated the letter 4 January 1868, he clearly forgets the New Year. The letter is on the Gothic-headed notepaper with a half-mourning border which was used following HC's death on 19 March 1868.

2. Written above the printed address and referring to the two previous letters to Nina written within 24 hours.

3. The theatre on Church Street, Marylebone, was founded in 1832 as the Royal Pavilion West, and was only known as the Royal Alfred Theatre for a brief period from 1868, after being reopened by the Prince Consort. It tended to specialise in melodrama and pantomime. Advertisements in the Era, the theatrical weekly, show that the pantomime this season was Whittington and His Cat; or Harlequin Zakollum, King of the Cannibal Islands, by Robert Soutar. The play opened on 24 December 1868.

4. In other words, WC and his party (see [0862] to Mrs Lehmann, 28 December 1868) have been refused seats for the performance of Jack and Jill and the Sleeping Beauty; or Harlequin Humpty Dumpty, also by Robert Soutar, and performed at the Surrey Theatre on the unfashionable south side of the Thames. This pantomime opened on 26 December 1868. The reason for Charles Reade's involvement in the business remains unclear. Both the plays in question were reviewed briefly in 'Progress of the Pantomimes', Era, 10 January 1869, p. 11.

[0805] TO T. FULLER MAITLAND,<sup>1</sup> 4 JANUARY 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 102 (dated 4 January 1868), amended A&C5, p. 19.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Jany 4th 1868<sup>2</sup>

Dear Sir,

I beg to enclose a cheque for my Rent to Christmas 1868. Please let me hear that you have received it safely.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

T.F. Maitland Esqre

---

1. Thomas Fuller Maitland (1817–93), barrister of Wargrave, Berkshire (1871 Census), acting as agent for WC's new landlord, Viscount Portman.

2. Although he has dated the letter 4 January 1868, WC clearly forgets the New Year. The letter is on Gothic headed paper with a half-mourning border which was used following HC's death on 19 March 1868. WC's rent for the quarter to Christmas 1868 was due in January 1869 not 1868, and his bank records a payment of £43-17s-6d to T.F. Maitland on 6 January 1869.

[0866] TO CHARLES WARD, 25 JANUARY 1869

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/51). Published: BGLL, II, p. 126.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th Jany 1869

My dear Ward,

Can you find out for me who is now the Keeper of the prints at the British Museum? The Scene Painter at the Adelphi wants some authorities for the scenery of my new play<sup>1</sup> – and I must write to The Keeper of the Prints on the subject.

Yours ever | WC

Another question | Has a sum of £40...- been paid to my credit? also has Benham paid in £45/ from Tinsley? for the Moonstone?<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Referring to Black and White. Following the death of WC's maternal uncle William Hookham Carpenter (1792–1866), George William Reid (1819–87: ODNB) was keeper of the department of prints and drawings at the British Museum until 1883.

2. A payment from Benham of £45 is found on 11 November 1868, but no credit of £40 is recorded around this time (Coutts: WC).

[0867] TO MRS BRINLEY RICHARDS,<sup>1</sup> 27 JANUARY 1869

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 126.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th January 1869

