Dear Mrs Brinley Richards,

I accept your kind invitation for Febry 2nd with the greatest pleasure. It is very good of you to have remembered me – I am persistently conscious that I don't deserve it. But, oh dear! London is so large, and days are so short, and life is so busy.

With kindest regards to Brinley,

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The wife of Brinley Richards (c. 1817–85), musician and composer of vocal music for the piano.

[0868] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 29 JANUARY 1869

MS: BL (Add. 54316, f. 2 16).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 127.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th January 1869

Dear Mrs Frith,

I am afraid I have no choice but to thank you for your kind invitation, and to beg you to accept my excuses. Thursday February 11th, will in all probability find me at Paris, attending the rehearsals of the dramatic “Woman In White”.<sup>2</sup> If there is any change of plans which delays my departure, I will ask your leave to write again – and beg for a corner if there is one left. But if “things remain as they are”, I must console myself as well as I can by drinking your health on the 11th (in the least gouty beverage I can find) on the other side of the Channel.

With my love to Frith

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. A note in an unknown hand on the page to which the MS is attached reads: ‘Given me by Miss F. Frith, 1910’.

2. Referring to Régnier's French adaptation, though WC does not seem to have made the trip to Paris.

[0869] TO JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD,<sup>1</sup> 4 FEBRUARY 1869

MS: Huntington (HM 10784). Published: Hollingshead, II, pp. 8–9; BGLL, II, pp. 127–128.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th February 1869

Dear Hollingshead,

A line to thank you for last night, and to congratulate you on “the show”. It is simply – of its size and class – the most comfortable elegant, and beautifully-decorated Theatre I have ever seen anywhere – the approaches to it (lobbies and so on) a model to all theatres, and the people employed to open boxes and take coats, so unobtrusively useful and civil, that I and my friends walked into “box No 8”, wondering (with our experience of some other Theatres) whether we were awake or dreaming. You have deserved a great public encouragement – and I really believe you may count, in this case, on receiving your deserts.

I will certainly – as soon as my present dramatic occupations give me time – try and think of something for your stage. I fancy I know what you want – a nice little story, bright and lively, to begin at 8 or 8.30 and end at 10. If I find myself dropping salt on the tail of an Idea, you shall hear from me again.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The bohemian journalist to whom WC written on 15 January 1863 ([0516]). In 1865 Hollingshead had started a new career as a theatre manager. On 21 December 1868 he opened the newly built Gaiety Theatre in the Strand: ‘A theatre and restaurant were now first combined in London in one building’, where Hollingshead introduced ‘many innovations, including the system of “No fees,” and inaugurated continual Wednesday and Saturday matinees’ (ODNB).
2. See [0888] to Hollingshead of 24 May 1869.

[0870] TO BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ, 12 FEBRUARY 1869

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 128; Lewis website.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London | February 12th 1869

My Dear Sir,

I thank you very sincerely for the beautiful specimen of German Printing and German Binding which you have so kindly sent to me. You have added one more to the many agreeable associations which I connect with “The Tauchnitz Editions”, in adding your thousandth Volume to my little library.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Baron von Tauchnitz | &c &c &c

-
1. The only known MS letter to Tauchnitz or his son.
2. Tauchnitz’s thousandth volume was the Bible, recorded as published on 11 February 1869. Presentation copies bound in red morocco, all edges gilt, with gilt lettering on the front were sent to various authors including Charlotte M. Yonge (see Todd & Bowden, pp. 187–188). The copy was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 164).

[3380] TO MRS BRINLEY RICHARDS, 13 FEBRUARY 1869

MS: Unknown. On sale (with the Dickens piece mentioned): Gerard A. J. Stodolski Autographs (inventory #221929, abebooks.com, 1 December 2022). Published: A&C14, pp. 11-12.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W.<sup>1</sup>
Feby 13th 1869

Dear Mrs Richards,

Here is a line from The Christmas Carol copied, dated, and signed by Dickens.<sup>2</sup> I shall be “sorting” some old letters before long – and if I find any autographs of “celebrities” you shall have them.<sup>3</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins.

1. Handwritten but on half-mourning paper for his mother's death on 19 March 1868.
2. Accompanied by a small sheet of Gad's Hill headed paper written and signed by Dickens
Saturday Thirteenth February | 1869
"And so, as Tiny Tim observed, God bless us every one!"
Charles Dickens

Described by the American dealer as "The Holy Grail for all Charles Dickens collectors!" and on sale, with WC's 'letter of transmittal', for $75,000.

3. Possibly something she had requested a few days earlier when WC visited her, probably for dinner – see [0867] to Mrs Brinley Richards, 27 January 1869.

[0871] TO EDWARD BENHAM, 21 FEBRUARY 1869

MS: Glasgow (891117/19). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 128–129 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, p. 19.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Sunday, 21st February 1869

My dear Benham,

I find, from Charles Ward, that Tinsley has not paid that money yet.<sup>1</sup> As Tindell tells me – he has twice appointed a day to pay. So here are two failures to pay only £50! This looks curious, to say the least of it.<sup>2</sup>

What do you think of pressing our friend pretty sharply, to pay this debt? I am sorry to bother you when you are so busy – but the matter having been in your hands throughout, I cannot – in justice to you – stir in it myself.

I hope the paper-mill goes on well.<sup>3</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Presumably from the second edition of The Moonstone.

2. Tinsley paid £300 on 3 July 1868 and no other payment is recorded with that name. However, he may have paid through Benham as he had done in an earlier instance – see [0866] to Charles Ward, 25 January 1869.

3. Perhaps a jocular allusion to the work of a busy solicitor's office.

[0872] ELIZABETH BENZON,<sup>1</sup> 26 FEBRUARY 1869

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 319.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>3</sup> | February 26th 1869

Dear Mrs Benzon,

One line (written most unwillingly) to ask you to forgive me if I am absent tomorrow night. My doctor is trying to break me of the habit of drinking laudanum. I am stabbed every night at ten with a sharp-pointed syringe which injects morphia under my skin – and gets me a night's rest without any of the drawbacks of taking opium internally. If I only persevere with this, I am told I shall be able, before long, gradually to diminish the quantity of morphia and the number of the nightly stabbings – and so emancipate myself from opium altogether.<sup>4</sup> I am ashamed to bore you with these trumpery details – but still I mention them to show that I have really no choice but to ask you to accept [del] my excuses for tomorrow night.

I hope you were not the worse for the concert. As for me, Herr Schumann's music, Madame Schumann's playing, and the atmosphere of St James's Hall, are three /such/ afflictions as I never desire to feel again. I think of sending a card to [del] Erard's: – "Mr Collins's compliments, and he would be glad to know how the poor piano is?"<sup>5</sup>

Believe me | Dear Mrs Benzon | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See WC's first surviving letter to her, [0459] 19 February 1862.

2. Directed to 'Mrs Benzon | 10. Kensington Palace Gardens | W.', with postmark 'LONDON-W | FE 26 | 69'.

3. WC uses black-edged printed mourning paper in Gothic type.

4. Not much more than a year later, in his diary entry of 24 July 1870 (Bigelow 1913, IV, pp. 382–383), John Bigelow reported a private conversation with WC as follows: '... I met Wilkie Collins at the table of a common friend. He told me in the course of our conversation that he took an apothecary's spoonful of laudanum every night; that it was all a mistake to say that opium shortened life, it lengthened it, etc. He is a martyr to rheumatism, and it is in this way that he gets sleep. If he did not take his laudanum, he assured me, he could do nothing the following day.' Bigelow adds in a note dating from much later: 'Collins died in the 65th year of his age. How much sooner he would have died or how much longer he might have lived, without his opium, is a secret and likely to remain one.' More generally on WC's recourse to laudanum and morphine, see Peters, pp. 303–304, and Lycett, pp. 296–297.

5. Sébastien Érard (1752–1831), French musical instrument maker specialising in the production of pianos and harps. During the French Revolution he moved the centre of his operations from Paris to London, opening a shop in Great Marlborough Street in 1789. At this time Érard's had long been the dominant piano maker for the concert platform. See Alfred Dolge, Pianos and their Makers (1911), pp. 251–254.

[0873] TO SMITH, ELDER & CO., 27 FEBRUARY 1869

MS: NLS (MS 23180/ 175, 177), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 129–130.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th February 1869

Dear Sirs,

My arrangements with America place a difficulty in the way of my accepting the proposal which you are so good as to make to me, in your letter of yesterday's date.<sup>2</sup>

It seems only a fair return for the liberality and consideration always shown to me by Messrs Harper, of New York (the only American publishers who have paid purchase-money for my novels) that I should give them the opportunity – where any decision of mine is concerned – of securing some commercial interest in the publication of any new edition of my works in America – if, on their side, they think fit to take advantage of it. As the proposed new issue of my books is to compete with the American editions, it is plainly impossible for me to consider, as I wish to consider, the interests of Messrs Harper in this matter.

It is needless to add that you are perfectly at liberty to communicate my letter to the publishers with whom you have been in correspondence. They may possibly be willing – when they are aware of the course which I have here taken – to deal for a smaller supply of copies of my works, drawn from those already-printed sheets which are your property; which are, therefore, not included in the hesitation that I feel as to Messrs Harper; and which I should be glad to know had been profitably disposed of – either in, or out of, America – by your house.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Smith, Elder & Co

1. Directed to 'Messrs Smith Elder & Co | 15. Waterloo Place | S.W.', postmarked 'LONDON W | 7 | MR 1 | 69'.

2. The letter from Smith, Elder has not been traced but clearly concerns a proposed deal with a publisher to bind up the sheets of the Smith, Elder editions of WC's works and market them in the United States. The publishers in question have not been identified.

[0874] TO BENJAMIN WEBSTER, 3 MARCH 1869

MS: Lewis Collection, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 130; Lewis website.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd March 1869

My dear Webster,

I was very sorry to miss you when you called yesterday. I had gone to my lawyer with your son's draft of the agreement. It requires some alterations in form – which will be immediately proposed to your son.

In the meantime, let us consider the substance as agreed on between you and me – and let me hear what I can do towards helping the piece forward on your stage.<sup>2</sup> I expect to see Fechter, here, either tonight or tomorrow – and if you have any letter or message for him, I will take care that he has it.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

Benjamin Webster Esqr

P.S. | Proposed advertisement:

=

In Preparation, a Drama in three acts, by Wilkie Collins and Charles Fechter.

=

N.B. I leave you to do what is necessary about Fechter's re-appearance in the new Drama.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'Benjamin Webster Esqr | Adelphi Theatre | Strand W.C.', postmarked as dated.
2. Black and White, by WC from an idea of Fechter's, opened at the Adelphi on 29 March 1869 and ran for 36 nights until 8 May 1869 (<https://www.umass.edu/AdelphiTheatreCalendar>). See [0879] to Charles Ward, 1 April 1869.
3. Fechter had played Obenreizer in WC's adaptation of No Thoroughfare.

[0875] TO NINA LEHMANN, 11 MARCH 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 121; B&C, II, pp. 319–320.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | 11th March 1869

Dearest Padrona,

I, too, am losing my senses. I protest I don't remember whether I was, or was not, the favoured object of those two invitations. Of course, I shall be delighted to dine with you on Sunday week – the 21st and I will put on my silk stockings, and a new dress shirt, in honour of Saturday<sup>2</sup> – if the rheumatism will only let me put anything on besides a mustard poultice. I am all over pain to-day – obliged to shift the pen from my right hand to my left to get a dip of ink. Fechter is improving. My troubles are “much the same” – nothing settled yet. Keep Easter Monday open – if you can – for the first night.<sup>3</sup> If no new misfortunes overtake us, we hope to produce the piece on that evening.

Yours afftly | WC

My beautiful flower – the sickly man (how appropriate!) – is as beautiful as ever. I water him carefully, every day.<sup>4</sup>

-
1. WC uses black-edged mourning paper with Gothic printed address centred.
  2. In other words, the two invitations must have been for dinner on Sunday, March 21 and a more formal gathering on Saturday, March 13.
  3. Referring to WC's play Black and White, which opened at the Adelphi on Easter Monday, 29 March 1869, written with Charles Fechter, who also played the part of the Count de Layrac.
  4. Presumably a shared pun referring to a cyclamen plant which WC has received from Nina Lehmann.

[0876] TO JAMES PAYN, 21 MARCH 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Summary: B&C, II, p. 320. Published: Coleman, p. 122; BGLL, II, p. 131.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | Sunday March 21st 1869

My dear Payn,

I would have called and talked the American matter over with you, but I too am on the sick list – a cold on the chest, and medical orders to keep to my room.

Write, and make your proposal to “Messrs Harper & Brothers, Publishers, New York. USA.” Offer them – if your forthcoming book begins as a weekly serial – advance sheets of each periodical part, posted from England, week by week, six weeks in advance of the weekly date of publication here. Say that you are introduced to them by me, and – inquire what they will give. I have, thus far, had no American dealings with any other firm, and I can give no better advice than I give here. I have found Harpers very liberal, and thoroughly straightforward people – and I hope you may have the same experience of them.<sup>2</sup>

I, of course, assume that your arrangements with the English periodical leave you free to bargain with America.

Harpers have a monthly magazine<sup>3</sup> – as well as a weekly journal – but I know nothing about the monthly advance. Having sold all my rights to Smith & Elder when I wrote “*Armada*le” for “The Cornhill,” they made the bargain – with Harpers (I think) – on that occasion. The weekly plan is – what I have already explained it to be.

We are hard at work rehearsing at the Adelphi.<sup>4</sup> I believe I caught my cold in the deadly draughts on the stage in the daytime. I hope we shall appear on Easter Monday.

Yours ever | WC

-
1. WC still uses half-mourning paper although his mother’s death was on 19 March 1868.
  2. Payn’s forthcoming novel Bred in the Bone was indeed serialized in Harper’s Weekly from 30 July 1870, a few weeks behind its appearance in Chamber’s Journal. This was to be only the first of many of Payn’s works to be carried by the New York publishers.
  3. Harper’s New Monthly Magazine, first issued in June 1850.
  4. That is, for Black and White, scheduled to open on 29 March – the Easter Monday.

[0877] TO CHARLES WARD, 22 MARCH 1869

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/52). Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 222. Published: B&C, II, p. 321.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | Monday March 22<sup>2</sup>

My dear Ward,

I am confined to the house by a severe cold in the chest.

Is the Jones fund (may “the Lord” soon take her!) paid into my account regularly?<sup>3</sup> I think we arranged to save trouble, that it should be so. Will you look at the “order”-book, and see?

If it only rests with me to decide the matter, pay this pious bitch the two quarters / (Lady Day and Midsummer 1869)/<sup>4</sup> together – so that we may be the longer rid of her. Telling her, at the same time, that it must be distinctly understood that this is not to be drawn into a precedent – and /that/ the next quarterly payment will on no account be [del] remitted, before Michaelmas next.

I enclose a cheque for £25,-,-,- out of which take the Jones money, and expenses of P.O. orders. Can you bring /on your way home,/ or send me the balance, any time before, or on, the 25th. I want the balance for servants’ wages &c &c. I am glad to see you are well enough to be at the Strand again. It is doubtful still when I can get out.

Yours ever | WC

Let me have a line to say you have got this safely – and also to tell me whether ~~Mrs~~ (by the help of the Lord) Mrs Jones’s dividends are [del] now regularly paid to my account only. I don’t want to pay Mrs Jones (and the Lord) out of my own pocket.<sup>5</sup>

P.S. If you think it rash to advance Mrs Jones’s Dividend – then only pay her the quarter. Say I am abroad – or in Abraham’s bosom – and, in the absence of instructions from me, you are compelled to pay as usual. I leave this to your discretion. WC<sup>6</sup>

-
1. WC uses black-edged mourning paper with Gothic printed address.
  2. Dating from the calendar and the mourning stationery.
  3. By the terms of WmC’s will ‘small legacies were left (in a codicil added just before his death)’ to HC’s four sisters, but there was also ‘an annuity to a cousin, Mrs Elizabeth Jones, of the interest on a sum of £700, a provision which was to become a recurrent irritation to Wilkie’ (Peters, p. 73). The sum was invested in Consols and the interest credited to WC’s account every six months on 6 January and 6 July, while WC paid Mrs Jones half that amount every quarter, and £5-5s-9d was paid to her on 23 March.
  4. Such payments were traditionally made on the four English mediaeval ‘Quarter Days’: Lady Day, 25 March; Midsummer’s Day, 24 June; Michaelmas, 29 September; and Christmas Day, 25 December.
  5. The first postscript follows the closure but the final line curls round and is written up WC’s right margin.
  6. WC writes his second postscript on the first page, above and around the printed address. In fact, £5-5s-9d (representing the dividend for a single quarter only) was paid to Mrs Jones on 23 March 1869 (WC: Coutts).

[0878] TO W. P. FRITH, 23 MARCH 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 132.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Tuesday March 23

My dear Frith

The Play starts on Easter Monday night.<sup>1</sup> Can you and Mrs Frith and Miss Frith go? A line to say. I am making my arrangements for admissions and the intricate double question of friends and places is beginning to press for an answer.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

W.P. Frith Esqre RA

I would have called instead of writing. But I have got a cold on the chest, which keeps me to the house.

---

1. Black and White opened at the Adelphi Theatre on Monday 29 March.

[0879] TO CHARLES WARD, 1 APRIL 1869

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/53). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 132–133.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Thursday April 1

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for your note. There was no doubt about the success on Monday night. Every point told – Fechter did wonders – and the reception when I went on the stage at the end, was most enthusiastic<sup>1</sup>

Will you kindly get me – trade-price – the book described on the next leaf? There is no hurry – suit your own convenience. I only mention it now, so as not to forget it.

Yours ever WC

P.S. Carrie brings a cheque to cash.

Annals of Our Time | By Joseph Irving | Macmillan & Co (1 Vol 8<sup>vo</sup>)<sup>2</sup>

---

1. ‘Black and White ... first produced at the Adelphi Theatre on March 29th, with Carlotta Leclercq in the leading woman’s role opposite Fechter’ (Robinson 1951, p. 225). CD ‘wrote to Wills with real pleasure that the first night went brilliantly. “It was more like a fiftieth night than a first. ... There is no doubt that it ought to run, for it has real merit and is most completely and delicately presented”’ (Peters, p. 312).

2. The note is found on the otherwise blank third page of the folding notepaper. The volume in question, first published in 1869, gave a ‘diurnal of events, social and political, which have happened in, or had relation to, the kingdom of Great Britain, from the accession of Queen Victoria to the opening of the present Parliament’. It was not listed among WC’s books at the time of his death (Baker).

[0880] TO JAMES BIRTLES, 2 APRIL 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 133.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | April 2nd 1869

Dear Sir,

You can go to press with “Black and White”, (200 copies) – after first making one final correction – for which see page 46, enclosed.<sup>1</sup> It is quite unnecessary to send me this trifling alteration in Revise.

Yours faithfully | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I keep the Revise you have sent me, to forward to America.

To | Mr Birtles

---

1. The play was printed in fifty-six pages with white paper wrappers by Charles Whiting, Beaufort House, for acting purposes only.

[3087] TO WILLIAM D. BOOTH,<sup>1</sup> 3 APRIL 1869

MS: Parrish (I/91, Reade vs. Roundtable),<sup>2</sup> in an extra-illustrated copy of Charles Reade, Griffith Gaunt (Boston: 1869), along with other letters, clippings, etc., collected by Booth.<sup>3</sup> Published: A&C4, pp. 8–10.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
London. | Saturday April 3rd 1869

Dear Sir,

I send you, as I promised, in my letter of March 30th last,<sup>4</sup> a second copy of “Black and White”, embodying all the latest corrections. This should be the acting copy, if the play is represented in America – the alterations not having been all made in the copy previously sent.

In case of accidents by post, I will briefly recapitulate the points contained in my letter of March 30th.

“Black and White” is offered to any American manager who will undertake to provide for its representation, not only in New York or in any other town in which that manager may have a theatre, but also all over the United States.

A third share of the profits is offered to any manager who accepts the play – on these terms the other two thirds to be taken by the two authors.

This proposal has been made by me to Mr Lester Wallack.<sup>5</sup> I have received no answer. I authorise you to apply for the answer – to arrange the necessary agreements if Mr Wallack accepts – to close the negotiation, to withdraw the piece, and to offer it to any other manager at your own discretion, if Mr Wallack refuses.

To these points, I have only now to add, that since I wrote to you, I have heard from Mr Fechter that he is in treaty for making a professional appearance in New York, in the ensuing autumn, with Mr Tayleure of Pike’s Opera House.<sup>6</sup> It is for you to consider – if the negotiation with Mr Lester Wallack be broken off – whether it is desirable, under the circumstances I have just mentioned, to offer the piece, on the conditions already stated, to Mr Tayleure; informing him, of course, that “Black and White” must be immediately produced, and must not wait the event of Mr Fechter’s possible appearance in the United States. For it seems to be perfectly clear that the authors can only hope to gain anything in America, by acquiring the priority of representation, before pirated versions of “Black and White” may find their way to that country.

You will understand, I hope, that in mentioning Mr Tayleure, I am merely offering a suggestion for you to act on, or not, exactly as you think most desirable. The question of disposing of the play – if Mr Wallack does not accept the terms – remains unreserved at your discretion.

Believe me dear sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W.D. Booth Esqre

---

1. Wall Street lawyer specializing in intellectual property matters – see [0738] to him of 15 April 1867.

2. On half mourning paper.

3. These documents include nine autograph letters addressed to Booth from Charles Reade, plus the following one from Charles Dickens:

Gad’s Hill Place, | Higham by Rochester, Kent
Thursday Twenty Fifth March 1869

My Dear Sir

I beg to acknowledge the safe receipt of your enclosures N<sup>os</sup> 1 and 2; that is to say:

N<sup>o</sup> 1. The papers originally procured while I was in America, since then forwarded to you, and now duly returned to me.

N<sup>o</sup> 2. The final papers disposing of the claim upon me for Income Tax in the States.

I beg you to accept my cordial thanks for your valuable professional and personal services in this matter. I entreat you to believe that I consider the charges very moderate indeed, and that I am in all respects more than satisfied.

Before you receive this, I trust the amount in which I am indebted to you (in point of money) will have been forwarded to you on my account of Mess<sup>rs</sup> Field Osgood and C<sup>o</sup>. I wrote to them a few mails ago begging them to discharge my liability before I knew its amount, because I had the highest confidence in you and wished to avoid a mere dry business spirit.

I notice that you are exactly right in your prediction as to Charles Reade's case, and that you did get a nominal verdict.

Believe me, Dear Sir | Very faithfully yours | Charles Dickens
William D. Booth Esquire

This letter is not found in the Pilgrim edition, which mistakes references to Booth, the Wall Street lawyer, in letters to Fields, Osgood & Co. of 2 March and 9 April 1869 (Pilgrim, XII, pp. 301 & 330) for references to the American actor Edwin Thomas Booth (1833–93: DAB).

4. This letter has not been traced.

5. On Wallack, see [0738] to Booth of 15 April 1867.

6. Samuel N. Pike's Opera House had started up on Broadway in October 1868. However, it reopened as the Grand Opera House on 31 March 1869 under the management of Clifton W. Tayleure (1831–87), dramatist and former actor.

[3088] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 5 APRIL 1869

MS: Unknown. On sale: <www.profilesinhistory.com> (September 2007, no. 23097).<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C4, p. 10.

“– Then I saw the raging sea, and the rollers tumbling in on the sand-bank, and the driven rain sweeping over the waters like a flying garment, and the yellow wilderness of the beach, with one solitary black figure standing on it – the figure of Sergeant Cuff.”<sup>3</sup>

(Copied) From “The Moonstone” | By | Wilkie Collins | April 5th 1869

-
1. Apparently done for an autograph hunter or friend.
  2. Subsequently removed from the website and apparently sold.
  3. From The Moonstone, ch. 19.

[0881] TO EUPHEMIA MILLAIS,<sup>1</sup> 7 APRIL 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 124 (as to ‘Mrs Williams’); BGLL, II, p. 133.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W. | April 7th 1869

Dear Mrs Millais

Here is the Box Ticket, altered for Friday evening next.<sup>2</sup> If there is any difficulty about the alteration – which I don't anticipate – ask for Mr Green<sup>3</sup> and mention my name. I have arranged with Mr Green – if “Box D” should be taken on Friday – that another Box shall be placed at your disposal.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Euphemia (Effie) Chalmers Millais (1828–97), eldest daughter of the Scottish lawyer George Gray of Perth, Scotland, who had married the painter John Everett Millais in July 1855, after the annulment in 1854 of her seven-year marriage to John Ruskin.

2. For Black and White at the Adelphi.

3. Presumably on the staff of the Adelphi – perhaps John ‘Paddy’ Green (1801–74: Boase), actor, singer and theatre manager.

[0882] TO T. H. HILLS, 9 APRIL 1869

MS: Melbourne (M 4278). Published: BGLL, II, p. 134.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | April 9th 1869

My dear Hills,

I should have liked nothing better than to have accepted your kind invitation. But, unhappily, I am not a free man this evening. I can only thank you, and ask you to give me another chance by way of showing that you accept my excuses this time.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

[0883] TO W. COWPER COOPER, 10 APRIL 1869

MS: Unknown. On sale, with envelope: Catalogue of Sophie Dupré, April 2001.

Summary: Autograph envelope front with signed note 'With Mr Wilkie Collins compts ', to W. Cowper Cooper, at 12 Paragon, Clifton, Bristol, together with an original sepia photograph of Collins, showing him head and shoulders, London, 10 April 1869.

[0884] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 24 APRIL 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Published: Robinson 1951, p. 227; B&C, II, p. 322.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Saturday April 24th

My dear Fred,

Thank you, from the bottom of my heart, for your kind letter. No man – whatever his disappointments may be – can consider himself ~~less than~~ other than a fortunate man, when he has got such a friend as you are.

But, for the present, my head is “well above water.” I have few debts unpaid – I have three hundred pounds or so at my bankers – and a thousand pounds in Indian & Russian railways, which I can sell out (if the worst comes to the worst) at a gain instead of a loss. I may also, in a few months, sell another edition of “The Moonstone” (cheap edition) – and get two or three hundred pounds in that way. So, thus far, the money anxieties are not added to the other anxieties which are attacking me. If my health gives way, and my prospects darken as the year goes on – you shall be the first man who knows it. Till then, thank you, most sincerely, once more.

I am coming to take pot-luck on Monday next at 7 – if you and the Padrona have still arranged to dine alone on that day. Don't trouble to write – unless there is an alteration. I am refusing all invitations on the plea of being “out of town.” It is necessary to “lay the keel” of something new – after this disaster – and I am trying to keep myself as quiet as I can.<sup>1</sup>

Yours ever | WC

I shall pay the Arts. Damn the Arts!<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The nature of the ‘disaster’ leading Lehmann to offer to help WC financially is by no means clear. See, for example, the detailed analysis of this letter in Clarke, pp. 119–120, where it is suggested that WC's troubles could have been a combination of: (i) financial losses from the short run of his play Black and White; (ii) his financial relations with Fechter regarding Black and White; (iii) his relationship with Caroline Graves, who had recently left him; and (iv) the pregnancy of Martha Rudd.

2. The reference, on the surface at least, is likely to be to the payment of WC's annual subscription of five guineas to the Arts' Club in Mayfair (see [0648] to Coutts & Co., 16 August 1865).

[0885] TO EDWARD BENHAM, 6 MAY 1869<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/21). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 134–135 (as to Charles Benham), amended A&C6, p. 19.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>2</sup> | Thursday May 6th

My dear Benham,

I have a proposal from Hachette & Co to translate The Moonstone into French.<sup>3</sup> They offer £40/ if the book has been registered in Paris – and £20/ if it has not been registered, seeing that in this latter case, it can be pirated in France – and all I can sell them is my authority to put Author's Edition on their title-page.<sup>4</sup>

I am afraid the book was not registered in Paris. The law there is very vexatious. A book (to preserve copyright) must be registered three months after publication – and then registered again at three months intervals, throughout a year from the period of the first registration. This

Hachette will do for me in the future.

Send me one line to confirm my idea that “The Moonstone” has not been registered in Paris on its publication in book form. So that I may be sure before I answer Hachette. I suppose you have not got any news from Tinsley yet – either as to any more money to be received on account of Second Edition – or as to publication of cheap edition?

Yours ever | WC

-
1. Dating based on the calendar and the reference to The Moonstone. This is the last surviving letter to Benham.
  2. Mourning paper abandoned the printed address is in dark red ink.
  3. In total the Paris publishers issued fourteen Collins titles in translation, the first being The Dead Secret back in 1858, and the second The Moonstone, which was eventually published in 1872 – as La Pierre de Lune, translated by the Countess Gédéon de Clermont-Tonnerre.
  4. WC received only £20 from the French publishers (see [0886] to Charles Ward of 12 May 1869), so it seems that the title had not been registered.

[0886] TO CHARLES WARD, 12 MAY 1869

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/54). Published: BGLL, II, p. 135.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | May 12th 1869

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for your note, informing me of Webster’s last payment.<sup>1</sup> I enclose a crossed cheque for £20...- to be paid to my account as “By Hachette & Co”. One line to say you have got it safely. Yours ever

Wilkie Collins

-
1. A payment for £28-19s-6d was credited to WC’s bank account on 11 May. It was the last of six payments totalling £157-6s-9d for the six week run of Black and White at the Adelphi (Coumts: WC).
  2. The £20 from Hachette was paid to WC’s bank account on 14 May.

[0887] TO JOHN FORSTER, 15 MAY 1869

MS: Yale. Published: B&C, II, pp. 322–323.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | 15th May 1869

My dear Forster,

My heartiest congratulations on the completion of “Landor”,<sup>2</sup> and my best thanks for the copy of the book which you have so kindly sent to me. I shall read it with no common interest and attention – first as coming from you; secondly as saying, what no one else could have said so well, in vindication of Landor’s claims to a great place in English literature. You taught me to understand “Eliot”<sup>3</sup> – and you will find me willing to learn (if I can) to understand “Landor.”

Ever affly Yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. WC uses Gothic printed paper with the address centred.
  2. A marked copy of Forster’s Walter Savage Landor: A Biography (2 vols; Chapman and Hall, 1869) was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 107).
  3. The reference must be to George Eliot, though there is little evidence in the letters of WC’s appreciation of her writing.

[0888] TO JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD, 24 MAY 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 135–136.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 24th May 1869

Dear Hollingshead,

Can you give me an hour, any day this week, after Wednesday next – between 2 and 5. P.M? I will go to you, or you shall come to me – whichever may be most convenient to yourself.

I have an idea of an entirely new Dramatic Story. The first act will be finished tomorrow. The second, and third acts I can tell you in outline. The fourth (and probably last) is still “reserved for consideration”.<sup>1</sup>

I don’t know whether the sort of work which I propose will do for you at “The Gaiety”.<sup>2</sup> At any rate, I propose it to you first. And, from the specimen I can give you, you will be able to decide. The constructive idea of the piece is to mix Comedy and Drama together – not in alternate slices, but so that they shall be really parts of each other.

Send me a line. |Yours truly |Wilkie Collins
John Hollingshead Esqre

---

1. Referring to Man and Wife – as [0889] to Hollingshead of 1 June makes clear, he was to decide to complete the narrative as a novel in the first instance.

2. See [0869] to Hollingshead of 4 February 1869.

[0889] TO JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD, 1 JUNE 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 126–127; BGLL, II, p. 136.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 1st June 1869

My dear Hollingshead,

I can profit by your kind offer to let me see “Columbus” either Monday or Tuesday evening in next week (7th or 8th June.)<sup>1</sup>

As to my piece, I have been making some changes in it (taking out the bed-room-scene for one) – and I have been considering the end. I am not at all sure that it won’t be tragic. – At any rate, it will be strong drama, I suspect, making the flesh of “drawing-room audiences” creep, and the hair of the women (if they have any of their own) stand on end. Under these circumstances, I have decided on trying the story in the book-market as well as on the stage – and its dramatic production is therefore inevitably put off. As a novelist, I can hold my audience, when I have once got them, and lead them (whether they like it or not) to the end. As a dramatist, I am not equally sure of the ground I walk on. Hence my present decision – having regard, of course, to the ticklish nature of my story.<sup>2</sup>

If I get a notion of some lighter piece – all comedy and character – you shall be the first to hear of it.<sup>3</sup>

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Columbus; or, the Original Pitch in a Merry Key, an elegant burlesque by Alfred Thompson which opened at the Gaiety on Monday 17 May 1869, with Nellie Fowler as Columbus, Constance Loseby as Diego, and Emily Fowler as Paraquita, Queen of the Kokatoucans. See the review in the Sunday Times, 23 May 1869, p. 3b.

2. Referring to the narrative and dramatic versions of Man and Wife.

3. WC had originally planned to offer the dramatic version of Man and Wife to the Gaiety – see [0888] to Hollingshead, 24 May 1869.

[0890] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 10 JUNE 1869<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/103). Published: BGLL, II, p. 137.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Thursday June 10

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks for your letter. I have been waiting to write to America until I heard from you. Can you come and take pot-luck on Saturday next (the 12th) at 7? I will have the letter I propose writing to my “legal adviser” in New York ready for you.<sup>2</sup>

If you cannot come on Saturday, will Monday 14th (at 7) do? or Wednesday 16th?

A line to say which of these three days will suit you best – the earlier the better.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

As to Tinsley – he is evidently imbecile. His absurd “proposals” are both refused – and I mean to make arrangements with another publisher for the cheap edition of “The Moonstone”.<sup>3</sup> I also request to know definitely, whether he does, or does not, owe me any money on account of the second Edition?<sup>4</sup>

If you see him, will you kindly tell him this? Or shall I write it to him to save you trouble? Tell me in your letter fixing the day for dining.

-
1. The calendar and the references to the second edition of The Moonstone secure this letter in 1869.
  2. For the details, see [0893] to James T. Fields of 17 June 1869; the American legal adviser was probably the Wall Street copyright lawyer William D. Booth (see [0738] to him of 15 April 1867).
  3. Eventually published by Smith, Elder in 1871, though Tinsley did not give up easily – see to Tindell of 8 May 1870.
  4. After the 1,500 copies of the first edition had sold out (for which WC received £600), Tinsley published a second edition of 500 copies, which should have brought WC a further £200. Somehow, £25 was received from Tinsley more than a year later on this account – see [1032] to Tindell, 22 October 1870.

[0891] TO MARGARET CARPENTER,<sup>1</sup> 14 JUNE 1869

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 137–138; Lewis website.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. <sup>2</sup> | Monday June 14th 1869

Dear Mrs Carpenter,

Thank you, most sincerely, for so kindly thinking of me. The little book will take its place among the relics of my poor dear mother which are now the best treasures that I possess. You could have made me no present that I should have valued so highly as this.

I hear of you often from the Wards, and I hope you are able to enjoy the summer weather which seems to be slowly coming at last. As for me, the gout threatens now and then. But I contrive to walk it off – and I have really little to complain of.

With kind regards | Believe me | most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. My brother is staying with his father-in-law in Kent.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. WC’s aunt, Margaret Carpenter née Geddes (1793–1872), younger sister of HC, a painter who had exhibited at the Royal Academy. Her daughter Jane married Charles Ward.
  2. WC uses headed paper of identical centred Gothic type but in dark blue ink.
  3. That is, CAC, who had married Kate Dickens in 1860, was staying with CD at Gad’s Hill Place, near Rochester.

[3089] TO WILLIAM D. BOOTH, 15 JUNE 1869

MS: Parrish (I/91, Reade vs. Roundtable), in extra-illustrated copy of Charles Reade, Griffith Gaunt (Boston: 1869). Published: A&C4, pp. 11–12.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London | June 15th 1869

My dear Sir,

I duly received your last letter, and communicated it at once to Mr Fechter.<sup>1</sup> You have no doubt heard by this time from Mr Fechter’s agent in London.

Mr Lewis Baker has also written to me on the subject of “Black and White”.<sup>2</sup> I am quite sure the interests of the piece could not have been placed in better hands.

These matters being, so far, disposed of, I have now to ask you certain questions, relating to copyright in America. I may preface these questions by telling you that I am now engaged in drawing the first outlines of a new story – and that this story lends itself equally to development in dramatic form, as a play – and in narrative form, as a novel. I may ultimately write it in both forms – or in either form – and if it comes out as a novel, I may possibly publish it in America, on a plan not hitherto attempted by any English author.<sup>3</sup>

These being the circumstances, here are my questions: –

1. Can an English citizen confer copyright in his book on any American publishers, by any means whatever? – or, to put it still more strongly, by any sacrifice whatever of his interests as an English writer?

2. Can an English citizen confer copyright in America – consistently with taking the following precaution to preserve, at the same time, his copyright in England: –

Precaution (1)

An edition of the Englishman's book – not exceeding twenty copies, such twenty copies to include the copies which the English law requires the author to deposit at the British Museum and at the universities – is published, and sold, in London, simultaneously with the first publication of the same book in America. Assuming that the Englishman can (under any circumstances) confer copyright on the American publishers, would this formal protective edition in London, vitiate the American publisher's copyright in the book?

3. Suppose the precautionary measure attached to question 2 to be abandoned, and suppose the English author protects his copyright in England in the following manner: –

Precaution (2)

The author simultaneously with the writing of the novel, writes a dramatic version of the story. The titles of the novel and of the play are the same, the names of the characters are same, the succession of the principal scenes is the same, and the language used in the dialogue is the same. A few days previously to the publication of the novel in the United States, he either produces the play at a London Theatre, or prints and registers it as his copyright at Stationers' Hall. In either of these cases, if an English publisher re-prints in England the novel published in America only, the author can proceed against him, by English law, for a piracy of the play. Assume such a precautionary measure as this to be taken here, would the taking of it in any way interfere with the interests of the American publisher, or in way [sic] vitiate the copyright conferred on him – if copyright can be conferred on him, by the English writer.

=

These questions will show you what I am driving at. They all amount to this: –

1. Can I confer copyright in my next book, on an American publishers – by consenting to delay the publication of that book in England for a sufficient time to allow of a large American sale?

2. Can I protect my copyright here – in either of the two ways proposed – without sacrificing the American publisher?

3. Can I – if I only take Precaution Number 2 – protect myself by any process known to American law, against importation of American copies of the book into England. By the English law, it is doubtful whether I could protect myself from this, except by taking Precaution number 1.

Please let me hear by return of mail that you have received this letter. I do not of course expect an answer to my questions until you have had due time to consider them – or to suggest some other plan which, in my ignorance of the subject, may not have not [sic] occurred to me.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

W.D. Booth Esqre

---

1. No letter to Fechter has been traced, and the content of the communication remains uncertain.

2. The distinguished New York actor-manager Lewis Baker (1823–73); no New York production of Black and White has been traced.

3. Referring to Man and Wife, published in volume form in both England and the US in mid- 1870.

[0892] To JOSEPH ELLIS,<sup>1</sup> 17 JUNE 1869

MS: Bodleian (MS. Eng. lett. d.275, ff. 132–4), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Extract: Baker 2002, p. 104. Published: BGLL, II, p. 138.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17th June 1869

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my best thanks for the copy of your Poems which you have kind sent to me.<sup>3</sup>

Where my own works are concerned, I am (I hope and believe) a very severe critic – while I am in course of producing them. Where the works of others are concerned, I subside into the infinitely pleasanter character of “the gentle reader”. Speaking in this latter capacity, I may instance “The Dirge of Man” as being, to my mind, one of the most successful among your more ambitious efforts – and “Try Again” as offering a lively and pleasant essay in poetry of the more homely and practical sort.

Wishing your volume every success,

I remain, Dear Sir, | faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

Joseph Ellis Esq

---

1. Joseph Ellis (1815–91), author of several volumes of verse.

2. Directed to ‘Joseph Ellis Esq | Monk’s | Balcombe | Sussex’, postmarked ‘LONDON-W | B 4 | JU 18 | 69’.

3. A copy of Ellis’s Meletae Poems (London: Pickering, 1869) was in WC’s library, lot 92, 20 January 1890 (Puttick and Simpson Catalogue; Baker 2002, pp. 103–104).

[0893] TO JAMES T. FIELDS,<sup>1</sup> 17 JUNE 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 139.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | June 17th 1869

Dear Mr Fields,

I was sorry not to have the pleasure of seeing you before you left London.

My American project must wait until I receive the answer to “a case” submitted to an American lawyer.<sup>2</sup> The two questions – 1st whether I can confer copyright, in any manner whatever, on an American publisher; and, 2nd, whether I can confer copyright, in America, consistently with taking measures to preserve my rights in England – went to an authority in New York by last Tuesday’s mail. And there the matter rests until, in due time, I get my reply.

I shall be delighted to see you when you return to London.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

James T. Fields Esq

---

1. Of the Boston publishers Ticknor & Fields – see [0499] to Fred Lehmann of 13 November 1862.

2. See [3089] to William D. Booth, 15 June 1869.

[0894] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 21 JUNE 1869

MS: Glasgow (891117/49). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 139–140.

90 Gloucester Place | June 21st

My dear Tindell

I return the draft agreement with one or two trifling additions. It will do admirably well. You will find some notes in pencil, relating to two clauses.<sup>1</sup>

Ten thousand thanks for the Trial. It is the very thing I wanted. If your excellent friend can get me a complete copy for myself, (as he kindly proposes to do) it will be an additional obligation – for I can mark my own copy. I will take the greatest care of the borrowed copy.<sup>2</sup>

When I have made my own Trial, I shall be delighted to correct it by reference to the Scotch Criminal Trials at The Law Institution.<sup>3</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. This must be the agreement with Cassell’s for Man and Wife, which was published weekly in Cassell’s Magazine from 20 November – see [0902] to Thomas D. Galpin of 13 August 1869.

2. The specific trial in question remains unidentified.

3. Probably referring to the events in what would become ‘A Scotch Marriage’, ch. 46 of Man and Wife.

[0895] TO [ROSA] BULLAR, 26 JUNE 1869

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 140 (as to Mrs Henry Bullar).

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | London | June 26th 1869

My dear Mrs Bullar

I was very sorry to miss you twice yesterday. I waited at home until nearly seven o’clock – after hearing of your first visit – and then I was obliged to go out, to keep a dinner engagement.

The enclosed letter came here by this morning’s post.

Will you kindly tell Henry,<sup>2</sup> with my love, that I have received his letter, and that I have had no news from the Mesmeric Infirmary.<sup>3</sup>

If you are likely to be in town again pray send me one line beforehand – so that I may make sure of being at home at the right time. I hope and trust you may find some improvement in William on your return.<sup>4</sup>

Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Printed address in blue ink.

2. Her brother-in-law, WC’s old friend and sailing companion – see [0607] to Henry Bullar of 8 December 1864.

3. The Mesmeric Infirmary was founded by Dr John Elliotson in 1849 ‘for the treatment of Epilepsy, Deafness, Rheumatism, and other diseases in which the ordinary means have failed’. By 1869 it was at 36 Weymouth Street, Portland Place, under the charge of Thomas Chandler, MRCS. We cannot identify which if any of the Bullar brothers might have been treated at Chandler’s establishment, though none of them was in good health.

4. In fact William Bullar was to pass away on 29 August 1869, only a few months after Joseph Bullar (who died on 18 May 1869). Back in 1867 Rosa had lost her husband John, the eldest brother, while Henry was to die suddenly in early 1870.

[0896] TO STRAHAN & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 8 JULY 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 140–141.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | July 8th 1869

Gentlemen,

You will receive with this note a short series of papers, illustrated by drawings. The papers are written, and the illustrations are drawn, by my brother – Mr Charles Collins – whom I now beg to introduce to you.

The papers and the illustrations are offered for publication in “Good Words”. I am sure my brother may count on a fair consideration being given to the work thus presented to you, and in your informing him whether he can – or can not – be received on the list of your contributors.<sup>2</sup>

I remain, Gentlemen, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Strahan & Co

---

1. Evangelical publishing firm founded in 1859 by Alexander Strahan (c. 1834– 1914), especially known for its periodicals, Good Words, Argosy and the Contemporary Review. WC had initially been offered the editorship of Argosy – see [0516] to John Hollingshead of 15 January 1863.

2. No material by CAC seems in fact to have appeared in Good Words.

[3090] TO WILLIAM D. BOOTH, 14 JULY 1869

MS: Parrish (I/91, Reade vs. Roundtable), in extra-illustrated copy of Charles Reade, Griffith Gaunt (Boston: 1869). Published: A&C4, pp. 14–15.

Private

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London | July 14th 1869

My dear Sir,

I am much obliged to you for your prompt answer to my questions relating to copyright in America.

If your ingenuity and experience should succeed in finding some equivalent for the American copyright, it may not be amiss for me to tell you, in the meantime, how I stand towards American publishers – whose cooperation in this matter may be of some importance to us, if we can get it.

I have hitherto (like other English writers) only secured from America the sums paid me for advance-sheets of my novels during their first periodical publication. My dealings have hitherto been exclusively with Messrs Harper – who have treated me with great kindness and liberality.

Some months since, personal application was made to me by Messrs Appleton, and again by Messrs Putnam for the advance-sheets of my next work. I informed them 1st – that I had no work then ready and could only undertake to bear in mind, in the future, that they had applied to me. 2<sup>ndly</sup> that, in the event of any future dealings, I should feel it due to Messrs Harper to tell them of the application made to me, and to accept Messrs Harper's proposal, in the event of its reaching the same amount as the amount that might be offered by their rival Firms. On the other hand, if either of the rival Firms happened to offer more than Messrs Harper, I should, in justice to myself, accept that offer. There, the matter ended – and thus I stand towards the principal publishing houses of New York.<sup>1</sup>

In this position – with a large American circulation of my works, and a “brisk demand” for them among American publishers – I want to do two things, if I can: – In the interests of my art, to help (so far as one man may) in pressing the question of international copyright with England, on the notice of the American government. And, again, in my own interests, to receive a far larger share than I have ever received yet – or than I could possibly receive for advance-sheets only – of the sum which a new book of mine may gain, on its publication in America. To achieve this object, I am willing to address my next novel exclusively to American readers, (in the first instance) – and to publish it exclusively in America (in the first instance) – preserving my copyright here by one or other of the means which I have already stated to you; and preventing the publication of my book in England, during a sufficiently long period to allow of a remunerative sale to both author and publisher, in America.

I must apologise for inflicting this long letter on you. But, in the aspect which the matter now assumes, it seems desirable that you should know my views and motives as well as I know them myself.

I may add that the new story which I am now putting together, will lend itself to development in the dramatic form quite as well as in the novel-form. And unless I have the prospect of a far larger return than I have ever received yet from my popularity with American readers, it is quite possible that I may present the story, this time, in the dramatic form only. There is less labour to writing in that form – (and this is, of itself, a consideration with me, in the present circumstances of my health) – and there is in England, under existing circumstances, a larger pecuniary return for a successful play than for a successful novel. This latter fact will help you to understand the apparently-exaggerated importance which I attach, on the present occasion, to my American market.

You have now, my dear sir, all the help that I can give you towards considering this question of an equivalent for the American copyright – so far as I am concerned in it. I shall await your next letter, during the summer vacation with great interest.

Believe me | Truly yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Wm. D. Booth Esqre

---

1. See [0900] to Harper & Brothers and [0901] to G.P. Putnam, both of 10 August 1869.

[0897] TO J. C. PARKINSON,<sup>1</sup> 17 JULY 1869

MS: Private. Published: B&C, II, pp. 323–324.

Woodlands | Southwood Lane | Highgate | N<sup>2</sup> | Saturday 17th July 1869

My Dear Parkinson,

Here – at last – are some of my questions on the matter of physical education.

I have been waiting to get to a point in my proposed story,<sup>3</sup> at which my inquiries would naturally suggest themselves, and would grow out of the necessities of my work.

1. What is the average length of time occupied in training for a boarace? Also, for running races, and leaping races?

2. In these two latter cases – the running and the leaping – does the University student in Athletics come into contact with a low order of man acting as trainer or instructor? In the matter of rowing, I understand him to be trained and instructed by his equals in the university. Is this the case with other athletic accomplishments? In other words, does physical education, in any of its branches, lead to degrading social associations, by necessitating a low order of professional instructor?

3. If I suppose a young man of three or four and twenty to have trained for the university boat race – to have also trained (later in the same year) for [del] athletic sports – and to be in course of training (for the third time) for the next year’s anniversary boat-race – would such excess of training be amply sufficient to account for his breaking down, and dying, under the effects of the third in this series of trainings? Again, would this be an exaggerated case to take? and would a smaller number of trainings be sufficient to justify the break-down?

4. Can you furnish me with any slang expressions of the Muscular School (like the “three belts of muscle”, for instance) which would be likely to be spoken, at a country house, in a mixed assembly of Ladies and Gentlemen?

=

These are, for the present, all the questions I need trouble you with. Answer them entirely at your convenience. I am staying here with some friends – and shall not be in town for more than a day at a time – until the 27th of this month. Then I return to London – where my address is: – 90, Gloucester Place, Portman Square. W. If you are in town also at that time I suggest your giving me two or three days notice and choosing your own day to come and dine with me one evening – where we can talk things over, and make far more progress than we could make by corresponding.

If any more questions turn up between this and then, I shall send them without standing on ceremony – and I thank you beforehand for helping me to illustrations of character which are especially needful to such a design as I have in view.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

J.C. Parkinson Esqre

I am writing, within hearing of that form of cultivation of the national stupidity called Croquet – and I hope (but am by no means sure) that I have made myself intelligible.

---

1. Joseph Charles Parkinson (1833–1908), journalist, civil servant, and social reformer, who contributed regularly to All The Year Round, among other periodicals.

2. Printed stationery with Lehmann’s monogram.

3. WC was writing Man and Wife with its satire on the cult of athleticism, ‘affectionately dedicated’ to Fred and Nina Lehmann in whose house much of the composition of the novel took place.

[0898] TO J. C. PARKINSON, 21 JULY 1869

MS: Private. Published: B&C, II, pp. 324–325.

Woodlands | Southwood Lane | Highgate | N<sup>1</sup> | July 21st 1869

My Dear Parkinson,

A thousand thanks for your assistance – so speedily rendered, and so valuable to me in every way. I am putting my story together (this time) in the dramatic form first – and I shall forthwith incorporate your information with my “scenario” of the third act – and set to work on my return to town.<sup>2</sup> It will exactly fit what I have done thus far, to make my man one of the “showy” sort. When I have done the third act, I shall ask you to look at the piece – and make your remarks and corrections on the blank page. All details are acceptable – I can put anything into the peoples’ mouths that is necessary – having a whole stage full of characters grouped for that purpose in the third act, and having also (as I hope) fixed the public attention by a strong story developed in the two first acts.

Don’t forget that any day after the 27th which will suit you will do for me. And so, thank you again,

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Printed stationery with Lehmann’s monogram.

2. The stage version of Man and Wife.

[0899] TO THOMAS D. GALPIN,<sup>1</sup> 10 AUGUST 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/1).<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 128; BGLL, II, p. 141–142.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | August 10th 1869

My dear Sir,

I am much obliged to you for your note.

I am, I assure you, sincerely anxious on my side to bring this matter to a conclusion. I have begun the story – and these business difficulties only distract my mind from it, and delay my progress

During the next day or two, I will give my best consideration to the suggestion which you make in relation to Cassell’s Magazine – with a view to reconciling your interests and mine in this matter, before I hear from America. You shall be informed of the result, this week.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Thomas D. Galpin Esqre

---

1. Thomas Dixon Galpin (b. 1828), partner in the publishing firm of Cassell, Petter & Galpin, of Belle Sauvage, Ludgate Hill. Man and Wife was serialized in Cassell’s Magazine in 37 weekly parts from 30 November 1869 to 30 July 1870.

2. As with most letters to Cassell’s, the receipt of this one is indicated by an endorsement: ‘1280 | Wilkie Collins | 10 Aug<sup>t</sup> 1869’.

3. Galpin’s note concerned the American circulation of Cassell’s Magazine and a potential conflict of interest with the American serial publisher – see the letter of the same date to Harper’s. Man and Wife eventually appeared in Harper’s Weekly from 11 December 1869 to 6 August 1870, though at this point both Putnam’s and Appleton’s were still potential publishers.

[0900] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 10 AUGUST 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with attached statement. Published: Coleman, pp. 129–132; BGLL, II, p. 142–144.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London August 10th 1869

Private

Dear Sirs,

I enclose a statement, relating to a new work of fiction on which I am now engaged, and to the sale of the advance-sheets to America.<sup>1</sup>

I may add to the statement that I have it in contemplation to publish the new work here periodically, in “Cassell’s Magazine”.<sup>2</sup> As this Magazine is published in New York as well as in London, I want also to inform you that I have received a letter from Mr Galpin (of the firm of Cassell, Petter, and Galpin) containing the following passage: –

“We will undertake to give your American publishers the full period of their priority, and will delay our issue there until the stipulated time after the date at which they ought to publish their weekly number.”

If you favour me with a proposal for my advance-sheets, I must request you – in order to save time and correspondence – to inform me:

1st. What sum you offer – in accordance with the terms mentioned in the enclosed statement – for the advance-sheets, without any reference to the periodical in which it is proposed the story shall appear in England. In brief, I wish to know the value which you place upon the story, on its own merits, as a marketable commodity in America.<sup>3</sup>

2<sup>ndly</sup>. What objection you have – if any – to the plan proposed by Mr Galpin for guarding your interests, supposing the story to appear here in “Cassell’s Magazine”.

3<sup>rdly</sup>. What plan you can yourselves suggest for guarding your interests, in the above event, and removing your objections – if these objections exist.

Thus much for the business part of my letter. What follows is addressed to you as a personal and private matter.

Some months since, Messrs Appleton and Messrs Putnam applied to me personally for permission to make me a proposal for my next advance-sheets. It was, of course, impossible for me, as a matter of courtesy, to decline granting this request. At the same time, I stipulated that you should know of it, when I gave them their opportunity, and that there should be no concealments in the matter – except as regarded any proposals made to me, which, under existing circumstances, I should consider myself bound to receive as strictly confidential. They acceded to these stipulations – and the statement which I now send to you, has gone also to Messrs Appleton and Messrs Putnam with the necessary explanations attached to it.<sup>4</sup>

It is needless for me to say – but to avoid all misunderstanding I will say – that I am personally sincerely anxious that [blot] our literary relations should continue – and that it will be a relief to me to find that any difference between the proposal I may receive from you, and the proposals which I may receive from the other Firms, will be so trifling as to ~~leav~~ raise no obstacle to my taking the course which I should honestly prefer to take, and closing with your offer. I have tried to do justice to you, to myself, and to others who made an appeal to my courtesy which demanded a courteous return.

Believe me | Dear Sirs | Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Harper & Brothers

1. The following statement, in the hand of Carrie Graves, is also found at Texas:

Statement

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London. August. 10. 1869

M<sup>r</sup> Wilkie Collins’s new novel.

1. Mr Collins has in preparation, a new story.
2. The period of the story, is the present time.
3. The length of the story will equal the length of “the Moonstone” – and may possibly exceed it, and reach to the length of “The Woman in White”.
4. The story will be first published in England, in a weekly periodical. The first weekly part is, at present, intended to be published in November next.
5. Mr Collins offers advance-sheets of this story, to be sent in duplicate to America, six weeks in advance of each weekly date of publication in England. The first weekly part to be published in America on the same day, as the day fixed for publication in England and the remaining weekly parts to follow the periodical publication in England.
6. The American publisher is requested to inform M<sup>r</sup> Collins (by return mail if possible) what sum he offers for the purchase of the advance-sheets thus supplied. The sum to be stated in pounds sterling, English currency.

7. In the event of the proposal being accepted – it is to be understood between the parties, that the sum offered is to be paid to M<sup>r</sup> Collins in three instalments as follows: – a first third of the sum on receipt for the first third of the story in Mss or in proof. Another third, on receipt of another third of the story. A last third, on receipt of the remainder of the story to the end.

2. Man and Wife, serialized from 20 November 1869 to 30 July 1870 in Cassell's Magazine.

3. Harper offered £750 for the advance sheets (see [0907] to Harper & Brothers, 7 September 1869) and the novel was serialized from 20 November 1869 to 6 August 1870 in Harper's Weekly, and was published as a single volume from the New York house on 13 July 1870.

4. See [0901] to George Putnam of the same date – the parallel letter to Appleton's seems not to have survived. In any case, agreement was reached promptly with Harper's.

[0901] TO G. P. PUTNAM,<sup>1</sup> 10 AUGUST 1869

MS: Putnam (CO 685: Folder 49),<sup>2</sup> with attached statement. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 144–145.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London August 10. 1869

Dear Sir,

You did me the favour of calling here some months since, and of requesting that I would give you the opportunity of making me a proposal for the advance-sheets of my next work of fiction.

I undertook to comply with the request, on condition that I should give Messrs Harper – hitherto my American publishers – the same opportunity at the same time. That I should give any other publishers applying to me the same opportunity. That I should frankly state my position in the matter to each publishing house. And that I should consider any proposals made to me, under those circumstances, as strictly confidential.

In redemption of these pledges, I now enclose a statement containing the necessary information relating to my forthcoming work of fiction.<sup>3</sup> The mail which takes this, takes copies of the statement to Messrs Harper – and to Mess<sup>rs</sup> Appleton, who have also applied to me.

I may add to the statement that I have it in contemplation to publish the work here, periodically, in “Cassell's Magazine”. As this Magazine is published in New York as well as in London, I ought also to inform you that I have received a letter from M<sup>r</sup> Galpin (of the firm of Cassell, Petter, and Galpin.) containing the following passage: – “We will undertake to give your American publishers the full period of their priority, and will delay our issue there until the stipulated time after the date at which they ought to publish their weekly number”.

If you favour me with a proposal for my advance-sheets, I must request you – in order to save time and correspondence – to inform me: –

1st. What sum you offer – in accordance with the terms mentioned in the enclosed statement. – for the advance-sheets – without any reference to the periodical in which it is proposed that the story shall appear in England. In brief, I wish to know the value which you place on the story, on its own merits, as a marketable commodity in America.

2<sup>ndly</sup>. What objections you have – if any – to the plan proposed by M<sup>r</sup> Galpin for guarding your interests, supposing the story to appear here in “Cassell's Magazine”

3<sup>rdly</sup>. What plan you can yourself suggest for guarding your interests, in the above event, and removing your objections – if those objections exist.

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To G. P. Putnam Esq<sup>re</sup> | Messrs Putnam & Son | Broadway

1. George Palmer Putnam (1814–72), whose New York publishing house was founded in 1841.

2. In Carrie Graves's hand, signed by WC.

3. The statement written in Carrie's hand is found at Putnam. With only the most minor of variants it is identical to that attached to the letter to Harper's of the same date. See above.

[0902] TO THOMAS D. GALPIN, 13 AUGUST 1869

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 13th August 1869

My dear Sir,

My solicitors (Messrs Benham and Tindell) will send you, this evening, a draft of agreement between us, relating to the publication of the story which I am now writing, in Cassell's Magazine<sup>1</sup>

You will notice a clause referring to the advance-sheets which I sell to America. I have endeavoured, in this clause, to suit your convenience in the matter of immediately concluding our negotiation – without sacrificing my own interests. The concessions you are willing to make, in respect to your publication to the United States, appear, to my mind, to be perfectly liberal, and to meet all the necessities of the case. But it is clearly impossible for me to answer for the view which the American publishers may take of these concessions, before I have received their ~~answers~~ replies to my letters – posted on Tuesday last. Hence the necessity – if we are to sign our agreement at once – of my having some guarantee against my being a loser (so far as the United States are concerned) through the publication of my Story in your Magazine, in New York.

Believe me, | my dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Thos D. Galpin Esqre

---

1. Man and Wife.

[0903] TO W. P. FRITH, 16 AUGUST 1869

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16th August 1869

My dear Frith,

I must ask you to accept my excuses (and to make them to Mrs Frith) for my absence from the party, the other night. The truth is – that I am putting a new story together,<sup>1</sup> and I worked so late on the night of the party, that I was fit for nothing but to go to bed. I can only congratulate you on your daughter's marriage in this way – and I hardly know whether you are yet sufficiently reconciled to the loss of her from the house to receive congratulations with any sort of patience. There is a sad side to these “happy occasions” – from the point of view of the father and mother. And even to me – as a looker-on – there is another sound in the “marriage-bells” besides the “merriment” which tradition associates with them.<sup>2</sup>

This said, I have a question to ask next. I hear that Mr Southern (the actor) is away abroad.<sup>3</sup> Do you know when he will be back? And, if you do, will you send me one line to inform me? I have discovered a young lady – who has, as I think, a vocation for the stage. Mrs John Wood (who is about to open St James's Theatre)<sup>4</sup> has seen her, and agrees with me. We want to try, if we can, to gain her admission to a “provincial” company which (I am told) Mr Southern is to direct this autumn. I have promised to write to him, and see what can be done – and to let Mrs Wood know when he will be back. There is the motive of my question.

With kind remembrances at home.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

I stay in town – all this month – to work without interruption. If I leave my desk I become an idle man immediately.

I suppose you are out of town. So I put “to be forwarded” on the envelope.<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Man and Wife.

2. On 10 August 1869 at All Saints' Church, Kensington, Frith's second daughter, Jane Ellen (1847–1923), married James Albert Panton (1841–1921), then a brewer at Wareham, Dorset. As Mrs J. E. Panton, she later became well known as a journalist and novelist (Sutherland).

3. For Edward Askew Sothorn (1826–81: ODNB), actor, who went to America from 1874 to 1877.

4. Mrs John Wood took over St James's Theatre on 16 October 1869. Her revival of She Stoops to Conquer ran for over a hundred performances.

5. Second postscript written above the printed address on the first page.

[0904] TO THOMAS D. GALPIN, 17 AUGUST 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/4). Published: Coleman, pp. 134–135; BGLL, II, pp. 147–148.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. August 16 17th 1869

My dear Sirs,

I have seen the altered agreement.<sup>1</sup> The changes made have my entire concurrence – and I am ready to sign the document as soon as the fair copy is made.

Pray accept my thanks for the liberal concession in regard to the American publication of the Magazine. I shall certainly not think of taking advantage of it – unless the demands of the American publishers obliged me to do so as a necessary condition of coming to terms.

With regard to the other point – which precludes you from making any alteration in my Mss or proofs – it is simply impossible for me to write the story on any other terms. I will at all times readily receive, and consider, any suggestions which the proprietors of the Magazine are disposed to offer to me. But I must, at the same time, frankly tell you that I reserve to myself the sole right of deciding whether I do, or do not, avail myself of the suggestions. In stipulating that the final revise of each weekly part shall go to press, without the slightest alteration being made in it by any other person, I am only claiming a privilege which has been already accorded to me by Mr Dickens in “All The Year Round” and by the Proprietors of The Cornhill Magazine. You will, I am sure, see the necessity of leaving me to be the sole judge of what is right in this matter, when I remind you that mine is the only hand which holds the threads of the story, and mine are the only eyes which see it as one complete whole – while others merely see it as a succession of parts.<sup>2</sup>

Wishing you a pleasant trip in Switzerland,

I remain | My dear Sir | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Thos D. Galpin Esqre

---

1. For Man and Wife.

2. The question of editorial alterations quickly became an issue – see [0912] to Cassell, Petter & Galpin of 25 September 1869.

[0905] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 24 AUGUST 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/3). Published: Coleman, p. 136; BGLL, II, p. 148.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | August 24th 1869

Dear Sirs,

Pray accept my thanks for the trouble you have kindly taken, in reference to the advance-sheets of my new novel, and for the communication of the telegram received from your Agent.

I found it necessary – in justice to Messrs Harper (who have hitherto been my American publishers), and in justice to two other publishers of New York who had personally requested me to give them an opportunity of making me an offer for my next book – to write myself to America, informing these three publishing houses that I was about to write a new serial story, and requesting that they would send me, by return of mail, any proposals which they might have to make for it.<sup>1</sup> Under these circumstances, it is of course impossible for me to give any instructions to your agent (through your kind intervention), until I have received answers from the publishers who have established a special claim on me to be allowed the refusal of my book.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell, Petter & Galpin

1. Putnam's and Appleton's were the two other publishers in question – see [0900] to Harper's of 10 August 1869.

[0906] TO GENERAL JOHN ADAMS DIX,<sup>1</sup> 6 SEPTEMBER 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 148–149.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

London 6th September 1869

My dear sir,

So long a time has passed since I had the pleasure of corresponding with you, and since you did me the honour of sending me your translation of “Dies Irae”,<sup>2</sup> that I stand almost in need of another introduction to you. I had hoped to have made it a personal introduction this time. But I am writing a new work of fiction, and I must lose the opportunity of accompanying, as travelling companion, an old and dear friend of mine who is about to visit the United States. Will you let me recal myself to your recollection, and send you my best wishes and remembrances, through the friend to whom I have alluded – Mr Frederick Lehmann? He will send you this letter, and, if he has the opportunity of seeing you, he will be the best representative I could possibly wish to have, until I am able to cross the Atlantic and speak for myself.

Believe me, | My dear Sir, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | General Dix

---

1. General John Adams Dix (1798–1879), war veteran, military officer and government official.

2. Dix translated the medieval hymn during his time fighting in the American Civil War. His preface to the first published version was dated 17 June 1863, though he subsequently revised it. See Scribner's Monthly, 11 (April 1876), pp. 797–799.

[0907] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 7 SEPTEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/5). Published: Coleman, p. 137; BGLL, II, p. 149.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | September 7th 1869

Dear Sirs,

I have heard from America, and have closed with a proposal made to me by Messrs Harper – my regular publishers in ~~America~~ the United States.<sup>1</sup>

As regards the publication of “Cassell's Magazine” in New York, Messrs Harper write: – “We should like it understood that we may issue our instalments a week in advance of the appearance in this country” (i.e. in America) “of the same instalments in ‘Cassell's Magazine’.”

After what Mr Galpin has been so good as to write to me, in relation to the American issue of your Magazine, I assume that there will be no difficulty in your meeting Messrs Harper's views.

When you write to your Agent in New York, it will be adding to my obligations to your kindness if you will ask him to inform you, in his next letter, of what was the highest bona fide offer made to him for my advance-sheets, and of the name of the house which made the offer.<sup>2</sup>

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

---

1. See [0908] to Harper & Brothers of the same date.

2. Cassell's New York agent has not been identified.

[0908] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 7 SEPTEMBER 1869

MS: Wolff Collection (1364a).<sup>1</sup> Published: Wolff, p. 264; BGLL, II, pp. 150–151.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London | Tuesday. September 7th 1869.

Dear Sirs,

I have received your letter, and the duplicates. I am sincerely sensible, I assure you, of the frank manner in which you have met my views, and of the liberal terms on which you propose to remit to me the sum offered (£750.-.-) seven hundred and fifty pounds – for the purchase of my advance sheets.<sup>2</sup> On my side I do not hesitate at once to accept your proposal, on the conditions stated in your letter – thus renewing (and renewing with sincere pleasure) the literary relations which have now existed between us for some years.

As to the question of competition, it has not caused me the slightest difficulty.<sup>3</sup> Mess<sup>rs</sup> Appleton – after specially requesting me to give them an opportunity of making me a proposal – now decline to take the opportunity, and refrain from making me any proposal at all, in courtesy to the existing relations between your Firm and myself. If they had only known their own minds when their representative applied to me here, they would have saved me the trouble of writing a letter. And that is all I have to say about Mess<sup>rs</sup> Appleton.

Mess<sup>rs</sup> Putnam make a proposal – but it is saddled with conditions of such a nature as would have decided me – under any circumstances – to do, what I have done, viz: – to thank them and say No.

I have also heard through Mess<sup>rs</sup> Cassell's agent in New York – of offers obtained by him (or of offers which he expected to obtain) I am not sure which – the names of the Firms not being mentioned. In order that we may clear up all uncertainty in this direction, I have requested Mess<sup>rs</sup> Cassell & Co to inquire of their agent what was the highest bona fide offer that he actually received, and what was the name of the Firm making the proposal.<sup>4</sup> If it is necessary to trouble you again on this part of the subject, whatever information may be received by me, shall of course be transmitted to you. In the meantime you now know all that I know myself in relation to the proposals made in other quarters for my advance sheets.

I have only to add that Mess<sup>rs</sup> Cassell have expressed their willingness to take any course, in regard to the issue of the story in their Magazine in New York, which I may propose to them, on behalf of my American publishers. I have written to-day to inform them of your wishes – and I entertain no doubt that you will find them perfectly ready to issue their instalments a week after yours, as you propose.<sup>5</sup>

I remain | Dear Sirs | Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

-
1. In the hand of WC's amanuensis, Carrie Graves, with only the signature and addressee line added in WC's hand.
  2. Harper's had stated that if WC received a higher American offer than theirs 'from any responsible house, from whom you are sure of getting your money', they would match it (Robinson 1951, pp. 231–232).
  3. See the letters to Harper's and George Putnam of 10 August 1869 – [0900] and [0901].
  4. See [0899] to Thomas D. Galpin of the same date.
  5. In the event, Man and Wife ran in Harper's Weekly for thirty-eight weeks from 20 November 1869 to 6 August 1870 following the divisions in Cassell's Magazine, but with the last episode split so that the American serialization ended a week later.

[0909] To J. C. PARKINSON, 15 SEPTEMBER 1869

MS: Private. Published: B&C, II, p. 325.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | September 15th

My dear Parkinson,

The human element complicates matters. I don't feel so sure. But here go the titles as they occur to me.<sup>2</sup>

1. Studies From The Life.
2. From The Life.
3. Ourselves.
4. You and I.

(N.B. These two last (3 & 4) mean everything under the sun. Number 4, strikes me as best.)

5. Light Reading.

6. Persons and Places.

No 6. does'nt seem bad. And your own title "This and That" – is – as I think a good one.

Let me ~~here~~ /hear/ if this note helps to decide you. If not, I'll try again.

Yours ever | WC

P.S. | On looking at your letter again, I find your title is "Here and There". Add "This and That" to my contributions. "Here and There" is quite as good.

Keep the titles you don't use. They may come in useful for you or for me.

Excuse incoherence | I have just | done work.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper.

2. In the event, Parkinson's collection of articles, reprinted mainly from the Daily News and All the Year Round, was entitled, Places and People: Being Studies from the Life (1869).

3. WC's three postscripts are all written independently on the otherwise blank third page of the folding notepaper.

[0910] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 21 SEPTEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/6). Published: Coleman, p. 138; BGLL, II, p. 151–152.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Sept 21st 1869

Dear Sirs,

I am much obliged to you for your kind note. I had not seen the paragraph – but it is quite needless to say (if I had seen it) I should never have suffered such a piece of officious impertinence to have been published with the sanction or knowledge of your Firm.<sup>1</sup>

The announcement of the fact of my being engaged on the story I saw in The Echo – and thought it well-timed and well-made.<sup>2</sup> – In spite of the recent damp weather – which has been very trying to my rheumatic constitution – I am finishing the seventh weekly part. The first five parts are in your printers' hands – and the sixth will be sent to them tomorrow.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

---

1. The paragraph in question has not been located.

2. The Echo was the halfpenny London evening paper founded by Cassell's the previous year, to which WC became a subscriber – see [1021] of 8 September 1870. The announcement in question appeared in the column 'Art and Literary Gossip' in the issue of Saturday 18 September 1869, p. 5a: 'Mr. WILKIE COLLINS is engaged on a story which is intended for successive numbers of Cassell's Magazine'.

[0911] TO THE EDITOR OF CASSELL'S MAGAZINE, 22 SEPTEMBER 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11, formerly laid in Man and Wife (1870), I), note on inside flap of blue envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Parrish & Miller, p. 79; BGLL, II, p. 152.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | September 22nd 1869

Dear Sir,

I enclose copy for Sixth Weekly Part of "Man And Wife".<sup>2</sup> As I send it by post, please let me have one line to say you have received it safely.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

I have recd your acknowledgment of receipt of five first weekly parts. Many thanks.

---

1. Signed and directed to 'The Editor | Cassell's Magazine | Messrs Cassell, Petter & Galpin | La Belle Sauvage | Ludgate Hill | E.C.', postmarked as dated.

2. Published in issue of 25 December 1869.

[0912] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 25 SEPTEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/7). Published: Robinson 1951, p. 211; Coleman, p. 139; BGLL, II, pp. 152–153.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Sept 25th 1869

Dear Sirs,

The expletive is not essentially necessary at the place which you point out to me – and I am very ready to make what concessions I can to your ideas of what is due to your constituency, at the outset of our literary connection. The objectionable “damn it” shall therefore disappear.<sup>1</sup>

But I must at the same time beg that this concession may not be construed into a precedent. Readers who object to expletives in books, are – as to my experience – readers who object to a great many other things in books, which they are too stupid to understand. It is quite possible that your peculiar constituency may take exception to things to come in my story, which are essential to the development of character, or which are connected with a much higher and ~~longer~~ larger moral point of view than they are capable of taking themselves. In these cases, I am afraid you will find me deaf to all remonstrances – in those best interests of the independence of literature which are your interests (properly understood) as well as mine.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell, Petter & Galpin

---

1. WC had previously inserted a clause in the serial publishing contract for Man and Wife preventing the publishers from making such editorial changes without the author’s consent – see [0902] to Thomas D. Galpin of 17 August.

[3091] TO WILLIAM D. BOOTH, 25 SEPTEMBER 1869

MS: Parrish (I/91, Reade vs. Roundtable), in extra-illustrated copy of Charles Reade, Griffith Gaunt (Boston: 1869). Published: A&C4, pp. 14–16.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Saturday. London. Sept 25th 1869

My dear Sir,

I received your kind letter by the last mail. And I have received the “opinion” by the American mail delivered here tonight.<sup>1</sup>

I say, at once, after twice reading it, that the Opinion is, to my thinking, singularly acute and ingenious, – and I have only to add for myself, that if I can try the experiment, I will.<sup>2</sup> Your idea is entirely new to me. It is excellently expressed, as to clearness – and most thoroughly and logically thought out. I shall take an early opportunity of showing this Opinion to Mr Charles Reade – and, after I have talked the matter over with him, I will write to you again.

In the meantime, the work of fiction which I contemplated when I last wrote to you, has been purchased here for periodical publication in Cassell’s Magazine – beginning in November next – and the advance-sheets have been sold to Messrs Harper. It was impossible to decline the proposals made to me – at a time when the question of my securing copyright in America was doubtful. I had the story “in my head” – I had written part of it – and I could not keep it from finding its way into publishers’ and printers’ hands, while the question of publishing exclusively in America was a question involved in doubt, and while I had your authority to satisfy me that I could not sell the MS. on its own merits as a protected literary commodity in the United States.

In the spring of 1870 this story will come to a conclusion – and I shall be free to consider, in the meanwhile, the question of trying the entirely new plan which you suggest, in the United States. We shall be none the worse for having time before us to communicate in, and time also (if you approve) to feel the pulses of certain American publishers, and to discover whether they will make assist in making it worth my while to try the experiment. It also strikes me, that the book ought to have more direct appeal to popular interest in America than is contained in the book which I am now writing. On all these grounds, I don't think it is to be regretted that we must wait a little, and consider, before we take the first decisive step in a matter which appears to me (after reading your Opinion) to be of no common importance.

So much for the future.

As to the present, there are three points which strike me in the legal bearings of this case.

1. I believe there is no doubt that "Precaution No 2" would secure the copyright in England. But, I will obtain reliable opinions on this point, in due course of time.

2. As to the question of the American translation from – what I will call – the author's French original.

Have you, in the United States, an international copyright with France? If you have, there is not more to be said. If not, it seems to me that there is nothing to prevent a bone fide French translation being made in Paris from the American translation (into English) – and this French translation might (as I suppose) be translated back into English in America, and so compete with the authorized translation. This would (granting the premises) certainly happen in my case. For all my books are translated and sold in Paris. I know (from the "Opinion") that the authorized American translation would be protected. But I am not sure, whether a second translation, made under the circumstances here supposed, might not also legally claim protection, as a second book – differing throughout in matters of style and expression, and which might also be made to differ in other ways, by having a new title, and giving to the characters other names. This sounds, and is perhaps, absurdly hypercritical. But it is a doubt on my mind – and, right or wrong, I express it.<sup>3</sup>

3. Is it necessary that the author himself should transfer his English into another language? or may he get it done for him?

If the latter, I have no hesitation in saying that it would be infinitely preferable to translate from the English into German, instead of into French. The French could never be made to follow the English literally – but the German might.

Neither Reade nor I understand German. Hence my questions.

It would also be an immense saving of time as well as pains to get the translation made by another person. He might work with the original writer, and the two versions might be almost completed together.<sup>4</sup>

Lastly, your own proposal for securing the copyright in England, by taking advantage of the decision in "Low v. Routledge", seems to me to be excellent.<sup>5</sup> I will obtain the opinion of my own lawyer, here, on this point – and will communicate it to you, when I write again, after talking over the whole matter with Reade.

For the present then I will once more thank you for the Opinion – and leave the few remarks which it has suggested to me to be considered by you for what they are worth – if they are worth anything.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – I shall, of course, for the present, keep your discovery a secret between Reade and myself – and my legal adviser here.

To | Wm. D. Booth Esqre

---

1. A sixteen-page manuscript copy of Booth's 'Opinion', dated 14 September 1869, is also found in the extra-illustrated copy of Griffith Gaunt at Parrish.

2. Booth's novel idea was that if the author created a literal translation of his own work into, say, French, and that that version were re-translated into English by a publishing house in the United States, a form of American copyright could be acquired in the work.

3. In an eight-page manuscript copy of his response, dated 12 April 1870, and also found at Parrish, Booth stated that there was no need to worry about such a possibility, as it would infringe the established American right.

4. In his response of 12 April, Booth stated that there would be no problem with the scheme even if the translation were by a hand other than that of the author.

5. Decided at the House of Lords in 1868, the case appeared to confirm that English copyright could be acquired by a foreign author regardless of his or her place of residence, as long as the publication itself took place on English soil.

[0913] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 28 SEPTEMBER 1869

MS: Bodleian (MS. Eng. lett. e.94, ff. 165–6). Published: BGLL, II, p. 153.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Tuesday 28th Sept

My dear Fred,

I called yesterday evening, and heard that you had just returned – and that you were to leave again for Liverpool on Thursday.<sup>1</sup> At what time shall I be likely to find you (in Berkeley Square)<sup>2</sup> tomorrow, Wednesday? Any hour will do for me – so long as I see you before you go. I will bring one or two letters of introduction with me. One line, please, to give me my time. A thousand loves to the Padrona. Everything else is reserved until we meet.

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Lehmann was sailing for the United States – see [0918] of 25 October 1869.

2. The Lehmanns' town residence at 15 Berkeley Square.

[0914] TO J. C. PARKINSON,<sup>1</sup> 30 SEPTEMBER 1869<sup>2</sup>

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 153–154.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Sept 30th

My dear Parkinson,

Many thanks for your letter. I wish I was going with you.<sup>3</sup>

I am finishing the 8th weekly part – but the printers have only set up two parts, so I cannot send you a satisfactory sample of what I am about before you go – which was what I wanted to do.<sup>4</sup>

I am going out of town from Saturday to Monday next for idleness & air. Will you dine with me on Tuesday next, (the 5th) at the Junior Athenaeum Club – corner of Down Street and Piccadilly – at 7.30 sharp? If you can bring with you any morsels of Athletic Slang, you will be doubly welcome. This is all I want now – and I am afraid this is just what (in the presence of a stranger) “Puncher” would be slow to offer.<sup>5</sup> I have got a scene coming, in which a set of muscular men lament the break-down of the best man on their side (in Athletic Sports), and persuade the muscular Christian of my book to take his place. I know their ignorance, their servility to a hero of their own order – and their enthusiasm for rowing fighting and running – as compared with their stolid indifference to everything else. But I don't know their technical phrases and the slang they would use when heated, and among each other. I am afraid “Puncher” won't meet this difficulty, under the circumstances. But let us talk about it before we decide. A line to say if you can come on Tuesday.

No harm in discovering (if you can) whether Puncher is in town but let us consult first.

Yours truly | WC

I can't ask you here. My dining-room is in the hands of “The British Workman”.

---

1. Joseph Charles Parkinson (1833–1908: Pilgrim), civil servant and prolific journalist with a bent for social reform. A friend of W. P. Frith and Edmund Yates, Parkinson contributed regularly to the Daily News, All The Year Round and Temple Bar, among other journals.

2. Dating from the references to Man and Wife, and the sequence of letters to Parkinson. Following WC's date line, '(1869)' has been added in another and presumably later hand.

3. Parkinson would shortly travel to Jerusalem.

4. Man and Wife as a serial.

5. Parkinson has clearly arranged for WC to meet a sporting acquaintance of his, presumably a boxer.

[0915] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 5 OCTOBER 1869

MS: Huntington (HH 88).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 154.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square. | October 5th 1869

My dear Holman Hunt,

I have only a moment to write one line introducing a friend Mr Parkinson to you.<sup>2</sup> If you are at Jerusalem when he is there, I know you will like each other.<sup>3</sup>

Write and let me hear of you.

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Distinctive notepaper with an embossed centred heading, reading 'Junior Athenæum Club | Piccadilly. W.'.

2. J. C. Parkinson – see [0914] to him of 30 September 1869.

3. Hunt had arrived in Jerusalem in August during a three-year trip around Europe and the Holy Land. On his return, see [1251] to Frederick Lehmann of 15 August 1872.

[0916] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 12 OCTOBER 1869

MS: Wolff Collection (1364b). Published: Wolff, p. 264; BGLL, II, p. 155.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London.

Tuesday October 12th 1869

“Man And Wife”

Dear Sirs,

I enclose corrected Revise (Duplicate) of Weekly Part 3 – containing some trifling corrections, which are important nevertheless, as preventing any personal application of one of the characters in the story to persons and events here, at the time of the last boat-race.<sup>1</sup>

On receipt of this, you ought to have Duplicate-Revises of Parts 1, 2, & 3. And corrected first proofs, already sent, of Weekly Parts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6.

Part 7 (with more Duplicates, I hope) will follow by the next mail.

Faithfully yours | WC

---

1. Wolff comments: 'In Collins' ... violent attack on the cult of athleticism, he was apparently worried that in his first draft there might have been something – now excised – in his description of Delamain, too much like that of the ringleaders in a display of hooliganism at the Oxford–Cambridge boat-race which had aroused much comment in the press' (p. 264).

[0917] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 19 OCTOBER 1869

MS: Wolff Collection (1364c). Published: Wolff, p. 265; BGLL, II, pp. 155–156.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London October 19th 1869

Dear Sirs,

Pray accept my thanks for 1st Bill of Exchange on Barings for £500.-.- (payable to my order, at 60 days)<sup>1</sup> – which has reached me safely by the post of this morning. In acknowledging this remittance, I beg once more to assure you that I am sincerely sensible of the liberal construction which your Firm has placed on the terms of the agreement between us.

I am glad to hear that you approve of the Title. I have tried to strike an entirely new vein in this story – and I hope our readers will say that I have not tried in vain.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Harper & Brothers

P.S. | I add to this note, a Corrected Revise (Duplicate) of Weekly Part 5. There ought now to be in your Editors hands, the first 8 parts of the story in corrected Proof and the first 5 Parts (Duplicates) in corrected Revise. Part 9 is now at the printers' – and Part 10 is close on completion in Ms. This makes a third of the whole story completed, three weeks before the first Weekly part is published.

1. Out of a total of £750 – see [0907] to Harper & Brothers, 7 September 1869. A ‘1st Bill of Exchange’ was one of two copies sent in case of loss in the post – see [0919] to Harper & Brothers, 26 October 1869. In fact WC realised the money on 15 November paying £2-0s-6d fee for the early encashment (Coutts: WC).

[0939] TO CHARLES READE, [SEPTEMBER-MID OCTOBER] 1869<sup>1</sup>

MS: Taylor (Charles Reade, Letter-book).<sup>2</sup> Published: Reade & Reade, II, pp. 198–201; B&C, II, pp. 333–335 (dated [November 1869]).

Considerations for R

=

I start from the December number<sup>3</sup> – and I say the interest in the character is so strong, the collision of human passions is so admirably and so subtly struck out, that the public will have no more of new trades’ unions, and their outrages. They will skip pages 3, 4, 5 in the November number – they will resent the return to the subject in the December number. I don’t suggest alterations of these. I only say, what I say, as a warning for the future. Keep to the Cutlers, and keep the Cutlers mixed up with Henry & Coventry – Grace and Jael – and you are safe.

Now – as to the brick-makers. I have ~~had~~ read the report.<sup>4</sup> They are even worse than the cutlers. But, ~~you~~ as an artist and a just man, you don’t take the worst case for illustration. You take the medium case, which may apply generally to all trades’ unions.

If I had the story to finish – I should make the industrialist’s difficulty in setting up the buildings for working Henry’s invention arise from his knowledge of what brick-makers will certainly do – I should make him put this forcibly in dialogue with Henry – and I should make Henry feel, exactly what the reader will feel, immeasurable disgust at this repetition of tyranny, outrage, and murder. “What! am I to go through it all again with the brick makers? More conspiracies, explosions, mutilations and deaths?” – “That’s the prospect, Mr Little.” – “Am I to give up my inventions, and are you to give up your profits?” – “No – we are to look out for a ready-made article in the shape of an empty building which will suit us – and give the brick-makers the go-by in that way.”

The building is formed, as is your plot – and there are the brick-makers just touched, and dismissed – and the story running on again – with the setting-up of the saw-grinding machinery, and all the incidents which follow. With this additional advantage that Henry does not do over again with the brick-makers, what he has already done with the cutlers.

=

As to other points: – First,

Hurry the story (if possible) to Henry’s proposal to Grace to marry him and go away with him, and to Grace’s refusal. You want that strong point, and that definite result, after keeping the suspended interest so long vibrating backwards and forwards between Grace’s two lovers.

Second,

I doubt a second blowing-up with Gunpowder. Can the necessary results be arrived at in no other way? Can it not be done by a pre-arranged escape of gas, for instance? Or by some other explosive, or destructive agent?

=

Query. The scenes in the ruined church are so admirable, and so original, that I want the church to play an important part in the story. Would it be possible to make Mr Raby re-pair and re-consecrate it for public worship? /This, so far, is no doubt already in your plan – Mr Ruby having alluded to [del] restoring the desecrated building.<sup>5</sup> Then to make the marriage of Grace and Coventry take place in it. And then to have the marriage invalidated by some informality in the consecration, or in the registration for marriages, of the newly-restored church?

I don’t know whether such an event as this would be legally possible – or whether if it could be possible – you could harmonise my idea, with your notion of the uncertificated clergyman?

But it seems to me a good point to make the old church in which Henry has worked and suffered for Grace, the retributive agent in defeating Coventry, and uniting Henry to the woman whom he loves.

The first marriage celebrated in the church might be the marriage of Coventry and Grace – and so all difficulty about the marriages of other couples might be avoided.

Or, perhaps, you already mean to end the story with the marriage of Henry and Grace in the restored old church? Anyhow, I, as reader, certify the church to be “an interesting character”.

---

1. Tentative dating based on the fact that WC seems to be reading the proofs, rather than the published pages, of the November and December installments of Reade’s novel, and making suggestions for the as yet unwritten installments for January 1870 onwards. The citing of the letter in Reade & Reade, II, p. 198, is prefaced thus: ‘Shortly after the story had got under way in the Cornhill, Charles Reade seems to have invited his dear friend Wilkie Collins’s criticism.’

2. Reade adds a note on the page in the letterbook where WC’s letter is pasted: ‘These are remarks by my friend Wilkie, made at the 10th, or December No., of my story, “Put Yourself in His Place”, then running in the “Cornhill Magazine”. I was so fortunate as to please him at last.’ See [0981] to Reade, 29 May 1870.

3. Reade’s Put Yourself in His Place was serialised in the Cornhill, March 1869 to July 1870, illustrated by Robert Barnes. Smith Elder published the novel in 3 volumes in the second half of May 1870. Reade opens his work with lines from Horace’s Art of Poetry: ‘I will frame a work of fiction upon notorious fact, so that anybody shall think he can do the same; shall labor and toil attempting the same, and fail – such is the power of sequence and connection in writing.’ His stimulus came from the recent activities of the Sheffield trade unions. The plot centres around Henry Little – disowned by his landowning family because of his mother’s marriage – who refuses to join the Edge Tool Forgers’ Union. Reade appears to have followed WC’s recommendations: Henry’s forge is gunpowdered; he falls in love with Grace Carden; his Amazonian servant Jael Dence saves him from a further assassination attempt (this time by bow and arrow); Henry leaves for America following further death threats; Coventry, the villain, ‘simulates’ Henry’s death and diverts his letters home; Henry returns to find Grace married to Coventry. In the finale the Hillsborough dam bursts: Henry heroically saves Grace and Coventry who is crippled; their marriage is revealed as invalid – the officiating clergyman (as WC suggests) is an imposter; Henry wins Grace; Jael marries an aristocrat (cf. Sutherland, pp. 515–516).

4. In the first chapter of the November number of Reade’s novel (ch. 20), reference is made to a report penned by Henry Little entitled ‘Life Labour and Capital in Hillsborough’, with the report itself given in an Appendix following the narrative.

5. Added in WC’s left margin.

[0918] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 25 OCTOBER 1869

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 230–231. Published: B&C, II, pp. 326–327.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | October 25th 1869

My dear Fred,

The Stoughton Bitters arrived this morning from Liverpool.<sup>2</sup> At the same time appeared a parcel of country sausages from Beard. I sent him back a bottle of the Bitters, with instructions to drink your health /in brandy and bitters/ and to meditate on the immeasurable virtues of intoxicating liquors for the rest of the day. On my part, I suspended an immortal work of fiction, by going down-stairs, and tasting a second bottle, properly combined with Gin. Result delicious! Thank you a thousand times! The first thing you must do on your return to England, is to come here, and taste Gin and Bitters. May it be soon!

Have I any news? Very little. I sit here all day, attacking English Institutions – battering down the marriage laws of Scotland and Ireland, and reviling athletic sports – in short writing an unpopular book,<sup>3</sup> which may possibly make a hit, from the mere oddity of a modern writer running full tilt against the popular sentiment, instead of clinging to it. The publishers are delighted with what I have done – especially [del] my American Publishers, who sent an instalment of £500,-,- the other day, on receipt of only the first weekly Part. I call that something like enthusiasm. Produce me the English publisher who treats his author in this way.

I am to meet the Padrona at Procter’s on Thursday. And I did meet her at Payn’s last week – looking very well, and beautifully dressed. But two [del] events occurred worth mentioning. The Padrona – assisting the [del] force of a few sensible remarks by appropriate gesticulation, knocked over her tumbler of Champagne, and flooded the table. Shortly afterwards I assisted a few sensible remarks on my part, by appropriate gesticulation, and [del] knocked over my tumbler, and flooded the table. And Mrs Payn, seeing her cloth [del] ruined, kept her temper like an angel, and smiled upon me while rivulets of Champagne were flowing over my dress trousers and her Morocco [~~del~~] leather chair. Excellent woman!

Reade has been here, and has carried off my book about the French Police (Memoires tirées [sic] des archives, &c &c).<sup>4</sup> He begged me to go and see him at Oxford. I said – “Very well! Write and say when.” Need I add that he has not written?

I had a friend to dinner at the Junior Athenaeum the other day. Our remonstrance has produced its effect. I declined to order anything, after our experience. “A dinner at so much a head. If it is’nt good I shall personally submit myself for examination before the Committee, and shall produce specimens of the dishes, reserved by myself.” The result was a very good dinner. When you come back, let us try the same plan. Nothing like throwing the whole responsibility on the cook.

I had a day at Gadshill, a little while since. Only the family. Very harmonious and pleasant – except Dickens’s bath, which dripped behind the head of my bed all night. Apropos of Gadshill, your cutting from the New York Times,<sup>5</sup> has been followed by a copy of the paper and a letter from Bigelow.<sup>6</sup> I don’t think Dickens has heard of it – and I shan’t say anything about it, for it might vex him, and can do no good. Why they should rake up that old letter now, is more than I can understand. But then a people who can spell Forster’s name without the “r”, are evidently capable of anything.

Fechter has refused – what appears to everybody, but himself to be an excellent offer from America. He seems determined to go “on his own book” in December next – and will find the managers whom he has refused his enemies when he gets there. I am afraid he has made a mistake.

Charley and Katey are back in town. Charley dined here yesterday – no Saturday. He is very fairly well.

Mrs John Wood had made the St James Theatre a perfect fairy palace – and is playing old English Comedy – with American actors. Scenery and dresses marvellously good. A great success.<sup>7</sup> The other great success I am going to see on Wednesday – monkeys, who [~~del~~] are /real/ circus riders – jump through hoops, dance on the horse’s back, and bow to the audience voluntarily when they are applauded. We shall see them in Shakespeare next – and why not? They can’t be worse than the human actors, and they might be better.

Where will you be, when this reaches you? I am told you have got to San Francisco. That will do. Come back – leave well alone – and come [~~del~~] back. I will describe Japan to you – and take you to see the manufactures afterwards, at the Baker Street Bazaar.<sup>8</sup> Goodbye for the present.

Yours, my dear Fred, ever, [WC]<sup>9</sup>

I send this to Naylor & Co “to be forwarded.” Let me hear from you, when you know your plans. I am glad Bigelow was serviceable – he is a very nice fellow. As for my health, I am getting along pretty slick, Sir! A third of my book just done. Have seen nothing of Forster. Shall see him, if we last till November 21st at dear old Procter’s birthday celebrations. Reade & Charley send loves.<sup>10</sup>

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper with the address centred.

2. Lehmann was on a business trip to the United States.

3. Man and Wife.

4. WC’s signed copy of Jacques Peuchet’s Mémoires tirés des archives de la police (Paris, 1848–61) in six volumes, was found in his library at his death (Baker 2002, item 384).

5. On 28 September 1869 under the heading ‘Why Charles Dickens Separated from His Wife – His Own Statement’, the New York Times reprinted Dickens’s ‘Violated Letter’, that is, the letter originally sent to his business associate Arthur Smith in May 1858 at the time of his separation from his wife setting out his version of the reasons for the end of the relationship, which found its way into the New York Tribune of 16 August 1858, and thence into papers all over the United States and Britain.

6. John Bigelow (1817–1911), lawyer and politician – see [3124] to him, [13–17] May 1868.

7. Mrs John Wood took over the renovated St James’s Theatre in King Street on 16 October 1869, the opening production being Goldsmith’s She Stoops to Conquer.

8. According to Dickens’s Dictionary of London (1879), compiled by the son of the novelist, the Baker Street Bazaar on Portman Square, which also housed Madame Tussaud’s Wax-work Exhibition, was then noted for its ‘carriages, and Chinese and Japanese goods’ (p. 13). Perhaps merely in jest, WC suggests that Lehmann is considering crossing the Pacific from San Francisco to visit Japan, where recently two centuries of national seclusion had come to an end and the imperial system had been restored.

9. Due to lack of space, WC concludes the letter (from 'leave well alone') vertically down his left-hand margin. The bottom-left-hand corner of the page bearing the signature has been torn away, but there is space only for the initials.
10. WC writes the postscript on his first page, squeezed in, in a small hand, above the printed address.

[0919] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 26 OCTOBER 1869

MS: Wolff Collection (1364d). Published: Wolff, p. 265; BGLL, II, p. 156.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Tuesday. October 26th 1869

Dear Sirs,

Your note, with the duplicate Bill of Exchange, reached me yesterday. My acknowledgement of the safe receipt of the first Bill, is, by this time, no doubt already in your hands.<sup>1</sup> I have sent some proofs with the letter acknowledging the first Bill – and I now send some more with this letter – namely – Duplicates (Corrected Revises) of Weekly Parts 7 and 8 and a Duplicate of re-corrected slip 2, of Weekly Part 4.

I am delighted to hear that you like the opening of the story.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. See [0917] to Harper & Brothers of 19 October 1869.

[0920] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 29 OCTOBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/8). Published: Coleman, p. 140; BGLL, II, pp. 156–157.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | October 29th

Dear Sirs,

I have just seen the enclosed advertisement in the Cornhill Magazine – and I write to request that you will kindly make one or two trifling alterations in the next issue – as marked on the advertisement.<sup>1</sup>

“Story” is, I think, a preferable word to “Tale” – and Man and Wife (not being a quotation) would, as I think, look better without inverted commas.

These, however, are matters of taste. But the printing of “The Woman in White” in one type, and of my other, and later novels in another – is establishing comparisons between my books – and depreciating two of them, at the expense of one. Either keep “The Woman in White” (as the most popular of my books in England) by itself, and add “&c, &c,” or let “Armadale” and “The Moonstone” have the same honours in type, as “The Woman in White”. I have no preference for either plan – by all means adopt which you like best yourselves. But don’t let us encourage the public (for the sake of Man and Wife) in its one everlasting cry about me: – “Ah! he may write what he pleases! He will never do anything again like The Woman in White!”

Yours very truly WC

---

1. The advertisement has not been located – such notices appeared on the coloured paper wrappers which were normally disposed of when the issues were bound up into volumes.

[3320] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> OCTOBER 1857 TO OCTOBER 1869<sup>2</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C11, p. 9.

... me what you have done. I am only just back from Gadshill,
Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. A scrap cut from the end of a letter, presumably for the signature.
2. Dating from the Gadshill reference. WC's first visit is recorded in [0267] to HC, 5 October 1857, and his last known visit was in October 1869 (see [0918] to Frederick Lehmann, 25 October 1869).

[0921] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 5 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/9). Published: Flower, pp. 24–25; Coleman, pp. 141–142; BGLL, II, pp. 157–158.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 5th November 1869

Dear Sirs,

I beg to enclose the receipt signed – with my thanks.

I have also to express my acknowledgments for your courtesy and consideration in informing me of the application of the Dutch publishers. It is needless to say that I quite agree with your view of the matter – and more, I am glad to think that the publishers will be made to pay for something, if you supply them with the Electrotypes.<sup>1</sup>

I am not sure, however, that this application does not offer me an opportunity of taking some public notice of the dishonesty of the publishers in Holland – and of contrasting it with the honourable conduct of Tauchnitz, who is also not bound by any treaties to pay English authors – but who does pay them nevertheless. In this matter, everybody in Holland gains something – the printer, the paper-maker, the translator, the publisher. I, who set the whole thing going, get nothing. I think I can put this view good humouredly, and strongly. Will you kindly send me the names and addresses of the publishers in treaty with you? – in case I find that I can try the experiment of writing to them.

I have not opened negotiations with my foreign publishers yet. But I shall make my proposals to the publishers of “The Moonstone” in France and Germany. In Paris, Messrs Hachette (through their agent here).<sup>2</sup> In Berlin, through my German translator Doctor Emil Lehmann<sup>3</sup> – who purchased the right of publishing on the last occasion.

Faithfully yours WC

---

1. Belinfante Brothers of The Hague, who had approached Cassell's with a request for the electrotype plates of the illustrations to Man and Wife with a view to publishing a Dutch translation in their periodical Stuivers Magazijn. Cassell's informed them that the right of European translation/publication of the novel was reserved by the author, and that the plates could not be used without his permission. Belinfante Brothers then wrote directly to WC – see his reply, [0925] of 10 November.

2. Probably still Jeffs's, the London outlet of Hachette, Librairie et Cie, in the Burlington Arcade.

3. Brother of Frederick Lehmann, who translated The Moonstone into German – see [0779] to him of 25 October 1867.

[0922] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 5 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Glasgow (891117/20).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 158.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | ~~Saturd~~ Nov<sup>r</sup> 5th

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks for the Draught Will.<sup>2</sup> I suppose I must fill in the blanks left for peoples' Christian names in full – and then return it to you. This shall be done in a day or two when I find a spare hour to devote to it. Thanks also for settling the other things. I shall turn out my present stable-tenant, if she forces me to “dun” for my rent.<sup>3</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Like most of the letters to Tindell from this point the MS is endorsed in another hand, presumably that of a clerk at Benham & Tindell, here: ‘5th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1869 | W. Collins Esq<sup>r</sup>’. This serves to confirm the dating.

2. Following fairly closely on the birth of his first child Marian on 4 July 1869, this appears to refer to the first will that WC was to write. The letter [1001] to Tindell of 26 June 1870 suggests that Henry Bullar was one of the executors. George Redford may have been a witness – see [X008] from Redford to Carrie Graves, 25 September 1889. WC's final will was dated 22 March 1882 and had a codicil of 18 July 1889.

3. The conflict over the rent for the stable at the rear of 90 Gloucester Place continued – see [1051] to Tindell of 13 January 1871, for example.

[0923] TO JAMES PAYN, 8 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 143; BGLL, II, p. 159.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Novr 8th

My dear Payn,

I have written to Webster by this post – and we shall soon, I hope, hear news of The Substitute. If the verdict comes to me instead of to you, it shall be forwarded immediately – I have particularly requested Webster to read it himself, and not by deputy.<sup>1</sup>

Yes – I am very hard at work just now. But I hope soon to be able to take it easier, and to see something of you. I am three months in advance of the printers – and I want to keep my start until I am better than half way through the book.<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever, | WC

---

1. Benjamin Webster, actor-manager of the Theatre Royal, Adelphi, who in fact rejected Payn's comedy – see [0937] to Payn of 30 November 1869. WC's letter to Webster appears not to have survived on this occasion – though four other letters to him have surfaced from around this period.

2. Referring to the serial version of Man and Wife.

[0924] TO CASSELL, PETER & GALPIN, 9 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/10). Published: Coleman, p. 144 ; BGLL, II, p. 159.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Novr 9th 1869

Dear Sirs,

Many thanks for your note. I enclose a copy of my letter to Messrs Belinfante Brothers<sup>1</sup> – and I propose when their answer is received to publish the correspondence as a contribution to the literature of International Copyright – in The Echo if you like – or if there is not room in The Echo – in the Athenaeum.<sup>2</sup>

If you will kindly wait till I get my answer, the sale of the Electrotypes can proceed as you desire – as a matter of course.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. [0925], dated the following day.

2. See [0927] to Cassell etc. of 12 November – the correspondence was indeed carried on 24 November (p. 3) in the Echo, the London evening paper owned by Cassell's.

[0925] TO BELINFANTE BROTHERS,<sup>1</sup> 10 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Unknown. Harper galley proofs: Morgan. Published: Echo (24 November 1869), p. 3, our copy text; Payn & Collins 1870, pp. 108–109, reprinted in Payn & Collins 2004, pp. 15–16; B&C, II, pp. 328–330.

90, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, W., |
London, November 10, 1869.

To Messrs. Belinfante Brothers.

GENTLEMEN, – I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter informing me that you are desirous of translating into the Dutch language, and of publishing in a Dutch magazine, a novel of my writing, which is about to appear in England in Cassell's Magazine.<sup>2</sup>

Before I enter on this question I must venture to set you right on a trifling matter of detail, as to which you are completely mistaken.

Your letter is addressed to me as “Madame Wilkie Collins.” I avow it with sincere regret, but the interests of truth are sacred. The trumpet of Fame, gentlemen, has played the wrong tune in your ears. I am not the charming person whom you suppose me to be. I wear trousers; I have a vote for Parliament; I possess a beard; in two dreadful words, I am – a Man.

This little error set to right, let us return to business.

I observe with profound surprise and regret that your request for permission to publish my book in Holland, in your magazine, is not accompanied by the slightest hint of any intention on your part of paying for that privilege. All that you offer me is a copy of the magazine. What am I to do with a copy of the magazine? I don’t understand Dutch. All that I can do is to look at your magazine, and mourn over my own neglected education.

Permit me to suggest that you might acknowledge the receipt of the right to translate “Man and Wife” in a much better way than by giving me the magazine. It is quite a new idea – you might give me some money.

Why not, gentlemen, if you publish my book? Do your translators write for nothing? Do your printers work for nothing? Do your paper-makers give you paper for nothing? Do you yourselves publish for the honor and glory of Literature, without making a single farthing by it? If all this happens to be the case, don’t read another word of my letter. It is written under a totally erroneous impression, by a man who is incapable of understanding the Dutch nation.

But if you all of you do make something by the publication of my book, then I have the honour of reminding you that I am the man who sets you all going, and that the first and foremost person to be paid in this matter is the person who puts the employment into your hands, and the remuneration into your pockets. I take up the pen – and, behold, profitable industry animates your dormant establishment! And what do I get? oh! fie! fie! a copy of the magazine!

You may – and probably will – tell me that the profits are miserably small. Gentlemen, make your minds easy. My boundless love of justice knows no limit, either upwards or downwards. However small the profits are, let us be as cheerful as we can under the circumstances; and, in the name of justice, let us share what there is. I once extracted twenty-five pounds from some colonial publishers who had pirated a book of mine, and I have never made any money by literature which was so precious to me as that.<sup>3</sup> Call the profits, if you like, a shilling a week, and give me the indescribable satisfaction of seeing, for thirty or forty weeks to come, this entry in my banker’s book: – By Messrs. Belinfante Brothers’ Sense of Justice – sixpence.

Does this eagerness of mine to share the profits shock you? Are you amazed to find that the honour of being translated into Dutch is not enough to satisfy me? Gentlemen, I can’t see the honour. The injustice done to me gets in the way and closes the prospect.

If, therefore, you want my permission to publish “Man and Wife,” you have it on this condition – that you and I share between us the profits of the publication.

But here a little bird whispers in my ear, “Madame Wilkie Collins, there is no treaty of international copyright between England and Holland. You are quite helpless, my poor dear! Messrs. Belinfante Brothers can take your book, whether you like it or not, and are not bound by law to pay you a single farthing for it.”

Am I to adopt this view of the question between us? What! you can not deny that I ought, as a matter of decent fair-dealing, to have a share in any profits realized by the publication of my own book – and yet you decline to give me what is morally my right, because a law doesn’t happen to have been made which forces you to do it! Perish the thought! My boundless love of justice has been already alluded to. It absolutely declines to admit that a firm of respectable Dutch publishers is capable of being influenced in its commercial transactions by other than strictly honourable considerations. Here is the dignity of man involved in a trumpety question of money. Gentlemen, if we respect the question of money, let us, for Heaven’s sake, pay at least a similar tribute to the dignity of man.

Besides, I have experience to justify me in taking my present view of the matter. My friend, Baron von Tauchnitz, of Leipzig, reprints my books for continental circulation. He is not obliged by law to pay me a farthing for doing so; but he invariably does pay me nevertheless. His own sense of honour is law enough, in this particular, for Baron von Tauchnitz.<sup>4</sup> Is their own sense of honour not law enough also, in this particular, for Messrs. Belinfante Brothers?

The answer to that serious question, gentlemen, rests entirely with yourselves. Be so kind as to let me have it at your earliest convenience, and, believe me, faithfully yours,

(Signed) WILKIE COLLINS.

-
1. Dutch publishers of The Hague who wished to publish a translation of Man and Wife in their cheap periodical Stuivers Magazyn. Without requesting permission from or offering remuneration to the author, they wanted WC to give permission for his British publishers Cassells to sell the clichés (stereotype plates) of the illustrations to the novel.
  2. According to the text published in the Echo, Belinfante Brothers had written on 5 November from the Hague as follows:

MADAME, – The publishers of your new novel, “Man and Wife,” at London, informed us you reserved to yourself the right of authorization of this tale for Continental languages. Messrs. Cassell are, therefore, not in a position to cede to us the use of the clichés, and proposed us to arrange with the author.

We take the liberty to address ourselves to you, madame, and have the honour to demand you to accord that permission on our behalf.

We hope that demand will meet a favourable reception, principally because no convention forbids to the Dutch publishers to reproduce in their language the stranger’s works, and we only want your kind intervention, on regard of the clichés of your “Man and Wife,” we will print in our Penny Magazine.

If you will be acquainted with that publication, we offer you with the greatest pleasure a copy of our Stuivers Magazyn, and when you eventually will dispose of our services in our country, we always will be glad to be in the opportunity of returning your amability.

We assure you, Madame, of our most distinguished consideration, and have the honour to be, Madame, your very obedient servants.

(Signed) BELINFANTE BROTHERS

Madame WILKIE COLLINS

3. Neither WC’s published writings nor private correspondence appear to shed light on the specific case of piracy mentioned here, but his publishing contracts reveal that, by this time, he was well aware of the need to protect his copyrights in, especially, the Australian and Canadian colonies.

4. In fact the point WC makes here was not valid. As Simon Nowell-Smith has demonstrated (pp. 41–63), for perhaps the first two years of the existence of the Collection, Tauchnitz published without authorization from or payment to the writers in question; and, with regard to Prussia from mid-1846 when a copyright convention was ratified between Britain and that state, and thereafter regarding an increasing number of areas of Europe as new reciprocal treaties were gradually concluded with Britain, including France in 1852, Tauchnitz was obliged by international law to negotiate the right to market the novels of his British Authors in those areas. The British Copyright Act of 1851 specifically gave him the license to do so, and, indeed, novels in the ‘Collection of British Authors’ series had long born the legend ‘Copyright Edition’ prominently on their title-pages.

[0926] TO CHARLES WARD, 10 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/55). Published: BGLL, II, p. 160.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th Novr

My dear Ward,

If you look, I think you will find that Cassell & Co have paid £266.6.8 to my account.<sup>1</sup> This with Harper’s £500 in Dec<sup>r</sup>2 leaves me free to reinvest that £500 – which I sold out, the other day (at a profit) – whenever there is an opportunity.<sup>3</sup>

Will you make inquiries? and come and tell me the result on Saturday next at seven? – on which occasion you ~~may~~ will find dinner here at a Christian hour, for once.

I prefer American securities – all other things being equal, as they say. Don’t I read something about American 6 per cents approaching par? Could I buy them below par? and then get paid off at par? I don’t know – I leave it all to you.

A line to say Saturday will do.

Ever yours, | WC

Can you bring a few steel pens with you also? I have tried, and cannot get good ones

---

1. The figure ‘£266.13.4’ is jotted in another hand (perhaps Ward’s) on the back page of the letter, indicating that WC had misremembered the sum, perhaps because 6s-8d is one third of a pound and 13s-4d two thirds, but £266-13s-4d is exactly one third of £800, the sum the publishers had contracted to pay in three equal parts. In fact the amount of £266-13s-4d 'of Cassell & Co' was credited to WC's bank account on 4 November (Coutts: WC). These payments thus represent the first instalments for the serial publication of Man and Wife in both London and New York.

2. Together the two payments represent the first instalments for the serial publication of Man and Wife in both London and New York.

3. On 15 October 1869 WC had sold £800 of Russian 4% bonds at 68 per cent for £544, less a £1 brokerage fee. Since he had bought them on 30 September 1868 at 66<sup>5</sup>/<sub>8</sub> per cent for £533, plus a £1 fee, his profit was £9. In the event he reinvested that and more on 30 November in $5500 of United States 6% bonds of 1867, for which he paid £1039-10s-2d including the brokerage fee. He would go on to sell some of this investment in the following months (Coutts: WC).

[0927] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 12 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/11). Published: Coleman, p. 145; BGLL, II, pp. 160–161.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1869

Dear Sirs,

I am very glad to hear that you like my letter well enough to give it the wide publicity of insertion in the Echo.<sup>1</sup> A public protest of some kind seems certainly needed, in the interests of honourable dealing, as well as in the interests of literature.

I enclose Messrs Belinfante's letter.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [0924] to Cassell's of 9 November 1869.

[0928] TO BELINFANTE BROTHERS, 18 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Unknown. Hand-written copy by Carrie Graves with revisions in WC's hand: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/12), our copy text. Harper galley proofs: Morgan. Published: Echo (24 November 1869), p. 3; Payn & Collins 1870, p. 109, reprinted in Payn & Collins 2004, pp. 17–18; Flower, pp. 25–27 (as to Belinfante Brothers); Robinson 1951, pp. 233–235; Coleman, pp. 146–147 (again as to Belinfante Brothers); B&C, II, pp. 330–331.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London W. |
November 17th 1869

To Messrs Belinfante Brothers,
Gentlemen

The grave error that I have committed is the error of assuming you to be more just and more enlightened than you are.

Your answer to my letter tells me what I was previously unwilling to believe – that you have persisted so long in publishing books by authors of all nations, without paying for them, that any protest against that proceeding on my part, which appeals to your sense of a moral distinction between right and wrong, appeals to something that no longer exists.<sup>1</sup>

What am I to say to men who acknowledge that they and the people whom they employ, all derive profit from publishing my book, and who, owning this, not only repudiate the bare idea of being under any pecuniary obligation towards me as the ~~author~~, /writer of the book,/ but shamelessly assert their own act of spoliation to be a right – because no law happens to exist which prohibits that act as a wrong? There [del] is nothing to be said to persons who are willing to occupy such a position as this. What is to prevent men who trade on such principles as these, from picking my pocket, [del] if they see their way to making a profit out of my ~~pocket~~ handkerchief? There is absolutely nothing [del] to prevent their picking my pocket, and, what is more, indignantly informing me that it is their right – unless by some lucky chance, English handkerchiefs are better cared for than English literature, and are protected in Holland by law.

Suppose international copyright /to be,/ ~~as~~, one of these days, established between England and Holland. What would become of /you and/ your right then? You would have no alternative left but to curse the cruel fate which made you Dutchmen, and retire from business.

Returning, before I close these lines, to your answer to my letter, I have to add that I have not in the least mistaken the nature of your application to me on the subject of the illustrations. It is the most indecent application I ever heard of in my life. You ask me to help you to pay honestly for obtaining the illustrations to my story, telling me, in the same breath, that you claim a right to take the story itself without paying for it. And this to me, as the author of the story! Do you expect me to notice such an application as that? It would be accepting an insult to notice it.

For the rest – whether you do, or do not, take my book from me – I persist, in the interests of public morality, in asserting my right to regard as my own property the produce of my own brains and my own labour – any accidental neglect in formally protecting the same in any country notwithstanding. [del] /I declare/ any publisher who takes my book from me, with a view to selling it in any form for his own benefit – without my permission, and without giving me a share in his profits – to be [del] /guilty of theft, and to be morally, if not legally, an outlaw and a pest among honest men. And I send/ the correspondence between us to an English newspaper of wide circulation,<sup>2</sup> by way of openly recording this protest, and openly [del] /exposing/ the principles on which Dutch publishers trade. In this way my views on the subject of fair-dealing with foreign authors, may possibly reach the ears of those other persons of larcenous literary habits who are ready, as you kindly inform me, to steal my story, without that preliminary notice of their intention, which you yourselves were personally compelled to give me by the honorable conduct, in this affair, of my English publishers.

Your obedient servant | (Signed) Wilkie Collins

---

1. According to the text published in the Echo, in response to [0925] of 10 November, the Dutch publishers had written on 13 November from The Hague:

To Wilkie Collins, Esq.

SIR, – Thanks to your information about the mistake we have made in supposing you to belong to the fair sex, we may dispense with the laws of gallantry and be merely practical in our answer to your honoured of the 10th.

Permit us to say that this letter of yours reposes on a grave error as to the subject of our request. No treaty of international copyright existing between England and Holland – as you acknowledge yourself – how could there be any question of asking your autorisation [sic] to translate your novel in the Dutch language? The magazine we publish, and of which we offered you a copy (of course, not as a remuneration, but out of mere politeness), is full of translations from the best English, German, and French authors, whom we never thought to ask permission for what we consider our undoubted right, and who never suggested the idea of claiming a part of the profits of our publication. To be sure, we receive nothing gratis; we have to pay and our translations [sic], and our printer, and our paper-maker; but is this a reason to make those charges still heavier, and to diminish the already small profits by affording an allowance to every foreign author whose work is reproduced in our magazine? And if so, how should it be possible to ascertain in what measure each of them contributes to the success of the whole?

Quite different is the case with the Tauchnitz Edition you allude to. Tauchnitz reprints your books – your English – for the great public that understands and reads English; whilst we translate one of your novels for the benefit of a Dutch periodical for the small circle of readers who understand this language, not at all cultivated in other countries, not even by men of the genius and extensive knowledge of a Wilkie Collins!

We regret to differ so widely from you in this view of the matter. But if we cannot agree with you on the money question, not so on the question of dignity. If notwithstanding our polite demand to obtain your permission of making use the clichés of your novel, you persist in your opinion as to the impropriety of our dealings, our dignity will prevent us from availing ourselves against your will of our well-established right. However, this will not have the effect of leaving your book untranslated; other Dutch publishers, less scrupulous, will set to work, without ever giving you notice.

Whatever may be your answer, which we expect as soon as possible, we beg you, Sir, to believe us truly and faithfully yours,

(Signed) BELINFANTE BROTHERS

2. The Echo, London evening newspaper owned by Cassell, Peter, and Galpin, in which the correspondence between WC and Belinfante Brothers was published on 24 November 1869.

[0929] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 18 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/13).<sup>1</sup> Published: Flower, pp. 28–29; Coleman, p. 148 (as to the editor of the Echo); B&C, II, p. 332 (also as to the editor of the Echo).

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>2</sup> | Novr 18th 1869

Dear Sirs,

[del] I enclose Messrs Belinfante's answer (of which I have had a copy made) – together with a copy of my rejoinder /(sent by today's post)/, which, so far as I am concerned, closes the correspondence. The letters are numbered 3 and 4. Numbers 1 and 2 are already in your hands.<sup>3</sup> There really does seem to be need of exposing such entirely shameless disregard of the commonest principles of honour and fair dealing as these men show. I have laid the /lash/ [del] on their thick hides pretty smartly – and I shall send the printed correspondence (when it is published) to America<sup>4</sup> – and try what I can do through my French and German publishers, to have the matter taken up by the [del] journals in those countries.

Faithfully yours | WC

P.S. You will see that it is impossible for me to enter on the question of the Clichés /with Belinfante Brothers./ But – if you think these men to be depended on [del] to [del] pay (which I don't) by all means write to them to say that I have left the decisions about the Clichés entirely in your hands<sup>5</sup>

1. Letter endorsed '1846 | Collins Wilkie | Nov 18th 1869' on the otherwise blank final page of the folding notepaper.
2. WC uses Gothic printed notepaper, address centred.
3. That is, in sequence from 1 to 4, the Belinfante letter of 5 November and [0925] WC's reply of 10 November, plus the Belinfante letter of 13 November and [0928] WC's reply of 18 November. This correspondence appeared in the Echo on 24 November, p. 3.
4. As [0934] to Harpers of 27 November confirms, the correspondence was sent to New York on that day. As the documents now found at Pierpoint Morgan show, it was set up and printed on proof slips with a view to publication in Harper's Weekly (then carrying Man and Wife as a serial), but seems never in fact to have appeared there. WC learned that the Dutch publishers had capitulated on 30 November (see [0936] to the editor of the Echo of that day), and must have written immediately to New York to inform Harpers of the fact. This letter has not been found, but [0946] of 1 January 1870 to S.S. Conant, editor of Harper's Weekly, provides evidence of its existence and also suggests that Conant was then in some doubt about whether WC still wished him to publish the correspondence. Moreover, Conant was personally against a new law supporting international copyright in the US – see his article, 'International copyright (No. I): an American view' in Macmillan's Magazine 40 (June 1879) pp. 151–161 – and must have known that many of his readers would be very sensitive about British attacks on this issue. Previously, scholars have assumed that the slips at Morgan indicate that the correspondence was published in either Harper's Weekly (e.g., Peters p. 325) or in Harper's New Monthly Magazine (e.g. B&C, II, p. 330), but neither proves in fact to be the case.
5. WC adds his postscript at the foot of the otherwise blank third page of the folding notepaper, opposite his signature.

[3032] TO UNKNOWN RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 18 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Unknown. Published: Baltimore Sun (29 November 1873) p. 4, our copy text, and Richmond Daily Dispatch (1 December 1873) p. 4; A&C3, pp. 42–43.

No. 90, Gloucester Place | Portman Square, W. London
November 18, 1869

Dear Sir,

My life, like the lives of other literary men, is all in my books. I was born in 1824. I was the oldest of the two sons of William Collins, Royal Academician, the celebrated English painter of the coast scenery and cottage life of his native country. I was christened by the name of his dearest friend, the late Sir David Wilkie, another famous painter of the British School. Wilkie was my godfather.

I was educated at a private school of excellent repute, and learned Latin and Greek as well as most of the boys. The only part of my "education" which has, as I believe, done me any good in later life was given to me by my father, who took me to Italy with him for two years when I was a boy of twelve years of age. Here I learned to observe for myself, and became, as far as a boy could be, associated with all sorts of clever people, whom my father's reputation as a painter collected about him. I never went to college, though my father was willing to send me there. The life was not the sort of life for me, after Italy and the artists. I was tried for a few years in a merchant's office, and did my work and hated it. I was taken from commerce and entered as a student at the bar. I am a barrister of Lincoln's Inn, but I never practiced my profession, and never studied it. I was good for nothing, in short, but writing books, and I ended in writing them. How this "analytical power" which you and other critics find in my novels comes to me I know no more than you do. The only "rule" I have in writing a work of fiction is at anybody's service. Begin at the beginning, know what the end is before you write a line, and keep the story always going on. With this, and with enormous pains and care, you have the sum total of what I consciously know of my own art as a writer. These few particulars are entirely at your service.

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. This letter was published to presage WC's appearance at the Music Hall, Baltimore, on 11 December 1873 during his tour in America. The Baltimore Sun introduced it as a letter written to 'a gentleman of Virginia, now of Baltimore'.

[0930] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 21 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/ 14). Published: Coleman, p. 149; BGLL, II, p. 161.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Novr 21st 1869

Dear Sirs,

You will find on the next leaf a line of introduction to the appearance of the correspondence in The Echo.<sup>1</sup>

Allow me to add that I sincerely appreciate the consideration you have shown for the interests of literature, as well as the personal consideration which you have shown towards me, in the course you have taken with the Dutch publishers.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs | Cassell Petter & Galpin

---

1. Though the second leaf has been torn away and remains untraced, the note (dated 22 November 1869 and addressed to the editor of the Echo) was published in that paper on 24 November.

2. Cassell's had initially informed WC of the Dutch publishers' request for the electrotypes of the illustrations to Man and Wife (see 0921) to Cassell's of 5 November), and had cooperated throughout with WC's efforts to draw the issues raised to public attention.

[0931] TO THE EDITOR OF THE ECHO, 22 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Unknown. Published: Echo (24 November 1869), p. 3c, our copy text; BGLL, II, p. 162.

November 22, 1869.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ECHO.

SIR, – In the interests of public morality, as well as in the interests of Literature, may I request you to favour me by admitting to your columns the accompanying correspondence between certain publishers in Holland and myself? – Your obedient servant,

WILKIE COLLINS.

[0932] TO LAURA SEYMOUR,<sup>1</sup> 22 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Noel. Extract: Clareson, pp. 110–111 (misdated).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 162.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 22nd Novr 1869

My dear Mrs Seymour

Many thanks for your kind note. I am delighted to hear that you like the beginning of the story – the beginning is half the battle.<sup>3</sup> I have just finished the weekly part to be published at the end of February – so I have a pretty good start at the printers thus far.<sup>4</sup> May you like it as it goes on, as well as you like it now!

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Mrs Laura Alison Seymour (c. 1820–79), actress, Charles Reade’s companion for over twenty years.
2. Claeson gives 22 September 1869 on p. 110, but dates the letter correctly in the list on p. 122.
3. The first serial instalment of Man and Wife appeared in Cassell’s Magazine on 20 November 1869.
4. Chapter 23 published as part 15 on 26 February 1870.

[0933] TO JAMES PAYN, 26 NOVEMBER 1869<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 150; BGLL, II, pp. 162–163.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Novr 26th

My dear Payn,

Many thanks. I would say Yes with pleasure – but my hands are full with “Man and Wife” (I am writing the play as well as the novel) – and I leave it to you. A short article – familiar as you say – will be the thing.<sup>2</sup> One of the illustrations might run thus: – Sir and Madam, you are not perhaps much interested in literary property being protected by law. Let me bring it home to you, and awaken your interest. Madam: – suppose children’s frocks were not protected by law. Say you have made a lovely frock, with your own hands and your own sewing-machine, for your own child. A Dutchwoman comes by – says “Ha! my child would look well in that.” – and takes it. You instantly scream for help. The Dutchwoman walks off with her child arrayed in your frock. “I have a right to take it, if I like, because it isn’t protected by law.”

Same thing might happen to a man – growing a rare Tulip entirely by his own pains and ingenuity. The Dutchman likes Tulips. Suppose Tulips were not protected by law? – and so on. I put it roughly – in haste. The way to hit them is thus to allude to something they have made for themselves by their own care and pains – and so reflect the making of a book. If you agree in this treatment there is a column and a half to be got out of it – which will be just enough to pave the way – when the time comes for an effort with Parliament.

Yours ever WC

---

1. Dating confirmed by the references to Man and Wife.
2. Presumably Payn had seen the Belinfante correspondence published in the Echo on 24 November and had written to suggest that WC write an article on the subject for the weekly Chambers’s Journal, which Payn edited. The article, incorporating the ideas sketched here by WC, eventually appeared unsigned as ‘A National Wrong’, in Chambers’s Journal on 12 February 1870. Though the piece was initially conceived as part of the campaign against piracy on the part of Belinfante Brothers, by then the Dutch publishers had capitulated. Thus the article was directed more towards highlighting the absence of copyright for British authors in the United States. The article is reprinted in Payn & Collins 2004, pp. 13–18.

[0934] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 27 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Unknown. Galley proofs: Morgan (MA 1950), our copy text.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 163–164.

LONDON, November 27, 1869

To Messrs. Harper & Brothers:

GENTLEMEN, – As publishers who recognize – and liberally recognize – the law of honor in your dealings with foreign authors, will you favor me by finding room in Harper’s Weekly for the subjoined correspondence on international copyright, between certain publishers in Holland and myself? Faithfully yours

WILKIE COLLINS

---

1. Under the heading ‘INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT’, and preceding the text of the correspondence between Belinfante Brothers and WC, dated 5, 10, 13 and 18 November. These appear to be galley proofs set up by the printers of Harper’s Weekly to record the text of the letters received rather than page proofs of an article. In fact the correspondence was never published in the paper. WC learned that the Dutch publishers had capitulated on 30 November (see [0936] to the editor of the Echo of that day), and must have been written immediately to New York to inform Harpers of the fact. This letter has not been found, but [0946] of 1 January to Samuel Stillman Conant (b. 1831), editor of Harper's Weekly, provides evidence of its existence and also suggests that Conant was then in some doubt about whether WC still wished him to publish the correspondence. Moreover, Conant was personally against a new law supporting international copyright in the US – see his article in ‘International copyright (No. I): an American view’, Macmillan's Magazine, 40 (June 1879), pp. 151–161 – and must have known that many of his readers would be very sensitive about British attacks on this issue. Previously, scholars have assumed that the slips at Morgan indicate that the correspondence was published in either Harper's Weekly (e.g. Peters, p. 325) or in Harper's New Monthly Magazine (e.g. B&C, II, p. 330), but neither proves in fact to be the case.

[0935] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 29 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/15). Published: Coleman, p. 151 ; BGLL, II, p. 164.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1869

Dear Sirs,

The German translator of “Man and Wife” – who has purchased the right of publication in Germany<sup>1</sup> – writes me word that I must secure his right, by “depositing ~~each~~ ~~ee~~ one copy of each weekly part of the story, as it appears, at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, at Berlin and another copy at the same ministry at Leipzig”. I have no idea how this is to be done. Are you in the habit of doing it? And, if so, could you, without inconvenience, manage this for me? If there is any trouble involved, please say so – and I will write to Germany for instructions.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Emil Lehmann – see [0921] to Cassell's of 5 November.

[0936] TO THE EDITOR OF THE ECHO, 30 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (W. Collins Letters 1 B/ 16).<sup>1</sup> Published: Echo (1 December 1869), p. 3; Flower, pp. 29–30; Coleman, p. 153; Payn & Collins 2004, p. 20; BGLL, II, pp. 164–165. Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 235.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
November 30th 1869.

To the Editor of the Echo.

Sir,

A few days since, you did me the honour to publish a correspondence of mine, on copyright, with Messrs Belinfante Brothers, of the Hague. You also drew attention to that correspondence in a leading article, for which I beg to thank you, as for a service rendered to Literature.<sup>2</sup>

I have now to announce a conclusion to this matter which was not anticipated either by you, or by me. My English publishers received a letter yesterday from the Hague, in which Messrs Belinfante concede the point which I endeavoured (good-humouredly) to press upon them in my first letter. Of their own free will (bound by no law whatever), they consent to recognize my moral claim on them, as the author, by giving me a share in the profits produced by my book – if profit is realised by the Dutch translation of “Man and Wife”. Let us never more despair of our dear Dutchmen, sir, in any future human emergency; and let us take Belinfante Brothers to our hearts as brothers in international copyright with ourselves! While I maintain every word I have written as to all publishers who take books from authors without paying for them, I am glad publicly [sic] to declare that what I wrote, no longer applies to Belinfante Brothers. They publish “Man and Wife” in Holland with my full consent, and with my best wishes for the success of the speculation.

I remain, Sir, | Your obedient servant, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The letter is in the hand of Carrie Graves, but is corrected and signed by WC.

2. See the article ‘Mr. Wilkie Collins on His Rights’, which occupied two columns on the front page of the Echo, 24 November 1869. A facsimile and discussion are found in Payn & Collins 2004.

[0937] TO JAMES PAYN, 30 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 152; B&C, II, pp. 332–323.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | 30th Novr

My dear Payn

Postscript to the article. Belinfante Brothers give in!!! “Of their own free will” they offer me a share in the profits of the [del] Dutch “Man and Wife” if there are any. If you have not written the article, don’t trouble about it now.<sup>2</sup> If you have – add this information as a clencher. In today’s or tomorrow’s Echo, I publicly rehabilitate the Dutchmen.<sup>3</sup> My share may or may not be worth five shillings’ purchase. But they concede the principle.<sup>4</sup>

Yours ever | WC

I am sorry to hear from Webster that his verdict is adverse<sup>5</sup>

---

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper, the address centred.

2. The article, ‘A National Wrong’, was in fact written and published – see [0933] of 26 November 1869 and [0948] of 14 January 1870, both to Payn.

3. Belinfante Brothers eventually paid WC ‘one hundred guilders, £8. 6s. 8d.’ (Peters, p. 325). The payment of £8-6s-8d is recorded in WC’s bank account on 15 April 1870. The firm made him four more payments over the next few years (Coutts: WC).

4. The letter [0936] was dated 30 November but appeared in the Echo on 1 December, p. 3b.

5. Concerning Payn’s play The Substitute – see [0923] to him of 8 November 1869.

[0938] TO CHARLES READE, 30 NOVEMBER 1869

MS: Taylor (Charles Reade, Letter-book).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 333.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>2</sup> | 30th Nov (Tuesday)<sup>3</sup>

My dear Reade,

The horrible weather kept me at home yesterday – and today I must go in another direction. If you can find your proofs, leave them out for me like a good fellow – and I will call at the first opportunity.<sup>4</sup>

I have conquered the Dutchmen! They offer me – of their own free will – a share of the profits, if any. So the principle is conceded if you and I could get our brethren to fight without being paid for it – and to agree together – we should have international copy right all over the world. But (except Dickens) who will take the trouble?

Of course I publish the result as an act of justice in today’s or tomorrow’s Echo.<sup>5</sup>

Yours ever | WC

If you would like my proofs – of course they are at your service and at Mrs Seymours, any time after this week. But I think you like the weekly instalments. Two weekly parts are published in advance, in this months (December) Part.

Very sorry to miss you on Sunday. At home till five – after today – if you are coming my way.<sup>6</sup>

---

1. On the page in the letterbook where WC’s letter is pasted, Reade adds a note: ‘Wilkie Collins an artist of the pen. There are terribly few of these among writers.’

2. WC uses Gothic printed paper, the address centred.

3. Dating from the calendar and the reference to the Belinfante affair.

4. Presumably referring to the proofs for the January number onwards, since the December number would have already been in print.

5. See [0936] to the editor, 30 November.

6. Second postscript added above the printed address.

[0940] TO E. M. WARD, 9 DECEMBER 1869<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 154; BGLL, II, p. 166.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Thursday Decr 9th

My dear Ned,

I shall be delighted to dine with you on Monday next (the 13th) at 7. sharp.

Try and remember Portman Square – in connection with my Gloucester Place. Say to yourself “I once went to Paris with Wilkie – he took a Portmanteau – the first two syllables of Portmanteau spell Portman: – Wilkie lives near Portman Square.” See how simple this is! So easily thought of, even when your mind is other wise occupied.<sup>2</sup>

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating determined by the calendar, the notepaper, and the move to Gloucester Place.

2. Ward had obviously misdirected his letter, presumably confusing Gloucester Place, Portman Square with the other Gloucester Place, off Westbourne Grove, some way to the west.

[0941] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 15 DECEMBER 1869

MS: Glasgow (891117/22). Published: BGLL, II, p. 166.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Dec<sup>r</sup> 15th 1869

My dear Tindell,

A very worthy Italian named Bernasconi wants a word of advice as to buying the goodwill of a language-teaching business in, and about, London, which is about to be abandoned by one of his countrymen who wishes to dispose of it.<sup>1</sup> Will you kindly see him, and tell him, on his statement of the facts, whether he can safely enter into the speculation? Consider me responsible for the fees connected with this advice – after which, we will say a word – if it comes to anything – about the necessary agreement.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

Signor Bernasconi will write to you to ask for an appointment – and will mention my name.

---

1. Bernasconi and his relationship to WC remain obscure

[3284] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 27 DECEMBER 1869

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, p. 9.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Decr 27th 1869

Dear Mrs Frith,

Thank you for your kind invitation.<sup>1</sup> I accept it with the greatest pleasure.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Perhaps for Monday, 10 January 1870. If so, WC did not in fact attend; see [0947] to Isabelle Frith of 5 January 1870.

[0942] TO MRS [BRINLEY] RICHARDS, [1869]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Unknown. On sale: Catalogue of Sophie Dupré, 56, 2002.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 166–167.

With kindest regards to Mr Richards

Believe me sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Conjectural recipient and dating, based on the similarly formal closure to the letter [0867] to Mrs Brinley Richards of 27 January 1869.
  2. Excised fragment only.

[3033] TO HENRY BLACKETT,<sup>1</sup> 1860s

MS: UPenn (Ms. Coll 585, Ward Coll. 41), incomplete.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C3, p. 43.

... to a periodical publication.

Trusting that I may have some future opportunity of showing that I have not forgotten your proposal,

I remain, dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Henry Blackett Esqre

-
1. Henry Blackett (1826–71), of the publishers Hurst & Blackett who issued The Queen of Hearts in 1859. See [0348] to him of 31 May 1860.
  2. The second leaf only of a sheet of folding notepaper.

[0943] TO CHARLES WARD, [1860s]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/84). Published: BGLL, II, p. 167.

My dear Ward,

Come by all means at six, today – it is the first day this week I have dined at home so you could not have chosen a better occasion

ever yours WC

-
1. Conjectural dating based on the hand, the signature and the relationship with Ward.

[0944] TO CHARLES WARD, [1860s]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/85). Published: BGLL, II, p. 167.

Sunday

My dear Ward,

I was too hard at work to come down stairs. The delay in the delivery of the letter did no harm. I accidentally saw the right man at the office the day after you were here – so I gave the information viva voce, which the letter was to give.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Conjectural dating based on the hand, the signature and the relationship with Ward.

[0945] TO CHARLES WARD, [1860s]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/77). Published: BGLL, II, p. 167.

Monday

My dear Ward,

As ill-luck will have it, I am engaged to dinner (at Forster's) on Friday. Look in here on Sunday if you are in town, and we will settle a day for next week.

(In great haste) | Ever yours | WC

-
1. Conjectural dating based on the hand, the signature and the relationship with Ward.

[3126] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, [1860s]

MS: Private. Published: A&C5, p. 8.

... me five minutes ... talk, on either ... afternoon?

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Fragment cut from the end of a letter for the autograph with seven words of text on verso. Originally tipped into a first US edition of Man and Wife dated 1870. The partial watermark 'JOYN' (for JOYNSON) suggests it probably dates from the 1860s.

[3004] TO HENRY BULLAR, 1 JANUARY 1870

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie's Sale 4072, 6 June 2006, lot 200.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C2, p. 63.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | New Years' Day 1870

My dear Henry,

Thank you for your good wishes. I return them with all my heart.

Come to London when you can. I go for two days to Gloucestershire next week.

My next holiday I hope will be celebrated by a visit to Basset Wood.<sup>2</sup>

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

---

1. In an autograph album compiled by Louisa Haigh.

2. Sadly, WC was never to meet his old friend again. Henry Bullar died suddenly on Wednesday, 5 January 1870 at his home at Basset Wood; see 'Sudden Death of the Recorder of Poole', Pall Mall Gazette, 6 January 1870, p. 7.

[0946] TO S. S. CONANT,<sup>1</sup> 1 JANUARY 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: B&C, II, pp. 335–337 (as to P. S. Conant)

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>2</sup> | London January 1st 1870

Dear Sir

Accept my thanks for your letter. I am sorry – writing in haste on the last occasion – that I failed to [del] clearly express, what I intended to express, that you were entirely at liberty (if you thought [del] it right) to publish the correspondence – adding to it, in justice to Messrs Belinfante, a statement of the manner in which the matter in dispute between us has been arranged.
3

Since I wrote to you, I have heard again from Holland – and I am enabled to make the necessary statement more complete than it might otherwise have been.

Messrs Belinfante, not only agree, of their own free will, to give me a share in any profits realised by the Dutch translation of my novel – but they also declare to me their intention of treating any other English writers whose works they translate, with the same just regard to their moral right which they have shown in my case. Add to this, that a second (piratical) Dutch translation of "Man and Wife" has been started in Holland – and that I am now helping my enemies (in the capacity of their partner) to distance competition by sending them advance-sheets – and you have the curious termination to their affair complete!

The pecuniary results of the transaction will no doubt be /trifling/ [del] enough – depending as they do on the circulation of my book in such a small and thinly-populated country as Holland. But it appears to me, to be something to have obtained a recognition of the principle of international copyright, in a country which has [del] hitherto set that principle at defiance. All legal protection to property springs, in the first instance, from authoritative recognition of moral right. Five thousand years ago [del] (in a previous state of existence), I /grew my own flax, I manufactured/ [del] it into linen, I made the linen into a shirt. My next door neighbour not being able to do this, and wanting [del] something of ~~the~~ his next door neighbour, took my shirt away from me, and bartered [del] it for what he wanted. When I told him, he was a thief, he answered “Your shirt is not protected by law – therefore you have no right to complain of my taking it.” All the wise men of the time agreed with him – and reproved me for showing temper in the matter.

Five thousand years later (in another state of existence) precisely the same thing happened to me with a book that I had made. But, on this occasion, the person who had taken my book ended in admitting that I was right. “Here,” I said to myself, “is progress. If I make my own shirt, in this enlightened age, the law [del] declares the man who takes it from me to be a thief. Surely the law will end in declaring the same thing, all over [del] the world, of the man who takes my book – especially when it finds the man himself ashamed of having taken it!”

This little apologue is – I submit – a fair statement of the case for American readers.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

S.S. Conant Esqre | Editor Harpers’ [sic] Weekly

P.S. I don’t return the proof which you kindly sent me. It [is] correctly printed throughout. <sup>4</sup>

---

1. Samuel Stillman Conant (b. 1831), American journalist, editor of Harper’s Weekly from 1869 to 1885, when he disappeared in mysterious circumstances. Conant was one of those who attended the breakfast given for WC at the Union Club, New York, on 22 October 1873. Later he contributed an article to Macmillan’s Magazine defending the lack of copyright protection for foreigners in the United States: ‘International copyright (No. I): an American view’ vol. 40 (June 1879) pp. 151–161.

2. WC uses Gothic printed paper, the address centred.

3. WC’s previous letter referred to here has not been located, but must have been written to New York to inform Harpers that Belinfante Brothers had capitulated. (WC learned this on 30 November 1869 – see [0936] to the editor of the Echo of that day.) Conant had then obviously been in some doubt whether WC still wished him to publish the correspondence in the circumstances. Despite WC’s clarifications here, the correspondence did not in the end appear in Harper’s Weekly.

4. Referring to the proof slip of Harpers’ setting of the correspondence between WC and Belinfante Brothers – see the note to [0934] to Harper & Brothers of 27 November 1869.

[0947] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 5 JANUARY 1870

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 186/58). Published: BGLL, II, p. 168.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 5th January 1870

Dear Mrs Frith,

The vile gout has got me again – and the doctor has just declared that I must decline the pleasure of dining at your house on Monday next<sup>1</sup> – if I want to keep clear of being laid up in bed. My foot is sufficiently painful to induce me to listen to reason, and to promise to be faithful to physic and careful living for the next week or ten days. On these conditions, I am promised a cure – and a cure I must have, for I don’t possess leisure time enough to fall ill in. Pray accept my apologies – under these disastrous circumstances for me – and ask Frith, with my love, to accept them too.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC writes on the Wednesday.

[0948] TO JAMES PAYN, 14 JANUARY 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 168.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Friday Janry 14

My dear Payn,

Many thanks for the proofs. The article is excellently well-adapted to meet the end in view. I have added the necessary paragraph<sup>1</sup> – and I have only to add to that my thanks for a friendly service to me, which is also a friendly service to literature.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Payn and WC's unsigned article 'A National Wrong' in Chambers's Journal – see [0933] to Payn of 26 November 1869. The added paragraph must be the penultimate one of the article – see Payn & Collins 1870, pp. 109–110.

[0949] TO T. H. HILLS, 18 JANUARY 1870

MS: Melbourne (M 4279). Published: BGLL, II, p. 169.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th Jany 1870

My dear Hills,

Many thanks. I accept your kind invitation for Thursday next the 20th at 7.15. – with the greatest pleasure.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[0950] TO CHARLES WARD, 19 JANUARY 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/56). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 169–170.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Wednesday Jany 19

My dear Ward,

Will you kindly send and pay the enclosed (2/9) – and I will return it when you come next. I don't know how else to pay this bill.<sup>1</sup>

If the money from the U.S. Bonds is paid in, as well as the Jan<sup>y</sup> Dividend – please have my book made up, and let me have it. I want to know – which I suppose my book will tell me – whether the Income Tax &c &c has been applied for. Also, I hear a rumour that Assessed Taxes must be paid this month – or the “free Briton” will be fined.<sup>2</sup> I think Coutts pays my Assessed Taxes too (doesn't he?). But I see people filling up new papers – and I have received no papers to fill up. Will you inquire if Mr Lowe expects me to apply for the papers?<sup>3</sup>

Don't let these Questions bother you. There is plenty of time – and very likely my banking book will answer me.

Man & Wife (in England) circulates 70,000 – and is steadily rising. We are going to start the Woman in White – when Man and Wife is done, in penny numbers illustrated. This is a secret for the present – the agreements not being signed yet.<sup>4</sup>

Yours ever | WC

1.30. P.M. Just received your letter & the banking book. I see Parochial Rates paid – but neither Income Tax nor Assessed Tax applied for. The Income Tax, I know is all right. It is the Assessed Taxes that I am not sure about. Never mind – let it wait till you get back. I, too, am seedy – but God forbid I should go to Bath!

---

1. The nature of the small bill remains unclear.

2. Eventually abolished in 1882, Assessed Taxes at this time were levied on houses, servants, horses, dogs, armorial bearings and other conspicuous symbols of wealth. See Stephen Dowell, A History of Taxation and Taxes in England (3 vols, London: Longmans, Green, 1884), III.

3. The reference is presumably to an employee at Coutts bank.

4. In fact this agreement with Cassell's was never signed and the penny number edition of WC's most popular work did not appear – see [0970] to William Tindell of 8 May 1870.

[0951] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 25 JANUARY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/23).<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 337. Published: BGLL, II, p. 170.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | January 25. 1870.

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks for the letter. My brother will take it to Dickens to sign.<sup>2</sup>

As for me, the gout has got me in the eye. I am confined to my room blinded for the time being. Please send the amended agreement to Cassell & Co.<sup>3</sup> I will write and tell them that you represent me in the matter. For the present I am quite helpless.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Entirely in the hand of Carrie Graves, signature included.

2. On 27 January CD wrote formally confirming that WC held the copyright in all of his pieces published in Household Words and All The Year Round. He enclosed it with a more personal letter of the same date complaining about the ‘excruciating phraseology’ of the draft and expressing concern at WC’s health (Pilgrim, XII, pp. 471–472). These were the last letters CD wrote to him.

3. As revealed by [0950] to Charles Ward of 19 January 1870, this must be the agreement for The Woman in White in penny numbers, which eventually fell through.

[0952] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 3 FEBRUARY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/25).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 170.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | February 3. 1870
Thursday | 1. pm.

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks – you have done all that is necessary. I am getting on steadily, but am still confined to a darkened room. Before long I hope to write again and make a new appointment with you.

Yours truly, | WC

Wm F. Tindell Esq.

---

1. Entirely in the hand of Carrie Graves, signature included.

[0953] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 14 FEBRUARY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/26).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 171.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Monday evening
February 14. 1870.

My dear Tindell

My eye is getting steadily better, and I am able to go on with my work by dictating it. But while the cold weather lasts the doctor wont let me go out.

Under these circumstances I am entirely at your disposal in the matter of completing the “Woman in White” business with Mr Galpin. Choose your own day any time this week for one of our business dinners here, at seven o’clock – and send me a line to say which day you appoint.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins.

W. F. Tindell Esqr.

---

1. Entirely in the hand of Carrie Graves, signature included.

[0954] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 16 FEBRUARY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/27).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 171.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | February 16. 1870.

My dear Tindell,

Monday next will suit me admirably. Dinner at seven.
Yours ever | WC
W. F. Tindell Esqr.

---

1. Entirely in the hand of Carrie Graves, signature included.

[0955] TO T. H. HILLS, 21 FEBRUARY 1870

MS: Melbourne (M 4280).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 171–172.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Monday. February 21.

My dear Hills,

Thank you for your kind note. Since that last pleasant dinner at your house, I have been miserably ill.<sup>2</sup> The Rheumatic Gout has flown to my eyes. I am much better – but I am not yet allowed to go out, and I am as you see, obliged to spare my eyes by using another hand to write with.

I hope soon to be able to call and report myself well again. My Doctor is only waiting for a fine day to let me escape from the imprisonment of a sick room. You will excuse my absence I am sure.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. In the hand of Carrie Graves, but signed by WC himself.

2. WC had dined with Hills on 20 January – see [0949], his note to Hills of 18 January 1870.

[0956] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 22 FEBRUARY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/29).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 172.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Feby 22nd

My dear Tindell,

I have sent you the Residuary Account & answers, by today's post – under another cover. Since then, comes a printed form for returns under "Metropolis Valuation Act". I am required to state how many years lease I have of this house. Will you send me a line to say whether it is 19 or 20 years? I forget which.<sup>2</sup> Also will you tell me whether I, or the landlord, pay the "Land Tax not Redeemed"? and how much that Tax is? The papers you have of mine relating to this house will I think answer these questions.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. In WC's own hand.

2. In fact WC's lease seems to have expired around February 1888. See [2793] to Emily Wynne of 22 December 1887.

[0957] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 24 FEBRUARY 1870

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/17). Published: Coleman, p. 155; BGLL, II, pp. 172–173.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Thursday Feby 24th 1870

Dear Sirs,

I am able to report myself better, I am glad to say. Having carried on "Man and Wife" for the last fortnight by means of dictation, I am now allowed by the doctor to use my eyes again, and to hold my own pen.

On Tuesday last, I sent in to your Editor the completion of copy for the 24th Weekly Part of the story. Calculating (so far as I can tell at present) on concluding the work in 36 Weekly Parts, the said instalment sent in on Tuesday completes the second “third” of the Manuscript. In paying the second “third” of the purchase-money for the periodical publication in your magazine, I shall be obliged if you will remit it, as before, to my account with Messrs Coutts and Co – 59. Strand.<sup>1</sup>

I have seen Mr Tindell on the subject of “The Woman in White” agreement – and you will hear from him, I hope, in the course of next week.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me, dear sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Cassell, Petter & Galpin

---

1. For £266-13s-4d – see [0926] to Charles Ward, 10 November 1869. The payment is recorded in WC’s bank account on 25 February (Coutts: WC).

2. Probably in connection with a proposal by Cassell’s to produce an edition of the novel in penny numbers. The ‘agreement’ is probably that with Smith, Elder concerning their single-volume editions of the novel. In the end the proposal was not accepted – see [0970] to William Tindell of 8 May 1870.

[0958] TO MISS GOLDSMID,<sup>1</sup> 2 MARCH 1870

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 173.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd March 1870

Mr Wilkie Collins accepts with much pleasure the honour of Miss Goldsmid’s invitation for Wednesday the 23rd March at 7 & ½ o’Clock. /

---

1. Probably one of Sir Francis Goldsmid’s sisters: either Anna Maria (1805–89), who lived at 26 Chester Terrace in Regent’s Park with five servants, or Caroline (1817–1906), who lived in Lynwood, a large eighteenth-century mansion in Streatham.

[0959] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 6 MARCH 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/31). Published: BGLL, II, p. 173.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Sunday March 6

My dear Tindell,

The Woman in White papers are nearly as complicated as the book. I think we shall settle it more easily if I see you in Essex Street.<sup>1</sup> I am free on Tuesday afternoon next – and I will call on you at 5 o’clock with the agreements. If a later hour will suit you better – let me hear. If 5 o’clock will do – don’t answer this. Tuesday is my only free day this week.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. See [0957] to Cassell’s of 24 February 1870.

[0960] TO WILLIAM DICKSON,<sup>1</sup> 7 MARCH 1870

MS: Lewis Collection (pasted into WC, Memoirs, I). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 173–174; Lewis website.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th March 1870

Dear Sir,

I find a picture of my fathers bearing a similar title to the title which you mention, thus described in my published “Life of Wm Collins RA” (Vol II. Appendix Page 347).

“Date of Exhibition 1831. Picture: – A Nutting Party. Exhibited at The British Institution. Purchased by The Revd R.A. Thorpe. Price paid 150 Guineas.”<sup>2</sup>

If this is the picture now in your possession, it will probably sell by auction for a far larger price than the price originally given for it. Messrs Christie and Manson of London (King Street St James’s) are the best auctioneers for the purpose, if you decide to sell the picture this way. You have only to communicate with them on the subject – satisfying them of course of the genuineness of the picture by stating how it came into your hands – and they will put it with one of their Sales. If you prefer to treat directly for the sale of the picture, Messrs Agnew of Manchester are well known as great buyers of modern pictures. In your place, however, I should sell the picture by auction – putting a reserved price on it which Messrs Christie and Manson would be able to suggest as fairly representing its present value.<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Wm Dickson Esqre

-
1. William Dickson was the brother-in-law of the Rev. R. A. Thorpe, who had purchased a picture from WmC.
  2. WC says of the picture: ‘Of the pictures at the British Institution, the largest was “The Nutting Party,” painted for the Rev. R. A. Thorpe; a rustic inland scene, with a fine group of children in the foreground’ (Memoirs, I, p. 344). The painting is now in the Guildhall Art Library, London, while an image can be seen at <www.collage.nhil.com>.
  3. The picture is recorded in George Redford, Art Sales (2 vols, London, 1888), as sold by W. Dickson at Christie’s in 1870 for 900 guineas (£945), buyer Agnew. However, a note by Dickson found with the letter says: ‘The Nutting Party – painted for The Revd R. A. Thorpe for 150 gns & put up at Christies for sale & for which 900 guineas was bid, but it was bought in. – This I had the sale of – Mr. Thorpe was my Brother in Law – He gave it to his aunt Miss Jane Thorpe of Durham & it came under my control as her Administrator.’

[0961] TO C. J. H. KLEINAN,<sup>1</sup> 9 MARCH 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12, formerly laid in Man and Wife (1870), I). Published: Parrish & Miller, p. 79; BGLL, II, pp. 174–175.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 9th March 1870<sup>2</sup>

My dear Sir,

I send you today by Parcel Delivery Company one set of the first four monthly parts of “Cassell’s Magazine” containing “Man and Wife”. The second set (for Madrid) shall be sent as soon as the first two monthly Parts are reprinted. I shall be able to obtain them, I hope, in a day or two.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | C.J.H. Kleinan Esqre

-
1. Unidentified, but presumably an agent for European periodicals.
  2. Partially superimposed over the date and printed address is an otherwise blank customs stamp dated ‘9 MARS 1870’.

[2991] TO MARY MOTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 22 MARCH 1870

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie’s (Sale 5621, 7 June 2005, South Kensington, Lot 12). Published: A&C1, p. 49, amended A&C5, p. 20.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | March 22nd 1870

Mr Wilkie Collins accepts with much pleasure the honour of dining with the Minister of the United States and Mrs Lothrop Motley on Monday 28th March at 1/4 to 8 ’oclock. /

-
1. The reply to the invitation would have been formally addressed to Mary Motley, née Benjamin (d. 1874), the wife of John Lothrop Motley (1814–1877: ANB), American ambassador in London from April 1869 to December 1870. Born near Boston, Massachusetts, John Motley was a distinguished historian and diplomat who spent much of his life in Europe.
  2. The invitation was to a dinner with Sophie, Queen of the Netherlands. According to the Times: ‘In the evening the Queen honoured his Excellency the Minister of the United States and Mrs Motley with her company at dinner at the American legation in Arlington-street’. The report records those present as: ‘The Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, the Netherlands Minister and Baroness Gevers, Lord Houghton, Rt Hon. Charles Villiers M.P., Hon. Mrs Norton, Sir William and Lady Anne Stirling Maxwell, Mr and Mrs Froude, Mr Grote, Charles Dickens, Robert Browning, Mr T. Hughes M.P., Wilkie Collins, Mr Hayward, Mr B. Moran, and Mr Karnebeck’ (Times, 29 March 1870, p. 12c).

[0962] TO DION BOUCICAULT,<sup>1</sup> 29 MARCH 1870

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (1–8 November 2004), by ‘brakov’, Lec-on-Solent, Hampshire, item 6934469309.
Published: BGLL, II, p. 175.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | March 29th 1870

Dear Boucicault,

Many thanks. I shall be delighted to assist at the baptism of the new dining-room on Wednesday April 4th.<sup>2</sup>

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dionysius Lardner Boucicault (1820–90: ODNB), Anglo-Irish dramatist who wrote such long-running plays as London Assurance (1841), The Corsican Brothers (1852) and The Coleen Bawn (1860). WC had clearly known the playwright for some time – see [0806] to Charles Wheatleigh of 4 January 1868.

2. The occasion has not been identified, though at this time Boucicault seems to have been resident at 326 Regent Street. WC writes on the previous Tuesday.

[0963] TO MARK LEMON, 1 APRIL 1870

MS: Lewis Collection ((L2527). Transcript (by Buckston Browne, 1935): Kansas (MS P557:A8).<sup>1</sup> Published with errors: BGLL, II, pp. 175–176. Amended: A&C13, p. 17.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W
April 1st 1870

Private

My dear Mark Lemon,

You will probably receive – in your editorial capacity<sup>2</sup> – certain volunteer contributions to Punch written by a gentleman named Maurice Drummond who is anxious to try his hand as an occasional contributor.<sup>3</sup>

I know how much you must be worried with applications of this sort. All I ask is – will you kindly make a note of the name – look at the contribution sent – and let me have one line to tell me the result.

I am writing at the request of an old friend of mine, who is a friend of Mr Drummond’s – and who answers for his having already had experience as a journalist in writing original articles for a (London) morning newspaper – which justifies him in trying what he can do.<sup>4</sup> Five minutes will tell you whether he possesses the special capacities required for your work – and two minutes at your desk will tell me whether the answer is Yes or No. Forgive me for troubling you in the matter, and believe me

Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. As is made clear in Buckston Browne’s letter (dated 17 October 1935 from 80 Wimpole Street, Cavendish Square, W.) to Clyde K. Hyder at Kansas (where that letter is now also held), Browne was a near neighbour of WC for just over a year before his death. There he also states that he has borrowed WC’s letter to Lemon from a friend (unidentified but probably Sir Henry Thompson) in order to copy it for Hyder. He may have kept it as it formed part of his collection of autographs when sold at Bonhams – see the Catalogue, 17 December 2020.

2. That is, as editor of Punch, a post Lemon held from 1841 to his death later in 1870.

3. Maurice Drummond (1825-1891: #259955), Receiver of the Metropolitan Police from 1860 to 1883. His is the only entry in the 1871 Census which fits (RG12/114/30/3). He lived with his wife Adelaide, the daughter of Lord Ribblesdale, five children, a Governess and five servants at Lower Terrace in Hampstead.

4. Probably the Pall Mall Gazette – See Lady St. Helier (Mary Jeune), Memories of Fifty Years (London: Edward Arnold, 1909, pp. 160-161).

[0964] TO WALTER W. JONES,<sup>1</sup> 4 APRIL 1870

MS: Montague. Published: BGLL, II, p. 176.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | April 4th 1870

Dear Sir,

I have no choice but to request that you will kindly make my apologies to the Committee. It is not possible for me to be present at the Dinner on Tuesday next.

I enclose the price of the Dinner Ticket, and remain

Dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Walter W. Jones Esqre

---

1. 'Walter William Jones, actuary, of The Savings Bank, Hercules Buildings, Lambeth, Secretary Newsvendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution' (Pilgrim, X, p. 460 n. 6).

[0965] TO JAMES PAYN, 9 APRIL 1870

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), damaged. Published: Coleman, p. 156; BGLL, II, pp. 176–177.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 9th April 1870

My dear Payn,

I am really and sincerely sensible of the friendly kindness and the literary good feeling which have united to place my name on the dedication-page of your new work of fiction.<sup>1</sup> Accept my hearty thanks, as your brother-writer and as your friend.

Is the book published yet? It is needless to say that I want to read it. I am suffering from rheumatism, and from the pressure (heavy pressure in my state of health) of my serial work<sup>2</sup> – and it will be a blessed relief to me, as well as a pleasure, to read yours. In six more weekly Parts (I am two months in advance of the Press), I hope to have done, and to see a little more of you than I have seen lately. In the meantime,

Believe me | Ever truly yours<sup>3</sup>

---

1. WC was the dedicatee of Payn's novel Gwendoline's Harvest, serialized in Chamber's Journal during the first half of 1870, before its appearance in two volumes from Tinsley.

2. Man and Wife, due to complete its serial run in Cassell's Magazine on 30 July.

3. Signature excised for the autograph.

[0966] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 26 APRIL 1870

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/ 18). Published: Coleman, p. 157; BGLL, II, p. 177.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th April 1870

Dear Sirs,

I hope to finish "Man and Wife" in the 36th or 37th Weekly Part – published July 20th, or 27th. I have now completed Part 32.<sup>1</sup>

Under these circumstances, it is necessary to arrange for the republication in Three Volumes for the Libraries. Will you kindly inform me if you feel disposed to undertake this? – and, if so, what terms you propose?<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell, Petter, & Galpin

---

1. The serial was eventually completed in thirty-seven parts.

2. Cassell's must have declined, for the novel was published on commission by F. S. Ellis.

[0967] TO DAVID PAE,<sup>1</sup> 26 APRIL 1870

MS: Lewis collection. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 177–178, with errors. Amended: A&C13, pp.18-19.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
April 26th 1870

Dear Sir

Pray accept my thanks for your letter.

I can easily understand that “Bishopriggs” grates on a Scotchman’s ear.<sup>2</sup> His /talk/ represents /(as well as distortion of spelling will do it)/ the effect of the Scotch pronunciation on an Englishman’s ear – and no men understand the peculiarities of their own accent. More than this, as to my experience, no two Scotchmen agree about the “Doric”.<sup>3</sup> I have ~~seriously~~ been seriously told that Walter Scott himself wrote bad Scotch – on excellent Scotch authority!

There is, besides, this difficulty in the way of making Bishopriggs correctly “Doric”. I have five hundred or a thousand English readers (counting in America) where I have one Scotch reader – and I have, again, a large public on the continent, whom I address through the medium of foreign translations. What would my English and American readers, and my foreign translators make of “The Doric”? This was the consideration present to my mind when I got the idea of Bishopriggs – and I resigned myself to the compromise which has been adopted in the story. A compromise, I am afraid, it must remain – or B. must be unintelligible out of Scotland. However, I will do what I can to profit by the hints which you have kindly given to me. I have many Scotch friends /in London/ who will help me – and I can at least try the experiment of reforming my waiter’s talk. I believe myself that it will end in the total evaporation of whatever humour there may be in the character. But it is easy to try. I am sincerely obliged to you for offering to undertake the task yourself. Having Scotch friends here within easy reach, it is, however, needless for you to trespass in this particular on your time – especially as I could not feel sure of being able to accept the emendations when they were made.

Believe me Dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. David Pae (1824–84), popular Scottish serial novelist and founding editor of the Dundee People’s Friend – see William Donaldson, Popular Literature in Victorian Scotland (Aberdeen: Aberdeen University Press, 1986), pp. 72–100. The MS was formerly owned by a descendant of Pae.

2. Referring to the comic Scottish head-waiter in Man and Wife. Pae must have been reading the novel in instalments in Cassell’s Magazine and have written to the author to suggest revisions in the representation of Scottish dialect before the work appeared in volume form.

3. Doric is the popular name for Mid Northern Scots or Northeast Scots and refers here to the Scots language as spoken in the northeast of Scotland. This language is not Gaelic but a dialect of English.

[0968] TO COUTTS & Co., 27 APRIL 1870

MS: Coutts.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 178–179.

London 27th April 1870

I request that you will be good enough to make the following payments on my account.

£3..10– on the 24th June next, & each succeeding Mids<sup>m</sup> to the Sun Fire Office<sup>2</sup> premium on Policy N<sup>o</sup> 2242859 for £3000

1. 2. 6 on the 1st April 1871 & each succeeding 1st April to Mess<sup>rs</sup> Praed & C on account of Mess<sup>rs</sup> Birch Ingram & C<sup>3</sup>

[stamp] Wilkie Collins

Mess<sup>rs</sup> Coutts & Co

---

1. Written in a secretarial hand on a paper slip, signed by WC across a mauve penny stamp and endorsed ‘Ent<sup>d</sup> New B<sup>k</sup> fol 153 and diary’.

2. The Sun Fire Office was founded in London in 1710 and is now part of Royal & Sun Alliance.

3. This was probably life insurance. Birch, Ingram, Harrison, & Co., of 68, Lincoln’s Inn Fields were solicitors to Equity and Law Life Assurance (Law Times, 17:424, p. 72c), while Praed’s & Co. were bankers of 89 Fleet Street (now part of Lloyds TSB).

[3092] TO WILLIAM D. BOOTH, 28 APRIL 1870

MS: Parrish (I/91, Reade vs. Roundtable), in extra-illustrated copy of Charles Reade, Griffith Gaunt (Boston: 1869). Published: A&C4, p. 17.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London | April 28th 1870

My dear Sir,

Since I last wrote to you, I have been laid up by a serious illness – rheumatic gout. Now that I am better, I have my serial story (“Man and Wife”, appearing in New York in Harpers Weekly) to work at until it is done. All the little spare time I have, is occupied in taking care of my health. Until this story is done, it is impossible for me to give my mind to anything else. And, after it is done, I am told by the doctors that I shall have serious reason to regret it, if I fail to take a rest.

Under these circumstances, I can only thank you for the answers to my questions. I have not yet had time to read them with the attention which they deserve. But they shall be duly placed in Mr Reade’s hands, and in the hands of my legal adviser here. I will also send your letter on to Mr Reade. I have some time since placed your Scheme for a Quasi-International-Copyright in his possession – and he has it still.<sup>1</sup>

Upon the whole, it appears to me that there is but one weak point in the position. We are attempting to create a right of property in the United States which the law of the United States refuses to recognize. Query – on trying the experiment – whether we should, or should not, be made the subjects of a special enactment declaring your ingenious discovery to be a breach of the law?

There is, as I have already said in my former letter, plenty of time to get opinions, and to learn what the United States’ publishers would do towards helping us to try the experiment. I must finish “Man and Wife”, and get some rest, before I can do anything in the matter – for the very simple reason that I am too weary to invent a new story yet a while. I will remind Mr Reade that you are waiting to hear what his view is – and, as soon as I have finished my present work, I will send you the opinion of my legal adviser here.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. In his letter of 12 April 1870, Booth had claimed: ‘I feel confident that the result will demonstrate that we have solved the great difficulty of foreign authors and domestic publishers and found a quasi International Copyright.’ In fact, nothing further seems to have come of the lawyer’s ingenious scheme.

[0969] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 30 APRIL 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, p. 179.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Saturday April 30th 1870

Dear Sirs,

I send with this the 32nd Weekly Part of “Man and Wife”, and Duplicate of 31st Part. I hope to complete the Story in the 36th or 37th Weekly Part.

Will you kindly send me a line to say whether you propose republishing the Story in book-form, before the estimated date of its completion in periodical form – on the 20th or 27th of July next? And, if so, how long before the last weekly Part is published in Harper’s Weekly?<sup>1</sup>

It is important to me to know this. I am writing a dramatic version of the story – and I have an agent in New York who undertakes placing the play on the stage in the United States. If we are not ready to appear at the theatre as soon as the book is published, the literary brigands will be ready with their dramatic version – and, so far as America is concerned, my labour will be in vain. If you will kindly tell me, by return of mail at what date you propose to publish the book (i.e. how many weeks, if any, before its completion in “Harpers Weekly”). I will arrange with my agent to produce the play at the same time.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. The serialization of Man and Wife in Harper's Weekly ended on 6 August 1870, a week later than in Cassell's Magazine in London as the last episode was split in two. Harper's published it as a single volume three weeks earlier. It was advertised in the New York Times on 13 July (p. 5g) 'Harper & Brothers...Publish this day: Man and Wife...with illustrations...Paper $1; Cloth $1.50.' It had already been published in three volumes by F. S. Ellis (London: June 1870). It was subsequently re-published in New York as No. 518 in 'Harper's Library of Select Novels'.

2. At this point WC's New York agent was Lewis Baker – see [1068] to Augustin Daly of 4 March 1871. In the event WC's dramatic version was put off – see [0980] to Harper's of 28 May 1870 – and a version by Augustin Daly ran at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in New York from 13 September.

[0970] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 8 MAY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/35). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 180–181.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 8th May 1870

Private

My dear Tindell,

After having given careful ~~reflection~~ consideration to the proposals submitted to me by Messrs Cassell, as well as to the whole question of the proposed republication of my works in a cheap form,<sup>1</sup> I have arrived at the conclusion that the prospect of remuneration offered to me if I engage in this speculation is not sufficient to justify me in locking up my copyrights for at least ten years to come. Thanking Messrs Cassell for the trouble which they have been so good as to take in respect to the calculations I beg to decline – on the ground first mentioned – the proposals which they have kindly submitted to me; and I decide to keep my copyrights unemployed on the chance that the present condition of English bookselling may sufficiently improve in the future, to justify English booksellers in risking more than they can risk now on speculating in my works.

Please send a copy of this to Messrs Cassell – and there is an end of that.

As to Tinsley, the more I think of his proposal the less I like it. I have made £800 by the library edition of the Moonstone. I am asked to sell him, the library edition of Man and Wife and the cheap edition of Man and Wife, and the cheap edition of the Moonstone – and I am only to get £100 more by the bargain. It may suit Tinsley's purpose to assume that Man and Wife is to be a failure. It suits mine to assume that it is going to beat The Moonstone. In short, I won't deal for the two together. I make this proposal to Tinsley. He shall buy an edition of me as he did before – paying half in cash, and half in bill at 3 months, as he did before. If he is afraid to buy 1500 – I will sell him a thousand for four hundred pounds. (He gave £600 for the 1500 of The Moonstone) – and then 500 copies more for £200 more – and so on. But the £200 must be paid, this time, half in cash, half in bill at three months. [two heavily erased lines beginning If Tinsley can't] If I consult his convenience, in only selling him a thousand, he must pay the penalty of distrusting me. I won't have the bargaining off the agreement, this time, which took place with the second edition of The Moonstone. The fool (if you remember) distrusted that – and declined to print the 2nd edition, unless we made concessions as to the payment.<sup>2</sup> Sooner than do this again, I will publish ~~the book~~ Man and Wife myself.<sup>3</sup> He shall absolutely bind himself to print, and pay for, a second edition (if he only buys a thousand) – or he shall not have the book at all. My own idea is to force him to bid for two thousand – or to give up. But I don't want to make your position a difficult one with him. I will see him damned before I sell cheap editions of Man and Wife and Moonstone for £100. They are both trump cards in my copyrights – and I will keep them with the rest. See Tinsley (if you can) to-morrow (Monday). We have no time to lose. My head was muddled, when you came here. I am as clear as a bell now – and I see through Tinsley to his marrow – if he has got one.

Yours ever WC

---

1. That is, in weekly penny numbers beginning with The Woman in White.

2. See Peters, pp. 307–308.

3. This was indeed the result of WC's dissatisfaction with Tinsley's proposals.

[0971] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 10 MAY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/36). Published: BGLL, II, p. 181.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | Tuesday. 10th May 1870

My dear Tindell,

I will be with you tomorrow (Wednesday) at 5 o'clock. If a later hour will suit you better, leave word with the clerks. Anytime after 5 will do for me.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

[0972] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 13 MAY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/38). Summary: B&C, II, p. 337 (dated 12 May 1870). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 181–182.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Friday. 13th May 1870

My dear Tindell,

I have got your letter. Many thanks.

It will not be possible for me to get to Essex Street tomorrow. So I must ask some questions – before deciding – on paper.

I. as to Saville & Edwards<sup>2</sup>

I understand that for £270 ..... they supply paper as well as printing. (1) Do they show us a sample of the paper? (2) As to binding, who undertakes that, and what does it cost? (3) Do Saville & Edwards undertake to keep the type standing for 3 months?

II. Mr Ellis.<sup>3</sup>

(1) Does the “risk” covered by his percentage, mean simply the risk of bad debts? or what else?

(2) When does he propose to make his payments, and in what form?

III The thousand copies.

(1). What will the sale of the edition bring?

(2) How much do we get per copy? This it is important to know. I am in the dark as to estimated profits.

As to the advertising – which I agree with you must be £100...- - the question is whether we had better not risk an edition of 1500 copies? The return from the advertising is a serious consideration. I only throw this out as a hint now – being still ignorant of what are the actual profits – after all payments, as stated, have been made.

Send me a line to answer my questions – and then I shall be able to decide on Monday

Yours ever | WC

---

1. '12' overwritten by '13'

2. Thus for Savill, Edwards & Co., printers of Chandos Street near Cavendish Square, who had printed The Moonstone for Tinsley.

3. Frederick Startridge Ellis (1830–1901), London antiquarian bookseller and publisher, who on 12 May had written to Tindell offering to publish Man and Wife on behalf of the author (Glasgow, 891117/37).

[0973] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 16 MAY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/39). Summary: B&C, II, pp. 337–338. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 182–183.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Monday, 16th May 1870

Private

My dear Tindell,

I think the percentage perfectly fair. But paying me when the librarians pay, means paying me something some years hence – and something not at all. I have made inquiries, and I find that M.<sup>1</sup> is heavily in debt to some of the publishers – also that he never gives more, and sometimes less, than 15/-. If he would give this (or even 10/- a copy) – and pay it<sup>2</sup> – we should do very well on 1000 copies – and splendidly on 1500. But Mr E.<sup>3</sup> is not a great publisher – Mr M. is not in debt to him, and therefore not in his power. Query whether he would not set Mr E. at flat defiance – and take the volume of the magazine as a saving of serious outlay to an already embarrassed business? I declare to God I don't know what to do. The position is disheartening, degrading, utterly helpless. I don't know when the libraries generally will pay – and I don't know that the chief will pay at all. And time is getting on – and something must be done.

I can only suggest two proceedings.

1st to ascertain from Mr E. when the librarians pay – in bills of course – and at what date?

2nd to see if Savill & Edwards (keeping the type standing as you tell me) will start with 500 copies only. My estimate of this is as follows

|                                     |                  |               |
|-------------------------------------|------------------|---------------|
| Savill & Edwards                    |                  |               |
| Print paper binding (say)           | £170..-.-        |               |
| Advertising                         | 100.      |               |
|                                     | £270..-.-        |               |
| Profits                      |                  |               |
| Mudie 250 at 15/-                   | £187..-.-        |               |
| Others 250 at 18/-                  | £225..-.- |               |
|                                     | £412             | 412           |
| Deduct commission 10 per cent (say) | 40 }             | 310    |
| and expenses                        | 270 }     | £102   |
| Profit                              | £372      | profit |

Even with the wretched prospect before me, I could surely sell 500 copies! And ~~£300~~ £100 gained is better than ~~£300~~ £100 lost by a higher venture.<sup>4</sup> The first thing is to find out when I may expect to receive my returns. It is impossible to do anything till we know that.

Yours ever WC

I can't get to you tomorrow (Tuesday) – having French friends coming to dine here at six.<sup>5</sup>

1. Charles Edward Mudie, owner of the dominant circulating library.

2. WC in fact underlines the phrase three times.

3. That is, F. S. Ellis.

4. The mistake in WC's calculations – he initially forgot the expenses of £270 – reflects his exasperation. In the event, 1,000 copies was the initial print run, which sold out almost immediately. Savill & Edwards's account for producing the first impression in fact came to just over £250 (Glasgow, 891117/56).

5. Written above the printed address on the first page.

[0974] TO JANE BIGELOW, 16 MAY 1870

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, II, p. 184.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Monday 16th May 1870

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

I shall be delighted to see you and Mr Bigelow again – on your return to England. But this note (I am sorry to say) must represent me today and tonight. My first free evening is on Wednesday next. From 7 to 10 – at any hour which will be most convenient to you, I am heartily at your service. Only send me one line to say where I am to go, and what hour between 7 and 10 on Wednesday next, I have the chance of finding you.

All day long, I am chained to my desk, writing against time, to finish my serial story. By the end of this month, I hope to have finished it.<sup>1</sup>

My kindest remembrances to Mr Bigelow.
Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC seems in fact to have completed Man and Wife on 9 June – see [0989] to Charles Ward of that date.

[0975] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 17 MAY 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 343; BGLL, II, p. 184.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17th May

My dear Mrs Ward,

Many thanks for your kind invitation. On the 16th of next month – so far as I know now – I shall have done my work, and be on my way to Switzerland.<sup>1</sup> But if my plans are altered (and if you will let me say yes conditionally) I shall be happy to make one among your guests, if I find myself still in town.

With love to all, | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Presumably referring to the completion of both narrative and dramatic versions of Man and Wife – see [0980] to Harper & Brothers, 28 May 1870. In the event WC did not travel to Switzerland that summer.

[0976] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 18 MAY 1870<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/40). Published: BGLL, II, p. 185.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Wednesday May 18th

My dear Tindell,

I will take my chance of finding you in Essex [sic for ‘Essex Street’] tomorrow Thursday 19th at 5. – or after, if more convenient to you. I will be there at 5.

At what dates, from the date of publication, does Mr Ellis propose to make the payments? It is impossible to settle until we know that.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Dating based on the calendar and the reference to Ellis.

[0977] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 20 MAY 1870<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/150). Published: BGLL, II, p. 185.

90, Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Friday 20th May

My dear Tindell,

I send the copy with this – being my own proof-books corrected.<sup>2</sup>

Proofs here, in duplicate – mind they add as the address Portman Square.<sup>3</sup> There is another Gloucester Place, near Westbourne Terrace.

A slip of paper marks the place where the 1st Vol ends. I have written the necessary instructions on it.

Yours truly | WC

---

1. Dating based on the calendar, the notepaper (watermarked ‘JOYNSON | 1869’) and the clear references to the publication of Man and Wife.

2. That is, from the initial serial publication in Cassell's Magazine.

3. The proofs would be sent by the printers Savill & Edwards in nearby Chandos Street. WC appears to have omitted those words in his own handwritten address but then squeezed the line in between ‘90 Gloucester Place’ and the date.

[0978] TO GEORGE M. TOWLE, 21 MAY 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), letter only; memoir at Yale (Gimbel-Dickens H1239). Published: BGLL, II, p. 186, amended A&C2, p. 69, both without the full memoir though the latter reconstructed parts of it; memoir transcribed (with errors) in Emily Bell, Changing Representations of Charles Dickens, 1857–1939, PhD thesis, University of York, August 2017, Appendix; Amended: A&C12 pp. 12-16.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London Saturday May 21st 1870

Dear Sir,

Your request has unluckily reached me at a time when I am absorbed in finishing “Man and Wife” – and in also writing a dramatic version of the story – both “against Time”. I had not forgotten your note. I had no time to answer it.

To day, I have dictated a Memoir for you, at the breakfast table – which I enclose, and which I hope you will find useful.<sup>1</sup>

(In great haste) | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To George Makepeace Towle Esqre

(Page 1)
Wilkie Collins<sup>2</sup>

I was born on the 8th /January,/ 1824, at No 11, New Cavendish Street, Portland Place, London. I am the eldest of two sons (and two only children) of the late William Collins (Royal Academician), the celebrated painter of the coast scenery and cottage life of England.

For the first twelve years of my life, I was taught in the usual way at a well reputed private school. I learnt as little as possible; and that little (consisting mainly of the rudiments of Latin and Greek) has not been of the slightest use to me in my after-life.

In the year 1837, my father decided to go to Italy to find fresh subjects for his brush among the people and the scenery of that country. My mother was to accompany him, and the question was, whether his two boys were to go too.

With two exceptions, all my fathers’ friends declared that it would be madness on his part to interrupt the education of two boys, one 13 years old and one 9, by taking them to a foreign country and exposing them to foreign influences, at a time when they ought to be subjected to the wholesome discipline and restraint of an English school. The two exceptions already mentioned happened, however, to be two very remarkable people, capable of seeing possibilities of education in other systems than the ~~conventional~~ system / [del] conventionally recognized / [del] about them. They were, my Godfather, / Sir David Wilkie, (the great Scotch painter[]); and the famous Mrs Somerville, /the/ authoress of Physical Geography.<sup>3</sup> These two reminded my father that what his boys might lose in Latin and Greek, they might gain in knowledge of modern languages, and in acquiring habits of observation among people and scenes entirely [del] new to them. [del] Wilkie was my father’s dearest friend; and, for Mrs Somerville’s powers, he felt the highest respect. He took us to Italy with him. We remained ~~there~~ abroad for two years; and there, and in that way, I picked up the only education which I /can/ sincerely ~~believe~~ say has been of some real use to me.

Returning from Italy, I went back to school / (a private school), / and the classics. In due time, it became a question next of Oxford and the classics, or of Cambridge and the Mathematics. My good father left me free to ~~choose~~ /choose/ my own profession; only telling me that, if I liked it too, he would like to see me in the Church. I hardly know which prospect I most disliked – going to a University or going into the Church. To escape both, I declared for Commerce, and at seventeen or eighteen years old, I was placed in a merchant’s office.

(2)

Here I remained – I think for four years. [del] I should probably not have remained four days, if I had not had a pursuit of my own to follow which really engaged my interest. In plain English, I was already an author in secret. There is hardly any form of ~~literary absurdity~~ /of audacious literary enterprise proper to my age/, which I did not perpetrate in secret, while I was supposed to be in a fair way of becoming one of the solid commercial props of my native country. Towards the end of the four years, I had ~~become~~ /grown/ wise enough to descend from epic poems and tragedies in blank verse, to unassuming little articles and stories, /some of/ which found their way modestly into the small periodicals of the time. Thus self-betrayed as unfit for /mercantile pursuits,/~~commerce~~, I abandoned commerce, and tried reading for the Bar. My reading lasted, as well as I can remember, six weeks – and then I began a novel by way of importing a little variety into my legal /studies/ ~~pursuits~~. I continued, /however, to be a member of the Inn of Court (Lincoln’s Inn) [del] at which I had been entered as a student; and (no examination being obligatory, in my time) [del] I was five years afterwards called to the [del] Bar. I am now a Barrister of some fifteen years standing, without having ever put on a wig and gown.

To return for a moment to the novel mentioned above, and to the time when I was a student at Lincoln’s Inn. I have to report that this work of fiction was actually offered for sale among the London publishers. They all declined it; and, they were quite right. The ~~subjee~~ scene was laid in the Island of Tahiti, before the period of its discovery by European navigators (!). My youthful imagination ran riot among the noble savages, in scenes which caused the respectable British publisher to declare that it was impossible [to put] his name on the title page of such a novel as this. For the momen[t, I was] a little discouraged. [del] /I got over it, and/ began another novel. This time the scene was Rome; the period the fifth century; and the central historical event, the siege of the Eternal City by the Goths. All day, I read ~~at~~ my authorities at the British Museum. In the eveni[ngs] I wrote my book in the quiet and seclusion of my father’s painting room. The first volume and part of the second had been completed, when my employment was suspended by my father’s death. I put the novel aside, and addressed myself to the writing of another story, which lay far nearer to my heart – the story of my father’s life. In the “Memoirs of William Collins, R.A.” I saw my name on the title-page of a printed and published book, for the first time.

(3)

After the publication of the biography (in the year 1848) I returned to my romance. The third volume was finished in Paris; and after a preliminary refusal of the manuscript by the late Mr Colburn, the book was published in 1850 by Mr Bentley, under the title of [del] /“Antonina,/ or The Fall of Rome.” I instantly stepped into a certain place as a novelist. Such a chorus of praise was sung over me by the critics, as has never been sung over me since. The favourable verdict of the reviews (whether merited or not) was endorsed in time by the readers, many of my literary elders and betters kindly adding their special tribute of [del] encouragement and approval. In short “Antonina” opened to me the career as a novelist which I have continued to follow [del] to the present time.

The rest of the story of my life is simply the story of the books /which/ I have written. Here is a list of them in chronological order.

1. The life of William Collins, R. A. (1848.)
2. Antonina or The Fall of Rome. (1850).
3. Basil. (1852).
4. Rambles beyond Railways. [del] (1852.)*<sup>4</sup>
*(The narrative of a walking tour in Cornwall.)
5. Hide and Seek. (1854).
6. After Dark. (1856.)*
*(collection of short stories.)
7. The Dead Secret. (~~1867~~) (1857)

8. The Queen of Hearts. (1858.)*
*(collection of short stories.)
9. /The/ Woman in White. (1860.)
10. No Name. (1862.)
11. My Miscellanies (1863)*
*(collected sketches and essays.)
12. Armadale (1866)
13. The Moonstone. (1868)
14. Man and Wife (1870.)

=====

Dramatic Works.

1. The Lighthouse. } Both acted in private at the house of Charles Dickens
  2. The Frozen Deep. } And in public at the Olympic Theatre, London
  3. The Red Vial. At the Olympic Theatre.
  4. No Thoroughfare. (Dramatic version of the Christmas Story. written in collaboration with Dickens and Fechter. (Adelphi Theatre. London.)
  5. Black and White. In collaboration with Fechter. Adelphi The[at]re].
- =====

-
1. Towle's article on WC in (New York) Appleton's Journal of Popular Literature, Science, and Art, 4:75 (3 September 1870), pp. 278–281, was based on this memoir. Towle had met WC on 30 June 1868 – see [0840] to him of 26 June 1868.
  2. The memoir is held in the Gimbel Collection at Yale University; see John B. Podeschi, Dickens and Dickensiana: A Catalogue of the Richard Gimbel Collection (New Haven: Yale University Library, 1980), p. 478. Both the body of the text and the amendments appear to be in the hand of Caroline Graves; presumably his amanuensis also read the memoir back to WC at the breakfast table so that additions and corrections could be made. See Emily Bell, 'A Lost Autobiographical Sketch', Wilkie Collins Journal, 14 (2017), online only www.wilkiecollinssociety.org.
  3. Mary Somerville's Physical Geography went through numerous editions both in the UK and the USA. She is not mentioned in Memoirs.
  4. The asterisks used here and below represent the dotted saltires which WC inserts (rather redundantly) to indicate the relation with the next line.
  5. To the right of the list of novels, aligned with 'The Queen of Hearts' and 'No Name', appears a long multiplication sum (44 x 14 = 616) in another, unknown hand. Its purpose remains obscure.

[0979] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 24 MAY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/4 1–2).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 186.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | May 24th

My dear Tindell,

Thanks for your note. The advertisement will do admirably. I have inserted "in three volumes" – which seems to be necessary. Of course, the advertisement will go "across columns". Small advertisements are useless now.

In great haste | ever yours | WC

Savill & Edwards have sent me a specimen page. It is beautifully set out, and looks admirably. I have written to tell them so.

-
1. Accompanied by a sheet giving the text of the advertisement in the hand of F. S. Ellis:

in Bookseller – & Publishers circular

Wilkie Collins's New Novel | Man and Wife

will be ready for delivery on June 27. In order to insure punctual delivery it is requested that orders may be sent as early as possible.

F.S. Ellis | 22 King St Covent Garden'.

[0980] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 28 MAY 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 1950).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 338–339.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. | Saturday May 28th 1870

Dear Sirs,

I have received your kind letter.

“Man and Wife” will be completed in the 37th Weekly Part – published July 27th. The republication here, will be one [del] month in advance of the conclusion of the story in its periodical form. The novel will be published, in three volumes, on the 27th of next June.

As to the dramatic version (the greater part of which /I have/ is completed) [del] I find (since I wrote to you) that the denouement of the book, cannot possibly be followed in the play. After considering the question carefully, I ~~feel~~ feel that I must invent an entirely new conclusion for the drama. There is no fear of the theatrical banditti being able to do this – and I am also informed (by Mr Dion Boucicault) that there is no fear of any appearance of an unauthorised version during your hot season, when theatrical speculation in the United States is at a standstill. Under these circumstances, the production of the play may possibly be deferred. In accepting therefore your kind proposal to give the dramatic version a notice in the “Weekly” – which I do most gladly – I venture to suggest that nothing should be said about time. It will /be/ sufficient, I think, to announce that [del] a dramatic version of the novel is being written by me, for performance in the United States as well as in England – that the play will be in four acts; the three first acts closely following the book, and the fourth act containing a new conclusion to the story invented by the author, [del] with a view to stage-necessities and effects – and lastly that I have already appointed an agent to represent me in the United States, who will communicate on the subject with American managers in due time. This latter notification will spare me many letters – and will be considered an additional favour by me on that account.<sup>2</sup>

I have also to thank you for your proposal, relating to the writing of some short stories in your magazine. For the present, I must rest. When the novel and the play are both done, I propose going to Switzerland to idle in the mountain air. If you will allow me, therefore, I will defer answering this part of your letter definitely until later in the year, when I shall know better than I know now what my plans are likely to be for future work.<sup>3</sup>

With this, you will receive additional proofs of Parts 34 and 35. The greater part of 36 is at press, but it is so covered with corrections that I wait to send you a Revise by the mail of /Saturday/ June 4th. The [del] 36th Part is published on the 20th of July – which still leaves an advance of six weeks.

I am very glad to hear that you think well of the story. It has cost me – especially the latter part of it – no slight effort of thought, and /has laid on me/ no common stress of work.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. Endorsed on the otherwise empty back page of WC’s second sheet by a member of staff at Harpers: ‘Wilkie Collins | May 28/70’.

2. The announcement duly appeared in Harper’s Weekly, 25 June 1870, p. 403, under the heading ‘Wilkie Collins’. The information WC provides is reproduced virtually verbatim, and the notice concludes: ‘Few novels are more capable of dramatic treatment than this admirable work, so rich in strongly marked characters and situations of exciting interest.’

3. In the event, the only short story by WC to appear thereafter in Harper’s New Monthly Magazine (1850–99) was ‘Percy and the Prophet’ in August 1877.

[0981] TO CHARLES READE, 29 MAY 1870

MS: Noel.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Clareson, pp. 118–120 (dated 29 May 1871). Published: B&C, II, pp. 339–341.

Sunday May 29 (In bed)

My dear Reade,

I tried to get to you last night – but I had no idea where you were, and I could not find out – until you bowed from a Private Box. And then I could not get upstairs in time to meet you.<sup>2</sup>

My verdict is that the immense difficulties of dramatising the story have been met and conquered in a most masterly way – and that the play contains some of the most interesting and the most original scenes that I have beheld [del] /for/ many a long year past. The acting decidedly good. Neville<sup>3</sup> – Grotait<sup>4</sup> – the workmen (those silent as well as those speaking) all excellent. Of the ladies, Miss Erskine<sup>5</sup> best, – judged by last night’s ordeal. She was well in her part, and has unquestionable ability. Miss Young<sup>6</sup> – personally (to me) much the most interesting woman of the two, appeared to be over-weighted! But I thought she was terribly frightened – and I wait to see her again. At present, she strikes me as a charming actress in sentimental comedy – called upon a little too suddenly to rise to the expression of strong emotion in strong drama.

Now as to making the piece popular – in other words as to cutting out. Here are my views (right or wrong)

Act I | =

Shifty Dick<sup>7</sup> /, on his entrance,/ does’nt [sic] express himself to those who have not read the story. Who is he? Why does he come on, disguised as a Frenchman? I should take the scene out, and bring him in later – after he has been first talked about so [del] that the audience may recognise him when he appears.

Act II | =

The old church. Admirable scene. Less forging – [del] it is excellently done – but you destroy the effect of making the knife, by the previous hammering & beating. No ghosts – no marriage vision – the people don’t understand it. Don’t let Neville speak when the door is being taken off its hinges – he prevents the audience from seeing the door disappear – Let him look at the door – say “Did I hear something outside?” and wait, looking at the door. Then the people will look at the door – and that admirable scene will be heightened. N.B. Mr Ashley must not wear a chimney pot hat on a country excursion – don’t let him try to look as if he had been snowed on.<sup>8</sup> “Suppose” the snow, unless you can be sure of having it well done

Act IV

Don’t let Shifty Dick stand waiting to be caught. Out with his marriage speech – ~~away with him~~ /don’t let him appear/ until Neville has come on, and Ashley has taunted him [del]. Then let ~~him~~ Shifty Dick be brought on to be identified by living evidence as well as photographic evidence – in his clergyman’s clothes – /supposed to have been/ arrested as he was leaving the vestry to join the [del] wedding party. “Is this Shifty Dick?” – “Yes!” – Is that the man who married them?” – “Yes” – Hooray! and on with the handcuffs!

Act III

I find myself with less vivid recollections of this act than of the others. An excellent scene with Grotait and the fulminating box is before me vividly – and the blown-up mill I remember. But no more. Are there [del] bits that might come out here? I suspect there are.

=

Mr Cheetham must be made to speak up. Down with that damned “Prompter’s Box” advertisement over the door – and up with the old church, and the fight, in its place.

Advertise more largely in Times and Daily Telegraph and Standard.

—

[del] I see no advertisement in the Echo – an immense circulation. Rectify this.

—

A big Poster of the old church on all the prominent hoardings.

=

All these things I would have called and said – but my miserable book won’t get finished.<sup>9</sup> I must stay at home and work. So I send Mrs Graves with this. Between 3 and 4 – if you are this way, you will find me. After 4, I go out – and then dine at Highgate. Lehmann has come back.

[del] Once more, I congratulate you on this piece.<sup>10</sup> All depends now on judicious cutting and judicious management. If there is anything I can do, command me.

Yours evr | WC

-
1. WC writes without address on one side only of each of three sheets of very large, thin paper.
  2. The letter is written on the morning after 'the opening night of Free Labour, the dramatic adaptation of Put Yourself in His Place, staged at the Adelphi' (Clareson, p. 118). Free Labour opened on Saturday, 28 May 1870, and ran for 54 performances to 29 July. Compare WC's comments on the original novel during its serial run in the Cornhill in [0939] to Reade, [September-Mid October] 1869.
  3. Henry G. Neville played the leading role of Henry Little and it is to him WC must refer, rather than John G. Neville who took the minor part of Mr Cheetham.
  4. The role of one of the villains of the piece, the union leader Grotait, was played by G. F. Sinclair.
  5. The part of Jael Dence, the Amazonian servant who saves Henry Little's life, was played by Roberta Erskine.
  6. The part of Grace Carden, the gentle lover of the hero, was played by Margaret Young.
  7. The part of the mysterious swindler, Shifty Dick, was played by Richmond Kyrle, .
  8. The part of Frederick Coventry, another unionist villain, was played by Ashley.
  9. Referring to Man and Wife, running as a serial in Cassell's Magazine
  10. Reviews of the play were not good. The performance was 'dragging and tedious' according to the Times (31 May 1870, p. 4), while the Athenæum (4 June 1870, pp. 749–750) was even more severe. Though conceding that 'Mr. Reade's method and purpose are so thoroughly his own, and ... so good in their way', the Athenæum reviewer concluded that it was difficult 'to find anything but fault with his new drama.' Nearly half an hour consumed with Henry G. Neville 'at work beating, on a real anvil, a piece of iron drawn out of a real forge.'

[0982] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 1 JUNE 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/43). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 187–188.

90, Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | June 1st 1870

My dear Tindell,

Will you run over the enclosed proofs, and tell me if there is anything absolutely wrong in the legal points which they present. Remember that my object is to make the case as strong as possible against the existing law. Please return me the proofs – with any corrections or suggestions, which may strike you, marked on the margin. I shall want them back before the American mail leaves on Saturday next.

As to advertising the book. Let us not waste money on papers which won't help us. Here are my ideas.<sup>1</sup>

Daily Papers.

Times – In the Special book-column lately opened.
Daily Telegraph.

The largest number of insertions in these two.

=

Morning Post. A few insertions in this. Morning Post read by my readers.

Standard A few insertions

Daily News Not more than one or two.

=

Weekly Papers

Athenæum } Across columns in every case.
Saturday Review }

=

Evening Papers

Pall Mall Gazette } A few insertions

Echo }

I don't believe it is of the least use to advertise in any other Weekly Papers than the two I have mentioned. The Spectator has a very small circulation. The cheap weeklies are not read by people who subscribe to libraries.

Query. Would it cost too much to have a special slip of coloured paper announcing the publication of the book inserted in the July number of “Edwin Drood”? Dickens’s circulation is large and influential. I say a special slip, because we should be lost if we advertised among the heap of other notices.<sup>2</sup> If private influence is wanted here I can exert it. Let me hear what you think of these notions.

Yours ever WC

How long before publication does Mr Ellis propose to advertise?

I begin the last Weekly Part today.

---

1. We have not been able to check precisely where and when advertisements for Man and Wife in fact were inserted, though brief notices did begin to appear regularly in the Times in its ‘Times Column of New Books and New Editions’ from 27 June 1870.

2. This plan does not seem to have been carried out.

[0983] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 2 JUNE 1870

MS: Le Kohns. Published: BGLL, II, p. 188.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square. | June 2nd 1870

Private

My dear Palgrave Simpson,

Will you kindly read the enclosed letter, (from a literary brigand who has robbed me)<sup>1</sup> and tell me what I better do?

I have nothing but a complete Scenario of “The Moonstone” put together with Fechter’s assistance, and waiting in my “archives” until I can find time to write the piece, and actors to play it. Can I register the scenario on the books of the “Society”?<sup>2</sup>

It is needless to say that if I can stop this audacious interference with my right of property in the work of my own invention, I will. The question is – How can I do it?

Forgive me for troubling you. I am nearly fagged to death, under the double stress of finishing “Man and Wife” as a novel, and as a play – and time fails me for everything but my work.

My next letter is to Canada to stop a piracy of “Man and Wife” there.<sup>3</sup> It is a pleasant aspect of Literature this [racking] of one’s brains to invent – for the benefit of perfect strangers who live by stealing invention.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Untraced.

2. The Dramatic Authors’ Society, of which Simpson was the Secretary.

3. See [0987] to Hunter, Rose & Co. of 4 June 1870.

[0984] TO THE EDITOR OF CASSELL’S MAGAZINE,<sup>1</sup> 2 JUNE 1870

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/20). Published: Flower, p. 30; Coleman, p. 158; BGLL, II, p. 189.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | June 2nd

Dear Sir,

I find that there is a piracy of “Man and Wife” in Canada, which I can only stop by authorising a publication of the story there, and sending sheets in advance, as I do to America.<sup>2</sup>

Will you kindly send me – the weekly part published yesterday (Part 29 – Wednesday, June 1st) – and the remaining parts, up to Part 35 (inclusive) – in duplicate? It will greatly help the object I have in view if you can let me have them, in time for the mail of Saturday next.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

The Editor

-
1. By then probably George Manville Fenn (1831–1909) – to whom WC wrote on 2 September 1881 ([1972]).
  2. See [0987] to Hunter, Rose & Co. of 4 June and [1008] to them of 16 July.

[0985] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 3 JUNE 1870

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/ 19). Published: Flower, p. 31; Coleman, p. 159; BGLL, II, p. 189.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd June 1870

Dear Sirs,

A line to acknowledge the safe receipt of the duplicates – and to thank you for your kindness in so promptly assisting me to stop the piracy in Canada. I will have some extracts made from the letter written to me by the Canadian publishers relating to the present state of the law there,<sup>1</sup> and will send them to you. A signed application to the local legislature – accompanied by publication in Canada – protects the copyright. In my case, the publication is publication of “Man and Wife” in book-form. But this – I am told – will suffice to stop the continued piracy of the periodical issue now appearing in a Canadian newspaper.<sup>2</sup>

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Hunter, Rose & Co. of Toronto – see [0987] to them of 4 June.
  2. Probably the Toronto Globe – see [1008] to Hunter, Rose of 16 July.

[0986] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 4 JUNE 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 1950), with accompanying documents. Published: BGLL, II, p. 190.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Saturday June 4th 1870

Dear Sirs,

Under another cover, I send you, by this mail, a Triplicate of Weekly Part 35, and a Corrected Revise of Part 36.

With this letter, you will receive certain pages of Cassell’s Magazine, containing my latest corrections of the earlier portions of the story, made for the republication here in book-form. If you can embody these corrections in your republication – slight as some of them may appear to be – you will be improving the book. You will find a reference given, in the case of each correction, to the numbered chapter in which it occurs. The novel will be published here – as I informed you in my last letter – on the 27th of this month.

Since I wrote to you, I have received a letter from Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co of Toronto, informing me that “Man and Wife” is pirated in a Canadian newspaper, and that the only way of stopping this audacious infringement of the rights of an English author, in an English colony, is for me to publish in Canada, a Canadian Edition of my book. They make me a proposal to that effect which I have accepted, and they will publish in Canada, simultaneously with the publication here on the 27th.<sup>1</sup> I have expressly informed them that in thus vindicating my rights in Canada, I understand that I am, in no possible way, interfering with your rights in the United States – and I have added the expression of my conviction that you will understand, and sympathise with, the effort that I am now making to protect my copyright in an English colony, by the means which the local Legislature expressly places at my disposal.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. See [0987] to Hunter Rose of the same date. Also found in file MA 1950 at Morgan are manuscript and printed copies of two notices from Hunter, Rose. These announce, respectively, the publication of an authorized Canadian edition of WC’s novel on 6 July at 75c in paper covers and $1.00 in ‘Rozburgh Style’, and a warning that heavy penalties would be enforced in the case of illegal importation of the ‘American Edition’.

[0987] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 4 JUNE 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Extract: Preface to Man and Wife (Toronto: Hunter, Rose, 1870). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 191–192.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Saturday. June 4th 1870

Gentlemen.

I at once accede to your proposal – and I thank you for giving me the opportunity of asserting my rights as a British subject in a British colony.<sup>2</sup>

You will find the form enclosed. I have filled it up, and signed it.<sup>3</sup>

By book-post I send you advance-sheets of those portions of the story which are not yet published. Duplicates will follow, by the next mail, in case of accidents by post. The remaining sheets of the story will follow in the same way.

“Man and Wife” will be concluded, in the periodical publication, on the 27th of July. The novel will be republished here, in book form (in three volumes) a month in advance of that time – on the 27th of this month. Your publication can be simultaneous with this, but must not be before it.

I have to add that I desire to respect the rights of Messrs Harper in the United States. They have paid liberally for my advance sheets – and they republish in book-form – so far as America is concerned – with every advantage that I can give them. I am quite sure that Messrs Harper in return will respect our rights in Canada.

I have sent copied extracts from those parts of your letter which related to copyright, and to your wish to obtain electros of the illustrations, to Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin.

The “two copies” to be registered, are two copies, I presume of the Canadian publication. If I am mistaken here, (or elsewhere) you have only to write and tell me so.

I remain, gentlemen | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | I send you, with this, leaves from Cassell’s Magazine, containing my latest corrections (for the republication in book-form) of those earlier parts of the story which have been already published. Slight as some of these corrections may appear, they have an important bearing on the effect of the story. In reprinting from Harpers Weekly (which prints from my advance sheets) you will do well therefore to embody the new corrections sent with this. A reference is given in each case to the numbered chapter in which the corrections occur. WC

Messrs | Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. Toronto-based publishers of government documents and Canadian reprints of English copyright books. According to W. J. Rattray, The Scot in British North America (4 vols, Toronto: Maclear, 1880), IV, ch. 8, the two partners were Robert Hunter (d. 1877), an accountant, and George Maclean Rose (1829–98), who had been born in Wick, Scotland and was later to edit A Cyclopaedia of Canadian Biography (Toronto: Rose Publishing Co., 1886–8).

2. [1008] to the firm of 16 July 1870 suggests that Hunter, Rose had initially written to him pointing out that a pirated version of Man and Wife was then appearing as a serial in the newspaper the Toronto Globe and offering to publish an authorized edition of the novel to assert his Canadian copyright.

3. Though it is not found in Parrish, this is presumably the form registering Canadian copyright of Man and Wife.

[0988] TO CATHERINE BEARD,<sup>1</sup> 8 JUNE 1870

MS: CDM (Staples B200), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 192.

90 Gloucester Place, Portman Square. W. | 8th June 1870

Dear Miss Beard,

I am shocked and grieved. I will call later to hear if you have got any news.<sup>3</sup>

Yours ever | WC (In great haste)

1. Catherine Charlotte Beard (d. 1893), who lived with her brother, Francis Carr Beard, doctor and friend to both CD and WC.
2. Directed to 'Miss Beard | 44. Welbeck Street'.
3. CD collapsed on the evening of 8 June. His sister-in-law Georgina Hogarth summoned the local surgeon and sent a telegram to Frank Beard in London. Catherine Beard clearly sent a note to Collins, who replied that evening. CD died at his house, Gad's Hill Place, the next day at 6.10 pm. On the back of the notepaper the Comte de Suzannet, the distinguished collector of Dickens memorabilia, has written 'Note by Wilkie Collins to Miss Catherine Beard (sister of Francis Carr Beard, CD's friend & doctor) on receipt of the news of CD's sudden seizure, from which he never recovered, in 1870'.

[0989] TO CHARLES WARD, 9 JUNE 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/57). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 192–193.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | June 9th 1870

My dear Ward,

Will you pay to my account the enclosed cheque for £140 – entering it as “Recd by Charles Fechter”.<sup>1</sup>

A line to say you have got it safely,
I have finished “Man and Wife” today.<sup>2</sup>
Ever yours | WC

-
1. The reason for this payment to WC is unclear. In 1868–69 WC had made four payments to Fechter totalling £200-18s (Coutts: WC); it is likely all were in connection with the Adelphi production of Black and White.
  2. This must be the serial novel rather than the dramatic version.

[0990] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 10 JUNE 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/44). Summary: B&C, II, p. 341. Published: BGLL, II, p. 193.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th June

My dear Tindell,

You are quite right. Besides, since you wrote, he is gone.<sup>1</sup> I finished “Man and Wife” yesterday<sup>2</sup> – fell asleep from sheer fatigue – and was awakened to hear the news of Dickens's death.

The advertising at the Stations is an excellent idea.
Yours truly | WC

-
1. That is, Dickens is dead. Tindell had presumably argued against the idea of inserting a special slip in the July number of Edwin Drood, announcing the publication of Man and Wife.
  2. See [0989] to Charles Ward of the previous day.

[0991] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 11 JUNE 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, p. 193.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London June 11th 1870

Dear Sirs,

I send with this the conclusion of “Man and Wife”.<sup>1</sup> The corrected proofs will follow next Saturday.

(In great haste) | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

-
1. Presumably a copy of WC's holograph, as the novel had only been finished on 9 June.

[0992] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 11 JUNE 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/45). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 193–194.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Saturday June 11

My dear Tindell,

I am not quite sure about placarding the streets – in the case of a Circulating Library Edition. It appears to me to be a form of advertising better suited to a cheap Edition which the public is to buy – than to an edition which they are only to borrow.

Consider this and ask Mr Ellis what he thinks. If you both see no force in my objection – then consider the objection withdrawn. It is only a “tentative suggestion”.

I have chosen the paper and binding – I like both.<sup>1</sup>

As to the number, to be struck off, we had better (as the type is to be kept standing) begin with 1000, I think. – In a month or less, from publication, we shall see how the wind blows. I say – it will be either a larger or smaller sale than The Moonstone – I doubt it’s being the same sale – the two books are so entirely different.

I am sadly fagged and out of spirits.

In a few weeks more, I shall get rest.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Gasson describes the binding as follows: ‘Dark red cloth, covers blocked in blind, spines lettered in gilt, black or dark green endpapers’ (p. 100).

[0993] TO WILLIAM STEBBING,<sup>1</sup> 14 JUNE 1870

MS: Times. Published: BGLL, II, p. 194.

Sir,

I have just come from Dickens’s funeral.<sup>2</sup> Forster is perfectly incapable of calling on you – and has asked me to call in his place.<sup>3</sup>

Shall I supply you with the names of the persons present – and all else that is to be told? And will you have the necessary article written from the facts? I am far from well – or I would offer to do it myself

Wilkie Collins

Will the facts be in time – if you have them before two o’clock?<sup>4</sup>

---

1. William Stebbing (1831–1926), leader writer and reviewer for the Times, who had reviewed The Moonstone on 3 October 1868.

2. The private funeral took place on 14 June 1870 at Westminster Abbey. WC and CAC were both present.

3. John Forster, soon to be CD’s first biographer.

4. The Times report on 15 June 1870 p. 12c mentions ‘the mourners – 14 in number’ but near the end of the column lists just 13 people in the three mourning coaches. In ‘The Mysterious Mourner’ Dickens Quarterly Vol. 25, No. 2, June 2008, Robert Garnett suggests that the missing mourner is in fact Ellen Ternan and that WC played a part in keeping her name out of the public account but failed to realise the discrepancy.

[0994] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 15 JUNE 1870

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/21). Published: Coleman, p. 160; BGLL, II, pp. 194–195.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th June 1870

Dear Sirs,

I enclose the signed receipt for the last instalment of money due to me, on the completion of “Man and Wife”.<sup>1</sup> Permit me to add that I feel sincerely sensible of the kind consideration which you have shown to me, during my literary connection with your Firm. In my relations with your Editorial Department, as well as in my relation with yourselves, I have met with an unvarying sympathy and courtesy which have materially lightened my labours, and which will always remain among the agreeable remembrances that I associate with the composition of “Man and Wife”.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Cassell, Petter, & Galpin

---

1. The payment of £266-13s-4d, the final third of the £800 due, was credited to WC’s bank account on 13 June (Coutts: WC).

[0995] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 16 JUNE 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/46).<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 341. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 195–196.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

16th June 1870 | 5.30. p. m.

My dear Tindell

The day of Dickens’s Funeral was a lost day to me. I am backward with the proofs for the book – and, as they are not at all intelligently read, they take a long time. Savill & Edwards do’nt print as correctly from printed copy, as Petter & Galpin did from Mss. At present, I have got no part of Vol 3 in proof – (5–30 p. m.) and I have the greater part of Vol 2 still to “read” – (so that I am behindhand and not S & E.) The last two weekly Parts of the story are not yet corrected at press at Petter & Galpin’s.<sup>2</sup> I have written to have them sent. All the rest of Vol 3, is with Savill & Edwards. When must the proofs be all returned for press?<sup>3</sup> Suppose we cannot get ready by the 27th? and suppose Harper publishes on that date in New York – what about my copyright?<sup>4</sup> Would it not be well to bind up a set of proofs – and enter that at Stationers’ Hall? (By-the-way, I suppose I can depend on Mr Ellis to enter at Stationers’ Hall – and to supply the Museum – and so on?).

Forgive an incoherent letter. I am so fagged.

Let me hear about the copyright – in case we don’t publish in time – and about Stationers’ Hall.

Yours ever | WC

-
1. As indicated below, there are a number of pencil annotations on the MS in another hand, probably that of Tindell.
  2. In the margin this sentence is marked with a vertical line and the following comment added: ‘get these if Mr. C. has them’.
  3. Comment added at the top of the page: ‘when can you return the proofs – you must do so without delay –’.
  4. Comment added between the lines: ‘we must publish if H. does’.

[0996] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 18 JUNE 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/48).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 196.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. |

Saturday June 18 | 2. p. m.

My dear Tindell,

Here is the present state of the case.<sup>2</sup>

This morning, Savill & Edwards received the whole of the copy for Vol III – except the final chapters in the last Weekly Part. Some days ago, they had copy for more than three parts of the third volume in their possession. Today – at this time – I have only the two first sheets of Vol III sent me to correct. Therefore the supply of copy has not been behindhand – and, so far, I am not responsible.

I now send by your clerk the copy for the end of the book, just corrected – and the copy for the appendix. Title, dedication, and Preface, I have already sent.

I have now to correct – from page 193 of Vol II to page 32 of Vol III. This can be done by Monday<sup>3</sup> – so that they can have it on Monday morning.

When I get the rest of Vol III, I want to know what time I can have to look it over. Let S & E. mention a last day and hour on which the last proofs must be sent corrected to them – and, if I am alive, the thing shall be done.

Yours ever | WC<sup>4</sup>

-
1. Again there are a number of pencil annotations in another hand, probably Tindell's.
  2. F. S. Ellis had written to Tindell on 16 June 1870 complaining on behalf of the printers that WC was slow in providing copy and correcting proofs (Glasgow, 891117/47).
  3. This passage is marked with a pencil in the left margin.
  4. Comment added beneath the signature: 'by Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock –'.

[0997] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 20 JUNE 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 161; B&C, II, p. 342.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Monday June 20

My dear Fred,

My telegram will have told you that I have unluckily accepted a dinner-engagement for tomorrow evening. I shall be obliged to leave early, and return to the proofs of "Man and Wife". It is published next Monday. I have dedicated it to you and the Padrona – and you shall have an early copy.

I am so utterly worn out, with [del] all I have gone through – and Beard is so utterly worn out too – that we propose going to Antwerp on Thursday next – simply for the voyage – and returning by Sunday's boat. If anything stops this arrangement, I will ask for the hospitality of Woodlands<sup>1</sup> this week. If we go – then I will ask for it next week. I long to see you and the Padrona again – but it has been impossible to manage it, while the printers [del] /were/ [del] waiting for me.

Love to all at Woodlands. I will write again.

Yours ever | WC

I am so weak, I can hardly write even a note

-
1. The Lehmanns' home, where WC had stayed frequently during the composition of Man and Wife – see Peters, p. 322.

[0998] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 22 JUNE 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 122; B&C, II, p. 342.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | Wednesday June 22nd

My dear Fred,

Antwerp is put off till next week.<sup>2</sup> Are you at Woodlands or in town? If you are at Woodlands, send me a telegram to say if I can be taken in. I am quite worn out and want a little rest [del] badly. Tell the Padrona, with my love, that I dedicate Sunday to Woodlands at any rate. The question is, whether I ~~can~~ may stay a day or two before Sunday or after. Whichever is most convenient to [del] you will do for me.

Yours ever | W.C

-
1. WC uses Gothic printed paper with the address centred.
  2. See [0997] to Lehmann of 20 June.

[0999] TO HACHETTE & Co., 23 JUNE 1870

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 197.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 23rd June 1870

Dear Sirs,

Pray accept my best thanks for your kindness in registering my book in Spain.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully your | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Hachette & Co.

---

1. It is not clear why the Paris publishing house would undertake this task.

[1000] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 23 JUNE 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/50-1).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 197-198.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Thursday June 23rd 1870

My dear Tindell,

Yesterday at ½ past 2, I sent in the last corrected sheet of Man and Wife to Savill & Edwards.

About the advertising? I don't see the book advertised at all in the Times. Cannot we get into the special column?<sup>2</sup> – or what is it? I suppose the advertisement across columns is kept going in the Athenaeum & Saturday Review?<sup>3</sup> I don't see these papers myself.

It is very important to get the public to know that the book is coming out. As to copies to the newspapers, again, I am strongly of opinion (considering what a large general public I write to) that a Review in a provincial paper of good circulation is far more important than a Review in a London paper of small circulation.<sup>4</sup> All I want is to have the book brought under the reader's notice. I am for sending copies to the chief newspaper – one paper only – in these towns: – Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, Leeds, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Bristol. I have readers by thousands in the neighbourhoods of which these towns are the centres.

As to London: – Times, Daily Telegraph, Daily News, Morning Post, Standard, Pall Mall Gazette, Echo, Saturday, Athenaeum.

Is it worth our while to send to any others? I doubt it.<sup>5</sup> It would be better to add to the provincial list, as I think – if more copies are to be sent.

I shall want for myself ten copies – one for you – the other nine here. Two of the nine here as early as possible.<sup>6</sup>

Here is altogether (10 to me – 17 to newspapers) 27 copies – add three more to newspapers – and we have a total of Thirty copies presentations. Not one too many to answer the great purpose of making the publication of the book known.<sup>7</sup> From what good judges tell me of the story, it ought to be a “hit”. The present and pressing necessity is the advertising at once,<sup>8</sup> before the Reviews appear. When the Reviews have spread the knowledge of it, the book will advertise itself. –

This is all that occurs to me. I shall be here, or with friends at Highgate,<sup>9</sup> till Thursday next (the 30th) – so you have only to let me know if there is anything that I can do.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Again there are a number of pencil annotations in another hand, probably Tindell's.

2. Vertical lines in margin with the comment 'yes'. The earliest advertisement for the novel appeared in the Times on 27 June, the official day of publication.

3. Two vertical lines in margin with the comment 'yes'.

4. Single vertical line in margin with the comment 'yes'.

5. Single vertical line in margin with the comment: 'yes in fact to send a book is in place of advt'.

6. A double vertical line added in the left-hand margin.

7. Comment in left-hand margin: 'not enough'.

8. Vertical line in left hand margin with the comment 'No'.

9. With the Lehmanns at Woodlands, Southwood Lane.

[1001] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 26 JUNE 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/52). Published: B&C, II, p. 343.

Woodlands | Southwood Lane | Highgate | N.<sup>1</sup> | Sunday June 26th

My dear Tindell,

I shall be in town on Tuesday, and I will call in Essex Street to add the name of a new Executor to my will, (in the place of poor Henry Bullar)<sup>2</sup> – and to hear any news you may then have relating to the sale – thus far – of “Man and Wife”.<sup>3</sup>

In the meantime, Mr Ellis is damaging the chances of the book by keeping its publication as profound a secret as he can. There was no advertisement in the Saturday Review for June 18th – I looked for it in vain. ~~Still~~ Also nothing in the Times and nothing in the Telegraph. How are the people to know that the book is ready? I am sorry to keep on bothering about this – but pray send word to Mr Ellis, on receipt of these /lines/ to attend a little better to the advertising. He is losing the whole advantage of my name and position with novel-readers, by the manner in which he is neglecting the advertising, at the very time when the book stands in the utmost need of it. It is really serious. Pray stir him to do something at once.<sup>4</sup>

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins.

I will call /on you/ at 3 o'clock on Tuesday. If that won't do, [del] send a line to Gloucester Place to say what hour will do up to 5 P.M. on Tuesday.<sup>5</sup>

-
1. Written on embossed headed paper from the home of his old friends, the Lehmanns.
  2. Henry Bullar, barrister of Lincoln's Inn, WC's old friend and sailing companion, who had died suddenly on 5 January 1870 at his home at Basset Wood, near Southampton, and was buried at North Stoneham churchyard.
  3. The 1000 copies initially printed sold out immediately – see [1003] to Tindell of 30 June.
  4. WC wrote to Ellis to the same effect on 28 June [1002], at the same time ordering a second impression of the novel.
  5. The postscript begins beneath the signature but concludes vertically up the right hand margin.

[1002] To F. S. ELLIS,<sup>1</sup> 28 JUNE 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 198–199.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | June 28th 1870

Dear Sir,

I am very glad to hear that the sale of “Man and Wife” has begun so well, and I am sincerely sensible of the kind interest, on your part, in the book, which has helped to contribute to that result.

I have seen Mr Tindell today – and we have arranged to order a second impression of 500 copies. It will be easy to add to this, if the demand increases, as the types are to be kept standing for three months.

Mr Tindell has already told you that I consider it important to advertise regularly until the reviews come out.<sup>2</sup> The sooner we inform the public that the book is ready for them, the larger will be the order sent to the libraries. They will all want the book, as soon as they all know that the book is published. The review will help us here – but we must help ourselves before the reviews come out.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

F.S. Ellis Eqre

I have received all my copies quite safely.

-
1. Frederick Startridge Ellis (1830–1901), London publisher and antiquarian bookseller, who published Man and Wife in three volumes in June 1870, on commission.
  2. See [1000] and [1001] of 23 and 26 June, both to William Tindell.

[1003] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 30 JUNE 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/55). Published: BGLL, II, p. 199.

Woodlands | Southwood Lane | Highgate | N.<sup>1</sup> | June 30th 1870

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks for your note. It relieves me of all anxiety. You have done quite right. I am very glad to hear such good news of the sale. They will, of course, not fail to put “Second Edition” on the Title-Page of the new 500.<sup>2</sup> And Mr Ellis will no doubt, add the words “Second Edition” to the advertisements.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Written on embossed headed paper from the home of his friends the Lehmanns.

2. Savill and Edwards, the printers, were already at work on a second impression by the previous day (see J. R. S. Anderson to F. S. Ellis, 29 June 1870, Glasgow, 891117/54).

[1004] TO CHARLES WARD, 30 JUNE 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/58). Published: B&C, II, p. 343.

Woodlands | Southwood Lane | Highgate | N.<sup>1</sup> | 30th June<sup>2</sup>

My dear Ward,

The first Edition (of a thousand copies) is all sold – and the orders for the second edition (of 500) are coming in rapidly. So the book is beginning well at any rate. It looks, at present, as if we should beat “The Moonstone”.

(In haste) | Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC uses the Lehmanns’ printed stationery.

2. Dating from the reference to the second edition of Man and Wife.

[1005] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 6 JULY 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, p. 200.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London | 6th July 1870

Dear Sirs,

I have just received your kind letter, enclosing a Bill of Exchange for £250...- being the balance of the £750...- agreed on between us as the purchase-money for the advance-sheets of Man and Wife.<sup>1</sup>

Besides thanking you for this, I have also to acknowledge the receipt of Mr Bonner’s letter. I am leaving town for a week. But on my return I will submit the letter at once to my agent, who is, I believe, still in England. If he has left, I will write at once to New York, and place him in communication with my agent who lives in that city.<sup>2</sup>

I am so glad to hear you think so well of the story. The republication (in 3 Vols) is selling very well here.<sup>3</sup> I hope we shall have a success of it in the United States.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. The Bill was payable at 60 days and WC waited the full period before it was credited to his account on 10 September (Courtts: WC).

2. John Bonner, theatrical agent of 22 Broad Street, New York, who later took over as WC’s representative from Lewis Baker – see [1056] to Bonner of 21 January 1871 and [1068] to Augustin Daly of 4 March 1871.

3. The three-volume edition of Man and Wife, published on 27 June by F. S. Ellis.

[1006] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 12 JULY 1870<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/57). Published: BGLL, II, p. 200.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Tuesday July 12

My dear Tindell,

I am just back from a cruise at sea, off the East Coast.

Tomorrow (Wednesday) I shall be in the Strand between 3 and 4 – and I will walk on, and take my chance of finding you in Essex Street. If a later hour will suit, leave word in the Clerk's office.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Dating from the address and calendar, plus the printed notepaper, with black Gothic type, centred.

[1007] TO COUTTS & Co., 14 JULY 1870

MS: Coutts.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 200–201.

London 14th July 1870

I request that you will honor the Bill of Mess<sup>rs</sup> Delol J<sup>r</sup> & Zibelin of Bordeaux<sup>2</sup> for Thirty two pounds on my account the Bill will become due about the 5th Sept<sup>3</sup>

£32 -. -. Wilkie Collins | [stamp]

Mess<sup>rs</sup> Coutts & Co

---

1. Written in another hand on a paper slip and signed by WC, who also initials a mauve penny stamp. 'Wilkie Collins Esq' is written in the top left of the slip.

2. The partners D. Delol Jr & J. Zibelin were wine and spirit merchants of 17 Quai de Bacalan, Bordeaux (Annuaire-almanach du commerce, de l'industrie, de la magistrature et de l'administration, 1864).

3. The sum was debited on 8 September (Coutts: WC).

[1008] TO HUNTER, ROSE & Co., 16 JULY 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Extract: Baker 2001, p. 512. Published: BGLL, II, p. 201.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

London | Saturday July 16th 1870

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter and of the enclosures. The copy of "The Globe" is also safe to hand. I return, with this, the Power of Attorney duly executed – sending it to you with fullest confidence in the discretion which you will exercise in making use of it, if necessary.<sup>1</sup>

I have also to assure you that I am sincerely sensible of the energy and intelligence with which you are acting in the assertion of our common interests in Canada, and that I warmly approve of all that you have done to assert my rights as an English author thus far.

Earnestly hoping that the efforts for which I thank you, will be rewarded by the sale of a large edition<sup>2</sup>

I remain, Dear Sirs, Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co

---

1. Presumably the power to act against the Toronto Globe if it persisted in its piratical serial publication of Man and Wife.

2. Of the Canadian copyright edition of Man and Wife, which appeared as a single volume of 573 pages from Hunter, Rose in summer 1870.

[1009] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH,<sup>1</sup> 20 JULY 1870

MS: CDM? (Storey Papers C92, found there in 1989 but since apparently mislaid).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 201–202.

Thank you again and again for another proof of your affectionate remembrance of the old times. The last time I saw him at Gadshill – when I was going away – you opened the liqueur case and gave us some of that brandy<sup>3</sup> and he took me into the billiard room afterwards to get me a cigar – I saw his kind face, and heard his friendly voice once more, when I looked into the open hamper, after reading your note – and God knows my heart ached when I thought of you and the girls, and of the days that we shall never see again.

I shall be very anxious to know how you and Mamie and Katie get through the last sad trial of leaving Gadshill – write one line, dear Georgina, when [you have omitted] the time to tell me how you all are, and where you all are, so that I may see you. For the next week or ten days I shall be away with Frank Beard helping him I trust to get well again. He has been terribly shaken, and stands in some need poor fellow of rest and peace and of the help and company of a friend. God bless and comfort you my dear Georgina. My love and best wishes to Mamie and Katie

Your affectionate | WC

---

1. Georgina Hogarth (1827–1917: ODNB), younger sister of CD's wife Catherine, who, after CD's estrangement from his wife, took on the role of housekeeper at Gad's Hill, acting as confidante to both CD and his daughters Mamie and Katie. It is instructive to contrast the content and tone of this letter with his words in a private conversation around this time, as reported in John Bigelow's diary entry for 24 July 1870:

... I met Wilkie Collins at the table of a common friend. ... The will of Dickens, Collins said, gives his friends a great deal of dissatisfaction. The first person named in it is his mistress, a daughter of Jermain, an actress, and herself an actress whom he met and acted with on his trips for the Literary Club. Collins intimates too that Dickens's sister-in-law, to whom he leaves all his private papers and whom he pronounces the best friend a man ever had, was very fond of him. The impression seemed to be that they were too intimate. Collins insisted that Dickens cared nothing for Miss Dickens [his daughter] who, if she wanted money or anything, wrote to her uncle. Dickens was inaccessible to her, while the sister-in-law could always see him. (Bigelow 1913, IV, pp. 382–383).

2. Transcription by Catherine Peters.

3. This was 'the special orange brandy she made for Dickens every year' (Peters, p. 346).

[1010] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 23 JULY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/58). Published: BGLL, II, p. 202.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Saturday July 23

My dear Tindell,

I want (2) two more copies of "Man and Wife" (2nd edition). It would be a convenience if I could have them sent here on Tuesday next.

How is the second edition going on? I think I shall go away to sea again on Wednesday or Thursday next – and I should like to know what our prospects of a third edition are (if you can find out) before I go. If the infamous "war" is injuring us<sup>1</sup> – suppose we alter the heading in the advertisements thus: (???)<sup>2</sup>

New Romance of Domestic War<sup>3</sup> Man and Wife. or The Mitrailleuse<sup>4</sup> of Home. by W.C.

This would instantly sell an edition!!!

Yours ever | WC

---

1. The Franco-Prussian War of 1870–1.

2. The interrogation marks are WC's

3. Underlined heavily three times.

4. Machine gun (French).

[1011] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 27 JULY 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/59). Published: BGLL, II, p. 203.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Wednesday 27th July

My dear Tindell,

Bravo! You have done quite right to go for another 500. I believe we shall sell them.<sup>1</sup>

(In great haste) | Yours ever | WC

---

1. That is, a third 'edition' of Man and Wife.

[1012] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER,<sup>1</sup> 6 AUGUST 1870

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/29). Published: BGLL, II, p. 203.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London | August 6th 1870

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter. I am sincerely glad to hear that my Godson's performance of the duties entrusted to him,<sup>2</sup> is such as to justify the interest which you have been so good as to take in his career.

Believe me, Dear Sir | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Sebastian Schlesinger Esqre

---

1. Sebastian Benzon Schlesinger (1837–1917: Baker's Biographical Dictionary of Musicians), a relative by marriage of Frederick Lehmann. (There is some uncertainty concerning Schlesinger's middle name: Baker's has 'Benson'; in naming him as executor in a July 1889 codicil to his will, WC refers to him as 'Bertholdt', but this was amended to 'Benzon' when probate was granted in November the same year; the last is probably the correct version.) Like the Lehmann family, Schlesinger hailed from Hamburg but moved to Boston around 1850 and studied music there under Otto Dresel. By 1870 he was acting as German consul and working with his relative Ernst Leopold Schlesinger Benzon (married to Lehmann's sister Elizabeth) at the firm of Naylor & Co., the American branch of the old mercantile house of Naylor, Vickers & Co., steel manufacturers, of Sheffield. In September 1871, Schelsinger married Berthe de Pourtales, daughter of Louis François de Pourtales, a noted Swiss zoologist. WC first met Schlesinger and his wife in Boston in October 1873 during his reading tour of the US.

2. Francis (Frank) Collins Ward (b. 1850), son of Charles and Jane Ward and WC's godson, who worked under Sebastian Schlesinger at the Boston office of Naylor & Co. in the early 1870s.

[1013] TO EMIL LEHMANN,<sup>1</sup> 7 AUGUST 1870

MS: Parrish (4/12/AM85–86). Published: B&C, II, p. 344, amended A&C3, p. 63.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London | August 7th 1870

Dear Doctor Lehmann,

Yesterday – Saturday – I sent you, by book-post, the three monthly Parts of Cassell's Magazine for August.

Reports of [del] disturbances of postal regularity at Hamburg, in consequence of this horrible war,<sup>2</sup> made me hesitate at sending you the magazine this time. I find however, from your brother Frederick, that these reports are without foundation – and, on my return to London, I hasten to ~~send~~ forward the magazine as usual. The [del] /publishers/ contrived to keep the final chapters of "Man and Wife" for publication in the September monthly part. So I shall have to send you three more copies /of/ next month's issue – and then it will be done.

I am, like the rest of my countrymen, heartily on the German side in the War. But what is to be said of the progress of humanity? Here are the nations still ready to slaughter each other, at the command of one miserable wretch whose interest it is to set them fighting! Is this the nineteenth century? or the ninth? Are we before the time of Christ or after? I begin to believe in only one civilising influence – the discovery one of these days, of a destructive agent so terrible that War shall mean annihilation, and men's fears shall force them to keep the peace.

Yours vry truly, | Wilkie Collins

Please let me hear when you have received the numbers of the magazine.

-
1. Fred's younger brother, who had already translated The Moonstone into German – see [0779] to him of 25 October 1867.
  2. The hostilities which broke out in July 1870 between the Second French Empire and the northern German states led by Prussia, commonly known as the Franco-Prussian War.

[1014] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 7 AUGUST 1870<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/60). Published: BGLL, II, p. 204.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Sunday Augt 7

My dear Tindell,

Are you still in town? and can I see you on Tuesday afternoon next at 4 P.M. – or at any later hour which may suit you better – to get my instructions for protecting the dramatic version of “Man and Wife”? I expect to have the piece complete in print tomorrow – and to send it to America by next Saturday's mail.<sup>2</sup>

Wednesday next, I shall most likely leave town again. A line of answer here.

Yours ever | WC

-
1. Dating from the calendar and the reference to the printing of the dramatic version of Man and Wife.
  2. Man and Wife: A Dramatic Story in Four Acts was published for the author in a single volume of 152 pages in the summer of 1870, though the play was not performed in London until February 1873.

[1015] TO B. WATSON THORNTON,<sup>1</sup> 8 AUGUST 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 204–205.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | August 8th 1870

My dear Sir,

One line, on my return to London, to thank you for your letter, and for the copy of “The Western Daily Telegraph” which has accompanied it.<sup>3</sup> I am sincerely gratified to find that “Man and Wife” has produced a strongly favourable impression on you – and I need hardly add that I have read your review of the book with great pleasure.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | B. Watson Thornton

-
1. Benjamin Watson Thornton, a journalist aged 22 at the time of the 1871 Census, son of John Garth Thornton, editor of the Western Temperance Herald.
  2. Directed to ‘B. Watson Thornton Esq | Avenue Villa | Redland | Bristol’, postmarked as dated.
  3. A conservative daily published in Bristol from 1869 (Waterloo). No copies have been located from this period, though the British Library holds a few issues of the Bristol Western Telegraph (apparently a continuation of the same journal) from April–May 1874.

[1016] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 15 AUGUST 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/61). Published: BGLL, II, p. 205.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Monday Augt 15th

My dear Tindell,

On the other side is the opinion of the Secretary to the Dramatic Authors' Society.<sup>1</sup> I have ordered complete copies of the piece to be sent here tomorrow (Tuesday 16th) in time for sale between 3 and 4 P.M. to your clerks.<sup>2</sup> If this can be done, I shall leave town again on Wednesday.

You will see that the Secy is by no means sure. Is it worth while to take another (strictly legal) opinion? The act of parliament which you read to me justifies us as conclusively as possible. But, Query: – whether there is any later act modifying it – or any decision of a Court modifying it? This is certainly the course of English legislation in other matters. If this particular act, however, remains in ~~fore~~ full force, it seems to me that we are safe – for, assuming the first American performance to be a publication, a prior publication takes place in England, tomorrow.

Let me have a line to say that you still think we may trust to our “dodge” to protect us. The only other alternative is a hurried performance in some country town – which would cause considerable botheration
to yours ever | WC

---

1. On the third and fourth pages of the folding notepaper, copied in the hand of Carrie Graves, presumably from a letter from John Palgrave Simpson, appear these lines:

(Copy)

The more the subject of copyright has come before me in my official capacity, the more confused and uncertain as to the ins and outs of the law have I become. To say positively that the proceeding proposed will positively secure your copyright of the drama in England, after its performance in America is more than I can venture to do. But the “dodge” – and after all “dodge” it is – is undoubtedly a very clever one, and promises every chance of success, and therefore ought to be adopted.

By the act of Parliament all is included under the denomination of “publication” – first performance of a piece being under the title of “publication” also. So that, as far as it appears to me, the intended “publication” of the printed copy in England – even though in reality a fiction – ought to secure the copyright as regards “performance” also in England. But much as I share in your views, and congratulate you on the clever device of your legal adviser, I do not wish to be thought to speak ex cathedra.

13th August 1870.

2. WC was trying to protect the copyright in the dramatic version of Man and Wife by having the play privately printed. The device of selling copies to the clerks at Tindell’s office was designed to publish the play in England before Augustin Daly’s own adaptation of the novel opened at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in New York on 13 September 1870.

[1017] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 16 AUGUST 1870<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/104). Published: BGLL, II, p. 206.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Tuesday Augt 16

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks. I have sold three copies of the play to the clerks<sup>2</sup> – at sixpence a copy (these are the days of cheap literature!). Do you require more copies for the Registration? Or will these do? If I don’t hear from you, I will assume that the sold copies will do.

I return to town on Saturday to communicate with America – and then leave again I hope next week for Lowestoft. I only pay a visit to some friends near Reading this week.<sup>3</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the play.

2. The dramatic version of Man and Wife – see [1016] to Tindell of the previous day.

3. Neither trip has been identified with any certainty, though WC directs letters from the east coast resort of Lowestoft in both 1865 and 1875, while the Reading visit was probably to Frances Elliot née Dickinson at Farley Court.

[1018] TO THOMAS D. GALPIN, 22 AUGUST 1870

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/22). Published: Coleman, p. 164; BGLL, II, pp. 206–207.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | August 22nd 1870

My dear Sir,

I have, at present, but one idea – the idea of not troubling the printers for some time to come. After the heavy stress of hard work laid on me by “Man and Wife”, I must rest, if I can, for some months yet. I am not even thinking of another story – and I have locked up out of sight every morsel of the paper on which I am accustomed to write for the press!

Under these circumstances – and in my new character of a thoroughly idle man – I can only thank you sincerely for your kindness in offering your services to me – and keep your letter by me, to be referred to again when the fit time comes.<sup>1</sup>

I have dramatized “Man and Wife” in four acts – with an entirely new ending, adapting the story to the exigencies of stage representation. It will probably be performed in America next month – and I am now about to make arrangements for having it played, later in the year, in England. The Canadian publication of the book – the first experiment of the kind that has been made – has been a great success. We have entirely stopped the importation of American copies of ~~the book~~ of “Man and Wife” and we have made money by our venture, into the bargain – thus opening a new field to English writers and publishers in an English colony. If these little items of literary news are likely to be of any interest in your literary gossip-column of The Echo, they are entirely at the service of the paper.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Thomas D. Galpin Esqre

---

1. WC’s subsequent novel Poor Miss Finch was in fact serialized once again in Cassell’s Magazine – see [1052] to Cassell’s of 14 January 1871.

2. A notice concerning the Canadian publication (though not the stage version) appeared in the ‘Art and Literary Gossip’ column of the Echo, 27 August 1870, p. 2c.

[1019] TO GEORGE F. ROWE,<sup>1</sup> 22 AUGUST 1870

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with associated envelope at Parrish.<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 163 (with recipient unidentified); BGLL, II, pp. 207–208.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
August 22nd 1870

Dear Sir,

Mr Lacy has misinformed you on the subject of “No Name”.<sup>3</sup> I suffered from a severe attack of illness after ~~comple~~ finishing the book – and, being unable to dramatise it myself, I engaged Mr Bayle Bernard to make, very hastily, a dramatic version of the story<sup>4</sup> – purely with a view to protect my own interest in it, so far as the stage was concerned.<sup>5</sup> The version thus produced was printed and (formally) published, under my lawyer’s advice. But it has never been represented on the stage – having served its purpose in enabling me to reserve my own right to dramatise my own story, when the opportunity offered.

Under these circumstances, it will, I think be best if we can meet here and talk the matter over when you are next in London. Will you kindly let me know, some little time in advance, when you are likely to travel south? I will then endeavour so to arrange my own engagements as to be able to appoint a day when I may have the pleasure of seeing you.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. George F. Rowe (1829–89: Boase), English–American actor, dramatist and theatrical manager, who had appeared alongside WC in Used Up in 1852. WC subsequently presented Rowe with a printed copy of No Name on 24 January 1872. Attribution from the envelope and the context.

2. Signed and directed to ‘George F. Rowe | Theatre Royal | Edinburgh’, postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 7 | AU22 | 70’.

3. Thomas Hailes Lacy, publisher of acting editions.

4. William Bayle Bernard (1807–75: Boase), playwright and dramatic critic – see [0505] to W. H. Wills of 21 November 1862.

5. There were two different versions of No Name. The first, No Name: A Drama in Five Acts, was written by W. B. Bernard in 1863; the second, No Name: A Drama in Four Acts, was written and published by WC himself in 1870. WC’s copy with alterations is now found at the Huntington Library (RB 120321); another ‘author’s copy’ was sold at the Van de Poel Sale, lot 163, Christie’s, 3 March 2004. A copy of the first draft of the manuscript of the play adapted by WC and dated 1 March 1870 is now at Yale (Ms. Vault Shelves). As with Bernard’s, there was never to be a London production of WC’s No Name, though various attempts were made in provincial theatres (see [1039] to Rowe, 21 November 1870 and [1752] to him of 10 June 1878).

[1020] TO CHARLES WARD, 2 SEPTEMBER 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/59). Summary: B&C, II, pp. 344–345. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 208–209.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Friday Sept. 3rd 2nd

My dear Ward,

A line to thank you for kindly going to the hotel. I should have telegraphed at once – but I am out of sorts again. Dyspepsia and gout, I suspect. I must wait to see Beard before I go away – and he is Partridge shooting till tomorrow, I think. If you are passing the Hotel, perhaps you will kindly tell the manager that my departure from London is postponed for a few days – and that I will give him three days' notice by telegram of my arrival at the Granville Hotel.<sup>1</sup> Don't trouble about this unless you are passing.

It is damp and detestable in London today. I woke with infernal pains in the inside this morning – not diarrhea [sic], but neuralgia, I am afraid. Just the symptoms my poor mother used to complain of.

If you are disengaged on Monday (Sept 5th) look in to dinner at 7. I go to Woodlands if I am well enough on Saturday & Sunday.<sup>2</sup> One line to say if you can come.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Ward must have been staying near the Granville Hotel, Ramsgate. It is not clear if WC stayed at the hotel on this occasion but he was there on at least one later occasion – see [1358] to Henrietta Ward of 9 July 1873.

2. The Lehmanns' house in Highgate.

[3034] TO BENJAMIN WEBSTER,<sup>1</sup> 2 SEPTEMBER 1870

MS: HSP (Dreer Collection, Eng. Prose, vol. II, p. 5). Published: A&C3, p. 43.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Friday, September 2nd 1870

My dear Webster,

I have made a four-Act drama, on the subject of my last novel – “Man and Wife”.

Would you like to look at it, before I open negotiations in other quarters? If yes, one line here, on, or before, Monday next – to tell me so – in case I leave town after that date.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. In the event, Man and Wife did not appear at Webster's Royal Adelphi Theatre; the first London production was in February 1873, under the direction of the Bancrofts at the Prince of Wales.

[1021] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 8 SEPTEMBER 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 209.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. Thursday September 8th 1870

Sir,

You would greatly oblige me if you would let me have two back numbers of The Echo which are missing from my collection,<sup>2</sup> and which you will find specified on the next page. Pray accept my excuses for any trouble which this request my cause at the office. I am collecting the “Echoes” for the early part of the present year to make a bound volume – and, unless you will kindly assist me, the volume will be incomplete.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | My newsvendor is instructed to leave this note, and to wait for an answer.

The Echo. | Missing Numbers | March 7th 1870 | April 15th 1870

-
1. Presumably an employee or representative of the publishers, Cassell, Petter & Galpin.
  2. Halfpenny single-sheet evening newspaper founded in December 1868, published by Cassell, Petter & Galpin – see [0910] to the firm of 21 September 1869.

[1022] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 10 SEPTEMBER 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Summary: B&C, II, p. 345. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 209–210.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Saturday. Sept 10th 1870

Dear Sirs,

One line to thank you for the copies of the Canadian Edition of “Man and Wife”, and for the Certificate of copyright forwarded with them.

I have only had time, thus far, to look hurriedly through the book. You have made a thoroughly readable volume of it – printed in excellent type.<sup>1</sup>

I trust the sale is proceeding to your satisfaction. Here, bookselling is beginning to suffer, through the all-absorbing interest excited by the War.<sup>2</sup>

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

-
1. A copy of the Hunter, Rose edition of Man and Wife is held in the National Library of Canada.
  2. The Franco-Prussian War, which began in July 1870.

[1023] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 10 SEPTEMBER 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/62). Published: BGLL, II, p. 210.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Saturday. Sept 10th

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks for your answer. I must speak to you about it – and about a form of agreement with Managers for the dramatic “Man and Wife”,<sup>1</sup> before you go away. I will call in Essex Street between 4 and 5 on Monday next the 12th.

Yours ever | WC

-
1. See [1026] to Dion Boucicault of 22 September 1870.

[1024] TO WILLIAM D. BOOTH,<sup>1</sup> 20 SEPTEMBER 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12, formerly laid in copy of Man and Wife: A Drama (Clyde, OH: A. D. Ames, 1873)), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Typed transcript: Texas. Summary: Parrish & Miller, p. 83. Published: Coleman, pp. 165–166; BGLL, II, pp. 210–211.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Tuesday September 20th 1870

Private

My dear Sir,

I write to ask your kind assistance, in a literary difficulty, which is quite new to me. If you will read the copy enclosed (on blue paper) of a letter which I have sent to Mr Lewis Baker by this mail, you will understand what the difficulty is. The copy is marked “A”.<sup>3</sup>

It is impossible for me to say what absurdities Mr Baker and Mr Daly between them may not introduce into the intricate piece of literary workmanship which they are bold enough to think they can alter and improve off-hand, without assistance or advice from me.<sup>4</sup> Under these circumstances, you will greatly oblige me if you will take measures to ascertain that my name is really removed from the playbills, and advertisements, as I have desired.

In the event of my name remaining in the bills &c, and of Mr Daly's refusal to remove it, I enclose (marked "B.") a form of letter to the public journals which I request you to have copied, and sent to the most prominent newspapers in New York, in my name, and with my signature attached.<sup>5</sup>

By the time when you receive this letter, it is quite possible that the piece may have been produced, and may [several lines erased] have failed, or may be pronounced to be a weak production with "a lame and impotent conclusion". In either of these cases, I beg you will send my letter to the newspapers – first ascertaining, of course, that Mr Daly has altered the end. To enable you to do this, I forward by today's registered bookpost a printed copy of the piece, as I wrote it and intended it to be performed. A duplicate (in case of accidents) will follow by next Saturday's mail.

I am sure you will excuse my troubling you in this matter, when you reflect that my reputation is entirely at Mr Daly's mercy. I don't know what liberties he may not take with my work – what abrupt and absurd ending he may not introduce – and what rough-and-ready changes and abridgments he may not make, to the confusion of the dialogue and the perversion of the characters. In any of these events, the importance to me of being publicly disassociated with the piece is too obvious to need pointing out.

Believe me, | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Wm D. Booth Esqre

---

1. See [0738] to him of 15 April 1867.

2. Signed and directed to 'W.D. Booth Esqre | 62. Wall Street | New York (City) | United States | America', postmarked 'LONDON-W | XA | SP 20 | 70'.

3. Neither the original letter, nor the copy referred to here, have been located. Lewis Baker was a distinguished New York actor, married to the actress Alexina Fisher. He seems earlier to have been acting as dramatic agent for WC in the United States – see [1068] to Augustin Daly of 4 March 1871.

4. Augustin Daly (1838–99) was a distinguished American dramatist and producer, then manager of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York. The unauthorized adaptation of Man and Wife by Daly and Baker in fact seems to have followed WC's original faithfully and ran successfully at Daly's theatre from 13 September until the end of the year. As his subsequent letters to Daly show, WC later collaborated willingly with Daly on a number of occasions.

5. WC's letter has not been located in the New York papers and was probably never sent.

[1025] TO CHARLES WARD, 21 SEPTEMBER 1870<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, II, p. 212.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Wednesday Sept 21st

My dear Ward,

I am up to my eyes in worries with the theatrical people. Will you kindly undertake Jones?<sup>2</sup>

Here is your brief.

1. I am willing to continue the same quarterly system of payment to Mr Jones, which I adopted towards his late mother.

2. But, I am told by my solicitor that I ought before I make the first payment, to have a formal "Dclaration" that Mr Jones is the only surviving child of the late Mrs Jones. Mr Jones must fill in and sign the Form used for ~~Oath~~ Declarations, and send it to you, signed also by a magistrate. Or, if he finds difficulty in doing this, a ~~Deel~~ letter addressed to me by his friend the Archdeacon<sup>3</sup> – stating, of the Archdeacon's own knowledge, that Mr Jones is the sole surviving child, would be enough to justify me in sending the quarterly payments.

I enclose a cheque for the money, and Order – to be sent if Mr Jones supplies me with the necessary document.

Name and Address: –

William Collins Jones | 138. Belfield Terrace | Upper Rathmines | Dublin

Forgive this trouble. I have got three plays in progress – and my head will not hold Jones as well<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

An invitation from Corsie for Friday next<sup>5</sup> – which I am writing to accept very gladly.

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the references to the plays.
2. WmC's will invested £700 in 'The Public Funds' with the dividends of £21 a year paid to 'my cousin, Elizabeth Jones of Dublin' and her surviving children. On their death the capital reverted to his heirs. The problem did not go away – see [1555] to Tindell, 27 August 1875, and also Peters, p. 73.
3. The Archdeacon remains unidentified.
4. Presumably The Woman in White, No Name and Man and Wife.
5. Reference unidentified.

[1026] TO DION BOUCICAULT, 22 SEPTEMBER 1870

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 167; BGLL, II, p. 213.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Thursday Sept 22nd 1870

Dear Boucicault,

I am afraid – as I have not heard from you – that there is some unexpected obstacle at the Adelphi.<sup>1</sup> If there is, one line to beg that you will not allow your kind willingness to help me, to subject you to any inconvenience in this matter. I can easily offer the piece to the Haymarket, on the chance of their being able to make something of it. Or – as it has occurred to me twice since I saw you – I can try it in the country first.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I shall probably be leaving town, for a little while, early next week

---

1. The play in question here is unclear. This might concern the dramatic version of Man and Wife (see [1023] to Tindell of 10 September 1870), but WC was then also working on his own dramatic version of No Name which was never in fact staged in the UK. See [1034] to Benjamin Webster, manager of the Adelphi Theatre, of 26 October 1870.

[1027] TO CHARLES WARD, 28 SEPTEMBER 1870<sup>1</sup>

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/60). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 213–214.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Wednesday Sept 28th

My dear Ward

Miss Neilson is acting at Drury Lane.<sup>2</sup> I want to see what progress she has made in her Art since I saw her last.

Before I send to take places, it strikes me as barely possible that Miss Coutts's Box may be at the disposal of the authorities in the Strand. If it is, and if you can secure it for Saturday next – I shall be glad to get it.

But, if the box is not at your disposal, don't on any account make special application for it. I, really and truly, only write, because I don't want (on returning from the Box Office with my tickets in my pocket) to meet C. W – and hear him say, "Why, good gracious! There is Miss C's box! Why didn't you tell me?"

One line – to tell me, if I am wrong, and if the box ticket is in Miss Coutts's possession – instead of being at the Strand.

Yours ever | WC

I am rheumatic – but stronger for the Quinine. Hope to get to Ramsgate next week.

---

1. Dating from the calendar and notepaper.
2. Lillian Adelaide Neilson (1848–80: Boase), English actress. Andrew Halliday's Amy Robsart, adapted from Scott's

Kenilworth, opened at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, on 24 September 1870 – see the advert in the Times, 17 September 1870, p. 9a.

[1028] TO F. S. ELLIS, 29 SEPTEMBER 1870

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, II, p. 214.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th Sept 1870

My dear Sir,

Messrs Savill Edwards & Co are anxious to know if they can distribute the type of “Man and Wife”.

With four hundred copies (as I hear) still left of the third edition – and with slaughtering, lying, and thieving on the largest possible scale all (naturally) occupying the first place in public attention<sup>1</sup> – we have certainly no further sale to expect (as it seems to me) in the present form, and at the present time.<sup>2</sup>

If your better experience agrees with my view, will you kindly send the enclosed note to Messrs Savill & Edwards?<sup>3</sup> In our friend Tindell’s absence, I am obliged to act in the matter – and, in doing so, I wish to consult your opinion as well as my own.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | F. S. Ellis Esqre

---

1. The Franco-Prussian War.

2. ‘The first edition of 1,000 copies sold well and a corrected second edition of 500 appeared by the end of June. A third edition, also 500, was printed in July but at least part of this was remaindered in April 1875’ (Gasson, p. 101).

3. No longer with the letter.

[1029] TO BENHAM & TINDELL,<sup>1</sup> 29 SEPTEMBER 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/63). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 214–215.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th Sept 1870

Dear Sirs,

I have communicated with Mr Ellis and with Messrs Savill Edwards & Co on the subject of “Man and Wife”.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Benham & Tindell

---

1. The only letter addressed formally to the firm of solicitors rather than to Tindell or Benham individually – Tindell was away from the office (see [1028] to Ellis of the same date), while Benham had gone to Spain (see [1033] to Tindell of 25 October).

[3155] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 29 SEPTEMBER 1870

MS: Unknown. Summary: Denholm Collection, 1903.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C6, p. 9.

Summary: In reference to his novel, Man and Wife.

---

1. The Denholm Collection of Autograph Letters and Ancient and Curious Documents, Privately printed, 1903, p. 57 item 15. The Collection was sold at Sotheby’s, 30 January 1918.

[1030] TO EDWARD BULWER-LYTTON,<sup>1</sup> 22 OCTOBER 1870

MS: Hertford (D/EK C22/111). Published: BGLL, II, p. 215.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 22nd October 1870

Dear Lord Lytton,

I have found Hunter Rose & Co of Toronto excellent men of business and just and liberal in their dealings with me.<sup>2</sup>

My own experience does not incline me to think that Canadian publication will interfere with the price paid in America for advance sheets – provided the exportation of Canadian copies into the United States be previously forbidden by agreement between the author and the Canadian publisher. This is all that my American publishers – Harper & Brothers of New York – stipulate for, in a letter which I received from them a few days since.

I should think the Canadian Act of Parliament is not retrospective.<sup>3</sup> But I cannot speak of this with any certainty.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. If I can give you any further information, or any assistance in this matter, I am entirely at your service.

---

1. Edward George Bulwer-Lytton, Earl Lytton, first Baron Lytton (1803–73: ODNB), novelist, dramatist, poet and friend of CD.

2. The letter advises about the publication of Bulwer-Lytton's King Arthur, published by Hunter, Rose in 1871 – see [1176] to Hunter, Rose of 9 December 1871.

3. On Canadian copyright generally, see Nowell-Smith, pp. 87–90.

[1031] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 22 OCTOBER 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 215–216.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London Saturday Oct 22nd 1870

Dear Sirs,

I am, at present, occupied entirely in dramatic writing. The present state of my health does not, I am sorry to say, encourage me to confront the long-continued strain of another serial story. When I do find myself with another work of fiction in contemplation, you may rely on my giving you the earliest possible notice of what I am about. My next venture of this sort will probably be of not more than half the length of “Man and Wife” – and will thus perhaps enable me to meet your views by appearing on the next occasion in your Magazine. I infinitely prefer the monthly interval to the weekly – as it offers me longer intervals of rest.

As to the Canadian publication, I expressly stipulated – in the case of “Man and Wife” – that your interests in the United States were to be respected. Here is an extract from a copy of my letter to the publishers accepting their proposal to publish the book: –

“I have to add that I desire to respect the rights of Messrs Harper in the United States. They have paid liberally for my advance-sheets, and they republish in book form – so far as America is concerned – with every advantage that I can give them.” (Letter dated, 4th June 1870.)<sup>1</sup>

On the next occasion, there will be time for drawing out a proper form of agreement between me and my Canadian publishers. I will take care that one of the clauses in that agreement expressly prohibits exportation to the United States.

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. See [0987] to Hunter, Rose of 4 June 1870.

[1032] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 22 OCTOBER 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/65). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 216–217.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Saturday Oct: 22nd 1870

My dear Tindell,

I have got your letter and the bill.

The last time I saw my brother, he was unwilling to sign the deed.<sup>1</sup> He is now, I think, out of town. But I shall see him next week – when I hope we shall arrive at a definite settlement of some sort.

In the meantime, will you let me have my private and personal bill also? I want to know the worst all at once!!! We are getting confused about my payments on account. I find a receipt of Charlton's,<sup>2</sup> dated 14th March 1870, acknowledging receipt of £92.10. – and a letter of yours, dated 10th March 1870 acknowledging receipt of £25.- (Moonstone acct) from Tinsley – and £10 Stable Rent to Christmas. Is this included in the £92.10. – or not? There will be also three quarters Stable rent to add to the credit side: viz – Lady Day, Midsummer, and Michaelmas in this year. Please have this all cleared up – and the whole bill sent in, to the last entry against me in your books.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Unidentified, but see [1033], the following letter to Tindell of 25 October 1870.
2. It is clear from this letter that Benham not only acted as WC's agent but also collected money for him and paid his bills. None of these amounts or names appears in his bank records at this time. There is no mention of three rent payments for the stable at the rear of his premises (see [0790] to Harriet Collins, 6 December 1867), and £45 'Of Mr Charlton' on 22 February 1868 is the only mention of the man. Benham paid WC £275-9s-4d on 10 November 1870, presumably the balance of these various incoming and outgoing payments (Coutts: WC).

[1033] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 25 OCTOBER 1870

MS: Glasgow (891117/66). Published: BGLL, II, p. 217, amended A&C6, p. 19.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th Oct: 1870

My dear Tindell,

I send you herewith the Draft deed – and I will arrange with my brother when to sign it.

I did not know Benham had gone to Spain. I am sorry to hear of the poor old lady's death.<sup>1</sup>

A word more about "Man and Wife". While you were away, I had a letter from Mr Ellis – through whom I send an order to Savill & Edwards to distribute the type<sup>2</sup> – giving a poor account of the sale of the 3rd edition<sup>3</sup> – and adding that he was still well within his limits for advertising expenses. There seems to be a lull in the savage interest in the war,<sup>4</sup> caused by a cessation in the bloodshed. What do you say to spending the rest of the advertising money in a last burst of puffery? – across columns – opinions of the press &c &c –

Perhaps you will see Mr Ellis about it?

Yours truly | WC

---

1. Edward Benham, Tindell's partner – presumably the old lady was his mother.
2. See [1029] to Benham & Tindell, 29 September 1870 – WC presumably meant to write 'through whom I sent'.
3. See [1028] to Ellis of 29 September 1870.
4. The peace treaty ending the Franco-Prussian War was eventually signed at Frankfurt on 10 May 1871.

[1034] TO BENJAMIN WEBSTER, 26 OCTOBER 1870

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 217–218.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. Monday
26th Oct 1870

My dear Webster,

Pray accept my excuses for my delay in sending you the second act.<sup>1</sup> I have been obliged to re-correct and cut it, since you were here – and have spoilt one fair copy after another in the process.

Here it is at last – long enough still as you will see. Please let me have it back – if you possibly can – on Friday evening next. I want to send it to America by the next day's post.

Mr Rowe has a sketch of the sea side scene (1st scene. 3rd act) which he wished to show to you when he was in town<sup>2</sup> – but he did not succeed in finding you. It has been done under my directions – and contains exactly what I want, after having written the scene – which I had not done, when you called here. The painters can get on with all the remainder of the scene-plot – as I gave it to you. But the first scene of the 3rd Act had better wait for further suggestions next week.

Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | I need not trouble your Prompter to copy for me. A volunteer has turned up to assist my regular copyist and the play complete – legibly written out – will be ready – punctually to the date agreed on: – Monday next, the 31st of this month.

---

1. Of WC's new dramatic version of No Name. In the event this was not performed in Britain, though Augustin Daly produced it in New York at the Fifth Avenue Theatre from 7 June 1871.

2. George F. Rowe – see [1019] to him of 22 August 1870.

[1035] TO CHARLES WARD, 27 OCTOBER 1870

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/61). Published: BGLL, II, p. 218.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th Oct: 1870

My dear Ward,

Come, and give us a hand again next Sunday like a good fellow. The play must be ready in fair copy by next Monday – and on the ~~former~~ previous Saturday, I send off my fair copies of Acts three and four to America.<sup>1</sup> I have found a new actress for “Magdalen.”<sup>2</sup>

You stay and dine, of course. No fat.

Yours ever | WC

I am better.

---

1. WC's dramatic version of No Name.

2. Magdalen Vanstone, the main character in the story. The actress in question has not been identified.

[1036] TO JOHN CLAYTON,<sup>1</sup> 28 OCTOBER 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 218–219.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 28th October 1870

My dear Sir,

If you and Mr Lloyds will kindly call here,<sup>2</sup> on Monday next – the 31st at 2 o'Clock P.M. I shall be glad to see you, and I shall be in possession of a sketch for one of the scenes, which I do not expect to receive before tomorrow night<sup>3</sup>

I am only now recovering from an attack of gout – and I am obliged to trouble you to come to me, in order to be sure of keeping my appointment.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

John Clayton Esq

---

1. Stage name of the actor John Alfred Calthrop (1843–88).

2. Probably referring to the veteran scene painter Frederick Lloyds.

3. Again No Name.

[1037] TO GEORGE SMITH, 14 NOVEMBER 1870

MS: UNC (Smith, Elder Records, 11038/7). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 219–220.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 14th Novr 1870

My dear Smith,

Many thanks for your kind note.

A plan of mine for the issue of my copyrights in cheap periodical form, has broken down – of course on the question of money.<sup>1</sup> I am obstinate enough to think of trying again, as soon as I can hit on some new method of appealing to the reader. In the meantime, my sale (such as it is!) is standing still – and I shall be glad to profit by the suggestion which you have kindly made, if you see no objection to accepting a certain modification of it.

I propose – instead of a payment of an estimated sum for permission to print an estimated number of copies – that you should print a small number (say only five hundred of each book) from the stereotyped plates – and that I should receive “a royalty” from you on each copy sold. This proposal – as it seems to me – will supply any present demand, and will leave me free to try any new experiment which occurs to me – on relieving you, of course, of any small stock that may be left on hand at the time.

If you approve of this, you have only to send me the necessary “form” – and I will return it signed.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Smith Esq

P.S. If five hundred copies should not be enough to pay the expenses of printing, paper, and binding – pray add whatever number may be necessary. I say “five hundred”, in ignorance of the technical side of the question.

---

1. Presumably referring to the proposals from Cassell, Petter & Galpin – see [0970] to William Tindell of 8 May 1870, and also [1078] to Smith of 28 March 1871.

[1038] TO FRANÇOIS REGNIER, 18 NOVEMBER 1870

MS: CF (loose in envelope ‘Wilkie Collins – Régnier’, within box file ‘Régnier – Sociétaires’). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 220–222.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Friday Novr 18th 1870

My dear Regnier,

Only yesterday, I succeeded in hearing some news of you – from Mr Chapman at Mitchell’s Library.<sup>1</sup> I had been feeling very anxious about you – I had written, before the siege, to your Paris address – I had heard nothing, my letter, no doubt, not having reached you – and at last I wrote to Mr Mitchell. He is away in Germany – and Mr Chapman replies for him. He gives me your address – and he tells me that your son and your son-in-law are both in Paris.<sup>2</sup>

It is not much, my dear friend, to tell you that I feel for you, in your anxiety and grief, from the bottom of my heart – but it is perhaps better to say even so little as this than to be silent. Besides, I do earnestly hope – if I can be of the smallest service to you, in any way whatever – that you will treat me as an old friend and a brother in Art, and will at once make use of me. If you should find it necessary, or convenient, to come to London, there is a bedroom in this house, ready and waiting for you with a hearty welcome, and with perfect liberty to do as you please. If, ~~you~~ on the other hand, you remain in France (and with your son in Paris, you will remain as long as you can), I have another anxiety about you – of a very easily remedied kind. I hear – in relation to my own countrymen left helpless in Paris – that it is ~~alarmingly~~ exceedingly difficult to send any money into Paris to help them – and I argue that it must be still more difficult to get any money out of Paris. If communication with your customary resources of the pecuniary kind, is as difficult as I suppose it to be, will you let me be your banker, for the time? Coutts & Co – who keep my money – have a correspondent at Boulogne – and you have only to say the word, and a remittance ~~can~~ will reach you by return of post. I make no apology for my frankness in touching the question of money with you, because it is a question between two artists and two friends – and because it is you who will confer an obligation on me, if I can serve you in this matter – this very trifling matter of a loan from one friend to another.<sup>3</sup>

It is useless to speculate on the future of this horrible war. I own that – so far – I see no end to it. As to Paris, I have the firm hope that your worst anxieties there will soon be ended. I doubt, for many reasons, whether there will be any bombardment of the city itself – and I doubt the possibility of holding out against the hunger of two millions of people. A surrender – which I hope with my whole heart will restore your son and your son-in-law to you, unharmed – seems to me to be the only possible solution of the problem. The serious resistance, and the coming revival of France (of which I feel no doubt) are not bound up with the keeping of Paris. Your time is to come, when the Germans are on the way back. Then, France has time to breathe again – time to organise a government accepted by the whole country – time to appeal to the calmer thought of Germany itself, and to claim the respect and the sympathy due to a great misfortune from other nations.<sup>4</sup> I don't see peace at the end of all this – but I see a more hopeful position for France when Paris has, not dishonorably, ~~and~~ but only inevitably yielded to overwhelming brute force, and when the virtue and the valour left in the nation have the room and the opportunity to spring into a new growth. There is one thing – to return to private and personal interests – which Mr Chapman does not tell me. I am left to infer that Madame Regnier and your daughter are with you. The consolation of their presence is, I earnestly hope and trust, always with you. Pray assure them of my most sincere sympathy and my true regard – and pray let me see the sight of your handwriting (if I don't see you) as soon as you possibly can.

Believe me, my dear Regnier,
yours always affectionately | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Thomas Chapman, apparently an employee at the Royal Library, 33 Old Bond Street, run by John Mitchell. Correspondence at CF shows that Régnier had written in mid-October asking Mitchell to lend him money. Chapman replied that Mitchell was away but promised to forward Régnier's letter. On 23 October Mitchell wrote from Florence arranging for the transfer of £100 and offering emergency funds from his banker's agent, Messrs Adam, in Boulogne.
  2. Régnier had moved with his wife and daughter, from his address in Paris at 15 rue de la Chaussée d'Antin to 9 rue de Calais, Boulogne, to escape the Franco-Prussian War of 1870–1. German troops entered France on 4 August 1870 and on 19 September laid siege to Paris, a situation that was to continue until 28 January 1871. This led to terrible privations for the trapped citizens, clearly including Régnier's son and son-in-law. (His daughter had married in March 1870.)
  3. It is not clear if the offer was taken up – there is no evidence of it in WC's bank account – or if WC knew of the facility offered by John Mitchell.
  4. After the Prussian invasion and his failure in the battle of Sedan, Napoléon III had been deposed and a provisional government was formed under Gambetta.

[1039] TO GEORGE F. ROWE, 21 NOVEMBER 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 222.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 21st Novr 1870

My dear Mr Rowe,

I am delighted to hear that you have an opening in London for Christmas<sup>1</sup> – and I most sincerely wish you every possible success.

Thank you for the proposal relating to Croydon.<sup>2</sup> “No Name”, after only four rehearsals, would I am afraid present my own words to me in a state of undesirable transformation – and, excepting the case of the two principal characters, I doubt whether the resources of the local company would suffice to present the play to me in its true light. Besides, the Pantomime would prevent one repeating the performance for a lapse of two or three months – and we should have, so far as the ~~performers~~ actors in general were concerned, to begin all over again. For these reasons, I prefer to wait until we find an opening in a London theatre – or till the Pantomimes are over, and till we can try the piece before the audience of a great city – like Manchester or Liverpool – with the chance of continuing ~~perf~~ representing it afterwards in the country.<sup>3</sup>

Very truly yours | WC

---

1. See ‘Christmas Novelties’, Era (18 December 1870), p. 12: ‘OPERA COMIQUE. – An English company will take the place of the French, and will open with an adaptation of “Our Mutual Friend,” by Mr. Rowe, who with Mr. Emery, will sustain the principal characters.’ There is a lengthy review of the production in the same paper on 1 January 1871, p. 15, which makes clear that George F. Rowe is the actor in question.

2. Presumably referring to the Theatre Royal, Croydon, where Rowe was appearing at this time as Micawber in Little Emily – see ‘Provincial Theatricals’, Era (4 December 1870), p. 5.

3. A further attempt at a provincial production was made by Wybert Reeve (see [1752] to Rowe of 10 June 1878).

[1040] TO GEORGE SMITH, 21 DECEMBER 1870

MS: NLS (MS 23180/178). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 222–223.

December 21st 1870

My dear Smith,

Would it be possible for you – as publisher of the English translation of the Erckmann-Chatrian novels<sup>1</sup> – to verify the extraordinary statement copied on the next leaf,<sup>2</sup> and – if it is true – to discover the system on which the popular edition of the novels has been distributed abroad? I mean, of course, is it possible to do this – without any great trouble?

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

I make out that “Le Conscrit”<sup>3</sup> (for example) is about half the length of “No Name”. Rating the number of the novels at ten, here is an author’s profit up to the present time only of £3000 per book (in round numbers), derived from a royalty of “one tenth of a penny” on each periodical part, or volume sold – and this for novels which would barely fill two volumes post 8vo of our size.

I regard these results (if they are to be relied on) as more important in their bearing on the future works which I might write – than on the past works which I have written. The way seems to be pointed here to the writing of shorter stories – at once diminishing the expenses of production, and the demand (in these days of endless luxury) on the reader’s time – and to the selling of these stories on a plan which has (apparently) not been tried in England yet.

---

1. Émile Erckmann (1822–99) and Pierre Alexandre Chatrian (1826–90) wrote numerous popular historical adventure novels under the signature Erckmann-Chatrian. Smith, Elder published a number of English translations.

2. Written in another hand on the leaf below the printed address is this memorandum:

From The Times (Supplement) December 21st 1870.

M. Erckmann’s statement of profits derived from the popular edition of the Erckmann-Chatrian novels on the Continent. Reported from a conversation held with the author by a correspondent of the “Times.”

---"---

What do you think we have derived from the popular edition of our writings? We get only one-tenth of a penny per “livraison” profit, and yet we have already received 330,000 francs, and this although we have been proscribed by the late Government. The “Moniteur” has been ordered to refuse our advertisements; the railway bookstalls of France have been prohibited exposing our books.

---"---

It has been accurately copied from the Times, 21 December 1870, p. 4c in an article headed ‘The Siege and Surrender of Phalsbourg’, (From our own correspondent.) SAVERNE, Dec. 14. It is in the main paper not a supplement.

3. Histoire d’un conscrit de 1813 (Paris: Hetzel, 1864).

[1041] TO FRANÇOIS REGNIER, 22 DECEMBER 1870

MS: CF (loose in envelope ‘Wilkie Collins – Régnier’, within box file ‘Régnier – Sociétaires’).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 223–225.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London December 23rd 1870

My dear Regnier,

At last, I have a little time at my disposal – and I write to thank you for your kind letter. It is the best and the heartiest answer I could have wished for – and it tells so much to interest me that I re-appear, and ask for more. I want to hear your last news of your son, and of your son-in-law – and to know that you and Madame Regnier and your daughter are well and are still looking patiently, perhaps hopefully, to a happier future in the year that is soon to come.<sup>2</sup> If the position assumed by France can cheer you – and I am sure it does – life must wear a happier look now than it did when you wrote to me. Personally, I am not the least surprised at the magnificent effort which your country is making. I expected it of Paris – I expected it of France – and Paris and France have exceeded my expectations. I know nothing finer in the whole history of France than the grand effort by which the nation has shaken itself free of the corruptions of the empire; has faced the conqueror with its army lost ~~and~~ its government unsettled, and its chief city besieged; and has said to him – subjugate the country and ~~destroy~~ crush the people, if you can! When the Prussians were first marching on Paris I was asked at my Club what I thought of the prospects of France now? I answered, “Gentlemen, the troubles of the Germans will begin from this day. Before the year is out, they will find that the despair of France is not to be trifled with.” My answer was received with a roar of laughter – and I was recommended to exercise my imagination profitably in writing novels, instead of talking politics! Since that time, not only my brethren of the Club, but the whole English nation have learnt to think in quite another direction. The other night, I went to the “Alhambra” (you remember our visit there?) – to hear the national songs of France and Germany sung with chorus and military band.<sup>3</sup> They began with the “Nacht am Rhine” – received with cheers and hisses. Then a man and woman appeared in front of the orchestra to sing the next song. The instant the audience caught sight of the tri-coloured scarf over the woman’s shoulders, they burst out with such shouts of applause as made the immense orchestra inaudible. The English part of the audience was by far the loudest. Three times the singers tried to begin – and three times the applause stopped them. When I went away, they were singing the Marseillaise for the fourth time – the audience joining in the chorus. The Lord Mayor (privately instructed, it is whispered, by the Government) has refused to allow a public meeting at the Guild hall to express sympathy with France and to urge the interference of England on the French side – the reason being simply dread of the inflammatory speeches which would be delivered, and of the possible effect of them, in this country as well as abroad. So much for the “attitude of England” just at present. The English newspapers entirely fail to represent the state of public feeling as it is now. You will probably hear of it (in spite of the Lord Mayor) in reports of public meetings which are likely to take place, before long, in the country if not in London.

And what are your plans? Do you still remain at Boulogne? Or are you likely to come to England? Mind I hear of it, if you are likely to cross the channel. I cannot tell you how touched and how pleased I was to hear of your son’s position with the General in command, and of what he has owed to the illustrious name that he bears! The General has done honour to himself in doing honour to you. Such a recognition of what the world owes to the exercise of an Art, is doubly interesting and doubly precious at such a time as this.

I have been very busy dramatising my books. “Man and Wife” and “No Name” are both complete in four acts each. The “Woman in White” I have just completed in scenario only. I am not quite satisfied with it – and I have put it aside to return to it again.<sup>4</sup> There are obstacles in the way of my getting my plays represented here just now, which I hope to overcome. In the meantime “Man and Wife” has been played seventy nights in New York – and “No Name” is to follow it in the same city.<sup>5</sup> I don’t know whether, with your present anxieties, you have any attention to give to “light literature” – but, if you have moments when anything which sets your thoughts moving in a new channel is welcome, “No Name” is printed in a little book, and you have only to say “send it” – and it shall be sent by book-post.

Give my best and kindest remembrances to Madame Regnier and your daughter – and believe me, my dear friend, always affectionately yours

Wilkie Collins.

---

1. WC writes on thin folded notepaper with the pages numbered, and in the order 1, 3, 2, 4 (to allow the first page time to dry before writing on the verso). The third page is written in landscape format and at the foot WC adds ‘see page 4’.

2. Régnier’s wife and daughter were with him at Boulogne, while his son and his daughter’s husband were still trapped in the Paris siege. See [1038] to Régnier of 18 November 1870.

3. The Alhambra Palace Theatre in Leicester Square.

4. Man and Wife was published as a drama for the author in 1870 but not performed in England until 22 February 1873; concerning No Name, see [1055] to Régnier of 20 January 1871; The Woman in White eventually opened in London at the Olympic on 9 October 1871.

5. Man and Wife ran for ten weeks in New York from 13 September 1870 at Daly's Fifth Avenue Theatre.

[1042] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 22 DECEMBER 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 226.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
December 22nd 1870

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a Bill of Exchange for £20...-.- (received this morning) on account of sale of "Man and Wife".

A short time since, I had a note from Lord Lytton, on the subject of Canadian reprints of English works – and I had the pleasure, in reply, of assuring him that I had reason to congratulate myself on my literary connection with your firm.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. See [1030] to Edward Bulwer-Lytton of 22 October 1870.

[1043] TO CHARLES WARD, 22 DECEMBER 1870

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 226.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 22nd Decr 1870 My dear Ward,

I enclose a bill of exchange for £20...-.- (further proceeds of Canadian edition of "Man and Wife").<sup>1</sup> Please pay it to my account and let me have a line to say you have received it safely.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [1042] to Hunter, Rose of the same date. Credited to his account as 'Bill on Union Bank' 23 December (Coutts: WC).

[1044] TO MISS [MARY LOUISA] FRITH,<sup>1</sup> 27 DECEMBER 1870

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 226–227 (as to Miss Frith).

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
Tuesday December 27th 1870

My dear Miss Frith

Many thanks for your kind note. Even at this festive season when the Plague of Plum pudding extends its ravages from end to end of the land, and lays the national digestion prostrate at the feet of Christmas,<sup>2</sup> a promise made to your Mama is a sacred promise in my estimation. I had planned to give up eating and drinking until the return of Spring – but I will wait to carry out my intention until after Thursday next – on which day (at 7 o'clock) I shall be delighted to attend Pembridge Villas,<sup>3</sup> and redeem my pledge.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. One of the younger daughters of the artist W. P. Frith: Mary Louisa (b. 1850), Alice (b. 1853) or Mary Fanny (b. 1855). Social convention regarding the use of the term 'Miss Frith' makes the first most probable. Moreover, [3173] of 11 June 1866 addressed to 'Miss Frith' is judged likely to be to the older sister Jane Ellen, now married.

2. WC expressed his dislike of the festive season on many occasions: 'This awful Christmas time', 'the filthy Christmas festivities', 'the most hateful of English seasons', 'the season devoted to prodigious eating and drinking' and 'the season of Cant and Christmas'. See the Lewis website.

3. The Friths lived at 7 Pembridge Villas, Bayswater.

[1045] TO ELIZA ANN FORSTER,<sup>1</sup> 28 DECEMBER 1870

MS: CDM. Published: BGLL, II, p. 227.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 28 Dec<sup>r</sup> 1870

My dear Mrs Forster

Thank you for your kind note. I shall be delighted to make one among your guests at this pleasant little party on Tuesday next, the 3rd January. With best regards and good wishes

Believe me | Yours ~~very~~ most truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Born Eliza Ann Crosbie (1819–94), widow of the publisher Henry Colburn, who married again in 1856 to CD's friend John Forster.

[1047] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, [1870]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/28). Published: BGLL, II, p. 228.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Tuesday

My dear Tindell,

I shall be at home here this evening – from 7 to 9 – and there will be something to eat on the table between these two hours (say 7.30). After 9, I must go out. From now till 7 hard at work. I will expect you at 7.30.

Yours ever, | WC

---

1. Dating based on the existing dated correspondence with Tindell and the printed notepaper, with Old English type, centred, plus the pencil note '1870' written on the top right of the letter, presumably by Tindell's clerk.

[1048] TO FRANÇOIS RÉGNIER, 2 JANUARY 1871

MS: CF (loose in envelope 'Wilkie Collins – Régnier', within box file 'Régnier – Sociétaires'). Published: BGLL, II, p. 228.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London
Monday. January 2nd 1871

My dear Regnier,

One more line, to thank you heartily for your interesting letter – and to say that I ~~have~~ shall send to you by ~~today's~~ tomorrow's Registered Book-Post, a printed copy of my Drama called "No Name"<sup>1</sup>

Don't trouble to answer – unless you fail to receive this little book – in which case, you have only to let me know, and I will send you another copy.

I write in great haste. I have only time, before post, to send my best good wishes to you and yours.

Always afftly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [1041] to Régnier of 22 December 1870. Here, 'sent' has also been overwritten as 'send', so that, before WC's revisions the sentence read: 'I have sent to you by today's Registered Book-Post ...'.

[1049] TO WILLIAM G. SMITH,<sup>1</sup> 6 JANUARY 1871

MS: Ross. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 228–229.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
January 6th 1871

Sir,

I request that you will add my name to the list of subscribers to “Notes and Queries.” The weekly numbers (beginning with the number for January 7th) are to be sent to me at the above address – and a Post office order for a six months’ subscription is enclosed.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

William G. Smith Esqr

---

1. William Greig Smith, Wellington Street publisher, who took over the publication of the weekly scholarly journal Notes and Queries (1849–) from George Bell in the summer of 1863, continuing in that role until replaced by John Francis in October 1872.

[1050] TO T. W. ROBERTSON,<sup>1</sup> 11 JANUARY 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 229.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 11th January 1871

Dear Sir,

I have received a letter from Mr Booth (of Wall Street, New York), requesting me to place myself at your disposal, as his reference, in the event of your wishing to obtain information as to his professional capacity and his personal trustworthiness. I have more than once had occasion to put my literary interests in the United States in his hands, and I can honestly act as his reference (if you desire it), having had every reason to congratulate myself on having employed his services.<sup>2</sup>

Mr Booth writes to me under the impression that I have the pleasure of being personally acquainted with you. I am unwilling to disappoint him – and I have ventured to comply with his request, trusting to our common interest in literature to excuse me for dispensing with the ceremony of a formal introduction.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

T.W. Robertson Esqr

---

1. Thomas William Robertson (1829–71), distinguished actor and dramatist, author of Society (1865) and Caste (1867), among other social comedies of a realist bent.

2. See, for example, [1024] to Booth of 20 September 1870.

[1051] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 13 JANUARY 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/67). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 229–230.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 13th Janry 1871

My dear Tindell,

If you will read the enclosed correspondence, you will see that it is impossible for me to deal with the present tenants of my stables.

I must, and will, have a distinct arrangement for the payment of the rent – or I will not allow Mrs Aytoun to remain in occupation of the stables.<sup>1</sup>

Is it possible for you to write a professional letter to Mr Binder, to say that he must undertake to send me the rent regularly – or to appoint a day and hour, at the expiration of every quarter, on which I can send and receive it, on production of my receipt. If he cannot do either of these things – serve him, as Mrs Aytoun’s representative, in the matter of paying the rent, with a notice to quit.<sup>2</sup>

My last tenant sent me my cheque for the rent by his coachman – and the coachman received the receipt. If I cannot have the matter put on this regular footing, – or on the other plan as proposed to Mr Binder, in the preceding paragraph – I cannot keep my present tenant.

I am sorry to trouble you about this again. But what on earth can I do, with these ladies?

Plain English is thrown away on one of them – and the other is ill. There seems to be no chance but to attack Binder – as the person who managed the letting. I never authorised him to receive my rent for me. . Don't let the £40,-,-, stand in the way of taking strong measures. I have lost £400,-,-, in annoyance and I say – turn them out!<sup>3</sup>

I have heard nothing more from Smith – about the republications<sup>4</sup>

Is it worth our while to investigate “The Number Trade”?<sup>5</sup> I am told that Mr Francis, publisher of the Athenaeum,<sup>6</sup> knows all the booksellers who belong to this Trade – and that they sell on my plan, with canvassers from house to house of their own. Do you know anything about these people?

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Probably Mary Anne Aytoun, the mother of the Liberal MP for Kirkcaldy, James Sinclair Aytoun (1823–1904). The family lived at 33 Upper Brook Street, barely half a mile from WC's house. In later letters on the topic, however, WC refers to 'Miss Aytoun'. This could be the sister of the MP, recorded at the same address in the 1871 Census only as 'Ea' but possibly Jane Anne (b. 1830). No other Aytouns are recorded in the 1871 Census in London.

2. Binder remains unidentified.

3. The annoyance went on for more than a year – see the following letter to Tindell: [1182] of 28 December 1871 and [1188], [1191], [1192] to him of 18, 29, and 30 January 1872.

4. See to the publisher George Smith [1037] of 14 November 1870 and [1078] of 28 March 1871.

5. That is, the publication and distribution of fiction and other material in cheap weekly numbers.

6. Edward James Francis, publisher and printer of the journal throughout the 1870s.

[1052] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 14 JANUARY 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/23). Published: Coleman, p. 168; BGLL, II, p. 231.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 14th January 1871

Dear Sirs,

At the time when we completed our arrangements for the periodical publication of “Man and Wife”, I undertook to offer to you the refusal of my next work of fiction.

I am putting together the framework of a new story. It will not extend to the length of “Man and Wife”. As I now calculate, it will occupy not less than 20, and not more than 26 weekly parts.<sup>1</sup> “Man and Wife” extended to 37 parts.

There are hindrances in the way of my beginning at once to write the story for publication. I can only at present undertake to give due notice, as the year advances, of the date at which the first part will be ready for press.

In the meantime, circumstances make it necessary that I should know how I stand as to the disposal of this contemplated story. Will you kindly inform me whether you wish to make arrangements for its future appearance in your magazine? I propose, as before, to sell (in the first instance) only the right of periodical publication in Great Britain – reserving all other rights in my own hands.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Cassell, Petter & Galpin

---

1. Referring to Poor Miss Finch, serialized in twenty-six parts in Cassell's Magazine, 2 September 1871 to 24 February 1872.

[1053] TO CHARLES WARD, 14 JANUARY 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/62). Published: BGLL, II, p. 231.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. Saturday. 14th January 1871

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for the books – which came safely yesterday.<sup>1</sup> You will let me know what I owe you, when you come and dine on Tuesday at 7.

In the meantime, please pay in to my account the enclosed cheque for Fifty pounds<sup>2</sup> – and let me have one line to say you have got it safely.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The books have not been identified.
2. Perhaps from America – see [1058] to Ward of 23 January 1871.

[1054] TO THE EDITOR OF CASSELL'S MAGAZINE, 19 JANUARY 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/24). Published: Coleman, p. 169; BGLL, II, p. 232.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th January 1871

Dear Sir,

The run of Mr Charles Reade's story will give me all the time I require.<sup>1</sup> Excepting, of course, the case of illness – which I have at present, I am glad to say, less reason to dread than usual – I could undertake to follow Mr Reade's story, on its termination in August or September next.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

The Editor of | Cassell's Magazine

---

1. The serial run of Reade's A Terrible Temptation in Cassell's Magazine ended in August 1871, allowing WC's Poor Miss Finch to start its run in September.

[1055] TO FRANÇOIS RÉGNIER, 20 JANUARY 1871

MS: CF (loose in envelope 'Wilkie Collins – Régnier', within box file 'Régnier – Sociétaires'). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 232–233.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
20th January 1871

My dear Regnier,

I write, in haste, a few lines to thank you for your last kind letter, and for the interesting and valuable criticism on "No Name" which it contains. It is a very great encouragement to me to find that you like the piece so well. I feel so strongly the truth of what you say of Magdalen's character, in the last act, that I have justified her by altering the events which take place on the stage. The sleep-walker leaves the key in the lock – Magdalen is alone – the bureau is at her mercy – she has only to open it and (though it is for her sister's sake) she sickens at the idea, and cannot prevail on herself to open turn the key. Wragge comes in, feels no such scruples, and takes the letter. I have so managed the stage-business that Magdalen shrinks also from reading the letter. George surprises her – respecting the Admiral's bureau, and respecting his own letter. This is infinitely better – and for this, I am indebted to you.<sup>1</sup> A thousand thanks. If events in France (as I earnestly hope they will) leave your mind free to think of your Art as the winter advances, I think I shall venture to send you "The Woman in White" as I write it. The value of your critical insight is inestimable to a student like me. I know not where else to look for it, if I look away from you.<sup>2</sup>

The one piece of news since I wrote is, in one respect, re-assuring. Our newspapers here all report that the inhuman bombardment is not producing the anticipated slaughter and misery and discouragement.<sup>3</sup> The Prussians have not only committed a crime but a mistake – they have only thrown a brighter light on the glory of Paris. The admiration and the sympathy for ~~Paris~~ France grow stronger and stronger here every day. Almost every day, my dear friend, when I open the newspaper, and look for the news from Paris, I think of you, and of the terrible suspense under which you are now living. May it end soon! May it end well!<sup>4</sup>

With kindest remembrances to those dear to you believe me affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The play had been written and published by WC in 1870 – see [1019] to Rowe of 22 August 1870 – but never performed in Britain. Augustin Daly was producing it in New York, where it finally opened on 7 June 1871. Régnier’s suggestions seem to have been incorporated quickly – see [1056] to Bonner of the following day.
2. This is the first suggestion that Régnier might also have assisted with the dramatic version of The Woman in White.
3. The bombardment had begun on 4 January.
4. In fact the siege was lifted barely a week later, on 28 January 1871, and by March Régnier was back in Paris. A second siege followed in April and May 1871, this time by French troops after Paris refused to accept the terms of the surrender to Germany. See [1096] to Régnier of 7 June 1871.

[1056] TO JOHN BONNER,<sup>1</sup> 21 JANUARY 1871

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 233–234.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
January 21st 1871

Dear Sir,

I have received your second letter, dated January 7th. Your understanding of the proposed literary relations between us is perfectly correct. I have only to add to it, that in the event of the failure of a dramatic work of mine, on representation, I should consider it due to you, not to trouble you further on the subject of my theatrical interests. I beg once more to assure you that I am sincerely sensible of your kindness in consenting to act as my agent.

Assuming that you have received my answer to your previous letter, declining to give my consent to the proposed additions to “No Name,” I now send, with this, two proofs of the alterations which I have made in the Fourth Act – to which are added my latest corrections for the Revise.<sup>2</sup> These corrected proofs may be transferred to the Prompt-book. The Revises shall follow, by next mail, in case of accidents.

Believe me, dear Sir | Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins

John Bonner Esqre

-
1. John Bonner of 22 Broad Street, New York, WC’s dramatic agent in America for No Name and The Woman in White – see [1197] to Thomas Allston Brown and [1196] to Bonner, both of 3 February 1872.
  2. WC was unhappy with some of the changes being made to No Name. It was altered by Wybert Reeve for production in New York by Augustin Daly at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. For details of the play, see [1019] to Rowe of 22 August 1870.

[1057] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 21 JANUARY 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/68). Published: BGLL, II, p. 234.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 21st Janry 1871

My dear Tindell,

Did you get a letter from me about the stables? and also asking a question about “The Number Trade?”<sup>1</sup>

Yours ever | WC

-
1. See [1051] to Tindell of 13 January 1871 – clearly WC had received no response.

[1058] TO CHARLES WARD, 23 JANUARY 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /63). Published: BGLL, II, p. 234.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 23rd Janry 1871

My dear Ward,

I enclose another driblet from America on account of performances of “Man & Wife” – viz – Bills of Exchange for £49.1.10, payable to my order.

Please pay the money to my account, and let me have a line to say you have got the Bill safely.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. A payment 'reced Bill on City Bk' for £49-1s-10d was credited on 24 January. No earlier payment from City Bank is recorded but five more appeared over the next 15 years (Coutts: WC).

[1059] TO THE EDITOR OF CASSELL'S MAGAZINE, 30 JANUARY 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/25). Published: Coleman, p. 170; BGLL, II, p. 235.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 30th January 1871

Dear Sir,

I have no wish to appear to hurry the decision of Messrs Cassell, Petter, & Galpin. But I have before me a proposal, from another quarter, for the periodical publication of my next work of fiction, which has remained unanswered for a fortnight – and which I cannot, in common courtesy, keep waiting much longer.<sup>1</sup> This circumstance will, I trust, excuse me for requesting that any proposal with which Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin may feel disposed to favour me, may be so arranged as to reach me during the present week.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | The Editor of Cassell's Magazine

---

1. The source of this proposal remains unclear – it may even have been a polite fiction to speed up the negotiations.

[1060] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 2 FEBRUARY 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/26). Published: Coleman, pp. 171–172; BGLL, II, p. 235.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd Feby 1871

Private

Dear Sirs,

It is not easy for me to estimate my rate of remuneration on the plan which you suggest.<sup>1</sup>

In this case as in the case of “Man and Wife”, I am selling you an Idea. But I believe it will be to the literary advantage of the story, not to give the Idea, this time, the development which I gave to “Man and Wife”. Commercially speaking, I am of course bound to remember that what shortens my story in your pages, also shortens my work. But some consideration, on the other hand, is due (as it seems to me) to what I voluntarily abridge for the sake of the literary result. The suppression which diminishes the number of my weekly parts, involves quite as much mental work as the prolixity which might enlarge them – and the proportionate payment ought, on this account, as I think, to be calculated at a rather higher rate than the rate indicated by the longer story.

Estimating the length of my contemplated work between the two extremes (20 to 26 Parts) mentioned in my former letter, I calculate it as extending to 23 weekly parts. At the “Man and Wife” rate, (as well as I can calculate it Man and Wife 37 weekly Parts £800. Rate £21.12 for each part) the remuneration comes to (say) Five hundred pounds. If the story extends to 26 Parts, it rises to five hundred and sixty. I propose, as my rate of remuneration, this time, Six hundred pounds – without pledging myself to stretch the story beyond the 26 Parts, at which I have already estimated it, and agreeing (if you wish) to 23 Parts as the minimum.<sup>2</sup>

I shall be obliged if you will let me have your answer to this proposal at your early convenience. In the event of your accepting my terms, I will supply you with a copy of our previous agreement in the case of “Man and Wife”.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

-
1. For the serial rights to Poor Miss Finch – Cassell’s had clearly offered a significantly lower sum than in the case of Man and Wife, giving as a reason the significantly reduced length proposed by WC in his letter [1052] of 14 January.
  2. Despite his protestations that he was poor at arithmetic (see [0631] to George Smith, 11 March 1865), WC WC’s calculation are accurate here: £800 divided by 37 comes to £21-12s-5d, and 23 times that is £497-5s-7d, while 26 times makes £562-2s-10d.

[3381] TO UNIDENTIFIED,<sup>1</sup> 4 FEBRUARY 1871

MS: Unknown. On sale: Heritage Auctions (9-10 June 2021, lot 45666). Published: A&C14, p. 12.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | February 4th 1871 /

-
1. In the format of an autograph for a collector. Affixed to the dedication page of The Moonstone, New York: Harper & Brothers, 1868. Not otherwise associated with the book. Sold with [3377] to unidentified, 28 November 1865.

[1061] TO F. C. BEARD, 6 FEBRUARY 1871<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: BGLL, II, p. 236.

Dinner Engagement. (F.C.B.)

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Monday Feby 6

My dear Frank,

Tomorrow (Tuesday) 7th – at 7 o’Clock. C. Reade, Frith, Lehmann, my brother, Mrs Seymour – and another lady. Pic-nic dinner. No dress.<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | WC

-
1. The only 6 February that fell on a Monday with WC at this address before CAC died.
  2. WC underlines the phrase three times with lines of shortening length.

[1062] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 7 FEBRUARY 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/27). Published: Coleman, p. 173; BGLL, II, pp. 236–237.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | February 7th 1871

Dear Sirs,

The right of periodically publishing the new story is yours – on the conditions which you have kindly accepted, and which are stated in your letter of yesterday’s date.<sup>1</sup>

As the former agreement satisfied us both, let us by all means repeat it on this occasion. I will wait to receive the draft from you, as you propose.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. The Title of the new story is not yet decided on.

Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

-
1. Cassell’s seem to have agreed to pay the £600 proposed by WC in [1060] of 2 February. See [1110] to Cassell’s of 2 August 1871.

[1063] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 7 FEBRUARY 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, p. 237.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
February 7th 1871

Dear Sirs,

I have just completed my arrangements with Messrs Cassell & Co for the publication in their Magazine of a new Serial story by me.

The Story will follow Mr Charles Reade's Story ~~now beginning~~ in the same journal. It will begin in the early autumn of the present year – and it will be contained in twenty six weekly Parts<sup>1</sup> (Each part of my usual length).

This is a shorter story, by eleven weekly parts, than “Man and Wife” – which extended to thirty seven weekly numbers. It would of course be easy for me to stretch the present work to the same dimensions. But I don't think the Idea will bear the same development, this time, and I sacrifice the pecuniary consideration to the literary consideration, accordingly.

Will you kindly let me hear, at your convenience, what sum you can offer me, on this occasion, for the advance sheets?<sup>2</sup> As before, Messrs Cassell & Co purchase nothing of me but the right of periodical publication in Great Britain and Ireland. I can offer you the same advance as in the case of “Man and Wife” – and, in any dealings which I may have with Canada, I will take care that your interests in the United States shall be protected by a special clause in the agreement.

I have only to add that I have not mentioned this contemplated novel to any publishers in the United States but yourselves.

Believe me | Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. Poor Miss Finch ran in 26 weekly parts from 2 September 1871 to 24 February 1872 in both Cassell's Magazine and Harper's Weekly.

2. Above the printed address in pencil in another hand is a note ““Man & Wife,” 37 Nos. = £750. | new story 26 = 527.”.

[1064] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 7 FEBRUARY 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 238.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
7th February 1871

Dear Sirs,

I am glad to hear that you are in literary communication with Lord Lytton. I expect to see Mr Reade today – and will give him all needful information on the subject of the Canadian edition of his forthcoming novel.<sup>1</sup>

I am to succeed Mr Reade (in Cassell's Magazine) with a new story.<sup>2</sup> The arrangements have just been completed with Messrs Cassell & Co, on the same basis as the arrangements for “Man Wife.” The story, this time, will be shorter. It will extend to twenty six weekly Parts – instead of thirty seven, as in the case of “Man and Wife”. The weekly publication will begin early in the autumn of the present year.

Will you let me know, at your convenience, what proposals you can make to me for this new novel of mine? I can deal for advance sheets with any respectable weekly periodical, as well as for the publication in book-form – in both cases, securing the interests of my American publishers by special stipulation relating to the United States.

Believe me | Dear Sirs | [signature excised]<sup>3</sup>
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. Reade's The Wandering Heir appeared as a single volume from Hunter, Rose of Toronto in 1872. A copy is held in the National Library of Canada.

2. Poor Miss Finch.

3. The bottom of the page has been cut off, leaving a jagged edge.

[1065] TO GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA,<sup>1</sup> 23 FEBRUARY 1871

MS: Sala (C0804/3/268). Published: BGLL, II, p. 238, amended A&C3, p. 63.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | February 23rd 1871

My dear Mr Sala,

Pray forgive this scandalously late acknowledgment of your note and its enclosure.<sup>2</sup> My only excuse is – in the familiar words – hard work.

I have read the article with real interest, and pleasure. It is one of your best things in that way, in my opinion – excellent good sense, easily [brightly] and convincingly put. I am delighted to find you using that great influence and circulation to set the muscular manner before the public eye in the proper light. Your last sentence is my “article of faith.” To that purpose, I blew my own little whistle as loudly as I could. There is now an end of me. I sit on my back, and watch my health, and see how the fight goes on in other hands. But you can hit them again. Pray do so on the next occasion. D. lies slaughtered – but there are plenty more like him, inflated with a dropsy of British Cant and ripe for incision by the point of your pen.<sup>3</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. George Augustus Henry Sala (1828–95: ODNB), bohemian journalist, novelist and illustrator. He was a frequent contributor to Household Words and All The Year Round, co-founder of the Train, editor of Temple Bar and leader writer for the Daily Telegraph from the late 1850s.

2. The enclosure itself has not been traced, but this must be Sala’s lengthy leading article in the Daily Telegraph (3 February 1871, p. 5b–d) supporting WC’s attack on athleticism in Man and Wife. The Telegraph then claimed daily sales not far short of 200,000 copies.

3. As the Telegraph leader makes clear, ‘D.’ is William Hepworth Dixon, who in 1870 had been elected a member of the Metropolitan School Board: where ‘he succeeded in carrying a resolution which thenceforth established drill in all rate-paid schools in London’ (ODNB). WC does not generally seem to have treated Dixon with animosity – see [1356] to him of 29 June 1873, where WC invites him to share an informal lunch.

[1066] TO GEORGE SMITH, 25 FEBRUARY 1871

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 239.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th Feby 1871

My dear Smith,

I will vote for Mr Shand with great pleasure, and I will get him as many other votes as I can.<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Alexander Innes Shand (1832–1907: ODNB), Scottish journalist and novelist, and a close friend of George Smith. The election in question has not been identified, but is likely to be to the Athenæum Club.

[1067] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 3 MARCH 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/70–71). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 239–240.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd March 1871

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks for the agreements and the payment to Coutts’s.<sup>1</sup>

If you will kindly send the Graphic agreement to Arthur Locker Esqr, Graphic Office, for approval it will save me time and letter writing – and I can sign the counterpart on hearing from you.<sup>2</sup>

As to Cassell – good also, with one exception. I have engaged to follow Reade, on the understanding that Reade takes six months from March 1st. I must therefore publish Part 1 – say on Wednesday Augt 30th 1871 – if C & Co insist on their bond – I have suggested in the Drft between 30th Augt and 27th Sept.<sup>3</sup> But I won’t communicate with Cassell till you have approved. I would rather, of course, have it the 27th – but if Reade finishes by the end of Augt, there cannot be a gap between the two “eminent &c &c”. I think I must have another day or two to consider this – possibly to communicate with Reade. In the meantime I ~~will~~ return the Draft so that you may see the alterations. I will call for it – or you can send it by post – when my mind is made up.

I will also consider Tinsley – as to the cheap edition. As to the £900 – that sum is evidently a fixed delusion with T. I make from £600 to £800 by republishing – there is therefore £100 left for my appearance in the magazine – against £600 to £800 received from Cassell. Clearly, my business is to decline with thanks the magazine proposal.<sup>4</sup>

Yours ever | WC

P.S. There is one mistake in The Graphic agreement – “columns” instead of “pages”
There are three columns in each Graphic page. Alter to “pages”.

-
1. On 3 March £144-10s ‘Of Benham & Co’ was paid in to WC’s bank account (Coutts: WC).
  2. The agreement concerning ‘Miss or Mrs?’ , published in the new illustrated weekly paper the Graphic, Christmas number, dated 25 December 1871 but in fact issued on 13 December.
  3. Referring to the serialization of Poor Miss Finch in Cassell’s Magazine. The weekly run eventually began on Saturday 2 September 1871. (The magazine was nominally published on a Saturday but probably appeared on the streets on the previous Wednesday, hence WC’s choice of dates.)
  4. Clearly Tinsley had offered WC £900 for the right to publish his next novel in both serial form (in Tinsley’s Magazine) and in book form; he had offered a similar sum in the case of Man and Wife – see [0970] to Tindell of 8 May 1870. That offer, though, had included the rights to publish cheap single volume editions of both that novel and The Moonstone. Though WC here leaves open the option that Tinsley might publish the cheap edition of Poor Miss Finch, this was in fact issued by Bentley, who also published the triple-decker edition. In fact WC never featured in Tinsley’s Magazine, though CAC’s ‘The Story of the Yellow Bandana’ had appeared in the Christmas number for 1867.

[1068] TO AUGUSTIN DALY,<sup>1</sup> 4 MARCH 1871

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, II, p. 241.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
4th March 1871

Dear Sir,

I have received a letter from Mr James Ward (acting for Mr Lewis Baker)<sup>2</sup> explaining the difference in amount between the two separate remittances sent to me in payment for author’s dues on the dramatic performances of “Man and Wife” at your Theatre. I beg to inform you that I accept the explanation, and that I have no further demand to make on you, in the matter of the dramatic version of “Man and Wife.”

Mr Ward’s letter further informs me that you state “the payment of fees”, in this case, to have been “purely one of courtesy.” In justice to myself, I beg leave to state, on my side that I now hear of this “courtesy” payment for the first time – that I do not understand what it means – and that I never authorised my agent to treat with you on other than [purely pecuniary] terms. On having completed his negotiations, Mr Baker writes to me thus (date September 6th 1870) : – “I have closed my agreement with Mr Daly to pay” – here the figures follow – “for the use he makes of your play.” On this understanding, and on no other, I have claimed, and received, the remittances sent to me for the performances of “Man and Wife” at The Fifth Avenue Theatre.<sup>3</sup>

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins

A. Daly Esqre

-
1. John Augustin Daly (1838–99), New York theatrical producer and author. See J. F. Daly, The Life of Augustin Daly (New York: Macmillan Co., 1917).
  2. James Ward is unknown but Lewis Baker was WC’s New York representative, who had also run his own theatre company (Winter 1913, I, p. 199). Baker and Daly had adapted WC’s play for its successful ten-week run at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in the autumn of 1870.
  3. WC’s relations with Daly soon became considerably more amicable – see [1172] to him of 2 December 1871.

[1069] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 6 MARCH 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/28). Published: Coleman, p. 174–175; BGLL, II, pp. 241–242.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 6th March 1871

Dear Sirs,

I must beg you to excuse my delay in acknowledging the receipt of the Draft of agreement for the publication of my new story in your magazine.<sup>1</sup> I have been – and I am still – very closely occupied.

There are two points to which I beg leave to call your attention before the agreement is signed.

First, as to the number of pages. My average contribution – in the case of “Man and Wife” – reached twelve of my Ms pages for each weekly part. I cannot undertake to exceed this, on the present occasion. The first part, and the last part, may be longer – but taking twelve of my pages as the general average of length, and multiplying this by 26 (the whole number of weekly parts) – we arrive at a total of 312 pages – considerably less, as you will see, than the maximum stated in the agreement. I propose to state the minimum at 300 pages and the maximum at 320 pages – giving you due notice, as the story proceeds, if I find it necessary to advance on the maximum.

Second, as to the time. I understood that Mr Reade’s story was to occupy six months from 1st March. And I calculated on 1st September – or say – Wednesday August 30th – as the date at which his last weekly part would be published. I can undertake – health permitting – to be ready to publish my first weekly part on Wednesday August 30 (if necessary) – at the earliest – and to place in your hands, a third, or nearly a third, of the manuscript of the whole story by (Monday) July 30th 31st. If I am wanted at earlier dates than these, I think it will be safer for you to publish a story by another writer, after Mr Reade’s story – and for me to follow. I cannot undertake (consistently with the performance of other engagements) to follow Mr Reade, unless he occupies the full six months to which I was informed his story would extend.<sup>2</sup>

I propose therefore to state the dates in the agreement as “not earlier than 30th 31st July for the Mss and 30th August for first publication” – and to leave the actual date of first publication on or after August 30th, to be decided as may best suit the interests of the magazine.

Faithfully yours Wilkie Collins

---

1. Poor Miss Finch.

2. Reade’s A Terrible Temptation did in fact run until the end of August.

[1070] TO W. P. FRITH, 6 MARCH 1871

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 242; Lewis website.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 6th March 1871

My dear Frith,

On Tuesday the 14th at 7 sharp with the greatest pleasure. No “dress” on Saturday 11th mind!

Yrs ever WC

[1071] TO MARIE-THÉRÈSE FECHTER,<sup>1</sup> 10 MARCH 1871

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 243.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10 Mars 1871

Mademoiselle

J’ai lu avec beaucoup d’intérêt la lettre de votre père – et je vous remercie bien d’avoir eu la bonté de me le confier.

Monsieur Didier<sup>2</sup> me dit que vous m’avez fait l’honneur de demander ma photographie. Je me hate de vous l’envoyer – avec tous mes compliments<sup>3</sup>

Wilkie Collins

-
1. Marie-Thérèse Fechter, aspiring young opera singer, daughter of the Anglo-French actor Charles Fechter, who had left London for the United States in late 1869. See also [1738] to her mother of 21 March 1878.
  2. Unidentified but perhaps related to Professor Didier, Charles Fechter's language teacher as a young man (see Field, p. 18).
  3. Translation:

I have read your father's letter with great interest – and I thank you very much for having had the goodness to entrust it to me.

Monsieur Didier told me that you have done me the honour of asking for my photograph. I hasten to send it to you – with my best compliments.

[1072] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 14 MARCH 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/29). Published: Coleman, p. 176; BGLL, II, p. 243.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 14th March 1871

Dear Sirs,

I am willing to do all that I can to suit the convenience of your magazine. But I cannot undertake to run the risk of sacrificing my health, or sacrificing my book, by publishing my first weekly part before I have gained such an advance on the printers as may spare me the wasting effort of working against time. I undertook to follow Mr Charles Reade, on the understanding that his story would occupy six months from the first of March – and I regret to say that I cannot consent to sign any agreement which pledges me to publish a first weekly part of my new novel, before Wednesday the thirtieth of August next.<sup>1</sup>

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

-
1. The publishers capitulated in the face of WC's firm stand.

[1073] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 14 MARCH 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, p. 244.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Tuesday March 14th 1871

Dear Sirs,

I thank you for your proposal to pay me Six Hundred pounds as purchase-money for the advance-sheets of my contemplated novel – and I beg to assure you that I accept those liberal terms with the greatest pleasure.

I am still in debate with Messrs Cassell as to the date at which the first weekly number is to be published. In a future letter, you shall be informed whether I begin in August or September next. If it can be managed here, I should myself prefer September.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me Dear Sirs, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

P.S. I have received a letter from my Canadian Publishers – Messrs Hunter, Rose, & Co of Toronto – in which they assure me that they will “of course agree to any arrangement I may make with my American publishers to secure their interests in the United States”.<sup>2</sup> It is needless to add that I shall be happy to adopt any suggestion in this direction which you may think it advisable to make to me.

---

1. In the event, the weekly serial run of Poor Miss Finch in both Cassell's Magazine and Harper's Weekly began on 2 September 1871.

2. See [1074, WC's reply to Hunter, Rose of the same date.

[1074] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 14 MARCH 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 244–245.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London

14th March 1871

Dear Sirs,

Pray accept my best thanks for your letter. I accept your kind proposal for the Canadian publication of my contemplated novel (in bookform) with the greatest pleasure. And I gladly leave the question of the periodical publication in your competent and friendly hands.

As to the matter of your publishing “for a specified time only” – while I fully understand and appreciate the spirit in which you make the proposal – I cannot think of availing myself of it. The Canadian copyright of the story is yours and yours only – on the terms stated in your letter of February 27th<sup>1</sup>

I remain, Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

I have communicated your message to my American publishers – Messrs Harper & Brother of New York. And I also write today to Mr Charles Reade (who is at Oxford) to draw his attention to the advantages of Canadian publication.<sup>2</sup>

Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co

---

1. The letter from Hunter, Rose of 27 February 1871 has not been located.

2. WC’s letter to Reade has not been located.

[1075] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 25 MARCH 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/30). Published: Coleman, p. 177; BGLL, II, p. 245.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th March 1871

Dear Sirs,

Before you make the fair copy of the agreement, I will send you my copy with the alterations, as I propose to make them – so that no further changes may be necessary.

In relation to the case of my publishing serially in the British Colonies, I hasten to say that – on this, and on former occasions – I have considered the sale of the right of periodical publication to be limited to “Great Britain and Ireland”. My Canadian publishers are now in treaty with newspapers in that colony for the sale of the periodical right for my benefit – the republication in book-form having been already purchased by them.<sup>1</sup> The increase thus obtained in my rate of remuneration is not a very large one – but my periodical profits (in the present inverted state of the novel-publishing trade) are my main profits, and I cannot afford to abandon my returns from the Canadian market. I have however made no arrangement with any other British Colonies – and I am willing to undertake not to do so, on this occasion, if you think it desirable.

Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [1074] to Hunter, Rose of 14 March 1871.

[1076] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 25 MARCH 1871<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/32). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 245–246.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th March

My dear Tindell

Can I see you at 5. P.M. on Monday about Cassell’s agreement?

A line to tell me on Monday morning – addressed to me at The Athenaeum Club, Pall Mall. S.W. I am going out of town till Monday – and shall not have time to get back here before going to Essex Street.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Dating from the series of letters concerning the Cassell agreement.

[1077] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 26 MARCH 1871<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/33). Published: BGLL, II, p. 246.

Lewes<sup>2</sup> | Sunday 26th March

My dear Tindell,

Since I wrote to you I have arranged to stay here for the whole of Monday. Let us then say 5 o'clock on Tuesday next for my visit to Essex Street. Don't trouble to write again. Silence means Yes.

Yours ever | WC

If Tuesday won't do for you – then a line to Gloucester Place.

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the relation to the previous letter.

2. WC was perhaps staying in Sussex with Frank Beard – see [1122] to him of 9 September 1871.

[1078] TO GEORGE SMITH, 28 MARCH 1871

MS: NLS (MS 23180/180). Summary: B&C, II, p. 345. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 246–247.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 28th March 1871

My dear Smith,

I have been away from London – or should have thanked you for both your letters before this.

I have great pleasure in saying, Yes, to both the proposals with which you favour me.

I agree, in the first place, to the printing of four thousand more copies of “The Woman In White” – on the same terms as before.

I agree, in the second place, to the printing and publishing of “The Moonstone” and “Man and Wife”, by your Firm, on the terms proposed in your letter of the 24th of this month.

I assume – of course – that if we see signs suggestive of a larger sale of the five shilling edition than 2500 of each book, we shall go to press again at the five shilling price, before we begin the issue at two shillings. I may be over-sanguine – but I fancy we shall find ourselves able to double the circulating library sale, at least. “The Moonstone” reached two thousand in the three volume form – and “Man and Wife” bade fair to beat it, when the war got between me and my readers.<sup>1</sup>

Pray accept my thanks for the kind manner in [several deleted words] which you have met my views, and believe me.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

It will immensely help us if we can hit on something new in the binding of the book. The real hero of “The Moonstone” for instance, is a Yellow Diamond of great size. If the Diamond could appear on the cover – without serious increase of the binding expenses – it would help to make the book visible on the stalls.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The Franco-Prussian War.

2. The Moonstone was published in a single volume by Smith, Elder in May 1871, bound in dark green cloth with the title in gilt, in a gilt device, but no hint of a diamond.

[1079] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 29 MARCH 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/31). Published: Coleman, p. 178; BGLL, II, p 247.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th March 1871

Dear Sirs,

I send you with this the agreement – containing the alterations as proposed by me.<sup>1</sup>

I will with pleasure sign a new clause undertaking not to issue the story in periodical form, or in any other Serial than Cassell's Magazine, within the United Kingdom.

I beg to thank you for meeting my views in relation to the Serial issue in the Colonies.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

---

1. For the serial rights to Poor Miss Finch.

[1080] TO GEORGE SMITH, 30 MARCH 1871

MS: NLS (MS 23180/ 182). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 247–248.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 30th March 1871

My dear Smith,

I beg to acknowledge, with many thanks, your prompt and liberal settlement of the pecuniary terms arranged between us, in the shape of a cheque for £173..6..8. In consideration of this payment, you have my authority to print and publish cheap editions of “The Moonstone” and “Man and Wife” – such editions extending to 2500 copies of each book, sold at 5/- per copy. Also, to reprint 4000 copies of “The Woman In White” and 2000 copies each of “The Dead Secret” and “Hide and Seek”.<sup>1</sup>

It is understood between us that I am permitted – if circumstances should appear to render it desirable in the future – to place the publication of these books in other hands, on condition that I relieve you of the stock remaining at the time, and of the stereo plates and woodcuts, taken at a valuation.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I think I had better see proofs of “The Moonstone” and “Man and Wife” – as the forthcoming edition is to be a permanent edition, and as there may be occasionally trifling corrections required in the matter of style.<sup>2</sup>

I will also ask you to kindly give me notice of the date of publication of “Man and Wife” – so that the publisher of the three volume edition may take steps for disposing beforehand of any stock left on hand.

George Smith Egre

---

1. On 30 March £173-6s-8d was credited to his account ‘Of Smith Elder & Co’ (Coutts:WC).

2. Both novels were issued in mid-1871 with new prefaces; in the case of The Moonstone WC wrote ‘... the present edition has had the benefit of my careful revision’. By ‘permanent editions’, WC means the creation of stereotype plates which would be used in subsequent single-volume editions.

[1081] TO CHARLES WARD, 30 MARCH 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /64). Published: BGLL, II, p. 248.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 30th March 1871

My dear Ward,

Here – enclosed – is a little more grist to the mill – viz: – a cheque for £173.6.8 – on account of forthcoming cheap editions of “The Moonstone” and “Man and Wife”.<sup>1</sup> Please acknowledge receipt.

Many thanks for Collins Jones – his receipt. He is not so pious as his mother – he has my sympathy.<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | WC

I have not yet paid you for the books you kindly got for me.<sup>3</sup> Don't forget that – if you are coming this way. I have a garlic sausage from Milan. Come and taste it on your way home.

-
1. From Smith, Elder – see [1078] and [1080] to George Smith of 28 and 30 March.
  2. Referring to William Collins Jones (son of Mrs Elisabeth Jones), who was now in receipt of an annuity under the terms of WC's father's will.
  3. Perhaps those mentioned in [1053] to Ward of 14 January.

[1082] TO GEORGE SMITH, 31 MARCH 1871

MS: NLS (MS 23180/ 184). Published: BGLL, II, p. 249.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | March 31st 1871

My dear Smith,

“The Moonstone” is certainly the book to begin with.<sup>1</sup> I will take care that you shall have a speedy return of the proofs.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | WC

-
1. That is, Smith, Elder should publish the single-volume edition of The Moonstone before that of Man and Wife.

[3035] TO HUGH MCCULLOCH,<sup>1</sup> 1 APRIL 1871

MS: Indiana (McCulloch MSs). Published: A&C3, pp. 43–44.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | April 1st 1871

My dear Sir,

I have only just returned to London – or I should have thanked you sooner for your kind letter (forwarded here from a residence which I no longer occupy).

The main object of my return to town is to keep certain dinner engagements – and one of them falls due, most unluckily, on the 3rd of this month. I should otherwise have gladly availed myself of the honour of dining with Mrs McCulloch and yourself. As it is I can only beg you to accept my thanks and my apologies, and assure you that I sincerely regret losing the opportunity of improving our acquaintance which you have so kindly offered to me.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Hugh McCulloch (1808–1895; ANB), American financier; identification by the Lilly Library. From 1870 to 1873 McCulloch was running the London branch of the business.

[1083] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 3 APRIL 1871<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/148). Published: BGLL, II, p. 249.

18 Essex Street<sup>2</sup> | April 3rd

My dear Tindell,

May you come to no harm between Man and Wife!

By all means let us hand the remainder over to the book-auctioneers – reserving my six copies. The sooner the book is off our hands the better I shall be pleased.<sup>3</sup>

Will you, in returning Cassell's agreement,<sup>4</sup> which I leave herewith, kindly look over the Graphic agreement<sup>5</sup> – and tell me whether I am free to deal for the Christmas story with foreign translators and with Tauchnitz for the continental reprint in English?<sup>6</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Dating confirmed by the internal references to publishing agreements.
2. Presumably WC scribbled the note at the Benham & Tindell office in Tindell's absence.
3. Referring to the unsold copies of the third edition of the novel Man and Wife. WC had just agreed to let George Smith issue single-volume editions of the novel – see [1078] of 28 March and [1080] of 30 March 1871, both to him.
4. For Poor Miss Finch as a serial.
5. For 'Miss or Mrs?' as a Christmas story.
6. 'Both the Tauchnitz edn (1872 ...) and continental translations precede the first English edition [in volume form]' (Gasson, p. 106).

[1084] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 5 APRIL 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/32). Published: Coleman, p. 179; BGLL, II, p 250.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. 5th ~~March~~ April<sup>1</sup> 1871

Dear Sirs,

I enclose the agreement, with my signature attached.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

---

1. Correction made in red ink.
2. For serial rights to Poor Miss Finch.

[1085] TO HUNTER, ROSE & Co., 8 APRIL 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 250–251.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
8th April 1871

Dear Sirs,

I ought to have thanked you before this for your letter of the 9th March, and for the newspapers reporting the Debate in the Canadian Senate on copyright. My only excuse is that I have been very busily occupied with my literary work – and my correspondence has suffered accordingly.

I agree with you that Canada has done all that the Colony can do to set the copyright question on its proper basis. I only hope that the "Home Authorities" will manfully do their duty in this matter, in their turn.<sup>1</sup>

I have had an application from the Revd Doctor Keating, Editor of "The Hearthstone" at Montreal, for permission to publish my forthcoming story serially in that Journal.<sup>2</sup> In reply, I have of course informed him that my interests are in your hands – and I have added that I "have every reason to believe you have already made the necessary arrangements", acting on my behalf.

Pray accept my thanks for the trouble you are kindly taking in this matter of the serial publication,

And believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. As late as 1904 Copinger comments (4th edn, p. 515): 'Her [Canada's] proximity to the United States and the extent of her frontier have peculiarly exposed her to the importation of unauthorised reprints, and the enterprise of the United States publishing firms has threatened to strangle the native book-producing industry. For over a century the copyright laws have been a constant source of friction between Canada and the Mother Country, and the trouble does not appear even yet to have been finally removed.' After 1850, foreign reprints of British copyright works were permitted to enter Canada on payment of a duty of up to 20 per cent. But in practice evasion was widespread since no stamp was required on the volumes to indicate that duty in fact had been paid. In the ten years ending in 1876 a total of only just over £1,000 was collected in duty (Copinger, 3rd edn, p. 612).

2. Neither Keating nor his journal have been identified.

[1086] TO LORD JERVISWOODE,<sup>1</sup> 8 APRIL 1871

MS: NAS (GD157/2052/3/1, 2), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 251.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
8th April 1871

My Lord,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, honouring me with an invitation to be present at the forthcoming celebration of the Centenary of Sir Walter Scott.

My engagements allow me no hope of being able to visit Edinburgh in August next.

Under these circumstances, I can only beg that you will accept my thanks and my apologies.

I have the honour to be | My lord,

Your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins

The Lord Jerviswoode | &c &c &c

---

1. Charles Baillie, Lord Jerviswoode (1804–79: ODNB), Scottish Justice who played a prominent role in the arrangements for the Scott centenary. See [1090] to Thomas Usher, 17 April 1871.

2. Directed to ‘The Lord Jerviswoode | 10 Strathearn Road | Edinburgh’, postmarked as dated.

[1087] TO CHARLES WARD, 14 APRIL 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/65). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 251–252.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 14th April 1871

My dear Ward,

The enclosed is a triumph! A bill for a hundred guilders (£8.6.8!!!) extracted from the Dutch Publishers for “Man & Wife”.<sup>1</sup>

!!!!

=

Acknowledge receipt for God’s sake – I am afraid of something happening to this precious enclosure. Pay it in to my account “By Belinfante Brothers” – in red ink if possible.<sup>2</sup>

I never was so excited in my life.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. See WC’s correspondence of November 1869 concerning the conflict with the Dutch publishers and its resolution.

2. The amount of £8-6s-8d was credited to WC’s account the next day. Sadly, all entries in the annual accounts were in black ink. This was the first of five payments from Belinfante’s over the next twelve years.

[1088] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 15 APRIL 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 252–253.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
15th April 1871

Dear Sirs,

I have received your letters, and the various proposals for the right of periodically publishing my new story in Canada. Let me once more assure you that I am gratefully sensible of the your kindness. You have done far more for my interests in Canada than I could have done for myself. I heartily thank you.

It is almost needless to say that I accept Mr Desbarats proposal.<sup>1</sup> It appears to me to be not only a fair, but a liberal offer. I propose to add to my obligations to you, by leaving the collecting of the purchase money in your hands, on the conditions stated in your letter of March 27th. Mr Desbarats shall have the same advance which I give to my American publishers. The mail which takes the proofs to them will take the proofs to him.

Messrs Harper have (I am glad to say) increased rather than diminished the usual terms on which they negotiate with me. The one stipulation they make is that we shall combine to take every necessary precaution for protecting their interests in the United States from suffering in any way through the Canadian reprints. I am bound in return for their liberality to pay the strictest attention to their wishes in this respect – and I am quite sure that I can depend on you to carry out practically the understanding between Messrs Harper and myself.

I have also to thank you for the Canadian newspaper and the “Return to the address on the subject of copyright.” The illustrated paper strikes me as being artistically a most creditable production. The letter-press I have not yet had time to examine.<sup>2</sup> As to the copyright question I think your Parliament quite right in declining to enforce British copyright in Canada, unless the Act expressly provides for local publication.<sup>3</sup>

Be pleased to consider this letter as notifying my acceptance of the conditions stated in your letter of March 27th last, and believe me Dear Sirs Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co

---

1. George Edward Desbarats (1838–93), proprietor of the Montreal Canadian Illustrated News (1869–83), a pictorial newspaper modelled on the Illustrated London News, and in which Poor Miss Finch was serialized.

2. The paper in question was presumably the Canadian Illustrated News, though the article WC refers to has not been identified.

3. This was the solution in fact adopted in the Canada Copyright Act of 1875 (see Copinger, 4th edn, pp. 515–519).

[1089] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 16 APRIL 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/72). Published: BGLL, II, p. 253.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16th April 1871.

My dear Tindell,

Certainly! Accept Smith’s terms.<sup>1</sup>

I want to consult you – unprofessionally – about novelist’s law. (in re Graphic Christmas Story).<sup>2</sup> Can you come here and take pot-luck at 7.30 – either Tuesday, or Wednesday next? Send me a line to say. Time presses. Thursday also will do – but an earlier day preferred. Time always, 7.30

Yours ever | WC

---

1. WC had recently accepted George Smith’s proposals for publishing the first onevolume editions of The Moonstone and Man and Wife (see [1078] of 28 March and [1080] of 30 March 1871, both to him), so this presumably refers to other copyrights – perhaps reprints of works like Basil and The Woman in White, which had been handled by Smith’s since 1865.

2. WC obviously wanted to consult Tindell on legal issues arising in ‘Miss or Mrs?’, which included a secret under-age marriage and the risk of a charge of abduction.

[1090] TO THOMAS USHER,<sup>1</sup> 17 APRIL 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 253–254.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
17th April 1871

Sir,

I answered Lord Jerviswoode’s letter some days since,<sup>2</sup> informing him that I should not be able to visit Edinburgh in August next, and requesting him to accept my excuses. My reply was directed to the address at the head of Lord Jarviswoode's letter.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To T. Usher Esqre

---

1. Thomas Usher (1826–1902), founding Secretary of the Edinburgh Border Counties Association, of which Lord Jarviswoode was then President – see Stuart Douglas Elliot's article on Usher in the Border Magazine, 1:4 (May 1896).
2. See [1086] to Jarviswoode of 8 April 1871.

[1091] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 22 APRIL 1871

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 184/49). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 253–254.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 22nd April 1871

Dear Mrs Frith,

My best thanks for your kind note. On Sunday the 30th – at 7 sharp – I shall be delighted to make one among your guests.

In the meantime, I am going to be troublesome. Will you kindly send me one line, telling me Mr Hare's private and unprofessional name (Christian and surname) – and his private address?<sup>1</sup> I am ashamed to give you this trouble – but I met him at a friend's house a short time since (after seeing Frith's picture) and promised to send him one of my plays – and (between ourselves) I forgot all about it till I received your note. And now, I don't know where to send, and I don't quite like to address – Blank Hare Esqre, at the Theatre. Pray forgive me, and “I won't do it again”! In haste, and incoherency!

Yours very truly WC

---

1. Presumably the actor John Hare (stage name of John Joseph Fairs; 1844–1921), who later played the part of Sir Patrick Lundie in Man and Wife – see [1298] to Wybert Reeve, [23] February 1873.

[1092] TO WILLIAM RALSTON,<sup>1</sup> 26 APRIL 1871

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 254–255.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th April | 1871

My dear Sir,

Many thanks for your kind note. It will give me great pleasure to make one of your audience at The Royal Institution on the 5th of May.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

W. Ralston Esqre

---

1. In full the name was William Ralston Shedden-Ralston (1828–89: ODNB), Russian scholar, assistant in the Department of Printed Books, British Museum (1853–75). He assumed the extra surname of ‘Ralston’ around 1852 after his father W. P. Ralston Shedden unsuccessfully claimed the Ralston estates in Ayrshire. The simple ‘Ralston’ was his preferred surname. His publications included The Songs of the Russian People (1872) and Russian Folk Tales (1873). See [1982] to Ralston, 20 October 1881.
2. Ralston gave a Friday Evening Discourse at the Royal Institution on 5 May called ‘On Russian Folk-Lore’, see Proceedings of the Royal Institution, VI (1871), pp. 326–333.

[1093] TO WILLIAM RALSTON, 8 MAY 1871

MS: Wolff Collection, envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 255.

W. Ralston Esqre | British Museum | Great Russell Street | W.C.

---

1. Postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 7 | MY 8 | 71’. The missing letter presumably referred to Ralston's lecture on Russian folklore at the Royal Institution on 5 May 1871 – see [1092] to him of 26 April 1871.

[1094] TO UNIDENTIFIED ITALIAN TRANSLATOR, 16 MAY 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 255–256.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

16th May 1871. London. W.

Dear Madam,

Pray accept my excuses for my late answer to your letter. I ~~have been~~ am suffering from illness, and I am dictating these lines to an amanuensis from my bed.

I make it an invariable rule – as a matter of common justice to myself – never to authorise foreign translations of my books, unless I first receive a proposal from the foreign publisher to pay me purchase money for the right of issuing and selling my work in his own country. I am well aware that in the case of Italy any such proposal must be in a pecuniary point of view of the most trifling kind. But, in this matter, I contend for a principal [sic] – and that principle has been I believe already recognised, so far as Italy is concerned by the establishment of a Treaty of International Copyright between that country and England.<sup>2</sup> Before entering therefore on the question of the translation I will wait to hear what terms the Italian publisher has to propose to me, under the Treaty.

Pray be assured that I am sincerely sensible of the kind terms in which you are pleased to speak of my works and

Believe me | Dear Madam | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Except for the signature, the letter is written in the hand of Carrie Graves.

2. According to Nowell-Smith (pp. 40–41), there was in fact no reciprocal copyright agreement in force at this time between Great Britain and Italy. Such a treaty had been concluded with the States of Sardinia under Victor Emmanuel in 1861, but was never extended to the Kingdom of Italy as a whole, so that ‘reciprocal copyright with Britain after the unification of Italy, if it was effective at all, seems to have been a matter of international courtesy rather than of international law’; Copinger concurs (2nd edn, 1881, ch. 17).

[1095] TO WALTER LACY,<sup>1</sup> 23 MAY 1871

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 256; Lewis website.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | May 23rd 1871.

Dear Mr Walter Lacy,

Pray accept my best thanks for your very kind letter. The preparation of Mercury which you describe has been tried in my case, and, from some unlucky peculiarity in my constitution, has not succeeded. Iodide of Potash, tried next, has mastered the pain – and, in combination with Anti-Gout medicine, is already bringing me round.

I hope I shall see you, when I am able to report myself a little farther advanced on the way to recovery. In the mean time, once more thanking you for your friendly sympathy.

I remain | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Walter Lacy (1809–98: ODNB), born Walter Williams, actor and teacher of elocution at the Royal Academy of Music.

2. In the hand of Caroline Graves, signed by WC.

[1096] TO FRANÇOIS REGNIER, 7 JUNE 1871

MS: Illinois. Published: B&C, II, p. 346.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | London | 7th June 1871

My dear Regnier,<sup>2</sup>

While the full measure of calamity has fallen on unhappy France, I have had my little trumpery share of trouble. Another attack of rheumatic gout has confined /me/ to my bed – blinded one of my eyes, for a time – and caused me great suffering. I am now getting better again – and my first thought is anxiety about you and your family. Send me a line to re-assure me about you and Madame Regnier and your children. Say where you have been, and how you have all got through the trials that have fallen on your unfortunate country.<sup>3</sup> I direct this letter to your house in the Chaussée d’Antin<sup>4</sup> – not knowing where else to address you. The last news I had of you was the news of your retirement from the stage.<sup>5</sup>

I purposely say nothing about the state of things in Paris. It is beyond all words. I don’t despair of France. I wait, in silence.

Write as soon as you can – and let me hear what your plans are for the future. I own I was sorry – when I heard that you had really left the stage, in the prime of your rare powers. But it is done. And you know best.

Give my affectionate remembrances to the members of your family
And believe me, my dear friend, affectionately yours, Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper, text centred.

2. Régnier was formerly the leading actor at the Comédie Française – see [0763] to him of 30 August 1867.

3. Following the French defeat in the Franco-Prussian war with the fall of Paris at the end of January 1871, the revolutionary movement known as the Commune took over the capital until violently suppressed by the French army in late May. Compare WC’s comments earlier in the conflict to a German correspondent, in [1013] to Emil Lehmann, 7 August 1870.

4. The rue de la Chaussée-d’Antin runs north-northwest from Boulevard des Italiens in the ninth arrondissement of Paris, not far from L’Opéra.

5. WC had probably last met the French actor during his stay in London for the season of French plays at the Princess’s Theatre from 20 April to 4 June 1870. By then Régnier had already announced that would retire from the stage in April 1871, after nearly forty years with the Théâtre Français. See the review headed ‘French Plays’ in the Times of 6 June 1870, p. 10d, which commented: ‘But mark the difference between French theatrical administration and our own. Regnier ceases to act, but does not cease to teach acting. He still continues, as a Professor of the Conservatoire, to train pupils for the profession he has so long adorned. ... And he retires, for his good work, on a pension almost as large as the salary he is now receiving as an actor.’

[3036] TO JOHN BONNER,<sup>1</sup> 10 JUNE 1871

MS: UPenn. Published: A&C3, pp. 44–45.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London | 10th June 1871

My dear Sir,

I should have written to you at an earlier date on the subject of my dramatic version of “The Woman in White” – if the arrangements for the production of the work in England had been complete. They are not yet settled – but I defer communicating with you no longer.

If the play is produced in England, during the present year, it will probably be performed in September next. If it is to be first represented in London, I will as soon as I am certain of the fact send you an early copy, giving you time to treat for its production in the United States.

If, on the other hand, the play is first produced at an English provincial town, I have a question to ask you relating to the possibility of also producing it in America, with an English actor in the chief character.

The actor who is to play “Fosco” here—and who is now reading the part with me – has been invited to appear in America – and has some idea of accepting the invitation, provided he can play “Fosco” in your principal cities. Could he (for example) appear in the part in Liverpool (say) in August next – and then cross to New York and appear there, (say) in September – leaving the representation of the piece in London to be accomplished on his return to England after a series of performances in the United States? Is it possible, under these circumstances, to secure the copyright of my drama, in America? Or can the actor to whom I allude (whose name I am not yet at liberty to mention)<sup>2</sup> only play “Fosco” (in my drama) in the United States, on condition of the piece being first produced in the United States, and not, in the first instance, represented in England at all? The object of the proposed preliminary performances in Liverpool, would be to enable me to see a rehearsal and to give the necessary hints as to the acting and the stage business generally.

As to the play, there is not the least fear of any existing version copied from the novel coming into competition with it. It is an original work – with entirely new situations and new developments of character. The question of the conditions under which it can be profitably produced in the United States – with the English actor in the chief character – is the important question to settle. Will you kindly let me hear what your experience suggests on this point – before I do anything definitely with the drama in England?

I hear from my brother that “No Name” is to be shortly produced at the Fifth Avenue Theatre.<sup>3</sup> This I am afraid, is a production of the piece at the worst theatrical season of the year. A success in the American summer is, as I am informed, not to be hoped for. The best actors take their holiday – and the public are at the watering places. Even here, the summer is the very worst possible season for the production of a new play.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Although the recipient is not formally identified, it is clearly to WC’s agent for dramatic works in the USA – see [1056] to Bonner of 21 January 1871.

2. George Vining, who in the event only played the part for a short time.

3. The play had been originally written by WC, but was later adapted by Augustin Daly and Wybert Reeve and opened on 7 June 1871.

[1097] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 10 JUNE 1871

MS: Fales. Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 180; BGLL, II, p 257.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | June 10th 1871

Dear Sir,

I beg to thank you for your letter and for the newspaper slip enclosed.<sup>1</sup> My only excuse for this late acknowledgement of your communication is that I am overwhelmed with letters, and that I cannot possibly answer them as soon as they are received

Messrs Smith & Elder are the publishers of my works here. My first novel was “Antonina” – published in 1850. My first printed work was the “Life” of my father “William Collins” the painter – published in 1848.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Not found with the letter.

[1098] TO CHARLES WARD, 10 JUNE 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/66). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 257–258.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th June 1871

My dear Ward,

The books have brought in a little more money. I enclose a cheque for £66..13..4 which please pay to my account. Let me have one line to say you have got it safely.<sup>1</sup> This “muggy” change in the weather completely prostrates me.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

I am obliged to pay a heavy bill – or pay interest for credit.<sup>2</sup> Will you look at my account – and see if this statement of it is correct?

=

|                        |               |                           |
|------------------------|---------------|---------------------------|
| 1871                   | Banking book. | Balance (C <sup>1</sup> ) |
| April 20 th | -----         | £186.. 6..1               |
| June 12 th  |               |                           |
| By Smith & Elder       | -----         | 66..13..4          |
|                        |               | £252..19..5               |

D<sup>t</sup>
 Cheques drawn | from May 26th | to June 10th
 Total: ----- 16.. -.. -
 236..19..5

June 12th
 Cheque to | Benham & Sons
 (House repairs) ----- 134.. -.. -
 Balance £102..19..5<sup>3</sup>

On June 20th I will send you order for selling out Five-twenties<sup>4</sup> – the dividend will then have been paid, I suppose.<sup>5</sup>

-
1. It is credited to WC's bank account 'Smith Elder & Co' on 12 June (Coutts: WC).
  2. It is not clear what this bill is. By far the biggest amount paid out in this period is the £134 to Benham & Sons listed here. The next biggest – his rent of £44 – was not due until July. In fact since WC's banking book was written up on 20 April he had made numerous payments though received no income.
  3. On the reverse is a separate calculation, perhaps in Ward's hand, which gives a different view of WC's position – the comments and final sum in brackets showing WC with a positive balance of £208-11s-3d.

|                                                        |
|--------------------------------------------------------|
| 1997.- .10 [balance]                                   |
| 1810. 8.10 [paid out]                           |
| 156.12.- [new balance]                                 |
| 66.13. 4 [add Smith Elder payment]              |
| 228. 5. 4 [new balance]                                |
| 19.14. 1 [deduct paid to Messrs Zibilin 7 June] |
| [208.11. 3 leaves balance]                             |

(Messrs Zibilin was almost certainly the same firm as Delol F[rère]s & Zibelin mentioned in [1007] to Coutts, 14 July 1870.)

4. Bonds yielding 6% issued by the US government during the Civil War (in 1862, 1864 and 1865), so called because they were redeemable at any time after five years, but payable in full only after twenty years.
5. In fact WC sold $2000 worth of these bonds almost at once for £405. After paying £1-2s-6d commission the balance of £403-17s-6d was credited to the account on 16 June. The final dividend of £12-1s was credited on 21 June. On 23 June the balance on his account at the year end was £444-18s-1d.

[1099] TO LEWIS WINGFIELD,<sup>1</sup> 19 JUNE 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 181; BGLL, II, p. 258.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th June 1871

Dear Sir,

I did not trouble you with my ailments in my last letter. But the truth is, that I am just recovering from a severe attack of rheumatic gout. I am ordered to leave London – and I am going away at once to stay with some friends in the country.<sup>2</sup>

As I cannot attend the Meeting, I may as well say here that a small dinner, and a high subscription, would, in my opinion, prove the best means of keeping out the objectionable theatrical element, and of making the thing successful. A body of representative men in Literature, Art, and The Drama – another “selection” to match representing rank and social influence – say twenty or thirty in all – might give the Comédie Française a dinner worth eating, and one or two brief speeches worth hearing. The other alternative is a bad dinner – a mob at the lower end of the room – indifferent serving – and endless after-dinner oratory.<sup>3</sup> If fresh difficulties present themselves at the adjourned meeting, I can see no other choice but to give up the Public Banquet – and try the sort of semi-private Reception which I venture to recommend.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
The Honble | Lewis Wingfield

---

1. Lewis Strange Wingfield (1842–91: ODNB), by turns a traveller, actor, writer and painter, who was resident in Paris during most of the Franco-Prussian War.

2. The friends remain unidentified.

3. Though the meeting itself has not been precisely identified, it clearly concerns the organization of the public farewell banquet for the actors of the Comédie Française, shortly to return to Paris after a season in London. The dinner took place on 8 July 1871 at the Crystal Palace. WC's advice was ignored, as there were over 200 guests (including Tennyson and Disraeli), music by the band of the Grenadier Guards and a series of lengthy speeches – see the report in the Times of 10 July, p. 12c.

[1100] TO CHARLES KENT, 28 JUNE 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 259.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 28th June 1871

Dear Mr Kent

I shall be very glad to see you, if you can conveniently call here at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon next.

For some months I have been suffering severely from rheumatic gout – and the interval between two and three represents my only spare time. After that, I go to Electric baths and (the rheumatism being in my knees) get my drive in the fresh air. If two o'clock will suit you on Saturday, pray don't trouble to write again.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Charles Kent Esq

---

1. Found with envelope postmarked 12 June 1872, clearly evidence of a separate letter – see [1240] to Kent of that date.

[3156] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 29 JUNE 1871

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C6, p. 9.

90, Gloucester Place. | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup>
Thursday June 29th<sup>2</sup>

Mr dear Tindell,

I have had another attack of rheumatic gout since poor Benham's death – and now I am right again, I have arrears of work to make up. Hence my silence.

I want to see you about one or two matters. If I call in Essex Street tomorrow (Friday) at 5 p.m. – will that suit you?

If not, what time will?

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Black centred embossed Gothic typeface.

2. After the date, the year '1872' is inserted in another hand. In fact the letter must be from 1871. Edward Benham died at his home of smallpox and fever on 30 April 1871 at the age of 48 (Death Certificate, Edward Benham, 30 April 1871). It also fits with the calendar – June 29th was a Thursday in 1871.

[1101] TO HARRY,<sup>1</sup> 4 JULY 1871

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 259; Lewis website.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th July 1871

My dear Harry,

Here is the autograph (on the next leaf) – with the greatest pleasure. My principal complaint just now is hard work. A little while ago it was gout. Charley was (I am glad to say) better when I last heard of him.

Yours Ever | WC

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | July 4th 1871

---

1. Presumably a family member – see [0809] to Harry of 14 January [1868].

[1102] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 5 JULY 1871

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 259–260.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 5th July 1871

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter.

My engagements make it impossible for me to appear in Temple Bar<sup>1</sup> – and I am bound by agreement to give the refusal of the right to republish my next novel, to the proprietors of the weekly periodical in which it will be first produced.<sup>2</sup>

Under these circumstances all that I can do, is to keep your letter by me. If I can see a future opportunity of renewing our old literary relations, I will do my best to take advantage of it.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. George Bentley took over the literary monthly Temple Bar in January 1866 and edited it from 1867 until his death in 1895. WC's first novel to appear in the magazine was The New Magdalen from October 1872.

2. Poor Miss Finch began its run in Cassell's Magazine in September 1871. In the end Cassell's did not take up their option to publish the novel in book form, and it appeared in three volumes from Bentley – see [1167] to George Bentley of 24 November 1871.

[1103] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 8 JULY 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, p. 260.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London

Saturday | July 8th 1871

Dear Sirs,

I send to you with this a corrected Revise of the First Weekly Part of my new Serial Story, "Poor Miss Finch." This first Part will be published in Cassell's Magazine on Wednesday the 30th of August next.

A duplicate of Part First will follow, accompanied by a Revise of Part Second, by next week's mail. I shall, I hope, keep the supply going regularly for the future. Illness has prevented me from beginning as soon as I had planned. But I am now finishing (in Mss) the Fourth Weekly Part – which is pretty well in advance, so far. I hope you will like the opening of this new story. The few people who have been allowed to read the proof here, are very favourably impressed by it.

I have to thank you for kindly sending me your "Weekly" and your "Magazine".<sup>1</sup> I am interested in both – but the Magazine especially strikes me as being really a wonderful achievement in periodical publication. It is quite a little library in itself.

Believe me | Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs | Harper & Brothers

---

1. That is, Harper's Weekly and Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

[1104] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 8 JULY 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 261.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Saturday July 8th 1871

Dear Sirs,

I send, with this, a corrected Revise of the First Weekly Part of my new Serial Story – “Poor Miss Finch.” Excuse my troubling you to forward it to Mr Desbarats. I have mislaid his address. If you will kindly send me a line telling me what the right address is, I will take care to cause you no further trouble in the matter.

The publication-day for this First Weekly Part in Cassell's Magazine (which must of course be also the publication day in Canada) is Wednesday the 30th of August next.

After this first Part, the proofs will be sent by book-post. In case of accidents, a duplicate will, in each case, follow by the succeeding mail. I shall hope to send regularly every week.

Until I receive your letter, I must I fear continue to trouble you by sending the proofs to your house, to be forwarded.

The publication here is a weekly and a monthly publication.<sup>1</sup> In case of a daily or bi-weekly publication in Canada, I may, of course trust Mr Desbarats not to allow any part of the story to appear in advance of the date of publication here.

I remain Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. Cassell's Magazine was then published in both weekly and monthly numbers.

[1105] TO THE EDITOR OF THE ATHENÆUM, 10 JULY 1871

MS: Unknown. Published: ‘The Moonstone’, Athenæum, 2281 (15 July 1871), p. 81c, our copy text; ‘German Plagiarists’, Times (17 July 1871), p. 11f; BGLL, II, pp. 261–262.

90, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, July 10, 1871.

A German Correspondent, in the last week's number of your journal, writes to inquire whether my novel called ‘The Moonstone’ is not founded on Blumhagen's ‘Götzen-Auge’?<sup>1</sup> I beg to inform this gentleman that I am not in the habit of “founding” my novels on the productions of other writers, and that I not only never read, but never heard of, such a book as ‘Götzen-Auge’ before I saw it mentioned in last week's Athenæum.

While writing on this subject, it may not be amiss to invite your Correspondent (in my case) to “look at home.” One of his countrymen has committed an audacious theft on me by publishing a coarse reproduction of ‘Man and Wife,’ as his own original work, in the Algemeine-Familien-Zeitung of Stuttgart.<sup>2</sup> I have no legal remedy against this act of literary larceny. The German publisher has managed, by issuing the first number of the stolen novel in 1870, to evade the operation of the International Copyright Treaty, which only affected Wurtemberg on the 1st of January in the present year.<sup>3</sup> All I can do is to trust to your courtesy to be allowed to claim my own literary property in your columns, before your Correspondent writes again to inquire whether ‘Man and Wife’ is not founded on a German work.

WILKIE COLLINS.

---

1. See the Athenæum, 2280 (8 July 1871), p. 51b–c, where the following paragraph appears in the section ‘Literary Gossip’: ‘A German correspondent well acquainted with the lighter literature of his country, writes to ask, whether “The Moonstone” by Mr. Wilkie Collins, is not founded on Blumhagen's “Götzen-Auge.” Vide the collected works of that author.' Blumhagen and his work remain untraced.

2. The pirated German version has not been traced.

3. After the realization of German unity under Emperor William I, the first imperial copyright act was passed in June 1870 which took effect from the beginning of the following year; prior to that time the existing copyright treaty with Britain applied only in limited areas of the German confederation (see Copinger, 2nd edn).

[1106] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 19 JULY 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/73). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 262–263.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th July 1871

My dear Tindell

I forgot, when I wrote yesterday, to ask if you had found time to read those two slips I left with you. If they present no glaring improbability, tear them up, and throw them away. If there is anything wrong, let me have them back with your remarks in pencil on the margin. The proof is going to America and Canada – and it will be too late now to make any alterations. Otherwise, I would not trouble you. The idea of the clock is a fact.<sup>1</sup> A clock was a false witness in Scotland in the case of the “St Fergus Murder.”<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | WC

I have written to Vining.<sup>3</sup> You should never do these things without a barrister to help you!<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Poor Miss Finch (in ch. 8, ‘The Perjury of the Clock’) describes how the main character, Oscar Nugent, was saved from hanging by his twin brother Nugent due to the false testimony of a clock.

2. William McDonald died on Saturday 19 November 1853 in Kirktown St Fergus from a bullet wound through his cheek. Dr William Smith was tried for his murder, having taken out £2,000 of insurance on McDonald’s life. The case turned on where exactly the doctor was, or could have been, at the time of the death and there was conflicting evidence from different clocks about his movements in the village that night. By a majority the jury returned the Scottish verdict of ‘Not Proven’, the minority favouring a verdict of Guilty. The insurance policies were not paid. See William Routhead, Twelve Scots Trials (Edinburgh: William Green & Sons, 1913).

3. George J. Vining (1824–75), who initially co-directed with WC the first authorized theatre production of The Woman in White, which ran at the Olympic from 9 October 1871 to 24 February 1872. WC disagreed with Vining about alterations he wanted to make to the play during its provincial run after it closed in London. See [1226] to Tindell of 17 April 1872 and [1225] to Vining of the same date. Wybert Reeve replaced Vining as director.

4. Although Tindell was WC’s solicitor, WC himself was technically a barrister. He was called to the bar on 21 November 1851 but never practised.

[1107] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 24 JULY 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/33). Published: Flower, pp. 31–32; Coleman, p. 182; BGLL, II, p. 263.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 24th July 1871

Dear Sirs,

I have completed my arrangements with Messrs Hunter Rose and Co (of Toronto) for the publication in serial and book-form of “Poor Miss Finch” in Canada.<sup>1</sup> I shall be therefore obliged if you will let them have electros of the illustrations to the story.

Belinfante Brothers have made a noble effort. They have sent me, as purchase-money for “Man and Wife”, the sum of one hundred guilders – amounting in English money to between £8 and £9!<sup>2</sup> As they have never hitherto paid sixpence to any author (not a Dutchman) in the civilised universe, I feel bound to consider myself as the object of an act of extraordinary munificence – and I have responded by sending to this princely firm the advance-sheets of “Poor Miss Finch”.

Pray accept my thanks for the kind consideration for my interests which your note expresses, and

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Cassell, Petter & Galpin

---

1. See [1104] to Hunter, Rose of 8 July 1871.

2. See [1087] to Charles Ward of 14 April 1871.

[1108] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 26 JULY 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/74). Published: BGLL, II, p. 264.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th July 1871

My dear Tindell,

All right! Very glad to hear that is settled.<sup>1</sup>

Don't forget | The Codicil<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Probably referring to the legal issues arising in Poor Miss Finch – see [1106] to Tindell, 19 July 1871.

2. Probably a change to his will relating to the birth of his second daughter Harriet on 14 May 1871. Written in large dramatic letters. See also [1112] and [1115] to Tindell of 2 and 8 August 1871.

[3093] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 26 JULY 1871

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C4, p. 18.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 26th July 1871

---

1. A small piece of paper torn straight on three sides, glued lightly by the edges to a larger card with nothing on the reverse; possibly the end of a letter or a compliment slip for an autograph hunter.

[1109] TO SQUIRE BANCROFT,<sup>1</sup> 1 AUGUST 1871

MS: Unknown. Published: Bancroft 1909, p. 166, our copy text; BGLL, II, p 264.

August 1, 1871.

Dear Mr. Bancroft, –

Let me assure you that I feel the sincerest gratification that Man and Wife has been accepted at the Prince of Wales's Theatre. Every advantage that I could possibly wish for is, I know beforehand, already obtained for my work, now that it has secured the good fortune of addressing itself to the public with Mrs Bancroft's introduction.

Believe me, very faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins.

---

1. Squire Bancroft (1841–1926), distinguished actor, married in December 1867 to the equally distinguished actress Marie Effie Wilton (1839–1921: ODNB). In April 1865 she had taken on the management of the small Prince of Wales's Theatre (formerly the Queen's Theatre) on the corner of Charlotte Street and Tottenham Street, and the couple became joint managers on their marriage. They moved to the larger Haymarket Theatre in July 1880 and retired from management in 1885. They were technical innovators and electric light was used for the first time on the English stage to create a storm scene in Man and Wife (see [1360] to Bancroft, 17 July 1873). Among the Bancrofts' best-loved productions there were the realistic comedies of T. W. Robertson.

[1110] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 2 AUGUST 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/34). Published: Flower, pp. 32–33; Coleman, pp. 183–184; BGLL, II, p. 265.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | August 2nd 1871

Dear Sirs,

I have received letters from the publishers in Holland, and from my translator in Germany, relating to the measures to be taken for protecting my new story in these countries.<sup>1</sup>

1. Messrs Belinfante want the first weekly number containing the first instalment of the story “as soon as it is printed, and before circulation.” They add that this is “the only means by which they can check competition.” I may add (so far as I understand their letter) that the first weekly part is apparently the only part they want under the circumstances mentioned.

2. The German translator informs me that four copies of each monthly Part in which the story appears must be sent to him “to be deposited” in compliance with the law.<sup>2</sup> This I can, of course, manage to do myself. But he adds that the usual announcement of the right of translation being reserved, ought to be placed “at the top instead of the bottom of every number.” And he declares this change to be important to the protection of the story(!)

Will you kindly inform me whether you see any objection to making the change? And also whether you are disposed to comply with the request sent to me by Belinfante Brothers? I feel that I owe you my apologies for troubling you on these matters. But it is as well to say Yes or No at starting. For my own part, I am getting so weary of the vexatious and absurd regulations which these foreign laws impose on English literature, that I am strongly disposed to let myself be robbed, as the preferable alternative to letting myself be worried – and, worse still, to my transferring some of that “worry” to you!

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs | Cassell Petter & Galpin

---

1. Regarding Poor Miss Finch.

2. The German translator was Emil Lehmann – see [1129] to Cassell’s of 26 September 1871. His translation Die Blinde appeared from the Leipzig house of Günter in 1874.

[1111] TO JAMES K. MEDBERY,<sup>1</sup> 2 AUGUST 1871

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 266 (as to James K. Medbury).

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London August 2nd 1871

Dear Sir,

A line to thank you for your kind letter and for “The Lecture Season”.<sup>2</sup> I have not the least objection to the printing of my letter, as a means of introducing the subject of my proposed visit to America to your readers.

Since I last wrote to you,<sup>3</sup> my inveterate enemy the rheumatic gout has attacked me again. After a month’s illness, I am now better, and working on a new serial story, the first number of which will appear in London and New York on the 30th of this month.<sup>4</sup>

As time advances you shall hear how my health goes on. In the meantime, I am quite sure that I did right in following my doctor’s advice, and refraining from paying a visit to the United States during the present year.<sup>5</sup> We must be patient and we must hope.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
James K. Medbery, Esqre

---

1. James Knowles Medbery (1838–73), author of Men and Mysteries of Wall Street (Boston: Fields, Osgood, & Co., 1870), and owner of the American Literary Bureau, of 132 Nassau Street, New York, which arranged remunerative lecture tours for Mark Twain, Bret Harte, and other popular authors. On Medbery’s untimely death, the Bureau was taken over by C. Brelsford, who mismanaged the early stages of WC’s reading tour of America from later September 1873 – see [1402] to Joseph W. Harper of 2 January 1874, and Hanes 2008, pp. 53–56.

2. Serially issued publicity pamphlet for the American Literary Bureau, though the specific issue containing WC’s letter has not been traced.

3. No earlier letters to Medbery have been traced.

4. Poor Miss Finch in both Cassell’s Magazine and Harper’s Weekly.

5. WC did not visit the United States until September 1873.

[1112] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 2 AUGUST 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/75). Published: BGLL, II, p. 266.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. Wednesday August 2nd

My dear Tindell,
(Codicil)<sup>1</sup>

Can I see you, if I am with you at 3.30 P.M. tomorrow (Thursday?) or would you prefer a later hour? 3.30 will do better for me as I want to call at Coutts's first, and they shut at 4. If tomorrow at 3.30. will do, don't answer. If Friday will suit better at the same hour, let me hear.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins.

---

1. Written immediately after the salutation, and presumably referring to a change to WC's will relating to the birth to his younger daughter Harriet on 14 May 1871. See also [1108] to Tindell of 26 July 1871.

[1113] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 4 AUGUST 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/35). Published: Coleman, p. 185; BGLL, II, p. 267.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th August 1871

Dear Sirs,

Pray accept my best thanks for your kind compliance with the requests contained in my note.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

---

1. See [1110] to Cassell's of 2 August 1871

[1114] TO JOHN BONNER, 5–7 AUGUST 1871

MS: UPenn, first part, dated 5 August; Parrish (Box 4/12), second part, dated 7 August. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 267–268 (second part only, with recipient unidentified); A&C3, pp. 63–65.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd 5th August 1871

My dear Sir,

A line to thank you for your kind letter of July 14th.<sup>1</sup>

The dramatic "Woman in White" is to be produced on the London stage, at the Olympic Theatre, on the 2nd of October next. "Fosco" is to be played by Mr. George Vining.

I have not yet seen Mr Palmer.<sup>2</sup>

The question now is – How to prevent my play from being pirated in the United States – if it succeeds in London. If Mr Palmer and I come to terms, he will probably be able to answer my question. If we do not, my idea is that I ought to send you a copy of the piece before it is produced here, and that some American writer on whom we can rely, should "write in" a few lines here and there, and then copyright the play in America as the joint production of my pen and his. Will this be enough of itself to protect the play from being performed without my leave in the United States? Or must the work be actually produced in an American Theatre? In the latter case, would it be possible to perform it in some small town – then to stop the run – and keep it waiting until Mr Vining could visit America and play Fosco in your large cities? In plain words – will one of two public performances (in a small place) of a play stated to be the joint production of an American and an Englishman, secure the dramatic copyright of the piece for future performances in America? If the answer is No, and if American managers refuse to produce the play simultaneously with its production in London, I do not see how I can protect myself from piracy.

Excuse my again troubling you on this question. But I want nothing now to complete my disastrous dramatic campaign in your country, but to have a success here with "The Woman in White", and then to have the play produced successfully also in America, without my making a farthing by it!

If you are in any doubt on the points I have put, would it not be desirable to apply to my friend Mr W. D. Booth at Wall Street,<sup>3</sup> who possesses great experience on the copyright question?

The piece is printed – and I can send you one or more copies, if you think it desirable.

“Fosco” would certainly have a better chance on your stage, if the character was played by an actor who has read it over with me. I know “Fosco” intimately – in every inflection of his voice, and every gesture of his hands. If I could have instructed the “Wragge” and the “Magdalen” at Mr Daly’s Theatre results might have been very different. My characters are living beings to me. I only know how to write them by knowing how to act them as well.

Excuse this new trial of your patience. I write while there is still time to do something for the dramatic “Woman in White.”

Yours truly Wilkie Collins

On consideration I have thought it wisest to send to you at once by registered book-post, a copy of the piece – which is of course for your use only – in case it may be wanted for the object in view. In the event of accidents by post, another copy goes to Mr Booth by this mail also.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Tuesday 7th August | 90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

I have kept my letter till the above date, in case of having news to send you on the subject of Mr Palmer.

Mr Vining has seen Mr Palmer – and has told him what I have planned to do with the piece. Nothing has been settled – and I gather from Mr Vining that Mr Palmer (if he treated for the piece at all) would be only disposed to treat for the production of it, simultaneously with the production in London. I have not myself seen him yet – but, if I do see him, I shall hold to my idea of keeping “Fosco” off the New York stage until Mr Vining can play the part there – if the thing can be done.

After the experience of “No Name”,<sup>4</sup> I am more and more convinced that there would be a very poor chance of success with a “Fosco”, who had not rehearsed the character with me. It is a character outside all theatrical conventions. If you had a great genius on the American Stage, I could trust the great genius to play it without my assistance. As things are I have not seen here, and have not heard of, an American actor who would be likely to make a great success in the part. The play is all Fosco. If he does not take the audience by storm, failure is certain. Mr Vining is privately rehearsing with me – every line in the dialogue is matter of consultation between us. If this hard work is repaid by a great triumph here – Mr Vining is almost certain to repeat the success with you. If he fails – there is an end of the play, on both sides of the Atlantic.

I am therefore all for waiting, until the first night at the Olympic enlightens us – provided we can copyright the play in the U.S. If we can not copyright it, it must take its chance – and I can only thank you for the kind interest which you have shown in the matter.

On reflection, I have written by this mail to Mr Booth to get his opinion at all hazards, on the purely legal aspect of the question.<sup>5</sup> It will save you trouble in putting the points to him, if you find it desirable to consult together on the subject.

I must again apologize for this inordinately long letter. It is the result of my anxiety to place you in complete possession of my view – and to spare you more letter writing.

WC

---

1. Given the time for transatlantic travel, probably a reply from Bonner to [3036] of 10 June 1871.

2. Probably Albert Marshman Palmer (1838–1905), manager of the Union Square Theater, New York.

3. William D. Booth, WC’s legal representative in New York.

4. Augustin Daly had staged No Name at his Fifth Avenue Theater in New York from 7 June that year.

5. The letter to Booth has not been traced.

[1115] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 8 AUGUST 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/76). Summary: B&C, II, p. 346. Published: BGLL, II, p. 268.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 8th Augt 1871

My dear Tindell

I was prevented from getting to Essex Street yesterday.

Shall we say tomorrow (Wednesday) at 5 P.M.? Silence shall mean yes.

I cannot find the Codicil appointing Lehmann exor. The only codicil I can find, I will bring with me. It relates to a sum in ready money to be left to C. and M. on my death<sup>1</sup> – and is I believe incorporated in my ~~recess~~ last-executed will.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Caroline Graves and Martha Rudd. WC's final will, executed in 1881, left them £200 each in 'ready money' and shared his estate between them. An annotated transcription is found at the Lewis website.

[1116] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 12 AUGUST 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: B&C, II, p. 347.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | London | August 12th 1871

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for your letter, and for the extracts from the Canadian newspaper relating to copyright in the colony. I have read the extracts with great interest.<sup>2</sup>

I return the two forms filled in, ~~and~~ signed, and witnessed.<sup>3</sup> I also send to you, [del] /on the next leaf/, the analysis of the story.

Having had the pleasure of personally seeing Mr. Hunter /and learning the address,/ I have been enabled to send the /advance/ proofs of "Poor Miss Finch" direct to Mr Desbarats.<sup>4</sup> I hope to continue the transmission of proofs regularly every week.

Believe me | Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co.

Analysis of the story called: – | "Poor Miss Finch."

The object of the story is to show the modifying effect of circumstances on the calamities that afflict human life.

The calamity selected for illustration is Blindness. The person afflicted is a young girl.

She is first presented to the reader as having been blind from infancy. She is afterwards operated on, and recovers her sight for a time. The interval past, her sight fails her again, and her blindness is renewed for life.

The incidents of the story are so [del] managed as to [del] make the happiest days of the girl's life – not the days when she enjoys the brief restoration of her sight – but the after-days when the operation has failed, and the blindness has permanently returned. The story leaves her, at its end – by a perfectly natural succession of circumstances – happier, under the return of her calamity, than she had been at the earlier period of her life when her sight was restored for a time.

---

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper, text centred.

2. The extracts in question have not been identified.

3. Presumably relating to protection of WC's intellectual property in Canada.

4. Of the Canadian Illustrated News, the newspaper in which the novel was serialized – see [1592] to Hunter Rose of 24 January 1876.

[1117] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 12 AUGUST 1871<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/77). Published: BGLL, II, p. 269.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th Augt

My dear Tindell,

Will you send me the Agreement (for "Man and Wife") with Mr Bancroft (Prince of Wales's Theatre)<sup>2</sup> as soon as convenient next week? He is anxious to sign and settle. I suppose I had better have two copies – one for me to send to him (at Scarborough) signed by me – the other to be returned to me, signed by him. It will probably save trouble if you send me a Draft first which I can return – with alterations if necessary.<sup>3</sup>

Address after Monday | The Queen's Hotel | Upper Norwood | S.E.

Yours ever | WC

Mr Bancroft's address in London is.

S. B. Bancroft | Pleydell House | Grove End Road | St John's Wood

---

1. Dating is secured by the sequence of letters concerning the play agreement.

2. See [1109] to Bancroft of 1 August 1871.

3. Above the printed address is added in pencil, probably in Tindell's hand, '£40 a week'; on the otherwise blank fourth page is written in pencil in what appears to be the same hand 'leave out 4'. In fact Man and Wife did not open at the Prince of Wales Theatre until 22 February 1873 when WC was paid £6-13s-4d per performance which amounted to £40 per standard week of six performances.

[1118] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 14 AUGUST 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/78), including letter and newspaper cutting from S. B. Bancroft. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 269–270.

90. Gloucester Place | Monday Aug 14

My dear Tindell,

More law! On the other side is an extract from the "Era" sent to me by the Manager of The Prince of Wales's Theatre.<sup>1</sup>

The advertiser has either stolen his piece from my novel<sup>2</sup> – of the dramatic versions of which (printed on the completion of the story),<sup>3</sup> I am author & proprietor – or he has taken my title for some piece of his own. If ~~you~~ we don't stop this, we shall forfeit our right to stop more serious piracies, which will certainly make their appearance if my play succeeds.

Will you write to Mr Stephenson and stop him? I wrote to you a day or two since about the agreement with Mr Bancroft.

Yours ever, | WC

Going at 4 p. m. today to The Queen's Hotel Norwood S.E.

P.S. You will observe that Mr S. is only at his present address until the 21st of this month.

---

1. Bancroft's message was clearly written first on one leaf of a sheet of folding notepaper with the printed heading of the Grand Hotel, Scarborough. WC has folded the notepaper the other way and written his own address and message on the blank leaf.

2. Glued to the page above Bancroft's message is a cutting which reads:

Mr C. H. Stephenson (Irish Comedian and Dramatic Playwright), in reply to several inquiries begs to state that until October he cannot say on what date he will be able to renew his Provincial Tour. Meanwhile he is prepared to grant licenses and provide MSS. for the production of his great Dramas of "Pindee Singh," "Never Despair," "Wrecked Not Lost," "Man and Wife," &c. Terms moderate.

Address, 80, Crowndale-road, Camden Town, until August 21st.

Bancroft has underlined "Man and Wife," with two thick lines and writes below:

Sunday: Aug. 13. 71

My dear sir | I have just seen the above in today's "Era". We quite agree with you in thinking it advisable to immediately stop anything of the kind.

Sincerely | S.B. Bancroft

3. Man and Wife: A Dramatic Story in Four Acts was published for the author in 1870.

[1119] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 15 AUGUST 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/79). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 270–271.

QUEEN'S HOTEL, UPPER NORWOOD,
NEAR THE CRYSTAL PALACE.<sup>1</sup> | S.E. | Tuesday Augt 15

My dear Tindell

Many thanks for the Draft Agrmt. It will do perfectly.<sup>2</sup> Bring the duplicate copies here instead of sending them – and breathe a mouthful of this fine air. I am drunk with it – after London.<sup>3</sup>

N.B. The champagne is good and dry.

Send me a Telegram when you can come and dine, and say what hour will suit you.

Yours ever | WC

You will by this time have received my letter relating to the piratical advertiser of “Man and Wife”.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Written on hotel headed paper with a picture of the building. The hotel still exists at 122 Church Road, Upper Norwood, SE19 2UG. This district is known as Sydenham. Towards the end of Poor Miss Finch, which Wilkie was working on at the time, Lucilla marries Oscar in Sydenham. At the end of ch. 48 is the line ‘We reached Sydenham, and went to the nearest hotel’.

2. With Squire Bancroft for the dramatic Man and Wife.

3. Later, in The Evil Genius (1886), WC puts the deserted Catherine Linley at a hotel in Sydenham, near the Crystal Palace. She is visited by Captain Bennydeck who ‘has got tired of the sea. He is staying at this hotel, to try the air of Sydenham, and he finds that it agrees with him’ (ch. 39).

4. See [1118] to Tindell of the previous day, 14 August.

[1120] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 22 AUGUST 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/36). Published: Coleman, p. 186; BGLL, II, p. 271.

QUEEN'S HOTEL, UPPER NORWOOD, S.E.
NEAR THE CRYSTAL PALACE. | August 22nd 1871

Dear Sirs,

I yesterday sent to The Editor the first third, completed, of the manuscript of “Poor Miss Finch”.

When you pay, at your convenience, the first third of the purchase money,<sup>1</sup> be pleased to send it to my account with Messrs Coutts and Co, 59 Strand.

Believe me, | Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

---

1. On the verso leaf is added in another hand, obviously that of a member of staff at Cassell's, ‘pay £200 WM’. This amount was credited to WC's account on 23 August (Coutts: WC).

[1121] TO THOMAS SATCHELL,<sup>1</sup> 2 SEPTEMBER 1871

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, pp. 187–188 (as to Thomas W. Satchell); BGLL, II, pp. 271–272.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square, | W. | 2nd. September, 1871

Dear Sir,

Absence from London has allowed me no earlier opportunity of acknowledging the receipt of your kind letter than this.

Your view of the case stated in your letter appear to me to be – logically if not legally – unassailable. The printed contents of “All The Year Round” are registered at the Custom House. “The Moonstone” is printed in “All The Year Round”.

Therefore “The Moonstone” is registered at the Custom House.

The question of a separate registration of “The Moonstone” on its republication in a separate form, seems to be more a question of convenience to the Custom House than a question of law. As I understand your letter, if the title-page of my story had borne the line: “Reprinted from All The Year Round” – that line would have been enough, without any separate registration of the book, to render the foreign reprint liable to detention. The authorities would, in that case, have known that this work, on its first publication, had been protected by registration – and that first registration would then, and on their own showing, have been enough.

In any case, I am sincerely sensible of your kindness in informing me of the difficulty as it now exists, and sincerely desirous of doing all that is in my power to assist you in definitely settling the question in dispute. If you think it desirable to make the matter the subject of a memorial to the authorities, my signature, and my interests with other writers and proprietors of English copyrights, are alike at your disposal.

I have the honour to be, Sir, | Your faithful servant, | Wilkie Collins.

To | T. Satchell, Esq.

---

1. Thomas Satchell, civil servant, then assistant-surveyor at the Board of Customs. See ‘Examination of Tea’ in the Times, 4 October 1875, p. 6b, reprinted from the Civil Service Review, which reports that Satchell has been appointed to the new auxiliary post of assistant-inspector, with the task of preventing the importation of adulterated tea. Born in Durham, at this time he lived at 56 Mansfield Road, Hampstead, with his wife Hannah and their three children (1871 Census, RG10/246, p. 44). From the autumn of 1871 to the spring of 1872, WC conducted an extended correspondence with Satchell on the formalities of registering copyright works at the Custom House. (See [0668] to F. V. Phillips of 23 March 1866 concerning the necessity of registering English copyrights with the Custom House to prevent the illegal importation of foreign reprints, in particular the Tauchnitz Continental editions in English.) As [1123] to Satchell of 19 September makes clear, a recent administrative decision by the Commissioner of Customs had made the process of registration considerably more complex and raised questions about the ownership of copyright in the case of periodical publication of literary works; see also [1125] to William F. Tindell of 20 September 1871.

[1122] TO F. C. BEARD, 9 SEPTEMBER 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Baker 2001, p. 506. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 272–273, amended A&C5, p. 20.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
Saturday. 9th Sept 1871

My dear Frank,

I am decidedly better – able to get downstairs this morning to breakfast (and, what is more, to get upstairs again to my study). – I have taken two doses of Quinine – and I shall go on with it, keeping the Enema going. Not the least necessity for you to think again of my case. You will I hope find me cured when you return. May your other patients leave you as free as I leave you!

My remembrances to all at Lewes. I wish you a heavy “bag”.<sup>2</sup> Till Tuesday, goodbye.

Yours afftly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘F. Carr Beard Esq | Lewes’ and postmarked ‘LONDON-W | SP 9 | 71’.

2. Beard is presumably going to Lewes to shoot, perhaps partridges; see [1020] to Ward of 2 September 1870.

[1123] TO THOMAS SACHELL, 19 SEPTEMBER 1871

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Extract: Coleman, pp. 189–190 (as to Thomas W. Satchell); BGLL, II, pp. 273–274.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square, | W. | 19th September 1871

Sir,

I return the written decision of the Commissioner of Customs – with many thanks for your kindness in letting me see it.

You may rely on my considering this document as confidentially submitted to me.

Not one of the articles in All The Year Round is the copyright of the Proprietors. The right of printing in that journal was all that the late Mr. Dickens purchased of his contributors. I have this fact in his own handwriting – relating to my copyrights in my stories published in All The Year Round. Even where no agreement has been entered into, an article in a periodical is legally the property of the writer – unless he has expressly assigned the copyright to the proprietors (a course hardly ever followed in my experience).<sup>1</sup>

However, it is useless to argue the question against a decision of the authorities. My present interest in the matter (as to the past) is to know whether I can now register my novels at the Custom House – after, instead of at the time of, their publication.

Again – as to the present and the future, I am now publishing a new Story in Cassell's Magazine – which story is my copyright by agreement. Am I to register this, now, or at the time of its republication here and (by agreement between Tauchnitz and myself) at Leipzig also in book-form? The registration will not, I hope, require my personal attendance.

I must beg you to excuse my troubling you with these helpless questions. The new stumbling-block placed in the way of Literature by the Custom House takes me by surprise, and finds me quite ignorant of official formalities. I can only trust to my pleasant experience of your courtesy and to your regard for Literature for a word of advice as to what I had better do – and what my literary friends had better do – after the decision of the Board.<sup>2</sup>

I have the honour to be, Sir | Your faithful servant, | Wilkie Collins.

Thomas Satchell, Esq.

The questions submitted to you are: –

1. Can I now register my novels (already published) at the Custom House – so as to render foreign reprints of these novels liable to seizure when they are brought to England?
2. How and when, am I to register the work of fiction which I am now publishing periodically in Cassell's Magazine, and which I have sold, for foreign republication only, to Tauchnitz of Leipzig, on its completion in book form, here?<sup>3</sup>

---

1. WC's understanding of existing copyright law regarding periodical publication is questionable – see the note to [1126] to Satchell of 21 September.

2. That is, the Board of Customs.

3. The postscript consisting of WC's formal questions is omitted in Coleman's transcription.

[1124] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 19 SEPTEMBER 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/80–81). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 274–275.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th Sept 1871

My dear Tindell,

I am only now back after a visit to Berkshire to some country friends I am very glad to hear your arm is better. I had no idea, when I wrote, that the accident was so serious.

Many thanks for the payment to Coutt's of £59.15.. – being the Balance due to me on the sale of the three volume edition of "Man and Wife" – less commission.<sup>1</sup>

Have you time to answer a copyright question? (6/8)<sup>2</sup>

My New York Manager (Daly. 5th Avenue Theatre) has sent me a play in M.S.S. of his own writing – to be shortly produced at his own theatre<sup>3</sup> – with a request that I will secure him his copyright in England. He has done the same thing for me in America by writing in a few lines of his own, and registering my play as mine and his. Will this plan do in England? I must add that there has been a new and very interesting decision in the United States about Dramatic copyright. "The Court" has decided, in the case of the words of an English Song, that as there is no Statute-law to appeal to (there being no international copyright), contested cases must come under the common law. Under common law, I can sell any work of mine I like in which I have my own copyright to an American Manager – it is a plain question of buying and selling – and my song or my play is as much that managers sole property (by common law) when he has paid me for it, as if I had sold him a horse or a pair of trousers. Would this hold good on our side of the Atlantic?

Between ourselves, I would rather not “write in” some lines to Daly’s play, and register myself as co-author, if it can be avoided by any other plan for securing his copyright in England.<sup>4</sup>

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

The litigating party has been afraid to appeal against this decision to the higher Courts.

---

1. This amount had been credited on 15 September (Courtts: WC).
2. Presumably a jocular reference to Tindell’s standard legal fee of 6s-8d.
3. Divorce, which had in fact already opened at the Fifth Avenue Theatre on 9 September 1871 (Nicoll, II, p. 333) – see [1172] to Daly, 2 December 1871. In the event the play was not performed in Britain for another ten years – at the Princess Theatre, Edinburgh, from 12 December 1881 (Nicoll, II, p. 333).
4. For an account of Tindell’s reply, see [1128] to John Bonner of 26 September 1871.

[1125] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 20 SEPTEMBER 1871<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/106). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 275–276.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 20th Sept

My dear Tindell,

Another question!

I am in correspondence with the Custom House about the Registration of Books. The authorities are under the impression that articles or writings of any kind in periodicals are the property of the proprietors of the periodicals, unless there is an express stipulation to the contrary – under the copyright act of 1844.<sup>2</sup>

Now I fancy I remember your showing me an Act or a Decision directly to the contrary effect – namely – that the copyright of an article or of any writing in a periodical rests in the writer – unless there is an express agreement to the contrary with the proprietor. No man loses his copyright in his writing unless he himself assigns it to somebody else.

Will you – if I am right – send me one line, by return of post, enabling me to quote the authority which you showed me – in your room downstairs, as I remember?

The point at issue is of serious importance. As matters now stand not one of my books in the Tauchnitz reprint is liable to seizure in this country – under a recent decision of the Custom House.

Yours ever | WC

In any case, let me hear from you by return of post – whether I am right or wrong.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Dating from the series of letters to Thomas Satchell beginning with [1121] on 2 September 1871.
2. As [1126] to Thomas Satchell of the following day makes clear, WC clearly means to refer to the 1842 Copyright Act (5 & 6 Victoria c.45) rather than the 1844 International Copyright Act (7 & 8 Victoria c.12).
3. Tindell must have confirmed WC’s reading of the law – see [1126] to Satchell of the following day.

[1126] TO THOMAS SACHELL, 21 SEPTEMBER 1871

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, p. 191 (as to Thomas W. Satchell); BGLL, II, p. 276–277.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square, | W. | 21st. September, 1871

Dear Sir,

Many thanks for your kind and prompt answer to my letter. As soon as I can draw out my notice, I will not fail to send it to you, to receive the benefit of your experience and correction.

The copyright act (Section 18) of 5 & 6 Victoria cap 45 as I (and my lawyer) interpret it, clearly vests the copyright in the author of the article – unless it is stipulated that the copyright is to belong to the proprietor of the periodical. Even in this case, the copyright belongs to the proprietor for publication in his periodical only. He has no right to issue a separate publication.

This is so well known among proprietors of periodicals that some of them append to the form of receipt which the author signs, a form of words declaring that he parts with his copyright. I have not got this Act by me – but the words, as I remember them, are clear. In the absence of stipulation to the contrary, the copyright of the article belongs to the author of the article.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins.
Thomas Satchell, Esq.

---

1. The Encyclopaedia Britannica (9th edn, 1877, VI, p. 359a) interpreted the law rather differently and suggested that under the 1842 Copyright Act, copyright in an article paid for and published in a periodical belongs to the proprietor for publication in that periodical only. Neither party might republish separately unless they reserved that right at the outset or they agreed later that they might do so. After twenty-eight years the author automatically received the right of separate publication.

[1127] TO LAURA SEYMOUR, 22 SEPTEMBER 1871

MS: Noel. Extract: Clareson, p. 111. Published: BGLL, II, p. 277.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 22nd Sept 1871

My dear Mrs Seymour

One line to thank you for your kind note, and to say how delighted I am to find that my young friend “Miss Finch” has produced such a strongly favourable impression on you.<sup>1</sup> I hope you will find the Story does not drop as it goes on. My great guns are still in reserve. Yes – she does. But that is by no means the end of it. I say no more!<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. The first weekly instalment of Poor Miss Finch appeared on 2 September 1871.

2. Presumably Laura Seymour had read the fourth part – chs 11–13 – nominally published on Saturday 23 September but in fact on sale a few days earlier. She had perhaps asked WC whether, later in the novel, Lucilla marries Oscar Dubourg (see the end of ch. 12), or, indeed, whether she regains her sight.

[1128] TO JOHN BONNER, 26 SEPTEMBER 1871

MS: Ross. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 277–278.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. London. 26th Sept 1871

My Dear Sir,

The copyrighting of Mr Daly’s Play<sup>1</sup> (according to the law of England) proves to be no easy matter. Here is an extract from my lawyer’s opinion: –

(1). “Your American friend cannot become possessed of copyright in his drama unless it be printed and published, or acted, in this country, before or simultaneously with, its production in America.

(2) An American cannot effectually sell his work to give copyright in this country unless also the above conditions are complied with.

(3) Your adding some matter of your own to the play would not I think be of any use. If you were to adapt or materially alter the Drama, and have it printed and published, or acted here, that would make a difference”.

=

As to the first section of the above opinion, it is clearly too late to put it to the test.

I propose endeavouring to obtain new advice as to the 2nd Section. Can the play be sold to me for a purely nominal ~~and~~ sum? and can I formally claim it as my property bought and paid for – taking care of course to give Mr Daly or his representatives notice privately in writing that I really assert no claim to control the representation of the piece here, or to share in any profits which it may produce?

As to the 3rd Section “Poor Miss Finch” and the rehearsals of “The Woman in White” have not allowed me five minutes spare time, in which to look it over. But I could, if Mr Daly wished apply to any English dramatist named by himself, with more time to spare than I possess – and ascertain if he saw his way to altering and publishing the piece. In this case, of course, I could not be responsible for the results.

In the mean time, the piece is carefully locked up here – and I will obtain the best opinion I can as to the possibility of formally selling it to me, with satisfactory results to the author. It may be as well, on this chance, for Mr Daly to authorise his representatives here to sell me the piece nominally, subject to the reservations already mentioned by me. If you and he have any further suggestions to make, rely on my doing all that I really can do to forward your views and his.

In great haste. Yours truly Wilkie Collins
To John Bonner Esqre.

---

1. See [1124] to William Tindell of 19 September 1871.

[1129] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 26 SEPTEMBER 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/37). Published: Coleman, p. 192; BGLL, II, pp. 278–279.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th Sept 1871

Dear Sirs,

I am very sorry that D<sup>r</sup> Lehmann has given you (quite needlessly) the trouble of forwarding the early weekly numbers of “Poor Miss Finch”.

I have always sent to him the Monthly Parts – and I was only waiting to send to him, and to the publisher in Leipzig, the First Monthly Part of your magazine, containing the first monthly instalment of “Poor Miss Finch”.<sup>1</sup>

I believe the weekly Parts to be quite useless for the purpose of foreign registering – as they contain no reservation of the right of translation. My French publishers register your monthly part only on this account. And in the case of “Man and Wife” D<sup>r</sup> Lehmann had the monthly parts only. He is (between ourselves) a very fidgetty [sic] man. If he writes to you again, pray only trouble yourselves to send the letter on at once to me.

Faithfully yours | WC

---

1. For the translation of the novel. Like a number of other literary weekly papers, including CD’s All The Year Round, Cassell’s Magazine appeared first in weekly numbers but was then reissued in monthly ones containing four or five weekly portions.

[1130] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 30 SEPTEMBER 1871

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/31). Published: BGLL, II, p. 279.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London September 30th 1871

My dear Sir,

Pray permit me to offer my best congratulations to you and to Mrs Sebastian Schlesinger on your marriage.<sup>1</sup> I received the cards which you were so good as to send to me, some days since.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Sebastian Schlesinger Esqre

---

1. WC was to meet Schlesinger and his young wife Berthe in Boston, later inscribing The Haunted Hotel (1878) to ‘Mr. & Mrs. Sebastian Schlesinger, in Remembrance of Much Kindness and of Many Happy Days’.

2. The marriage took place on 14 September at Cambridge, Massachusetts.

[1131] TO ELLIOTT & FRY, 7 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 279.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th Oct 1871

Dear Sirs,

I have not had a moment to spare since you were so good as to write to me last. In a week more, I hope to find time to give you the long deferred sitting.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Elliott & Fry

[1132] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 10 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/38a). Published: Coleman, p. 193; BGLL, II, p. 280.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th Oct: 1871

Dear Sirs,

I have safely received the cheque in payment of my friend's article "An Hour at Chislehurst".<sup>1</sup>

I shall see the writer of the article on Thursday, and I will then (with her permission) sign the receipt on her behalf. Without her permission I hardly like to sign away her copyright – even in a trifle.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
P.S. | I will take care of the cheque, until I receive the writer's instructions.
Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

---

1. Unsigned article in Cassell's Magazine, NS 4:92 (2 September 1871), pp. 11–14. The article describes an interview with the French Empress Eugénie, then in exile with her husband and son at Camden Place, Chislehurst, Kent, following the collapse of the Second Empire in 1870. The author is extremely sympathetic to the royalist cause and is referred to in the article as 'madame' and 'Lady —', but has not been satisfactorily identified.

[1133] TO GEORGE SMITH, 10 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 280.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th October 1871

My dear Smith,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £16. 13.4, being the royalty on a fresh issue of 2000 copies of "Antonina".<sup>1</sup>

I am sincerely glad to receive these pleasant tokens of the continued vitality of my books. I heard lately, in one or two quarters, of difficulty experienced in getting "The Woman In White" at the railway bookstalls – London terminus bookstalls principally.<sup>2</sup> This I mention, as I am, I hope, giving "The Woman In White" a new advertisement at The Olympic Theatre. We produced my own dramatic version last night – and really took the audience by storm. "Experts" in dramatic matters predict a solid success. I sincerely hope they may not prophesy in vain!

Believe me | truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George Smith Esq

---

1. Smith, Elder had issued single-volume editions of Antonina since 1865. The cheque was credited to WC's account on day the letter was sent (Courtts: WC).

2. Generally operated by W. H. Smith.

[1134] TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY TELEGRAPH, 11 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Unknown. Published: Daily Telegraph (12 October 1871), p. 3e, our copy text; BGLL, II, p. 281.

90, Gloucester-place, Portman-square, Oct. 11.
“THE WOMAN IN WHITE”

TO THE EDITOR OF “THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.”

Sir, – I have just read the article in your journal which reviews my dramatic version of “The Woman In White,”<sup>1</sup> with such generous appreciation of the merits of the play. While I feel gratefully sensible of what your critic has said of the author, may I own, at the same time, that I have read with regret the sentence which pronounces Mr. Vining to be “not Count Fosco”?

I have no wish to intrude on your valuable space with any critical theories of my own. I only ask you to let me remind the writer of the notice that the difficulties in the way of presenting this character on the stage are enormous. Knowing those difficulties as I do, it seems only due from me to Mr. Vining to say, that I carefully considered what I was trusting to him when I asked him to play “Fosco,” and that his representation of the part thoroughly satisfies me. – I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,

WILKIE COLLINS.

---

1. On 11 October 1871, p. 2e-f, the Daily Telegraph had published a lengthy review of The Woman in White at the Olympic from 9 October, including the comment: ‘Mr. George Vining is too good an actor to seriously injure Count Fosco but we want the soft voice and a certain colouring which Mr. Vining cannot give. He certainly looked the character thoroughly, but it was not Count Fosco.’ Generally on the production, see ‘Theatrical adaptations of The Woman in White’ in The Woman in White, ed. Matthew Sweet (Harmondsworth, Middlesex: Penguin Books, 1999), Appendix A, pp. 628–644. More generally on stage adaptations of WC’s fiction, see Barbara Brashear, ‘Wilkie Collins: From Novel to Play’ (Doctoral Dissertation, Case Western University, 1972).

[3285] TO THOMAS D. GALPIN, 11 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, pp. 9–10.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
11th October 1871

My dear sir,

I shall be very happy to see you here on Friday morning next – at 10, or at any later hour which may be more convenient to you.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Thos. D Galpin Esq

---

1. WC writes on a Wednesday, so the appointment is for Friday 13th. As referred to in [1138] 17 October 1871 to George Smith, Thomas D. Galpin, of the publishers Cassell, Petter & Galpin, wanted to negotiate for the publication of WC’s novels in penny parts. WC’s eventual answer was ‘no’ – see [1149] to Galpin, 30 October 1871.

[1135] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 12 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/38b). Published: Coleman, p. 182; BGLL, II, p. 281–282.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th October 1871

Dear Sirs,

The author of the article “An Hour at Chislehurst” requests me to say that she prefers to keep the copyright and right of republishing the article in her own hands. I am instructed to say add that she regrets not being able to receive the remuneration on the conditions annexed in the form of receipt.<sup>1</sup> Under these circumstances, I have of course no alternative – as the intermediary in this matter – but to re-enclose the cheque, after stating the writer’s decision as communicated to me.

Believe me Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin

---

1. WC is wary on the question of copyright in the case of periodical publication following his exchange with Thomas Satchell – see especially [1126] to him of 21 September.

[1136] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 12 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 282.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th October 1871

My dear Georgina,

Your kind wishes have been realised. The Dramatic Woman In White has achieved a great success.

I am heartily sorry to hear of Anne's trouble,<sup>2</sup> and I thank you for giving me the opportunity of contributing in a small way towards helping her. Will you kindly give her my little subscription with my best wishes for happier times to come?

With best love to Mamie,<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | my dear Georgina | Yours ever affly | Wilkie Collins

One line please – as “accidents” sometimes happen by pillar-post, which is my post – to say you have got this and its enclosure safely.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘Miss Hogarth | 81. Gloucester Terrace | Hyde Park | W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. Unidentified.

3. Pet name of Mary Dickens (1838–96), CD's elder daughter, who shared a house with Georgina Hogarth.

4. Presumably the letter was posted in a ‘pillar box’, not handed in at a Post Office. Although these ‘strong iron boxes’ on the street had been first seen in London in 1855, they were still not trusted. Miss Stanbury, in Trollope's He Knew He Was Right (1869), ‘had not the faintest belief that any letter put into one of them would ever reach its destination.’ (Chapter VIII).

[1137] TO CHARLES WARD, 15 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/67). Published: BGLL, II, p. 283.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Oct 15

My dear Ward,

Please pay the enclosed cheque for £10 to my account, entering it as “by Dr E. Lehmann.” It is the purchase-money for the right of translating into German my forthcoming Christmas Story.<sup>1</sup>

I hope you liked the Play the other night.<sup>2</sup> Vining was so ill that we were afraid he would not be able to act. So you saw him to great disadvantage. The theatre is now filled every night – chairs obliged to be put in the stall-gangways – money-returns already large.

Yours ever WC

I have arranged to have my weekly percentage paid to my account from the Theatre on every Monday in the week. Could you manage till things get into working order to look at my account on every Tuesday – and send me a line if there is no remittance?<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Lehmann's translation of ‘Miss or Mrs?’, Fräulein oder Frau?, appeared from the Leipzig house of Günter in 1872.

2. The Woman in White at the Olympic.

3. The payments arrived regularly and totalled £486-9s-9d over the play's run which ended on 24 February 1872. (Coutts: WC). WC was initially paid 10% of the box office receipts and then 5%; see [1142] to Tindell 19 October 1871. For an overview, see Paul Lewis The Woman in White at the Olympic Theatre, Wilkie Collins Society, August 2009.

[1138] TO GEORGE SMITH, 17 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Berg. Summary: B&C, II, p. 348. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 283–285.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17th October 1871

My dear Smith,

Many thanks for your letter. Time has passed and my informants are out of town. I am afraid it is impossible for me to supply Messrs Smith with the facts. If I hear any more complaints I will take care to investigate them at once.<sup>1</sup>

In the meantime, I have, a proposal to make to you, relating to my books.

At the end of last week, Mr Galpin (of the firm of Cassell, Petter, and Galpin), called on me, and expressed a wish to re-open the negotiation (broken off between us last year) for the publication of my novels in penny illustrated Parts – beginning with “The Woman In White”.

I told Mr Galpin, that it was not possible for me to renew the negotiations – without first consulting you, and considering the interests of your Firm.

To this Mr Galpin replied that he came to me, prepared to consider those interests. He reminded me that the issue of the penny weekly Parts would find the machinery of circulation ready, if published by his Firm – and he declared his conviction that it would address a new public, and would in no way interfere with the sale of the books, as now managed by your Firm. He referred, in support of this view, to the example of Messrs Chapman and Hall – who are now offering penny numbers of Dickens’s books (while selling them in four different editions at higher prices) and who has found no reason to regret the proceeding.

Under these circumstances, I agreed to place Mr Galpin’s proposal before you. It is briefly this:–

1. That his firm should be permitted to issue “The Woman In White” in penny weekly Parts – taking on themselves the whole risk and expense, and giving to me one clear half of the profits
2. That, previous to the presentation of the complete weekly issue of “The Woman In White” in book-form, his firm should confer with yours, should ascertain what your wishes were in the matter, and should (if you felt willing) place the Imprint of Smith Elder & Co on the title-page as well as the Imprint of their own Firm.
3. That, in the event of the weekly issue of “The Woman In White” succeeding, my other books should follow it – Cassell Petter & Galpin, dealing with you, where your copyrights are concerned (“No Name” and “Armada”) as they deal with me, in the case of my copyrights.

This is the proposal as I understand it. It is needless to say that I leave you entirely free to decide the question, and that it is distinctly understood between Mr Galpin and myself that I am only willing to entertain the proposal, at present – on the condition of its receiving a favourable reception from you. It is only due to the kindness and liberality with which you have met my views that I should give the first consideration to your convenience and to your wishes.<sup>2</sup>

If there is any point which I have failed to make clear, you have only to let me know – and I will communicate with Mr Galpin. He is, I think right in assuming that the penny issue could be launched with special success, by the special machinery at the disposal of his Firm – and that the public to which that issue would appeal is – mainly – a public which we do not at present address.

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George Smith Esqre

---

1. See [1133] to Smith of 10 October 1871 concerning the difficulties of obtaining copies of The Woman in White at the W. H. Smith railway bookstalls.

2. Smith’s reaction was decidedly negative – see [1149] to Thomas D. Galpin of 30 October 1871. Thus WC declined Cassell’s offer – see [1152] to Smith, 2 November 1871.

[1139] TO CATHERINE DICKENS, 18 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 104/48). Published: BGLL, II, p. 285.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th Oct. 1871

My dear Mrs Dickens

I have only this moment received your kind note – and I am sorry to say that it finds me with my Box given away for Thursday and for the remaining evenings of this week. But either Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday, in next week, I shall be delighted to place the box at your disposal – and I will wait before I answer any other application, to hear which of these three evenings will suit you best. One line, please, to tell me as soon as may be convenient to you. The Play is really a success, I am glad to say.<sup>1</sup> Trusting that the change of evening will not greatly inconvenience you, I remain

Dear Mrs Dickens | Ever Yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The Woman in White at the Olympic.

[1140] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 18 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Summary: B&C, II, p. 348. Published: Coleman, p. 195; BGLL, II, p. 285.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th Oct: 1871

My dear Fred,

Tell Payn with my love that I will write at once to Cassell's Magazine.<sup>1</sup>

My best thanks for another tin of those heavenly biscuits. Life (in spite of applications by every post for free admissions to the Olympic Theatre) now becomes once more endurable being associated with Boston Crackers.

Yours ever | WC

Quite right to put off your visit to the Theatre. The actors will certainly gain by practice. I am sending proof-book of "Poor Miss Finch" to Padrona.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The reference must be to James Payn, the novelist, but WC's letter has not been traced and the topic remains unidentified.

2. Presumably the proofs of forthcoming instalments of the novel in Cassell's Magazine for Nina Lehmann to read in advance of publication.

[1141] TO CHARLES WARD, 18 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /68). Published: BGLL, II, p. 286.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th Oct. 1871

My dear Ward,

I enclose a cheque for £47.10. – being my first week's percentage on the performances of The Woman In White – to be paid to my account.

Next week, the cheque will be made payable to Bearer – and will be paid to my account from the Theatre.

The returns for Monday and Tuesday in this week, beat the corresponding return for the first week – so all goes well thus far.<sup>1</sup>

Yours ever | WC

One line to say you have got the cheque

---

1. The second week's payment was indeed higher – £56-2s-9d paid in on 24 October (Coumts: WC).

[1142] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 19 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/82–83). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 286–287.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th Oct: 1871

Private

My dear Tindell

Mr Samuel Tinsley (of Moss Hall Estate, Finchley) is about to “establish a business for the publication of good novels at a cheap price as in America”, and writes to make me a very liberal proposal for the “right to publish “Poor Miss Finch” in one Volume for three years”.<sup>1</sup> He proposes to pay the whole of the money by a bill at two months after the day of publication – or by cash two months after publication.

I have written to Mr S Tinsley to thank him for his offer, and to say that I think it well worthy of consideration – adding that I cannot write more definitely at present, until a negotiation with other publishers (I am bound to give Cassell the first refusal) has been terminated one way or the other.<sup>2</sup> After that, I engage to send him a definite reply.

In this interval, can you discover for me, whether Mr Samuel Tinsley’s commercial position in starting his new business is such as to justify me in accepting his proposal – if Cassell’s leave me free to do so? He tells me he is a brother of Mr William Tinsley – but has no business-connection with him. You will of course consider this letter as strictly private between you and me. Mr W. Tinsley asked me, on the first night of The Woman in White to let him have “Poor Miss Finch” – I mention this, as showing the ~~importance~~ necessity of being cautious if you make any inquiries in that quarter as to Mr Samuel Tinsley. The one point to ascertain is (as you will see) simply whether my correspondent has money to start with in his new business.<sup>3</sup>

Yours ever | WC

Money flowing in at The Olympic. £123, in the theatre last Saturday night – and hundreds sent away from Pit and Gallery for want of room. <sup>4</sup>

P.S. Let me have a line, by return of post, to say that you have got this safely. WC

---

1. Poor Miss Finch had only just begun as a serial in Cassell’s Magazine. Tinsley had in fact offered £1,500 – see [1154] to Tindell of 6 November 1871.

2. In the event the novel was published not by Cassell but by Bentley, who issued the three-volume edition in February 1872 followed by a single-volume edition in 1873.

3. William Tinsley (as Tinsley Brothers) published only the three-volume edition of The Moonstone. The BL Catalogue reveals that Samuel Tinsley did in fact open up shop at 34 Southampton Street in 1872 and had published more than 80 books by 1880. None was by WC and quite a number were in the form of triple-decker novels. The negotiations with Samuel Tinsley continue through several letters, concluding with [1163] to Tindell of 16 November 1871.

4. The first Saturday performance of The Woman in White was on 14 October. WC’s share was £47-10s which represents 10%. If the play grossed less than £400 his share fell to 5%. See [1141] to Ward of 18 October 1871 and [1173] to him of 6 December 1871. For an overview, see Paul Lewis The Woman in White at the Olympic Theatre, Wilkie Collins Society, August 2009.

[1143] TO CHARLES READE, 20 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Noel. Extract: Clareson, pp. 110, 116 (dated 20 November). Summary: B&C, II, pp. 348–349. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 287–288.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th Oct: 1871

My dear Reade

Thank you for your kind note. The “business” promises famously. Receipts of the First Week £475...- which gives a good profit to those interested, at starting. This weeks returns, steadily larger every day than last weeks.

You have only, of course, to mention your name, and to go where you like, when you visit the theatre. If you can go on a Monday Tuesday or Wednesday – there would be sure to be a Private Box at your disposal. The later evenings in the week are (as your theatrical experience will tell you) the evenings when every thing is taken. Ask for Mr Ross – (who superintends the front of the house for Vining & for me) – and he will see that you are properly accommodated.

A new stock of Moselle is at this moment being put into the cellar. Come and draw a cork between 3 & 4, as soon as you get to town – or at 7.30, when there is Dinner.

The two Carolines send you their love, and join in asking you not to forget No 90.<sup>1</sup> I am all in arrear with “Poor Miss F.” – in consequence of these dramatic doings. You don’t say a word about your play.<sup>2</sup> Another reason for tasting the Moselle. I want to hear about it.

Ever yours | WC

Your Italian is the purest Tuscan. Let us correspond for the future in that language.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. That is, Caroline Graves and her daughter Carrie want Reade to visit them at 90 Gloucester Place.

2. Perhaps Shily Shaly, a dramatic version of Anthony Trollope’s Ralph the Heir, which opened on 1 April the following year at the Gaiety Theatre.

3. They did not, of course.

[1144] TO GEORGE SMITH, 23 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Berg. Published: B&C, II, p. 349.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 23rd Oct: 1871

Private<sup>1</sup>

My dear Smith,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £40 – for a new issue of 4000 copies of “The Woman In White” now about to be put to press.

Let me also say that I am much obliged to you for the advice which you kindly gave me as to the projected editions in parts, and for the friendly manner in which you leave the decision in my hands. I must take a day or two to consider; [del] but my present feeling is – reluctance to go with the speculation at all [del] unless I see a fair /prospect/ of your benefitting by it [del] too.

I ought to say that I stipulated with Messrs Cassell, when they first negotiated with me for the issue in parts, to have the sole right of deciding whether The Woman In White should be followed by the other books.

[del] The objection on their side to this, was – that they proposed to spend a large sum of money/, at the outset,/ in advertising and canvassing, with a view to a return on the other books as well as “The Woman In White”. They suggested a margin of profit to be agreed to on both sides as representing success – and on this, if I remember rightly, the negotiation broke down.

My own impression is that a very few years more will see a revolution in the publishing trade for which most of the publishers are unprepared – and that I shall do wisely to leave my interests entirely in your hands, as things are.<sup>2</sup> I don’t believe in the gigantic monopolies, which cripple ~~trade~~ a free trade, lasting much longer. The Mudie [del] monopoly and the W.H. Smith monopoly are anomalies in a commercial country.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Smith Eqr

P.S. | Of course you shall hear how I finally decide.<sup>3</sup> I am a good deal pressed just now with other proposals for the book-issue of “Poor Miss Finch”<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Written above the centred Gothic printed address.

2. See [1149] to Thomas D. Galpin, 30 October 1871, for WC’s final rejection of the proposal from Cassell’s, who specialized in selling number books through door-to-door canvassing (see Simon Nowell-Smith, The House of Cassell 1848–1958 (1958), chs. 5–6).

3. See [1152] to Smith of 2 November 1871.

4. See, e.g., [1147] to William F. Tindell of 26 October 1871.

[1145] TO CHARLES WARD, 23 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 3151 /69). Published: BGLL, II, p. 288.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 23rd Oct:

My dear Ward,

Enclosed cheque for £40. Royalty on a new 4000 Edition of The Woman In White.<sup>1</sup> Please pay to my account – and acknowledge receipt.

I hope you can come & dine (C. wrote to you yesterday)<sup>2</sup> tomorrow or Wednesday – at 7. My share in this last week's receipts at Olympic £56 – increase of £9 over first week.<sup>3</sup> Look before you come and dine to see if it has been paid in.

Yours in haste | WC

---

1. The two shilling 'yellowback' edition from Smith, Elder, who held the copyright from 1865 to 1875.

2. That is, Caroline Graves.

3. In fact for £56-2s-9d, which is £8-12s-9d more than the first week (Coutts: WC).

[1146] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 25 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/84). Published: BGLL, II, p. 289.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th Oct: 1871

My dear Tindell,

Here is another mess with "Man & Wife". I am afraid the thief, this time, knows how to evade the law. The question is, whether my lawyers had better not protest, in my name, against so much of the play as is manifestly stolen from the novel – reserving to themselves the right of instituting proceedings. If we don't do something – when the next robbery is committed, the Britannia case will be cited against us.<sup>1</sup>

As to the other matter of the inquiry, it does press – for this reason. That I cannot expect a man who makes me a remarkably liberal offer to wait indefinitely for his reply.<sup>2</sup>

I hope your arm is better.<sup>3</sup>

Yours ever | WC

The extract enclosed is from The Weekly Dispatch.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Referring to Cast Aside by Colin Henry Hazlewood, the author of more than a hundred plays, which opened at the Britannia on 4 October 1871 (Nicoll, II, p. 414).

2. Referring to Samuel Tinsley – see [1142] to Tindell of 19 October 1871.

3. Referring to a serious injury to Tindell's arm – see [1124] to him of 19 September 1871.

4. The extract is not found at Glasgow, but in its 'Theatricals' column, the Weekly Dispatch (22 October 1871, p. 10b) carried a brief notice of a production at the Britannia Theatre. The notice begins:

"Cast Aside; or, Loving not Wisely but too Well," is an example of what Mr. Wilkie Collins complains of in his manifesto about the "Woman in White." It is certainly a hardship for a novelist to find his work maimed and mutilated in a stage version by an inferior dramatist, and the hardship is all the greater when the original author is a dramatist himself. In the present case Mr. Hazlewood has constructed a drama from Mr. Collins's novel, "Man and Wife," recently published. The names are changed, and various alterations made in the transfer of the story to the stage, but in motive and tendency the reproduction is faithful enough.

[1147] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 26 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/85). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 289–290.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th Oct: 1871

Private

My dear Tindell,

As I supposed, Mr Samuel Tinsley is not willing to wait indefinitely for his answer.<sup>1</sup> He writes me a very polite letter to say that he wishes to begin with me, and that he will wait a little while if I can tell him that there is any reasonable chance of his offer being accepted.<sup>2</sup>

The question, under these circumstances, is whether I can keep him waiting much longer – without wearing out his patience.

Yours ever | WC

I will call in Essex Street tomorrow (Friday 27th) at 5 4 o'Clock. I am due in St. John's Wood at six. If this appointment will not suit you, telegraph to me what earlier hour will do. I am writing to Cassell & Co about the sale of "Poor Miss F." – and I want to show you the letter before I send it.<sup>3</sup> There is no time to be lost.

---

1. See [1142] to Tindell of 19 October 1871.
2. Tinsley appears to have begun his venture in 1872 with Mary Rosa Stuart Kettle's The Mistress of Langdale Hall: A Romance of the West Riding, a new work in a single volume also containing 'an essay by Samuel Tinsley on the price of new books' (BL Catalogue).
3. See [1149] to Cassell, Petter & Galpin of 30 October 1871.

[1148] TO T. ALLSTON BROWN,<sup>1</sup> 29 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, II, p. 290.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Sunday 29th October 1871

Dear Sir,

I was sorry to miss you when you did me the favour of calling here.

I will call in Hart Street tomorrow afternoon between two and three on the chance of seeing you. Pray don't think of staying at home if you have any other engagements. If I don't find you, I will leave a line proposing an appointment here on Tuesday.

Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins

Colonel T. Allston Brown

---

1. Thomas Allston Brown (1836–1918), known as Colonel Brown, American theatrical agent now on a visit to Britain. Amongst his clients was the dramatist Dion Boucicault. See Gerald Bordman, The Oxford Companion to American Theatre, 2nd edn (New York: Oxford University Press, 1992), p. 108.

[1149] TO THOMAS D. GALPIN, 30 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/40). Published: Coleman, p. 198; BGLL, II, p. 291.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 30th October 1871

My dear Sir,

Mr George Smith's answer is not favourable to the proposal which you were so good as to renew.<sup>1</sup> He is of opinion that a new publication of my books at this time would make some difference in the sale of the present editions – and would thus interfere with their value as marketable commodities, just when that value shows steady sign of increasing. This is Mr Smith's objection, briefly stated.

On my side, I can only add that I do not feel justified in embarking in the new speculation – though Mr Smith leaves me perfectly free to do so – without the concurrence of the publisher to whom I am indebted for undertaking the sale of my cheap editions, and doing his best for my interests. I can only therefore thank you again for your proposal, and regret that I cannot avail myself of it.

I write by this post, to your Firm, on the subject of the republication of "Poor Miss Finch".<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Thomas D. Galpin Esqre

---

1. A renewed proposal for a cheap periodical edition of WC's novels – see [1138] to George Smith of 17 October.
2. See the following letter [1150] of the same date to Cassell's.

[1150] TO CASSELL, PETTER, & GALPIN, 30 OCTOBER 1871

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 30th October 1871

Private

Dear Sirs,

Our agreement pledges me to offer you the first refusal of the republication of “Poor Miss Finch” in book-form – at a price to be named by myself.

I am pressed by so many proposals for this republication that it becomes a matter of necessity to settle this question at once – nearly two-thirds of the book being now in your printers’ hands.

I propose to sell the right of republication of “Poor Miss Finch” for three years – keeping the copyright in my own hands. The right sold is to include publication in Circulating Library form (3 vols), and the right of reprinting afterwards in one volume editions – such editions not to be sold to the public at a lower price than five shillings. Editions below five shillings, or editions issued in periodical parts, I reserve as a portion of the copyright of the book, to revert to me at the expiration of the three years. In the event of no new arrangement as to these last editions being entered into between us, I should wish to have the option of purchasing the stereo-plates and illustrations (if any) of the one volume edition at five shillings, at a valuation.

The price I ask for the book, sold for three years, under these conditions, is Fifteen Hundred Pounds (£1,500) – payable, one third in cash and the other two thirds in bills at three months and six months.

I must beg you will kindly let me have your answer to this proposal, at, or before, twelve o’Clock (noon) on Thursday next, the 2nd November.<sup>1</sup>

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Cassell, Petter & Galpin.

---

1. As WC presumably anticipated, the response to this high-handed ultimatum was in the negative. Poor Miss Finch appeared in three volumes from the house of Bentley, with WC receiving £750 – see [1167] to George Bentley of 24 November 1871.

[3005] TO THE AMERICAN COMMITTEE, CHICAGO RELIEF FUND, 31 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Hanes.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C2, p. 63.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 31st October 1871

Gentlemen,

I beg to enclose a cheque for Five pounds, offered to your Fund, as a trifling expression of my sympathy with the sufferers by the Fire of Chicago,<sup>2</sup> and of my sincere admiration of the heroic spirit with which your countrymen have met the disaster that has fallen on them.<sup>3</sup>

I remain, Gentlemen, | Your obedient servant, | Wilkie Collins
To | The Committee of the American | Co Chicago Relief Fund<sup>4</sup>

---

1. A torn half sheet of notepaper tipped on to a piece of card.

2. The Great Fire burned from the evening of Sunday, 8 October to the early hours of Tuesday, 10 October 1871, devastating much of the city, and leaving 300 dead and 90,000 homeless. News of the fire was first reported in the Times in a brief cabled article entitled ‘Awful Fire at Chicago’, sent on the Monday and appearing on Tuesday, October 10, p. 3a. A full report, written on October 10 and sent by ship, appeared on 25 October, p. 10a-c. WC’s donation was debited to ‘Chicago Relief Fd’ on 3 November (Coumts: WC).

3. Compare these sentiments with WC’s rather unsympathetic account of Chicago and its rebuilding during his later visit to the city; see [1409] to Jane Bigelow, 17 January 1874.

4. The Times report of October 10 was followed by details of the relief fund being raised jointly by the Lord Mayor of London from the Mansion House and ‘The American Committee Chicago Relief Fund’ based at 22, Old Broad Street. WC’s contribution was clearly sent to the latter address; the fact the cheque was debited to his bank account on 3 November confirms that it was indeed directed to a local address (Coumts: WC).

[1151] TO JOHN BONNER, 31 OCTOBER 1871

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 292–293.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London

Tuesday October 31st 1871

My dear Sir,

I have made more inquiries and taken other opinions on the subject of copyrighting Mr Daly's play – since I wrote.<sup>1</sup> The result is still the same – i.e. – that, under the English law, the performance in New York, before the piece reached England, is fatal to establishing a copyright in it here. If Mr Daly had published his play in Canada, as the authoress of "Queechey" published her book in Canada<sup>2</sup> (simultaneously with the American publication, a Stage-performance) he might have claimed copyright in it here, under the last decision of our Courts. My idea of formally purchasing the piece is declared to be useless. Between our barbarous English law, and your lamentable refusal to treat for international copyright, the result is this – that Mr Daly has, legally-speaking, and so far as England is concerned, nothing to sell.

But this is no reason why the play should not be offered for performance in London. Our respectable managers, like your respectable publishers, have an understanding among themselves not to cut each others' throats. The theatres which would steal the piece if it had a success would, under no circumstances, be able to pay the author liberally, and would advertise him so as to increase the popularity of the authorised performance by the mere act of pirating his work. The money-gain here is from the respectably-conducted theatres. If Mr Daly will authorise me to let his play be seen by others, I will offer it to the London Managers whom I would myself trust, and, if it is accepted, I will look after Mr Daly's interests, as I would look after my own. I have not even yet read the play myself. The immense success of my dramatic "Woman in White" has inundated me with such a flood of letters, that my spare time is passed in dictating answers. We could fill the Theatre twice over. All London is talking about it – and this piece bids fair to run a neck-and-neck race with the novel. The manager is collecting extracts from the newspaper criticisms in a little book which I will send to you.<sup>3</sup>

You will find some amusing diversities of opinion. Let me have Mr Daly's answer by return mail, and believe me

Yours truly Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [1128] to Bonner of 26 September 1871.

2. Susan Bogert Warner (1819–85), best-selling American novelist. Queechey was first published in New York in 1852.

3. Reviews of the London production were published in sixteen pages in 1871 as Specimens of Criticism Extracted from Notices of "The Woman in White" in the Press (Gasson, p. 160). This was reprinted by The Wilkie Collins Society, February 2010.

[1152] TO GEORGE SMITH, 2 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 293.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd November 1871

My dear Smith,

One line more to say that I have declined Messrs Cassell's proposal for a new edition of my books in Weekly Parts.<sup>1</sup>

Yours vy truly | Wilkie Collins

George Smith Esq

---

1. See [1149] to Thomas Galpin of 30 October 1871.

[1153] TO CHARLES WARD, 2 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/70). Published: BGLL, II, p. 294.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd Novr

Private

My dear Ward,

I cannot get at the names of Mr T's bankers.<sup>1</sup> Cassell & Co decline to come up to my price.<sup>2</sup> I am free to negotiate with the man – I must write to him this week – and what to do, I don't know.

I enclose a cheque for £5... towards relieving the starving Persians. Request to Messrs Coutts to pay it in on the opposite leaf. A line to say you have got the cheque safely. The wholesale starvation of the helpless people is the most horrible thing that has happened for many a long day.<sup>3</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. 'Mr T' must be Samuel Tinsley – see [1154] to William Tindell of 6 November 1871.

2. See [1150] to Cassell, Petter & Galpin of 30 October 1871.

3. The Persian famine of 1870–71 seems to have led to the deaths of around two million people and evoked widespread sympathy and donations in Europe. WC's cheque was debited on 3 November to 'Persian Famine Relief Fd' (Coutts: WC).

[3094] TO CHARLES A. CALVERT,<sup>1</sup> 3 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Rylands (Acc. 1999/014, Box 8, p. 13). Published: A&C4, p. 18.

90, Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W. | London | 3rd November 1871

Dear sir,

I am not, at present, free to negotiate for the production of the Dramatic "Woman In White" at the Prince's Theatre.<sup>2</sup>

I can only beg you to accept my thanks for the proposal your letter contains.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

C. A. Calvert Esqre

---

1. See [0508] to him of 17 December 1862, refusing to allow him to produce The Red Vial or No Name.

2. The Woman in White had opened at the Olympic Theatre on 9 October 1871.

[1154] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 6 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/86). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 294–295.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 6th Nov<sup>r</sup>

Private

My dear Tindell,

I have had Mr S. Tinsley with me to-day. He is exceedingly nervous and does not look one straight in the face – but as I have known many rogues who could do that, I attach little importance to it.

I asked him to give me some references. He has referred me to private friends whose names are copied on the next leaf. His bankers he did not wish to trouble about it. (I have taken private measures to have inquiries made at his bankers). In the mean time, can you, and will you, verify one of the references sent with this – stating that you are requested to do so by me, because I have no time to do it in myself. The first name on the list, is the name of a man, whose letter Mr Tinsley showed to me, announcing that he (the friend) had been to the bankers, and had found everything satisfactory. This seems to be the right man to apply to. Name. T. Dyson Smith.

Of course I needed not trouble you, if it was enough to write to the reference. But it seems to me to be important that some one who understands the thing should see the reference. I don't understand it – and I am so busy I am at my wits' end to know which way to turn next.

The second reference is to a lady who has known him since [June].

The third reference is to his landlord.

I cannot feel at all sure that he really has capital. – He is very sanguine as to results – and he may be speculating on paying me out of the proceeds of the book. The sum at stake is fifteen hundred pounds. Has he got it? If Mr Dyson Smith declines to answer for the money, and if the private inquiry at the Bank comes to nothing, I must decline to go on, without a security. Don't you think so?

Yours ever | W. C.

Let me have a speedy line to say if you can help me. The bother of having this on my mind as well as the book is indescribable.<sup>1</sup> I am to write definitely to Mr Samuel Tinsley in the course of the week.

I hope you are better for the outing

Mr Samuel Tinsley | Moss Hall Estate | Finchley. N.

=

References. (Try the First)

1. T Dyson Smith Esqre | 18 & 19 Montague Street | Russell Square | W.C.<sup>2</sup>
2. Mrs Halliday | Belmont Park | Lee. S.E.
3. St John Pattinson Esqre | 7 Essex Road. N.

---

1. Poor Miss Finch.

2. WC draws a wavy line here across the page.

[1155] TO T. ALLSTON BROWN, 6 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, II, p. 295.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 6th November 1871

My dear Sir,

A line to remind you that the Play begins punctually at a quarter to Eight o'Clock on Wednesday evening next. I have written to reserve you good places. If you wish to make any change in your positions you have only to ask for Mr Ross and to mention my name.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins

Colonel Allston Brown

---

1. See [1143] to Charles Reade of 20 October 1871.

[1156] TO GEORGE SMITH, 7 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Berg. Summary: B&C, II, p. 350. Published: BGLL, II, p. 296.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th November 1871

My dear Smith,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £33.6.8 – being Royalty on a new issue of 2000 copies of “Hide and Seek” and 2000 copies of “The Dead Secret.”<sup>1</sup>

I am delighted to hear that you had a pleasant evening at the Olympic and that you think so well of the Play.<sup>2</sup> “Man and Wife” is to come out next (on the conclusion of the “run” of “Caste”) at The Prince of Wales's Theatre – probably next spring.<sup>3</sup>

It is very pleasant to find the books doing better. How the people get at them, in the chaos of rubbish which I see on the Railway Book Stalls is a mystery to me. I suppose “Natural Selection” has something to do with it.<sup>4</sup>

Vy Truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George Smith Esq.

---

1. £33-6s-8d 'Of Smith Elder & Co' was credited to his account that day (Coutts: WC).
2. The Woman in White at the Olympic Theatre.
3. Caste is the 1867 play by T. W. Robertson (1829–71), who had died in February. The Bancrofts' revival of the play at the Prince of Wales's Theatre was immensely popular and continued its run until early August 1872. In the event Man and Wife did not open at the theatre until 22 February 1873.
4. A rare reference in WC's writings to Charles Darwin's concept of evolutionary development – the full title of Darwin's famous treatise of 1859 was On the Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection, or The Preservation of Favoured Races in the Struggle for Life. His The Descent of Man was published in 1871.

[1157] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 8 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/41). Published: Coleman, p. 199; BGLL, II, p. 296.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 8th November 1871

Dear Sirs,

I yesterday sent to the printers "copy" completing the second "third" of the manuscript of "Poor Miss Finch".

When you remit the second "third" of the purchase-money, you will oblige me by paying it, as before, to my account with Messrs Coutts & Co, Strand.<sup>1</sup>

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Cassell Petter & Galpin.

---

1. A second payment of £200, credited to his account on 10 November (Coutts: WC).

[1158] TO ROBERT R. DAVEY,<sup>1</sup> 8 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 297.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 8th November 1871

Dear Sir,

I have mislaid Signor Biale's letter – and I therefore take advantage of your kindness in proposing to forward my answer (enclosed).<sup>2</sup>

Pray accept my thanks, and believe me

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Robert R Davey Esq

---

1. Unidentified, but perhaps acting on behalf of an Italian translator or agent.
2. WC's letter has not been traced and Biale remains unidentified.

[1159] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 8 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/87). Published: BGLL, II, p. 297.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | 8th Nov 1871

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks for your prompt call on the referee.

I have other information which I will tell you about when we meet. The result you will see in the enclosed letter. If you approve of it – I have got the rough draft of the Machiavellian composition – please send it at once by a trusty hand to the post.<sup>1</sup> The sooner he gets it, the sooner, I shall be free to communicate with other people. Let me have one line to say that it is all right.

If he attempts to see me again, I propose referring him to you professionally. Say if you also approve this. I am very glad to hear that the country air has done its duty at last.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. The letter – clearly to Samuel Tinsley – has not been traced.

[1160] TO CHARLES HAUSSOULLIER,<sup>1</sup> 9 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), associated memorandum and envelope in private hands.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 297–298.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London November 9th 1871

Sir,

For permission to translate into French my story called “The Black Cottage”,<sup>3</sup> you must apply, if you please, to my French publishers, Messrs Hachette & Cie, Paris.

In applying to Messrs Hachette, I request you to give them the enclosed memorandum – which simply reminds them of the circumstances under which “The Black Cottage” was sold by me for French translation many years since.

I observe that your letter contains no proposal to remunerate the proprietor of the story for the right of translating it.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Monsieur Ch: Haussoullier

Memorandum for Messrs Hachette.

=

“The Black Cottage.”

A short story, published in England, with other stories, in a book called “After Dark”.<sup>4</sup>

~~Sold by~~ | “After Dark” was sold by me, for translation into French, many years since, to Monsieur Ch: Lahure.<sup>5</sup>

Wilkie Collins

---

1. French translator, of, for example, Charles C. Perkins, Italian Sculptors (London, 1868), as Les sculpteurs Italiens (Paris, 1869).

2. Envelope signed and directed to ‘Messrs Hachette & Cie | Paris’, no stamp or postmark, with an embossed floral pattern on the flap.

3. Originally published in Harper’s New Monthly Magazine in February 1857 and reprinted in The Queen of Hearts (1859).

4. WC’s error – ‘The Black Cottage’ was in fact included not in After Dark (1856) but as the first story in The Queen of Hearts (1859) – see Gasson, p. 128.

5. Charles Lahure, partner in the Paris publishing firm of Hachette – see [0264] to him of 4 September 1857, and his contract with WC, in Parrish (Box 5/12). [0317] to Charles Ward of 20/27 October 1859 records the sending of a copy of Queen of Hearts to Lahure in Paris for translation by Émile Forgues. According to the BNF Catalogue, After Dark was published by Lassalle in 1861 as Une nuit étrange, while The Queen of Hearts appeared as Une poignée de romans (translated by Forgues) from Hetzel in two parts in 1864. The second series includes, on pp. 285–346, ‘Le Phare’, which is the only known published version of The Lighthouse.

[1161] TO ANNE BENSON PROCTER, 12 NOVEMBER 1871<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/7). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 298–299.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th November

My dear Mrs Procter,

I invoke blessings on your head! and lay thanks at your feet. The adorable pie shall be my dinner today – and I know whose health I shall drink after it.

Miss Finch? Yes – of course. Katie has got it at this moment. But I am to have it back again on Thursday evening – and, on Friday, if [Thoms] is coming this way, he shall have it – with whatever additional pages may be printed by that time.<sup>2</sup>

With my best thanks, | Ever yours | WC

---

1. Between [0564] from Rome of 16 December 1863 and this, no letter from WC to Anne Procter appears to have survived. However, her letter of 9 July 1866, inviting him to stay with the Procters at Malvern Hills (also found in Parrish), suggests that the correspondence did continue in the interim.

2. Presumably referring to the page proofs of the serial version of Poor Miss Finch in Cassell's Magazine, which a number of WC's friends seem to have been anxious to read in advance of the official publication. 'Katie' must be WC's sister-in-law, while 'Thoms' is perhaps a servant of the Procters.

[1162] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 13 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/88). Published: BGLL, II, p. 299.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Monday evening Nov<sup>r</sup> 13

Private

Mr dear Tindell,

I have informed Samuel by letter that you will see him between 3 and 4 to-morrow.<sup>1</sup>

"Security" must satisfy us that he has money, and that he will not run away – that, I take it, is the legal aspect of "Security"?

In case it is Dyson Smith,<sup>2</sup> I enclose a letter which I have received from him – for your private eye. Bring it with you when you come to the Theatre tomorrow,<sup>3</sup> I would'nt lose it for the world. It is worth at least £50 to me.

Yours ever | W. C.

---

1. See [1142] to Tindell of 19 October 1871.

2. Tinsley's first referee – see [1154] to Tindell of 6 November 1871.

3. Probably to the Olympic to see The Woman in White.

[1163] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 16 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/89). Published: BGLL, II, p. 300.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1871

Private

My dear Tindell,

I determined to decline, the moment I had read Mr T's new proposal at the Theatre the other night.<sup>1</sup>

Will you write to him (I want to have no more to do with him here) and say: –

1 That I thank him for his renewed proposal made through you.

2. That I persist in maintaining my refusal already notified to sell him the book, because his new proposal fails to offer me the material guarantee for which I stipulated. I will not accept the slightest commercial risk or commercial responsibility attaching to the publication of "Poor Miss Finch". I must accept both – and, in the event of failure, I must be the loser – if I consent to entertain Mr T's renewed proposal. I therefore again decline – and, this time, I positively close the negotiation.

Put it in this polite way. I like to be polite with that sort of man – it keeps him at his proper distance.

Will you give the enclosed admissions to the Pit for tomorrow night to the lower rank of your clerks?<sup>2</sup> As to the higher rank, if they would like to see the Play – let them fix any evening next week (except Saturday), and they shall have Box Duplicate admissions.

Yours ever | WC

I still hope you will come today. Dry champagne is good for your arm.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Referring to Samuel Tinsley.
2. Presumably the cheapest tickets for The Woman in White at the Olympic Theatre.
3. Referring to the injury done to Tindell's arm in an accident – see [1124] to Tindell of 19 September 1871.

[1164] TO CHARLES READE, 19 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Noel. Extract: Clareson, pp. 115–16. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 300–301.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th Novr 1871

My dear Reade

I ought to have thanked you long ago for so kindly sending me these extracts. They are most interesting and I shall certainly use them in “Poor Miss F”. The fact I knew – but of the manner in which the touch felt the difference in colours I was quite ignorant.<sup>1</sup> Many thanks again.

I send this to Albert Terrace. Are you in town? If not, let me know when you come back

Ever yours | WC

Have you arranged for trying Griffith Gaunt in America? If not, I know an agent here for a short time who is recommended to me by Booth (the lawyer)<sup>2</sup> and who is therefore, I have every reason to believe, a man to be trusted. You have only to tell me – and he shall be presented to you. I cannot employ him being already engaged to Mr Bonner.<sup>3</sup> Perhaps he has been to you already? His name is T. Allston Brown.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. In Poor Miss Finch the blind Lucilla distinguished her (blue) lover from his identical twin by her sense of touch, which produces a ‘tingle’ in the case of her true love.

2. See [0738] to Booth of 15 April 1867.

3. See [1056] to Bonner of 21 January 1871.

4. See [1197] to Brown of 3 February 1872.

[1165] TO E. M. WARD, 22 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 200; BGLL, II, p. 301.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 22nd Novr 1871

My dear Ned,

I am so hard at work that I cannot get to see you. So I must ask my question in this way.

Outrim (the engraver)<sup>1</sup> writes me to say he is starving, and encloses a form of application to the Artists’ General Benevolent Fund. He asks you to back it and sign the recommendation and he wants me to do the same. Will you do this? and if yes – will it do for me to follow you, seeing that I am a literary man – not a painter? I have an idea that there is a rule requiring recommendations to proceed from Members of the Academy or of other artist societies.<sup>2</sup>

Let me have a line of reply. I don’t know anything about it, myself – except that “O” is impecunious and that I once lent him £5 – so I have no choice but to trouble you.

I hope you are all well and flourishing. I am keeping pretty well by dint of being too busy to fall ill. With best love at home

Ever yours Wilkie Collins

Would you like to see The Woman In White at The Olympic? Choose any evening but Saturday – and stalls or Private Box – which you please.

---

1. John Outrim (or Outram), mid-Victorian line engraver (Ian Mackenzie, British Prints (Woodbridge: Antique Collectors’ Club, 1987), p. 237), who had engraved a number of WmC’s paintings, including ‘Fisher Children’ for the Literary Souvenir (1834), facing p. 179.

2. A payment of £5 to the Mark Lemon Fund was made on 23 November (Coutts: WC).

[1166] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 23 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 302.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 23rd November 1871

Dear Sirs,

I write a line to inform you of the date of publication of my Christmas Story in London.<sup>1</sup>

The nominal date placed on the Title Page is to be December 25th. The actual date of publication will be the 13th of December.

Will you be so kind as to follow these dates, in printing and publishing? and to let me have a line to say that you have received this letter?

Believe me Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. 'Miss or Mrs?' in the Graphic.

[1167] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 24 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 270 (dated 29 November, p. 332 n. 14). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 302–303.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 24th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1871

My dear Sir,

I heartily share your wish that I should renew my relations with the publishing house which first introduced me to the public as a novelist. And I have great pleasure in proving my sincerity by at once accepting your proposal, as notified to me in your letter of today's date. I think it a perfectly fair proposal – it entirely meets my views, and I hope we shall both have reason to congratulate ourselves as thus uniting our interests in the publication of "Poor Miss Finch."<sup>1</sup>

I will at once communicate with my solicitor, and furnish you with a draft of the agreement which I usually employ in these cases. The first volume of printed copy will be at your service whenever you wish to have it. I may as well add (while I think of it) that I shall ask you to let me have proofs in Duplicate – as I have to send book-proofs to Tauchnitz for his edition.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me My dear Sir | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – I have written to Mr Forster.<sup>3</sup> It is possible that your father's letters are already destroyed. After you left this house, I called to mind that Dickens had told me, some time before his death, that he had burnt a great sheaf of letters.<sup>4</sup> You shall hear of course, the moment I receive Mr Forster's reply.<sup>5</sup>

To | George Bentley Esqre

---

1. Bentley had written to WC 'offering seven hundred & fifty pounds for the first edition of Two thousand copies of "Poor Miss Finch"' (BL Letter Book, Add. 46643, f. 180r.). The book appeared in three volumes on 26 January 1872.

2. Poor Miss Finch was published in a Tauchnitz edition as vols 1200–1201 in 1872.

3. John Forster's Life of Dickens was published in three volumes in 1872–74. 'George Bentley ... felt that Forster's Life would misrepresent the quarrel between his father, Richard Bentley, and CD in 1837–38. Collins unsuccessfully interceded with Forster to destroy the correspondence and omit it from his biography' (Gasson, p. 62). See also the accounts in Peters, p. 348, and Davis, p. 270.

4. CD burnt all his accumulated letters in a fire at Gad's Hill Place on 3 September 1860, and subsequently burned all personal correspondence received. See Paul Lewis, 'Burning: The Evidence', Dickensian, 100:3 (Winter 2004), pp. 197–208.

5. See [1170] to Bentley of 30 November 1871.

[1168] TO E. M. WARD, 24 NOVEMBER 1871<sup>1</sup>

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 201; BGLL, II, p. 303.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 24th Nov<sup>r</sup>

Mr dear Ned,

Here is Outrim's Petition. I have left you space to write your recommendation above mine.

By a later post you shall have the Tickets for Tuesday next, with the greatest pleasure.

In a tearing hurry, | Ever yours WC

P.S. I suppose you will return the Application to Outtrim? Or would it be better to send it to The Artists' Fund straight? and write a line to tell him you have done it. His address is at the top.

Outtrim's address is 47. Carlton Road | Kentish Town | N.W.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Dating follows from [1165] to Ward of 22 November 1871.

2. As WC indicates, this is written at the top of the letter above and to the right of the printed address, framed by a jagged line.

[1169] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 27 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/90). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 303–304.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Monday 27th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1871

My dear Tindell

Mr W. Tinsley's proposal is declined with thanks.<sup>1</sup> I have a much better one from Mr George Bentley which I have accepted.<sup>2</sup>

Will you draw out the agreement and let me have it as soon as possible?

Here are the points: –

Mr G. Bentley buys an edition of Two Thousand copies (2000) of "Poor Miss Finch" to be published in 3 volumes.

Copyright, and right of authorising foreign translations and reprints belong to the author.

The book is to be published some time in January next.

Mr G. Bentley pays the author seven hundred and fifty pounds for the edition – £250 on the day of publication, and £500 one month after publication.

Subsequent 3 volume Editions – of any number of copies agreed on – to be purchased of the author at the same rate, proportionally calculated.

This appears to me to be all that is necessary. If more is wanted, let me know at once. They are waiting to begin to print until the agreement is ready.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. A proposal to publish Poor Miss Finch – WC refers to William Tinsley in this way to avoid confusion with Samuel Tinsley whom he has also just refused. William Tinsley first expressed an interest in publishing the book on 9 October 1871, at the first night of The Woman in White at the Olympic Theatre – see [1142] to Tindell of 19 October 1871.

2. See [1167] to George Bentley of 24 November 1871.

[1170] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 30 NOVEMBER 1871

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 270. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 304–305.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 30th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1871

Private

My dear Sir,

I enclose the draft of our agreement,<sup>1</sup> and copies of the correspondence between Mr Forster and myself. Mr Forster's answer to my letter makes it, I am sorry to say, impossible for me to represent your views any farther. There is some soreness in his mind on this subject which I don't in the least understand. He has not answered my second letter.<sup>2</sup>

Kindly let me have the correspondence back at you convenience – taking copies of it first, for your own use, if you think fit. I can only now – as I am sure you will see – leave you to act on Mr Forster's proposal or not, as you may feel inclined. I have done my best – and I regret that I have not succeeded.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

If you approve of the agreement you have only to send it here – and I will have copies made to sign.

---

1. For the three-volume edition of Poor Miss Finch.

2. See [1167] and [1177] to George Bentley of 24 November and 11 December 1871. Neither of WC's letters to Forster appears to have survived.

[1171] TO ARTHUR LOCKER,<sup>1</sup> SEPTEMBER–NOVEMBER 1871<sup>2</sup>

MS: Unknown. Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 232–233, our copy text; Griest, p. 138; BGLL, II, p. 305.

The other alteration I cannot consent to make. The 'damns' (two 'damns' only, observe, in the whole story) mark the characters at very important places in the narrative. The 'compromise' which you suggest is simply what they would not say ... My story is not addressed to young people exclusively – it is addressed to readers in general. I do not accept young people as the ultimate court of appeal in English literature. Mr. Turlington must talk like Mr. Turlington – even though the terrible consequence may be that a boy or two may cry 'Damn' in imitation of him. I refer your friends to Scott and Dickens – writers considered immaculate in the matter of propriety. They will find damn where damn ought to be in the pages of both those masters. In short, I am damned if I take out damn!<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Robinson does not identify the recipient but, since the reference is to WC's 1871 Christmas story 'Miss or Mrs?', the letter must be to Arthur Locker (1828–93), journalist, novelist and editor from 1870 to 1891 of the new illustrated paper the Graphic (1869–1932). WC wrote again to Locker on 18 January 1872 ([1186]).

2. Dating from the period within which WC must have submitted the story to Locker.

3. The expletive which Collins defends so stoutly here seems in fact to have been removed from the text at some point. When the narrative appeared in book form from Bentley in January 1873, the only 'damn' was not from Turlington but from Launcelot Linzie. Linzie says 'Damn him!' on the news that his rival in love has spoken to the father of the object of that love, Natalie Graybrooke ('Miss or Mrs?', Second Scene, 'The Storeroom').

[1172] TO AUGUSTIN DALY, 2 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, II, p. 306.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 2nd Decr 1871

My dear Sir,

I have just got your kind note and have at once placed "Divorce" in the hands of Mr Bancroft – Manager of The Prince of Wales's Theatre (London).<sup>1</sup> This is the favourite theatre here – as you no doubt know. It has the best company and the most intelligent audience. I will communicate Mr Bancroft's answer to you, as soon as I receive it. I have not had time, I am sorry to say, to read your piece yet. The getting up of the dramatic "Woman in White" here, – the writing of a Christmas Story "Miss or Mrs?" (published Decr 13th in the U.S and in England simultaneously)<sup>2</sup> – and the continuation of "Poor Miss Finch" still not finished<sup>3</sup> – has left me neither time nor pains to do justice to the works of other writers. I must wait till I get my holiday.

Pray give my kindest regards to Mr Bonner<sup>4</sup> and believe me

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Augustin Daly Esqre

---

1. See [1124] to William Tindell of 19 September 1871.

2. In fact 'Miss or Mrs?' was published in Harper's Weekly in three parts, 30 December–13 January.

3. Poor Miss Finch was in fact simultaneously serialized in Cassell's Magazine in London and Harper's Weekly in New York, 2 September 1871–24 February 1872.

4. Theatrical agent – see [1056] to Bonner, 21 January 1871.

[1173] TO CHARLES WARD, 6 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Morgan (MA 3151/71). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 306–307.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 6th Decr

Private

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for your note. Under £400 a week I only take £5 per cent. Hence the drop. But we are still playing at a profit to everybody – and no other Theatre but the Prince of Wales’s is doing that this month.<sup>1</sup>

I am feeling my work – heart reported to be weak – obliged to take tonics. Four more weekly parts to do.<sup>2</sup> And then Paris!

Come and pot-luck some day next week. Tuesday? or Wednesday? Say which day will suit you – at 7.

Yours ever | WC

Two thousand copies of “Miss F.” sold to Bentley for £750……. - He pays £250 on day of publication and £500 in a month after.<sup>3</sup>

And remind me that I owe you for books – my brains are addled for everything but Miss Finch.

---

1. Of The Woman in White, still running at the Olympic. WC’s bank account records a payment of £41-3s-6d on 21 November and then £19-4s-3d on 28 November and £19-10s-9d on 5 December. Ward had clearly written to ask about the change after the second, much reduced payment. Generally, see Paul Lewis The Woman in White at the Olympic Theatre, Wilkie Collins Society, August 2009.

2. Of the serial version of Poor Miss Finch, still running in Cassell’s Magazine.

3. Poor Miss Finch appeared in three volumes from Bentley on 26 January 1872.

[1174] TO LAUNCE BEARD,<sup>1</sup> 8 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: BGLL, II, p. 307, amended A&C5, p. 20.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 8th Decr 1871

My dear Launce,

In wishing you many happy returns of your twenty first birthday, permit me to remark that it is now time to lay the foundation of the most precious of all mortal advantages – the advantage of possessing a good digestion. The French pie which accompanies this letter is the most wholesome nourishment for a young man of one and twenty that I am acquainted with. Accept it, eat it, digest it – on the recommendation of

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Francis Launcelot Beard (1851–1928) was the eldest son of WC’s physician and friend Frank Beard. He and his younger brother Nathaniel both collected autographs.

[1175] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 8 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 307.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 8th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1871

Dear Mr Bentley,

You ought to have had the agreements now sent with this – on Wednesday last when my copy was signed.<sup>1</sup> My only excuse is pressure of occupations. Please return me the blank duplicate signed, at your convenience. The Printer has the printed copy for the first Volume. I hope your asthma is not aggravated by the cold.

Yours truly | WC

1. The two copies of the publication agreement for Poor Miss Finch (see BL Add. 46618, ff. 255–256); the agreement was dated 6 December 1871 and gave Bentley the right to issue a single edition of 2,000 copies for a payment of £750 in two instalments.

[3321] TO FREDERICK FOLLETT,<sup>1</sup> 9 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Unknown. On sale: Sotheby's (16 May 1972, lot 478). Published: A&C11, p. 9.

Catalogue entry: ‘... to Frederick Follett, agreeing that the “portrait absurdly described as mine is really the portrait of my old friend Holman Hunt ...”’

---

1. Almost certainly Frederick Charles Follett, a widower of 55 recorded in the 1871 Census as a ‘Barrister not in practice’ living in East Molesley, Surrey (RG10; Piece: 864; Folio: 31; Page: 7); Follett had married Sarah Roope on 21 February 1841 (Times, 27 February 1841, p. 7d). Also present on the 1871 Census night was Follett’s niece Anne M. Bullar, identified as the daughter of barrister John Bullar Jr (see HO107; Piece: 1579; Folio: 17; Page: 27), who was executor of WmC’s will (see [0711] to Bullar, 13 October 1866).

[1176] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 9 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 308.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
December 9th 1871

Dear Sirs,

Pray accept my best thanks for the handsome addition which you have kindly made to my library. The books have all arrived in excellent condition. The “King Arthur” – most tastefully and beautifully bound – shall have a “place of honour” on my shelves.<sup>1</sup>

I send with this some slight additions to “Poor Miss Finch” for the book-publication.<sup>2</sup> The pages crossed over, are pages which you need not trouble to look at. They are to remain unaltered. Our publication day for the book is not exactly settled – but it will be a day in the latter part of January 1872.

Believe me, Dear Sirs | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs | Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. Bulwer-Lytton’s narrative poem King Arthur, issued in a single volume by Hunter, Rose of Toronto in 1871. The copy was in WC’s library on his death (Baker 2002, p. 130). The other volumes, presumably also Hunter, Rose publications, have not been identified.

2. The Hunter, Rose single-volume edition of WC’s Poor Miss Finch appeared in 1872.

[1177] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 11 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 270. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 308–309.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 11th Decr 1871

Dear Mr Bentley,

Pray accept my best thanks for the addition which you have kindly made to my library.<sup>1</sup>
The agreement has arrived safely.

I had not seen your letter in the Times when I wrote to you. It seems to me to be a perfectly clear and temperate statement of the case – and I can quite understand the filial feeling which left you no alternative but to write as you did.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George Bentley Esqre

---

1. This is likely to be Ought We to Visit Her?, the popular new novel by Mrs Annie Edwardes, recently published in three volumes by Bentley (see the advertisement in the Times, 11 November 1871, p. 8b). The triple-decker edition was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 103). See also [1282] to George Smith of 12 December 1872.

2. See George Bentley's letter to the Times, 8 December 1871, p. 6b, concerning the quarrel between CD and his father, Richard Bentley, in 1837–8. In the letter Bentley complains that, in the first volume of Forster's biography of CD (dated 1872 but in fact appearing in early December 1871), the author 'presents my father in a character which all who knew him would repudiate'. He also refers indirectly to WC's last-minute attempt to intercede with Forster prior to publication (as reported in [1167] and [1177] to George Bentley of 24 and 30 November):

I should mention that on my father's death, his papers coming into my possession, I made overtures through a mutual friend of Mr. Forster and myself, for the destruction of any letters that bore reference to a former disagreement between Mr. Dickens and my father. I desired this because I knew that the most cordial relations existed between Mr. Dickens and my father for many years prior to their death, and I felt sure that nothing could be more opposed to the genial temper of both parties than the public discussion of a disagreement that both parties had long forgotten.

My application to Mr. Forster was without result, and Mr. Forster professed not to understand the meaning of the application itself.

[1178] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 12 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 309.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th Dec 1872<sup>1</sup>

Dear Mr Bentley

I am ashamed to have entirely forgotten to thank you for the two early copies of "Poor Miss Finch". We were talking of so many subjects – and my head was addled after some hours of work before you kindly called here.

I greatly liked the look of the book – and a friend (calling yesterday) so entirely agreed with me that he carried off one of my copies. If you will send – at your entire convenience – a few more copies here I shall be additionally obliged to you.

Vy truly yours | WC

It is a question whether it might not help the sale a little, if my name was added at the back? You know best.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. The covers, both back and front, read 'Poor Miss Finch' at the top, and 'By the Author of | "The Woman in White"' at the foot (Parrish & Miller, pp. 83–84).

[1179] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 12 DECEMBER 1871

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 186/51). Published: BGLL, II, p. 310.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th December 1871

My dear Mrs Frith

I accept with the greatest pleasure your kind invitation for Thursday the 21st at 7 o'clock

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[3037] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 15 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Parrish (5/11/AM14749). Published: A&C3, p. 45.

London | December 15th 1871 /

"There in the middle of the broad bright high road – there, as if it had that moment sprung out of the earth or dropped from the heaven – stood the figure of a solitary Woman, dressed from head to foot in white garments,"

From | "The Woman In White" | by | Wilkie Collins

[1180] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 16 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 310.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
December 16th 1871

Dear Sirs,

Pray accept my thanks for a Bill of Exchange at sight for £35...- being the purchase-money for the Canadian edition of "Miss or Mrs?"<sup>1</sup> The story was published here, as Mr Heaton wrote you word, on the 13th inst.<sup>2</sup>

You have, I hope, received my letter thanking you for your kind present of books. They do the greatest credit, I think, to the Canadian Press.

I have also received the Toronto Daily Telegraph. Mr Reade's letter is admirably written. But I hold with Pope that "no creature smarts so little as a fool"<sup>3</sup> – and I regret to see my friend's rare ability wasted in lashing an anonymous enemy who is beneath his notice.<sup>4</sup>

You are quite right. I recommended Miss Thackeray to communicate with you, and I hope you may be able to enter into relations with her, which will be agreeable to both sides.<sup>5</sup>

"Poor Miss Finch" will be republished here towards the latter part of January next. I will write again as soon as I know the exact day.

Believe me, Dear Sirs | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. The Hunter, Rose single-volume edition of WC's Miss or Mrs? appeared in 1872. The £35 'Bill on Bk of Montreal' had been credited the day before (Coutts: WC).

2. Heaton was perhaps the printer for the Graphic, which carried 'Miss or Mrs?' in its Christmas number, dated 25 December 1871 but in fact issued on 13 December.

3. Alexander Pope, An Epistle to Dr Arbuthnot (1735), Prologue to the Satires, l. 84.

4. Reade's letter, presumably concerning Canadian copyright, has not been located.

5. Despite WC's introduction, no works by Anne Ritchie Thackeray seem in fact to have been published by Hunter, Rose in Toronto.

[3211] TO AXEL DAMKIER,<sup>1</sup> 22 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Copenhagen. Published: A&C8, p. 12.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
22nd Decr 1871

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your letter.

I have transferred the business of treating for translations of "Miss or Mrs?" into the hands of the Secretary of the Graphic newspaper – to whom I have sent your letter by this post.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Axel Damkier (1848–1910) was a Danish author and translator. He seems not to have translated any works by WC.

[1181] TO F. S. ELLIS, 25 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 311.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th Decr 1871

Dear Sir,

The person who has sent you the picture is a perfect stranger to me – and has acted in doing so, without my knowledge or permission. This is one, among many other intrusions of this sort, to which I am well accustomed. The owner of the picture (whose letter I have fortunately not lost) asks me to certify to the genuineness of it! I ought to have written to you when you kindly forwarded his letter – but I have been suffering from illness, and have found it quite impossible to keep up with my correspondence.

I have directed a letter to be written to the owner of the picture Mr Llewellyn, 22. Park Street. Bristol, intimating that I cannot look at it, and requesting him to save you further trouble by directing some agent of his in London to fetch it away from your offices.<sup>1</sup> I hope this will save you from being put to further inconvenience. Pray refuse to receive anything in the shape of a package, in future, which has my name on it! I am really sorry that you should have been troubled too, by this wearisome stranger.

If it is inconvenient to you to let the picture remain in your office, of course send it here. My own wish is to save you ~~further~~ trouble in the matter.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
F.S. Ellis Eqre

---

1. The identity of Llewellyn and his picture remain unclear, though it was probably a painting thought to be by WmC which his son was being asked to verify.

[1182] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 28 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Glasgow (891117/91–92). Summary: B&C, II, p. 350. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 311–313

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 28th Decr 1871

My dear Tindell,

Two matters to write about. One professional, one friendly.

Professional

=

Serve the present tenants of my stables with a notice to quit – on the ground that I decline to be subjected to perpetual uncertainty and inconvenience in receiving my rent. (Michaelmas rent not yet paid – and Mr Binder knows nothing about it).

Friendly

=

I am marrying two of my characters at the end of “Miss Finch” – and I want to be quite right about the License.

Case

Mr Jones (having his reasons) runs away with Miss Smith from Ramsgate, and takes her to the house of a female relative living at Sydenham. Jones and Smith are both of age. But Jones has a reason for keeping the marriage private.

The two reach Sydenham on the 5th of the month – and stay in the parish till the 20th. Under these circumstances I am I believe right in assuming that they can be married by License on the 20th?

When would Jones get the License at the office in London? Legally, I apprehend he ought to get it on the 19th, and state that he and his bride have resided in their parish a fortnight, when he applies for the License.

Or might he get the License, at any time after leaving Ramsgate? and is the question of residence a question for the parson and the parish authorities?

Also – is it not usual to deposit the License with the clerk at the vestry on giving notice of the marriage a day or two beforehand?

My object is to have the License ready at Sydenham on the 19th – and the marriage arranged for the 20th.<sup>1</sup> The story requires that the License should be produced at Sydenham to the friends of the bride ~~before the~~ a day before the marriage. They have a reason for wishing to look at it. When can I make the bridegroom get it in London under these circumstances without involving myself in a mistake?

Of course you are having a holiday. In a week or ten days, I shall have mine I hope. I want it badly.

Yours ever | WC

Another point.

A special License costs £50 or £60 does'nt it? The only privilege obtained by it as I suppose is the privilege of being married out of canonical hours – in your bedroom if you like. Is the residence of one of the parties for a fortnight beforehand in the parish in which the marriage is celebrated insisted on in the case of a Special License, as in the case of an ordinary License? As far as I can make out from Blackstone, it is.<sup>2</sup> Or am I wrong – and will a Special License marry you at a moment's notice? This is a very important question for me.

A line of answer please as soon as you can. | WC

---

1. In the novel as published, Nugent travels to London on the 19th to get the licence and the marriage takes place on the 21st.

2. Sir William Blackstone (1723–80: ODNB), whose Commentaries on the laws of England were a standard work. In WC's library at his death was found Henry John Stephen's New Commentaries on the Laws of England Partly Founded on Blackstone (4 vols, London: Butterworths, 1841) – see Baker 2002, p. 152. WC's questions here are reminiscent of those posed to the solicitor Frederic Ouvry while writing Armada – see [0573] of 4 April 1864 and [0575] of 5 April 1864, both to Ouvry.

[1183] TO GEORGE MANVILLE FENN,<sup>1</sup> 31 DECEMBER 1871

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, II, p. 313.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 31st Decr 1871

Dear Sir,

I enclose admission for Two to the Stalls for Wednesday evening next, 3rd Jany. The play begins at a quarter to eight<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

If Wednesday evening does not suit you, return me the ticket – and say which evening will do. Any evening you like but Saturday.

Geo Manville Fenn Esqre

---

1. George Manville Fenn (1851–1909), prolific novelist and writer of boys' stories. He edited Cassell's Magazine in 1870 and owned Once a Week from 1873 to 1879 (Pilgrim, XI, p. 130 n. 6).

2. The Woman in White at the Olympic.

[3382] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 1860s TO 1871

MS: Cadbury Research Library, University of Birmingham (KWH/A/126, p. 21). Published: A&C14, pp. 12-13.

...say that it is impossible for me to grant your requests. All the places [have been] taken...

Believe me | very faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Valediction cut from a letter and glued to an album page. The few words on the reverse are legible under a strong light. They appear to refer to a request for tickets to a play. The hand and the use of 'very faithfully yours' probably date it to the 1860s or early 1870s. So it perhaps relates to the production of The Woman in White at the Olympic Theatre from October 1871 to February 1872. Soon after the opening WC wrote that the 'theatre is now filled every night – chairs obliged to be put in the stall-gangways' ([1137] to Charles Ward, 15 October 1871).

[1184] CARRIE GRAVES TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 9 JANUARY 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Extract: Davis, p. 269 (as from 'Lizzie' Graves). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 313–314.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London January 9. 1872

Dear sirs,

I am requested by Mr Wilkie Collins, who is too much occupied to write to you himself, by to-day's mail, to inform you that it has been quite impossible for him to defer the publication in England of "Poor Miss Finch", in book form, to a later date than the twenty fifth of this month – the periodical conclusion of the story being on the twentyfirst of February.<sup>1</sup> Mr Collins will himself write and explain the circumstances – by the mail of Saturday next, the 13th.<sup>2</sup> The same mail will bring you the conclusion of the story in corrected proof.

Last Saturday's mail, the 6th took you the first portion of the final Weekly Part, together with the duplicate revises of part twenty-five.<sup>3</sup>

I remain, dear sirs | Faithfully yours | H.E. Graves

P.S. The question of the republications in book-form, has only been decided on to-day.

To Messrs Harper & Bros:

---

1. In fact, the serial concluded in Cassell's Magazine on 24 February, while Bentley's three-volume edition of Poor Miss Finch was officially published on 26 January 1872. The concern here is to give WC's authorized American publishers, who have paid for early copy, as much advance as possible over potential unauthorized rivals who will publish the novel without remuneration to the author (and thus more cheaply), once the complete text is available in Britain in either serial or volume form.

2. See [3038] to Harper, 13 January 1872.

3. Also found at Morgan with the letter is the draft of a reply from Harper's, explaining that the corrections for the final part arrived too late to be incorporated into their printing of the novel in volume form, but would be retained for subsequent editions.

[1185] CARRIE GRAVES TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 9 JANUARY 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 314.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London January 9. 1872.

Dear Sirs,

I am requested by Mr Wilkie Collins, who is too much occupied himself to write to you by today's mail, to inform you that the republication in England of "Poor Miss Finch," in book form, has just been fixed for the twenty-fifth of this month.

With Mr Collins's kind regards,

I beg to remain, dear sirs | Faithfully yours | H.E. Graves

To Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co

[3038] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 13 JANUARY 1872

MS: Maine HS (Lot M. Morrill Collection 284). Published: A&C3, pp. 45–46.

Private

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

London | Saturday 13th January 1872

Dear Sirs,

You will already have heard from my amanuensis that it has been impossible for me to defer the publication day of "Poor Miss Finch" beyond the 25th of this month.<sup>1</sup> No publisher in London would consent to issue the book simultaneously with the periodical conclusion of the story.

The insanely-absurd system of the three volume English novel at the fancy price of a guinea and a half is entirely answerable for this.<sup>2</sup> One great monopolist (Mr Mudie) virtually purchases the whole edition of a 3 volume novel, at a price agreed on between the publisher and himself.<sup>3</sup> Every circulating library in ~~the~~ Great Britain of any importance is under Mr Mudie's direction – and the idea of forcing his hand by publishing a popular story before its periodical completion, and so exposing him to the demands of impatient periodical readers eager for the end, is the idea at the bottom of the present system of novel-publishing in England, when novels appear first in periodicals. Note: My friend Charles Reade's last novel was published in England in book-form six weeks before the last periodical part was published in Cassell's Magazine.<sup>4</sup> Add to this, that Mr Mudie has been known to cut out the pages of the story from the periodical – bind them together – and issue them to his subscribers as a book – and you will understand the degrading position in which the publishers and writers are placed under the present system – and will I hope, see at the same time how impossible it is for me to meet your views, in the matter of the English publication of "Poor Miss Finch."<sup>5</sup>

It is also to be observed – in my case, where there is a considerable public demand on Mr Mudie for the book – that he limits that demand. Hundreds of his subscribers never get my book – and write to me in despair to know what they are to do. Mr Mudie's interest, as a commercial man, is to take as few copies of "Miss Finch" as the public demand will let him take. He can get bad novels, by obscure writers, cheaper than he can get my novel – and he can send them as stop-gaps to his subscribers who want my book. His customers are quite helpless. They have no other library to go to – and no other system of supply yet set in motion.

I must beg you to consider this letter strictly confidential—for my English publisher's sake. He has bought an edition of "Miss Finch" of me – and the sale of that edition virtually rests with Mr Mudie alone. I am myself so disgusted with these degrading conditions of publication, that I am seriously contemplating turning to dramatic writing for the future instead of novel-writing. The publishers here who have money, have no enterprise. The publishers with enterprise have no money. The small booksellers are being ruined. The public is as badly supplied as possible. And all for want of the courage, among English publishers, to issue a book, as you do, at a price which the reader can pay. I have myself formed a plan for a new system of publishing novels which I have stated to our principal publishers. They admit that it is founded on sound commercial principles – but the novelty of it terrifies them, and they object to the risk – in other words they object to that bold speculation on the public taste which is the essence of a publishers business!

I make no apology for troubling you with this long letter (written in haste). It is only right that you should thoroughly understand my position, and the impossibility of my individually abolishing a corrupt system, by which I am myself a serious loser.

Sincerely regretting my inability to meet your views, I remain, Dear Sirs

vy truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. See [1184], Carrie Graves to Harper & Brothers of 9 January 1872.

2. WC again uses the phrase 'insanely-absurd system' two months later in [1219] to Bentley, 22 March 1872.

3. The animosity of WC towards George Mudie, the owner of the largest circulating library, is well documented in his letters. See, for example, [0368] to Charles Ward of 14 August 1860, [0845] to William Tinsley of 11 July 1868, and [1144] to George Smith of 23 October 1871.

4. The note is added in WC's top margin, with saltire insertion marks indicating its position.

5. W.H. Smith, a rival circulating library, was to do just that with Poor Miss Finch; see [1238] to Harper & Brothers of 28 May 1872.

[3287] TO CHARLES DICKENS JR,<sup>1</sup> 16 JANUARY 1872

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, p. 10.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

16th January 1872

Dear Charley,

My doctor forbids me to go to dinner-parties, and orders me out of town as soon as I can get away. The truth is that I have been working too hard. My nerves want quiet and my digestion has struck work.<sup>2</sup>

I am sincerely sorry not to be able to accept your kind invitation for the 28th of this month.

But, as things are, I can only trust to your kindness to forgive my absence and to accept the expression of my regret.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC addressed only two correspondents as ‘Charley’. His brother was always ‘My dear Charley’ with the valediction ‘Yours affly’. The other was Charles Dickens Jr – see, for example, [3218] of 10 November 1874 and [1663] of 29 January 1877.

2. For another example of WC’s use of the phrase ‘struck work’, see [2106] to Chatto & Windus, 31 January 1883: ‘my brains struck work, some days since’.

[1186] TO ARTHUR LOCKER,<sup>1</sup> 18 JANUARY 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 314–315.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th Jany 1872

My dear Sir,

One line to say that I am sincerely sorry for the unhappy blind man – and that I heartily wish “Miss Finch’s” Doctor existed out of the pages of the story.<sup>2</sup> The vile periodical system of publication is partly to blame for the vain hopes which I have innocently raised. When the last numbers of “Poor Miss Finch” appear, my readers will discover that she relapses into total blindness, and that her blindness and her happiness are made to be conditional one on the other. I have written the book expressly to show that happiness can exist independently of bodily affliction – and this poor man of yours is one of the very readers whom this story is intended to console.

I leave it to your discretion to communicate this or not, as you think right

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Arthur Locker Eqre

---

1. Editor of the Graphic – see [1171] to him of September–November 1871. Locker also wrote fiction and a number of his tales appeared in the Graphic (VFRG, 29, p. 63).

2. Referring to the temporary restoration, under treatment by the German oculist Herr Grosse, of the sight of the blind Miss Finch in the serial of that name then still running in Cassell’s Magazine. Locker’s blind acquaintance has not been identified.

[1187] TO EDMUND D. ROGERS,<sup>1</sup> 18 JANUARY 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 315 (as to Edward D. Rogers).

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th January 1872

Dear Sir,

My literary engagements do not allow me the hope of being able to consider the proposal which you are so good as to address to me on behalf of the Proprietors of the “Eastern Daily Press”.<sup>2</sup>

Thanking you for your letter,

I remain faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

[Edmund]<sup>3</sup> D. Rogers Eqre

---

1. Edmund Dawson Rogers (1823–1910), manager of the National Press Agency from its foundation in 1873. This was to become one of the major London fiction syndication agencies – see Law, pp. 96–97.

2. A liberal daily newspaper founded as the Eastern Counties Daily Press in October 1870, based in Norwich, and edited by Rogers – the proposal was perhaps for a short story or serial novel to be published in the Saturday edition of the newspaper.

3. Though there is no doubt of the recipient’s real name, it is uncertain whether WC in fact writes ‘Edmund’ or ‘Edward’.

[1188] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 18 JANUARY 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/93). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 315–316.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th Jany

My dear Tindell,

The enclosed from Miss Aytoun. Stick to the notice to quit. I decline to keep a tenant who puts me to the expense of legal proceedings to recover my rent – and whose apologies however polite they may be will not pay my lawyer’s bill. State the first part of this sentence, relating to the legal proceedings which I have been obliged to take as the ground on which I maintain my notice to quit.

If this surprises you – wait till you come to my age,<sup>1</sup> and you will see that it is a very great mistake to allow anybody to ignore their liabilities towards you, with perfect impunity. I pay my rent regularly – and I insist on my tenant doing the same, (or going). Exit Aytoun – we will have a change!

A box next week, on any night you like.<sup>2</sup> This week, you write too late. All my admissions are given away.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. An ironic comment as Tindell, aged 43 or 44, was just a few years younger (Census 1881, RG11/667, p. 4) than WC, who had just celebrated his forty-eighth birthday.

2. For The Woman in White, still running at the Olympic.

[1189] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 25 JANUARY 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 316.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th January 1872

Dear Mr Bentley,

Pray accept my thanks for the specimen copy,<sup>1</sup> and for a cheque for Two hundred and fifty pounds, in part payment of the purchase-money for the Edition – as by agreement.<sup>2</sup>

I confess I like the new binding – sober as it is. But then I hate gilding (of the modern sort) on books. Miss Finch’s dress of brown & black is “your colour” – as the artists say.<sup>3</sup>

I am going to take a holiday – as long a one as I can. For I have been really working too hard this last year. As soon as I have any ideas for the future, I will not fail to let you know.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. Poor Miss Finch officially appeared on 26 January 1872, though WC had received two early copies in mid-December, after which changes seem to have been made to the binding – see [1178] to Bentley of 12 December 1871.

2. The first third of the total payment of £750 for the three volume Poor Miss Finch, credited to WC’s account on 26 January 1872 (Coutts: WC).

3. The binding of the initial issue was ‘brown smooth cloth, the front and back covers blocked in black and lettered in the colour of the cloth, on panels with five rules at each end ...’ (Parrish & Miller, p. 83). However, there was also a slightly later issue in three volumes with blue cloth, with the spine lettered in gilt (ibid., p. 84).

[3095] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 25 JANUARY 1872

MS: Unknown. On sale: Heritage Auctions (29 August 2007, lot 90632), in a collection of thirty documents, mainly American Mss; eBay, no. 170138323375. Published: A&C4, p. 18.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | Jany 25th 1872<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Written on a small oblong of paper, probably simply a signature for an autograph hunter.

2. The text is followed by some pencil notes in another hand.

[1190] TO JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD, 27 JANUARY 1872

MS: Huntington (HD 42). Published: BGLL, II, p. 317.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th Jany 1872

My dear Hollingshead,

I think you will be able to stop the performances of the pirated version. Your right is clear – and you have exercised your right. But I don't feel so hopeful about the recovery of damages. The delay in producing the piece will, I fear, be held to excuse the pirates. But the law is so scandalously uncertain, that it is quite impossible to foresee results.<sup>1</sup> If you want a sensible legal opinion, I recommend my solicitor – Tindell, Firm of Benham & Tindell, 18 Essex Street. He has given a great deal of time to the subject, and he knows as much about it as anybody.

I am going away soon to get a little rest and change after a year's hard work. But my letters will follow me – and I hope you will send me a line kindly, to say how your appeal to the law ends. We are all interested in your success – and I cannot tell you how heartily glad I shall be, if I hear that you and Mr Toole have squeezed the plunder out of the thieves.

Yours ever |Wilkie Collins

---

1. The case in question was that of Toole v. Younge, eventually heard before the Court of the Queen's Bench on 21 February 1873 (see the report in the Times, 22 February 1873, p. 11b). John Lawrence Toole (1830–1906: ODNB) was an actor and theatrical manager who had worked regularly with Hollingshead. In 1863 Hollingshead published a serial ('Not Above his Business') in Good Words, which in 1865 he turned into a play ('Shop') and sold to Toole. The play had still not been performed in 1872 when Younge, the manager of a provincial theatre, created his own drama from the story, entitled 'Glory'. All three versions were read out in court ('rather a tedious process' according to the Times) and the verdict was a nonsuit, 'on the ground that the defendant's drama had been drawn from the published tale, and was no infringement of any right possessed by the plaintiff'. On WC's response to the result of the trial, see [1299] to Hollingshead of 25 February 1873.

[1191] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 29 JANUARY 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/94). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 317–318.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | 29th Jany 1872

My dear Tindell,

I am going to petition the Custom House to Register my books (under their new Act) – so as to keep the Tauchnitz Editions from being brought into England. Without such registry, these editions pass our Customs House.<sup>1</sup> Among other things, I am to state when my various copyrights expire. Am I right in supposing that they expire in 42 years from date of publication?<sup>2</sup> In this case, my first entry would be as follows: –

=

Antonina. Published 1850. Copyright expires 1892.
and so on for the others.

=

One line to say if I am right about the 42 years.
Yours ever | WC

I am an idle man at last. "Miss F." was published last week.

By-the-bye, did the other Miss (Miss Aytoun) really pay the stable-rent (£20) after all? I have only got her letter telling me she had "given orders". (N.B. The ladies here take the stable rent as pocket-money – they are getting very uneasy!)<sup>3</sup>

---

1. See the series of letters to Thomas Satchell from 2 September 1871; WC sent his petition for Satchell to look over in [1202] of 22 February 1872.

2. Under the 1842 Copyright Act (5 & 6 Victoria c.45) then in force, copyright in works published during the author's life continued for a period of forty-two years or the author's life plus seven years, whichever was longer. As [1192] to Tindell of the following day shows, this proved a problem in filling out the petition to the Custom House.

3. Presumably referring to Caroline and Carrie Graves. This explains why there is no mention of the stable rent in the bank account as it was paid in cash and spent.

[1192] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 30 JANUARY 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/95). Published: B&C, II, pp. 350–351.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | 30th Janry 1872 | 3.45. P.M.

My dear Tindell,

Up to this time, the rent for the stables has not reached me – though Mr Binder told [del] Miss Graves, he would send it yesterday – Monday.<sup>2</sup>

There are a carriage and a horse or horses in the stables. So distraint away! But, better let the “officers” apply here first to know if the money has been received between this and then. Do you send notice of the distraint, beforehand? I suppose so.

As to the Copyright – how do I know how long, I [del] am going to live? I can only state the 42 years /from publication/ as the duration of my copyrights – if I am called on /((as I am)/ to state when my copyrights expire.<sup>3</sup> You don’t tell me whether I am right or wrong in doing this. And what else to do I don’t know. Oh the English Law!

Yours ever | WC

---

1. WC uses printed paper, the address in black Gothic type centred.

2. Concerning this long-running dispute, see the letters to Tindell of 13 January and 28 December 1871, and 18 and 29 January 1872 ([1051], [1182], [1188], and [1191], respectively).

3. See [1191] to Tindell of the previous day.

[1193] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 31 JANUARY 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 318–319.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 31st January 1872

Dear Mr Bentley,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind present of six copies of “Poor Miss Finch”. I hope the “Subscription” has begun well.

I am “petitioning” the Customs House to register my copyrights – so as to prevent the introduction of “Tauchnitz” Editions of my books into England.<sup>1</sup> It is necessary to give the dates of publication – and I have not got the original editions of “Basil” and “Hide And Seek” by me. Shall I be giving much trouble if I ask one of your clerks to look back, and write me the dates? If not – I shall be much obliged if you will kindly direct this to be done. I am afraid “Basil” must have been published as long ago as 1852 or thereabouts, and “Hide and Seek” a year or two later!<sup>2</sup>

---

1. See [1202] to Thomas Satchell, 22 February 1872.

2. Bentley published Basil on 16 November 1852 and Hide and Seek on 6 June 1854 (Gasson, p. 17).

[1194] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 31 JANUARY 1872<sup>1</sup>

MS: Glasgow (891117/24). Published: BGLL, II, p. 319.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 31st Jany

My dear Tindell

Many thanks for your note. May I live to gain that extra time! I doubt it.<sup>2</sup>

After I wrote to you, Mr Binder called here, and promised to pay the money today – including a quarters rent in advance for Lady Day next. Did you ever hear of anything in female perversity like Miss A.? She would rather pay in advance – than pay regularly, because I want to be paid regularly! Short of knocking her down, who is to manage such a woman as this? “Stay proceedings” (as we lawyers say) till you hear from me again

Yours ever | WC

Miss A. wishes to know whether I “have any objection to receive the rent for the future in advance.”!!!

-
1. Dating derives from the obvious place of the letter in the series concerning stable rent and copyright expiration.
  2. Returning to the joke about WC calculating the duration of his copyrights from the date of his death – see the previous letter to Tindell.

[1195] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> [JANUARY 1872]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11).<sup>3</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 319, and IV, p. 384 (as two letter fragments), amended A&C3, p. 65.

... many thanks for the cases. Now I see the brown binding, I entirely agree with Mr Bentley in preferring it to the other. The ...

... of binding.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. From the content, this is likely to be to a member of Bentley’s staff, or to someone at his printers, Billing and Sons.
  2. The hand appears to date from WC’s later decades, while the references to Bentley and brown binding suggest that the letter concerns the first edition of Poor Miss Finch – see [1189] to George Bentley of 25 January 1872.
  3. The top and bottom of the page have been cut off unevenly for the signature, leaving two separate fragments on the recto and verso.

[3286] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> LATE 1871-EARLY 1872<sup>2</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>3</sup> Published: A&C10, p. 10.

The play begins punctually at a quarter to eight.

With best regards | yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. From the valediction, perhaps an old friend with theatrical interests such as Charles Reade, the only identified recipient to whom WC signs off with the phrase ‘yours always truly’ – see [2183] to him of 17 July 1883.
  2. The dating relies on the only other example of the phrase ‘punctually at a quarter to eight’ – see [1155] to Allston Brown, 6 November 1871. We thus conjecture that the letter concerns the dramatic performance of The Woman in White which ran at the Olympic Theatre from 9 October 1871 to 24 February 1872. The paper corresponds to that period.
  3. Cut from the end of a letter for the signature.

[1196] TO JOHN BONNER, 3 FEBRUARY 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 320–321.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 3rd Feby 1872

My dear Sir,

I have been ill, and unable to attend to my correspondence for some little time past. At the close of last year, I received a letter from Col T. Allston Brown (Dramatic Agency 720 Broadway)<sup>1</sup> of which the following lines are an extract: –

“Mark Smith<sup>2</sup> is desirous of securing your version of “The Woman in White”, and I write you to ascertain upon what terms you will let me have it for him for America”.

To this I have replied, by today’s mail, that I have requested you, as my representative, to act for me in the matter.

I burden you with no instructions, under these circumstances – feeling that it will be sparing you trouble if I leave you free to act on your own discretion, and knowing that my interests are safe in your hands. If the negotiation comes to anything, I shall beg leave to communicate with Mark Smith, as to the acting of the very difficult character of Fosco – and I should wish to make it a stipulation that he should consult with my old friend, Mr Fechter, as to the representation of the piece, on Mr Fechter’s return to New York. His advice will represent my views, and will be invaluable in helping to secure the success of the play in the United States. It has run more than one hundred nights in London – and is to be translated for The French Stage.

This is all I have to say, at present, on the subject. If I can be of any assistance to you, you have only to write and command me.

Will you kindly tell Mr Daly, with my compliments, that the management of The Prince of Wales’s Theatre here, does not see its way to successfully representing “Divorce” before the English public.<sup>3</sup> I am sorry to report this check at the outset. But – now that I am better in health – I will try again at another Theatre, and I will be careful to report the result.

In conclusion, I can only hope that I am not putting you to any serious inconvenience in placing “The Woman in White” negotiation in your hands. Please let me hear that you have received this letter, and believe me

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

John Bonner Esq

---

1. See [1197] to Brown of the same date.

2. Manager of the Broadway Theatre, New York, which staged The Woman in White in December 1873.

3. Referring to Augustin Daly’s play Divorce. See [1128] to Bonner, 26 September 1871.

[1197] TO T. ALLSTON BROWN, 3 FEBRUARY 1872

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, II, p. 321.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 3rd February 1872

Dear Sir,

My only apology for this late acknowledgment of your letter is – illness. I have not been able to deal with my arrears of correspondence before the present time.

Any arrangements for the performance in the United States of my dramatic version of “The Woman in White” must be made through the Agent to whom I have confided the piece – Mr John Bonner, of 22 Broadstreet. N.Y. I have accordingly written to him by this mail, transmitting a copy of your letter, and requesting him to act for me in the matter.<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Col T. Allston Brown

---

1. See [1196] to Bonner of the same date.

[1198] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 8 FEBRUARY 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 321–322.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 8th Feby 1872

Dear Mr Bentley,

Many thanks for the dates of publication.<sup>1</sup> I am glad to hear that “Miss Finch” is beginning well – even before the public have had time to talk about her.

I shall be very glad to join the Association. But I should like (if it is possible) to know what is the proposed scope of its operations – how it proposes to deal with American piracy, and with English piracy of published stories for representation on the stage, and so on. If there is any printed statement accessible, perhaps you will kindly tell me where I can get it?<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqr<sup>e</sup>

P.S. I may possibly be out of England at the close of this month. So I may mention (as you kindly suggested in your last letter) that the £500– can be paid to my account with Messrs Coutts & Co 59, Strand.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. That is, of the first editions of Basil and Hide and Seek – see [1193] to Bentley of 31 January 1872.
  2. Referring to the Copyright Association, founded in 1872 with F. R. Daldy as Secretary, and supported principally by publishers – see Bonham-Carter, pp. 163–164.
  3. The remaining two-thirds of the £750 which Bentley was contracted to pay for the first edition of Poor Miss Finch. It was credited on 21 February (Coutts: WC); see also [1201] to George Bentley, 20 February 1872.

[1199] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 10 FEBRUARY 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, p. 322.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Saturday 10th Feby 1872

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of a Dft on Messrs Baring for two hundred pounds (£200) – being the balance due to me on the purchase money agreed upon for the advance sheets of “Poor Miss Finch”.

In thanking you for the enclosure, permit me to also thank you for the kind letter which accompanies it. If I see my way, in the future, to any new venture in the way of a work of fiction, I will not fail to communicate with you.

In the meantime, I send with this a Photographic Portrait which is considered to be the best that has ever been taken of me.<sup>1</sup> If you have any future occasion to publish a portrait of me, I can send you no better likeness (as I am told) for the engraver to work from.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

-
1. The photographic portrait is no longer with the letter, but it is almost certainly a portrait taken by Elliott and Fry of 55 Baker Street in 1871. Collins may have been upset by the old and unflattering engraving of him used to illustrate the opening part of Poor Miss Finch in Harper's Weekly on 2 September 1871 (p. 813). If so, the ploy worked. Harper used an engraving based on the Elliott & Fry photograph to illustrate Poor Miss Finch when it was published in book form in 1872. It was also used to illustrate a piece about Collins in Harper's Weekly the following year (8 March 1873, p. 185) and again in the collected edition they published to celebrate his visit to the USA from September 1873 to March 1874.

[1200] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 19 FEBRUARY 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/96). Published: BGLL, II, p. 323.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th Feby 3. P.M.

My dear Tindell,

You have done quite right about the Stables.<sup>1</sup> I am this moment back from Ramsgate. So excuse haste.

I will see you (about the play) before I leave town again. Mr Witty's box (for Wednesday) enclosed.<sup>2</sup>

Yours (in haste) | WC

-
1. Miss Aytoun, the tenant, seems shortly after this to have vacated the stables – see [1242] to Tindell of 18 June 1872.
  2. Presumably for The Woman in White at the Olympic. Witty remains unidentified, though he was perhaps an employee at Benham & Tindell.

[1201] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 20 FEBRUARY 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 323.

90 Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. | 20th February 1872

Dear Mr Bentley,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £500 – being the remainder of the purchase-money agreed on between us for an edition of two thousand copies of “Poor Miss Finch”.

Many thanks also for the trouble you are kindly taking about the Copyright association.

I shall be glad to hear how the remainder of the edition moves off, as the book becomes more known.<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

---

1. In fact, sales were less healthy than anticipated, since W. H. Smith’s Railway Circulating Library ignored the Bentley edition and instead waited to purchase 400 copies of the bound volume of Cassell’s Magazine which appeared in March and contained all the serial instalments of the novel (see [1253] to George Smith, 24 September 1872. Gettmann shows that the edition of 2,000 was eventually exhausted (p. 140), but also notes that Mudie seems to have obtained his supply extremely cheaply – paying just under £50 for 484 copies (p. 133 n. 2).

[1202] TO THOMAS SATCHELL, 22 FEBRUARY 1872

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, pp. 202–203 (as to Thomas W. Satchell); BGLL, II, p. 324.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. | 22nd. February 1872

Dear Sir,

I have waited to profit by the advice which you were so good as to give me (relating to the registration of my books at the Custom House) until the publication of “Poor Miss Finch” in book form would enable me to add that work to my list.<sup>1</sup>

You kindly offered to look over my “petition” and to place it when completed in the proper channel for communication with the Customs. It is needless to say that I gladly take advantage of your kindness.

If no alteration is needed, I will make my declaration before the magistrate, provided with a copy of the Notice which I send herewith – and I will then forward the Declaration to you.<sup>2</sup>

If corrections are needed, they shall be carefully embodied in a new copy of the notice.

Three of my novels, viz: –

Armadale | No Name | and | After Dark

are the copyright of Messrs. Smith & Elder. I will send them a copy of my notice, and request them to address the Commissioners on their own behalf<sup>3</sup> – as the sole proprietors of the works in question.

I ought perhaps to add that all my novels are re-printed by Tauchnitz by special arrangement with me. He pays purchase-money for the right, and understands thoroughly that his reprints are not to be permitted to circulate in Great Britain. I saw his son the other day – and he cordially approved of the step which I am now taking.

Again thanking you, | I remain, Dear Sir,

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins.

T. Satchell, Esq.

---

1. Poor Miss Finch was officially published on 26 January 1872.

2. Concerning the declaration, see the notes to [1204] to Satchell of 29 February.

3. The Commissioners of the Board of Customs.

[1203] TO C. S. CARTER,<sup>1</sup> 27 FEBRUARY 1872

MS: Private. Published: B&C, II, pp. 351–352.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>2</sup> | London
February 27th 1872

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my apologies for this late answer to your kind letter. I have been away from London – and I have had no earlier opportunity of writing to you than this.

There is no hope of my being able to make my appearance in The United States during the present year. The year 1871 has been a year of severe hard work for me. Engagements which I had hoped to separate by sufficient intervals of time, claimed ~~fulfillings~~ fulfilment one close on the other. “Poor Miss Finch” – the Christmas Story “Miss of Mrs?” – and my dramatic version of “The Woman In White” (played at the Olympic Theatre here), have all come within the compass of one year’s work. The result is that I must have a long rest. I am thoroughly exhausted for the present. But there is this good sign for the future – that I have, thus far, escaped without any renewed attack of rheumatic gout.

I have to add, on the hopeful side of the question, that I am refusing all the proposals made to me for writing a new novel – and that I am determined during the whole of the present year, to undertake only such literary work as will not fatigue me. All that rest and freedom from literary responsibility can do to fit me physically for a visit to America – they shall do. My pen may not remain altogether idle – for my pen represents, ~~th~~ in my case, the habit of a life. But I am positively resolved not to saddle myself with the heavy strain of another long story, for a year to come at least.

I have now written enough to show you, I hope, that I am seriously bent on doing all that I can to train myself successfully for a visit to The United States. Personally, I am heartily sorry to miss the opportunity which your letter offers to me. But there is no help for it. I must be stronger than I am now before I [del] take the serious responsibility of meeting my American readers in public.

With kindest regards, | Believe me My dear Sir | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
C.S. Carter Esqre

---

1. Presumably Charles Simeon Carter (b. 1846), a graduate of the University of Michigan Ann Arbor, then superintendent of the Chicago branch of the American Literary Bureau. Compare [1111] to James K. Medbery of 2 August 1871.

2. WC uses printed paper, the address in black Gothic type centred.

[1204] TO THOMAS SATCHELL, 29 FEBRUARY 1872

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, pp. 204 (as to Thomas W. Satchell); BGLL, II, p. 325.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. | W. | 29th February, 1872

My dear Sir,

I enclose a copy of the letter addressed to me by the Secretary – with my best thanks for your kind and prompt assistance.

I have now – as far as I understand the “official” English – to buy a sheet of foolscap paper – to repeat my petition and my list on one leaf, and to add my Declaration on the other – and then to trouble you once more by sending you the amended document to be forwarded to its destination.

Mr. Knox (of the Marlborough Street Police Court) is an old friend of mine.<sup>1</sup> He will tell me whether “Act 5 and 6 William 4th cap 62” means, in plain English, the common printed form of Declaration in ordinary use – or not.<sup>2</sup> And so with your kind help and his, I shall find my way through the official labyrinth, and protect my books after all!

Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins.
Thos. Satchell, Esq.

-
1. Alexander Andrew Knox (1818–91), barrister and magistrate – see [1947] to him of 11 March 1881.
  2. The Statutory Declarations Act of 1835 (officially 5 & 6 William IV c.62), allowed the use of formal written declarations rather than sworn oaths in many legal processes, including the affirmation of copyright. WC's interpretation 'in plain English' is thus basically correct.

[1205] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 29 FEBRUARY 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/97). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 325–326.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th Feby 1872

My dear Tindell

Have you recovered the Thanksgiving Day?<sup>1</sup>

If Yes – can I see you about licensing country performances tomorrow (Friday) at 5 P.M.? or at 4 – if 4 is better?<sup>2</sup> A line to say which hour – if you can attend to anything but God, the Queen, and the Prince.

Yours ever | WC

-
1. On Tuesday 27 February 1872 a Thanksgiving Service was held at St Paul's Cathedral for the survival of Albert Edward, Prince of Wales. The thirty-year-old heir to the throne had almost died from typhoid fever the previous December. Victoria appeared in public for the first time since her husband Albert had died ten years before.
  2. Referring to The Woman in White. After a successful run of more than 100 performances at the Olympic Theatre the play closed in London and went around the provincial theatre circuit, with two separate casts. See [1207] to John Bonner, 9 March 1872.

[3096] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, [FEBRUARY] 1872

MS: Unknown. Extract: 'Foreign Intelligence', Boston Daily Globe (18 March 1872), p. 3, our copy text.<sup>1</sup>
Published: A&C4, p. 19.

My visit to the United States depends entirely on the decision of my medical adviser. My health has been a little shaken of late years by some severe attacks of rheumatic gout. I am slowly getting over the liability to this malady. But I am not yet considered to be equal to the strain of continuous public appearances. There is every reason to hope that I may be able to pay a visit to my good American readers and friends, but the time cannot yet be definitely appointed. This is really all that I know myself in relation to my contemplated trip to America. I am sincerely anxious to find myself among you. I feel a deep interest in your country, and I owe a large debt of gratitude to your people for the hearty reception which they have accorded to my works.

-
1. The extract appears under the subheading 'Wilkie Collins' and is prefaced: 'An American gentleman has recently received a letter from Mr. Wilkie Collins, who refers to his projected visit to the United States as follows:'.

[1206] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 2 MARCH 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/98). Published: BGLL, II, p. 326.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd March

My dear Tindell,

I forget whether I told you yesterday<sup>1</sup> that – when you kindly inquire about the prices of those law-books – it is not necessary also to purchase them, until I have heard again from my learned American friend. He wishes, in the first instance, only to know at what rate he can obtain them. And he will then transmit to me his instructions as to purchasing.<sup>2</sup>

Don't trouble to answer this. As you are so kindly helping me in the matter, I only wanted to be sure that I had "stated my case" without making any mistake.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. See [1205] to Tindell of 29 February 1872, where WC arranges a meeting ‘tomorrow’ i.e. 1 March.
2. The learned American friend remains unidentified, but might be the Wall Street lawyer William D. Booth.

[3039] TO CHARLES A. KING,<sup>1</sup> 2 MARCH 1872

MS: Folger (Yc2885/4). Published: A&C3, p. 47.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London | March 2nd 1872

Dear Sir,

I have only today returned to London – and found your letter waiting for me.

Messrs Smith & Elder 15, Waterloo Place London are the publishers of the cheap editions of my books. The Illustrated Edition (bound in cloth) only contains a Frontispiece to each volume, and sells at five shillings (and in one or two cases) at six shillings the volume.

The cheaper edition, “in boards” with a coloured illustration outside, sells at two shillings the volume. The type is the same in both cases.

To my mind, the best edition of my books is the edition published (without illustrations) by Tauchnitz (of Leipzig) for continental circulation. This edition is not allowed to pass the English Custom House – as it would interfere with the sale of the English editions. The price varies with the size of the books – average three shillings ~~a volume~~ for each work – contained in two volumes. Some volumes of the “Tauchnitz Collection” no doubt find their way to the United States.

Lastly, my American publishers – Messrs Harper of New York – inform me that they “contemplate” issuing a new, American edition of my novels.

This ends my stores of information. With thanks for your kind letter,

Believe me | yours faithfully | Wilkie Collins

Charles A. King Esqre

---

1. Unidentified American correspondent, though this might be the C.A. King who contacted Mark Twain in July 1870 (Mark Twain's Letters, Vol. 4: 1870–1871, ed. Victor Fischer & Michael B. Frank (U. of California Press, 1995), p. 174), who in turn might be Charles Artemas King (1815–1917), who was born in Suffield, Connecticut, grew up in Binghamton, New York, and later entered government service in the Customs Department.

[3212] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 2 MARCH 1872

MS: Private.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C8, p. 12.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | March 2nd 1872

-
1. Excised from a folded letter, mounted on thick card.

[1207] TO JOHN BONNER, 9 MARCH 1872

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 326–327.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 9th March 1872

My dear Sir,

A line to thank you for your kind letter of February 17th – informing me that you have communicated with Col Brown respecting “The Woman in White”.<sup>1</sup>

After a run of more than a hundred nights in London, the piece now goes into the country – played by two separate companies.<sup>2</sup> It is to be revived in London when the country performances are over.

Will you kindly tell Mr Daly – with my compliments – that I have arranged to have “Divorce” read by Mr H. J. Montague of The Globe Theatre, London<sup>3</sup> – a manager who has collected a very good company, and who has directed this Theatre with great success. I congratulate Mr Daly on the run of this piece. He shall hear from me when I receive Mr Montague’s reply.

Thus far, I am doing nothing with “Miss Finch”. I see serious difficulties in the way of adapting the story for the stage.

Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

John Bonner Esq

---

1. The American theatrical agent. See [1148] to T. Allston Brown, 29 October 1871.

2. One company was led by George Vining, beginning in Manchester, the other by Wybert Reeve in Leicester.

3. See [1128] to Bonner, 26 September 1871, concerning Daly’s play, Divorce. Henry (Harry) Montague (c. 1843–78), popular and flamboyant English actor and friend of Squire Bancroft, was then manager of The Globe. Montague emigrated to America, appearing at Wallack’s Theatre in New York.

[1208] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 9 MARCH 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 327–328.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 9th March 1872

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a Bill of Exchange (First) for £102..9..6 – being the purchase money for the right to publish “Poor Miss Finch” in serial form – paid by Mr Desbarats, and kindly collected for me by yourselves.<sup>1</sup>

The delay in forwarding to you the printed copy for the conclusion of the story, does not rest with me as you rightly suppose. The same mail which took the proofs to Messrs Harper took the proofs to Mr Desbarats, in every instance, to the end of the novel. I regret the inconvenience to which you have been subjected – and I am also sorry to hear that Messrs Harper should have taken the opportunity of selling their edition in Canada. If anything of this sort happens again, pray consider yourselves at liberty to take any proceedings which you may consider to be desirable in your own defence. I am sincerely sensible of the moderation which you have shown in this matter, But I feel that I should ill return your kindness to me personally, if I allowed that kindness to tie your hands for the future. Pray act – in the future – as you think best for the interests of the book.

The Proprietors of “The Graphic Newspaper” here purchased of me my American right (the right of disposing of advance-sheets of “Miss or Mrs?”) at a valuation. So that I received – indirectly – remuneration from America for my work.

I have also to thank you for newspapers containing articles relating to the Canadian copyright question. I have in every case read the articles carefully.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. Presumably a Bill at 60 days as it was not credited until 9 May as ‘Bill on Bank of Montreal’ (Coumts: WC).

2. The articles in question remain untraced.

[1209] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 11 MARCH 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/164–165). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 328–329.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | March 11th 1872

My dear Tindell,

I enclose Mr Wybert Reeves Dft agreement.<sup>1</sup> He is quite ready to sign the fair copy. The one remark he makes is –

“I shall perhaps occasionally be obliged to take a town like Dewsbury or Rochdale, to fill up time, or break the expense of a long journey. They are places not worth mentioning perhaps in the agreement. I have no doubt you will not fear to leave this to my discretion.”

I suppose there will be no harm in leaving these small places open. Vining<sup>2</sup> is not likely to lay claim to them.

Or – you might perhaps insert in Clause 1, where the terms are specified, a parenthesis as follows: – (See agreement) . . . . “at any or all of the theatres in the several towns ~~hereafter~~ hereinafter mentioned, and not elsewhere” – here insert (except, after due notice given, and subject to the special approval of W. Collins) – or words to this effect. I leave it to you. It is clearly impossible to specify all the towns.

=

As to Vining, I hear (from a message left in my absence) that he wants one change made – i.e. – an extension of the time allowed to him for sending in his accounts. He asks for Three days, in place of the Twenty four hours specified in the Dft. His reason for asking this was stated as follows – “Suppose I leave Manchester after playing there 3 weeks, on Saturday – and open at Liverpool on the Monday following. All Sunday is occupied in travelling, and in preparations at Liverpool. How am I to find time to make out my accounts?”

If you see no objection to giving him the 3 days, I see none. But, defer – in any case – having the fair copy made (for Vining) until you hear from me again. I must be sure under his own hand, or from his own lips, that he has no further objections to make. Reeve’s agreement please prepare as soon as possible. I enclose his statement of the terms he makes with the managers. As to money, these terms vary between two thirds of the gross receipts to Reeve and three fifths. Sometimes one clear half only.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I have inserted Reeve’s present address in the blank on the Dft. He begins at Leicester this day week, the 18th. 15 Hanover Street is his London lodging. If you require some other address on the agreement, a letter will find him as above.

-
1. Wybert Reeve, the actor who took over the role of Fosco in the London production of The Woman in White. He was in charge of one of the two provincial tours of the play.
  2. George Vining, the original Fosco, who had fallen ill on 11 January 1872. He was in charge of the second of the provincial tours.

[1210] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 13 MARCH 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/99). Published: BGLL, II, p. 329.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 13th March 1872

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks for the Reeve agreement.

Engross Vining’s agreement, by all means.<sup>1</sup> Ohe! jam satis! (Horace).<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Concerning the two agreements, see [1209] to Tindell of 11 March; ‘engross’ is a technical term meaning ‘to write out in full legal form’.

2. Horace (1 Sat. v. 12): ‘Ohe, jam satis est’ or ‘Whoa! enough already!’.

[1211] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 16 MARCH 1872

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/42). Published: Coleman, p. 205; BGLL, II, p. 329.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16th March 1872

Dear Sirs,

Pray do not trouble yourselves about Doctor Lehmann’s letter. I will undertake to do all that is necessary, in answering his application.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Cassell & Co

---

1. Presumably another ‘fidgety’ letter relating to the German translation of Poor Miss Finch – see [1129] to Cassell’s, 26 September 1871. Neither Emil Lehmann’s letter nor WC’s reply has been traced.

[1212] TO RODNEY A. MERCIER,<sup>1</sup> 16 MARCH 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12, formerly laid in Poor Miss Finch (1872), I). Published: Parrish & Miller, pp. 84–85 (with recipient unidentified); BGLL, II, p. 330.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
16th March 1872

My dear Sir,

The last two works of my writing have been published – in England – at the following dates.

“Miss or Mrs?” A Christmas Story: published in “The Graphic” Illustrated newspaper 13th December 1871

also | “Poor Miss Finch”

(1) Periodically published in weekly parts in “Cassell’s Magazine”. The concluding chapters of this story will appear in the next months number of Cassell’s Magazine.

(2) “Poor Miss Finch” has been already republished (in anticipation of the close of the story in Cassell’s Magazine) in book-form (3 vols) complete. The date of this book-publication (at the present time the only complete publication) was the 26th of January 1872

Both these stories have been reprinted in the English Colonies and in the United States – and both have been, or are now in process of being, translated into French German and other European languages. I cannot give you the exact dates of these publications – I can only say that they have not, in any instance, preceded the dates of publication in England.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Rodney A. Mercier Esq

---

1. Probably Rodney A. Mercier of Towanda, Pennsylvania, Secretary of the Bradford County Historical Society, founded in 1870 and incorporated in 1875.

[1213] TO SYDNEY DAVIS,<sup>1</sup> 18 MARCH 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 330–331.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 18th March 1872

Sir,

I am so sincerely sensible of the courteous manner in which you have intimated to me your wish to dramatise “Poor Miss Finch”, that I regret to find myself in a position which makes it impossible for me to comply with your request.

In the first place, as the writer of the novel, I venture to claim the sole right of dramatising it. Though the present barbarous condition of the laws of England relating to literary property, may not recognise this claim – I need not remind you that the moral law – otherwise the law of honour – does recognise it.

In the second place, the difficulties in the way of successfully placing this story on the stage are so serious, that I hesitate at confronting the risk. Having myself produced the only successful dramatic version of “The Woman in White”, I may claim to know something of the matter.

In the third place, this dramatic version of mine of “The Woman in White” – after running more than a hundred nights at The Olympic Theatre London – is now to be performed in the provinces (at Newcastle, and at Sunderland also I believe) by two companies. One of these companies performs for the first time to night (at Leicester) – the other begins on the 30th of ~~next~~ this month at Manchester. It is plain, to my mind, that another dramatic version of one of my books, performed by a third company during the present year, would seriously interfere with the success of “The Woman in White”. If I had my own version of “Poor Miss Finch” ready, I would not allow it to be played in the country this year.

For these reasons, I hope you will excuse me, and understand me, when I tell you that I cannot consent to your proposal for dramatising “Poor Miss Finch”.

I remain, Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Sydney Davis Esq

---

1. As evidenced in the ‘Provincial Theatricals’ columns in the Era, Sydney Davis was then a playwright, composer, conductor and performer in the travelling theatre company operated by veteran actor E.D. Davis, which had its home base at the Royal Lyceum Theatre, Sunderland. See [1301] to Sydney Davis of 1 March 1873, in which WC finally granted him permission to perform his dramatization of Poor Miss Finch, with the aim of preventing a rival unauthorized production.

2. Directed to ‘Sydney Davis Esq | Royal Lyceum Theatre | Sunderland’, postmarked as dated.

[1214] TO THOMAS SATCHELL, 18 MARCH 1872

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, p. 206 (as to Thomas W. Satchell); BGLL, II, pp. 331–332.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. | W. | 18th March, 1872

My dear Sir,

Here – at last – is the amended notice, with the revised Declaration and the magistrate’s signature attached.<sup>1</sup> If you will kindly send me a line to say that it has reached you safely, and that you have been so good as to forward it for me to the Custom House Authorities, you will add to the obligation which I owe to your valuable assistance.

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins.
Thos. Satchell, Esq.

---

1. See [1202] and [1204] of 22 and 29 February 1872, both to Satchell.

[1215] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 19 MARCH 1872

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/43). Published: Coleman, p. 207; BGLL, II, p. 332.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th March 1872

Dear Sirs,

I have received a letter from Mr George Bentley – informing me that you are advertising “Poor Miss Finch” for sale, complete, in one volume at 4/6.<sup>1</sup>

Mr Bentley adds that this proceeding will have the effect of stopping the sale of his issue of the book in three volumes, at the library price. Mr Bentley, I should ~~add~~, further state, has purchased from me the right of publishing an edition of my novel – and this edition (a large one) is not yet all sold.<sup>2</sup>

I do not venture to pronounce any opinion on the matter. I only make you acquainted with the circumstances. They are certainly not pleasant circumstances, so far as I am personally concerned.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Cassell, Petter, & Galpin

---

1. That is, in the bound six-monthly volume of Cassell’s Magazine, the current edition of which covered the monthly issues from October 1871 to March 1872, and thus contained the complete serial text of Poor Miss Finch.

2. Bentley's triple-decker edition of the novel was issued on 26 January with a print run of 2,000 copies.

[1216] TO THE REV. RUPERT COCHRANE,<sup>1</sup> 19 MARCH 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 332–333.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th March 1872

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your letter.

I am on the point of leaving London for a little while – and I hasten, before I go, to enclose a small contribution of two guineas towards the relief of the poor sufferer. I heartily wish I could have sent her more. But my resources are severely taxed by cases of distress which all have their claims on me.

I am not connected in any way with The Literary Fund.<sup>2</sup> But it is perhaps possible – if this case were brought before them on literary grounds – that they might grant a small sum.

Kindly let me have one line to say that you have received my enclosure, and

Believe me, Dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

The Revd | Rupert Cochrane | &c &c &c

---

1. Though the suffering lady writer on whose behalf he writes has not been identified, WC's ecclesiastical correspondent is likely to be William Rupert Cochrane, Clerk in Holy Orders and Assistant Morning Preacher at St. George's, Hanover Square (Crockford, 1872, p. 176).

2. The Royal Literary Fund, charity for distressed authors, founded in 1790.

[3383] TO MAURICE,<sup>1</sup> 19 MARCH 1872

MS: Swarthmore (Charles Francis Jenkins autograph collection). Published: A&C14, pp. 13-14.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

19<sup>me</sup> Mars 1872

Mon Cher Maurice,<sup>2</sup>

Voici trois stalles pour le concert de ce soir – Royal Albert Hall. On commence a huit heures.

J'ai aussi demandé une loge a notre ami Beard, qui a des relations avec Albert Hall. Si Beard réussit, je vous enverrai la loge – et vous pouvez choisir vos [del] places. Je vais un peu [del] mieux – mais je suis toujours enrhumé, et je vous prie d'excuser mon absence. [del] Donnez moi encore quelques jours, et je serai guéri.

J'ai une grace a vous demander. Venez diner avec [del] moi – en garçon, a mon club – Vendredi prochain a six heures.<sup>3</sup> Beard ~~va~~ dinera avec nous, et j'aurai des places au "Prince of Wales's Theatre" pour la soirée. Une ligne, je vous prie, pour me dire Yes – et j'écrirai au directeur du theatre. Je vous attendrai ici /Vendredi/ a cinq heures et demi – et nous virons ensemble au Club.<sup>4</sup> C'est convenu [del] hein?

Mes respects a Madame – et bien de choses a Charles.

A vous de cœur. Zut! Brandy and water!

WC

Pas de costume de soir Vendredi! Je propose le diner au club, pour vous faire voir un Club Anglais. C'est très chic!

---

1. No other Maurice appears in the correspondence, but this could be the French actor Maurice Desrieux (Wikidata: 1829-76), whom WC later described as 'the most lovable and most affectionate of men, the wise, patient, and devoted friend of Fechter' (in Kate Field, Charles Albert Fechter (1882), p. 171). Desrieux was married to the actress Marie Laurent who had a son named Charles (b. 1849) by her first union.

2. The letter is transcribed as written. Translation:

My dear Maurice

Here are three stalls for the concert this evening – Royal Albert Hall. It starts at 8 o'clock.

I have also asked for a box from our friend Beard who has connections with the Albert Hall. If Beard succeeds I will send you the box – and you can choose your seats. I am a little better but I still have a cold so please accept my excuses for not being there. Give me a few more days and I will be cured.<sup>3</sup>

I have a favour to ask. Come and have dinner with me – like a bachelor at my Club – next Friday at 6 o'clock. Beard will dine with us and I will get seats at the "Prince of Wales's Theatre" for the evening. One line, if you please, to tell me 'Yes' – and I will write to the manager of the theatre. I will expect you here /Friday/ at five thirty – and we will go together to the Club. It's agreed, yes?

My respects to Madame and best wishes to Charles.

Your heart – Damn! Brandy and water!

WC

No evening dress Friday evening! I propose dinner at the club to show you an English Club! It is very fashionable!

3. No other letter around this time mentions his illness.

4. 19 March was a Tuesday so WC invites him in three days' time.

[1217] TO BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ, 19 MARCH 1872

MS: Unknown. Published: Otto, pp. 76–77, our copy text; BGLL, II, p. 333–334.

90, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, W., London
March 19th, 1872.

I have received your kind letter. Pray accept my best thanks for the friendly consideration for my interests which has animated you in writing to me. You will add to my obligations if you will excuse me for abstaining from stating any terms, on my part, for Miss or Mrs.?<sup>1</sup> I have always been perfectly satisfied with the proposals which you have been so good as to make to me, – and I know beforehand that the sum you may offer me for Miss or Mrs.? will be liberally calculated at the full value of the book as a publishing speculation. Our relations – I am sure I may say – have been friendly as well as literary relations, on both sides – and, while I fully appreciated your kindness in leaving the matter to me, I beg that we may alter nothing, and go on as we have gone on from the first.

I am not allowed, by my agreement, to republish Miss or Mrs.? in the English language, anywhere, before the middle of June next. This gives me time to find out whether we can publish the story by itself here. The sale in the Graphic newspaper was so large (I believe two hundred thousand copies) that I may perhaps have exhausted my public in England. You shall hear from me again, as soon as I have consulted my publisher – in good time before it will be necessary for you to begin printing.

With kind regards, and with many thanks for your cordial reception of the few words I wrote on the subject of my brother's book,<sup>2</sup> I remain ...

---

1. Recorded as published on 11 July 1872 as Tauchnitz vol. 1233, six months ahead of the English book edition in 1873 (Todd & Bowden, p. 225).

2. Probably CAC's A Cruise Upon Wheels, published by Tauchnitz as vol. 1446 on 3 December 1874 (Todd & Bowden, p. 973).

[1218] TO CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN, 22 MARCH 1872

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/44). Published: Coleman, p. 208; BGLL, II, p. 334.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 22nd March 1872

Dear Sirs,

I am so sincerely sensible of the courteous consideration for me which has dictated your answer to my letter, that I feel more than unwilling to put your kindness any further to the test. I will communicate with Mr Bentley on the subject of your letter – and I shall, I hope, succeed in arranging the matter so as to make it unnecessary for me to interfere in any way with your present announcement of the Magazine Volume.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me | Dear Sirs | Truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Cassell, Petter, & Galpin

---

1. See WC's generous offer in his letter to George Bentley of the same date.

[1219] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 22 MARCH 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 334–335.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 22nd March 1872

Private

My Dear Sir,

I have received an answer from Messrs Cassell, informing me that they cannot see any ground for complaint, on your part, inasmuch as they have withheld any advertisement of “Poor Miss Finch” in their volume, “until some considerable time after the publication of the three-volume novel.”<sup>1</sup>

After stating their view in these terms, Messrs Cassell add that if I “personally desire any modifications in the form of announcing the Magazine Volume they will, on hearing from me, have much pleasure in consulting my wishes.”

I feel some hesitation at adopting the course thus indicated – and I have said so in writing to thank Messrs Cassell for that part of their letter which relates to myself.

At the same time having due regard to the view taken by yourself, and remembering (as I am bound to remember) the perfectly fair and courteous proposal which you made to me for the publication of my book, I cannot hesitate to take the necessary steps to prevent you being a loser by the Library re-issue of “Poor Miss Finch”.

Under these circumstances I see no alternative but to propose that we should agree to alter the terms on which you are now publishing “Poor Miss Finch”. If you see no objection, I would suggest that the accounts should be made up to the present date, that we should consider the publication as a publication on commission, and that when the sale of the book is at an end I should return to you whatever sum may appear on the losing side of the account.<sup>2</sup> As I shall be leaving England probably in a week's time or less, I will ask leave (if you approve of my proposal) to name a friend to act for me – the same friend who acted for me in the publication on commission of “Man and Wife”.<sup>3</sup>

It is, I hope, needless for me to add – but I will add nevertheless – that I write without the slightest soreness of feeling. The difficulty in which we are placed arises solely from the present insanely-absurd system of Circulating Library publication. I blame this, and this only, for a disturbance of our literary relations which I sincerely regret.

Believe me | My dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
George Bentley Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. Concerning the sale of the bound volume of Cassell's Magazine – see [1215] and [1218] to Cassell's of 19 and 22 March.

2. As shown by [1220], WC's next letter to George Bentley of 26 March, this generous offer was not accepted by the publisher, although Bentley did allow WC to compensate by arranging favourable terms for the single-volume reprint of the novel – see to Bentley of 24 and 30 September 1872. Bentley's yield from the first edition was just over £333, as opposed to the £750 paid to Collins (Gettmann, p. 140).

3. WC's solicitor William Tindell served as his agent.

[1220] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 26 MARCH 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 335–336.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th March 1872

My dear Sir,

I have just got back to London, after a few days' absence and I hasten to acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter. I assure you I only considered myself to be doing an act of the commonest justice in making my proposal. But, I understand, and respect, your motives in refusing it.

I should like to talk to you about the book (of course without reverting to my letter), and also about a trifling literary project which I have in contemplation.<sup>1</sup> In a few days more, I am going to Paris. On my return, I will write and ask you to [give] me a quarter of an hour in New Burlington Street. We can then say a word also, relating to the Copyright Association.<sup>2</sup>

In the meantime, I thank you for your reply, and remain

Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

-
1. WC's subsequent letters to George Bentley of 16 and 18 May suggest that the project in question was the serial publication of his next novel, The New Magdalen, which in fact ran in Bentley's Temple Bar from October 1872.
  2. See [1198] to Bentley of 8 February 1872.

[1221] TO JOHN P. KNIGHT,<sup>1</sup> 9 APRIL 1872

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 209; BGLL, II, p. 336.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 9th April 1872

Mr Wilkie Collins accepts with great pleasure the invitation with which the President and Council of The Royal Academy have honoured him, for Saturday the 4th of May.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. John Prescott Knight (1803–81: ODNB), RA, portrait painter, Secretary of the Royal Academy (1848–73).
  2. Signed and directed to 'John P. Knight Esqre RA | Royal Academy of Arts | Burlington House | W.', postmarked as dated.
  3. To the annual banquet on Saturday 4 May, before the Royal Academy Summer Exhibition opened to the public on Monday 6 May.

[1222] TO SIR DAVID SALOMONS,<sup>1</sup> 10 APRIL 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 336.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th April 1872

Dear Sir David,

Pray accept my thanks for the invitation with which you honour me for Friday 3rd May at ¼ before 8. It will give me the greatest pleasure to be one of your guests on that occasion.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Sir David Salomons, Bart, M. P. | &c &c &c

-
1. Sir David Salomons – see [0715] to HC of 14 December 1866. WC may have first met him at his country residence at Broom Hill, Southborough, near Tunbridge Wells, while visiting his mother nearby. See also Gasson & Baker, pp. 181–182.

[1223] TO THOMAS SATCHELL, 12 APRIL 1872

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Extract: Coleman, p. 210 (as to Thomas W. Satchell). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 337–338.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. | W. | 12th April, 1872

My dear Sir,

Here I am, troubling you again!

You kindly sent my "notice" to the Custom House Authorities on the 19th March last.

Here is the 12th of April – and no sort of acknowledgment has reached me.

If these said authorities require more than three weeks' time for the writing of three lines of acknowledgment<sup>1</sup> – pray don't trouble yourself to answer this. I shall understand that I had better wait. But, if it is desirable to jog the official memory, perhaps you will, with your usual kindness, advise me on that point.

I have another favour to ask of you. Will you accept a copy of one of my books – generally considered to be the best of them – in remembrance of our united effort to protect my writings? I send the book (“Man and Wife”) to-day by Parcels' Delivery Company – addressed to you at The Lodge, Oak Village.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins
Thos. Satchell, Esq.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. Coleman's transcription overlooks the passage 'has reached me ... three lines of acknowledgment'.
  2. Perhaps the area of that name in Gospel Oak, north-west London – presumably Satchell's place of residence. The 1881 Census has him a short walk away on Downshire Hill, Hampstead.
  3. Coleman's transcription includes the following postscript (with minor incidental differences):

P.S. I have scratched out Mrs Phillips' address, as I remember I promised to put her name in the book! – so will you please send it to me instead, and excuse such an untidy letter – I have not time to write it over again –

This is derived from a separate typed sheet filed with the Satchell transcripts. However, based on both the content and tone, we doubt whether this postscript belongs with the above letter. The bibliographical evidence also encourages scepticism. Though the two documents are undoubtedly typed on the same machine, the letter transcript does not nearly fill the sheet on which it is typed, and the note '(Over)' is not found at the foot of the sheet, as it is in another case where the transcript clearly occupies more than a single sheet of typing paper. Moreover, the letter transcript is typed single-spaced and the postscript is typed double-spaced, while there is no physical evidence that the two documents have ever been attached. We should note, however, that F. V. Phillips, to whom [0668] was written on 23 March 1866, was at the Custom House, like Satchell, so perhaps the postscript might be associated with a further letter to Satchell now lost.

[1224] TO AUGUSTUS P. DUNLOP,<sup>1</sup> 17 APRIL 1872

MS: Unknown. On sale: Maggs Catalogue, 1161 (July 1993), item 47. Summary: BGLL, II, p. 338.

Summary: Thanks Dunlop 'for the proposal which you are so good as to make to me, on behalf of the publishers of the Fifth Avenue Journal'. Explains that in 'the present state of my literary engagements it is not possible for me to enter into a contract to write a new story on the terms which you suggest'.

-
1. Augustus P. Dunlop, with offices at 166 Fifth Avenue, editor of the short-lived New York weekly, Fifth Avenue Journal: A Mirror of Art, Literature and Society (1872–73), known for its 'Men of the Day' caricatures by Frank Bellew.

[1225] TO GEORGE VINING,<sup>1</sup> 17 APRIL 1872

MS: Unknown. Copy (in the hand of Caroline Graves): Glasgow (891117/101), our copy text. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 338–339.

(copy) | 90 Gloucester Place | Portman Sqr | 17th of April | 1872

Dear Vining,

You have, I suppose, received the telegram which I sent to you last night, refusing to make the extraordinary alterations in my play which you propose. Having already written to you at length stating what my resolution is – I have only to repeat that I refuse to alter the drama of the “Woman in White” in any way whatever. The only abbreviations which I sanction – are already made in the Prompt Book of the Olympic Theatre.

I have also to renew the expression of my perfect readiness to release you from your agreement to me – merely stipulating that the release shall take place in due legal form. If this can be simply accomplished by destroying our respective copies of the agreement, I suggest that Mr Tindell (the Lawyer who drew the agreement) shall destroy both copies with his own hand, at the same time – and shall write to satisfy you that this has been done. If you will give instructions to send your copy to him, I will send my copy with the necessary explanations. When both copies are burnt you will be under no obligation to me, and you can “wind up” at Leeds as you propose.

very truly yours | (signed) W.C.

P.S. | I will communicate with Mr Tindell at once.<sup>2</sup> If there is anything informal in the arrangement which I here propose, he will set it right for both of us.

---

1. George J. (1824–75: ODNB), actor-manager, who co-directed The Woman in White at the Olympic Theatre from 9 October 1871, taking the part of Count Fosco until he fell ill in January 1872. He was put in charge of one the provincial tours of the play.

2. See [1226] to Tindell of the same date.

[1226] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 17 APRIL 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/100). Published: BGLL, II, p. 339.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17th April 1872

Private

My dear Tindell,

The enclosed copy of a letter will tell you that my worries with Vining are not over yet.<sup>1</sup> After paying for the first week at Manchester the play has fallen off since. He proposes the most ridiculous alterations which, of course, I refuse to make. My one desire is to get rid of him. Is the plan I propose, the right one? If not, will you take it in hand? He talks of “winding up” (if I refuse to make the alterations) at the next town – Leeds. I want but one thing on my side, viz, to be free of all obligations to him before he winds up.

Yours ever | WC

If, by any extraordinary chance, the other company succeeds, I should of course (between ourselves) give them the choice of going to the towns which Vining declines to visit.<sup>2</sup> He may possibly try to stop this – when he finds I am determined to have done with him. Hence my proposal to destroy the agreements before he stops his performances.

The other letter to which reference is made in the copy was written to decline a first proposal to shorten the piece. I have no copy of it. It simply declined, and expressed my readiness to let him off. There will be no end to the worry with such a man as V. – unless I take him at his word, and release him.

Vining’s address is Theatre Royal Manchester till Saturday next

---

1. See the letter to Vining of the same date.

2. Wybert Reeve’s company – see [1209] to Tindell of 11 March.

[3157] TO MARY ANNE BENHAM,<sup>1</sup> 19 APRIL 1872

MS: Dunedin. Published: A&C6, p. 10.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th April 1872

My dear Mrs Benham,

With the greatest pleasure, I send to Syon Lodge today (by Parcels’ Delivery Company) a copy of “Poor Miss Finch” – presented to you in affectionate remembrance of my old friend.<sup>2</sup>

I am shortly about to leave London for a little while.<sup>3</sup> But I shall hope, on my return, to be able to avail myself of your kind invitation in company with Pigott.<sup>4</sup>

In the meantime, pray give my kind remembrances to your daughters,<sup>5</sup> and believe me

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Mary Anne Benham neé Shoppee (b. c. 1823). See [0718] to Mary Anne Benham, 2 January 1867, revised footnote p. 19 below.
  2. Edward and Mary Anne Benham lived at Syon Lodge, Isleworth, west of London. WC had visited them there (see [0718] to Mrs Benham, 2 January 1867, BGLL, II, pp. 57–58). Edward had died on 30 April 1871 aged 48 of small pox and fever (death certificate, Edward Benham, 30 April 1871). The first edition is inscribed “To Mrs Benham from Wilkie Collins 1872”. This letter is tipped into vol. I between the front pastedown and the front free endpaper (information from Anthony Tedeschi, Rare Book Librarian at Dunedin Public Libraries).
  3. If this reference is to a planned trip to Paris, then WC was too unwell with gout to go. See [1230] to William Tindell, 10 May 1872.
  4. Edward Pigott, a friend and sailing companion of WC and Benham – see [0368] to Charles Ward, 14 August 1860.
  5. The 1871 Census, taken a year earlier on 2 April 1871, records three daughters at Syon Lodge – Florence aged 21, Mabel aged 18, and Edith aged 9, together with two sons Edwin aged 20 and Charles aged 7 (RG10/1313/56/19).

[1227] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 20 APRIL 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, p. 340.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
20th April 1872

Dear Sirs,

Some little time since, you favoured me with a proposal that I should write a short story – or a set of short stories – in Harper’s Magazine. The terms offered, were, if I remember right, Five Guineas a page (printed page) of the Magazine – conceding to me the right of simultaneous periodical publication in England, and the copyright.

I find that my Christmas Story (“Miss or Mrs?”) is not long enough for separate republication here – and I am about to write another story (in one of our monthly magazines), as long – and possibly longer – than “Miss or Mrs”. I estimate the projected story as extending to, not less than four, or more than six, monthly parts. And I hope to be able to furnish the first monthly part for republication in July next – or, later, as may suit the convenience of the publishers.

Will you kindly send me a line to say whether it will be convenient to you to publish this story in your Magazine – on the terms which I have already stated? If it should be convenient, perhaps you will inform me, in that case, of the average numbers of pages of “Harpers Magazine” which the Editor could place at my disposal – of the month on which you would prefer to decide for the publication of the first part (whether in July next or later) – and of the number of weeks in advance at which it would be convenient to receive the proofs of each monthly part.<sup>1</sup>

I have to thank your kindness for regularly supplying me with the “Weekly” the “Bazaar”<sup>2</sup> and the “Magazine”. I am one of your thousands of “constant readers” – and I congratulate you on a success which is thoroughly well deserved.

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. Any advertisement of the Story should state expressly that it is a short story. I have refused several proposals to write a long story.

Messrs Harper & Brothers.

---

1. In event the ‘short story’ turned into WC’s next novel The New Magdalen, which appeared in nine parts in Harper’s New Monthly Magazine from October 1872 to June 1873.

2. Thus for Harper’s Bazar.

[1228] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 23 APRIL 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, p. 341.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
23rd April 1872

Dear Sirs,

In the letter which I addressed to you by last Saturday's mail, I forgot to mention that I propose to dramatise the story in England and in America, and that I may find it necessary (as a measure of self-protection) to produce the drama, – in both countries – simultaneously with the close of the periodical publication, or perhaps a short time before the close. I will write and consult my legal adviser in New York on the subject<sup>1</sup> – and will let you know the result. In the meantime, I think it only right to make my proposal to you complete by adding these few lines to my former letter.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me | Dear Sirs | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

-
1. Presumably William D. Booth of Wall Street – see [1024] to him of 20 September 1870.
  2. See [1227] to Harper & Brothers of 20 April 1872.

[3006] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 7 MAY 1872

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (February 2006), priced $180 with nine other autographs.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C2, p. 64.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | May 7th 1872

-
1. On a rectangular sheet the size of a visiting card; given the position of the date, this is likely to be an autograph for a collector rather than the excised ending of a letter.

[1229] TO GEORGE SMITH, 10 MAY 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 341.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th May 1872

My dear Mr Smith,

One line more about the Registration – as your time is valuable.

Personal attendance at the Custom House is not (as to my experience) necessary. I enclose a copy of my “Notice” to the Commissioners. It is followed by the usual printed form of Declaration copied on the notice. Declaration and Notice on the same sheet of paper. It may be easier for you to make the formal Declaration before any friend of yours who is a Magistrate than to go to the Custom House. For this reason, I send you the copy.<sup>1</sup>

Yours ever | WC

P.S. | I found a list of Longman's copyrights registered immediately before mine, when the printed document was sent to me. Bentley also is about to register.

-
1. See the letters to Thomas Satchell (2 September 1871–12 April 1872) on the new system of registering copyrights with the Customs authorities.

[1230] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 10 MAY 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/102). Published: B&C, II, pp. 352–353.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | 10th May 1872

My dear Tindell

Case. 6/8<sup>2</sup>

1. “Miss or Mrs” published Dec<sup>r</sup> 13th 1871 in “The Graphic” Newspaper.
2. Re-printed / – 13th June 1872 – / in book-form by Tauchnitz of Leipzig for Continental circulation only – but privately introduced into this Country, by purchasers returning from their travels.

3. Copyright, and sole right of republication conceded to me by the Proprietors of The Graphic.
4. No use made by me of these concessions, so far as England is concerned / – at the date of June 13th 1872./ Separate publication in book form put off here, until I can /write (and/ add/)/ another story to “Miss or Mrs” – and so make two volumes instead of one.
5. Does Tauchnitz’s Reprint, jeopardise my copyright? or does the prior publication here in the newspaper assert it sufficiently?
6. /If my copyright be not endangered,/ Do you see any other objections to Tauchnitz reprinting the ~~book~~ story in book-form at Leipzig, before I reprint in London?<sup>3</sup>

=

Vining gives up the Tour.<sup>4</sup> You will have the agreements to burn in a few days – the performances under his direction not having even produced money enough to pay for the drawing of the agreements!!! Pleasant – ~~is not~~ is’nt it?

Yours ever | WC

I have been a mass of gout – still ailing. Not able to go to Paris.<sup>5</sup>

-
1. WC uses printed paper, the address in black Gothic type centred.
  2. Another jocular reference to Tindell’s legal fees.
  3. Presumably Tindell saw no objection, since Tauchnitz did indeed publish Miss or Mrs? as volume 1233 of his Collection of British Authors in June 1872, while Miss or Mrs? and Other Stories in Outline was not published by Bentley in London until 17 January 1873, again as a single volume.
  4. See [1225] and [1226] to Vining and Tindell, respectively, both dated 17 April 1872.
  5. Postscript written vertically down the left margin.

[1231] TO JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, 13 MAY 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1485/10), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 342.

J.E. Millais Esq<sup>r</sup> RA | 7. Cromwell Place | South Kensington | S.W.
Wilkie Collins

-
1. Pale blue, pre-stamped, postmarked as dated.

[3358] TO [EVERETT MILLAIS],<sup>1</sup> 13 MAY 1872<sup>2</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C13, pp. 6-7.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
Monday May 13

My blessed boy,

Accepted for Wednesday next at 1/2 past 7 with the greatest pleasure.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Probably one of the sons of John Everett Millais. No other ‘blessed boy’ salutation or reference is found in WC’s letters or works. This letter bears the same date as the envelope [1231] to the father of 13 May 1872. The sheet is roughly torn from the bifold and could have been on the blank leaf of a letter to Millais sent in the envelope. Of Millais’s four sons the likely candidate is Everett as he was the only one born in May (30 May 1856) so the invitation could be for an early 16th birthday party.
  2. The dating is certain from the calendar and the headed paper – address centred in gothic type – and the watermark of ‘Turkey Mill | Kent’.

[1232] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 16 MAY 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 342.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16th May 1872

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your proposal. I am quite sure that it represents the utmost that the Magazine can offer to me, under the circumstances. I am sorry, however, to add that the terms are so far below those which I have been in the habit of receiving for the right of periodical publication, that it is not possible for me to accept them. The proposal, on my side, must therefore – to my sincere regret – be considered as withdrawn.<sup>1</sup>

In a few days, I may perhaps have another suggestion to make to you for the republication of “Miss or Mrs?” (my Christmas Story) which had not occurred to me when I had the pleasure of seeing you in New Burlington Street.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George Bentley Esqre

---

1. Bentley quickly responded with a rather higher offer – see [1235] to him of 18 May 1872.

2. The novella ‘Miss or Mrs?’, which originally appeared in the 1871 Christmas number of the Graphic. WC added two other stories, and Bentley published Miss or Mrs? and Other Stories in Outline in a single volume on 17 January 1873.

[1233] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 17 MAY 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1950).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 343.

Received at 145 Broadway, | 1.15 PM May 17 1872.

Harper Brothers | Publishers. n.y.

Begin in October.—<sup>2</sup>

Wilkie Collins | ninety Gloucester Place | London.

---

1. Cable message on the form of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

2. Referring to The New Magdalen in Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

[1234] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 18 MAY 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 343–344.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
London May 18th 1872

Dear Sirs,

I have received your kind letter of May the 2nd, agreeing to my terms for the publication of a short serial in your Magazine.<sup>1</sup>

Yesterday, I telegraphed to you, intimating my readiness to meet your views by deferring the publication of the first monthly part of the story until October next. In pursuance of this arrangement, I understand that the first instalment of the story must be despatched to you (either in proof or in Ms) early in July if possible – and certainly not by any later mail than the mail of Saturday the 27th of that month.

As to the length of each monthly part, I am to fill from 10 to 12 pages – printed pages of your Magazine. And as to the length of the whole story, it is to extend over five months – if I can complete it within those limits. If not, another month is to be allowed me.

As to the question of the illustrations, I will take care not to forget what your wishes are on that point. Some unexpected obstacles have arisen in the course of my negotiations here, which prevent me from writing definitely, as yet, on the subject of the periodical publication in England. As soon as these obstacles are removed, you shall hear whether the story is to be illustrated (in England) or not.<sup>2</sup>

Agreeing readily to all the other conditions contained in your letter, I find one stipulation which places me in a difficult position – the stipulation which provides for your publishing the story (both periodically and in book-form) in Canada.

I so well understand the difficulties which beset this question, and I am so sincerely sensible of the friendly concessions which you have already made to me in this matter, that I feel the greatest reluctance in asking you to re-consider the proposed arrangement, as it relates to Canada. The circumstances, unfortunately, leave me no other choice. I have publicly declared myself on the side of the Canadian publishers. In plainer words, I have publicly asserted the right of an English author to publish and sell his book in an English Colony – and to stop any other sale of other editions of his book as freely as he might stop that proceeding in the mother country. “Man and Wife” was the first work issued in Canada, periodically, and in book-form, under the new act of the local Legislature. “Poor Miss Finch” followed. And I stand committed to take the same course (so long as that course is open to me) with any works which I may still write.

If it is possible, under these circumstances to come to any compromise which may satisfy us on both sides, I shall be only too glad to do so. I will write to my Canadian publishers, and place the matter plainly before them. In the present case (the story being a short one) there are no pecuniary interests – in Canada – which are worth considering. It is merely a question, this time, of reconciling conflicting interests (if I can) without giving up my copyright in an English colony. We have plenty of time before us, and I sincerely hope we may be able to arrange the matter.<sup>3</sup>

Thanking you for the kind expression of your friendly sentiments towards me,

I remain | Dear Sirs, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. The New Magdalen.

2. In the event The New Magdalen was serialized in Britain without illustration in Bentley’s Temple Bar – see [1236] to George Bentley of 21 May.

3. See [1237] to Hunter, Rose of 21 May. The New Magdalen was serialized in the Canadian Illustrated News and published in volume form by the Canadian publishers.

[1235] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 18 MAY 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 344–345.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th May 1872

Private

My dear Sir,

After carefully “casting off” the Temple Bar page and comparing it with my Ms page (which never varies in length), I find that £2 – for each Temple Bar page would represent the average terms received by me for the periodical use of a new story. As you are, however, kindly willing to make an effort on your side, I am willing, on my side, to meet you half way, and to accept £1..10.. – a page (Temple Bar page) – for the periodical use only of my new story. I need hardly add that this arrangement is to be understood as a strictly secret one between us, if you accept it. If not, my proposal is to be “forgotten” as quickly as may be, and this note thrown into the fire.

Harper of New York has secured the American right of simultaneous publication in his Magazine. The first monthly part of the story is not to be published until October next. I have agreed to fill twelve pages (at the most) of Harpers Magazine in each monthly part – each page in that periodical being of rather more than double the length of the Temple Bar page (double columns, and – I think – Brevier type, or even smaller). This will make my average length with you – as nearly as I can now calculate – from 24 to 26 pages in each month. The whole length of the story to be not less than four or more than six monthly parts.<sup>1</sup>

All rights, except the right of periodical publication in Temple Bar, are reserved by the author. First offer for republication in book-form to be made to you. Such republication to take place six weeks at least, before the conclusion of the story in the magazine.<sup>2</sup>

This is, I think, all that need be said on my side. I have only to repeat, that the pecuniary arrangement which I propose, is for this occasion only, and (if it suits you) is to be considered – not so much a business transaction as a private and friendly transaction between us.

Please let me have a line to say how my offer strikes you, at your early convenience – and believe me

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George Bentley Esqre

---

1. Six months at 24 to 26 pages would mean between 144 to 156 pages and a payment of £216 to £234. WC was soon warning it would be longer (see [1256] to Bentley, 3 October 1872) and in fact the serial was half as long again at 225 pages running over 10 months from October 1872 to July 1873. For what WC was eventually paid, see [1344] to Bentley, 24 May 1873, n. 3.

2. Bentley eventually published the two-volume edition of the novel on 19 May 1873.

[1236] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 21 MAY 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 345–346.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 21st May 1872

My dear Sir,

Many thanks for your kind note. I am very glad indeed to hear that the arrangement I proposed will suit you. I will do my best to please the readers of “Temple Bar”.

I think if I embody the points contained in my last letter, in a letter of agreement and if you reply stating that you understand our arrangement as I do, it will be quite enough for our present purpose.

There is however one formal point still to be settled.

Your title-page bears the name of an American publishing firm in New York.<sup>1</sup> In a similar case (where Cassell’s Magazine was concerned) Messrs Cassell undertook – in deference to the interests of my American publishers – to withdraw the publication of their Magazine in America, during the appearance of my story in their columns here, if I requested them to do so in writing.<sup>2</sup> I had no occasion to make the request, as the circulation of their magazine in America was too small to stand in Messrs Harper’s way. If you see no objection to making the same concession, under similar circumstances, I can conclude matters with Messrs Harper, when I write by next Saturday’s Mail. The circulation of their Magazine is 1 30,000 a month(!) – and the only right I can sell them is the right of publishing simultaneously with Temple Bar in England.

One line to tell me that you see no objection to the arrangement – any time before Saturday next.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George Bentley Esqre

---

1. Willmer and Rogers, the New York publishers who distributed Temple Bar in the United States.

2. See [0900] to Harper & Brothers of 10 August 1869 – though the arrangement was in fact to delay rather than cancel the appearance of the magazine in America.

[1237] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 21 MAY 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 346–347.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

London | 21st May 1872

Dear Sirs,

I am about to write and publish a short story, during the present autumn, on the following conditions.

The story to consist of (1) not less than four or more than six monthly parts. (2) To be published, monthly, in Temple Bar Magazine (in England), and simultaneously in Harpers Magazine (New York). (3) The first monthly part to be published in October next.

The length of the story may be roughly reckoned as double the length of “Miss or Mrs?”<sup>1</sup>

=

In stating the terms, on their side, Messrs Harper have stipulated for the right of Canadian publication – both periodical and in book form. I have replied that I cannot concede this, in justice to my Canadian publishers and myself – but that if any compromise can be suggested which shall satisfy all parties, I shall not object to accept it [sic].

I have only to add – addressing yourselves – that the publication in book-form of the Canadian edition is at your disposal. Nothing will induce me to abandon my right of selling my book in an English colony, as long as I have the right. As to the terms in money I leave you to say what they had better be – judging by your experience of what you can offer without needless risk.

The one question which remains to be settled is the question of the periodical publication. I have engaged to give Mr Desbarats the first refusal of any new story of mine. But his Journals are both weekly journals – and the publication this time is a monthly publication.

Is it possible, under these circumstances, to concede the periodical publication to Harper – without injury to the cause which we advocate? I will consent to no arrangement with the United States which does injure the cause. But I hardly see how I am to deal this time with Mr Desbarats – or how I am to protect the serial publication in Canada – if our interests make it impossible to compromise the matter by granting the serial publication to Harper.

In this difficulty, I can only trust to your experience to guide me. Between our interests, Harpers interests, and Mr Desbarats [sic] interests, the problem looks a tough one to solve. Fortunately we have plenty of time before us – and I am sure I can trust to your kindness to excuse the trouble which this letter may give you.

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – I hope “Miss Finch” goes on pretty well.

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. In fact, The New Magdalen turned out at around 100,000 words, more than three times the length of the 31,000-word ‘Miss or Mrs?’.

[1238] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 28 MAY 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 347–349.

Private

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 28th May 1872

Dear Sirs,

It is decided that my forthcoming short story appears here in the “Temple Bar” Magazine.<sup>1</sup> This periodical is not illustrated. I confess (considering my recent experience of illustrations – always excepting those to “Miss or Mrs?” in the “Graphic”) that I am relieved to find myself working this time with no other interpreter than the Printer.

There is an American imprint on the title page of “Temple Bar”: –
“New York. Willmer & Rogers”

This, however, will no more stand in your way (as I imagine) than the American issue of Cassell’s Magazine. I have written to Mr George Bentley (publisher of Temple Bar and, I believe, Proprietor also) to request him to stop the publication in America (during the issue of my story) if you wish it. He has replied that he will be happy to do anything to facilitate my relations with you.<sup>2</sup>

I have written to my Canadian publishers “Messrs Hunter Rose & Co of Toronto”. But there has not been time yet to receive their answer.<sup>3</sup>

The dramatic version of the story shall not be produced, of course, too long in advance of the conclusion of the story in your Magazine. We will consult about the stage-production when the fit time comes.

If I put off the republication here till the periodical issue of this story is complete, I know of one large Librarian at least who will cut out the Magazine pages, bind them together, and send them out to his subscribers instead of the book. Both my publisher and I have lost by delaying the issue of "Poor Miss Finch". Messrs Smith and Son ("Railway Library") kept their subscribers waiting till Cassell & Co published the volume of their Magazine containing the periodical publication of "Poor Miss Finch". They (Smith & Son) then issued 400 copies of the Magazine volume, instead of 400 copies of the 3 volume book, to their subscribers. The subscribers submitted – and we are left with the end of our edition on hand. If I don't republish this new story at least six weeks in advance of the closing chapters in "Temple Bar", my Circulating Library Sale will be sacrificed. The stupid system of publishing in a dear form, what has already appeared periodically in a cheap form is – as I have already explained to you – at the bottom of this mischief. I cannot alter it – but changed it must be. Capital and courage are all that are wanted to break down the Library system, and substitute your system. A few of the English publishers have capital. None of them have courage. I believe an American will lead the way, if anybody does, in reforming the present system of supplying the English public with fiction. The market is immense – but nobody here seems to know how to get at it, except through "Mudie and Company" and "Smith & Son". Harper & Brothers are sorely needed in England!

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Harper & Brother

---

1. The New Magdalen.

2. See [1236] of 21 May and [1243] of 29 June 1872, both to George Bentley.

3. See [1237] of 21 May and [1246] of 13 July 1872, both to Hunter, Rose.

[1239] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 28 MAY 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 349.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
28th May 1872

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a Bill of Exchange (First) for Fifty pounds, on account of "Poor Miss Finch". I am sorry to hear that the sale does not, as yet, realise the expectations you had formed of it. If the sale of the book does not cover the sum guaranteed in six months pray consider the period of the guarantee as enlarged – say from six months to a year, if you like.

By this time, you will (I hope) have received a letter of mine, informing you that I contemplate writing a short story in a monthly periodical this autumn, and asking your advice as to the Canadian republication.<sup>1</sup> I forget whether I mentioned that the story is to appear here in the magazine called "Temple Bar"

As to the edition of "Man and Wife", it is needless to say that I entirely approve of the course you have kindly taken in promoting the sale. But as to the sale itself (5000 copies) and the royalty, I am afraid I must trouble you to refer to your books, in the matter of the remittance. I have looked through my bankers' book, from 1870 to the present time, and I can only find one sum of £80.- paid in to my credit. This remittance was in the shape of a Bill on Messrs Frankling & Evesham – paid July 15th 1870 – and sent to me, I think, by Baron von Tauchnitz, the Leipzig publisher. I keep no accounts – relying entirely on the Bankers to whom all remittances are at once sent. If you can kindly supply me with the date of the remittance of the royalty, and with the names of the bankers here on whom the Bill was drawn, I shall be able to institute inquiries, if there is any mistake. Except the £80, from Baron Tauchnitz, no such sum appears on the credit side of my account, from 1870 to the present time.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co.

---

1. See [1237] to Hunter, Rose, 21 May 1872.
2. The remittance had in fact been made – see [1242] to Hunter, Rose, 13 July 1872.

[1241] TO FLORENCE MARRYAT,<sup>1</sup> 15 JUNE 1872

MS: Yale (Marryat Papers, Uncat. MSS. 104/GENM).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 350, amended A&C2, p. 69.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th June 1872

Dear Madam,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter. I have engagements – not yet fulfilled – to write two stories for serial publication,<sup>3</sup> I have a play coming out in the autumn,<sup>4</sup> and I possess an inveterate enemy who constantly gets in the way of my work, and whose name is – Rheumatic Gout. Under this combination of obstacles, I have been obliged, this year, to refrain from accepting any proposals for Christmas work. I do not abandon the hope of being able to contribute to “London Society”, if I may trust to your kindness to ~~wa~~ let me wait for my opportunity. In the meantime, I sincerely regret that it is not possible for me to appear in the Christmas Number.<sup>5</sup>

With my best wishes for your success,

Believe me | Dear Madam

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Florence Marryat (1833–99: ODNB), youngest of the eleven children of the author Captain Frederick Marryat, and herself author of some ninety novels, often regarded as dangerously inflammatory and unsuitable for young ladies, as well as editor of London Society (1872–76). Marryat married T. Ross Church in 1854 at the age of sixteen, but was known professionally by her maiden name. In 1879 she and her first husband were divorced and, the same year, she was remarried to Colonel Francis Lean.

2. Pasted into an album of autograph letters and photographs; an L-shaped cut has been made in the lower half of the folding notepaper to facilitate attachment, but without loss of text. With grateful thanks to Beth Palmer, of Trinity College, Oxford, who located the letter at the Beinecke.

3. Apart from The New Magdalen, no other serial published at this time has been identified.

4. Possibly referring to The New Magdalen, although this did not open until 19 May 1873.

5. See [1361] to Florence Marryat of 17 July 1873.

[1240] TO CHARLES KENT, 18 JUNE 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 350 (dated 12 June 1872), amended A&C3, p. 66.

Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.
WC

-
1. The faint postmark reads ‘LONDON-W | 2 | JU 18 | 72’. Found with [1100] to Kent, 28 June 1871, Parrish.

[1242] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 18 JUNE 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/105). Published: B&C, II, p. 353.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | 18th June<sup>2</sup>

My dear Tindell,

Have you got the agreement with Miss Aytoun for my Stables? I have let them to another “Miss” – through Mr Binder.<sup>3</sup>

Mr B. offers to prepare the agreement for a guinea – but I think it safer (having a woman to deal with) to stick to your agreement. Can you get me two copies made – leaving blanks for the lady’s name and address, for Mr Binder to fill up?

I have looked vainly for the agreement among my papers.

Yours, drenched in perspiration, with gout in every toe, | WC

I have been in great trouble. My poor little eldest child has broken her leg.<sup>4</sup> All going on well now.

---

1. WC uses printed paper, the address in black Gothic type centred.
2. Dating from WC's gout and the stables saga.
3. Miss Aytoun must have finally vacated the stables – see [1200] to Tindell of 19 February 1872. The new tenant seems to have been a Miss Rushout – see [1292] to her of 17 January 1873.
4. Marian Dawson (b. 4 July 1869) was almost three, while the younger child Harriet Constance Dawson was one year old. They lived at 33 Bolsover Street with their mother Martha Rudd.

[1243] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 29 JUNE 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 351.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th June 1872

My dear Sir,

I enclose a letter from Messrs Harper, relating to the circulation in America of “Temple Bar” while my story is appearing in that periodical.<sup>1</sup>

The first monthly part of the story is ready for the printers. I am obliged to send it to America as early as I can, during the ensuing month – July – and to keep this advance until the work is completed. Will it be inconvenient to you to “set up” the monthly parts, so long in advance of publication? I ask the question – partly because I am accustomed to see my work in print while I am writing it; and partly for the convenience of sending printed proofs to America. But if setting up the story in advance occasions trouble at the printing office you have only to say so – and I will have the monthly parts copied in Mss

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Don't be alarmed at the length of the first part when you see it! I shall keep the succeeding parts within narrower limits. I am obliged to “grip” the public at starting.

I also enclose some titles for the story. Please don't let anyone see them but yourself, and return me the list with the title – or titles – which you prefer marked. WC<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The letter to Harper's has not been traced, but see [1236] to Bentley of 21 May 1872 on the point at issue.
2. Referring to the as yet undecided title for The New Magdalen. In the event WC accepted Bentley's preference – see [1244] to him of 3 July.

[1244] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 3 JULY 1872

MS: Columbia (Spec. MS Coll. J. H. Samuels). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 351–352.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd July 1872

My dear Sir,

Here is the copy for the First Monthly Part. I have no second copy – so the printers must take care of the Mss! I adopt your title – “The New Magdalen.”

When you advertise please be careful to describe the story as “a short serial story by WC”

If it is supposed to be as long a story as usual, I shall get into a scrape with some periodicals to which I have (conditionally) promised future work.<sup>1</sup> I shall be ready to begin in October. The proofs are to be sent – in duplicate, if you will be so kind – to this house.

I am in some difficulty between the serial claims of American publishers and Canadian publishers – in relation to the advance sheets.<sup>2</sup> But I shall have my own way in the end.

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. Referring principally to the London illustrated paper the Graphic, which carried WC's next novel, The Law and the Lady, from 26 September 1874 (see [1291] to Bentley, 17 January 1873). In the end The New Magdalen required ten monthly instalments rather than the anticipated four to six (see [1256] to Bentley of 3 October 1872), and thus completed its serial run in Temple Bar only in July 1873.

2. See, for example, [1234] to Harper's of 18 May and [1237] to Hunter, Rose of 21 May 1872.

[1245] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 3 JULY 1872

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 352.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd July 1872

My dear Mrs Frith,

I accept with the greatest pleasure your kind invitation for Tuesday the 16th at 7.30 precisely.

Pray give my love to Frith – and thank him for the invitation to the Academy soirée which he kindly sent to me for a friend of mine.<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Neither the friend nor the occasion have been identified, though this is presumably an event at the Royal Academy.

[3098] TO W. H. WILLS, 8 JULY 1872

MS: UCLA (Wills Papers 720/1). Published: A&C4, p. 20; Amended: A&C13, pp. 19.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

8th July 1872

My dear Wills

My best thanks for your kind letter. I heartily wish I could write Yes. But, since we met, my foot has been crippled by an attack of gout.<sup>1</sup> The worst is over – but the nerves of the foot are still so tender that I cannot keep it on the ground for more than half an hour at a time – and your hospitable dinner-table represents a forbidden luxury. I manage to get some fresh air by driving out and I think I shall soon be all right. If you will let me write again, and report myself, I hope to pay my visit to Sherrard's after a little delay.<sup>2</sup> I am refusing all engagements – and I can suit myself to your convenience in the matter of times.

In the meanwhile, pray give my best remembrances to Mrs Wills,

And believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC was accepting invitations as recently as 3 July so the attack must have happened shortly after that.

2. The house in Welwyn, Hertfordshire to which Wills retired in 1869. See CD to W.C. Macready, 18 October 1869, Pilgrim, XII, p. 424 n.5, and XII p. 725.

[1246] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 13 JULY 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 352–353.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London

13th July 1872

Dear Sirs,

I have been suffering from an attack of my old enemy, the gout – or I should sooner have thanked you for your letter and its enclosures.

I gladly accept both proposals for my new story – on the conditions stated viz: – that you give me a royalty of 3<sup>d</sup> per copy on all copies of the book sold, and that we publish (as before) under the ~~old~~ existing act of 1868<sup>1</sup> – also that Mr Desbarats pays $250 for the right of periodical publication, and that he does not interfere with the Canadian circulation of Harper's Magazine containing periodical instalments of my story.

Many thanks also for permitting me to see my letters of acknowledgment in the matter of "Man and Wife". I understand perfectly how the mistake arose on my side. I looked in my

Bankers' Book for an aggregate credit of £80 – not remembering that the sum was paid in two instalments of £60 and £20 each. These entries appear in the book.<sup>2</sup>

As to your new copyright act, we are furios about it here.<sup>3</sup> I have joined the Copyright Association in the efforts they are making to prevent the act from receiving the Royal signature.<sup>4</sup> We propose to amend the ~~old~~ existing Canadian Act under which you and I published “Man and Wife” – so as to make it a certain protection for all British copyrights in Canada. The mere fact that the new act coolly proposes under certain conditions to publish English books without the author's or the proprietor's consent at a tariff settled by itself, and equally applicable to the greatest ass and the greatest genius that literature can produce – is enough for me. It is a flat denial of the right of property in the production of a man's brains to publish that man's book without his leave, on any conditions and under any circumstances whatever. The existing act with the necessary alterations may, I am assured on the best authority be made to answer every purpose that we can desire.

I hope to send Mr Desbarats the first monthly part of the story in proof soon. It will appear in Temple Bar in October next.

Believe me | Dear Sirs | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I will also fill in the form of application, and send it by a later mail.

-
1. The Copyright Act of 1868 (31 Victoria c.54).
  2. Neither of the two letters mentioned is extant. The relevant entries in WC's bank account are presumably the £60 from 'Glyn & Co.' paid on 10 August 1870 and the £20 'Bill on Union Bank' paid on 23 December 1870 (Coutts: WC).
  3. Though the new Act referred to here (which was sponsored by the Canadian publishers and would have licensed them to reprint all British copyright works on payment of a fixed royalty of 12.5% to the copyright holder) was eventually approved by the Canadian Parliament, it failed to receive the Royal Assent, and thus lapsed – largely because of British fears that such reprints might then be exported to other colonial territories or the mother country itself. There was correspondence in the Times concerning the legislation at the time WC was writing.
  4. The Copyright Association, founded in 1872 – see Bonham-Carter, pp. 163–164.

[3384] TO MESSRS ASHER & CO,<sup>1</sup> 20 JULY 1872

MS: Lewis Collection (L2881). Published: A&C14, p. 14-15.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square
20th July 1872

Dear Sirs,

I regret that I was suffering from gout and unable to see you, when you were so good as to call on me.<sup>2</sup>

The /forthcoming/ work to which you refer is a short serial story, which was secured by Baron Tauchnitz at the time when he also purchased from me the right of republishing “Miss or Mrs?”<sup>3</sup> The two stories – the completed one, and the story now to be published – were sold together.<sup>4</sup>

Under these circumstances, I can only beg you to accept my best thanks for the proposal which you have been so kind as to make to me.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Asher & Co

-
1. Given the salutation and addressee, a representative rather than Adolph Asher himself. The Berlin publisher and bookseller launched his series of ‘Asher's Collection of English Authors – British and American’ in 1872 and tried to tempt well-established authors away from Tauchnitz for the Continental publication of their works. See: paperbackrevolution.wordpress.com/2016/02/25/middlemarching-away-the-story-of-ashers-collection. Here WC makes it clear he remains loyal to Tauchnitz. But ten years later there is a hint that for the right money he may have been willing to move – see [2074] to A. P. Watt, 30 October 1882.
  2. This attack of gout is first mentioned in [3098] to W. H. Wills, 8 July 1872.
  3. Asher is presumably trying to persuade WC to let him publish The New Magdalen on the Continent. The story was about to commence serialization in Temple Bar (October 1872–July 1873). In 1877, Asher did, however, include Collins's stories including ‘No Thoroughfare’ in Christmas Stories from “Household Words and “All the Year Round” by Charles Dickens, a Berlin reprint of the Chapman & Hall edition.

4. Tauchnitz published Miss or Mrs.? in July 1872 and The New Magdalen in June 1873 (Todd & Bowden, p. 225 and p. 236). WC received payments from ‘Baron Tauchnitz’ of £50 on 3 June 1872 and £100 on 16 May 1873, presumably for these two works (Coutts: WC).

[3040] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 20 JULY 1872

MS: Parrish (5/2/AM21741), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C3, p. 47.

Messrs Harper & Brothers | Franklin Square | New York | United States | America
Wilkie Collins

---

1. Postmarked: ‘LONDON-W | XA | JY 20 | 72’ and ‘NEW YORK | JUL | 30 | PAID ALL’. The letter itself presumably concerned the serialization of The New Magdalen in Harper’s New Monthly Magazine – see [1247] to Hunter, Rose of 27 July 1872.

[1247] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 27 JULY 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 354.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 27th July 1872

Dear Sirs,

I enclose the forms of application for Registry filled in, and executed. I also send the necessary synopsis of the story.

The First Monthly Part goes in proof to Mr Desbarats by today’s mail – with a letter from me accepting his terms.<sup>1</sup> It is needless to say that I gratefully avail myself of your kind offer to collect the purchase money for me when it becomes due.

I have written to Messrs Harper in the vein which you suggested. They will, I hope, be quite satisfied with the concession which Mr Desbarats is willing to make in permitting their magazine to circulate in Canada.

The “agitation” against your new “Act” is spreading. The secretary of the French Copyright Association has called on me, and has informed me that French men of letters will do all they can to oppose the act.<sup>2</sup> A deputation from the English association has waited on Lord Kimberley.<sup>3</sup> I was not well enough – being crippled at the time by gout – to go with them, and I have not yet heard how the matter ended.

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. WC’s The New Magdalen was serialized in Desbarats’s Canadian Illustrated News.

2. See [1248] to Theodore Michaelis of 29 July 1872.

3. John Wodehouse (1826–1902: ODNB), first earl of Kimberley, was then Secretary of State for the Colonies, in Gladstone’s first administration.

[1248] TO THÉODORE MICHAËLIS,<sup>1</sup> 29 JULY 1872

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:9). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 354–355.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
29th July 1872

My dear Sir,

I regret that I was so unfortunate as to miss seeing you and M. Melchissédéc when you were so kind as to call here.<sup>2</sup>

Pray accept my best thanks for the copy of “Rabagas” which you were so good as to send me<sup>3</sup> – and believe me

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Monsieur Th. Michaelis

P.S. A Deputation from the Copyright Association here has waited on Lord Kimberley to state the objection to the last “Act” of the Canadian Parliament.<sup>4</sup> I was, I am sorry to say, not well enough to be able to accompany them.

---

1. Later known for the ‘Chefs-d’oeuvre classiques de l’opéra français’ from his music publishing house at 45, Rue de Mauberge, Paris, Théodore Michaëlis (1831–87), was then a theatrical agent representing the interests both at home and abroad of Victorien Sardou, among other distinguished French authors.
2. Presumably Léon Melchissédec (1843–1925), French baritone then of the Opéra-Comique, the son-in-law of Michaëlis.
3. Victorien Sardou’s new five-act prose comedy, published by Michel Levy Frères in Paris in 1872. A three volume set of Sardou’s Comédies was found in WC’s library (Baker 2002, p. 145).
4. On the problems of copyright protection in Canada and the formation of the Copyright Association in 1872, see Bonham-Carter, pp. 162–164.

[1249] TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES,<sup>1</sup> 2 AUGUST 1872

MS: Texas (Times Recipients 2/114). Published: Times, 3 August 1872, p. 8b; BGLL, II, p. 355.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | August 2nd 1872

To The Editor of The Times

Sir, – In a review of Poor Miss Finch which appears in The Times of today’s date, an allusion occurs to “a turn in the plot” which is said to resemble an incident in the story of Lord Lytton’s Pilgrims of the Rhine.<sup>2</sup> Permit me to assure you that this resemblance (whatever it may be) is purely accidental. As it happens, the only one of Lord Lytton’s masterly and delightful works of fiction which I have not read is the Pilgrims of the Rhine.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Between 1841 and 1877 the editor was John Thaddeus Delane (1817–79: ODNB). This is the only letter from WC published in the Times.
2. The passage in question reads: ‘We do not attach much importance to the resemblance, whether it be accidental or no, between a turn in the plot of Poor Miss Finch and one in that of Lord Lytton’s Pilgrims of the Rhine. Plagiarism is scarcely a sin provided the plagiarist knows how to turn his stolen property to good account, and no one can say that Mr. Wilkie Collins has not built up a curious and, except in this one brick, original story’ (Times, 2 August 1872, p. 3e–f). In general the review is rather lukewarm, suggesting that the novel does not reach the level of ‘high art’ but merely offers ‘an ingenious and sensational plot, and a clever and painful use of some of the worst of the bodily ills which flesh is heir to’. Bulwer-Lytton’s The Pilgrims of the Rhine was first published in London by Saunders and Otley in 1834.

[3158] TO G. MILNER GIBSON,<sup>1</sup> 5 AUGUST 1872

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C6, p. 11 (undated).

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
5th August 1872

Dear Sir,

I comply with your request with great pleasure.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

G. Milner Gibson Esqre

---

1. Probably George Milner Gibson, thirteen-year-old son of politician and wealthy landowner Thomas Milner Gibson (1806–1884) and his wife Susannah. George G. Milner Gibson was born in 1858, and in 1871 was living with his parents at 5 Hyde Park Place, Marylebone, London (Census RG10/165/16/24).

[1250] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 5 AUGUST 1872

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 356.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 5th Augt 1872

My dear Palgrave Simpson

Are you by any chance still in town? If Yes – I have a question to trouble you with.

Herr Laube – dramatist and theatrical manager at Vienna – is about to open a new theatre (in Vienna),<sup>1</sup> and is very anxious to negotiate with the proprietor of the Drama adapted from Le Juif Polonais and played at the Lyceum (“the Bells”),<sup>2</sup> with a view to producing a German translation.

Is this adaptation “on the books” of the Society?<sup>3</sup> and ought he to apply to you for terms? Or, if not, what had he better do?

If you can answer these questions without trouble, you will oblige yours ever

Wilkie Collins

My dear friend the Gout keeps me in England – within easy reach of my doctor

---

1. Heinrich Rudolf Constanz Laube (1806–84), German novelist, playwright and theatre director.

2. Leopold Lewis’s dramatization of the Erckmann-Chatrian novel Le Juif Polonais was produced at the Lyceum in November 1871 with Henry Irving in the leading role.

3. The Dramatic Authors’ Society, of which Simpson was the Secretary.

[1251] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 15 AUGUST 1872

MS: Hanes.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, pp. 356–358.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th Augt 1872

Oh Christ, now the gout is gone, here comes the rheumatism, my best of Freds! It twists my left arm and it ties my back up in knots. Shall I go to Kissengen?<sup>2</sup> I would, but for the long railway journey. I cannot endure it – I should never get there. Let me take instead three pounds of powdered alum – dissolve it in my bath – and lie and soak in something which feels like liquid velvet. It is as good as a German Bath – without the German doctor. I get out with an untied back and a straight left arm (for the time being) – I eat a grouse, and I drink a bottle of Schartzhofberger. Just like Germany, without the trouble of going there, and the horrid necessity of speaking the language, or of communicating in serious pantomimes with the people about me. No! I must stay in England, and drink your health, and be content with writing to you. Besides I am too hard at work to have time for travelling. The story begins in October<sup>3</sup> – and the principle [sic] female character this time is a reclaimed woman from the streets – a glorious creature who requires constant attentions. She is matched by a remarkable clergyman, who declines entirely to run in the ordinary clerical grooves, and who gives me nearly as much trouble as my beautiful reclaimed woman. I may get as far as Ramsgate – but no farther, before my dramatic “Man and Wife” comes out at Bancroft’s Theatre in October next. I should like to be with you – though nothing would induce me to drink the waters – but what I should like is unhappily, this time, just what I cannot do.

Talking of theatres, reminds me of Laube and the “Bells”. Laube must be mad. The Lyceum version of the Juif Polonais is a bald and bad translation – with one departure from the original, not at all in good taste. The lowest German “hack-writer” would make a better play. However, Laube the Lunatic shall have his way. Let him write to Mr Bateman, Lyceum Theatre, London, and ask on what terms he can have the piece. I wrote to the Secretary of the Dramatic Authors’ Society, and found that “The Bells” was not on the books of the Society.<sup>4</sup> Otherwise, I could have sent you the terms. I cannot write myself to Mr Bateman – for reasons of my own which I won’t bore you by mentioning. Let the managers communicate with each other, and settle the matter between themselves. If Mr Bateman is not himself the proprietor of the piece, he will know who the proprietor is. The Secretary to the Dramatic Authors’ Society does not know and cannot discover. But he also says write to Mr Bateman.

Charley is not at all well. He has definitely abandoned the new house. He called here yesterday, and showed me a horrible sore on his leg, and a red swelling (supposed to be gout) on his ankle. He was very gloomy about himself and about human destiny generally. I told him that I got great comfort out of the “Gnostic” Theory – developed by a Christian sect in the 2nd or 3rd century. This trumpery little planet (with all the creatures on it) is the production – not of God – but of a deputy God, an inferior Creator who asked leave of the Great Creator to try his hand at making a world. He made a damned mess of it. He shrieked, at starting, with Chaos on his hands, for Light. See the Bible. “Let there be light!” is the feeble howl of the deputy-Creator. The great Creator – who made the Sun, Jupiter, and the other successes of the universe – gave him light. He instantly got into worse scrapes. He made men and women, and gout and rheumatism, and Poverty and Hunger. Here and there, he had a success. He made the Padrona. Also Iron for the use of Naylor Benzon & Co. One of his greatest triumphs was F. Lehmann’s Liver, which never gets out of order. He is understood to be conceited about that. But, on the whole, he has made a mess of it – and it is decided that he is not to be allowed to try again. Charley is coming to dine with me tomorrow – and I hope to find that the Gnostic theory has consoled him.

Holman Hunt has arrived from Jerusalem – the same sweet fellow as ever, and without a grey hair on him. Fechter has gone back to New York. He departed with his cook and her second husband, and a greyhound and a terrier – and I can tell you the people stared at the station when we fell into each other’s arms and kissed at parting. He is a great loss here – where we all love him. He and Hunt are both essentially loveable men.

The child is about again on her legs – Beard having made an excellent job of the mended broken limb.<sup>5</sup> Her mother is going to take her to the seaside. I don’t quite like exchanging the perambulator (as you kindly suggested), because of the associations with it. It recalls kindness that I like to think of – and it holds the other baby (at the other end)<sup>6</sup> – and is followed by troops of frowsy children in the park, shouting with joy “Oh lor’ here is a new preambulator – aint it beautiful, Betsey-Jane?”

They say London is empty but I don’t see much change. I dined at the Athenaeum (the old one) yesterday, and found the tables well occupied. Nothing is going on – we stagnate contentedly. I have only heard one moderately good story, of a Yankee at the Boston Musical Jubilee who was present at a performance of Mozart’s twelfth Mass – and was asked what he thought of it. He said “Waal, sir!, I do think Mozart’s twelfth Massachusetts is a pretty compliment to My Country – but it is a trifle too long.” With this, I bid you heartily farewell.

Yours ever affly | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | Write and tell me when you are on your way back – and give my best love to the Padrona in your next letter.

Frederick Lehmann Esqr

-
1. There is a pencil note on the reverse of the final sheet: ‘Wilkie Collins to Frederick Lehmann | FL sent it to Amelia and Emil on Octr 14th 1872 | See letter of that date from F. to Amelia’.
  2. Bad Kissengen, Bayern, Germany, where Lehmann was staying.
  3. The New Magdalen.
  4. On Laube and the play, see [1250] to John Palgrave Simpson of 5 August 1872.
  5. WC’s oldest child, the three-year-old Marian Dawson.
  6. WC’s youngest daughter, the sixteen-month-old Harriet Constance Dawson.

[1252] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 24 SEPTEMBER 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 359.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate
~~90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square, W.~~ | 24th Sept. 1872

My dear Sir,

I have got to this place, and I am profiting already by the change of air. My present plan is to remain here for three weeks or a month to come.

I should like to see the proofs of the 6/- Edition of “Poor Miss Finch”. But, if you propose publishing shortly, I am afraid I must trust to other eyes to correct mistakes. I am, as yet, only able to use my sight for a few hours during each day. If you will kindly let me hear when the proofs must be returned for press, I shall be able to say definitely whether I can hope to be sufficiently recovered to look them over or not.

Perhaps you will also let me know for what term you would wish the sole right of selling the 6/- edition to be reserved to you. I am anxious so to arrange the after-time at which the two-shilling edition ([match]ing with the uniform edition of my works published by Smith & Elder) shall be issued by that form, as to leave you every facility for obtaining a fair return for your outlay – as well as a fair compensation for any loss attributable to the insufficient sale of the three volume edition.<sup>1</sup> We can, at the same time perhaps, reserve the choice to me (or to Smith & Elder) of purchasing the stereo-plates at a valuation, when the sale shows symptoms of falling off in your six shilling form – or when the book has sufficiently remunerated you to allow of the issue of the cheaper edition.

Believe me, my dear Sir | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I entirely approve of your judicious reply to the publisher of “The Modern Magdalene”<sup>2</sup>
George Bentley Esqre

---

1. See [1219] to Bentley of 22 March 1872.

2. Perhaps a short story or serial publication, as we have been unable to locate a book of this title in any of the likely catalogues or databases.

[1253] TO GEORGE SMITH, 24 SEPTEMBER 1872

MS: Berg. Extract: Griest, p. 53. Published: B&C, II, pp. 353–354.

14 Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate<sup>1</sup>

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | September 24th 1872

Private<sup>2</sup>

My dear Smith,

Here I am – Getting better in the brisk sea air (though it is raining hard today).

I can use my good eye for a few hours now – and I hasten at once to write to you about “Poor Miss Finch”.

The present ideotic system of publication in 3 Vols (there is no other word for it) has left me no honourable alternative but to place the first one volume edition in the hands of the publisher of the three volume edition of “Miss Finch” – Mr George Bentley [del].

Mr Bentley purchased of me the right of issuing an edition of the book – a large one, in these wretched times – relying of course on the Libraries to take his issue of the ~~book~~ story, in place of Cassell’s issue in the shape of the volume of their Magazine in which the story appeared periodically. Mudie stood by us. But the Railway Circulating Library kept their subscribers waiting until Cassell’s /miscellaneous/ Volume came out – and then bought four hundred copies of it, and served my story out to their customers in that form. The subscribers submitted – and the result is that Mr Bentley has not made a halfpenny by his bargain. [del] Four hundred copies /more sold/ [del] /of/ the book would have /nearly/ exhausted the edition.

They are now on hand, and Mr Bentley refuses to let me return to him any of the purchase money. Under these circumstances, I felt bound to offer him the chance of making something out of the next edition – reserving for our uniform series, the right of issuing the two shilling Edition, after allowing Mr Bentley a term for the sale of the 6/- Edition in one volume which he now proposes to publish.<sup>3</sup> In this way, the 2/ “Miss Finch” will I hope follow the 2/ “Moonstone” and “Man and Wife”. I was very sorry to break our series even for a time only and in one form only – but I felt that something was due (after what had happened) from me to Mr Bentley.

This explanation is of course for your eye only. I hope you will feel as I do in the matter.

Commercially, it is of course impossible to blame the Railway Library Company. They buy in the cheapest market. The public /(of Subscribers)/ has no remedy and I have no remedy.

Excuse this long letter. I wanted to make my position quite plain to you.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

George Smith Esqre

---

1. The true location from which WC directs his letter is written to the right of the centred Gothic printed address which is not erased.
2. Written above and to the left of the printed address.
3. See [1219], [1252], and [1255] to George Bentley of 22 March, 24 and 30 September 1872, respectively.

[1254] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 27 SEPTEMBER 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/107). Published: B&C, II, pp. 354–355.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | Sept 27th<sup>1</sup>

My dear Tindell,

At last, I send you my new tenant's agreement for the Stables<sup>2</sup> – to be stamped as you suggest.

I have been suffering the tortures of the damned with another attack of gout in the eye. A week here has done wonders for me – I can use my pen again as you see.

I shall stay here some weeks more to get strong again. How are you? Is your holiday over? or is there a chance of seeing you at Ramsgate? I am comfortably established here with my womankind

Send me a line | Yours ever | WC

---

1. Dating from the stay at Ramsgate and the stables saga.
2. See [1242] to Tindell of 18 June 1872.

[1255] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 30 SEPTEMBER 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 360.

14 Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | Monday September 30th 1872

My dear Sir,

I accept your kind proposal with the greatest pleasure. When the deficiency in the three volume edition of "Poor Miss Finch" is paid (by the sale of the one volume edition at 6/-)<sup>1</sup> let us divide the further profits realised by the sale of the 6/ edition – and let this arrangement remain in force for three years from the date of publication of the 6/- edition.

I believe you are quite right in suggesting that I should run my novels longer at the 6/- price. But the mischief was done, sometime since by Mr Low's premature cheap issue of my books.<sup>2</sup> I am afraid – even "The Woman in White", now that it is to be had at 2/-, would not sell at a higher price.

If you will have the proofs of the 6/ edition carefully read, I shall be obliged if you will afterwards let me see them before going to press – in the understanding that I return them corrected for press in three days time. I am steadily improving – and I should like to look "Miss Finch" over – with a parent's eye – before she passes permanently into stereotype form.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

---

1. On the weak sales of the first edition of the novel, see [1201] of 20 February and [1219] of 22 March 1872, both to Bentley.
2. In addition to the first editions of The Woman in White (1860), No Name (1862) and My Miscellanies (1863), from 1861 Sampson Low had published 'The Romances and Novels of Wilkie Collins' in a 'Cheap and Uniform Edition' eventually comprising seven titles. These copyrights were all taken over by Smith, Elder in 1865.

3. As a rule publishers printed all single-volume issues of popular novels, regardless of the quality of the paper, covers and binding, from the same type, which was thus preserved in the form of stereotype plates.

[1256] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 3 OCTOBER 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 361.

14 Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | Oct: 3rd 1872

My dear Sir,

Many thanks for your note, on the subject of the stereo plates. I will keep it by me for the benefit of the publisher of the 2/- Edition.<sup>1</sup>

I was about to propose to you that we should publish “The New Magdalen” and “Miss or Mrs”, as I published “Man and Wife” with Mr Ellis, on the terms of a ten percent commission to the publishers.<sup>2</sup> The only difficulty I feel is about the length of “The New Magdalen”. I do not see a chance of my being able to finish the story within the limits which I proposed – namely not less than four or more than six numbers. I am now at work on the fourth monthly number, and the end of it will not see me more than half way through the story. Without muddling it up, and spoiling it, I cannot end it, I fear, in less than eight numbers. I may try for a wind-up in seven numbers – but I doubt my success. How this will suit your convenience it remains for you to say. I regret having unintentionally misled you as well as myself – but these accidents will happen sometimes. Of course, in a pecuniary sense (having regard to the special terms granted to me) I understand that I am bound by my agreement to finish in six numbers at most.<sup>3</sup>

Will you kindly tell me what you think about this?

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. Please pay in the cheque – at your convenience – (as well as any future cheques) to my account at my banker’s – Messrs Coutts & Co 59. Strand<sup>4</sup>

---

1. The note has not been traced and its import remains unclear.

2. F. S. Ellis, the London publisher and antiquarian bookseller who had published Man and Wife in 1870 on a commission basis.

3. The New Magdalen in fact ran to ten numbers (October 1872 to July 1873) in Temple Bar.

4. Presumably payment for the October instalment of The New Magdalen (chs 1–5, Temple Bar, pp. 289–317). At £1-10s per page, the cheque would have been for around £43-10s, but in fact the credit ‘of Messrs Bentley’ on 8 October was for £100. Another for that amount was paid in on 24 May 1873.

[1257] TO F. C. BEARD, 21 OCTOBER 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 362.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | October 21st

My dear Frank,

Report: – | Favourable in spite of three days of muggy blight, and debilitating heat. Eye going on well. Long walk and warm bath Friday. Charley came on Friday last – and returned again today to town. Tindell appeared “promiscuously” yesterday for an hour. A lovely little steam-launch yacht is in the harbour – the admiration of nautical mankind. The Engineer is bigger than the funnel, and can only just squeeze himself into the Engine Room. No more news.

We return on Friday next. Is there no chance of your making a holiday, between this and then? I dare not ask you – your account of your railway travelling made my blood run cold – I shudder at the idea of adding another journey. You know how welcome you will be. If it is not possible, we meet (let us hope) on Friday.

Yours afftly | WC

Love from the women

---

1. Directed to ‘F. Carr Beard Esqre | 44. Welbeck Street | Cavendish Square | London | W.’, postmarked ‘RAMSGATE

[1258] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 24 OCTOBER 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 362.

14 Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 24th Oct: 1872

My dear Sir,

A line to say that I leave this place (much the better for my stay in it) tomorrow (Friday). After that date, my address is at 90 Gloucester Place as usual.

Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqr

[1259] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 29 OCTOBER 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 362–363.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th Oct: 1872

My dear Sir,

I am glad to hear that the opening of my New Magdalen has hit the mark. The strongest “situations” in the story are still to come. (Many thanks for the November Temple Bar)<sup>1</sup>

Eight monthly parts will make a two volume novel (as I calculate). I doubt whether this story will stretch to three volumes. But we can make three volumes by adding “Miss or Mrs?” The question with me is whether this is advisable. I am inclined to think “The New Magdalen” will run better alone – especially as “Miss or Mrs?” is nothing like equal to it (in my opinion).

I have two short Christmas Stories (written for “All The Year Round” years since) which have not yet been republished. Add these to “Miss or Mrs?” – and they would make one volume. Query – Shall we issue this Volume at once – and come out with The New Magdalen (alone) in two vols next spring? Or shall we make three vols with “Miss or Mrs?” as a make-weight? As I have said, I think “Magdalen” will do best by herself.<sup>2</sup>

Will you kindly consider this, when you have a few spare minutes? and let me hear what you think?

Yours truly | WC

“Miss or Mrs?” was the last Christmas Number of The Graphic. Sale 200,000 copies. Tauchnitz has reprinted it. I have the volume if you would like to look at it.<sup>3</sup>

If you are at New Burlington Street between 4 and 5 any afternoon this week, you have only to mention the day – and I will call

---

1. Bentley sends the magazine issue featuring the second instalment and reports on the response to the first.

2. WC’s preference prevailed. The New Magdalen was published by itself in two volumes by Bentley on 19 May 1873. Miss or Mrs? and Other Stories in Outline was published in one volume by Bentley on 17 January 1873. It included ‘Blow Up With The Brig!’ and ‘The Fatal Cradle’, which originally appeared as part of the Christmas numbers of All The Year Round for 1859 (‘The Haunted House’) and 1861 (‘Tom Tiddler’s Ground’) respectively.

3. Published as vol. 1233 with wrappers dated June 1872, and advertised on 11 July 1872 (Todd & Bowden, p. 225).

[1260] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 1 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1950).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 355–356.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London | November 1st 1872

Dear Sirs,

In sending you the /Duplicate of the/ Fourth Monthly Part of “The New Magdalen” I must also send you – what may, or may not, prove to be a welcome piece of news. I find that I cannot possibly finish the Story, so as to do it any sort of justice, in Six Monthly Parts. With severe compression I hope and believe I can complete it in Eight monthly Parts, (8). Two Parts you have already published in your old volume. Six more Parts (as I calculate) will just run to the end of your new volume.

Here, the [~~] first /chapters/ parts of the story have<sup>2</sup> produced such a strongly favourable impression that the Proprietor of “Temple Bar” is not only willing, but glad, to widen my limits. But I cannot tell what the reception of my work has been, so far, in the United States. Your present political excitement is unfavourable to literature – and the story may (commercially-speaking) not be worth lengthening on the present terms.<sup>3</sup> In this event, I hasten to say that I am quite ready to consider myself – as to terms – bound by my ~~pre~~ undertaking to occupy no more than six monthly parts. As to the other question of space I regret that I should have unintentionally misled you, as well as myself. But, enclosed<sup>4</sup> with this, you have the Fourth Monthly Part, and I am now barely half way through the story. I cannot spoil it, and I cannot finish it (without spoiling it) in two more monthly parts. There is the case, frankly stated. I heartily wish [~~] I could have been more accurate in my estimate. But (alas!) a work of fiction is not a work of machinery.~~~~

Believe me Dear Sirs | Always Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers.

-
1. Letter endorsed on the empty back page by a member of staff at Harpers: ‘Wilkie Collins | Nov. 1/72’.
  2. Here WC overlooks the second page of the folding notepaper, and writes in portrait format on the third, beginning with a ‘2’ under which he places a half moon.
  3. Referring to the presidential election of 1872, in which the Republican incumbent Ulysses S. Grant of Illinois defeated the Democratic challenger Horace Greeley of New York.
  4. Here WC turns the sheet around and begins to write in landscape format on the open second page, beginning with a ‘3’ under which he places a curved line.

[1261] TO GEORGE SMITH, 1 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 364.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | 1st November 1872

My dear Smith,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £40 – being this author’s royalty on a new issue of 4000 copies of “The Woman in White”.<sup>1</sup>

I am indeed very glad to find that my books sell so steadily – without any “puffing” to force them on the public attention. “The Woman in White” sale, in particular, shows such good signs of vitality, that I cannot help believing there might be a chance for an issue of that book in a new periodical form, with some really good illustrations.<sup>2</sup>

“Man and Wife” will make its appearance, in a dramatic form, at The Prince of Wales’s Theatre in January next.<sup>3</sup> This will I hope give a “lift” to our cheap Edition.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George Smith, Esqre.

-
1. Credited on 1 November (Coutts: WC).
  2. WC here reverts to an idea he has raised before and on more than one occasion – see [0720] to HC, 6 January 1867 and [1138] to George Smith, 17 October 1871.
  3. The production by the Bancrofts in fact opened on 22 February 1873.

[1262] TO SOTHERAN & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 1 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 364.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 1st November 1872

Dear Sirs,

I beg to inform you that my Subscription to “The Dramatists of the Reformation” will not extend beyond the first issue, advertised to consist of “six Volumes”

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs H. Sotheran & Co

---

1. Booksellers in Sackville Street, London. WC presumably refers to Dramatists of the Restoration, eds William Logan and James Maidment, which eventually ran to 14 vols, 1872–1879.

[1263] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 2 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 365.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London
November 2nd 1872

Dear Sirs,

In sending you the Fourth Monthly Part of “The New Magdalen”,<sup>1</sup> it may be well to inform you that I find myself obliged to extend the length of the story to eight Monthly Parts. The original calculation was six. This will make a stouter and better-looking book when we republish.

I have informed Mr Desbarats of the change in the length of the story.

The two monthly parts already published in “Temple Bar” have produced a very strong impression here.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

---

1. See also [1278] to Hunter, Rose of 10 December 1872, which suggests that WC mailed the fifth monthly part then.

[1264] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 4 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, II, p. 365.

90 Gloucester Place | 4th Nov<sup>r</sup>

My dear Sir,

Incessant interruptions have prevented me from calling in New Burlington St. I hope to send to you – or to bring to you – tomorrow afternoon, the Tauchnitz edition of “Miss or Mrs?” and the two other stories corrected.<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. ‘Blow Up With The Brig!’ and ‘The Fatal Cradle’ – see [1259] to Bentley of 29 October 1872.

[1265] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 4 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 186/57). Published: BGLL, II, p. 365.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | 4th Novr 1872

Dear Mrs Frith,

I have just recovered from an attack of gout, and I am refusing to dine out generally – but you and Frith are exceptions to my rule, and I accept with the greatest pleasure your kind invitation for Friday next at ½ past 7, sharp.

With love to Frith, | Yours ever Wilkie Collins

[1266] TO BERNARD W. J. BRYANT,<sup>1</sup> 11 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 211; BGLL, II, p. 366.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
11th November 1872

Dear Sir,

Pressure of occupations has allowed me no earlier opportunity of thanking you for your letter than this.

Personally, I cannot profit by your proposal – having a copyist already in my employment, and not requiring more assistance from an amanuensis than one person can easily give.<sup>2</sup>

I will keep your letter by me, and if I can find an opportunity of forwarding your views I will not fail to let you know.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Bernard W J Bryant Esqre

---

1. Otherwise unidentified copyist requesting employment.

2. Carrie Graves was by now acting for WC as both copyist and (when necessary) amanuensis.

[1267] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 11 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/108). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 366–367.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 11th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1872

My dear Tindell,

Please look over my “proposal”. If it is properly filled in, close the envelope, and let it be most carefully and particularly posted. It is a very important document.

I am going to publish with Bentley, on commission.<sup>1</sup> He takes ten per cent as Ellis did – and he manages printing paper [dues]. The books I propose to publish with him are:

“Miss or Mrs?” and two short stories called respectively “Blow Up With The Brig” and “The Fatal Cradle”. In one Volume

=

Also “The New Magdalen” (when completed) in Two Volumes

=

N.B. “Miss or Mrs?” &c &c to appear first.<sup>2</sup>

I think you have the Ellis Agreement.<sup>3</sup> With that as a model can you not cook me a nice cheap agreement including both books?

A line of answer please, sir, addressed to yours | WC

Mind! I give you a turtle dinner if the L.L.A. receives me. I don’t quite like people who use such a phrase as “intimate acquaintances.” An “acquaintance” surely means somebody you are not intimate with?<sup>4</sup>

---

1. See [1259] to George Bentley of 29 October 1872.

2. Miss or Mrs? and Other Stories in Outline appeared on 17 January 1873, The New Magdalen: A Novel on 17 May 1873, both from Bentley.

3. For the publication on commission by F. S. Ellis of Man and Wife in 1870.

4. We are unable to elucidate the references in WC’s postscript, though ‘the L.L.A.’ might be a Literary Association.

[1268] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 16 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 367.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16th Nov 1872

My dear Sir,

I am having a brief agreement drawn out for the publication on commission of “Miss or Mrs?” &c &c and “The New Magdalen” (when completed).

As to “Miss or Mrs?” and the two short stories, an idea has struck me. Would it be worth our while to make a Circulating Library Volume of it first – printing (say) a thousand copies only. Would Mudie and the rest relieve us of such an edition? Or would they buy the Graphic Christmas Number for a shilling?<sup>1</sup>

I don't know whether the profits would be enough to make the speculation worth trying. Neither do I feel sure that there is a Circulating library public left for me, after the large sale of the story as a Christmas number. Will your experience kindly decide?

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

If this experiment is tried, I suppose we ought to "catch" the Christmas season.

---

1. The 1871 Christmas number of the Graphic would have been exhausted long before this time and its large format would hardly have appealed to the circulating libraries. The work in question did in fact appear in the expensive library format – see the publication agreement dated 7 December 1872, now held at the BL (Add. 46618, ff. 272–273). This covered publication of both Miss or Mrs? and Other Stories in Outline and The New Magdalen, and, after the deduction of costs, gave 10% of all proceeds to Bentley and the remainder to the author. See at BGLL, IV, Appendix B, pp. 396–397.

[1269] TO JOHN FORSTER, 16 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12, formerly laid in The New Magdalen (1872), I). Published: Parrish & Miller, pp. 89–90; Robinson 1951, p. 257; B&C, II, p. 356.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>1</sup> | 16th Novr 1872

My dear Forster

For three days past I have been trying – and vainly trying – to get to Palace Gate House, and to thank you as heartily (as I thank you now) for the new volume of the Life.<sup>2</sup> I am devouring you at night (the only time when I have any "leisure hours" at my disposal) – and I /am/ more interested than any words of mine can tell in your admirable narrative – to my mind, the most masterly biographical story you have ever told. More of this when I do contrive to see you. In the meantime, I congratulate you with all my heart.

Ramsgate cured me. I was there five weeks – and felt better and better every day.

How are you? I have heard a report (which I hope and trust is as false as most reports) that you are suffering again. Pray send me a line to say what the truth is, and whether you are settled in London for the present.

I know you will be glad to hear that my story ("The New Magdalen") is, so far, a great success. Will you wait till it is done? Or shall I send you the proofs, when the number I am now writing is in type – say in a week's time?

Pray give my kindest regards to Mrs Forster and believe me

ever affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper.

2. The middle volume of Forster's Life of Charles Dickens, covering the years 1842–1852, was published by Chapman and Hall in early November 1872. Also dated 1872, the first had in fact appeared in early December 1871, while the last did not appear until February 1874. Each volume was extensively reviewed in the Times shortly after publication, with the notice of the second volume (appearing in two parts on Monday, November 18, p. 6, and Thursday, November 28, p. 6) concluding that 'the good sense and sound judgment of Mr. Forster were always ready at his friend's command, and that Charles Dickens could not have been the man he was had it not been for him.'

[1270] TO EMANUEL OSCAR MENAHEM DEUTSCH,<sup>1</sup> 20 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: BL (Add. 70949, ff. 376–377; wrongly dated 1892 in BL index). Published: B&C, II, pp. 356–357.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.<sup>2</sup> | 20th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1872

My dear Deutsch,

Here is a petition, /from a bewildered literary brother/. My poor father paid (I think) £90 a year for my education. I learnt Latin & Greek – and nothing else, because nothing else was taught, /in my time./ To this day, I don't know my English Grammar – and, what I lament much more, I don't know German.

A German lady (personally a stranger to me) has resolved to translate my next book. She has found the publisher, and she sends me a specimen of her abilities – and I can't read a word of it!

Will you kindly look it over, when you have ten minutes to spare – and tell me if it is [del] fairly good work? The lady has translated /as her specimen/ the first two or three chapters of “Poor Miss Finch”. I will send you the English with the German – if you will do me this kindness, and if you will tell me where to direct to you, /at your private address?/<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I ought to add that I have decided on no longer employing the German translator who has hitherto taken my books in hand. So if this lady can only do fairly well, it will be a relief to me to settle the matter at once.<sup>4</sup> /Don't trouble to read more than two or three pages./

---

1. Emanuel Oscar Menahem Deutsch (1829–1873: ODNB), distinguished Rabbinic and Talmudic scholar, a native of Germany who had entered the library of the British Museum as a first-class assistant in 1855. However, by this time Deutsch was seriously ill with stomach cancer and hardly capable of office work; in a hopeless last effort to regain his health, towards the end of 1872 he set out for Egypt where in died on 12 May 1873.

2. Centred, black Gothic type.

3. From early 1871 Deutsch had resided at 16, Welbeck Street in the care of the Reverend Hugh Reginald Haweis, perpetual curate of St James, Marylebone, and his wife Mary; see H.R. Haweis, ‘Emanuel Deutsch: A Memorial’, Contemporary Review 23 (1873–74), pp. 779–798.

4. Poor Miss Finch was WC's last novel to be translated into German by Emil Lehmann. The unidentified female translator's specimen must have been rejected, as ‘Herr Hartleben’ was eventually chosen to produce the German version of The New Magdalen (as Die Neue Magdalena) – see [1285] to Bernhard Tauchnitz of 26 December 1872.

[1271] TO MARIE BANCROFT,<sup>1</sup> 28 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Unknown. Published: Bancroft 1909, p. 396, our copy text; B&C, II, pp. 357–358.

90, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, | November 28, 1872

My dear Mrs Bancroft,–

I am sincerely sensible of the kindness which has prompted the compliment you pay me.

Bancroft's note tells me nothing about your health – so I gladly assume that the Brighton air is proving itself to be the best of all doctors. It either kills or cures. In my case, it kills. I can neither eat, drink, sleep, nor walk at Brighton. Cold perspirations envelope me from head to foot, and Death whispers to me, “Wilkie! get out of this, or much as I should regret it, just as you are beginning to write for the most popular theatre in London,<sup>2</sup> I shall be obliged to gather you in the flower of your youth!”

Believe me, dear Mrs. Bancroft, | Always truly yours, | Wilkie Collins.

---

1. Marie Effie Bancroft, née Wilton (1839–1921), distinguished actress, manageress of the Prince of Wales Theatre from April 1865, and joint-manager with Squire Bancroft from their marriage in December 1867.

2. See [1109] to Squire Bancroft, 1 August 1871.

[1272] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 30 NOVEMBER 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1950),<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 358.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London | Saturday Novr 30th 1872

Dear Sirs,

A line to thank you for your kind letter of the 15th which has just reached me. It is needless to say that I am very much pleased to hear of the popularity of the Story, and that I am very sensible of the liberal construction, on your side, of the terms of our agreement. The pecuniary arrangement between us shall be kept strictly secret.<sup>2</sup>

I will speak to Mr Bentley on the subject of the republication, and I may answer for him that he, like me, will [del] readily do his best to meet your views. It is not possible for me to say [del] whether the Story will stretch into the June Monthly Part. The Fifth Monthly Part (February), of which I send herewith a duplicate, is [del] a long “Part” owing to the literary necessities of this part of the story. But the remaining “Parts” – now that I have reached my turning-point in the work will be shorter than Number Five. And if I can run to 9 numbers (without damaging the effect of the story) I will.

The Pirated Edition of “Poor Miss Finch” has reached me.<sup>3</sup> How much longer will the great American nation lag behind Europe in the march of literary civilisation? Turkey concedes international copyright – and The United States refuses it! What an anomaly!!!<sup>4</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. Letter endorsed on the empty back page by a member of staff at Harpers: ‘Wilkie Collins | Nov. 30/72’.
2. In other words, Harpers had responded positively to the extension of The New Magdalen and had agreed to pay for the extra instalments.
3. No unauthorized American edition has been identified by either Parrish or Gasson.
4. We cannot identify the specific development in the Ottoman legal system to which WC must refer, though it was presumably part of the western-influenced reforms of the Tanzimat period (1837–76). In the United States, the Chace Act, granting limited copyright protection to foreign authors, was eventually passed in 1891, two years after WC’s death.

[1273] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 2 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/109). Published: BGLL, II, p. 368.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 2nd Dec 1872

My dear Tindell,

Here (enclosed) is a cheque for £51..10.- very much at your service.<sup>1</sup> Let us say Thursday next at 7 for pot-luck here.<sup>2</sup>

(In great haste) | Yours ever | Wilkie Collins
A line to say you have got the cheque safely.

---

1. Presumably in settlement of Tindell’s account; the cheque was debited from WC’s bank account to ‘W F Tindell’ on 4 December (Coutts: WC).
2. WC writes on the Monday.

[1274] TO CHARLES READE, 4 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Noel. Summary: Clareson, p. 123. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 368–369.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th Decr 1872

My dear Reade,

I am so sorry! I have engaged myself to dine today – and, as it is with an old friend, I must not slip out of my engagement. Give my love to Mrs Seymour – and let me have another chance.

I am over head and ears in work<sup>1</sup> – but I don’t despair of making time to walk your way and see that early copy in a day or two. By-the-bye, how very good your auction-room scene is in the “Simpleton”. Bravo! Bravo! Bravo!<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | (in a tearing hurry) | WC

---

1. On The New Magdalen, still running in Temple Bar.
2. Reade’s A Simpleton appeared in London Society from August 1872 to August 1873.

[1275] TO GEORGE SMITH, 5 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Berg. Published: B&C, II, pp. 358–359.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W | 5th Decr 1872

My dear Smith,

I think your idea about “Man and Wife” is an admirable one. But I am sorely unwilling to drop down at once to that miserable 2/- price, which leaves us such a small margin of profit. Could we not “split the difference” and try 3/6? – with a pictorial cover by all means – the more striking the better.<sup>1</sup>

3/6 might justify a little extra advertising – besides the advertisement of the performance.<sup>2</sup> But it is even a question (with me) whether 3/6 is enough. I may certainly, without undue arrogance, consider myself to be a rather better novelist, with a rather wider reputation than Mrs Henry Wood.<sup>3</sup> I happen to know that she averages a thousand a year [del] /profit to herself/ [del] by the sale of her novels [del] – all at in six shillings a volumes. I mention this, in support of my notion that it is undesirable to lower my price [del] in the case of Man and Wife and The Moonstone. It appears – where a writer is really popular with readers – to be simply a question of making the book known by means of one or two reliable travellers working in combination with the retail booksellers in town and country. Let me hear what you think about this question of price. The performance /of the piece/ will advertise us – and “The New Magdalen” will help. This last story is liked so much here and in America that the publishers (who pay me by quantity) are urging me to lengthen the story! There could not be a better time for a new edition. The one consideration is – price.

Yours ever | WC

Excuse blots and haste! I am so hard at work

---

1. Pictorial covers were by then standard on ‘yellowback’ editions, bound in strawboards covered with glazed yellow paper, and sold at two shillings.

2. The production of Man and Wife which opened at The Prince of Wales’s Theatre on 22 February 1873.

3. Later WC was shocked to hear quite how much more Ellen Wood was earning from her top-seller East Lynne (1861) than he was from The Woman in White – see [1448] and [1470], to George Bentley of 16 May and 3 July 1874.

[1276] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 9 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 369.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 9th Dec 1872

“Miss or Mrs?”

My dear Sir,

I am not quite satisfied with my title.

You will find enclosed, with the printed title as first suggested, two other proposed Title-Pages.<sup>1</sup>

My idea is (on reflection) that it won’t do to make the title “Miss or Mrs?” of secondary importance. The story was widely-popular in the “Graphic” – and many readers might like to [have] the book or to read it again in the new form – if it caught their eye in the advertisements

Which Title does your experience prefer?

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq

---

1. The enclosure is not with the letter so the other titles are unknown.

[1277] TO JOHN FORSTER,<sup>1</sup> 9 DECEMBER 1872<sup>2</sup>

MS: NAL (Forster Coll., MSL/ 1970/2993/ 17). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 369–370.

90 Gloucester Place | 9th Decr

My dear Forster,

I have just a minute or two before post-time to say that I send to you by book-post the first two monthly Parts of my new story in proof.<sup>3</sup> When you and Mrs Forster have done with them, if you will kindly return them by book-post it will be quite enough.

I hope the air of Torquay is helping you to get stronger. The weather is little less than deadly here. So far, I sustain it well enough. My hands are full. I read the dramatic “Man and Wife” to the Prince of Wales’s Company on Saturday and we begin rehearsing at once.<sup>4</sup>

Don’t forget to let me know when you return to London. I have all sorts of things to say to you about the “Life”.<sup>5</sup>

With Love | Ever yours aftly | WC

---

1. This is the last of only three surviving letters to John Forster (1812–76), journalist, biographer and CD’s close friend and literary adviser. The first [0887] dates from only 15 May 1869. Clearly the correspondence had begun much earlier, as a brief letter from Forster to WC, dated 8 November 1851, survives in private hands, in which Forster acknowledges receipt of a note from WC.

2. Dating from the play and publications.

3. Of The New Magdalen, running in Temple Bar from October 1872 – see [1269] to Forster of 16 November 1872. However, it seems odd that WC is sending proofs of work already published.

4. The Bancrofts’ company.

5. The first volume of Forster’s Life of Charles Dickens, published in November 1872 – see [1269] to him of 16 November 1872.

[1278] TO HUNTER, ROSE & Co., 10 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, II, p. 370.

Via United States

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co | Printers and Publishers | Toronto | Canada

Wilkie Collins

---

1. No corresponding letter attached. Perhaps WC mailed the fifth monthly part of The New Magdalen at this time (see [1263] to Hunter, Rose, 2 November 1872). The postmark is faint but reads ‘LONDON-W | [C3] | DE 10 | 72’ over a single penny stamp. There is also an oval post-office mark reading ‘INSUFFICIENTLY | STAMPED’.

[1279] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 11 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 370–371.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 11th Dec 1872

My dear Sir,

Let us decide on

Miss or Mrs? | And Other Stories | In Outline | By | W. C.

~~~~~

I shall be very glad to see you whenever you are walking my way. Before 4 P.M., you will be generally sure to find me here. I have something to say to you – on Harper’s behalf – about the republication of *The New Magdalen*¹ – and I also want a [word] of advice as to the working of my Copyrights.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I suppose we shall soon publish “Poor Miss Finch”?²

1. Harper’s wanted the British book publication to be pushed back a little – see [1272] to them of 30 November 1872.

2. The Bentley 6s single-volume reprint of Poor Miss Finch (with an additional ‘note to this edition’) appeared in early 1873.

[1280] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 11 DECEMBER 1872

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 11th Decr 1872

My dear Palgrave Simpson,

I am so completely overwhelmed with work that I have been obliged to ask Mr Bancroft to release me from an engagement to read my dramatic “Man & Wife” to his company on Saturday next, and to defer my appearance in the “Green Room” until next week.¹ Under these circumstances, I may count, I am sure, on your forgiving me and on Mr Clayton’s forgiving me, if I fail to take advantage of his very kind proposal. I am sincerely sorry to miss the opportunity that he has offered to me.² He is, I believe, on the way steadily to a high place in his profession. I saw things in his performance in “London Assurance” which showed me that he could think for himself, and that he could carry out what he had in his mind intelligibly to his audience.³ This is no common dramatic faculty, and it must make its way. I hear his “Joseph Surface” praised everywhere – and I hope (and mean) to see him in that part.⁴

With my best wishes for his success and my best thanks,

Yours ever | WC

1. The engagement was eventually fulfilled: ‘We asked Wilkie Collins to read his long-postponed play to the company. This he did with great effect and nervous force, giving all concerned a clear insight into his view of the characters; and, indeed, acting the old Scotch waiter with rare ability to roars of laughter’ (Bancroft 1909, p. 167).

2. The actor John Clayton (stage name of John Alfred Calthrop; 1843–88: ODNB) – see [1036] to him of 28 October 1870. The nature of the opportunity missed by WC remains uncertain, though Clayton was to open in the leading role of his adaptation of Marcel on 14 December 1872.

3. Dion Boucicault’s witty comedy London Assurance, first performed at Covent Garden in March 1841, and revived from January 1872 at the Vaudeville Theatre, where Clayton played the part of Dazzle.

4. Clayton played the hypocrite Joseph Surface in Sheridan’s The School for Scandal at the Vaudeville Theatre, which ran for 412 nights from July 1872.

[1281] TO GEORGE SMITH, 11 DECEMBER 1872

MS: NLS (MS 23180/186). Published: B&C, II, pp. 359–360.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 11th Decr 1872

My dear Smith,

I abandon the 3/6 proposal – in deference to your opinion.²

But I am too thoroughly discouraged by the pecuniary results of the sale at 2/– to feel disposed to try it again. Let us stop at the 5/– price. If the dramatic “Man and Wife” succeeds, and causes any demand for the book, it will be easy to print a few hundred copies from the plates.

Sooner or later, I shall find some new way of getting at the public. In the meantime, the fatal mistake of lowering the price of “The Woman In White” seems to me to be a warning “not to do it again” – unless there is an infinitely better market for us than the market we have now.

I will inquire about the working of Mrs Woods [sic] [del] copyrights. My information as to her profits rests on excellent authority.³ It would be an infinite relief to me to discover that I am mistaken in my estimate of that estimable lady’s income! When I first heard of it it struck me speechless – and I have been partially paralysed ever since.

Yours always truly | WC

1. Engraved, centred, black Gothic type.

2. See [1275] to Smith of 5 December.

3. The source of WC’s information on Ellen Wood’s sales was clearly George Bentley, her publisher – see, for example, [1448] to Bentley of 16 May 1874.

[1282] TO GEORGE SMITH, 12 DECEMBER 1872

MS: NLS (MS 23180/188). Published: B&C, II, p. 360.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 12th Decr 1872

My dear Smith,

I have been making inquiries, in various quarters, about the sales of 5/ and 6/ volumes of novels. It is impossible to trouble you with the general results. I /will/ cite one case only – which seems to suggest that we might do something yet with the 5/ “Man and Wife”.

A novel by a Lady – who is, as to the public, quite an unknown writer – has been lately republished at six shillings. The sale, up to the present time, has been four thousand copies.²

Inquiry as to how this sale has been obtained informs me that the book has been “worked” by two “travellers”, taking it to the retail booksellers all over England, and making certain allowances to encourage those booksellers to speculate in the work.

I am not allowed to mention names – but I am absolutely certain of my facts.

Unknown writer. 4000 copies.

W.C. 2400 /I think this was the Edition we printed – was it not?/³

=

Yours ever | WC

-
1. Engraved, centred, black Gothic type.
 2. Assuming that the information came from George Bentley, this could be Ought We to Visit Her? by Mrs Annie Edwardes. The Bentley single-volume crown 8^{vo} edition at 6s. appeared in mid-1872 (a year after the first edition in three volumes) and was advertised extensively in the Times, alongside the novels of Ellen Wood and Rhoda Broughton, reprinted in the same format.
 3. Insertion written vertically up the left margin, flagged by a dotted saltire.

[1283] TO T. H. HILLS, 17 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Private.¹ Published: BGLL, II, p. 372.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17th Decr 1872

My dear Hills,

My best thanks for the Portrait, the Memoirs, and the delicious Soda Water.² The Print seems to me to be excellent. When it is framed it shall have the best place I can give it in my little Gallery, and you must come and see how it looks.

(In great haste) | Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

-
1. On distinctive Gothic printed paper of an ivory colour rather than pure white, and the ink sepia not black.
 2. The Portrait and Memoirs remain unidentified.

[1284] TO CHARLES MÜLLER,¹ 26 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 372–373.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London
26th December 1872

Dear Sir,

I am very glad to hear that “The New Magdalen” has, thus far, produced such a favourable impression upon you.

It is impossible for me to take advantage of your kind proposal. Some months since, the right of translating my work into German was purchased from me and the translator was chosen with my approval.²

All I can do therefore is to thank you for your letter and for the compliment which it pays to me.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Dr Charles Müller

1. Müller remains untraced, but was obviously offering to translate WC's current work into German.
2. See [1285] to Tauchnitz of the same day.

[1285] TO BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ, 26 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Unknown. Published: Otto, p. 77, our copy text; BGLL, II, p. 373.

90, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, London,
December 26th, 1872.

Just at this time – when a vain attempt is being made to induce your English friends and authors to leave you¹ – I take the liberty of publicly expressing my sense of obligation to your constant kindness and consideration, by dedicating to you the new English edition of Miss or Mrs? I enclose the title-page and dedication (in proof) – and I hope you will approve of what I have done. The book shall follow, as soon as it is published.²

The New Magdalen is going on. I send by this book-post two new copies of Temple Bar. (Per registry.) The story will fill two volumes I think – and the book-proofs shall be carefully forwarded to you.³ I have closed with Herr Hartleben's proposal for the German translation.⁴ The translator is already at work.

-
1. By Berlin publishers Adolf Asher – Todd & Bowden, pp. 192–193.
 2. The book was published on 17 January 1873, dedicated 'To Baron von Tauchnitz: In cordial remembrance of my relations with him as Publisher and Friend'. The dedication also appeared on the Tauchnitz imprint of the novel.
 3. The New Magdalen was published by Tauchnitz on 26 June 1873 as vols 1325 and 1326 (Todd & Bowden, p. 236).
 4. Otherwise unidentified translator into German of The New Magdalen. See also [1270] to Deutsch, 20 November 1872. On 22 April 1873 a payment of £35 from 'Mr Hartleben' is recorded (Coutts: WC).

[1286] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 26 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Glasgow (891117/110). Published: BGLL, II, p. 274.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th Decr 1872

Private

My dear Tindell,

Don't hurry yourself – if you are still busy – with the Draft of my new Will. We may have to alter it again – not through any change of intention on my part, but in consequence of a talk which I had yesterday with my brother. We are to meet again in a week.¹ Until then, “rest on your oars”, in expectation of hearing again from

Yours ever | WC

-
1. The nature of the discussions with CAC have not been elucidated.

[1287] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 26 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Unknown. On sale: John K. King Used and Rare Books, Detroit (January 2003), tipped into three-volume edition of The Moonstone.¹ Published: BGLL, II, p. 374.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. 26th December 1872

My dear Sir,

If the Proprietors will be so good as to favour me with a proposal you ...

[text excised]

... my best attention.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The MS appears to have been cut, perhaps for the autograph, excising one or possibly more lines.

[1288] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 28 DECEMBER 1872

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: B&C, II, pp. 361–362.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London | Saturday | December 28th 1872

Messrs Harper & Brothers: –

Dear Sirs,

I send to you (under another cover) by this mail the Sixth Monthly Part of “The New Magdalen” – being the number for March 1873.

Since I last wrote, I have spoken to Mr Bentley, on the subject of the republication here, in book-form – that is to say, in two Volumes post 8^{vo}, for distribution among the Circulating Libraries. Mr Bentley’s opinion is, that if we do not publish “The New Magdalen[”] at least five or six weeks in advance of its completion in the Magazine, we shall probably suffer a loss of several [del] hundred pounds. In plainer words, the “Libraries” will cut out the Magazine Pages – bind them up – and issue them as the book. In deference to your wishes, we deferred the republication of “Poor Miss Finch” – making ~~it a~~ the date of issue a fortnight later than we had arranged. Result: – a large library company kept the public waiting till the Magazine Volume, in which the story originally appeared, was published, and bought 400 copies of that, at 5/6 a copy, instead of 400 copies of our edition (selling at 18/– a copy). The loss here, again, is easily calculated.

The only remedy for this state of things is – of course – to publish the book-issue of the story at a cheaper rate, and address a larger ~~part~~ number of customers. But the machinery for this sort of sale is not in working order, in England, as yet – and publishers are afraid to try the change.¹

Under these circumstances – with your interests [del] pointing one way, and my interests pointing the other – Mr Bentley and I have thought of a compromise.

What do you say to publishing the last monthly part of the story /in your Magazine/ [del], one month in advance of our periodical publication here? In other words, to publishing the last Part, and the last Part but one, together?² Add the ten or eleven days, consumed in the voyage across the Atlantic to the advance thus obtained, and your conclusion in Harper’s Magazine, will appear simultaneously with our book-publication here – enabling you to make your own arrangements for your re-issue in book-form (which, however, must not be in advance of the English re-issue, or my copyright may be damaged).

Will you consider this proposal, and let me hear what you think of it? Your object – as I understand it – is to prevent my book-publication from reaching New York before your periodical publication is completed. The plan I propose would exactly meet this view, so far as I can see.³

If there are objections which I have overlooked, I can only say that I shall be glad to give my best attention to any suggestions on your part, which may enable us to meet the difficulty in which the absurd English system of publication now places on us.

Believe me, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | It may be desirable to remember, in this connection, t[hat the] dramatic version of the story must appear in the U.S.[A.] in advance of the novel – or the theatrical pirates will p[ounce].⁴

1. WC is perhaps unconscious that he is here repeating the argument he had made in [1238] to Harper and Brothers of 28 May 1872.

2. Here WC starts a fresh leaf, at the top of which he writes ‘2’ surrounded by a curving line.

3. Harpers seem to have been content with WC’s proposal and followed the plan he outlines in this letter. The New York and London serialisations concluded in June and July respectively.

4. WC writes his postscript vertically down the left margin. The corner of the sheet is torn away and the phrases in parentheses are conjectural. In the event, Augustin Daly’s authorized production of the dramatic version opened at the Broadway Theater in New York on 10 November, while the Harper volume edition had appeared several months earlier.

[1289] TO CHARLES COLLINS, [1869–72]¹

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 374–375.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Monday

My dear Charley,

Forgive me, and make my excuses to Desvieux.² I got up with a raging nervous headache this morning, and found a last batch of proofs waiting to be corrected, and sent away by today's post. I ought not to have been tempted into accepting the engagement when I knew that there was this last day's work still to do – and I getting less and less fit to do it every day. This ends it. Once more accept my excuses. I cannot call and apologise make my excuses in person – I have to go to the Grosvenor Hotel.

A pleasant journey to Desvieux! Yours affly | WC

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper, the address centred. WC moved into Gloucester Place in the autumn of 1867, but this type of paper is only found from around April 1869, after the end of the year of mourning following HC's death; CAC's final illness and death in early 1873 provides the other dating limit.

2. Unidentified, though see WC's letter of condolence (in French) to his widow of 9 June 1876 ([1628]).

[3099] TO THOMAS HYDE HILLS,¹ 1867–1872²

MS: Parrish (Oversize 2005–0044F).³ Published: A&C4, p. 20.

My dear Hills,

Are you disengaged? If Yes, I will reserve you a Stall.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. The only known correspondent whom WC addressed in this way.

2. Dating tentative. From the handwriting it is unlikely to be contemporary with the associated playbill (see note 3). The first known letter to Hills which begins in this way is dated 15 January 1868 ([0810]); prior to that WC addressed him as 'Mr Hills'. Though Hills died much later in 1891, the last known letter to him is dated 17 December 1872 ([1283]).

3. Pasted to the reverse of a broadside playbill for The Frozen Deep, 4 July 1857.

[1290] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 15 JANUARY 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 375.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th Jany 1873

My dear Sir,

What has become of "Miss or Mrs.?" Have the libraries refused to meet with us?

I write, because I have promised to send my friend Baron von Tauchnitz a copy of the book (which is dedicated to him) – and he will be wondering what has become of it.¹

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I suspect "The New Magdalen" will run to 9 numbers.² The January part (judging by some letters which have reached me) seems to be heightening the attraction of the story.

1. See [1291] to Bentley of 17 January 1873.

2. The story in fact ran in ten numbers in Temple Bar (ending in July), though in Harper's New Monthly Magazine there was a double number to conclude the story in June – see [1288] to Harper & Brothers of 28 December 1872 and [1294] to Bentley of 12 February 1873.

[1291] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 17 JANUARY 1873

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17th Janry 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

Many thanks for the copies of “Miss or Mrs?” I am charmed with the binding and the quaint lettering. It makes a very pretty volume.¹

As to a new story, before I began “The New Magdalen” I had undertaken to give “The Graphic” newspaper the refusal of my next serial story of the customary length. In other words, I am pledged to consider their proposal first – being free of course, to accept or decline it (when it comes before me) as I think right.² The truth is, I am so fagged with the double work of rehearsing my new play³ and keeping the “Magdalen” going at a very difficult part of the story, that I do not propose to write another long story for some little time – unless “the dire necessity” of making money drives me to it! (It is quite a relief at this “festive season” to open a letter and find that it is not a bill!). But I may be useful to Temple Bar with any short contributions that may occur to me, after “The New Magdalen” is finished – and this idea I shall be glad to talk over with you when the time comes.⁴

Of course what I tell you about “The Graphic” is between ourselves. I would much rather write in monthly than in weekly instalments, if I could have my own way.

Yours truly WC

1. ‘Reddish-brown cloth covers, blocked and lettered in black, spine lettered in gilt ... Variant binding in green cloth’ (Gasson, p. 106).

2. The Law and the Lady, serialized in the Graphic.

3. Man and Wife, soon to open at the Prince of Wales’s.

4. WC’s next contributions to Temple Bar were the stories he reworked for his reading tour in North America: ‘The Frozen Deep’ (August–October 1874, based on the play of 1856) and ‘The Dream Woman’ (November–December 1874, based on ‘The Ostler’, WC’s contribution to the 1855 Christmas number of Household Words, ‘The Holly Tree Inn’).

[1292] TO MISS RUSHOUT,¹ 17 JANUARY 1873

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 376–377.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17th Janry

Madam,

I beg to thank you for the cheque which you have been so good as to send to me for the Stable rent.² If it puts you to no inconvenience I shall be glad to receive the rent as it falls due, in the same manner for the future. You will find the receipt for the Christmas Quarter on the next leaf.³

I remain, Madam, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Miss Rushout

1. From early 1871 WC was in dispute with the tenant of the stables, Miss Aytoun – see [1051] and [1182] to Tindell 13 January and 28 December 1871 ([1182]), and also to him of 18, 29 and 30 January 1872 ([1188], [1191], [1192]). In June 1872 WC let the stables to ‘another Miss’ ([1242] to Tindell, 18 June 1872), signing the agreement in September ([1254] to Tindell, 27 September 1872). The letter here thanks the ‘new Miss’ for the first payment. The only potential recipient in the 1871 Census is Olivia Rushout (b. c. 1837), who lived at 6 Norfolk Street (now Dunraven Street), Park Lane, near to Miss Aytoun and half a mile from WC’s house. Described as unmarried and having ‘no occupation’, she lived alone with four servants and was probably from the wealthy Gloucestershire Rushout family of Sezincote and Moreton in the Marsh.

2. When WC first moved in, the rent for the stables was set at £40 per year ([0790] to HC, 6 December 1867). No corresponding quarterly cheque appears in his accounts at this time or indeed around future quarter days. It is likely it was made payable to bearer and cashed by Caroline or Carrie Graves – see [1191] to Tindell, 29 January 1872.

3. The following leaf has been duly removed.

[3233] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE,¹ 5 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Unknown. Transcript: Dartmouth, our copy text.² Published: MacKaye, I, p. 190; A&C9, p. 6.

90 Gloucester Place | Poximan [sic for 'Portman'] Square, W.
5th February 1873.

Dear Mr. MacKaye,

I shall be very glad to hear how your interests are thriving in London, and whether I can do anything to forward them. If you have no engagement on Monday evening next (the 10th) will you dine with me at the Junior Athenaeum Club (corner of Down Street and Piccadilly) at seven o'clock punctually?³ You will meet Charles Reade (the novelist) and, I hope, Pigott.⁴

No evening dress!

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins.

1. James Morrison Steele MacKaye (1842–94: ANB), American actor, playwright and theatre manager from Buffalo, NY. MacKaye studied at the Comédie Française in 1872 and the following year was the first American actor to undertake the role of Hamlet in London. In the spring of 1874 he was engaged in collaborations with Charles Reade and Tom Taylor before returning to the United States. See: MacKaye, I, pp. 168–227); and also [3240] of 19 March 1873 to Tom Taylor. WC had first met MacKaye a few weeks earlier, shortly after the latter's arrival in London. MacKaye wrote to his mother in a letter dated Wednesday, 16 January 1873 (that date was in fact a Thursday), 'I have an appointment to meet Wilkie Collins to-morrow at 3. P.M.', and on Sunday the 19th he informed her, 'I had a very pleasant interview with Wilkie Collins and also with Tom Taylor' (MacKaye, I, p. 186).

2. The transcript, dated 12 December 1923, was typed from the original manuscript (now missing) by Percy MacKaye (1875–1956), second son and biographer of the recipient. Ten numbered letters are transcribed in chronological sequence on three pages of typing paper, this being the first; in each of the other nine cases the manuscript is still found among the Papers of the MacKaye Family. A pencil note on the next letter in the sequence, [3234] of 7 February 1873, reads, 'Letter #1 is framed'.

3. Gentlemen's club founded in 1864. WC's accounts show he joined in May 1869 and paid the annual subscription of eight guineas for the last time in January 1879.

4. Edward Pigott, who became the Examiner of Plays in the Lord Chamberlain's office in 1874.

[1293] TO VIRTUE & CO.,¹ 5 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 377.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 5th February 1873

Gentlemen

Pray accept my thanks for your letter and for the copy of "The Fine Art Annual" for 1872.

My literary engagements do not, I regret to say, allow me the hope of being able to entertain your kind proposal. I can only beg you to accept my acknowledgements for the compliment which you have paid to me.

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Virtue & Co

1. London publishing house founded in 1855, run from 1868 by the original owner's son James Virtue (1829–92). Famous for lavishly illustrated works like the Art Journal, under James Virtue the house made a brief and unsuccessful foray into fiction publishing. St. Paul's Magazine, with Trollope as editor, had been owned by the firm from 1867–69 (Sutherland, p. 653).

[3234] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 7 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: A&C9, p. 7.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | 7th Feby 1873

Dear Mr MacKaye,

Have you received a letter from me, posted about three days since – asking you to dine with me at the Junior Athenæum Club (corner of Down Street and Piccadilly) at 7 o'clock on Monday next? Having received no answer from you, I fear my letter may have miscarried. Please answer by return of post.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
J. S. MacKaye Esq

[3235] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 9 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: A&C9, p. 7.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
Sunday Feby 9th

My dear Mr MacKaye

My best thanks for your note.¹ I had, unfortunately, given you up as an absentee from London for the time being, and had told Mr Charles Reade that the little dinner was put off until a more convenient time. I shall see Mr Reade tomorrow, and as soon as I know what day (after Monday) this week he can give us, I will write again to you, and propose another evening at the Club – at the earliest date possible.

Vy truly yours | WC
(Excuse haste)

1. Clearly in response to [3234], WC's reminder of 7 February.

[3236] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 10 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: A&C9, p. 8.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square
Monday | Feby 10th

My dear Mr MacKaye,

Will Wednesday next (the 12th) suit you for our adjourned Dinner?¹
Hour 7 punctually.

Place Junior Athenæum Club – corner of Down Street and Piccadilly. No evening dress.
One line by return of post (to 90 Gloucester Place) to say yes

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. It seems likely this dinner did finally take place on the 12th and is the one referred to in MacKaye's interview in the (Philadelphia) Times ('MacKaye in England', 14 November 1879, p. 4) and in Mackaye, I, p. 190. WC's bank account records a payment of £5 to the club on 14 February which may have been for the event; he had paid his annual subscription of eight guineas on 1 January (Coutts: WC).

[3385] TO CLARENCE H. WHITE, 11 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Private, envelope front only.¹ Published: A&C14, p. 15.

With Mr Wilkie Collins's compliments²

Clarence H. White, Esq | Albion | New York | United States | America

1. Postmarked 'LONDON-W | C2 | FE11 | 73'; and 'NEW YORK | FEB | 26'.
2. Written on the inside of the envelope flap.

[1294] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 12 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 272. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 377–378.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th Feby 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

“The New Magdalen” will run on to another monthly Part – making ten in all, and deferring the publication of the last number until the July issue of Temple Bar.

Harper gladly accepts your suggestion that he should publish a double number at the end by way of making the date of his periodical publication coincide with the date of our publication in book-form. He will finish in June – and we will publish (if all goes well) about 15th or 20th May.¹ Will that do?

I’m really quite ashamed of the number of copies of the Magazine which I circulate among my translators and my registering agents abroad. Dutch, German, and Russian translations are all in progress – and now I am told that there is likely to be a “market” for me in Sweden, Poland, and (I think) Denmark, if this story is dispatched to those countries!² Shall I exhaust even your kindness, if I send my servant for some more copies?

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. This schedule was adhered to, with the novel appearing in two volumes from Bentley on 19 May 1873. The publication agreement, dated 7 December 1872, is now held at the BL (Add. 46618, ff. 272–273).

2. See Gasson, p. 113, on the translations traced.

[1295] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 14 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Huntington (HH 91). Published: BGLL, II, p. 378.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 14th Feby 1873

My dear Holman,

I shall be very glad to see Mr Fergusson¹ – on any day after Saturday February 22nd. I will propose a day and hour to you after that date which will I hope suit Mr Mr Fergusson.²

The 22nd Feby is the first night of my play³ – and, until then, I am too busy to have a moment to spare. I have reserved your seat, and have arranged to place you with Charley and his wife. You will only have to arrange to go with Charley – if you like. Or, if that is not convenient, to what address shall I send your ticket?

(In haste) | Always affly Yours | Wilkie Collins

Don’t trouble to write if it will suit you to go with Charley. Silence shall mean Yes – and I will send the tickets to Charley.

1. Probably the Scottish architectural historian James Fergusson (1808–86: ODNB), author of The Palaces of Nineveh and Persepolis Restored. Holman Hunt had an abiding interest in the Holy Land and the Middle East. See also [1506] to Miss Fergusson of 25 January 1875.

2. Thus – the title occurs both at the foot of one leaf and the head of the next.

3. Man and Wife at the Prince of Wales’s Theatre.

[1296] TO E. M. WARD, 14 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins).¹ Published: Coleman, p. 212; BGLL, II, p. 379.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | February 14. 1873

Memorandum | “Man and Wife” in Four Acts. First night, Saturday 22nd of February, Prince of Wales’s Theatre. 8 o’clock.

My dear Ned

I have saved two stalls (all that can be spared).² Are you disengaged? Would you like to go?

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

1. The date and ‘Memorandum’ in Carrie Graves’s hand, and the remainder in that of WC.

2. 'The first night was eagerly awaited, with speculators selling tickets for up to five guineas, and proved "an extraordinary success". The play ran for 136 performances, until August 1873, and was seen several times by members of the royal family.' (Gasson, p. 101).

[1297] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 15 FEBRUARY 1873¹

MS: Glasgow (891117/69). Published: BGLL, II, p. 379.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th Feby
"Man and Wife" | "Prince of Wales's Theatre".

My dear Tindell,

First night – Saturday next the 22nd. Are you free? If yes – I will send you my card, admitting you to my private box. A line to say.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. Dating from the relationship to [1296] to E. M. Ward.

[3237] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 15 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: A&C9, p. 8.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
Saturday Feby 15th

My dear Mr MacKaye

A line to say that my first night (at the Prince of Wales's Theatre)¹ is fixed for Saturday next the 22nd. I will send you two Dress Circle places – if you are disengaged on that evening?

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. The dramatic version of Man and Wife which opened on 22 February 1873. It proved a great success and ran for 136 performances until August of that year, earning WC £6-13s-4d per performance, or £40 per standard week of six performances. Man and Wife then went on a provincial tour and on 27 September earned WC a further payment for £127-10s, making a total from the play of £1034-3s-4d (Coutts: WC).

[3238] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 19 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: A&C9, p. 9.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square
19th February 1873

My dear Mr MacKaye

I enclose a ticket for two dress circle chairs. Saturday 22nd Eight o'clock punctually (Prince of Wales's Theatre).¹

One line please (in case of accidents by post) to tell me that you have got the ticket safely.
(In great haste) | Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. For the first night of Man and Wife. This was presumably a complimentary ticket, though WC's bank account records a payment on 25 February to 'Box Office' for £10-14s (Coutts: WC).

[1299] TO JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD, 25 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Huntington (HD 43).¹ Extract: Layard, pp. 554–555. Published: B&C, II, pp. 362–363.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. ² | 25th February 1873

My dear Hollingshead,

My best thanks for your kind note, and for your friendly support.

Yes! I read the trial – with the conviction that the current state of the law is a disgrace to the nation as well as an infamous wrong inflicted on the writer.³ Whatever I can do to help to set the matter right, I will do – and I feel personally indebted to Mr Toole for bringing the question to a trial. The obstacle against us lies in the barbarous indifference of the House of Commons ~~to~~ where the \pm interests of Literature and Art are concerned. The remedy rests with ~~them~~ the Commons. If Disraelis [sic] books were dramatic enough to be stolen for the stage, I should recommend (quite seriously!) an immediate adaptation of one of them, without asking his leave. If he could be made to move in the matter, something might be done. I am to see Tindell on the subject on Thursday. My “Poor Miss Finch” has been dramatised (without asking my permission) by some obscure idiot [sic] in the country.⁴

I have been asked to dramatised it, and I have refused, because my experience in these matters tells me that the book is eminently unfit for stage-purposes. What I dare not do with my own work, another man (unknown in Literature)⁵ is perfectly free to do, against my will, and (if he can get his rubbish played) to the prejudice of my novel and my reputation. This is surely “a case in point.”

I shall look anxiously at the result of the new trial. Nothing can be done until we are sure of the present state of the law.

Yours ever | WC

You know the case of Mrs Henry Wood’s “East Lynne”? I believe, she has never received sixpence of the money which the piece has made.⁶

1. Watermark: ‘ORIGINAL | TURKEY MILL | KENT’.

2. Black, Gothic, centred, engraved type.

3. Referring to the case of Toole v. Younge – see the report in the Times, 22 February 1873, 11b. WC had encouraged the bringing of the suit – see [1190] to Hollingshead of 27 January 1872.

4. A four-act version of Poor Miss Finch by Sidney Davis opened at the Lyceum, Sunderland on 13 March 1873 (Nicol 1946, II, p. 339).

5. WC comes to the end of the four pages of his folded notepaper and starts a fresh blank sheet, labelling it ‘2’ within a half-circle.

6. On the many unauthorized dramatizations of East Lynne in Britain and the United States, see the Introduction to Elizabeth Jay’s edition of the novel (OUP, 2005), pp. xxxv-xxxviii.

[1300] TO W. P. FRITH, 27 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 380.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th Feby 1873

My dear Frith

A line to say how pleased I was to get your note, and how gratefully I feel your friendly interest in all that I do.

I am certainly in luck this time. Perfect acting, and an audience which thoroughly appreciated the play and the players, are a rare combination in these days. So far, the success promises great things. The theatre was full on the night of snow and sleet (Monday), and crammed, on the next night. And the “box-book”, I am informed is, in the best sense of the word, deeply interesting reading!¹

My best regards and thanks to Mrs Frith.

Yours, My dear old friend, affectionately | Wilkie Collins

1. Man and Wife at the Prince of Wales’s.

[3239] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 27 FEBRUARY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: A&C9, p. 9.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
27th Feby | (Thursday)

Dear Mr MacKaye,

I have hardly had a moment to myself since the “first night”

Are you likely to be anywhere near me, tomorrow (Friday) between 2 and 3? Don’t trouble to write. If you can call tomorrow, I shall be delighted to see you.

Saturday and Sunday, I am not sure of being at home. But on Monday (if tomorrow will not suit you) you will be welcome at the same hour.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

[1298] TO WYBERT REEVE,¹ LATE FEBRUARY 1873²

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4e, our copy text; Reeve 1891, pp. 112–113; Reeve 1906, p. 469; Bancroft 1909, pp. 169–170; Ellis, p. 45.³ Published: BGLL, II, pp. 379–380 (with Bancroft as copy text, dated [23] February 1873).

It was certainly an extraordinary success. The pit got on its legs and cheered with all its might the moment I showed myself in front of the curtain. I had only 30 friends in the house to match against a packed band of the ‘lower orders’ of literature and the drama, assembled at the back of the dress circle, to hiss and laugh at the first chance. The services of my friends were not required. The public never gave the ‘opposition’ a chance all through the evening. The acting was really superb – the Bancrofts, Miss Foote, Hare, Coghlan,⁴ surpassed themselves – not a mistake made by anybody. The play was over at a quarter past eleven sharp. It remains to be seen whether I can fill the theatre with a new audience. Thus far, the results have been extraordinary.⁵

1. Wybert Reeve (1831–1906), actor, playwright, and theatre manager, friend of WC from autumn 1871, when he played Walter Hartright in The Woman in White at the Olympic Theatre, London, before taking over the role of Count Fosco early in the following year. Reeve’s acting career had begun in the late 1840s, but his name was made as Fosco, a part that he claims to have played over two thousand times during the 1870s, not only in London but also in the provinces, as well as in America, and the British colonies (‘Wybert Reeve, Author, Actor and Manager’, (Melbourne) Lorgnette, 5 October 1889, p. 5). From 1873 WC’s correspondence with the actor seems to have been fairly regular, continuing even after Reeve had emigrated to Australia in 1878. However, only a handful of the letter MSs have surfaced, and for the rest we are dependent on extracts cited in Reeve’s ‘Personal Recollections of Wilkie Collins’. This was published in three different versions: soon after WC’s death in the Melbourne press, initially in the Saturday edition of the daily Argus, 12 October 1889, p. 4d-g, and reprinted from the same type as ‘Occasional Papers: Personal Recollections of Wilkie Collins’, in the companion weekly Australasian, Saturday, 19 October 1889, p. 48a-d; around two years later, collected with other reminiscences of his theatrical career in Wybert Reeve, From Life (Melbourne: George Robertson, 1891; London: F.V. White, 1892), pp. 105–119; and in the final year of Reeve’s life, after he had returned to the old country, as ‘Recollections of Wilkie Collins’ in Chambers Journal, 16 June 1906, pp. 458–461. There are few substantive differences between the first two instances, with only accidental variations between the cited letter extracts, while the third is heavily revised, both in the general narrative and in the letter extracts. There is only one instance ([2596] to Reeve of 29 July 1886, WC’s last extant letter to the actor) where there is a surviving MS to compare with an extensive extract in the ‘Recollections’. Such a comparison suggests that, though Reeve was generally far from careful or faithful in his transcriptions, the 1889 Argus version represents a more reliable copy text for our purposes. There at least Reeve seems to have been writing with copies of WC’s letters to hand, as indicated by the inclusion of several salutations and the facsimile signature to [2596].

2. The precise dating of the letter is uncertain, but, based on the last two sentences in the extract, it seems likely to have been written a few days after the opening of Man and Wife on 22 February 1873.

3. Reeve’s 1906 account follows that of 1889/1891 but omits the middle section from ‘I had only’ to ‘through the evening.’. Bancroft edits Reeve’s 1891 text, adding a few words while deleting others. Ellis reproduces the text from Bancroft 1909, omitting the last three sentences.

4. For Charles Francis Coghlan (c. 1842–1899: ODNB): Reeve 1906 retains the mis-spelling, while Bancroft corrects it to Coghlan.

5. Reeve 1889 introduces the extract, ‘In writing to me on the production of the former play [Man and Wife] at the Prince of Wales’s Theatre, he says:–’, at the end adding, ‘He then quotes to me the receipts, and later on they average over £100 a night.’ (see [1367] to Wybert Reeve, March–August 1873). The shorter version in Reeve 1906 is prefaced:

‘On the production of Man and Wife as a play by the Bancrofts at the Prince of Wales Theatre, dramatized by himself, he wrote me the following interesting account:–’. In Bancroft 1909 the extract is introduced thus:

Wilkie Collins passed almost all the evening in my dressing-room in a state of nervous terror painful to see, and which I could not have endured but for the short part I had to play. His sufferings were, however, lessened now and then by loud bursts of applause, which, fortunately, were just within earshot. Only for one brief moment did he see the stage that night, until he was summoned by the enthusiastic audience to receive their plaudits at the end of the play. Ever modest, ever generous, he largely attributed his success to the acting, and was loud in his admiration, at the final rehearsals, especially of Coghlan and Hare, Miss Foote and Mrs. Bancroft. He wrote to a friend describing the scene as follows.

The play ran for 136 performances, closing on 1 August. The cast included Squire Bancroft (Mr Speedwell), Marie Bancroft (Blanche Lundie), Lydia Foote (Anne Silvester), John Hare (Sir Patrick Lundie), and Charles Coghlan (Geoffrey Delamayn).

[3041] TO WYBERT REEVE, [LATE FEBRUARY] 1873¹

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4e, our copy text; Reeve 1891, p. 113;² A&C3, pp. 47–48 (with Reeve 1891 as copy text).

Both Miss Cavendish and I would be glad to obtain your valuable assistance to direct the performances and to play the principal part.

1. Dating is assumed to be a few days before [1304] of 3 March 1873 to Palgrave Simpson, where WC asks whether Clayton would play the leading male role of Julian Gray.

2. Reeve 1889 prefaces the extract with ‘On finishing the dramatization of the “New Magdalen”, he writes me:–’, and after it adds ‘My having decided on visiting America, and other business matters prevented this arrangement being carried out, ...’. Reeve’s provincial tour of The Woman in White did not end until 21 June, at the New Theatre Royal, Nottingham; after that he became lessee and manager of the Theatre Royal, Scarborough, where he was active from early July (see the Era, 22 June 1872, p. 11).

[1301] TO SYDNEY DAVIS,¹ 1 MARCH 1873

MS: Unknown. Extract: Hornet, 7:228 (24 May 1873), p. 7c (our copy text);² BGLL, II, pp. 381–382, amended A&C1, p. 54.

90 Gloucester-place, Portman-square, | March 1, 1873.

Dear Sir, – As you have had the courtesy and the consideration to ask my permission to dramatise Poor Miss Finch, it is needless to say, under the circumstances, that I withdraw my former refusal, and that I grant your request as a matter of course. I sincerely hope your version may be the means of preventing the successful representation of a rival work, impudently stolen from me under the sanction of a barbarous state of the law, by a man who would no doubt take my watch from me as well, if he had no watch of his own, and if he could do it with impunity.

– Believe me, dear Sir, faithfully yours, | WILKIE COLLINS.

Sydney Davis, Esq.

1. Provincial actor to whom WC had written on 18 March 1872 ([1213]), withholding permission to dramatize Poor Miss Finch. His dramatic adaptation of the novel opened at the Lyceum Theatre, Sunderland, on 13 March 1873 (‘New Pieces Produced at Provincial Theatres in 1873’, Era, 4 January 1874, p. 3).

2. Cited in the following letter from Davis to the Editor of the Hornet, published under the heading ‘Wilkie Collins’ Obscure Idiot’:

Mr. Kidd’s Temperance Hotel, | Malton, Yorkshire, May 13, 1873.

Whilst I was not directly referred to, Mr. Wilkie Collins’ allusion to the ‘obscure idiot in the country’ remained unnoticed by me; but your last journal stated that ‘at the Octagon Theatre, Blyth, Miss Finch had been produced, and the author had been mentioned by Mr. Collins in no very courteous terms,’ &c.

I am the author, or compiler, of the piece produced, and consequently your remark comes directly home to me. I therefore enclose you a bill with an extract from Mr. Collins’ letter, to show you that I am not the ‘obscure idiot.' The facts are simply these. I had dramatised Miss Finch, and sent to ask Mr. Collins' permission for its production. In a very gentlemanly reply he withheld the favour solicited, and as I would not so far transgress the rules of honour as to play it without, the drama was cast aside for more than twelve months. I then met with an individual who, being engaged with a version of his own, said (when I remarked to him that he would not obtain Mr. C.'s sanction to have it performed, as he had already denied me), 'I shall play it in spite of him.'

As my drama was first in the field, it appeared to me a sort of justice to myself to have the start of him, provided Mr. Collins would yield to my request. Consequently I applied a second time to that gentleman, informing him how matters stood, and obtained his permission, as the following extract from his letter will show you:

[cites WC's letter]

I presume the 'obscure idiot' alluded to is the person who determined on bringing out his piece without permission, as you will perceive, and no doubt remember, was stated by Mr. Collins. – Hoping you will place things on a proper footing in your next issue, I am, yours respectfully,

SYDNEY DAVIS.

P.S. I have not heard of any other version than mine; but perhaps the 'obscure idiot's' will appear shortly.

The following paragraph had appeared in the Hornet, 7:225 (3 May 1873), p. 13a, in the 'Buzzings at the Wings' column devoted to theatrical gossip:

Mr. Charles Reade is often blamed for plain speaking, but Mr. Collins can put a point quite as bluntly. Take this, for example: 'My Poor Miss Finch has been dramatised (without asking my permission) by some obscure idiot in the country. I have been asked to dramatise it, and I have refused, because my experience tells me that the book is eminently unfit for stage purposes. What I refuse to do with my own work, another man (unknown in literature) is perfectly free to do against my will, and (if he can get his rubbish played) to the prejudice of my novel and my reputation.' 'Obscure idiot' is good!

This brief notice had appeared the following week, in the Hornet, 7:226 (10 May 1873), pp. 13c-14a:

BLYTH | At the Octagon Theatre there were performances of the new comedy-drama Shipmates and Poor Miss Finch, the play recently alluded to by Mr. Wilkie Collins, who mentioned the author in terms the reverse of courteous. The leading performers were Mr. Sydney Davis and Miss Emily Cross.

The original source of WC's phrase was [1299] to John Hollingshead, 25 February 1873, written in response to a request for support in the fight against the unauthorized dramatic adaptation of published works of fiction. Along with opinions from the likes of George Eliot (see her letter to John Hollingshead, 8 March 1873, Haight, V, p. 383), M.E. Braddon, and W.S. Gilbert, the paragraph in question was reprinted by Hollingshead in April 1873 in a pamphlet entitled Copyright Reform, as Affecting the Right of Stage Representation of Novels – see Hollingshead, II, pp. 50–54. We are unfortunately unable to identify the 'obscure idiot' and his unauthorized dramatic version of Poor Miss Finch.

[1302] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 3 MARCH 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 382–383.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd March 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

My German publisher is getting fidgetty [sic] about our book-publication day. He is to publish simultaneously. I must also tell my American and Canadian publisher when we "come out."¹

What do you say to Monday May 19th as the day? (2 Vols)

This ought to content Harper. He finishes with his double number on June 1st. Allowing 11 days for the voyage and delays, the book cannot reach the United States before he has published the conclusion in his magazine. The story ends in Temple Bar July number.

One line to decide.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

Crowds at the Theatre – hundreds turned away for want of room.²

1. The New Magdalen, published in New York by Harper's and in Toronto by Hunter, Rose. We have been unable to identify an 1873 edition in German.

2. The Prince of Wales's Theatre for Man and Wife.

[1303] TO EDWARD HASTINGS,¹ 3 MARCH 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 383.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd March 1873

My dear Sir,

I have the pleasure of enclosing a Post Office order for £2.2. for my copy of the Prompt Book.²

Please let me hear that you have received it safely, and believe me

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Edward Hastings Esq

1. Presumably a copyist, perhaps the Edward Hastings who lodged in 1871 at 16 Barnsbury Road, whose occupation is listed as 'theatrical manager' (Census, RG10/ 269, p. 56).

2. Presumably of the dramatic version of Man and Wife. On the same day WC took out £20 from his bank for 'Small Bills' which perhaps included payment for this order (Coutts: WC).

[1304] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 3 MARCH 1873

MS: Wolff Collection (1370e). Photocopy: Kansas (MS P557:A2). Published: Wolff, p. 267 (dated '2d March [1873]'); BGLL, II, pp. 383–384.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd March

Private

My dear Palgrave Simpson

Will Mr Clayton accept an engagement at the Olympic to play "Julian Gray" in my "New Magdalen"?¹

Miss Cavendish has just left me – and authorises me to write this.

You have seen how the character is introduced in the First Act. Fair copies of the Second Act have been wanted for Germany America Australia – or you should have had it before. But Temple Bar will show you and show Mr Clayton of what stuff Julian Gray is made – and of what immense importance he is as the sympathetic character in the story.

There is of course the risk of the piece not succeeding. Mr Clayton must consider that.

I can only say on the other hand that the theatres of Berlin all bid for the piece – and that the Royal Theatre there has got it (in translation) and pays a high percentage. Also, that a high price is paid me for the American performances. Also that (in the story) "Julian Gray" has "col-lared" the women at home and abroad.

Will Mr Clayton run the risk, and join us at the Olympic? The piece will be produced under my directions. Ask him! One thing is certain – I can never write him a better part. And one thing is possible – that I am right in believing that I am offering him a new chance of distinguishing himself as well as of forwarding the interests of the piece.

Will you use your own discretion, and put the matter to him? I will send him the Temple Bar, if he fancies the idea. The play is there.

I am having a new copy made of Act 2 – but that will take time. New copies of Prologue and first Act are in existence – and can be sent with Temple Bar.

One line as soon as you can. Time presses. The piece will be probably produced in Berlin Vienna and the U.S. before it is out in London.

Yours ever | WC

Appoint any afternoon you like – except Saturday – at the Athenaeum. Or Mr Clayton can see me whenever he likes. The piece is finished.

1. John Clayton, actor – see [1280] to Palgrave Simpson, 11 December 1872. The New Magdalen was in fact first produced on 19 May 1873 at the Olympic Theatre with Frank Archer in the role of Julian Gray.

[1305] TO GEORGE SMITH, 7 MARCH 1873

MS: NLS (MS 23180/190). Published: BGLL, II, p. 384.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th March 1873

My dear Smith,

Many thanks for your kind note. By all means print the new issue of the five-shilling “Moonstone” and “Man and Wife” on the terms that you propose.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Smith Esqr.

[1306] TO WYBERT REEVE, 10 MARCH 1873¹

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4e, our copy text; Reeve 1891, p. 114; Reeve 1906, p. 460. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 384–385 (with Reeve 1906 as copy text).

I have had a great offer to go to America this autumn and “read.” It would be very pleasant, and I should like it if we could go together. I am really thinking of the trip.²

1. Reeve 1889 introduces the fragment with: ‘On March 10th, 1873, he says in a letter:–’.

2. Following the fragment Reeve 1889 continues: ‘The trip was decided on, and it was arranged that we should start together as he desired, but circumstances prevented my leaving England within two or three weeks of the date. I followed him a few weeks after.’ Reeve departed from Liverpool on 4 November by the Parthia (Era, 9 November 1873, p. 10), around seven weeks after WC, and arrived in Boston on 15 November (Hanes 2008, p. 17). Reeve’s final theatrical engagement before sailing seems to have performances of The Woman in White at the Theatre Royal, Scarborough, from Tuesday to Friday, 15–18 October, concluding with his own benefit night on the Friday (Era, 19 October 1873, p. 7).

[1307] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 11 MARCH 1873

MS: Huntington (HH 92). Published: B&C, II, pp. 363–364.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 11th March

My dear Holman,

I was very sorry to miss you ~~this~~ the /other/ night, and ~~sorry~~ I am vexed at not having been able to propose an evening before this for your [del] visit with Mr Fergusson.² But a recent decision in a Court of Law has declared that [del] anybody may dramatise any of my novels /or of any other man’s novels,/ without ~~an~~ the leave of the author.³ Two plays on “Man and Wife” are all ready to compete with my play in the country theatres – and I am obliged to make arrangements with the Bancrofts to meet this competition instantly – or I shall get nothing by “Man and Wife”, as performed in the country theatres.⁴

Add to this that I am obliged to dramatise the novel I am now writing,⁵ against time – and bring it out ~~forthwith~~ forthwith in London – or the thieves will take that from me also. The result is that I must ask your indulgence and Mr Fergusson’s – for I really don’t know when I have an hour to myself in this whirl of work and worry. I only sustain it by going to bed – when I am at home – at nine o’clock to rest my brains.

Yours affly | WC

You shall hear the moment I am at leisure

1. Black Gothic engraved type, centred.

2. Again probably the architectural historian James Fergusson, see [1295] to Hunt, 14 February 1873.

3. See [1299] to John Hollingshead, 25 February 1873.

4. Man and Wife had in fact just opened at the Prince of Wales theatre on Saturday, 22 February with Squire Bancroft as Mr Speedwell and his wife Marie as Blanche Lundie. The versions in the provinces appear not yet to have been licensed and WC may have prevented their appearance.

5. The New Magdalen, serialized in Temple Bar, October 1872 to July 1873, and published in two volumes by Bentley on 17 May 1873 (Times 17 May 1873 p. 8b: ‘Now ready at all libraries’; and Bentley Papers). The dramatic version with a prologue and three acts opened at the Olympic Theatre on 19 May 1873.

[1308] TO MARY CUNLIFFE,¹ 13 MARCH 1873

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 213; BGLL, II, p. 385.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 13th March 1873

My dear Mrs Cunliffe,

Here are the photographs signed – but see what Fate is! Your neat little stamped envelope and my portraits proved to be such a “tight fit” that laceration of paper (which is better however than laceration of feelings) followed my first attempt at putting the photographs into their enclosure. I can only beg you to accept my apologies, and you can say “Men are so clumsy!”

I have been so hard at work – writing a serial story² and getting up a play (“Man and Wife”) at the Prince of Wales’s Theatre – that I have hardly seen anything of our friends, and I had not heard of their idea of going to Italy.³ I suppose you are not going again to America? I have had a proposal to go there and “read” which is all but irresistible to a poor man. If I can get away this autumn, I must.⁴

Believe me | Dear Mrs Cunliffe | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Mary Cunliffe née Herschell (1836–1899), was the daughter of Ridley Haim Herschell (1807-1864: ODNB), a Jewish man from Prussian Poland who converted to Christianity, and Helen Skirving Mowbray (1798-1853) from Leith in Scotland. Mary married the wealthy banker John Cunliffe (1825–1894) on 15 July 1857. She became a well-known London socialite and wrote two sets of reminiscences, known only in typescript, which included anecdotes about WC. See Paul Lewis, Mary Cunliffe’s Recollections of Wilkie Collins (April 2020: Wilkie Collins Society).

2. The New Magdalen.

3. The mutual friends remain unidentified.

4. WC left in mid-September 1873.

[1309] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 14 MARCH 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 385–386.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 14th March 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

I have written word to the foreign publishers that Monday May 19 is our day for re-publication – and I have sent the revised and corrected printed copy for the First Volume to Mr Billing,¹ who wrote to me on the subject some weeks since.

I will – of course – not forget Temple Bar when I am thinking of future books. But the next scene in my life – if all goes well, and if I can possibly manage it – must be shifted to the United States. I have had a proposal for “readings” this autumn, addressed to me from New York which deserves very serious consideration on my part.

Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

My best thanks for the “Lady of the Last Century”.² I am sure the book will be eminently readable and amusing.

1. Of the firm of Billing and Sons, one of Bentley’s printers.

2. A reference to John Doran’s A Lady of the Last Century (Mrs Elizabeth Montagu). The four-volume second edition, published in 1873, was in WC’s library at the time of his death (Baker 2002, pp. 101–102). WC knew the author – see [0680] to his daughter, Florence, 23 May 1866.

[1310] TO HUNTER, ROSE & Co., 15 MARCH 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 386–387.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
March 15th 1873

(The New Magdalen)

Dear Sirs,

Here at last is the Revised Number for May.¹ I have been seriously hindered by the rehearsals of my dramatic version of "Man and Wife" at The Prince of Wales's Theatre here. The piece has achieved an immense success.

The closing dates of publication are as follows

Last number appears in Temple Bar ----- 1st July 1873.

The story is republished in book-form 2 vols ----- Monday, May 19th .

Harpers Magazine (by arrangement with me) publishes

Parts 9 & 10 together (as a double number) on ----- 1st June to outmanoeuvre the pirates, who would otherwise reprint from the English republication

=

Desbarats has equal justice done to him. He finishes his weekly publication about the same time.

=

I shall despatch the remaining proofs, chapter by chapter, as the copy is set up to save time. Have you reprinted the earlier chapters from the Canadian Illustrated News? Or from my proofs forwarded to you by Mr Desbarats? I forget when I began to send the duplicate proof to you, instead of to Mr Desbarats. But if you have reprinted – or propose to reprint – any part of the Canadian News, it may be as well to check your proofs by comparing them with Harpers issue, or with Temple Bar, if there is time for me to send it. I know of no mistakes in the Canadian News – but experience has taught me to be careful. Editors and sub-editors sometimes take liberties – and sometimes make mistakes!

Your publication day, if I can send you the closing chapters in time, may be on the same day as ours – Monday ~~March~~ May 19th. The Canadian News is on no account to conclude the story, before Harper concludes, on the last day of May or the first day of June. I wrote in great haste – but I hope I made Mr Desbarats thoroughly understand this.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

1. Of The New Magdalen.

[1311] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 18 MARCH 1873

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 274; Griest, p. 75. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 387–388.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th March 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

My best thanks for your note. Nothing will induce me to modify the title. His proposal would be an impertinence if he was not an old fool – as it is, I cannot for the life of me help laughing at him¹

But the serious side of the affair is that this ignorant fanatic holds my circulation in his pious hands. Suppose he determines to check my circulation – what remedy have we? What remedy have his subscribers?

It is a question before Billing goes on with the Printing² – whether we had better not begin with the Cheap edition – and make it worth the retail booksellers' while to help us. I should not scruple (in that case) to write to the Athenaeum and state (on my sole responsibility) why I cannot trust my book in the Mudie Market. The letter would be reprinted all over England.³

Think of this in the course of the next day or two. And don't forget the trick the other people played with Poor Miss Finch.⁴ Mudie may stop at 500 copies, and Smith may bind up the sheets of Temple Bar.

Let me hear in a day or two – or better still, look in if you are coming my way. I am too hard at work to be out before 5 o'clock – and I will tell the servant that you are to be shown into my study.

Yours truly WC

-
1. Referring to Charles Edward Mudie (1818–90), head of the largest circulating library, who had obviously objected to the sexual implications of the title of The New Magdalen – see Peters, p. 340.
 2. Billing & Sons, of Guildford, Surrey, who printed the first edition in two volumes, but not the subsequent one-volume editions.
 3. Bentley seems to have reacted negatively to WC's bold proposition. A similar threat was in fact carried out over ten years later by George Moore – see his pamphlet Literature at Nurse; or, Circulating Morals (London: Vizetelly, 1885).
 4. The Railway Circulating Library of W. H. Smith had ignored the Bentley edition and instead waited to purchase 400 copies of the bound volume of Cassell's Magazine, which appeared in March and contained all the serial instalments of novel (see [1253] to George Smith, 24 September 1872).

[3240] TO TOM TAYLOR,¹ 19 MARCH 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Extracts: MacKaye, I, p. 193. Published: A&C9, p. 10.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
19th March 1873

Dear Mr Taylor,

I was sorry not to be able to see you and Mr MacKaye this morning – but I am chained to my desk until my work is done. The closing numbers of “The New Magdalen” claim all my time.²

I am most unwilling to stand in the way of your plans and Mr MacKaye's. The matter stands thus. Monday, May 19th, is the day fixed for the republication of my story in book-form. Both Miss Cavendish and I think it important to bring out the dramatic version before this – more especially as the piece will be played in America (by arrangement with me) in the course of next month. It is certainly a risk under these circumstances to delay the production in London, by a week.³ But I do not feel justified in taking the sole responsibility of decision on myself, as other interests are at stake in this matter besides mine – and I will ask your permission to communicate with Miss Cavendish before I definitely reply. I will write to her at once, and you shall hear from me again – at the Garrick – tomorrow⁴

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Tom Taylor (1817–1880; ODNB), dramatist and critic. He was looking for a venue to stage his productions of Shakespeare and hoped WC's production could be delayed so the Olympic might accommodate him.
 2. The New Magdalen was serialised in Temple Bar from October 1872 – July 1873 and in Harper's New Monthly Magazine from October 1872 – June 1873.
 3. The play was first produced on 19 May 1873 at the Olympic Theatre, London, with Ada Cavendish in the lead role of Mercy Merrick. In America, WC was present for the opening night of Augustin Daly's production at the Broadway Theatre, New York.
 4. In the event Ada Cavendish refused to make the change and Taylor's productions of Shakespeare plays ran later at the Crystal Palace. See MacKaye, pp. 192–193. The first of the series, Hamlet, opened on Saturday 3 May (see The Times, 5 May 1873, p. 10).

[1312] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 28 MARCH 1873

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 186/44). Published: BGLL, II, p. 388.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
Friday March 28th 1873

My dear Mrs Frith

My best thanks to you and to Frith. I am obliged to dine out tomorrow; it is an engagement which I cannot put off – and before I could possibly get to Drury Lane, Cordelia would be dead. So there is no alternative for me but to return you the card with renewed thanks and to put up with my disappointment.¹

With love to Frith,
Always truly yours, | WC

1. WC must have been offered a seat at the benefit performance that night for Frederic Balsir Chatterton (1834–1886), at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, featuring Fun in the Fog with the celebrated Vokes Family (see www.its-behind-you.com/vokes.html) and impersonations of King Lear and Cordelia by Mr and Mrs Rousby (see the announcement in the Times, 29 March 1873, p. 8d). Chatterton was manager of the theatre from 1863 to 1879, and the benefit may have been related to the current success of the theatre. In April 1873 the shareholders carried unanimously a vote of thanks to Chatterton ‘because he made the Theatre so prosperous, and was the best lessee they had ever had’ (Era, 13 April 1873, p. 11c). Later his fortunes declined (see www.british-history.ac.uk/survey-london/vol35/pp9-29).

[1313] TO MISS GOLDSMID,¹ 2 APRIL 1873

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 388.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd April 1873

Mr Wilkie Collins accepts with great pleasure the honour of Miss Goldsmid’s invitation for April 23rd at ¼ to 8 o’Clock. /

1. Probably a sister of Sir Francis Goldsmid – see [0958] also addressed to ‘Miss Goldsmid’ of 2 March 1870.

[1314] TO GEORGE SMITH, 4 APRIL 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 389.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | April 4th 1873

My dear Smith,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £70..16..8 – being my royalty on newly-reprinted copies of Basil, The Queen of Hearts, Man and Wife, and The Moonstone.¹

Vy truly Yours | Wilkie Collins

George Smith Esqre

1. These are the single-volume reprints, and probably represent a combination of two-shilling yellowbacks and five-shilling cloth-bound copies – the last two novels named had not yet appeared in the cheapest format. The payment is recorded on that day in WC’s bank account (Coumts: WC).

[1315] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 7 APRIL 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 389.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th April 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

A line to say that I send the last lines of “The New Magdalen” to the Printers today. Tomorrow I hope to be able to look over the book-proof. I am thoroughly [worn out] this time.

If you should hear of a clerkship – or of a place of any kind – at a booksellers which may be open to a respectable lad, I have the lad ready! He is the son of a very old friend of mine and he has a strong desire to be taken on trial at a booksellers. No salary expected of course – only a chance of learning something of a bookseller’s business.¹

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I have written to the French lady whose letter you sent to me – in your name – simply to say that “Poor Miss Finch” and “Miss or Mrs?” are already translated into French.²

1. Nathaniel Beard – second son of Frank Beard, WC’s physician and friend – who eventually became chief clerk at Bentley’s. See [1694] to him of 13 August 1877.
2. Neither WC’s letter nor the French woman translator in question here have been traced. Hachette had already published Miss or Mrs? (1872: Mademoisele ou Madame?) and Poor Miss Finch (1873: Pauvre Lucile!) – translator(s) again unknown.

[1316] TO S. A. HART,¹ 8 APRIL 1873

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, II, p. 390.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 8th April 1873

My dear Hart,

Many thanks for your kind letter.

I am indeed distressed to hear of Sir David’s illness.² I know no one for whom I have a more sincere respect and regard, and I remember no more delightful dinner than that dinner – the welcome was so hearty, the meeting was so cordial, the whole thing was so gracefully and so charmingly done.

I shall call and inquire after Sir David today or tomorrow, and I hope with all my heart to hear that he is making a steady advance on the way to recovery.

When you write next to Lady Salomons, pray present the expression of my thanks and my best wishes.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

S. A. Hart Esqre R.A.

-
1. Solomon Alexander Hart (1806–81: ODNB), RA, painter, first mentioned in [0026] to HC, 13 September 1845. On the markedly contrasting attitudes of WmC and WC to Hart, an observant Jew, see Gasson & Baker, pp. 181–184.
 2. Sir David Salomons, who died on 18 July 1873.

[1317] TO W. P. FRITH, 10 APRIL 1873

MS: NAL (MSL/1922/186/46). Published: B&C, II, p. 364.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th April 1873

My dear Frith,

I cannot let such an old and dear friend as you are see the first announcement of the calamity that has fallen on me, in the newspaper. After only a few days’ illness, my brother died last night at half past eight o’clock. He was without pain and without consciousness. The medical theory of the death is – cancerous tumour in the stomach. I know that you and yours will feel for me.¹ With my love,

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. In his ‘Personal Recollections of Wilkie Collins’ (Reeve 1889, p. 4e), Wybert Reeve gives a moving account of the evening of CAC’s death:

I was up in London during the run [of Man and Wife at the Prince of Wales’s Theatre], and he arranged for a box, that we might go together. On arriving at his house to dinner, I found him in very low spirits. His brother was very ill, probably dying, and he was unable to go with me. He had a friend staying in the house, and we went together. I had promised to return to supper, and tell him what I thought of the play and the performance. When I got back his brother was dead. He had just returned, terribly broken down about it. I stayed with him until nearly two o’clock in the morning.

(In both Reeve 1889 and Reeve 1891, there is a clear type-setting error – the closing quotation marks are positioned after rather than before these sentences – which makes it appear that Reeve’s anecdote is a continuation of [1367] to Reeve of March-August 1873.)

[1318] TO GEORGE SMITH, 10 APRIL 1873

MS: Berg. Published: B&C, II, pp. 364–365.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 10th April 1873

My dear Smith,

I am sure you will be sorry to hear the sad news which this letter must contain. My brother's sufferings are at an end. After a few days only of serious illness, he died last night – without pain and without consciousness.

If you can spare room for a paragraph in the Pall Mall Gazette,² I send you the bare particulars of his career on the next leaf.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins
George Smith Esq

Charles Allston Collins

=

Died April 9th 1873, aged 45. Disease, internal tumour.

Contributor to “All The Year Round” and to other Periodical Journals. Author of “A Cruise Upon Wheels”, “The Eye-Witness”, “The Bar-Sinister”, and other works.

Was the second son [del] of the late William Collins R.A. Began life as a painter, and exhibited pictures at the Royal Academy. Married the youngest daughter of the late Charles Dickens – who survives him.

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper.

2. See the notice in the Pall Mall Gazette, the London literary evening paper started up in by George Smith and Frederick Greenwood in 1865:

The death is also announced of Mr. Charles Alston [sic] Collins, brother of Mr. Wilkie Collins, and son-in-law of the late Mr. Charles Dickens. Mr. Collins, who was in his forty-sixth year, began his career as a painter, and exhibited several pictures in the Royal Academy. He afterwards took to literature, and contributed to Household Words, All The Year Round, and other periodicals. He is best known, perhaps, as the author of a description of a tour in France, entitled “A Cruise upon Wheels,” and two novels called “The Bar Sinister” and “Straithairn.”

(‘Summary of this Morning’s News,’ Pall Mall Gazette, 12 April 1873, p. 6)

[3322] CARRIE GRAVES TO JAMES REDPATH,¹ 13 APRIL 1873

MS: Lewis Collection.² Published: A&C11, pp. 9–10.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square W.
13. April 1873.

Sir,

I am requested by Mr Wilkie Collins to thank you for the proposal which you have been so kind as to address to him. He is not at present at liberty to enter into negotiations with you for a visit to the United States.

I have to add that Mr Collins is suffering from severe domestic affliction which will prevent him from having the pleasure of seeing you.³

I remain, sir | Yours faithfully | H. E. Graves –
James Redpath esqr

1. James Redpath (1833–91), Scottish-born journalist active in the abolitionist cause. In 1868 he had founded the Boston Lyceum Bureau, a booking agency used by many of the period’s best-known public speakers. Despite the rebuff recorded in this letter, WC was to turn to him in America after falling out with his original agent, Charles Brelsford (see [1397] to Redpath of 9 December 1873).

2. On full mourning paper, in the hand of Carrie Graves.

3. The death of WC’s brother on 9 April 1873 (see [1317] to W.P. Frith, 10 April 1873).

[1319] TO MISS GOLDSMID, 14 APRIL 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12).¹ Published: BGLL, II, pp. 390–391.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | 14th April 1873

My dear Madam,

I am in great affliction – I have lost my last near relation. My brother has died after an illness of a few days only.

Under these circumstances I am sure I may trust to your kindness to forgive me, if I ask you to excuse my absence on the 23rd.² It is only the truth to say that I am not fit so soon to take the place which you were so good as to offer me at your hospitable table.

Believe me, | Dear Madam, | Truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Miss Goldsmid

1. Following the death of CAC at 10 Thurloe Place, South Kensington, at 8.30 pm on 9 April, WC uses black-edged plain paper. He generally does so at least until his tour of North America from September 1873, when he often uses whatever stationery is to hand.

2. WC had accepted the invitation in [1313] to her of 2 April 1873.

[3241] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 16 APRIL 1873

MS: Dartmouth,¹ with envelope.² Published: A&C9, p. 11.

90 Gloucester Place | 16th April 1873

My dear Mr MacKaye

One line to thank you most cordially for your friendly and consoling words. I have lost the man of all men whom I loved most dearly – nothing is left to me now but the kindness of my friends.³ I say it sincerely – I am glad to count you among them.

Before this calamity fell upon me, I was shut up in my study finishing the last difficult chapters of The New Magdalen – or I should have gladly welcomed you. As it is, I hope to be present at your first appearance.⁴ Let me hear what the date is – and accept my best wishes for your success.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. On black-edged paper which WC continues to use throughout his correspondence with MacKaye in 1873.

2. Black-edged, postmarked 'LONDON-W | 4 | AP 16 | 73', directed to 'J. S. MacKaye Esq | The Salisbury Hotel | Salisbury Square | E. C.', and signed 'Wilkie Collins' in the lower left corner.

3. Referring to the death of his brother, Charles Allston Collins, on 9 April 1873.

4. MacKaye was to appear as Hamlet at the Crystal Palace, under the management of Tom Taylor. See [3242] of 8 May 1873, and [3243] of 10 May 1873, both to MacKaye.

[1320] TO LAURA SEYMOUR, 16 APRIL 1873

MS: Noel. Extract: Claeson, p. 112. Published: BGLL, II, p. 391.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16th April 1873

My dear Mrs Seymour,

It is impossible for me to send you the Third Act, for it is not yet copied. All I can do is, what I have done – to send you Lady Janet's part in the 3rd Act.¹ The character inevitably loses its importance in the 3rd act – for the simple reason that the third act must be short.

If we had time to talk this matter over something might be done – but we have no time.

I am in danger of losing my copyright if this piece is produced first in America. I must produce a representative of Lady Janet on the stage tomorrow at rehearsal.²

Under these circumstances, I am forced to decide at once. I have no alternative.

Let me therefore thank you most sincerely for your kind readiness to consider the part, and say frankly that I place it in other hands because I see, as you see, that it does not give you the opportunities which it ought to offer in the last act of the piece. With renewed thanks believe me

most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Lady Janet Roy in the dramatic version of The New Magdalen. This was first performed at the Olympic Theatre on 19 May 1873, starring Ada Cavendish as Mercy Merrick and with Mrs St Henry as Lady Janet Roy.
 2. On the legal reasons for this type of formal ‘copyright’ performance, see Stephens, pp. 105–113.

[1321] TO JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, 17 APRIL 1873

MS: Morgan (MA 1485/10). Published: BGLL, II, p. 392.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17 April 1873

My dear Millais,

Katie encloses this letter from poor Charley’s lawyer – and reminds me that the leases of the two houses have been sent to you.¹

Are you able and willing to manage the business? It is only necessary to get a professional valuer, or “appraiser” and to put the matter in his hands. If you cannot see your way to it, it would be perhaps better to send the strong box with the leases to me. Charles Ward would be able to find the man – if the undertaker cannot manage it.

I have had some other troubles trying me since we met – but I stick to my rehearsals through it all.²

Yours ever affly | Wilkie Collins

Return the letter please also, if you cannot “act”. I hardly see how you are to find time to act – with the pictures to hang.³

-
1. We are uncertain of the two houses in question, though one was perhaps the house at 10 Thurloe Place, South Kensington, where WC’s brother died. Katie is CAC’s widow, CD’s second daughter.
 2. For The New Magdalen opening at the Olympic Theatre on 19 May 1873.
 3. Presumably referring to Millais’s six entries for the Royal Academy Summer Exhibition.

[3175] TO FRANK ARCHER,¹ 18 APRIL 1873

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive),² with envelope.³ Published: A&C7, pp. 6–7.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.⁴
18th April 1873

Dear Mr Archer,

I send to you by today’s book-post the story complete – except “The Prologue”, which has gone to the Printers of the book (in two volumes – shortly to appear).⁵ However, this piece follows the Prologue exactly – and “Julian Gray” does not appear in it – so you have got, I hope, what is really necessary⁶

vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Frank Archer Esqre

Please return the proofs – beginning with the proof of the May number.⁷ The preceding numbers may go into your waste-paper basket. It is only the unpublished part of the story – from May to July inclusive – that I want back.

-
1. Frank Bishop Arnold (1844–1917) was an actor who used the stage name Frank Archer. He played Julian Gray in the original production of The New Magdalen at the Olympic Theatre which opened Monday, 19 May 1873, and ran for 113 performances over 19 weeks (except Friday, 26 September) until Saturday, 27 September. Archer records that he was paid £10 a week for his work, out of which he provided his own costume (‘Theatre Salaries and Parts’, Bk. 1, p. 78, Archer Archive). Archer had been recommended by the Bancrofts. WC admired his work and they became friends. WC later helped him with his writing and to find a publisher. Archer reprised the role in the play's revival at the Novelty Theatre in 1884.

2. The archive of Frank Bishop Arnold appears to have been used by Arnold to write his autobiography, An Actor's Notebooks (London: [1912]). In 1950 part of the archive was lent by Arnold's son, Frank H. Arnold to Kenneth Robinson 1951, who included 12 of the letters in his biography Wilkie Collins (London: 1951). This letter appears in neither.

3. Signed and directed to 'Frank Archer Esqre | 24 Grove Terrace | Highgate Road | N.W.', with full mourning black border recto and black edging round the flap verso. Postmarked 'LONDON | C 6 | AP 19 | 73', with '1' in another hand in pencil on the recto. All WC's letters in the Archive are similarly numbered, probably by Frank Archer who seems to have ordered the documents when preparing An Actor's Notebooks.

4. The address in black Gothic engraved type is centred and the page is surrounded by a full mourning black border for the recent death of his brother Charles on 9 April.

5. The New Magdalen was published in two volumes by Richard Bentley and Son 17 May 1873.

6. The first rehearsal had taken place two days earlier on 16 April. Archer may have felt the need to read the book for background on the character and plot.

7. The story was being serialised in ten parts in Temple Bar, October 1872 to July 1873.

[1322] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 18 APRIL 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 392.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
April 18th 1873

(The New Magdalen)

Dear Sirs,

I send to you a Revise of the Last Part.

I have written to Mr Desbarats to say that you will kindly receive for me the purchase-money for the Canadian advance-sheets.¹

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

1. Of The New Magdalen.

[1323] TO CARLOTTA LECLERCQ,¹ 19 APRIL 1873

MS: Unknown. Published: theatre programme, The New Magdalen, Globe Theatre, Boston, 9 May 1873, our copy text;² BGLL, II, p. 393.

If you are threatened with competition on the part of stealers of plays, let the public know that I have reserved scenes and effects for the author's own dramatic version which are not to be found in the novel. I finished the play before I finished the published story. While the prologues and the first act follow that published story closely, the second act (at the end) departs from it altogether, and contains an entirely new situation. The third and last act, also presents scenes and effects which have been purposely altered and varied in the novel. Thanks to these precautions, the thieves who may plunder me successfully at the beginning of the story will be quite unable to snatch the latter half of it. The one complete dramatic version of the "New Magdalen" to be seen in America, is the version I have confided to your care.

WILKIE COLLINS

London, April 19th, 1873

1. Carlotta Leclercq (1838–93: ODNB), actress. She frequently acted opposite Charles Fechter at the Adelphi, where she played Marguerite in No Thoroughfare from December 1867 and Emily Milburn in Black and White in April 1869. In late 1869 she moved to America, again initially acting as leading lady with Fechter.

2. This theatre programme records what is thought to be the first public performance of The New Magdalen, ten days before it opened in London at the Olympic Theatre on 19 May starring Ada Cavendish. On 20 October the production was in Chicago at the Academy of Music, finally arriving for its New York première on 10 November 1873. Carlotta Leclercq starred and WC himself was present.

[1324] TO CHARLES WARD, 19 APRIL 1873

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 393.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | 19th April 1873

My dear Ward,

I enclose the weekly cheque for £40 – for my account¹

Can you take pot-luck here on Wednesday next? or Thursday next? Say which day – Hour, seven.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. From Squire Bancroft for Man and Wife at the Prince of Wales Theatre from 22 February. Although this is the first mention in an extant letter, the payments began on 3 March. WC received £6-13s-4d per night (£40 for a week with six shows) for the 136 performance run (see [3237] to Steele Mackaye of 15 February 1873, n. 1.

[1325] TO DIXON,¹ 22 APRIL 1873

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 214 (as to Dikar); BGLL, II, p. 394.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 22nd April 1873

My dear Dixon,

Forgive this late acknowledgment of your note. I am hard pressed by work, and I have suffered a terrible loss in the death of my brother. I have written to Mr Leathes to make apologies for not immediately answering his letter, and to say that it is, at present, not possible for me to see him.² The characters in the play were already “cast” when you wrote to me.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Unidentified, but presumably an acquaintance of or agent for Leathes.

2. Edmund Leathes (stage name of Edmund John Donaldson; 1847–91), well-travelled performer, author of An Actor Abroad (London: Hurst & Blackett, 1880), who was then playing the part of Roland de Feval in The Prayer in the Storm at the Adelphi (Era, 12 April 1874, p. 10b). WC’s letter to him has not been traced. Presumably he was seeking a part in The New Magdalen, opening at the Olympic 20 May 1873.

[1326] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 22 APRIL 1873

MS: Glasgow (891117/112). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 394–395.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Tuesday April 22

My dear Tindell

I hope you are coming to dine tomorrow at 7. If, however, anything should prevent you, a line to ask you to proceed first with the Olympic Agreement. Miss Cavendish has asked for it.

Please add to my instructions for the Agreement

... That the nightly “returns” of the Theatre are to be regularly sent to me by the Treasurer.¹

Come tomorrow if you possibly can.

Yours ever | WC

1. The New Magdalen opened at the Olympic on 19 May 1873 and ran for four months before going on a successful provincial tour. For the production Ada Cavendish leased the Olympic Theatre, Wych Street, Strand, and starred as Mercy Merrick. With the letter at Glasgow (891117/113–114) are found the following instructions in WC’s hand concerning the agreement:

Heads of agreement.

The New Magdalen. | Drama at The Olympic Theatre. Miss Ada Cavendish 26 Sackville Street Piccadilly and

Wilkie Collins.

1 I share the profits, and pay half the expense of getting up the piece.

2 The Profits are to be reckoned after deducting £[heavy cancellation] night as the expenses of the Theatre.

3 The expence of getting up the play is not to exceed £300.-.-

4 No alterations of any sort are to be made in the Dialogue without my permission. The play is to be produced under my directions. The cast of characters, the scenery, and the dresses are to satisfy me – or failing that I am to have the right of withdrawing the play. If the continuous run of the play is interrupted it is to be left to my discretion to resume the performance of it at the Olympic Theatre or not. Proofs of the Posters Play Bills and of all other advertisements are to be submitted to me – and I am to have the right of altering, adding to, or cutting out any words or expressions to which I may object. I sell nothing but the right (under the foregoing restrictions) of representing the play at the Olympic Theatre – binding myself not to produce the play at any other London Theatre during the “run” at the Olympic. I am to have the right of appointing a representative of my interests, who is to have free access to every part of the Theatre. Query: – a clause here providing for proceedings in the event of my discovery of dishonesty on the parts of the people employed to take money. (?) The profits are to be divided regularly on every Monday in the week. I am (if necessary or desirable) to have the privilege of writing orders for free admission.

There are a number of annotations in pencil, probably in Tindell’s hand, including the marginal comments: ‘Olympic Agreement’ and ‘9 right to stop if rectx small’. Also found at Glasgow are letters to Tindell from Stefan Poles of 20 Great Marlborough Street (25 September 1873, 891117/122) and Ada Cavendish (4 October 1873, 891117/124), which shed light on the strange query. Poles, who was to become WC’s representative for a short time, wrote concerning Brandon Ellis, the business manager at the Olympic: ‘Wilkie Collins knew that he is a d—d cheat and warned me’.

[1327] TO ANTHONY TROLLOPE,¹ 1 MAY 1873

MS: Taylor. Published: BGLL, II, p. 395.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 1st May 1873

My dear Trollope

I accept with the greatest pleasure your kind invitation for Wednesday next at 7.30.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The first of only three surviving letters to WC’s fellow novelist Anthony Trollope (1815–82).

[1328] TO CHARLES WARD, 2 MAY 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 396.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd May 1873

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for Jones’s receipt.¹

I enclose the weekly cheque for £40.-.- for my account.² Please acknowledge.

Can you kindly send a porter to pay for me the enclosed subscription? I don’t like to write a cheque for so small a sum. But if it gives less trouble to have the cheque, ~~it shall~~ pray do so. I can pay you the guinea back when we next meet – if you cannot put it in the account.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. See [1025] to Ward, 21 September 1870.

2. See [1324] to Ward, 19 April 1873.

[1329] TO GEORGE SMITH, 5 MAY 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 396.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 5th May 1873

My dear Smith,

I want to bind a few presentation copies of my books.¹ Shall I be putting you, or the printing-office, to inconvenience if I ask to have twelve copies printed on good paper (at my expense of course) from the stereo-plates of the whole cheap editions of my books? My idea is that I can only make the two shilling books harmonize, in margin, with the five shilling “Moonstone” and “Man and Wife”, by having them re-printed as I propose. If this can be managed I will send for my little personal editions of twelve copies – in sheets – (from “Antonina” to “Man and Wife”) as soon as they are ready. The illustrations I do not wish to be reprinted. Excuse my giving you this trouble²

and believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Smith Esqre

1. One set was for the photographer John Watkins – see [1330] to him of the same date.
2. To set up the presses to fulfil WC’s request for ‘little personal editions’ would have been rather more than an inconvenience for the printing department – see [1331] to Smith of 7 May. The technological requirements for this kind of ‘print-on-demand’ would not be available until towards the end of the twentieth century.

[1330] TO JOHN WATKINS,¹ 5 MAY 1873

MS: Arents (with MS of WC’s The Evil Genius). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 215 (as to Herbert Watkins); BGLL, II, p. 397.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 5th May 1873

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for the photograph. I returned the two portraits which show the crack to be filled in as you kindly suggest.

It will give me the greatest pleasure to acknowledge your friendly interest in my writings and your prompt kindness in supplying me with the portraits of my dear brother, by sending you a copy of my works. I have written to my publishers on the subject – and as soon as the books are returned by the binder (they must not be sent to you in their “popular” paper-covers!) they shall be forwarded (with my name) to Parliament Street.²

Believe me, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

John Watkins Esqre

1. The photographer – see [0454] to him of 28 January 1862 onwards.
2. See [1331] to George Smith of the same day.

[1331] TO GEORGE SMITH, 7 MAY 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 397.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th May 1873

My dear Smith,

My best thanks for your letter. I had not the least notion of what I was asking for – and I resign the idea of my private reprint, as a matter of course.

All I wanted was an uniform Series of the books. If the copies now in print will give me what I want, I shall be glad to have them – in instalments as they are required. Will you kindly give directions to have three copies, each, of all the books, from “Antonina” to “Man and Wife” sent to me by Parcels Delivery – or in any other convenient way? I only want to begin by binding three separate complete sets of my novels. The first time I pass the office, I will call and settle with the clerk.¹

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. WC’s new and rather more reasonable request, calling for private binding rather than private reprinting, still caused problems – see [1335] to Smith of 11 May 1873.

[1332] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 8 MAY 1873

MS: Berg. Published: Davis, pp. 273–274; BGLL, II, p. 398.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W | 8th May 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

I have been long in thanking you for your kind letters – but I have not failed to sincerely appreciate them. Happily for me – after the loss that I have sustained – I have had hardly a moment to myself since the miserable day that my brother died. Every day I have been occupied by the rehearsals of the dramatic “New Magdalen” – and when I got home again, there were the proofs of the reprint in two volumes waiting for me.¹ After the double labour, I was fit for nothing but to go to bed.

I sent the last sheets corrected for Press to Mr Billing yesterday. This time, I see no necessity for a Preface. Both here, and in America, the story seems to have spoken for itself. Our publication day – the 19th – will be also, I hope, be the date on which the dramatic version is represented in public for the first time. I have done all I can to secure a double success. We are well in advance of the day this time (as to the story) – and you will be able to subscribe the book as soon as you think fit.

Believe me | truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The novel was dedicated ‘To the Memory of Charles Allston Collins (9th April, 1873)’.

[3242] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 8 MAY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: A&C9, p. 11.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
Thursday May 8th

My dear Mr MacKaye

Tomorrow (Friday) I hope to be able to get to the Crystal Palace to see you.¹ If you have places to spare, then I will trespass on your kindness for two tickets. If not, leave me by all means to “my own devices”.

Yours ever | WC

(In great haste)

P.S. – A line – to say yes – before I write to Pigott²

1. In the title role in Tom Taylor’s production of Hamlet at the Crystal Palace, which opened on 3 May.

2. The postscript is written on a separate slip of paper, probably torn from the foot of the second leaf of WC’s folding notepaper, with little apart from the general sense and the tone of the ink to associate it with this letter. Indeed, Percy MacKaye instead associated it with WC’s second letter to his father of 27 May 1873 ([3247]). At the end of his typed transcript he noted, ‘I am not sure this “P.S.” belongs with this letter, but it does not seem to fit into any other. It is written on a separate, small piece of white paper – without black edging.’ We judge that there is a rather better fit, both physical and discursive, with the letter here which clearly requires a response. If we are correct, this suggests that it was Edward Pigott who accompanied WC to the Crystal Palace to watch Steele MacKaye’s performance as Hamlet.

[3243] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 10 MAY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Extract: MacKaye, I, p. 199. Published: A&C9, p. 12.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W.
10th May 1873

My dear Mr MacKaye

One line to thank you, and to sincerely congratulate you.

I was – unhappily for myself – obliged to keep an appointment in London at 6 o’clock.

But I saw the first three acts¹ – and I thought your greatest successes were just where the part makes the greatest demands on the actor – viz:– in the scene with Ophelia, in the scene with the Queen, and in the “To be or not to be” soliloquy.

When my little venture is launched I shall ask you to appoint an evening for my dining with you and being presented to Mrs MacKaye.² I can then talk to you about your Hamlet in detail.

Meanwhile, our first night at the Olympic³ is fixed for Monday week – the 19th. If you do not act on that afternoon, shall I reserve two places for you and Mrs MacKaye?

Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I took a great dislike to your theatre – and I was sorry to observe now and then that it had tried your voice. Nevertheless, you were always heard⁴

1. Tom Taylor’s production of Hamlet at the Crystal Palace was performed from 2.30pm; a review in the Times stated that the performance ‘lasted for about four hours (5 May 1873, p. 10), while the Spectator reviewer noted the drawbacks of afternoon performances, ‘from which the audience melts away for train-catching and engagement-keeping purposes before the play is over’ (10 May 1873, pp. 9–10).

2. MacKaye’s second marriage in 1865 was to Mary Keith Medbery.

3. The dramatic version of The New Magdalen.

4. The Spectator reviewer records, ‘Again, the theatre at the Crystal Palace is in an acoustic point of view an exceedingly imperfect structure, and that deficiency also tends to make the audience feel less indisposed to leave before the play is over.’ However, the reviewer also adds, ‘Mr. MacKaye’s Hamlet is, in the great soliloquies, much the finest which the present writer has ever seen.’

[1333] TO FREDERIC CHAPMAN,¹ 11 MAY 1873

MS: Unknown (formerly in the collection of J. F. Dexter). Published: Kitton, p. 173, our copy text; BGLL, II, pp. 398–399.

It is impossible for me to indicate correctly my share in the Acts jointly written (I. and IV.), – we purposely wrote so as to make discoveries of this difficult, if not impossible. I inserted passages in his chapters and he inserted passages in mine. I can only tell you that we as nearly as possible halved the work. We put the story together in the Swiss chalet at Gad’s Hill, and we finished the Fourth Act side by side at two desks in his bedroom at Gad’s Hill.

As everything connected with his writing is part of the literary history of England, I may add that the Scenes and Acts of the dramatic version of this story were arranged by Dickens and Fechter, while I was engaged in completing a work of my own. The ‘scenario’ was then placed in my hands, and the Drama was entirely written by me.²

1. Frederic Chapman (1823–95), son of Edmund Chapman, joint founder of Chapman & Hall, CD’s principal publisher.

2. Concerning the collaboration between CD and WC on No Thoroughfare. Kitton introduces the letter: ‘Dickens was responsible for “The Overture,” portions of the First and Fourth Acts, and the whole of Act III. During Dickens’s absence in America (1867–8), Wilkie Collins transformed “No Thoroughfare” into a play for Fechter, with a view to which it had been originally planned; it was first published in 1867, and is very scarce in this form. In an unpublished letter to the late Fred Chapman (of Chapman & Hall), dated May 11th, 1873, Collins recalled (as far as he was able) the exact nature of his collaboration with Dickens, and thus wrote: –’. In a footnote Kitton writes, ‘The original letter is in the collection of Mr. J. F. Dexter, and is now printed for the first time’ (p. 173).

[1334] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 11 MAY 1873

MS: Huntington (HH 93). Published: B&C, II, p. 365.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 11th May 1873

My dear Holman,

Thank you most heartily for your kind letter. The drawing shall take its place among my dearest treasures. But let me, I beg of you hold it at your disposal when you return to England – for you too were his brother, if love makes brotherhood. In any case, I will leave it on record, in writing, that the drawing is to go to Cyril Benoni Hunt, when “life’s idle business” has ended for me.²

Yours always afftly | Wilkie Collins
To | Holman Hunt Esqre

1. Black Gothic engraved type, centred, with heavy black-edged mourning.
2. Referring to Hunt's drawing of Charles Allston Collins on his death-bed: 'In a few days I was standing by his bedside drawing his portrait as he lay dead. This I gave to his brother Wilkie, who in the end left it to me.' (Hunt 1905, II, p. 313, where the portrait is reproduced). As drafted in [1371] to William Tindell of 4 September 1873, WC's will contained the following provision: 'I direct my executor immediately on my decease to return to my friend Holman Hunt (or if he should not survive me) to his son Cyril the portrait in Chalks taken by him of my late brother Charles Allston Collins.'

[1335] TO GEORGE SMITH, 11 MAY 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 399.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 11th May 1873

My dear Smith,

I am really ashamed of the trouble that I am giving you.

I quite understand that "Moonstone" and "Man & Wife" are to be cut down to range with the two shilling editions of the other books.¹ Three sets of the two shilling books – and three copies of "The Moonstone" to bind with them – are all I want. No "Man and Wife" will be needed. I find I have got three copies of the one volume edition already.

Pray do not trouble yourself and the printers about an estimate – and pray accept my best thanks for your kindness.

By all means, let us go to press with another 500 of "Man and Wife".

I am very glad to hear that the play has so effectually advertised the book.

Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. WC's aim is to produce, for his own personal use, a uniform single-volume series of all his novels published by Smith, Elder – some of which appear only in smaller yellowback editions and some only in larger cloth-bound editions. To achieve this, trimming down existing larger printed sheets is a more practical proposition than reprinting on larger sheets.

[1336] TO JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, 12 MAY 1873

MS: Bodleian (MS. Autogr. e.1, f. 119). Published: BGLL, II, p. 400.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th May 1873

My dear Millais,

Pigott is a candidate for the Secretaryship of the Royal Academy.¹ He is an old friend of mine, and a perfectly honourable and competent man. If you can give him your support when the selection comes on, pray do for my sake.

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

1. See [1342] to the Royal Academy, 20 May 1873. Pigott was unsuccessful – see [1362] to him of 17 July 1873.

[3100] TO THOMAS FAED,¹ 12 MAY 1873²

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; p. 21.

... the subject of an old friend of mine – Mr Edward Pigott – who is a candida[te] for the Secretaryship to the Royal Academy³...

... [If] you can give him your support, you will personally oblige,

Yours vly truly | Wilkie Collins

Thomas Faed Eqre RA

1. Thomas Faed (1826–1900), RA, HRSA, Scottish painter of domestic genre and Highland scenes. Faed moved to London in 1852 and exhibited nearly 100 works at the RA between then and 1893, mainly sentimental scenes of Scottish peasant life (Wood, pp. 163–164).

2. See similar letters of this date to Millais and Leighton. This partial letter has been cut for the signature leaving a piece approx 80x110mm pasted to a card, but with text on the reverse legible.

3. See also [1342] to the Royal Academy, 20 May 1873. WC's lobbying was unsuccessful.

[1337] TO FREDERIC LEIGHTON, 12 MAY 1873

MS: Leighton (Folder 1 LH/1/5/31). Published BGLL, II, p. 400, amended A&C2, p. 70.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th May 1873

Dear Leighton,

Mr Edward Pigott – a very old friend of mine – is among the Candidates for the Secretaryship to the Royal Academy. If you are still free to give him your support at the election, I can answer for him as a fit man, in every respect, for the position. I speak from a knowledge of him which extends over more than twenty years.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Frederic Leighton (1830–96: ODNB), distinguished neo-Classical painter, from 1878 President of the Royal Academy, and later Baron Leighton of Stretton. WC's derisive comments on an early painting can be found in [0235] to HC of 19 March 1856.

[1338] TO W. P. FRITH, 13 MAY 1873

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 186/43). Published BGLL, II, p. 400.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 13th May 1873

My dear Frith,

I am again brought up for sentence before the play going public on Monday next the 19th. "The New Magdalen" – Olympic Theatre. Are you free, and would you like to have two places?

Yours ever | WC

I cannot promise you such acting as at Bancroft's¹ – excepting Miss Cavendish who plays Mercy Merrick. I have written to some R.A.'s about Pigott – and will write to more today after rehearsal.

1. Squire and Marie Bancroft controlled the Prince of Wales's Theatre, where Man and Wife was running.

[3176] TO WILLIAM BODHAM DONNE,¹ 14 MAY 1873²

MS: Unknown. On sale: Peter L. Stern & Co., 1997, Catalogue 29.³ Published: A&C7, pp. 39–40.

Summary: *The letter discusses WC's soon to be opened play The New Magdalen.*⁴

1. William Bodham Donne (1807–1882), essayist and drama critic; Examiner of Plays in the Lord Chamberlain’s office 1857–1874. WC had sent the MS of the play to the Lord Chamberlain’s office on 12 May 1873 (BL Add. Ms 653122R). Donne was unwilling to licence the play without a personal decision by the Lord Chamberlain himself, Viscount Sydney. WC wrote to Sydney on 13 May asking for his decision and enclosing a summary of the play (National Archives LC 1/275(62b)). Sydney’s reply is not found in the Archives nor is a letter of 14 May which Donne wrote to WC. But two identical summaries of the latter read: “Lord S agrees to Licence, but suggests an alteration of Title” (see National Archives LC 3/88 Sent (56)). It must be that letter to which WC replies here. WC clearly rejected the suggestion to change the title, albeit from the Lord Chamberlain himself. For WC’s reluctance to make a change in the title – albeit a private request by a publisher – see [1311] to George Bentley, 18 March 1873. The play was licensed as ‘The New Magdalen’ on 15 May 1873 with no restrictions (British Library, Add.ms 53704 f.98). Given these other dates WC is presumed to have replied at once to Donne’s letter allowing the licence to be issued on 15 May.

2. The dating assumes that WC replied at once to Donne’s letter, thus allowing the licence to be issued on 15 May.

3. Four page holograph letter signed by WC, laid into a first edition copy of The Moonstone.

4. The dramatised version of The New Magdalen was written at the same time as the novel and opened at the Olympic Theatre on 19 May 1873.

[3244] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 15 MAY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: A&C9, p. 13.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

15th May 1873

My dear Mr MacKaye,

All the Stalls were taken a week ago – for the first night at The Olympic.¹ The best places for seeing and hearing are in my possession – the front row in the Dress-Circle. I have the greatest pleasure in enclosing you four places.

(In utmost haste)

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

1. The New Magdalen which opened on 19 May 1873 and ran for four months.

[1339] TO GEORGE SMITH, 15 MAY 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 401.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th May 1873

My dear Smith,

A thousand thanks for the ready kindness which has presented me with three sets of my books.

Let me also thank you for the cheque for £98..1..8 – being my Royalty on new issues of The Dead Secret, The Woman In White, Hide and Seek, and Man and Wife.¹

Believe me | Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Smith Esq

1. In fact the amount credited to WC’s account from ‘Smith Elder & Co’ on 15 May was £92-1s-8d (Coutts: WC).

[1340] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 20 MAY 1873¹

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 275. Published: BGLL, II, p. 401–402.

1873 | Gloucester Place

Dear Mr Bentley

A line to thank you for your kind letter. The audience actually forced me to appear in front of the curtain before the play was half finished! I don’t think I ever saw such enthusiasm in a theatre before!

If the book only meets with the same welcome – we shall have nothing left to wish for. That fanatical old fool Mudie will be obliged to increase his order. I am delighted to hear that we have begun so well with the subscription. I have advertised the novel on the playbill – as you will see.²

My best thanks for the copies of the book.³ It is very neatly and prettily got up.

Yours very truly | WC

Let me know if you would like to see the Play

1. Peters (pp. 345, 471 n. 32) assigns this letter to the following day (21 May), but the tone and content rather suggest the day immediately after both the opening of the dramatic version of The New Magdalen and the official publication of the novel on May 19. See [1332] to Bentley of 8 May and the review of the opening night of the play in the Daily Telegraph of 20 May 1873.

2. A copy of the playbill is also found in the Berg Collection. This reads: ‘On MONDAY EVENING, MAY 19th, 1873, and until further notice, will be presented a DRAMATIC STORY, in a Prologue and Three Acts, entitled – | THE | NEW MAGDALEN’. At the foot there is this note: ‘(N.B. – The Narrative Version of THE NEW MAGDALEN is published by Messrs Bentley and Son, in Two Volumes.)’. The note is flagged by three of WC’s vertical black ink lines.

3. The novel was published by Bentley in two volumes on 19 May – see [1332] to him of 8 May.

[1341] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 20 MAY 1873

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 186/41). Published: BGLL, II, p. 402.

Athenæum Club · Pall Mall | 20th May 1873.

My dear Mrs Frith,

I am charmed to hear that you and Frith spent a pleasant evening at the play.¹

Most unfortunately for me, I have already engaged myself to dinner. It is a special occasion – and I must not put it off. I can only thank you – and repeat most sincerely that I am not a free man.

My love to Frith.

Believe me always truly yours | Wilkie Collins.

1. The New Magdalen at the Olympic – see [1338] to W. P. Frith of 13 May.

[1342] TO THE ROYAL ACADEMY, 20 MAY 1873

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose), on black-edged Athenæum Club notepaper. Published: BGLL, II, p. 402.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. 20th May 1873.

I can speak to Mr Edward Pigott’s fitness for the post to which he aspires, after an experience of him which extends over a period of more than twenty years. If the members of the Royal Academy are pleased to elect him as their Secretary,¹ they will secure the services of a man of high integrity, on whose zealous, intelligent, and discreet performance of the duties entrusted to him they may confidently rely.

Wilkie | Collins

1. At the General Assembly of the Royal Academy, 10 July 1873, Frederick A. Eaton was elected to the post – see [1362] to Pigott of 17 July 1873.

[1343] TO WILLIAMS & NORGATE,¹ 23 MAY 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12).² Published: BGLL, II, p. 402–403, amended A&C3, p. 66.

23rd May 1873

Dear Sirs,

Baron von Tauchnitz has kindly promised to send to me six copies of his edition of “The New Magdalen” ...

... to pass the book through the Custom House.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Though there is no documentary evidence concerning the recipient, this must be the publishers Williams & Norgate, London agents of Tauchnitz – see [0321] to them of 24 December 1859.
 2. Only the date, salutation, and opening lines, on a rectangle of paper cut unevenly from the head of a letter which clearly has a black mourning line down the left-hand edge. Text is on recto and verso.

[3007] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 23 MAY 1873

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (19–26 February 2006), by Michael A. West of Schoharie, New York, item 6606925349. Published: A&C2, p. 64.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | May 23rd 1873 /

1. Written at the top of a small sheet of mourning stationery, this appears to be simply a dated autograph.

[1344] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 24 MAY 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 403.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 24th May 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £100 – on account of The New Magdalen in Temple Bar.¹

You have only to give me three days’ notice of the evening – and I will see that the best accommodation at our disposal is secured for you at the theatre.² The enthusiasm of the audience is steadily rising – and everything looks well for the future.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq.

-
1. The cheque was credited to WC’s bank account on that date. This was presumably the final payment for the serial run of the novel, though the basis of payment is unclear. The original agreement was for £1-10s per page for a maximum of six monthly instalments – see [1235] to Bentley, 18 May 1872. The novel eventually stretched to ten numbers and 225 pages from October 1872 to July 1873. WC was paid £100 on 8 October (see [1256] to George Bentley, 3 October 1872) and a further £200 on 16 June 1873, which, with the payment here, adds up to £400 for the whole serial, whereas 225 pages at a rate of £1-10s a page would suggest a total of £337-10s (Coutts: WC).
 2. WC had offered to provide seats for The New Magdalen at the Olympic Theatre in [1340] to Bentley of 20 May.

[1345] TO WILLIAM D. BOOTH,¹ 24 MAY 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 403–404.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 24th May 1873

My dear Sir,

Your kind letter of the sixth has reached me. If it is not giving you too much trouble, I will gladly avail myself of the method of remitting the royalties which you are so good as to propose.

Miss Leclercq² telegraphed to me the news of the success of the piece at Boston – and I have since received a Boston newspaper with a very favourable notice.

Here, we had our first night on last Monday (the 19th) at the Olympic Theatre. The audience really seemed to be enchanted. They forced me to appear in front of the curtain, before the play was half over. The same enthusiasm has manifested itself on the succeeding evenings. We have I really think achieved a great success.

I am feeling terribly worn out by my exertions. Producing a Serial Story and two Plays in the last six months has been rather too much for me. I must have rest and change of scene – or I shall never be fit for the United States in the autumn.

With renewed thanks for your friendly sympathy and kindness,

Believe me | Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

If I rightly remember, Miss Leclercq will be in England in the summer. If she changes her plans, I will send her a corrected copy of the piece containing the changes I made in it at rehearsal. When you next write to her, will you present her my best remembrances and congratulations to her. I would write but I don't know how long she will be at Boston.

Mr W. D. Booth Esqre /

-
1. Wall Street legal agent who acted for WC in theatrical matters – see [1024] to him of 20 September 1870.
 2. Carlotta Leclercq starred in The New Magdalen at the Globe Theatre, Boston, from Thursday, 8 May 1873.

[3245] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 26 MAY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: A&C9, p. 13.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W.
26th May 1873

My dear Mr MacKaye,

I have been suffering a little from rheumatism – or I should have written to you before this.

If Friday next (the 30th) will suit you, I shall be delighted to avail myself of your kind invitation on that evening, at any hour which may be agreeable to you. If you are engaged on Friday, any other evening, early in next week, which you may propose will find me at your disposal.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[3246] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 27 MAY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Extract: MacKaye, I, p. 207. Published: A&C9, p. 14.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W.
27th May

My dear Mr MacKaye

Another word to say that I only heard last night that you were ill. Pray let us consider Friday as deferred – and pray accept my heartiest good wishes for your recovery. I hope to be able to call and inquire about you in a few days. If you require any special medical advice (which I earnestly hope may not be the case) my doctor – once poor Charles Dickens's doctor also – is the man.¹ If you can write a line or dictate a line, let me hear how you are.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. Francis Carr Beard.

[3247] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 27 MAY 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: A&C9, p. 14.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W.
27th May

Our letters have crossed! Delighted to hear that you are well enough to keep me to my engagement. On Friday at seven – with the greatest pleasure
WC¹

1. In his typed transcript of this letter also found among the Papers of the MacKaye Family, Percy MacKaye includes the footnote, ‘P.S. – A line – to say yes – before I write to Pigott’, adding, ‘I am not sure this “P.S.” belongs with this letter, but it does not seem to fit into any other.’ Since WC’s message here does not seem to require any reply, we have concluded that the postscript fits rather better with [3242] to J. Steele MacKaye of 8 May 1873.

[1346] TO GEORGE SMITH, 27 MAY 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, II, p. 404.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th May

My dear Smith,

Will you kindly look over the enclosed note, and tell me whether you think it desirable or not, to grant the lady’s request?¹ I trouble you on the subject, because one of your copyrights is included in her scheme. What you do in the matter, I will do also. Your experience is fitter than mine to decide whether the proposed extracts do good or harm to the sale of books. As a novel-writer I am personally by no means disposed even to indirectly address people who are not novel-readers!

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

George Smith Esq

1. The lady in question has not been identified, though her request clearly concerned permission to reprint extracts from WC’s novels – see [1348] to Smith of 31 May.

[1347] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 29 MAY 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 405.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th May 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

My best thanks for the copies and for the information about the Binder.¹

Some little time since, you most kindly interested yourself in the son of an old friend of mine who has aspirations in the direction of “the Trade.” With all that I have had lately to occupy me, the matter has slipped out of my memory until now. I was not certain at the time – and I am not sure now – whether he wishes to be instructed in the first elements of bookselling by retail, or of publishing.

If you would add to your kindness – when you have ten minutes to spare – by granting the lad an interview, and speaking to him on the subject, he will be encouraged, and I shall be obliged.

He is the second son of Mr F. Carr Beard (of Welbeck Street) my medical adviser as well as my old friend – and he is a nice Gentlemanlike boy who will not prove undeserving of a little reasonable encouragement at starting.²

Pray forgive me for troubling you again, | and believe me

Most truly Yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq.

1. Presumably more copies of, and information concerning, the two-volume edition of The New Magdalen.

2. See Nathaniel Beard’s recollections of WC in Temple Bar (Beard).

[1348] TO GEORGE SMITH, 31 MAY 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 405–406.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 31st May 1873

My dear Smith

I gladly accept your kind proposal. The lady is a perfect stranger to me¹ – and I refer her, by today’s post, to Messrs Smith, Elder & Co. Of course, we reserve our own right to publish extracts at any future time, from any of the books – if we think it desirable. I mention this because it has been already proposed to me to issue a cheap volume of extracted passages from my novels. We might see our way to this – not now – but at some future time.

With many thanks | Yours truly | WC

1. See [1346] to Smith of 27 May.

[1349] TO WYBERT REEVE, [LATE MAY] 1873¹

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4e, our copy text; Reeve 1891, pp. 113–114; Reeve 1906, p. 460. Published: BGLL, II, p. 406 (with Reeve 1906 as copy text). Amended: A&C11, p. 17.

The reception of my “New Magdalen” was prodigious.² I was forced to appear half-way through the piece, as well as at the end. The acting took every one by surprise, and the second night’s enthusiasm quite equalled the first.

1. Following on from [3041] of [late February] 1873, Reeve 1891 introduces this further extract with: ‘... but after its production he writes me:–’.
2. Opening at the Olympic Theatre on 19 May 1873.

[3288] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 3 JUNE 1873

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, p. 11.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹
3rd June 1873

Dear Mr Bentley

A line to thank you for your kindness. Mr Beard’s son is unfortunately suffering from illness – and he has no choice but to ask you to defer the interview until he is well enough to wait on you.² He will write to you himself.

(In great haste)

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

1. Centred Gothic type with full mourning border, following the death of CAC on 9 April.
2. Nathaniel Beard, younger son of WC’s doctor, Francis Carr Beard, who became George Bentley’s chief clerk. Presumably the letter refers to the postponed interview which secured him the post and suggests WC had a part in his appointment. For Nathaniel Beard’s reminiscences of WC, see ‘Some Recollections of Yesterday’, Temple Bar, vol. 102, July 1894, pp. 315–339.

[1350] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 5 JUNE 1873

MS: Glasgow (891117/115). Published: BGLL, II, p. 406.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 5th June 1873

My dear Tindell,

This note will be presented to you by my friend Mr Polès who has kindly undertaken to ask you a question for me, relating to my agreement with the Olympic Theatre.¹ The question presses – so please see Mr Polès with as little delay as possible.

We have also a legal point to put to you – which is of some importance to the interests of the piece.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. Stefan Poles, who was appointed WC's representative concerning the stage version of The New Magdalen – see the outline of the agreement attached to [1326] to Tindell of 22 April 1873. It is likely that Poles pronounced his name in two syllables, so that it was sometimes written Polès, as here and in Archer (p. 156), and sometimes Polhes, as in the Times, 15 December 1874, p. 11f. Poles himself wrote it 'Poles' (Poles to Tindell, 25 September 1873, Glasgow 891117/122). For more on Poles, see the notes to [1376] to him of 11 September 1873.

[1351] TO ANTHONY TROLLOPE, 9 JUNE 1873

MS: Taylor. Published: Hall, II, p. 589. Published: BGLL, II, p. 407.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. Monday June 9th | 1873

My dear Trollope

I have no engagement tomorrow evening – and it follows as a matter of course that I accept your kind invitation with the greatest pleasure. Yes – I have heard of the American lady – she is adored by everybody, and I am all ready to follow the general example.¹

Yours ever | WC

P.S. | I have been perpetually occupied with my play at The Olympic² – or I should have called and asked you for that cigar which I missed last time (when I met those nice Americans at your table.)

1. The actress Kate Field – see [1550] to her of 28 July 1875.

2. The New Magdalen.

[1352] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 10 JUNE 1873

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 186/42). Published: BGLL, II, p. 407.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th June 1873

My dear Mrs Frith,

I accept with the greatest pleasure your kind invitation for the 30th at 7.30.

(In haste) | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[1353] TO MR LETHBRIDGE,¹ 11 JUNE 1873

MS: Girton (GCRF 10/1/4). Published: BGLL, II, p. 407.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 11th June 1873

Dear Sir,

You will greatly oblige me if you will see, for a few minutes, the bearer of this letter – my friend Mr Poles – who has a few words to say to you in my interest and as my representative.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

[indcipherable initial] Lethbridge Esq.

1. Unidentified, though CD's 'Down with the Tide' (Household Words, 5 February 1853) mentions 'Mr. Lethbridge, then property-man at Drury Lane Theatre'.

[3248] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE, 17 JUNE 1873

MS: Dartmouth. Published: MacKaye, I, p. 209; A&C9, p. 15.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square | W.

17th June 1873

Dear MacKaye,

Forgive me for not having sooner thanked you for your kind letters.

I placed the specimen of the “Type-Writer” at once in the hands of a friend. You have no doubt heard that this very clever invention is now to be brought before the public notice – with “capital” to back it. It will, I hope, be a great success.¹

I am going to Paris tomorrow or next day – if a bad cold will let me – to settle about the French translation of the (dramatic) New Magdalen with our excellent friend Regnier.² If you have any message to him – or anything to send – let me hear from you before 12 o’clock (noon) tomorrow. In a week I shall, though, be back again – and then we must meet.

With kindest regards to Mrs MacKaye

Yours ever | W.C

over /³

P.S. Many thanks for the account of that curious Trial.⁴ My lawyer in the U.S. (W. D. Booth of New York)⁵ also sent me the newspaper. Needless to say that I was very much gratified by the “judgment” in my favour – and by the sympathy expressed for me in this matter.

1. In early March 1873 at Ilion, New York, the Remington Company started production of the Sholes and Glidden Type-Writer, the first such device with a QWERTY keyboard. According to an article in the Times (‘The Type Writer’, 25 April 1876, p. 6), the machine only became generally available in London from early in that year.

2. A dramatic version of The New Magdalen was translated by R. du Pontavice de Heussey and published in Paris in 1887 by Paul Ollendorff as Madeleine: pièce en quatre actes.

3. Written in the bottom right-hand corner of the third page of the folding notepaper to draw attention to the postscript on the fourth.

4. Referring to the injunction (brought before Judge George F. Shepley of the US Circuit Court, Boston) by the Baltimore dramatic agent Walter Benn against Carlotta Leclercq, for infringing his right to the use of the title ‘The New Magdalen’ in her recent production at the Globe Theatre, Boston, which was authorized by WC. Benn claimed that his own registration of the dramatic title with Congress in late February 1873, while WC’s novel of that name was running as a monthly serial, gave him exclusive rights to its use. The injunction was denied by Judge Shepley, who noted that Benn had not followed up his registration of the title with deposit of a playscript. The newspaper report referred to here is likely to be that in the New York Times (23 May 1873, p. 4), which described the decision as one of ‘some international importance, and of interest generally to literary men’, while applauding the ruling as likely to discourage a speculative practice which would ‘preclude the real author, or those whom he might lawfully convey, from playing, or profiting by, his own work in this country at all’.

5. William D. Booth of 62 Wall Street, New York, who acted for WC in copyright matters in the USA (see [0738] to Booth, 15 April 1867).

[1354] TO WYBERT REEVE, 26 JUNE 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 408.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | June 26th 1873

My dear [Reeve],¹

I will be with you tomorrow morning (Friday) at 11.

Of course, you shall have tickets for Saturday. At least you will hear Gounod play. As for me, it is my first attempt at reading in public. You know what “first attempts” are. I say no more!²

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I too have had a letter from Brelsford – which I will bring with me.³

1. The name has been erased but it is still possible to decipher. Wybert Reeve was scheduled to join WC on his reading tour of North America, so the postscript confirms the identification.

2. The occasion referred to here was a charity matinée at the Olympic Theatre on Saturday 28 June, prior to the evening performance of The New Magdalen – see Peters, pp. 345–346. Among the attractions were Ada Cavendish performing Tennyson's 'Charge of the Light Brigade', WC reading 'A Terribly Strange Bed', and a piano recital by the French composer Charles-François Gounod (1818–93), who lived in England for a period following the Franco-Prussian War of 1870. Gounod also accompanied the amateur soprano, Georgina Weldon. Strangely, in his 'Personal Recollections of Wilkie Collins', Reeve writes 'I never had an opportunity of hearing him [read in public] ...' (Reeve 1889, p. 4f). Perhaps in the event the actor was unable to attend the charity matinée, or perhaps he had simply forgotten this occasion. 3. C. Brelsford of the American Literary Bureau, New York, who arranged readings for WC on his tour of the United States – see [1364] to William Tindell of 21 July 1873.

[1355] TO CHARLES KENT, 27 JUNE 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.¹ Published: BGLL, II, p. 408.

90 Gloucester Place | W. | June 27th 1873

Dear Mr Kent,

Pray accept my best thanks for your kind letter and your friendly wishes. I have given instructions that two tickets are to be sent to you for the afternoon performance at The Olympic Theatre tomorrow.²

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Charles Kent Esq

1. Initialled and directed to 'Charles Kent Esq | Office of The | Illustrated Review | 49 Essex Street | Strand W.C.', with the last two lines erased and 'Fleet St | E.C.' added above the name, possibly in another hand. Postmarked 'LONDON WC | 6 | JU 27 | 73'.

2. See the notes to [1354] to Wybert Reeve of 26 June 1873.

[1356] TO WILLIAM HEPWORTH DIXON,¹ 29 JUNE 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 409.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | June 29th 1873

My dear Hepworth Dixon,

I was very sorry to miss you when you kindly called here.

Are you likely to be passing this way either tomorrow Tuesday or Wednesday between 1.30 and 2? If Yes – you must lunch somewhere – why not lunch here? Pot-luck and "a drink" and no company. Don't trouble to write if this will do. If not, tell me on what day I shall find you at home between 5 and 6 P.M.

Except when I am eating sleeping or out for my afternoon walk I am hard at work on my "readings" for America.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. William Hepworth Dixon (1821–79), historian, traveller and editor of the Athenæum from 1853 to 1869. See WC's comments on his advocacy of physical education in the letter [1065] to George Sala of 23 February 1871.

[3042] TO WYBERT REEVE, JUNE 1873¹

MS: Unknown. Extract: (Melbourne) Argus (19 October 1878), p. 12;² Reeve 1889, p. 4d, our copy text; Reeve 1891, p. 108; A&C3, p. 48 (with Reeve 1891 as copy text).

My Dear Reeve, – First let me heartily congratulate you on the great increase of reputation which your performance of Fosco has so worthily won. I and my play are both deeply indebted to your artistic sympathy, and your admirable business management – to say nothing of the great increase of sale in the book in each town you play, &c.

1. Reeve 1889 gives the following preface to the letter: 'Mr. Vining failing of success in the provinces in a few weeks, and not having behaved well in the transaction with me, Mr. Collins destroyed their agreement, took all future right in the piece from him, and placed it in my hands, never allowing him to play the part [of Fosco] again, or indeed anyone else until some time after I left England for Australia in 1878. Nothing could be more generous than his acknowledgments to me. In June, 1873, he writes: —'. In marked contrast, throughout the opening paragraphs of his recollections of WC, Reeve is highly critical of George Vining, who had died in 1875, in the second version going so far as to condemn him roundly as 'a bad stage-manager' (Reeve 1891, p. 106).

2. The following fragment appears in an advertisement for Wybert Reeve's Australian debut appearance as Fosco in The Woman in White at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne from Saturday, 19 October 1878:

Extract from a letter from Mr. Wilkie Collins to Wybert Reeve:— "I sincerely congratulate you on your success as Fosco. A more complete or more honourable recognition of the impression you have produced everywhere it is impossible to imagine. I and my play are deeply indebted for your fine performance and your artistic sympathy."

The play ran in Melbourne for six nights (excluding the Sunday) until Friday, 25 October, and a similar advertisement ran in the Argus on each occasion. In the Saturday edition only, the advertisement appeared in a rather longer form, and included the claim that Reeve had already played the part 'for upwards of 2000 nights in the chief cities of England, Ireland, Scotland, America, and Canada, with the greatest success'.

3. Two articles in the Era (18 August 1872, p. 12, and 27 April 1873, p. 7) together cite reviews in sixteen different provincial journals, all offering lavish praise of Reeves's Fosco.

[3343] TO COUTTS & Co.,¹ 9 JULY 1873²

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C12, pp. 4-5.

[recto]

Exch^e for £88 stg. NEW-YO[RK]³
Sixty days after sight after this FIRS[T] unpaid) Pay to the Order of Harper
Eighty eight pounds sterling
Value received, and charge the same to accou[nt]
To | Messrs [illegible]
48 [illegible] London
P36921
Accepted 7 May 1873
At Mess^{rs} Martin & C^{o4}
[illegible]

[verso]

Pay to the order of
Wilkie Collins
Harper & Brothers
Wilkie Collins⁵
[illegible]

1. A payable order from Harper & Brothers in New York, in the sum of £88 at sixty days notice, credited to WC's account 9 July 1873.

2. The date is the date of crediting to WC's account and the last possible date he could have signed it. It is likely he signed it shortly after receipt.

3. The order is torn in half here. Orders sent by transatlantic post could be torn in half and posted in two separate envelopes.

4. These two lines are stamped vertically in red ink.

5. The signature only is in WC's hand. The rest is a mixture of other hands and stamped and printed text.

[1357] TO [ESTHER] LEVY,¹ 9 JULY 1873

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 409.

Ramsgate | 9th July 1873

Dear Mrs Levy,

My old enemy, Rheumatism, has found me out again – and my doctor banished me yesterday to this place. To my own great regret I must trust to your indulgence to excuse my absence on Saturday. Dining out is forbidden – and I have no choice but to ask you and Mr Levy to accept my apologies.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. This is likely to be Esther Levy née Cohen (d. 1883), wife of Joseph Moses Levy (1812–88: ODNB), proprietor of the Daily Telegraph and a patron of music and drama.

[1358] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 9 JULY 1873¹

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 341 (with no year given); BGLL, II, pp. 409–410.

Granville Hotel² | Ramsgate | Wednesday July 9th

My dear Mrs Ward

Fate has determined that I am not to dine again in your house. I was yesterday – after some previous suffering from rheumatism – sent here by medical order to get health and strength – and I have no alternative but once more (most unwillingly) to ask you and Ward to accept my apologies.

Believe me | Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. Dating from the relation to the previous letter, supported by the black-edged notepaper belonging to the period of mourning for CAC.

2. The Granville Hotel, Victoria Parade, East Cliff, Ramsgate, designed by Edward Pugin (1834–75), son of Augustus Welby Pugin, occupied a stunning position overlooking the sea. It had a Turkish bath and sea water could be pumped direct to the bathrooms. See <www.pugin.com/pugsons.htm>.

[3043] TO JOSEPH J. CASEY,¹ 12 JULY 1873

MS: HSP (Gratz Collection 10/28). Published: A&C3, pp. 48–49.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London | 12th July 1873

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter, and pray believe that I am gratefully sensible of the honour which the offered welcome of your Association confers on me. I feel the sincerest respect for the Public School Teachers of America. No other public duties, in any country, can compare in importance, with the duties which the Teacher performs. The future of the nation is in his hands.

But – while I feel sincerely ~~the~~ proud of the recognition of my labours as a literary man which the greeting of your Association confers on me – there are reasons, I regret to say, that compel me to refrain from availing myself of the invitation which your letter conveys.

I have (as you are perhaps aware) public engagements to fulfil on my arrival in the United States. My health is not good – and I am medically advised that I can only hope to sustain the inevitable fatigue of the readings which I propose to give, by reserving all my energies for that one occupation, and by laying it down as a rule to abstain from appearing at public meetings.

Under these circumstances, I hope I may count on your indulgence, and on the indulgence of the Association, to accept my excuses.

With the renewed expression of my thanks,

I have the honour to be | Your faithful servant | Wilkie Collins

To | Joseph J. Casey Esqre

President of | The Public School Teachers' Association

1. Then President of the Public School Teachers' Association of New York, and later principal of New York Public School No. 83 for boys in 110th Street, off 3rd Avenue.

[1359] TO CHARLES KENT, 12 JULY 1873

MS: Boston (Eng 98). Photocopy: Beinecke (Kent 1/29). Published: BGLL, II, p. 410.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th July 1873

My dear Mr Kent,

I have just returned to London and just read the Memoir in this weeks' number of the Illustrated Review.¹ Let me say frankly, in one word, that I am not only pleased – I am really touched by the considerate and generous tone in which the article is written. It is essentially the work of a brother-writer, who feels with me and for me – and I sincerely value it as an expression of sympathy and recognition rare in my personal experience of English criticism.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I am away again on Monday for a few weeks. But I hope I shall see you before I sail for America in September.

1. An unsigned critical review entitled 'Wilkie Collins', together with a full-page portrait, was published in the Illustrated Review, 6:81 (10 July 1873), pp. 30–37.

[3044] TO JOHN WATKINS, 15 JULY 1873

MS: Rochester. Published: A&C3, p. 49.

Eastbourne | Tuesday 15th July

My dear Sir,

I am staying here for a few days – and your letter has followed me.

By this post I write to hurry the binder. In a few days you will I hope have the books.¹

I am concerned to hear that you are still suffering. I had hoped that you would be able to try change of air and scene.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

(In great haste | to catch the post)

John Watkins Esqr

1. See [1330] to Watkins of 5 May 1873, as well as [1366] of 26 August 1873 and [1347] of 29 May 1873, both to Bentley.

[1360] TO SQUIRE BANCROFT,¹ 17 JULY 1873

MS: Unknown. Published: Bancroft 1909, p. 173, our copy text; BGLL, II, pp. 410–411.

90, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, | July 17, 1873

My Dear Bancroft, –

Thank you heartily for your kind letter. I should be the most ungrateful man living if the result of Man and Wife did not far more than merely “satisfy” me. My play has been magnificently acted, everybody concerned with it has treated me with the greatest kindness, and you and Mrs Bancroft have laid me under obligations to your sympathy and friendship for which I cannot sufficiently thank you. The least I can do, if all goes well, is to write for the Prince of Wales's Theatre again, and next time to give you and Mrs Bancroft parts that will be a little more worthy of you.²

Ever yours, | Wilkie Collins.

1. The distinguished actor-manager – see [1109] to him of 1 August 1871.
2. Marie and Squire Bancroft played the minor roles of Blanche Lundie and Dr Speedwell.

[1361] TO FLORENCE MARRYAT, 17 JULY 1873

MS: Hanes. Published: BGLL, II, p. 411.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17th July 1873

Dear Madam

I am again – I regret to say – preventing [sic] from acceding to your proposal for Christmas.¹

My arrangements are made for going to America in September next to deliver public readings from my works. If I can find time to write under these circumstances (which I doubt) my pen is already engaged, here and in the United States.

Pray accept my excuses, and believe me

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mrs Ross Church

1. See [1241] to Florence Marryat of 15 June 1872. WC did not write for London Society under her editorship, but in 1884 the magazine carried “I Say No” in twelve parts from January to December.

[1362] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 17 JULY 1873

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 411–412.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17th July 1873

My dear Ted,

I have only today returned from the seaside – and I have just seen (in the Publishers Circular) that a “Mr Eaton” has got the R.A. Secretaryship.¹

I cannot tell you how sorry I am for this disappointment of your expectations. All the artists (R As) I saw appeared to think you were certain to be chosen. Who is “Mr Eaton”? and what does it mean?

I am bad with rheumatism – just going to bed with pills in prospect. Forgive, on this account, a very hasty letter which only says that I am sincerely sorry.

Yours always affly | WC

I have arranged to sail for America on September 13th

1. See [1342] to the Royal Academy, 20 May 1873.

[1363] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 18 JULY 1873

MS: Glasgow (891117/116). Published: B&C, II, pp. 365–366.

90 Gloucester Place | Saturday July 18th | 1873¹

ATHENÆUM CLUB | PALL MALL S.W.

My dear Tindell,

My place is taken in the Algeria for New York – to sail on September 13th.

My will must be executed, and there is the insurance of Mrs Dawson’s furniture at /55/ Marylebone Road.² Shall these things be settled before your holiday or after?

I am away to Paris tomorrow. Return at the end of the month. Yours to command in August. Will write you my address in Paris.

In haste | Ever yours | WC

1. Written above the embossed club address, centred.
2. WC adopted the identity of William Dawson, barrister-at-law, when with Martha Rudd, the mother of his children (Clarke, p. 122). Reproduced in Clarke is a receipt, dated 4 February 1873, from Hewetson and Thexton of Tottenham Court Road for £100-0s-9d for furniture to 'Dawson Esq', suggesting the period of the move from 33 Bolsover Street to 55 Marylebone Road. WC seems to have paid the bill in cash, drawing out £100 on 4 February from his bank (Coultts: WC).

[1364] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 21 JULY 1873

MS: Glasgow (891117/117). Summary: B&C, II, p. 366. Published: BGLL, II, p. 412.

Hotel des Bains | Boulogne Sur Mer | 21st July 1873

My dear Tindell,

I go to Paris tomorrow – to stay four or five days at least. Address
Hotel du Helder | Rue du Helder | Paris.

=

Enclosed is a letter which I propose sending to the Speculator who offers to buy me for the U.S.

My object is not to commit myself to him for more than 10 readings – then to be free to throw him over or to go on with him as experience decides me. It is important not to say No too absolutely at starting as these people have all the machinery for managing the readings in their own hands and in excellent working order. If you think my letter a safe one, please send it, postage paid, by next Saturday's mail to

C. Brelsford Esq | American Literary Bureau
New York (City) | United States¹

It will be well to have the letter copied. The terms referred to are the terms already agreed on. The question of the number of readings is the only question at issue now. The enclosure referred to explains itself. It will show them that I am in earnest.

Yours ever | [del] Wilkie Collins

You will have received a letter from me about my Will and the Insurance?²

-
1. The letter has not been traced. In the event WC's reading tour was organized only initially by Brelsford. Later the promotion seems to have been taken over by James Redpath of the Boston Lyceum Bureau – see [1397] of 9 December 1873 and [1419] of 10 February 1874, both to him.
 2. See [1363] to Tindell of 18 July 1873.

[1365] TO LORD LYMINGTON,¹ 29 JULY 1873

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 413

HÔTEL | DES BAINS | Boulogne s/mer | le July 29th 1873

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to Lord Lympington, and regrets that it is not in his power to comply with the request with which Lord Lympington has favoured him. The only copies in existence of the dramatic version of "The Woman In White" (as performed at the Olympic Theatre) are the "prompt-copy" and the "author's copy" – both of which it is necessary strictly to reserve for use at the performances of the work in this country and in America.

-
1. Isaac Newton Wallop, fifth Earl of Portsmouth (1825–91: Boase).

[1366] TO JOHN WATKINS, 26 AUGUST 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 413.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th Augt 1873

Dear Mr Watkins

The volume (with the line of inscription written on the blank page) is ready for your messenger. I am sorry to give you the trouble of sending again.

It is a real pleasure to me to hear that you like the look of the books. The binders are
Messrs Westley & Co | Friar Street | Doctors' Commons | E.C.¹

Believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Have you ever tried Caplin's Electro Chemical Baths? 9 York Place Baker Street. They did wonders for me, some years since²

1. See [1330] to Watkins of 5 May 1873 and the series of letters to George Smith ([1329], [1331], [1335], [1339]) around the same date. Presumably WC had neglected to write an inscription in one of the presentation volumes.

2. WC's postscript suggests that Watkins also suffered from gout.

[3177] TO HUGH BIERS,¹ [EARLY JULY] 1873²

MS: Unknown. Extract: (Melbourne) Argus (29 August 1873), p. 5;³ A&C7, p. 40 (as to Henry C. Biers, dated August 1873).

My pen is laid down for the present, and I am practising the art of 'reader.' I have had proposals made to me to 'read' from my works in the United States during the coming autumn and winter. I have accepted the proposal, and if all goes well shall sail for New York in September or October next.

1. Hugh Biers (1829–1886), WC's agent in Melbourne for over twenty years with power of attorney for Australia and New Zealand (see [1583] to Tindell, 16 December 1875). Biers was at this time the chief draughtsman of the Office of Crown Lands and Survey, the address which WC used for correspondence. Back in 1849 Biers had played the part of a bailiff in WC's amateur production of The Good-Natur'd Man at Blandford Square. According to the programme (a copy of which is at TM, London), Biers also assisted CAC with the scenery and 'the machinery'. Throughout WC's correspondence (and indeed in the columns of the Melbourne Argus where fragments of a couple of WC's letters to him are preserved, including this one) the name appears in no fuller form than 'H. Biers'. However, there seems little doubt that the reference is to Hugh Biers, born on 18 January 1829 and baptised at St Mary-le-bone on 17 February 1829, the eldest of three children of Hugh Biers, surveyor and architect, and his wife Elizabeth née Stringer, of 12 Dorset Place, Dorset Square (Post Office Directory of London, 1845), a stone's throw from Blandford Square. Perhaps to avoid confusion between father and son, the former seems often to have been called 'Henry' and the latter 'Harry'. Hugh Jr clearly adopted his father's profession and by early 1853 the family had moved to the Australian colony of Victoria (created in 1851 by separation from New South Wales). The columns of the Argus show that, at the beginning of the 1860s, WC's friend ceased to work for his father's firm of H. Biers & Co. of 44 Elizabeth Street, Melbourne, and entered public service as clerk in the Survey Department at Ballarat. They also show Biers Jr to have been an active contributor to colonial life: by the later 1850s he was married to Annetta née Roberts with a daughter, appeared as a slow bowler for the Emerald Hill Cricket Club, and was still involved in amateur theatricals, playing Launcelot Gobbo in the Garrick Club's staging of The Merchant of Venice at the Princess's Theatre in June 1858; by the 1870s he was president of first the Melbourne Mechanics Institute, and then the Melbourne Athenæum. Finally, the newspaper reports his declining health and rather sudden death on 14 June 1886 at the age of only 57 (Melbourne Argus, 16 June 1886, p. 5). An overview of the careers of Biers Sr and Jr is also found in George Tibbits, 'Biographical Index of Australian Architects' (2008), <https://issuu.com/graamebutler21/docs/architects_bios-tibbits>, 1/B/9, which cites the 'Death Certificate Hugh Biers (Jnr), Registrar of Births Marriages Deaths, Melbourne'.

2. Conjectural dating based on the then standard journey time of 45 days for the rapid mail steamer from London to Melbourne via Suez.

3. The item is introduced: 'The following is an extract from a letter from Mr. Wilkie Collins to Mr. H. Biers, received by this mail, from which it appears that he has decided to follow the example of his relative the late Charles Dickens:—'.

[1367] TO WYBERT REEVE, MARCH–AUGUST 1873

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4d-e, our copy text;¹ Reeve 1891, p. 113; Reeve 1906, p. 459.² Published: BGLL, II, p. 413 (with Reeve 1906 as copy text).

They actually accommodated £131 in that little place.

1. Following [1298] to Reeve of late February 1873, which concerns the Bancrofts' production of Man and Wife at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Reeve introduces this further fragment with: 'He then quotes to me the receipts, and later on they average over £100 a night. On one occasion he writes:-'.

2. In Reeve 1906, the equivalent passage is rather longer and reads: 'He quotes the receipts as over one hundred pounds a night, and in a letter on another occasion he writes: "They actually accommodated over one hundred and thirty-one pounds in that little place. Does not that surprise you?"'.

[1368] TO F. C. BEARD, 1869–AUGUST 1873¹

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: BGLL, II, p. 414; amended A&C5, p. 20.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

My dear Frank,

It is inconceivable to me that you did not murder the comic singer.² But you are such an eccentric man!

I don't feel quite equal to Bellew this stormy weather.³ I shall be here till five or half past – come and have a drink – and let us talk about it. I was thinking of the opera buffa (as an antidote to the comic singer). Strange to say – I was not seedy yesterday. But then I went to bed!

Yours ever | WC

1. Dating from the address and the reference to Bellew.

2. Unidentified.

3. Presumably referring to one of the many public readings from Shakespeare and other English poets by J. C. M. Bellew (1823–74: ODNB), for which he was famous after his resignation from the clergy in 1868. Previously Bellew had been vicar of St Mark's, St John's Wood. According to Henrietta Ward (Ward, pp. 114–115), he 'possessed not only great powers of intellect and oratory, but a dramatic and handsome appearance ... and a wonderful voice ... He knew Fechter and taught him elocution'. Davis (p. 224) suggests that WC first met Bellew in the early 1860s when they were near neighbours, and that WC occasionally attended the sessions with Fechter. Following two heavy speaking tours of the United States of America, Bellew was taken seriously ill towards the end of April 1874 and died on 21 June. WC undoubtedly met Bellew in New York, as one of the guests at William Seaver's breakfast of 22 October 1873, but we assume this letter precedes rather than follows WC's trip to North America.

[3323] TO WYBERT REEVE, JUNE-AUGUST 1873¹

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4e, our copy text;² Reeve 1891, pp. 113–114; Reeve 1906, p. 460. Published: BGLL, II, p. 406 (incorporated in [1349] to Reeve of [Late May] 1873). See A&C11, p. 17.

We have really hit the mark. Ferrari³ translates it for Italy, Reginer⁴ has two theatres ready for me in Paris, and Lambe⁵ of Vienna has accepted it for his theatre. Here the enthusiasm continues.

1. WC's The New Magdalen ran at the Olympic Theatre in London from 19 May until 27 September 1873, before beginning a provincial tour in Leeds on 6 October. We assume, though, that WC must have been writing rather before his departure for North America in mid-September.

2. In Reeve 1889, the extract follows immediately after [1349] to Reeve of [Late May] 1873, with 'later on he writes me:-' interpolated between the two sentences.

3. Presumably Paolo Ferrari (1822–89), the most popular Italian playwright of the second half of the nineteenth century.

4. Thus for 'Regnier' in Reeve 1889/1891; Reeve 1906 corrects the error.

5. Mistranscribed by Reeve in all three versions of 'Recollections'. The reference is to Heinrich Rudolf Constanz Laube (1806–84), German novelist, playwright and theatre director. From 1872 he was the director of the state theatre in Vienna. See the references to him in [1250] to Simpson of 5 August 1872 and [1251] to Lehmann of 15 August 1872.

[1369] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 2 SEPTEMBER 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 414.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd September 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

I leave for Liverpool on the 12th and sail for New York by the Algeria on the 13th of this month.

This is to say Goodbye if I don't see you (I hear you are out of town) – also to ask you to kindly instruct your clerk to let me know how the account for “The New Magdalen” stands before I go away.¹ If there is any other matter connected with “Miss or Mrs?” or “Poor Miss Finch” on which it may be sensible to communicate with me – now is the time! I am settling everything before I go away.

Yours vry truly | Wilkie Collins

(In great haste)

*[illegible postscript]*²

1. That is, the sales of the two-volume edition in the three months or so since publication on 19 May.

2. Five or six indecipherable words which appear to be in WC's hand, in the top left-hand corner of the letter, above the printed address.

[1370] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 2 SEPTEMBER 1873

MS: Glasgow (891117/118). Published: BGLL, II, p. 415.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Tuesday Sept 2

My dear Tindell,

I will be with you tomorrow (Wednesday) between 12 and 1.¹

Yours ever | WC

1. Probably for a meeting about his will and other matters prior to his departure for America – see [1371] to Tindell of 4 September 1873.

[1371] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 4 SEPTEMBER 1873

MS: Glasgow (891117/119). Published: B&C, II, p. 366.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 4th Sept 1873

My dear Tindell,

A short clause in the Will.

A portrait in chalks of my brother Charles – taken /immediately/ after his death by Holman Hunt, and presented to me, is to be returned to Hunt at my death.² If Hunt is not living at the time, then the portrait is to go to Hunt's son (and only child) Cyril.

Yours ever | WC

1. Black, Gothic, engraved type, centred, on mourning paper.

2. See [1334] to William Holman Hunt of 11 May 1873.

[1372] TO FRANÇOIS REGNIER, 7 SEPTEMBER 1873

MS: BNF (Nouv. Acq. Fr. 24642, ff. 226–227). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 415–416.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 7th September 1873

My dear Regnier,

A few lines more to say goodbye. I go to Liverpool on Friday next, the 12th and I sail for New York on the 13th.

My address at New York (City) will be Westminster Hotel. Letters will be forwarded to me from the Hotel, when I am away.

I begin my readings – not in the City of New York – but in the State or “Department” of New York: itself as large or larger than England! I “read” at ten country towns, beginning October 6th – and return to New York City to plan another campaign – if I succeed.

If M. Belot accepts the collaboration, he will, I suppose, kindly send to me (through you) a Scenario of his version of my play.¹ It will be well perhaps to tell him that the principal “situations” of the piece, always produce the same effect on audiences at home and abroad – wherever the piece is played.

Once more, my dear friend, thank you heartily for all your kindness to me. I will write and tell you how I prosper in America.

With my kindest remembrances to all “at home”,

Ever affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

When you write again, don't forget to tell me whether you have accepted the Directorship proposed to you.² For the sake of Art, I hope you have said Yes.

1. Probably The New Magdalen – see [1349] to Reeve of [late May] 1873.

2. Régnier had retired from the stage in April 1871 after nearly forty years with the Théâtre Français. When he made the announcement, in a review headed ‘French Plays’ (6 June 1870, p. 10d), the Times had commented: ‘... mark the difference between French theatrical administration and our own. Regnier ceases to act, but does not cease to teach acting. He still continues, as a Professor of the Conservatoire, to train pupils for the profession he has so long adorned.’ Regnier had in fact begun to teach at the Conservatoire de musique et de déclamation in 1854; the proposed directorship is unlikely to have been that of the Conservatoire, since the post was held from 1871 to 1896 by the composer Ambroise Thomas.

[1373] TO JOHN ELDERKIN,¹ 9 SEPTEMBER 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 416.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
9th September 1873

(In haste)

My dear Sir,

One line – a few days before we meet, I hope, in New York – to thank you for your letter of August 22nd. I leave for America (by the Algeria) on Saturday next. Let us hope I shall get an idea for the Christmas Story on board the Steamer.² All my time is now occupied in enlarging one of my stories for public reading – and in making the necessary arrangements before my departure. I am glad to hear that The Fireside Companion is still rising in the public esteem.

Mr Bixby and Mr Hagar lunched with me a few days since. It has given me great pleasure to make their acquaintance.³ I go to the Westminster Hotel.

Sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins

John Elderkin Esqre

1. Editor of the popular New York weekly Fireside Companion, published from November 1869 by George Munro & Co.

2. ‘The Dead Alive’ (later retitled ‘John Jago’s Ghost’), which would appear in the Fireside Companion.

3. Dan Bixby was a New York agent who WC remained friends with for many years, and who frequently visited London – see, for example, [2163] to Andrew Chatto of 8 June 1883. Hagar has not been identified.

[1374] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 10 SEPTEMBER 1873

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, pp. 277–278. Published: BGLL, II, p. 417.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | September 10th 1873

Dear Mr Bentley,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £185-0-2 – being the amount due to me, on account of “The New Magdalen” and “Poor Miss Finch”, up to the present date.¹

By all means, print the 6/ edition of “The New Magdalen”, whenever you think it desirable to begin. I shall not be able to correct the proofs – but I know you will have them carefully read. I leave you to dispose of the unsold copies of The New Magdalen, as you think best for our common advantage.²

I heartily wish the profit, on your side, from the three volume edition of “Poor Miss Finch” had been a little better worth having.³ The whole thing is so thoroughly discouraging – (“The New Magdalen”, in book form, barely realizing £300 up to this time!) – that I doubt whether I should write any more stories for English readers, for the excellent reason that I really cannot afford it, so long as the Mudie-system sets itself up as an obstacle between the public and me. In America, the sale of The New Magdalen has been enormous. We shall see how the 6/ edition prospers here.⁴

With best wishes, and many thanks for all your kindness,

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

My address in America will be (for the present) – Westminster Hotel | New York | (City)

1. A payment of this amount from ‘R Bentley & Sons’ is recorded on this date (Coumts: WC). This represents WC’s share of the sales of the single-volume reprint of Poor Miss Finch issued in early 1873, and the three-volume edition of The New Magdalen issued in May. Bentley’s ledgers reveal that, finally, 1,956 copies of The New Magdalen (of the original 2,000 copies printed) were sold, many at big discounts, with only £295-0s-4d going to the author and £132-17s-9d to the publisher (Gettmann, p. 140). This payment recorded on this date in his bank account ‘R Bentley & Sons’ (Coumts: WC).

2. The Bentley 6s edition of the novel was published in late 1873 though dated 1874, as Number 51 in Bentley’s Favourite Novels in an edition of 2,500 copies – see [1406] to Bentley of 9 January 1874. Bentley probably disposed of the remaining sheets of the first edition to Chapman & Hall, who seem to have issued the two volumes bound in one for sale at the railway bookstalls of W. H. Smith (Gasson, pp. 26–7).

3. According to Gettmann’s figures (p. 140), Bentley only made £333-17s-2d on sales of 2,063 copies – as against £760-10s to the author.

4. We have not been able to ascertain the sales figures of the single-volume edition of The New Magdalen published by Harper’s in New York in June 1873. Since there was no equivalent of the British circulating library system in the United States, new works were published cheaply in single volumes from the outset.

[1375] TO HUNTER, ROSE & Co., 11 SEPTEMBER 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 418.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
11th September 1873

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a B/E for £22..15.- for sales of “The New Magdalen” to 30th July. I am very glad to hear that the book is selling so well.¹

If I keep well, and if other matters prosper with me, my “reading” tour will extend to Canada. I need hardly say that I shall feel very great interest in visiting “The Dominion” – and that I shall be delighted to shake hands with you in your own office in Toronto, as a great improvement on only writing to the office!

On the subject of the proposed Christmas story, I will of course communicate with you as soon as I am able to begin the work.

My address at New York (City) will be Westminster Hotel. With sincere thanks for your kind wishes

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

1. WC’s The New Magdalen appeared as a single volume of 281 pages from Hunter, Rose of Toronto in 1873. A copy is held in the National Library of Canada. ‘B/E’ is the conventional abbreviation for ‘Bill of Exchange’. WC got the amount slightly wrong as the 60 day Bill for £22-5s was recorded on 13 November as ‘By recd City Bank’ (Coumts: WC).

[1376] TO STEFAN POLES,¹ 11 SEPTEMBER 1873

(Copy) 90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
11th September 1873

Dear Mr Poles,

I hereby confer on you my authority to act as my representative in all that relates to the production of the drama of “The New Magdalen” in the theatres of the Continent of Europe – and I leave you to appoint an agent, in place of the agent employed up to the present date, to receive for me from the Continental Managers of Theatres all sums of money paid by them (as already agreed) for the right of representing “The New Magdalen”, – such sums of money to be paid to my Bankers in London, Messrs Coutts & Co

I remain | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Stefan Polès Esq²

1. Stefan Poles (c. 1840–75), Polish emigré then resident at 20 Great Marlborough Street, London. According to Poles's own testimony in a British court, he had been a student of the University of Vitzburg, Bavaria, and in 1864 had been sentenced to death by the Russian authorities for supporting the Polish national uprising of the previous year. Thereafter, he had been in exile, supporting himself by working as a journalist. After taking part on the French side in the Franco-Prussian War and residing in Paris under the Commune, Poles had arrived in England in late 1871. Once in London, he seems to have made contact with a number of authors, including Mary Howitt, Charles Reade, Mary Elizabeth Braddon, and of course WC. Georgina Weldon states that ‘Stefan Polès ... who had never been an agent in his life, got himself introduced as such by a young communist, Camille Barrère’ (My Orphanage and Gounod in England, London: 1882, p. 78), while James Hepburn notes that Poles was a pioneer in having his name listed as a literary agent in the Post Office Directory for three years from 1874 (“The Author's Empty Purse” Revisited’, Sewanee Review 117:4 (Fall, 2009), pp. 628–40). In early 1874 Poles brought a successful action for libel against the Times for publishing a letter containing unfounded accusations that, during his stay in Paris, he falsely represented himself as a correspondent of the newspaper and attempted to obtain money by extortion (‘Action for Libel against the “Times”’, Morning Post, 10 February 1874, p. 6d-e, and 11 February 1874, p. 3d-e). At the end of 1874 Poles brought another successful libel action against three fellow emigrés for publishing in Whitefriars a scurrilous pamphlet in Polish, in which he was accused both of being a Russian spy and of pocketing subscriptions collected for the relief of his compatriots (see the Times, 15 December 1874, p. 11f, and 16 December 1874, p. 11d). In February 1875 Poles published a fifty-page pamphlet entitled The Actual Condition of the British Museum (London: H.S. Warr), vehemently criticising the library for, among other faults, its unhealthy working conditions as illustrated by cases like that of Emanuel Deutsch (see the notes to [1270] to him of 20 November 1872); reviews such as that in the Lancet (27 February 1875, p. 315) suggested that, though intemperately expressed, the accusations carried a good deal of truth. Alone and penniless, Poles himself was to die of emphysema and eclampsia in Middlesex Hospital on 5 November 1875, aged 36 (GRO). WC seems initially to have been impressed by Poles, employing him as theatrical agent from around May 1873 ([1350] to Tindell, 5 June 1873), but became suspicious of his actions and intentions while away on the North American reading tour (e.g. [1413] to Frank Archer, 27 January 1874), and finally came to see him as an ‘irreclaimable scoundrel’ ([1575] to Tindell, 12 November 1875). Archer himself says Poles ‘was of slight build, with ... much cleverness, and small searching eyes. He was a skilful linguist, and had the most persuasive, insinuating manners’ (Archer, p. 156). Some of the hostility towards Poles, however, may have been tainted with anti-Semitism. Weldon gives his real name as Rafael Tugendhold, while a letter from another Polish emigré to the Morning Post (21 May 1874, p. 3f) claimed that he ‘formerly passed under the names or name of Hyalmes Möller Tugendhold’. On his demise Edmund Yates's ‘Atlas’ column in the World (24 November 1875) viciously repeated some of the libels in the Whitefriars pamphlet:

A photograph of the ghastly unshaven face, with the glazed left eye still open, was taken after death. It bore a strange resemblance to one Tugendhold, a “converted” Jew and Russian spy, son of the Chief Rabbi of Warsaw, who was censor of the Press there previous to the last uprising.

(Though he was never Chief Rabbi, the reference here is likely be to Jakob Tugendhold (1794–1871) of Warsaw, censor of Hebrew publications in the service of the Tsar.) According to the most reliable account of his life, Adam Leśniewski's ‘A Certain Fiasco or the Role of Stefan Poles in the Polish Uprising of 1863’, Polish Review 23:4 (1978), pp. 18–38, which is based on sources in Polish and Russian as well as English, Poles had indeed been born into a Jewish family by the name of Tugendhold (pp. 20–21). Leśniewski comes to the conclusion that Poles was less a traitor or scoundrel than a sufferer from paranoid delusions.

2. Early on WC occasionally writes the name thus – see also [1350] to Tindell of 5 June 1873.

[1377] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 12 SEPTEMBER 1873

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 12th Sept 1873

My dear Tindell,

I signed the Will yesterday. It appears to me to be exactly what I wished for – viz: – Half what I leave behind me to C. E. Graves and her daughter – and half to Martha Rudd and my two children. On the deaths of Mrs Graves and her daughter, /(if they die first)/ their half to go to Martha Rudd and my two children, [del] as surviving legatees. The other eventualities it is needless to mention here.²

My man-servant /(Edward Grosvisssier)/ has not yet succeeded in getting a place – so I am obliged to give him a written character before I leave. He tells me that people require verification of the handwriting in these cases – so I refer to “my solicitors”. Will you instruct Charlton about this in your absence? He can speak to my writing and satisfy enquirers that the “character” is genuine.

My address at New York (City) will be | Westminster Hotel.

When I am [del] away my letters will be forwarded.³

I know you will, like a good fellow, give personal as well as professional advice to those whom I leave to the care of old friends like you – if they need it. Help them here and at Marylebone Road,⁴ when they want help, and oblige your friend,

Wilkie Collins

I leave a sealed letter, in my strong box in the study – to assist my Exors in case of need. If you think it better to have the box at your office, write to Caroline, and she will bring it to [del] Essex Street in a cab.

I will write from New York if all goes well.⁵

1. Black, Gothic, engraved type, centred, on mourning paper.

2. This equal division of his property was maintained in all subsequent wills. For the text of the final will, see the annotated transcription found at <<http://www.web40571.clarahost.co.uk/wilkie/will/willt.htm>>.

3. Here WC writes a line across the page, leaves a space and resumes, in order to avoid the inserted name ‘(Edward Grosvisssier)’ which has strayed across the fold in the paper and is enclosed within a circle.

4. Martha Rudd was living at 55, Marylebone Road with their two daughters. In the event, problems over the lease there led to WC returning from America earlier than anticipated.

5. WC writes the postscript on the final page, flagging the addition with ‘Over’ within a curving line in the lower right corner of the previous page.

[1378] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENTS,¹ 14 SEPTEMBER 1873

MS: Unknown.² Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, p. 216; B&C, II, p. 367.

Steam Ship Algeria | Queenstown Harbour³ | 14th September 1873

We sail for New York at 4 P.M. I am quite well. Love to you all. Goodbye.

Wilkie Collins.

1. This intimate farewell might well be to Martha Rudd and his children. If so, it is the only such document we have.

2. According to the typed transcript at Texas, this is an autograph letter ‘obviously written in great haste’.

3. The SS Algeria of the Cunard Line sailed for New York from Liverpool on Saturday, 13 September, calling briefly on the Sunday at the port of Queenstown on the south coast of Ireland (today known by its Gaelic name of Cobh).

[1379] TO JANE BIGELOW, 30 SEPTEMBER 1873

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 419–420.

Westminster Hotel | Tuesday Sept 30

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

I only received your very kind note this morning. Last night, I was at the Theatre.

Tonight, I have some men coming to dine with me. I find myself living here in a species of social whirlwind. It is needless to say how sincerely I regret having missed the opportunity of paying my respects which you have so kindly offered to me.

I wrote yesterday to Mr Bigelow – proposing to visit the Squirrels¹ on Monday October 6th on my way to my first “reading” at Albany on October 7th. I wish heartily that my engagements in New York, and in its immediate neighbourhood, would have permitted me to ask for an earlier day. As it is, I can only hope that Monday October 6th may not be too late for you.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The Squirrels was the country home owned by the Bigelows at Highland Falls on the Hudson in upstate New York, about fifty miles south of Albany.

[1380] TO DION BOUCICAULT, 8 OCTOBER 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 420.

Albany | Oct: 8th 1873

Dear Boucicault

I was away from New York, for some days – for work and quiet. Very sorry to miss you when you kindly called.¹

I “read” here, last night, for the first time. The story so rivetted [sic] the audience that not a soul stirred – and even when there was an alarm of fire in the neighbourhood, and the alarm-bell ringing outside!

On Tuesday October 21st I shall, I hope, be back in New York (at the Westminster Hotel). Until that time, I go on reading in this State – and perhaps at Philadelphia to wind up with. I shall be able I hope and trust to shake hands with you, before you leave again. A thousand thanks for your kind wishes. Send me a line to the Westminster Hotel, to say when I can see you in New York and where, on or after the 21st.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

The date of my reading in New York is not yet fixed. It will probably be as late as December. I think to go to Boston after this trip²

1. From 1873 Boucicault was principally resident in New York, where he died on 18 September 1890 – see Robert Hogan, Dion Boucicault (New York: Twayne, 1969).

2. In fact, WC travelled to Boston on 28 October, while his first reading in New York City was on 11 November (Hanes 2008, pp. 104–105).

[1381] TO DUNCAN SHERMAN & Co.,¹ 8 OCTOBER 1873

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 420–421.

Delavan House | Albany | 8th October 1873

Dear Sirs,

I beg to enclose – to be paid to credit of my account with your house – two cheques: – viz: –

1. On Bank of North America for $525.
2. On Albany County bank for $270.66.

Please acknowledge receipt, addressing me at Osborne House, Rochester, New York State.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Duncan Sherman & Co

1. New York banking house.

[1382] TO GEORGE W. CHILDS,¹ 21 OCTOBER 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), with envelope.² Published: BGLL, II, pp. 421–422.

Westminster Hotel | New York City | October 21st 1873

Dear Mr Childs.

I have just seen the agent for my readings³ – and I find myself, to my great disappointment, obliged to defer my visit to Philadelphia. It is essentially necessary (in the interests of my Boston readings) that I should travel to Boston on Tuesday next – instead of on Wednesday as I supposed. As the two days' mountain trip was fixed for Monday, I have no alternative but to trust to your indulgence and to Mrs Childs' indulgence to accept my excuses, and, with them, the expression of my sincere regret. I may add – as another reason for deferring my visit – that I am medically advised to limit my railway travelling as much as possible, while the strain of these public readings is laid on me. I was warned today that in undertaking the mountain-trip, the journey back here, and the journey to Boston the next morning, I was not acting wisely, in view of the reading to follow.

Under these circumstances then, I hope you and Mrs Childs will permit me to consider my visit to your beautiful house, as a visit put off until I have more time to spare. Let me once again thank you for all your kindness, and for the delightful evening I spent on Sunday last.⁴ Add to that kindness by accepting my apologies, and by presenting my best remembrances to Mrs Childs, and believe me

With sincere esteem and regard | Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George W. Childs Esqre

1. George William Childs (1829–94: DAB), author, bookseller and editor. Childs was joint-proprietor with Anthony J. and Francis A. Drexel of the (Philadelphia) Public Ledger from 1864; he founded the American Publishers' Circular and Literary Gazette in 1863; author of Recollections of General Grant (1885) and his own Recollections in 1890 (Pilgrim, XI, p. 77 n. 7).

2. Signed and directed to: 'George W. Childs Esqre | Philadelphia | Pa', with a Westminster Hotel crest in the top-left corner and the postmark 'NEW YORK | OCT | 21 | 8PM | N.Y.'

3. C. Brelsford of the American Literary Bureau.

4. The itinerary in Hanes 2008 (pp. 103–109) shows that WC did not find the opportunity to revisit Philadelphia, though he later recalled his evening with Childs and his wife on Sunday, October 19 with great warmth – see [1431] of 16 March 1874 and [1541] of 17 May 1875, both to Childs.

[3213] TO JAMES T. FIELDS,¹ [25 OCTOBER 1873]²

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C8, pp. 12–13.

My dear Mr Fields,

Incessant interruptions leave me only one moment before post time to say that I hope to be in Boston early next week.³

Thank you heartily for your kind letter. Tomorrow or Monday I will write again in greater detail

Yours ever truly | Wilkie Collins

1. James Thomas Fields (1817–81), partner in the Boston publishing firm of Ticknor & Fields – see [0499] to Frederick Lehmann, 13 November 1862.

2. WC returned to New York from Philadelphia on 21 October, and stayed at the Westminster Hotel until he left New York for Boston on Tuesday 28th. This letter is written on a Saturday and thus dated 25 October. There is a hint of an engraving – presumably of the Hotel – on the cut top of the sheet.

3. WC arrived on 28 October and stayed at Tremont House. He dined with Fields and his wife on the 29th – see Hanes 2008, pp. 40–41 and p. 104.

[1383] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 25 OCTOBER 1873

MS: Morgan (MA 13800). Published: BGLL, II, p. 422.

WESTMINSTER HOTEL | ... | Cor. Irving Place and 16th St. ... | New York²
25th Oct 1873

My dear [name excised]

I have waited to thank you for your very kind letter, until I could discover when my “reading” tour took me to Providence. So far as I know, at present, I shall read at Providence on November 3rd.³ But I am also due to read at other places on the 1st and on the 5th. There is thus no hope, this time, of my /being/ able to profit by your friendly invitation. After trying the experiment, I find [del] it absolutely necessary to rest the day after a reading, and to spare myself as much travelling as I possibly can. If you have nothing to do, and if Providence is not too far from the farm-house, it is needless to say that I shall be delighted to shake hands with you again, and to see [del] as much of you /(at Providence)/ as my engagements will allow. I leave New York on Tuesday next for Boston – and I go (I believe) to the Tremont [del] House remaining at Boston until near the end of the week.

I get on pretty well as to health – but this life here tries me a little.

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

1. However, the letter is clearly a response to an invitation to pay a visit to a farm not too far from Providence, Rhode Island, from someone who has met WC before, perhaps at New York or Boston. Thus it is possible that the recipient might be among the extensive lists of attendees at the various dinners etc. held in WC’s honour during September and October – see Hanes 2008, pp. 111–16.

2. WC uses embossed notepaper with a picture of the Hotel.

3. In fact, WC’s reading at Providence took place over a month later, on 11 December (Hanes 2008, pp. 43, 54).

[1384] TO GEORGE M. TOWLE, 30 OCTOBER 1873

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text; published Coleman, p. 217. Published: BGLL, II, pp. 422–423.

Tremont House, Boston.² | October 30th 1873

My dear Sir,

I perfectly recollect your favouring me with a visit when you were in London three years since.³

I must trust to your indulgence to excuse me if I fail to profit this time by your kind invitation. Tonight I give a reading at the Music Hall. Tomorrow, I go to Cambridge, and I have a dinner engagement in Boston.⁴ On Saturday, I return to New York.

Under these circumstances, I can only ask you – and the members of the Club⁵ – to accept my thanks and my excuses.

Believe me | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

Geo M. Towle Esq.

1. George M. Towle, American author, translator and journalist, on the editorial staff of the Boston Post from 1871 to 1876.

2. Handsome Boston hotel on the corner of Tremont Street and Beacon Street, where both CD and WC stayed during their visits to the city. The typed transcript at Texas notes the format as ‘black border’ (i.e. for mourning), which suggests the address is hand-written.

3. Towle was the United States Consul in Bradford, Yorkshire, from 1868 until 1870. WC met him at least once during that period – see [0840] to Towle of 26 June 1868.

4. Concerning both the reading and the dinner engagement, see Hanes 2008, pp. 41–42.

5. Perhaps the Papyrus Club, the Boston literary circle of which Towle became President in 1880.

[1385] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 31 OCTOBER 1873

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/35). Published: BGLL, II, p. 423.

October 31st 1873¹

Dear Mr Schlesinger,

I am going to present a petition to you. In plain English, I am going to ask you to kindly allow my Godson to pay me a little visit at New York – if you can spare him from the office on Monday and Tuesday, November 10th and 11th? On the first of these dates the dramatic “New Magdalen” is produced in New York, and on the second I make my first appearance there as a reader.² These are interesting occasions to Frank, and – subject to your approval – I have asked him to stay with me at my hotel.³

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. No address appears, though [1384] to George M. Towle of the previous day suggests that he was staying in Cambridge, Massachusetts, on the evening of Friday 31 October.
 2. Augustin Daly’s production of WC’s play opened at the Broadway Theatre on 10 November 1873 (Peters, p. 362). WC’s ‘New York reading at the Association Hall on 11 November had a mixed reception’ (Peters, p. 363).
 3. In the event, Frank Ward stayed with WC in New York until 16 November – see [1391] to Schlesinger of that date.

[3359] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 31 OCTOBER 1873

MS: Lewis Collection.¹ Published: A&C13, p. 7.

31st October 1873²

Wilkie Collins

-
1. On a small cut piece of faintly lined paper showing signs of having been pasted in an album. Probably a signature for a fan.
 2. The day before WC had read ‘The Dream Woman’ at the Music Hall in Boston to a capacity audience but to mixed reviews. On the 31st he paid a visit to nearby Cambridge, possibly to see the well-known photographer George Kendall Warren (1834-1884) with whom he would later arrange a photographic sitting. He returned in the evening to Boston for dinner with Sebastian Schlesinger and his wife at their home (Hanes, pp. 41-42, 104). This plain signature was probably for a stranger.

[1386] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 1 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Lewis Collection.¹ Published: BGLL, II, pp. 423–424.

very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1st November 1873

-
1. In purple ink on a sheet of lined paper; perhaps simply a response to a request for an autograph while travelling from Cambridge to New York.

[1387] TO CHARLES EYRE PASCOE,¹ 9 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Stanford. Published: BGLL, II, p. 424.

WESTMINSTER HOTEL | ... | Cor. Irving Place and 16th St. ... | New York
9th Novr 1873

My dear Sir,

I must beg you to excuse a very brief acknowledgment of your kind letter. I am overwhelmed just now with work and correspondence.

My plans are not yet settled for my next trip to Boston – or for my readings to come, in the course of this winter. I can only thank you for the kind offer of assistance which your letter contains.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Charles Eyre Pascoe Esq

1. Charles Eyre Pascoe (1842–1912), prolific Anglo-Irish author then resident at Boston, who published many books of travel as well as The Dramatic List (1879).

[3360] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 10 NOVEMBER 1873¹

MS: Lewis Collection.¹ Published: A&C13, p. 7.

With Mr Wilkie Collins's | Compliments²

1. Date from postmark on envelope 'NEW YORK | NOV | 10 | 7PM | N. Y.' The only November WC was in New York was in 1873 and on the 10th he attended the opening of The New Magdalen at Broadway Theatre (Hanes, p. 105).
2. Written on the inside flap and top part of an envelope cut off above the name and possible address.

[1388] TO JOHN BIGELOW,¹ 11 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Bigelow, with envelope.² Published: BGLL, II, pp. 424–425.

Westminster Hotel | 11th Nov 1873

My dear Mr Bigelow

If I had had the least idea that you would have left your comfortable house to sit under the affliction of “a reading” I should have sent you tickets a week since. How could I requite your hospitality in that way?

I have been to the hall, and have got the nearest places to the platform that are left. They are at the side – in one of the aisles. But you can see and hear – and I hope you will not be perfectly uncomfortable.

The [proceedings] begin at eight o'clock – if the audience will only settle down on its centre of gravity by that time.³

With best remembrances to Mrs Bigelow, | Yours ever | WC

Forgive me, pray, for returning the notes! The idea of your paying as if you were a stranger – instead of a friend and a brother-writer – upsets my nervous system, causes my flesh to creep, and makes my hair stand on end.

1. The American lawyer and diplomat who WC had first met in London in 1867. See [1379] to his wife Jane Bigelow of 30 September 1873.

2. Hotel stationery, signed and directed to: 'Hon^{ble} John Bigelow | 154 Madison Avenue'.

3. Referring to WC's first reading in New York City at the YMCA's Association Hall, on the corner of 23rd Street and what was then still called Fourth Avenue (now Park Avenue). See Hanes 2008, pp. 45–46.

[1389] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER,¹ 11 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 5/8).² Summary: B&C, II, pp. 367–368 (dated 16 November 1873). Published: BGLL, II, p. 425.

Westminster Hotel | 11th Nov^r 1873

My dear Mr Seaver

Let me dedicate my last morsel of writing-paper (for the moment) to thanking you for your very kind message left for me yesterday morning. I only returned at 6 o'Clock – and at 7.45, I had an appointment to support my fair friend “The New Magdalen” at the Broadway Theatre.³ When you hear of these obstacles I know you will kindly accept my excuses. If I had been a free man I should have enjoyed that quiet little dinner – as I enjoyed my last dinner with you. I can say no more.

The public gave us a great reception last night.
Yours ever | WC

1. Colonel William A. Seaver (d. 1883), New York raconteur, who from 1868 was in charge of the 'Editor's Drawer' in Harper's Magazine.
2. With the letter is a menu of 'Mr. William A. Seaver's Breakfast to Mr. Wilkie Collins. Union Club, October 22d, 1873' and a list of twenty-four guests including William Cullen Bryant and the Harper brothers.
3. The first night of Daly's production.

[1390] TO MR [HURLBERT],¹ 14 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, II, p. 425 (as to Mr Huelbert).

Westminster Hotel | Nov^r 14th

Dear Mr [Hurlbert]

I accept with the greatest pleasure your kind invitation for tomorrow at 7 – at The Manhattan Club.² Thank you for giving me, so soon, another chance!

This ought to have been written yesterday. My only excuse is that I don't know what leisure time means. I throw myself on your indulgence, and remain yours ever

Wilkie Collins

1. Despite the uncertainty concerning WC's spelling of the name (which appears again in [1430] to Seaver, 7 March 1874), this seems most likely to be the journalist William Henry Hurlbert (1827–95: DAB). Born Hurlbut, the son of a Unitarian Minister in Charleston, South Carolina, after graduating from Harvard and working briefly for the New York Times, Hurlbert joined the (New York) World in 1862, becoming editor-in-chief of the popular Democratic daily in 1876. Hurlbert was one of the speakers at the press dinner at Delmonico's on New York's Fifth Avenue to mark the close of CD's second reading tour of North America ('The Dickens Banquet', New York Times, 19 April 1868, p. 8). While spelling the family name inconsistently, Hanes 2008 (pp. 46, 105, & 116) suggests rather that the recipient here is E.P. Hurlbut, but it seems that this cannot be the case. Born in Herkimer County, to the west of Albany, New York State, Elisha Powell Hurlbut (1807–89) was a social reformer, former New York Supreme Court judge, and author of, among other works of political philosophy, Essays on Human Rights and their Political Guaranties (NY: Greeley & McElrath, 1845). By 1851 Hurlbut had retired from public life, and in 1859 began to live semi-reclusively at Glenmont-on-the-Hudson, a farm estate to the south of Albany. In his diary for 1876 John Bigelow describes Hurlbut as 'a successful lawyer, with whom I had been on intimate terms for a dozen years or more' (Bigelow 1913, V, p. 259). Susan Hanes reports Hurlbut to have been among those present at Seaver's breakfast in honour of WC at the Union Club on 22 October 1873 (Hanes 2008, pp. 41 & 116), though his name does not appear among the twenty-four guests listed on the back of the menu – see [1389] to Seaver of 11 November 1873. A personal communication from Jeffrey Gordon Dunnington (author of 'A Study of the Journal of Elisha P. Hurlbut, American Social Reformer, 1858–1887', MA Dissertation, Virginia Commonwealth University, 2014), confirms that there is no mention of WC throughout the eight volumes of Hurlbut's diary, while there is no evidence that Hurlbut visited New York City in the autumn of 1873 or had any connexion with the Manhattan Club (with grateful thanks to Jeff Dunnington).

2. Founded in 1865 at Benkard House on Fifth Avenue with Fifteenth Street, with then Democratic President Andrew Johnson elected an Honorary Member in 1866, the Manhattan Club was among the most prestigious and influential gentlemen's organizations of New York City – see Henry Watterson, History of the Manhattan Club (New York, 1915). Manton Marble, then owner of the (New York) World, had been Secretary of the Club from its foundation, while William H. Hurlbert himself was a long-serving member of the Management Committee, and in the same set at the Club as WC's friend Dion Boucicault (Watterson, pp. xxxii, 19, 26 & 50–51). There seems then to have been no other member of the Club with the name Hurlbert, or the like.

[1391] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 16 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 426.

Westminster Hotel | Sunday 16th Nov 1873

(In great haste)

Dear Mr Schlesinger,

Frank Ward goes back tonight¹ – and I am going out to dinner. Let me make the most of my moments, and say that I find my godson so useful to me as secretary and assistant generally, that I venture to take advantage of your kindness so far as to ask if he may accompany me on my next tour to Baltimore and one or two Southern towns? It will really be doing me a great favour if you will let him come back to me.

Time is failing me – I must leave Frank to say for me, what I might otherwise have added here. Forgive this very hurried letter, and believe me

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

1. See [1385] to Schlesinger of 31 October 1873.

[1392] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 21 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, II, p. 426.

Westminster Hotel | New York City | 21st November 1873

In great haste

Dear Mr Bentley,

I send to you by today's book-post, the first instalment of a short series of articles on "the South" – by Mr De Leon – which is to appear in Harper's Magazine here – beginning in January next.¹ I have been informed that the articles are of very high merit by a man who understands the subject thoroughly – and I thought you might like to have them for simultaneous publication in Temple Bar.

If yes – the customary remuneration to be sent to | Mr E. De Leon | care of Messrs Harper & Brothers | Franklin Square | New York.

If no – send (if you don't mind the trouble) to The Fortnightly Review. I can think of no other way of disposing of the advance sheets.²

I find the American climate agrees with me. I am only overwhelmed by the kindness of American readers – while I am at New York I have no spare time. My readings have been as warmly welcomed as myself everywhere.

I can say no more.

Address at The Westminster Hotel

Yours vy truly | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq.

1. Edwin De Leon (1828–91), American diplomat and journalist – see [1681] to him of 1 June 1877 and [1443] to Bentley of 7 May 1874. A presentation copy of De Leon's Askaros Kassis, the Copt (Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott, 1870) was in WC's library (Baker 2002, p. 127). De Leon's 'The New South' appeared in two parts in Harper's New Monthly Magazine, 48:284–285 (January–February 1874), pp. 271–281, 406–422.

2. In the end Bentley arranged for the article to be published in three parts under the title 'The Southern States Since the War' in Fraser's Magazine, 90 (August, September, November 1874), pp. 153–163, 346–166, 620–637.

[1393] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 21 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Glasgow (891117/125). Published: B&C, II, p. 368.

The Westminster Hotel | New York City | United States America
21st November 1873

Private¹

My dear Tindell,

A line in a great hurry to ask you to advise and help Martha – if she should want it – in making some new arrangements at 55 Marylebone Road. The ~~re~~/landlord & landlady/ are perfectly respectable people – but Martha might want a little assistance. She will write to you, if she does want advice.²

I am thriving in health and in public (as reader). If my health would stand constant reading

I should make a little fortune. But I am obliged to be careful. My reception wonderful [del] everywhere.

I had only five minutes to spare – and they are gone. I have been writing for seven hours. Goodbye and God bless you!

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins.

You remember the name at 55? Mr and Mrs Dawson.

1. Written slanting upwards to the left of the handwritten address.

2. In the event, the landlord decided to sell the lease of the house while WC was away; see [1414] to Tindell of 27 January 1874.

[1394] TO JOHN ELDERKIN, 26 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Ross. Published: BGLL, II, p. 427.

The | Carrollton.¹ | BALTIMORE, MD. 26th Novr 1873

Dear Mr Elderkin,

Many thanks for the proofs.²

I send – addressed to Mr [Moore] at the office – a subject for illustrations in Part 3, by the post which takes this.³

An excellent hotel here – and the most encouraging prospects for the reading tonight.⁴

We return to New York early next week. I will report myself at the Lotos Club⁵

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. The Carrollton was built in 1871 on Light Street.

2. Of 'The Dead Alive', published in four parts, 29 December 1873–19 January 1874, in the Fireside Companion, edited by Elderkin.

3. WC's letter to the unidentified member of Elderkin's office staff has not been traced.

4. WC's reading that evening at the Masonic Temple Hall on Charles Street, Baltimore, is described in detail in Hanes 2008 (pp. 49–50). See also WC's comments on the city in [1997] to Jane Bigelow of 2 January 1882: 'I well remember the lovely women, the pleasant City, the successful public reading of my story'.

5. The Lotos Club of New York had given WC a reception dinner at its Club House at 2, Irving Place, near Union Square, on Saturday, 27 September 1873.

[1395] FRANK WARD TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 26 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, p. 428.

The | Carrollton. | BALTIMORE, MD. Novbr 26th 1873

Dear Sirs,

I am requested by Mr Wilkie Collins – who is still too busily occupied to write to you himself – to enclose the first two weekly parts of his new story.¹

The dates of publication are stated in writing on the proofs. The story will be completed in two more weekly parts – shorter parts possibly than those now enclosed.

I am further instructed to inform you (with Mr Collins's kindest remembrances) that he has arranged to give a reading in Toronto. You shall hear from him again when the date is definitely arranged.

I remain | Dear Sirs, | Respectfully yours | F.C. Ward | Secy
P.S. Please let Mr Collins know in what form you propose to publish this little story.
F.C.W.
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co | Toronto

1. 'The Dead Alive'.

[3101] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 27 NOVEMBER 1873

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (16 June 1999), price $20.50. Published: A&C4, p. 21.

Wilkie Collins | 27th November 1873

1. As the signature is dated beneath, presumably to an autograph hunter in Baltimore – WC was still in the city on this day (Hanes 2008, p. 50).

[1396] FRANK WARD TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 4 DECEMBER 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, II, pp. 428–429.

Westminster Hotel | New York. Decr 4/73

Dear Sirs,

Please bear in mind that Mr Wilkie Collins's story – “The Dead Alive” of which copies of the first and second weekly parts were sent to you from Baltimore Novr 26th – must not be brought out in Canada prior to its publication in the United States. It may be published in weekly parts on the same date as the date of publication in New York but not one day before. The first weekly part is dated in advance in New York – but is really published on the 15th Decbr 1873.

With Mr Collins's best regards who is too busy to write himself.

Believe me | Dear Sirs, | Very respectfully yours

F.C. Ward | Secy

P.S. The length of the story, since the proofs were sent has been extended to four weekly parts. After periodically publishing in a Canadian weekly Journal, you are at liberty to republish it in bookform if you think fit.¹

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co | Toronto

1. WC's The Dead Alive was issued as a slim volume of 108 pages from Hunter, Rose (a copy is held in the National Library of Canada), shortly after appearing as a two-part serial, January to February 1874, in the Canadian Monthly and National Review (1872–82). At that time the magazine was published in Toronto by Adam, Stevenson & Co. and printed by Hunter, Rose – see Marilyn G. Flitton, Index to the Canadian Monthly (Toronto: Bibliographical Society of Canada, 1976), pp. vii–xxiv.

[1397] TO JAMES REDPATH,¹ 9 DECEMBER 1873²

MS: Texas (X-6 Bound). Published: BGLL, II, p. 429.

Westminster Hotel | New York

Your letter received. I willingly adopt your suggestion for a per-centage.³ Particulars when we meet. I leave for Boston tomorrow (Wednesday).

Wilkie Collins

Mr James Redpath | 36 Bromfield Street | Boston

-
1. Redpath's agency was soon to take over the promotion of WC's reading tour from Charles S. Brelsford of the American Literary Bureau, New York. See also [3322] to Redpath of 13 April 1873.
 2. On a single sheet of plain paper with one torn edge, the letter is endorsed in an unknown hand 'N. Y. | N. Y City | Wilkie Collins | Dec. 12 1873' and stamped on the recto within an oval 'BOSTON LYCEUM BUREAU | DEC | 15 | 1873 | JAMES REDPATH'. Though the catalogue at Texas assigns the letter confidently to 13 December (a Saturday), internal evidence proves the letter to be written on a Tuesday, which can only be 9 December.
 3. Referring to the scheme of remuneration for WC's public readings in Boston. Redpath typically retained 10% of the fees earned through the lectures and performances which he promoted.

[1398] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 9 DECEMBER 1873

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, II, p. 429–430.

Westminster Hotel | New York | 9th December 1873

Here is the photograph. I go tomorrow to Boston (Mass) St James's Hotel – read in New England generally – then in Canada. A thousand thanks for all your kindness.

Yours ever | WC

(In haste)

-
1. Obviously a close friend or associate based in New York. One strong possibility is Joseph W. Harper, to whom WC writes on 2 January 1874 ([1402]), thanking him for 'the "plate" (my portrait)', which may well refer to the engraving from the photograph enclosed with this letter. See also [1407] to Harper of 16 January 1874.

[1399] TO J. E. THOMPSON,¹ 13 DECEMBER 1873

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, II, p. 430.

St James's Hotel | Boston | Mass: | December 13th 1873

My dear Sir,

When I was at Troy you were kind enough to give me a printed statement of the very curious "Trial of Jesse and Stephen Boorn."²

I have now to thank you for more than this. The reading of this narrative suggested the idea of a little story to me, based on the main facts of the case but greatly altered as to details. The story is to appear in "The New York Fireside Companion." I send to you by book-post the first weekly part (No 322) – to be published on Monday next. Numbers 323, 324, and 325 will complete the work – in four weekly parts.³

I am going away to Canada in a week's time to continue my readings there – and I fear I shall not be able to send you the other parts. But "The Fireside Companion" is no doubt to be easily obtained at Troy.

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr J.E. Thompson

-
1. Unidentified resident of Troy, New York State, on the Hudson north of Albany. Susan Hanes suggests that this is Captain J. F. Thompson, formerly of the 169th Regiment, 'a hero in the Civil War battle of Petersburg, Virginia' (Hanes 2008, p. 30, n22), though there seems little doubt concerning the reading of the title and initials at the foot of WC's letter.

2. WC read at Rand Hall, Troy, at 8pm on Wednesday, 8 October, touring the town the following day with Grant Thompson of the Young Men's Association (Hanes 2008, pp. 29–30). It seems that the recipient of this letter then gave WC a copy of The Trial, Confessions, and Conviction of Jesse and Stephen Boorn for the Murder of Russel Colvin, and the Return of the Man supposed to have been murdered, by Hon. Leonard Sargeant, Ex-Lieutenant Governor of Vermont, published in Manchester, Vermont, in 1873. Jesse and Stephen Boorn were accused and then convicted in 1819 of the murder of their cousin Russell Colvin, who had disappeared in 1812. When he reappeared in 1820 the Booms were released after three months in prison. Peters says Colvin was 'supposedly murdered and buried in a lime pit' (p. 364); see also Thompson, p. 435.

3. 'The Dead Alive'.

[3361] TO UNIDENTIFIED, 16 DECEMBER 1873

MS: Lewis Collection.¹ Published: A&C13, p. 7.

December 16th 1873²

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. On a small piece of stiff paper showing signs of having been pasted in an album. Probably for a fan.
 2. This was the day after the opening of The Woman in White in Daly's Broadway Theater. On this date WC was probably in New York partly preparing for his trip to Boston the next day (Hanes, pp. 56, 106).

[3046] TO JERE ABBOTT,¹ 17 DECEMBER 1873

MS: Indiana (English Literature Mss). Published: A&C3, p. 49.

St James's Hotel | Wednesday December 17th 1873

My dear Sir,

Am I right in supposing that the hour you fixed on when you kindly invited me to dinner today was six?

If I am right, pray don't trouble yourself to answer this. Silence shall mean – "Chesnut Street 6 o'Clock".²

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Jere Abbott Esqr

-
1. Perhaps of the Boston trading company, Jere Abbott & Co.
 2. Close to Boston Common.

[3214] TO WILLIAM BRADFORD,¹ 18 DECEMBER 1873

MS: New Bedford (A-288).² Published: A&C8, p. 13 (with MS incorrectly located at New Bedford Whaling Museum, and identity of the recipient tentative).

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | December 18th 1873

-
1. William Bradford (1832–92), American painter, photographer and explorer, famous for Arctic subjects – see Russell Potter, Arctic Spectacles (2007). WC was entertained by Bradford during his visit to New Bedford on Thursday, 18 December, as reported in the New Bedford Republican Standard (25 December 1873), p. 6: 'Mr. Collins, while here, was the guest of William Bradford, the artist, and expressed himself delighted with his audience and the numerous attentions paid him.' See also Hanes 2008, p. 57, and [1455] to Frith, 2 June 1874, where Bradford's subsequent visit to WC's house in London for dinner is mentioned.
 2. An independent dated signature found in a scrapbook and letterbook belonging to William Bradford.

[1400] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 25 DECEMBER 1873

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/53), with envelope.¹ Published: B&C, II, pp. 368–369.

Toronto | Canada | December 25th 1873

My dear Schlesinger (let us drop "Mistering" each other!), here is a line to report favourably of the Canadian trip, so far. At Montreal a hard frost and a distinguished audience – slippery walking in the Streets – and horrid stench in the hotel. On Tuesday we – that is to say Mr Redpath, Ward,² and I – started for Toronto. Fifteen mortal hours of railway travelling. We pulled through it, with a compartment to ourselves, a faithful and attentive nigger /to wait on us/, dry champagne, and a cold turkey. Here the hotel is a good one, and my Canadian publishers (Hunter Rose & Co),³ who live in [del] Toronto, are taking the greatest care of us. We dine with them today (Christmas Day). Tomorrow I read here. Every seat in the hall is sold already.⁴ Unhappily, the hall is not a very large one. Such is life. My next duty is a severe one – Niagara. The lake here makes me feel rheumatic. What will the waterfall do? Besides I don't like waterfalls – they are noisy. I prefer mountains – and other silent works of Nature.

I miss those pleasant evenings at Marlborough Street sadly.⁵ Dinner is served here on the American plan, in (say) forty soap dishes, all round you, with a servant at the back of your chair to see that you eat out of every one of them.

After Niagara, I resume reading at Buffalo.⁶ Tiff House is the address there until this day week – Thursday, January 1st. After that, we invade the Western States, and our address shall be forwarded.

Ward becomes more and more indispensable to my existence [sic] every day. He sends his kindest regards – and I add my best thanks for all your kindness to

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

My letters received from [del] your office, this morning, quite safely.

1. Signed 'Wilkie Collins' and directed to: 'Sebastian Schlesinger Esqre | Messrs Naylor & Co | Boston | Mass: | U.S. America'.

2. That is, James Redpath of the Boston Lyceum Bureau, and Frank Ward, acting as secretary.

3. See [0987] to Hunter Rose & Co, 4 June 1870.

4. On WC's reading at the Toronto Music Hall, under the auspices of the Mechanics Institute, see Hanes 2008, pp. 64–65.

5. Schelsinger's residence was at 79 Marlborough Street, Boston; see [1420] to him of 17 February 1874.

6. WC arrived at Buffalo on Monday, 29 December but did not read until Tuesday, 6 January, at St James Hall on Eagle Street (Hanes 2008, pp. 67–70).

[3386] TO ELIZABETH GRAVES,¹ 1873

MS: Lewis Collection (L2148). Published: A&C14, p. 15.

E. Graves | from | Wilkie Collins²

1. Elizabeth Harriet Graves (1851–1905), daughter of WC's companion Caroline Graves who was in effect WC's adopted daughter, usually known as 'Carrie' and after her marriage 'Carrie Bartley' – see [2181] to Carrie Bartley, 11 July [1883], note 1.

2. Written on the front free endpaper of the one-volume edition of Poor Miss Finch, London: Richard Bentley, 1873. This edition was published at the end of 1872 (Publishers' Circular 31 December 1872, p. 1042) and it is assumed WC gave her the copy in 1873. Ten years later Elizabeth gave it away, writing on the title page, above and below the book's title:

To my dear Miss Shrive | with the love of | "The Amanuensis" of | The Great Master. | October 1883.

Catherine Shrive was the landlady at 14 Nelson Crescent, Ramsgate where WC, Caroline, and Carrie spent several holidays. Wilkie made eight payments to 'Miss Shrive' at the end of such trips (Coultts: WC). She is at that address as 'Lodging House Keeper' with her elder widowed sister Elizabeth Smith in the 1891 Census, who is also there at the 1881 Census. Some time later an unidentified owner has written her name below 'Frances E. Hulme'.

[1401] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 2 JANUARY 1874

MS: Buffalo. Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 269–271; Davis, p. 279; Hyder, p. 55; Lehmann, pp. 65–68; B&C, II, pp. 372–373. Published: A&C3, pp. 66–67.

Buffalo. N.Y. | 2nd January 1874

Strange to say, my dear Fred, I have actually got some leisure time at this place. A disengaged half-hour is before me – and I occupy it in writing a sort of duplicate letter for the Padrona and for you.

I hear you have called like a good fellow, at Gloucester Place, and have heard something of me there, from time to time. No matter where I go my reception in America is always the same. The prominent people in each place visit me, drive me out, dine me, and do all that they can to make me feel myself among friends. The enthusiasm and the kindness are really and truly beyond description. I should be the most ungrateful man living if I had any other than the highest opinion of the American people. I find them to be the most enthusiastic, the most cordial, and the most sincere people I have ever met with in my life. When an American says, "Come and see me," he means it. This is wonderful to an Englishman.

Before I had been a week in the country I noted three national peculiarities which had never been mentioned to me by visitors to the "States." I. No American hums or whistles a tune – either at home or in the street. II. Not one American in 500 has a dog. III. Not one American in a 1000 carries a walking stick. I, who hum perpetually – who love dogs – who cannot live without a walking stick – am greatly distressed at finding my dear Americans deficient in the three social virtues just enumerated.

My readings have succeeded by surprising the audiences. The story surprises them in the first place – being something the like of which they have not heard before. And my way of reading surprises them in the second place – because I don't flourish a paper-knife, and stamp about the platform, and thump the reading desk. I persist in keeping myself in the background and the story in front. The audience begins at each reading with silent astonishment and ends with a great burst of applause.

As to the money, if I could read often enough, I should bring back a little fortune – in spite of the panic.¹ The hard times have been against me of course – but while others have suffered badly, I have always drawn audiences. Here, for example, they give me a fee for a reading on Tuesday evening next – it amounts to between £70 and £80 (English). If I could read five times a week at this rate (which is my customary rate) here is £350 a week – which is not bad pay for an hour and three-quarters' reading each night. But I cannot read five times a week without knocking myself up – and this I won't do. And then I have been mismanaged and cheated by my agents – have had to change them and start afresh with a new man. The result has been loss of time, and loss of money. But I am investing in spite of it – and (barring accidents) I am in a fair way to make far more than I have made yet, before the last fortnight in March – when I propose to sail for home. I am going "out West" from this – and I may get as far as the Mormons. My new agent – a first rate-man – is ahead making engagements,² and I am here (thanks to the kindness of Sebastian Schlesinger) with my godson Frank as secretary and companion. I find him a perfect treasure – I don't know what I should do without him.

As for the said Sebastian S. he is the brightest nicest kindest little fellow I have met with for many a long day. He would'nt hear of my dining at the Hotel while I was in Boston this last time. Whenever I had no engagement (and I kept out of engagements, having work to do) I dined at his house – and dined superbly. Mrs S. had just lain in of a daughter – so I have still to be presented to her – and our dinners were of the bachelor sort. It is not one of the least of Sebastian's virtues that he speaks with the greatest affection of you. He also makes the best cocktail in America. Vive Sebastian! Barthold S. was also as kind as could be.³ I dined with him too in New York. So you see your letters have not been thrown away.

The nigger-waiters (I like them better than the American waiters) are ringing the dinner bell. I must go and feed off a variety of badly cooked meats and vegetables ranged round me in (say) forty soap dishes. Otherwise I am comfortable here. I have got the Russian Grand Duke's bedroom – and a parlour in which I can shake hands with my visitors – and a box at the theatre – and the freedom of the Club.

Write soon, my dear boy, and tell me about yourself and the Padrona – to whom I send my best love and sincerest good wishes. She is happily settled, I hope, in the new house. I want to hear all about the new house – and about the boys – God forgive me! I am writing of Rudy as if he was a boy. Don't tell him! The fact is I am getting to be an old man – I shall be fifty if I live till the eighth of this month – and I shall celebrate my birthday by giving a reading at "Cleveland". I wish I could transport myself to London!

Yours my dear Fred always afftly Wilkie Collins
Providence (the city, not the deity) paid me 400 dollars – in spite of the panic!
P.S. My address is care of Naylor & Co, Boston, Mass: (Do you know that Firm?) Frank sends his respects.

1. Referring to ‘The Great North American Financial Panic’, when stock prices collapsed after the suspension of trading in the shares of Cooke & Co. of Philadelphia, on ‘Black Friday’, 19 September 1873.
2. James Redpath of the Boston Lyceum Bureau – see [1397] to him of 9 December 1873.
3. The reference is to Sebastian’s older brother Barthold Schlesinger (1828–1900), also resident in Boston and one of the principals of Naylor & Co.

[1402] TO JOSEPH W. HARPER JR,¹ 2 JANUARY 1874

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Extract: Harper’s Weekly (5 October 1889), p. 799. Published: B&C, II, pp. 369–370.

Buffalo | N.Y. | 2nd January 1874²

My dear Mr Harper,

I don’t expect you to believe me – but I declare it is true that I have grace enough left to feel ashamed of myself, when I look at the date of your letter and when I write the date of mine.

When you kindly sent me the new editions of “Basil” and “The Dead Secret”, I was involved in the double difficulty of breaking off all connection with the agents who had managed my “readings” up to that time, and of making a fresh start under [del] new auspices.³ This little “coup d’etat [sic]” accomplished I was hurried away to New England – and thence to Canada. I have no more to say for myself except that I trust to your indulgence to excuse me this time – and I have only to add that “I wont do it again”.

I have “read” my way by Montreal and Toronto very successfully to this place. From Buffalo, my tour takes me to the Western States – perhaps as far as Salt Lake City itself. If all goes well, I hope to be back in New York at the beginning of March – and I have planned to return to England during the last fortnight in that month.

This is all I know at present. My address until further notice is care of | Naylor & Co | Boston | Mass:
– who will forward all my letters.

Wherever I go, I meet with the same kindness and the same enthusiasm. I really want words to express my grateful sense of my reception in America. It is not only more than I have deserved – it is more than any man could have deserved. I have never met with such a cordial and such a generous people as the people of the United States. Let me add that I thrive on this kindness. I keep wonderfully well.

With kindest remembrances to my good friends in Franklin Square, and to my other friends in New York when you see them

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. My best thanks for the “plate” (my portrait) which you have so kindly sent to me.⁴

1. This, and later letters directed personally to ‘Mr Harper’, must be to Joseph W. Harper Jr (1830–1896) – see [1416] to him of 1 February 1874. He took a leading role in the running of the family publishing house following the deaths of his uncle James Harper (1795–1869) and his father Joseph Wesley Harper (1801–1870). He was one of the guests at William Seaver’s ‘Breakfast to Mr Wilkie Collins’ at the Union Club, New York, on 22 October 1873.

2. WC uses black-edged mourning paper. Endorsed to the left of the handwritten address by a member of staff, ‘Wilkie Collins | Jan. 2/74’.

3. Initially organized by C. Brelsford of the American Literary Bureau, New York, the promotion of WC’s reading tour seems to have been taken over by James Redpath of the Boston Lyceum Bureau – see [1397], [1419] to him of 9 December 1873 and 10 February 1874.

4. See [1407] to Harper of 16 January. WC writes his postscript down the left margin of the final page of the folding notepaper.

[1403] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 2 JANUARY 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 5.

No. 16 Time 9hrs A Toronto, Jan 2^d 1874

By Telegraph from Buffalo NY

To Hunter Rose & Co¹

Your letter received impossible to answer within telegraphic limits will write.²

Wilkie Collings [sic]

1. Telegram in unknown hand on a Montreal Telegraph Company form.

2. See [1404] to the firm of the same date.

[1404] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 2 JANUARY 1874

MS: Private.¹ Published: B&C, II, pp. 370–371.

Tift House | Buffalo | 2nd January 1874

Dear Mr Rose,

You have I hope received my telegram, acknowledging the receipt of your letter, and further confessing that I could not answer the copyright questions within the limits of a telegram.

I object though, as an English writer to any other than a voluntary arrangement on my part with a Canadian publisher. In any other commercial transaction what would be said to “rigid rules and a specific fee” – binding the buyers and sellers of a commodity? I recognise no difference between the purchase and sale of a book and the purchase and sale of any other marketable commodity. I claim as an English citizen, my English copyright in an English colony – subject to the authority to the Queen of England.

To this, the Canadian publisher – as I understand him – answers thus: “If I do not secure to myself the right of publishing your book in Canada, an American pirate will sell it in Canada, and thus injure my business.”

My answer to this is – Prohibit by law the sale of English reprints by American booksellers in Canada, and you place the Canadian publisher and the English publisher on the same level. If the Canadian Legislature really means to do equal justice to Canadian publishers and to English writers – here and here only is the way. Am I asking for an impossibility? We perform that impossibility in England. We prohibit the introduction of the Tauchnitz reprints of English works, in England. Baron Tauchnitz is perfectly satisfied with this arrangement, and English writers and publishers are perfectly satisfied with it. Why cannot the same sensible ~~arrangement~~ plan be followed in Canada? There may be difficulties in carrying it out. But the business of a Legislature is to encounter and conquer difficulties.²

These are my views, briefly and hastily stated. I think nothing of the money difficulty. Make no other than a Canadian publication of English books possible in Canada, and the English books must be published at the market price, or not published at all.

Truly yours, Wilkie Collins

=

P.S. | Reverting to personal matters, my Godson and I have to thank you for more than your kindness and Mr Rose’s [sic for ‘Mr Hunter’s’] kindness to us in Toronto. Your friendly consideration followed us to Niagara – saw us through the Custom House under the auspices of good Mr Smeaton – and showed us the Falls under³ the best possible guidance. No words can tell how these wonderful Falls astonished and impressed me. It is well worth the voyage from England to see Niagara alone. Pray give our kindest remembrances to Mr Rose [sic for ‘Mr Hunter’]. We are really gratefully sensible of all that you and he did to make our visit to Toronto one of the most agreeable visits in our travelling experience.

We stay here until Tuesday next. I read on Tuesday evening. After that date, my address will be,

c/o Naylor & Co | Boston Mass:

– who will forward all letters.

The Draft reached me quite safely. Many thanks.

-
1. On black-edged mourning paper.
 2. WC's argument against the proposed new Canadian copyright legislation fails to recognise that it was immeasurably more difficult to stem the flood of American reprints over the vast Canadian border than the trickle of Tauchnitz editions through the English channel ports.
 3. Here, WC turns over to the final page of the folding notepaper, writes at the top the single line 'the best possible guidance', which he erases, leaving the rest of the page blank. He then starts a new sheet, numbering it '2' which he underlines, continuing the sentence as before. The reason for this remains obscure.

[1405] TO FRANK ARCHER, 6 JANUARY 1874

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.¹ Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 271 (dated 8 January 1874).
Published: Archer, pp. 156–157; B&C, II, pp. 373–374 (with location of MS unknown, using Archer as copy text); A&C7, pp. 7–8.

Buffalo | New York State | 6th January 1874

My dear Archer,

I have got both your kind letters (dated Decr 7th and Dec 16).

I entirely agree with you about the Charing Cross Theatre. But a letter from Miss Cavendish – as I understand it – informs me that she has actually taken the theatre, on her own responsibility. Under these circumstances, there is nothing to be done but to “make the best of it”.² I have written to Miss Cavendish on the subject.³ For the rest, I can only thank you for your advice – and say that I sincerely hope you will give the experiment the advantage of your assistance by playing “Julian Gray”. The one thing needful in the interests of the piece is to prevent any possible impression from getting abroad that the revival is a failure. It would be well, with this object in view, to advertise that the theatre cannot possibly be obtained for longer than a limited period.

My “readings” are getting on famously. The one drawback is that I cannot read often enough to make a large sum of money – without the risk of injuring my health. Everywhere there is the same anxiety to see and hear me – but I cannot endure the double fatigue of railway travelling and reading on the same day. Thus three or four days a week are lost days (in the matter of money) – but gained days (in the matter of health). And I have suffered enough to make health my first consideration. As to my personal reception in “the States”, it has really and truly overwhelmed me. Go where I may, I find myself among friends.

From this place I go to Chicago (stopping at certain smaller towns on the way). From Chicago I go “West” – perhaps as far as the Mormons. This will be my last tour. I propose giving farewell readings early in March, in Boston and New York – and sailing for home during the last fortnight in March.

I shall be very glad to hear how this venturesome Charing Cross experiment promises to turn out, if you have time to tell me. My address is care of

Naylor & Co | Boston | Mass: | U. S. America

– who will forward all letters.

With all good wishes

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins.

1. With black half-mourning edging, directed to ‘England | via New York | Frank Archer esqre | 24. Grove Terrace | Highgate Road | London | N.W.’, and postmarked ‘BUFFALO | JAN | 6 | 5PM’, ‘NEW YORK | JAN | 8’ and ‘LONDON NW | C5 | PAID | JA 19’. The stamp has been neatly cut away, with ‘3’ in another hand in pencil on the recto. The envelope numbered ‘2’ and its associated letter are missing, but could have been an invitation to lunch with Collins on 4 June 1873. Archer writes: ‘June 4 (Wednesday). At 2 o’clock went to Wilkie Collins’s to luncheon. Met there Bancrofts, F.C. Beard, Hare, MacKaye and Charles Reade.’ (‘Diary 1873’, Archer Archive).

2. Referring to a planned revival of The New Magdalen, which had originally opened at the Olympic Theatre on 19 May 1873, starring Ada Cavendish in the part of Mercy Merrick. In WC’s absence, the project seems to have been initiated by Stefan Poles, though neither he nor Ada Cavendish seems to have had the right to authorise the performances (see [1414] to Tindell, 27 January 1874, and Archer, p. 156). In the event, the revival at the tiny Charing Cross Theatre only began in January 1875. Archer felt the theatre was small and unlikely to prove a successful venue.

He did not play Julian Gray in the 1875 production at the Charing Cross Theatre, nor in the London and provincial tour which followed it in 1875, nor in the brief provincial tour in August 1877. However, he returned to the part for the 1884 revival at the Novelty Theatre. Poles turned his attention to the even more unsuitable venue of the Holborn Amphitheatre, normally used for circus performances – see [1413] to Archer, 27 January 1874.

3. The letter has not been traced.

[1406] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 9 JANUARY 1874

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, pp. 279–280. Summary: B&C, II, p. 374. Published: BGLL, III, p. 5–6.

Sandusky | Ohio | 9th January 1874

Dear Mr Bentley,

A line to thank you sincerely for your kind attention to my request in the matter of Mr de Leon's article.¹

I am at this place (on the shores of Lake Erie) "reading" on my way to Chicago and the Western towns. My plans – if all goes well – are to return, for "farewell readings" to Boston and New York, after my Western tour, and then to sail for England during the last fortnight in March.²

I am careful not to fatigue myself by "reading" too often. The result is that I lose money – but I gain health. I am still wonderfully well. The snow is falling and the Lake is close under my windows – and yet I am writing to you without rheumatism! I hope you may be equally free this winter from your asthma.

Harpers of New York are publishing a very good Library Edition of my books, each complete in a volume.³ The sale of the old editions has been immense here. Go where I may, I find that my books have made friends for me among all classes of the population. I am glad (talking of my books) to hear that the 6/- "Magdalen" has begun well.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. See [1392] to Bentley of 21 November 1873.

2. His return voyage was in fact brought forward to 7 March – see his letters of that day ([1428] to [1430]).

3. Initially Harper published fourteen titles with a facsimile handwritten dedication from WC: 'I gratefully dedicate this collected edition of my Works, to | The American People | Wilkie Collins | September 1873.'. The duodecimo illustrated volumes were $1.50. As further novels were published, the series expanded to seventeen titles and the price fell to $1.25.

[3159] TO WILLIAM F. GILL, 14 JANUARY 1874

MS: Private, envelope only.¹ Published: A&C6, p. 11.

Wm F. Gill, Esqr | St James's Hotel | Boston | Mass: | Wilkie Collins

1. With 3c green stamp, postmarked: 'DETROIT | JAN | 14 | MICH'. WC had read on the 13th at the Russell House, Detroit (Hanes 2008, p. 72).

[1407] TO JOSEPH W. HARPER JR, 16 JANUARY 1874

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 6–8.

Chicago | 16th January 1874

My dear Mr Harper

The proof of my portrait has reached me here quite safely.¹ Many thanks to you for sending it.

I think the engraving excellent. Mr Halpin entirely justifies our choice of him – in my opinion.² On the likeness I am not quite so fit to pronounce judgement. It seems to me that Mr Halpin has done all that he could – with the means at his command. If others are satisfied – I am satisfied.

I enclose the autograph on a separate sheet of paper.

If you will let me have a list of the shorter stories which you propose to include in the Library Edition, I will gladly suggest whatever may strike me as likely to be useful. In the English Editions “After Dark” contains one collection, and “The Queen of Hearts” another – and both books possess many pages of original writing intended to set the stories in a framework. I should think “Miss or Mrs?” had better be added to whichever of the two volumes contains the ~~shortest~~ fewest pages.

“The Dead Alive” was written for a New York periodical, the proprietors of which have dealt with Shepherd [sic] & Gill for the republication.³ Said proprietors made me a very large offer for a serial – which I declined to accept, nevertheless. They then appealed to me to write a short story – by way of not entirely disappointing them – and they backed their request by offering terms (in the matter of the short story) which it was simply impossible to decline. I think we had better wait to include “The Dead Alive” in our Edition, until I have something more important to add to it.⁴

My plans are still a little uncertain. My address remains, care of Naylor & Co Boston Mass:

With kindest regards to all in Franklin Square, Truly yours

Wilkie Collins

P.S. I hope you include the collection called “My Miscellanies” (containing my best Essays Sketches &c) in the Library Edition. The Pirate Peterson has sold this book largely under the title of “The Queen’s Revenge” (the name of one of the stories in the collection)⁵

-
1. For the autographed frontispiece, possibly from an Elliot & Fry photograph of 1871, to My Miscellanies, published in one volume by Harper’s in June 1874 – see the image at the Lewis website.
 2. The frontispiece was engraved by Frederick Halpin, who had long worked for Harper’s in New York, but was most famous for his engravings for the bank notes of the Confederacy during the Civil War, as a partner in the firm of Archer & Halpin of Richmond, Virginia.
 3. ‘The Dead Alive’ was published as a serial in the New York Fireside Companion and reprinted in a single illustrated volume from Shepard & Gill of Boston in 1874. It appeared in Britain under the title ‘John Jago’s Ghost’.
 4. In the event ‘The Dead Alive’ appeared in the volume After Dark, and Other Stories (1875), in the Library Edition published by Harper & Brothers, along with ‘Miss or Mrs?’, ‘The Fatal Cradle’, ‘Blow up with the brig!’, ‘The Frozen Deep’ and ‘Fatal Fortune’, in addition to the ‘After Dark’ collection.
 5. ‘The Queen’s Revenge’ originally appeared in Household Words, 15 August 1857. The Queen’s Revenge; and Other Stories appeared under the imprint of T. B. Peterson & Brothers of Philadelphia from around 1870.

[3324] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 16 JANUARY 1874

MS: Lewis Collection.¹ Published: A&C11, p. 10.

16th January 1874

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | Chicago²

-
1. An album page for an autograph collector. The date is written below the valediction. On the reverse side is written in another hand, ‘I am | Yours very truly | L.G. Holland’, though there is no indication that Holland was the recipient of the autograph.
 2. WC arrived in Chicago that day from Detroit after a ‘gruelling overnight railroad journey’ (Hanes, p. 72). He stayed at the new Sherman Hotel.

[1408] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 16 JANUARY 1874

MS: Kentucky. Published: BGLL, III, p. 8.

The autograph surscribed.

With Mr Wilkie Collins’s compliments and best wishes.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | Chicago | 16th January 1874

[1409] TO JANE BIGELOW, 17 JANUARY 1874

MS: Bigelow. Summary: B&C, II, pp. 374–375 (as to ‘Mr and Mrs John Bigelow’). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 8–9.

Sherman House, | CORNER | CLARK AND RANDOLPH STS.
... | Chicago, | 17th Jan^y 1874¹

My dear Mrs Bigelow,

Will even your indulgence excuse this scandalously late acknowledgement of your kind letter. I am really not without some excuse for my conduct. I was at Boston, when you sent me that pleasant invitation – and your letter only reached me (in this city of magnificent warehouses) yesterday. Such is the destiny of a wanderer on the face of the (American) earth. If you only knew how often I have wished myself back at Highland Falls,² you would not think it possible that any such trifle as rain could wash out my remembrance of a very delightful visit.

I leave this place on Monday next – and get slowly back to Boston to resume my readings in New England. Then – towards the end of February perhaps – I return to New York. In the middle of March, or soon after, I must sail for England – giving “farewell readings” first, in New York State and in the City. I am still uncertain as to dates – but a letter addressed to me care of Naylor & Co Boston, Mass: will always be forwarded.³

Don’t tell anybody – but the truth is I am not sorry to leave Chicago. The dull sameness of the great blocks of iron and brick overwhelms me. The whole city seems to be saying “See how rich I am after the fire, and what a tremendous business I do!” and everybody I meet uses the same form of greeting. “Two years ago, Mr Collins, this place was a heap of ruins – are you not astonished when you see it now?” I am not a bit astonished. It is a mere question of raising money – the re-building follows as a matter of course.⁴

Give my best and kindest remembrances to Mr Bigelow, and believe me, Dear Mrs Bigelow,

Always truly yours Wilkie Collins

I am not going further West, because I cannot endure the railway travelling. A night in a “sleeping car” destroys me for days afterwards.

1. WC uses hotel embossed printed paper, with a picture of the hotel to the left of its address.

2. Highland Falls, New York, where John and Jane Bigelow had their country residence named ‘The Squirrels’.

3. Sebastian Schlesinger’s company.

4. The Great Chicago Fire of 8–10 October 1871.

[1410] TO LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON,¹ 17 JANUARY 1874

MS: Congress. Photocopy: Kansas (MS P557:A3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 9.

Sherman House, | CORNER | CLARK AND RANDOLPH STS.
... | Chicago, | 17th Jan^y 1874

Dear Mrs Moulton,

One line to apologise for this late acknowledgment of your very kind invitation. My friend Mr Harper was mistaken in supposing me to be in New York in the middle of last month. I left for Boston on the 10th – and I have been travelling and “reading” ever since.² Your letter only reached me yesterday, at this place. Under these circumstances I am sure you will be so good as to accept my excuses.

I hope to be in Boston again, in a week’s time – to fulfil certain “reading” engagements in New England.³ If you are in Boston at the same time, I may perhaps hope to have the honour of meeting you.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

(In haste)

1. Ellen Louise Chandler Moulton (1835–1908), American poet and journalist, who held a literary salon in Boston.
2. According to the itinerary constructed in Hanes 2008 (pp. 106–109), after leaving New York for Boston on 10 December, WC did not return to the city again until 1 March.
3. Hanes 2008 has WC back in Boston from Thursday, 22 January (p. 107).

[1411] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 17 JANUARY 1874

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/103), with envelope.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 10.

Sherman House, | CORNER | CLARK AND RANDOLPH STS.
... | Chicago, | 17th Jan^y 1874

My dear Schlesinger,

I have waited to thank you for your kind letter to Ward, until I could write definitely about my return to Boston.

My plans have all been changed – why, you shall hear when we meet. I start on the return journey to Boston on Monday morning next – breaking the journey at Detroit and Rochester. If I can endure the travelling, and if all goes well, I hope to be in Boston on Wednesday, or on Thursday night at latest. On the way here, I tried the “sleeping car” – and lay wide awake (on a most comfortable bed) all night. Nothing will induce me to repeat the experiment. I feel the “sleeping car” in the “small of my back” and on the drums of my ears, at this moment.

Forgive a short letter – written in a hurry. I shall soon shake hands with you I hope.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Ward sends his best remembrances.²

1. Embossed hotel envelope, signed and directed to ‘Sebastian B. Schlesinger Esqr | Messrs Naylor & Co | 6 Oliver Street | Boston | Mass:’.

2. Frank Ward, WC’s godson, working under Schlesinger at Boston, but now travelling with WC as his secretary.

[1412] TO JOHN S. DWIGHT,¹ 24 JANUARY 1874

MS: Houghton (Autograph File C). Published: BGLL, III, p. 10.

St James’s Hotel² | 24th January 1874

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter. It will give me the greatest pleasure to have the honour of dining with the Harvard Musical Association on Monday next.³

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

John S. Dwight Esqre

1. John Sullivan Dwight (1813–93), graduate of Harvard College, friend of the Transcendentalists and now a distinguished music critic.

2. In Boston.

3. That is, 26 January.

[1413] TO FRANK ARCHER, 27 JANUARY 1874

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.¹ Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 272; BGLL, III, p. 11. Published: A&C7, pp. 8–9.

St James’s Hotel | Boston | Mass: | Janry 27th 1874

My dear Archer

A thousand thanks for your kind attention to my interests. Nobody has any right to sanction any performance of the “Magdalen” in London but myself. Nobody has any authority to sign an agreement for me. They must be mad – I can account for the selection of the Holborn Amphitheatre and the utter setting-aside of my rights in the matter in no other way.²

I write by this mail to caution Miss Cavendish – without mentioning to whom I am indebted for my knowledge of the state of affairs. I also write to my lawyer (this is between ourselves) to tell him to interfere at once if any new absurdity is perpetrated during my absence.³ You will be adding to the service which I already owe to your friendly kindness, if you will inform him of any new attempt to produce the piece without my authority. You are more likely to hear of such things than he is. His name is W^m F. Tindell | address | Messrs Benham and Tindell | 18 Essex Street | Strand.

=

I hope to sail for England towards the latter part of March. In the meantime, with renewed thanks

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

Written in haste to catch the mail.

1. Directed to ‘England | Frank Archer esqre | 24 Grove Terrace | Highgate Road | London’, postmarked recto ‘BOSTON | JAN | 28’ and verso ‘LONDON | L7 | FE 9 | 74’ and ‘LONDON NW | FE 9 | 74’. The stamp has been neatly cut away, with ‘4’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. ‘They’ being WC’s agent Stefan Poles and the actress Ada Cavendish, who were attempting to arrange a revival of The New Magdalen at a venue often used for circus performances. The New Magdalen had originally opened at the Olympic Theatre on 19 May 1873, starring Ada Cavendish in the part of Mercy Merrick and Archer as Julian Gray. In WC’s absence, the project of a revival seems to have been initiated by Stefan Poles, though neither he nor Ada Cavendish seems to have had the right to authorize the performances (see [1414] to William Tindell of the same date, and Archer, p. 156). The idea of a revival at the tiny Charing Cross Theatre (see [1405] to Archer, 6 January 1874) had apparently been dropped and Poles next turned his attention to the even more unsuitable venue of the Holborn Amphitheatre. However, there was a revival with Ada Cavendish at the Charing Cross Theatre from 9 January 1875. See [1493] to Archer, 16 November 1874.

3. See [1414] to William Tindell, 27 January 1874.

[1414] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 27 JANUARY 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/126). Published: B&C, II, pp. 375–376.

St James’s Hotel | Boston | Mass: | January 27th 1874

Private¹

My dear Tindell,

I hope to sail for England towards the latter half of March.

In the meantime, I must ask you to have an eye to my interests in the matter of “The New Magdalen” (the drama).

I find that Miss Cavendish’s stage-manager has written to Mr Archer (“Julian Gray”)² to ask him to play in a revival of the piece – at the Holborn Amphitheatre, of all the places in the world! This preposterous project has fallen through, in consequence of Mr Archer’s wise refusal to perform, without my direct authority. Nobody has any right to authorise the performance of the piece in London – but myself. Miss Cavendish has a year’s lease of the piece in the country only – London being [del] expressly excepted by myself – the owner of the copyright. I have requested Mr Archer to let you know if any similar liberties are taken with the play in my absence – and I hereby give you my authority to stop any [del] representations in London of The New Magdalen which are not authorised by me.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Wm F. Tindell Esqre

P.S. | I am very well – only suffering a little in some places, so far as audiences are concerned, by the “panic”. The mischief is far from being at an end yet.³

The landlord has left the house at 55 Marylebone Road – and has taken another. He offers me the option of buying the lease – which I cannot and will not do. I have written to say this – and it is understood that he takes no further steps until I return. If by any chance he should let the house before I get back, Martha has by agreement a right to a quarter’s notice to quit. If she is at all bothered I have told her to apply to you – but I do not anticipate this – as the landlord is a very civil respectable man. I had hoped we were settled – but there is no such luck for me. (N.B. You remember our [del] name – Mr and Mrs “Dawson”).

-
1. Written slanting upwards to the left of the handwritten address.
 2. Frank Archer who played Julian Gray in the original London stage version; see [1413] to him of the same date.
 3. Referring to ‘The Great North American Financial Panic’, when stock prices collapsed after the suspension of trading in the shares of Cooke & Co. of Philadelphia, on ‘Black Friday’, 19 September 1873.

[1415] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 28 JANUARY 1874

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/43), with envelope.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 12.

St James’s Hotel | 28th January 1874

My dear Schlesinger,

I have only Today been informed by my agent that I am engaged to “read” at Salem on Friday evening next.² There is no alternative but to ask you and Mrs Schlesinger³ to be so good as to accept my excuses. My agent’s method of “doing business” is – I hope you will agree with me – really to blame in the matter. He ought to have informed me of my engagement on Monday or Tuesday – if he had not (apparently) forgotten it!

May I make my apologies in person, and dine on Saturday instead – if I am alive after a second reading here on Saturday afternoon?

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Signed and directed to ‘Sebastian B. Schlesinger Esqre | 6 Oliver Street’; no stamp or postmark.
 2. WC read at the Essex Institute, Salem, on Friday, 30 January (Hanes 2008, p. 102).
 3. 2. Schelsinger had married Berthe de Pourtales (1855–1905) in 1871.

[3249] TO CHARLES H. HIGBEE,¹ 31 JANUARY 1874

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C9, p. 29.

St James’s Hotel | Boston
January 31st 1874

Dear Sir,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for $243²⁵/₁₀₀ being the fee for my reading at Salem on Friday evening last² – less the expenses for work which I requested you to do, and for which receipted vouchers are enclosed in your letter.³

With best wishes | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr Charles H. Higbee

-
1. Charles H. Higbee, born in Salem, MA, 24 March 1845 (Mass. Town and Vital records, 1620–1988), who was one of three curators in the Department of the Arts at the Essex Institute (Essex Institute Bulletin, vol. V, 1873, p. 99). He is recorded living with his parents and sister in Salem in the 1870 census, and working as a clerk in his father Charles’s Leather Store.
 2. At the Essex Institute as part of the Institute Course (Hanes 2008, pp. 75 and 107). The event was advertised with an entrance fee of 50c in the Salem Register of 29 January, over the signatures of the three curators, including Chas. H. Higbee. A short review on 2 February was not flattering: ‘the reading, though agreeable, was not particularly striking. Mr Collins’s manner on the platform was gentlemanly and unpretending, and his popularity as a novelist is unquestioned.’ See also [1415] to Schlesinger, 28 January 1874.
 3. Measuringworth.com records a dollar pound conversion rate averaging $5.42 to the pound in 1874 making $243.25 equivalent to just under £45 ~~in 1874~~. Given WC’s problems with his manager at this time it is perhaps significant he was being paid directly. At 50c a seat – and with some having paid for the Institute’s series of entertainments – it is a very large sum and implies a large audience. It was significantly more than the $12.81 he received for a reading in December in Boston – see [1419] to Redpath, 10 February 1874. During his trip WC used the New York bank Duncan Sherman & Co for his receipts and expenditure. A final payment from them for £301-13s-2d was transferred to his Coutts account on 31 March 1874, presumably representing his profit from the trip (see [1436] to Frank Ward, 31 March 1874). Compare that amount with the estimate in Peters: ‘Wilkie had made about £2,500 from the trip’ (p. 365).

[3178] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 31 JANUARY 1874

MS: Benjamin.¹ Published: A&C7, p. 40.

Wilkie Collins | Boston. January 31st 1874

1. A card for a collector on Wilkie's American tour, with traces of mounting on reverse.

[1416] TO JOSEPH W. HARPER JR, 1 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 12–13.

St James's Hotel | Boston, Mass: | 1st February 1874

My dear Mr Harper,

I sincerely hope that the attack has been short as well as sharp, this time, and that my letter will find you released from imprisonment at the hands of our common enemy – R.G.¹ I have been suffering a little from rheumatism only – but so far I have nothing serious to complain of.

The idea of publishing the shorter stories and sketches in three Volumes seems to me to be an excellent one. I can call to mind nothing to add to “After Dark” beyond “Miss or Mrs?” “Blow Up with The Brig” and “The Fatal Cradle”. The volume ought to be attractive with these additions – and with the framework to “After Dark” which is the best thing of this sort that I have done.²

The portrait can appear as you propose in the “Miscellanies.” If any technical difficulty should get in the way of carrying out this idea – then perhaps the portrait might appear, as an additional attraction, to “Antonina” – my first novel. I have no alterations to make to “Antonina”. The new preface to the English cheap edition in one volume (Smith & Elder – “Antonina” price two shillings) gives some interesting particulars of the writing and publication of the book – but I have unluckily not got it with me here. The preface was written for the five shilling edition – but I believe it appears in the two shilling edition also. With “Antonina” as the first volume and the “Miscellanies” as the last our Edition will be complete. I do not see my way to writing a new preface to The Miscellanies.

The truth is, I am just now very busy in getting up a new “reading” – and it is not easy for me to give my mind to anything else. The enclosed “Advertisement” represents the only new prefatory matter to the Miscellanies that I can think of.³ Print it, if you see no objection. Or throw it into the waste paper basket, if you don't like it. I must have a dig at Peterson,⁴ if I write anything at all!

Pray give my best thanks to Mr Abbey for the present which he has so kindly made to me.⁵ I shall really and truly prize the drawing – and I shall frame it among my other works of art when I get home.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

J.W. Harper Esqre

P.S. I hope to be in New York early in March. I must sail for England towards the close of the month.

1. Clearly Harper is a fellow sufferer from what WC preferred to call ‘rheumatic gout’.

2. See the note to [1407] to Harper's of 16 January 1874.

3. Also found at Morgan with the letter is the following document, which in the event was not added to the Harper edition:

Advertisement to the American Edition

=

My miscellaneous stories, sketches, and essays have hitherto only appeared in The United States in a clumsy form of publication issued in Philadelphia, without my knowledge or consent, and without offering me any share in the profits derived by the sale of the stolen goods. The present readable and convenient edition is published with my authority – and (thanks to the kindness of my friends the Messrs Harper) I have an interest, this time, in the sale of my own book.

W.C.

Boston | February 1st 1874

4. T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia publishers, who issued various pirated editions of WC's works, recently including Mad Monkton and Other Stories and Miss or Mrs? (Gasson, pp. 122–123).

5. Edwin Austin Abbey (1852–1911), British-born artist who worked for Harper's.

[3344] TO JAMES REDPATH, 2 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Unknown. On sale AbeBooks, February 2018 by Mark Stolle, Manchester, by the Book, MA. Inscription on the title page of The Dead Secret, Harper & Brothers, 1874. Published: A&C12 p. 5.

Boston. February 2nd 1874

To James Redpath¹ from Wilkie Collins²

1. WC's agent for most of his tour of America. See [3322] to Redpath, 13 April 1873.

2. The dateline is written below the signature and below the words on the title page 'A Novel'. Beneath further lines in another hand 'and now the property of' with a heavily crossed out name and another more lightly crossed through but both illegible.

[1417] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 2 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/127). Published: BGLL, III, p. 14.

St James's Hotel | Boston | Mass: | February 2nd 1874

Dear Sir,

I hereby confer on you the sole power and authority to treat, in my name, with Miss Ada Cavendish and Mr Chatterton for the production of my play called "The New Magdalen" at the Adelphi Theatre London – the representations of the play to extend over a period of not less than one month.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins.

To | Wm F. Tindell Esqre | Messrs Benham & Tindell
18 Essex Street | Strand.

Private¹

My dear Tindell, on the other side is the "Power". I got your telegram on Friday afternoon – just before I started to "read" at a town near this. On Saturday I telegraphed back to you.² "Produce Magdalen. Power follows by mail". Now, I guess, you can go ahead.

You will already have received a letter from me – suggesting that you should look after my interests in London.³ You will, I am sure, find Miss Cavendish willing to do all she can to forward my interests. Make the best terms you can. Ten per cent on the gross nightly receipts were the authors' terms when "No Thoroughfare" was produced at the Adelphi.⁴ If they prefer a nightly payment go for £10/ a night for the use of the piece, and refuse to let them have the piece at anything under £5 nightly.⁵ I prefer the percentage – £5 is not enough for yours ever WC

1. WC divides the legal document ('the "Power"') and his private comments between the two leaves of the folding notepaper.

2. That is, on 31 January.

3. See [1414] to Tindell of 27 January 1874.

4. No Thoroughfare ran for 151 performances at the Adelphi from 26 December 1867.

5. WC was paid £6-13s-4d per night by the Bancrofts for Man and Wife at the Prince of Wales Theatre which ran from 22 February 1873 for 136 performances. In the event The New Magdalen was revived by Ada Cavendish at the Charing Cross Theatre (see [1494] to Frank Archer, 4 November 1874). Had the gross receipts matched those of The New Magdalen at the Olympic on 25 September 1873 (Glasgow, 891117/123), at a rate of ten per cent WC might expect to earn more than £10 a night. In fact for the run of 89 nights WC was paid no more than £4 a night (see [1505] to Frank Archer, 24 January 1875 n. 6).

[1418] TO CHARLES F. MORSE,¹ 3 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 15.

St James's Hotel | Tuesday, 3rd February 1874

Dear Colonel Morse,

I leave Boston for a few days in this week and return again on Sunday next. If that day or Monday next will suit you and Redpath² – either appointment will do for me³. Pray choose your own hour.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

(In haste)

-
1. Colonel Charles Fessenden Morse (1839–1926), Boston-born Harvard graduate and Civil War hero, who had recently embarked on a career as a railroad engineer in Kansas State.
 2. WC's new agent for the reading tour – see [1419] to him of 10 February.
 3. Hanes 2008 (p. 80) suggests that this was a dinner appointment.

[3160] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 6 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Unknown. On sale: The Horse Soldier, Gettysburg, PA 17325 (unknown date). Published: A&C6, p. 11.

Wilkie Collins | Springfield² | February 6th 1874

-
1. On a small card with traces of mounting at corners, apparently for an autograph collector.
 2. WC read 'The Dream Woman' at the Opera House, Springfield, Massachusetts on 5 February, and left the town the following day by the 1.30 train for Worcester (Hanes 2008, p. 76).

[1419] TO JAMES REDPATH, 10 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Fales.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 15.

Hotel Vendome | W. Boston | 10th Feby 1874

Dear Mr Redpath

Thanks for a cheque for $12.81 – due to me on the proceeds of the Boston afternoon reading.²

I am also obliged to you for the newspaper slip. I will consider the propriety of writing a reply – but it seems to me that the matter lies between Mr Williams and Mr Parry. Mr Parry expressly says “until proof is produced I will not believe that Mr Collins would either privately or publicly state what he knew to be false”. The best way I think will be for me to write personally to Mr Parry, on the subject.³

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. To the right of the hotel address there is the oval stamp 'BOSTON LYCEUM BUREAU | FEB | 11 | 1874 | JAMES REDPATH'. Also endorsed in an unknown hand: 'Collins Wilkie | Feby. 11 1874'.
 2. WC gave a reading of 'The Dream Woman' at the Tremont Temple, Boston, from 2pm on Saturday, 31 January (Hanes 2008, p. 75).
 3. See Hanes 2008 (pp. 76–80) on the controversy involving B. W. Williams of the American Literary Bureau and Rev. William Parry, manager of the Anglo-American Lecture Course at Worcester, MA. The latter had publicly accused the former of failing to honour a contract to have WC read at Worcester on Friday, 14 November 1873, after WC, at the beginning of his eventual reading in Worcester on 6 February (organized by Redpath), had tried to explain his earlier non-appearance (see Worcester Evening Gazette, 7 February 1874, p. 2). The newspaper clipping that WC reports receiving from Redpath here seems to have been 'Parry vs. Collins', Worcester Spy (9 February 1874), p. 1. No letter from WC to Parry has surfaced.

[1420] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 17 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/55), with envelope.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 16.

Hotel Vendome | Tuesday, 17 Feby 1874

My dear Schlesinger

One line to say that I shall be delighted to dine in Marlborough Street tomorrow – Wednesday – as you kindly proposed.

Such a banquet yesterday! A band playing in the next room while the courses followed each other.² I enclose a newspaper slip. It mentions everything³ – except a dove with a pen in her mouth – hanging from the chandelier – emblematic of yours ever

WC

(also enclosed Fred's address)⁴

-
1. Signed and directed to 'Sebastian B. Schlesinger Esqre | 79 Marlborough Street'; no stamp or postmark.
 2. The sumptuous banquet given in honour of WC by the publisher William F. Gill at the St James's Hotel is described in detail in Hanes 2008 (pp. 80–82).
 3. Hanes 2008 cites detailed accounts in the following papers on 17 February: Boston Daily Globe, Boston Evening Transcript, Boston Evening Standard, Boston Daily Evening Traveller. The cutting WC encloses is perhaps most likely to come from the first of these, a morning paper.
 4. Probably a reference to Fred Lehmann. Neither of the two enclosures (the newspaper cutting and the note with the address) appears to have survived.

[1421] TO JOHN TOWNSEND TROWBRIDGE, ¹ 22 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Houghton (bMS Am 2019). Published: BGLL, III, p. 16.

Hotel Vendome | Boston | 22nd February 1874

Dear Mr Trowbridge,

Pray accept my best thanks for the pleasant addition which you have kindly made to my library. Your stories will be welcome travelling companions to me, on my way back to England early in next month.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. John Townsend Trowbridge (1827–1916), Boston-based novelist and short story writer. An inscribed copy of his Coupon Bonds, and other stories (Boston: J. R. Osgood, 1873) was in WC's library at the time of his death (Baker 2002, p. 158).

[3127] TO EDWARD SOTHERN, ¹ [24] FEBRUARY 1874²

MS: Unknown. On sale: Heritage Auction Galleries, Dallas, Texas (20 November 2008, auction 5002 lot 63120 with several other items). Published: A&C5, pp. 8–9.

Hotel Vendome | Tuesday

Dear Sothern

A thousand thanks for your kind note. I should enjoy going with you – if I could. But I am tied to my desk by work which must be done. All this week, I ~~am at~~ must be at work till dinner-time.³

Pray present my thanks and my excuses ...⁴

... let me know where you settle after Boston.

[Yrs ever] | WC

1. Edward Askew Sothorn (1826–1881: ODNB), a comic actor who performed in New York and Boston as well as London. Born on 1 April, he was an unrepentant practical joker and part of a ‘lively theatrical circle’ in the 1850s and 1860s. In the mid-1870s he was touring in the USA. He was best known for the role of Dundreary in Our American Cousin by Tom Taylor.

2. WC seems to have stayed at the Vendome in Boston from 8 to 28 February 1874 (Hanes 2008, p. 108), a period including three Tuesdays. However, it seems most likely that this was written on the last of them – see note 3 below.

3. On 27 February WC read his newly reworked version of The Frozen Deep at Parker Memorial Hall (Hanes 2008, p. 83), which he was presumably working on that week. Before that his days in Boston seem relaxed and free of work; see [1420] to Schlesinger, 17 February 1874.

4. The visible part of the letter ends here, with the verso partially transcribed by the auctioneer. The letter is stuck to a page from an album with a handwritten heading: ‘Wilkie Collins. British Novelist. 1824–1889’. At the bottom is part of a note in mauve ink on cream paper: ‘But I fancy I shall move to the “Parker” tomorrow or the “Vendome” where Wilkie Collins is in’, with a separate associated signature ‘E A Sothorn’. Handwritten to the side is an additional note: ‘This shows that the above note was from Wilkie Collins’.

[1422] TO CHARLES WARD, 27 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 16–17.

Boston | Mass | U.S. America | February 27th 1874

My dear Ward,

Many thanks for your letter of the 10th – and for your kindness to Caroline. I don’t send you a cheque (for the £10 advance) as I have decided on returning by the boat which leaves this port on the 7th of March.¹ The Times are bad. There is nothing very profitable to be done – and I want to be at home again.

I enclose a receipt for two Policies of Insurance (of £1000 each) which I have effected on my life (in two respectable offices here) for £2000 (sterling) together.²

The Policies are to be kept here, in the strong box of my friend Mr Sebastian Schlesinger of the firm of Naylor & Co Oliver Street, Boston. The first year’s premium is paid. You, as my exor will kindly keep the receipt.³

I give a farewell reading tonight.⁴ So forgive a short letter. Frank sends you his best love. Au revoir.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. The Parthia – see [1426] to Tindell, 3 March 1874

2. For the details, again see [1426] William Tindell, 3 March 1874.

3. Ward must have been named executor in WC’s will in 1870 – see [1001] to William Tindell of 26 June 1870.

4. Of ‘The Frozen Deep’ at Parker Memorial Hall, Boston (Hanes 2008, p. 83).

[3128] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 28 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Unknown. On sale: Jeff Coopman, Ontario L2T 3Z8 (February 2009). Published: A&C5, p. 9.

Wilkie Collins | Boston | February 28th 1874

1. In a plastic envelope attached to a 1903 edition of The Moonstone.

[3215] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 28 FEBRUARY 1874

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (2012).¹ Published: A&C8, p. 13.

Wilkie Collins | Boston | February 28th 1874

1. Probably an autograph for a collector. This is a different item from the very similar [3128] of the same date. It seems probable WC signed a batch for different people.

[3387] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ OCTOBER 1873 TO FEBRUARY 1874²

MS: Lewis Collection (L2945). Published: A&C14, pp. 16-17.

and we[re]
poor dear's grave
midst of my success
sad thoughts of my lost mother and brother³ – who would have prized that success more highly than I do. But we must substitute the unsuitable⁴

...

yours always afftly | Wilkie Collins

My address is
care of Naylor & Co | Boston | Mass: | U.S. America

...se I name?⁵

-
1. The item is a scrap cut from the end of a letter, presumably by an autograph collector.
 2. Dating from the time WC was in America and could be corresponded with at Naylor's.
 3. WC's mother Harriet had died 19 March 1868 and his brother Charles on 9 April 1873.
 4. These words on the other side of the scrap have been heavily erased by overwriting with scrolls of blue ink, but are legible using image analysis software.
 5. End of a postscript written vertically down the left-hand side of the scrap.

[1423] TO JANE BIGELOW, 2 MARCH 1874

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, III, p. 17.

Westminster Hotel | New York | 2nd March 1874

Dear Mrs Bigelow

I have just got here (from Boston) to say goodbye. Tomorrow (Tuesday) if I don't hear from you to the contrary, I hope to have the honour of calling in West 25th Street, at your usual hour – between two and three.¹ Alas! on the 7th I sail away – from Boston in the Parthia. More farewells at Boston! I hate farewells

Forgive a very hurried letter, and believe me

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. We have not been able to identify the precise location of the New York residence of the Bigelows at this time.

[1424] TO CHARLES WARD, 2 MARCH 1874

MS: Texas (Times Recipients 4/72).¹ Published: BGLL, III, pp. 17–18.

New York. March 2nd

My dear Ward,

Can you, without trouble, get the enclosed inserted in the "Times" – not as an advertisement – but as news at the bottom of a column?² It will save me much trouble in writing letters.

WC

1. On a scrap of paper cut irregularly from the foot of a sheet of notepaper, with the text scored through with a series of seven slanting lines. The message WC wished inserted was presumably on the excised portion and clearly concerned his return journey to England.

2. The day after his vessel docked at Liverpool, beneath a lengthy letter to the editor from E. B. Pusey concerning ecclesiastical law, the Times carried the following brief announcement: ‘MR. WILKIE COLLINS. – Mr. Wilkie Collins returns to England from Boston, United States, on March 7, by the Cunard steamer Parthia.’ (19 March 1874, p. 10f).

[1425] TO JOSEPH W. HARPER JR, 2 MARCH 1874

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, III, p. 18.

Westminster Hotel | Monday 2nd March 1874

My dear Mr Harper,

I am here for two days to say goodbye – before I sail from Boston in the Parthia on Saturday.

Tomorrow morning (before 12) I hope to have the pleasure of calling in Franklin Square, and of congratulating you on a dissolution of partnership with R.G.¹

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

1. A joking reference to the bout of ‘Rheumatic Gout’ from which Harper must have just recovered – see [1416] to Harper of 1 February 1874.

[1426] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 3 MARCH 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/1 28–9).¹ Published: B&C, II, p. 381.

New York City. U.S.A. | 3rd March 1874

My dear Tindell

Your letter of Feby 11th received. I am here for two days to say goodbye – and I propose sailing for England on March 7th from Boston by the Cunard Steamer Parthia. All news, when we meet [del]. I write in a tearing hurry – with the room full of people.

In case I am drowned, I send you particulars (enclosed) of Insurances on my Life in Boston. Policies in safe keeping with an old friend (partner of Lehmann), and a merchant in Boston. Receipts /for Policies/ sent to Charles Ward. Whole amount of Insurance £2000.

“Vive La Republique”!²

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Insurances on the Life of | Wilkie Collins | effected in Boston, U.S. America³

=

I. February 6th – Policy for $5000 (£1000 sterling) in the Manhattan Life Insurance Company (No 37019) | Annual Premium $227.00

II. February 12th. Policy for $5000 (£1000 sterling) in The New England Mutual Insurance Company (No 53,404) | Annual Premium $235.00

=

First year’s Premiums paid. Second years [sic] Premiums due February 6th and February 12th 1875, at the offices in Boston (U.S).

Policies deposited with Sebastian B. Schlesinger Esqre, firm of Naylor & Co 6 Oliver Street. Boston. U.S. /Mr Schlesinger’s receipt for the Policies has been posted to Charles Ward Coutts & Co./

1. WC uses lined notepaper embossed with ‘RAVINE’ within an ellipse.

2. We are uncertain what WC intends here by citing this conventional expression of French patriotism.

3. Memorandum in WC’s hand on a similar sheet of lined notepaper.

[1427] TO HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW,¹ 6 MARCH 1874

MS: Houghton (bMS Am 1340.2). Summary: B&C, II, p. 382. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 18–19.

Boston | 6th March 1874

Dear Mr Longfellow,

I sail for England tomorrow morning at eleven o’Clock. To my great regret, the numerous demands on my time today, leave me no hope of being able to get to Cambridge and to take your hand at parting. It is only in this way that I can thank you for your kindness, and say how honoured and how happy I feel in having become personally acquainted with you.

This is not – I earnestly hope – my last visit to America. “Farewell” is so sad a word that I even dislike writing it. Let me say only – Goodbye until our next meeting.

Pray present my remembrances to the young ladies, and believe me

Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807–82), poet. He had two sons and three daughters, Alice, Annie and Edith, and his home at Cambridge, MA, ‘became a shrine for Americans and a point of visit for distinguished foreigners’ (see The Oxford Companion to American Literature, eds James D. Hart and Phillip W. Leininger, 6th edn (Oxford: OUP, 1996), p. 388). Longfellow was amongst the guests at William F. Gill’s reception for WC at the St James’s Hotel in Boston, 16 February 1874, and on 21 February 1874 Collins dined with him at his home Craigie House (see Hyder, p. 57).

[1428] TO OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,¹ 7 MARCH 1874

MS: Congress. Photocopy: Kansas (MS P557:A4). Published: Robinson 1951, p. 272; BGLL, III, pp. 19–20.

Boston | 7th March 1874

Dear Doctor Holmes

Twice yesterday, I tried to call in Beacon Street, and take your hand at parting – and twice the innumerable worries and interruptions incidental to making ready for a long journey have risen as obstacles in my way. This morning at eleven I sail in the Parthia – and I must say (most imperfectly), in writing, that I am indeed gratefully sensible of all that I owe to your cordial welcome, and that I shall prize as long as I live the charming little poem which speaks to me of your genius and your kindness whenever I look at it.² Farewell, dear Doctor Holmes – for the present. I have few dearer hopes than the hope of my return to America.

With true esteem and regard, | yours most truly | Wilkie Collins

1. Oliver Wendell Holmes (1809–94: DAB), poet, physician and humorist, whom WC had met in New York on 22 October 1873 at Seaver’s breakfast party.

2. At the party in WC’s honour at St James’s Hotel, Boston, Holmes read the following verse tribute:

‘Wilkie Collins – February 16, 1874.’

The painter’s and the poet’s fame
Shed their twinned lustre round his name,
To gild our story-teller’s art,
Where each in turn must play his part.

What scenes from Wilkie’s pencil sprung,
The minstrel saw but left unsung!
What shapes the pen of Collins drew,
No painter clad in living hue!

But on our artist’s shadowy screen
A stranger miracle is seen
Than priest unveils or pilgrim seeks: –
A poem breathes, a picture speaks!

And so his double name comes true,

They christened better than they knew,
And Art proclaims him twice her son, –
Painter and poet, both in one!

(as printed in the Boston Daily Globe, 17 February 1874, p. 5)

[1429] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 7 MARCH 1874

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/57), with envelope.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 20.

March 7th 1874²

My dear Schlesinger,

Literally one line – in the agonies of departure – to say that I have written to Sarony to prepare him for a visit from Mrs Schlesinger, and to urge him to make the best artistic use of this new “sitting”.³

Thank you again and again for the pleasantest hours I have spent in Boston.

Yours ever | WC

-
1. Signed and directed to ‘Sebastian B. Schlesinger Esqre | 79 Marlborough Street | City’; no stamp or postmark.
 2. No address appears but the letter was presumably written at WC’s Boston hotel, on the morning of his sailing for England.
 3. Napoleon Sarony (1821–96), celebrated New York photographer whose studio was at 680 Broadway, for whom WC had sat – see [2132] to him of 5 April 1883.

[1430] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 7 MARCH 1874

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 20–21.

Boston | 7th March 1874

My dear Seaver,

I sail this morning (in a snow storm) – and here is my last available morsel of paper.

Enclosed, you will find my portrait and signature. When you are in England, remember my address – 90. Gloucester Place, Portman Square, London.

Anything else? Yes. Two things forgotten – which I had to say at the Brunswick Banquet.

First – my kindest remembrances to all my friends in New York, whom I failed to see – to Surrogate Hutchings,¹ to [Hurlbert],² and to others. If I had had time, I would have called upon them all. Pray don’t let them suppose that I have forgotten them or that I am insensible to their cordial welcome.

Second – a line on behalf of my godson (who dined with us) Francis Collins Ward. He has acted as my secretary, and has done his work admirably – and he has had excellent commercial training in the house of Naylor & Co. of Boston. In your position it is just possible that you might hear of something in the shape of suitable employment. If, in this event, you will remember him, you will add to my obligations to your kindness.

Naylor & Co, 6 Oliver St, Boston will speak to his character and capacity – and letters will reach him at that address.

My portmanteaus are closing, and I must follow their example. Goodbye – for the present – and thank you for some of the pleasantest hours that I have spent in America,

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Robert Chadwick Hutchings (c. 1838–91), graduate in law of Columbia College, from 1870 the elected Surrogate (judge) of the New York County (Manhattan) Surrogate’s Court, which dealt with estate and probate matters. His name was on the printed list of guests at ‘Mr. William A. Seaver’s Breakfast to Mr. Wilkie Collins. Union Club, October 22d, 1873.’
 2. See [1390] to Mr [Hurlbert] of 14 November 1873.

[1431] TO GEORGE W. CHILDS, 16 MARCH 1874

MS: Private. Published: B&C, II, pp. 382–3.

Steam Ship Parthia | At Sea. March 16th 1874

My dear Mr Childs,

Constant interruptions on shore have allowed me no /earlier/ opportunity of writing to tell you of my return to England/. / ~~until the~~ I had hoped to remain /a few weeks longer/ in the United States – and to pay you my promised visit [del] during this month. But letters from home have obliged me to hasten my departure – and to leave America at the beginning, instead of at the end of March – as I had planned to do.

Need I say that I reckon among my chief disappointments the loss of the pleasant days I had hoped to pass under your roof? But I had no other choice than to get back, and attend to some business which was all going wrong in my absence.¹

I can only trust to your indulgence to forgive me and to make my apologies to Mrs Childs. More than this, I venture to hope that my visit is still only put off until a later date than we had calculated on.² If all goes well with me, I shall return to my good American friends at the first opportunity that I can find. I leave you with a grateful heart – with recollections of American kindness and hospitality which will be, as long as I live, among the happiest recollections to which I can look back.

Let me once again thank you, and thank Mrs Childs, for happy hours at Philadelphia – and let me earnestly hope for more of those hours in the time to come.

With kindest remembrances to Mrs Childs, and with sincere esteem and regard,
always truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

If you should in London, before I cross the Atlantic again, don't forget my address: –
90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square.

1. Presumably referring to both the professional business of revivals of The New Magdalen and the private matter of the landlord selling the house at 55 Marylebone Road where Martha Rudd and his children lived.

2. See [1382] to Childs of 21 October 1873.

[1432] TO CYRUS W. FIELD,¹ 16 MARCH 1874

MS: Morgan (Cyrus W. Field Coll.). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 21–22.

Steam Ship Parthia | At sea. | March 16th 1874

My dear Sir,

I left New York on the 5th of this month, and I sailed for England (from Boston) on the 7th. Under these circumstances, I am sure I may trust to your kindness and to Mrs Fields' kindness to accept my apologies for this late acknowledgement of your courtesy, and to permit me – in this way – to offer my congratulations on the recent happy event in your family circle.²

I leave America with feelings of sincere gratitude and sincere regret. If all goes well with me, my first visit to my kind friends in the United States shall not be my last. I hope to have opportunities in the future of improving our acquaintance. In the meantime, pray accept my thanks, and believe me.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Cyrus W. Field Esq

1. Cyrus West Field (1819–92: DAB), paper merchant and financier, then resident in New York. He was most famous as the founder of the New York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph Company, which in 1866 succeeded in establishing the first stable telegraphic communication between Europe and the United States.

2. WC had presumably visited the Fields during his stay in New York; the 'happy event' has not been identified, but, since Field married Mary Bryan Stone in 1840 and the couple had seven children, it was presumably the marriage of a child or the birth of a grandchild.

[1433] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 21 MARCH 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 22.

90 Gloucester Place | March 21st 1874

Dear Mr Bentley,

I shall be delighted to see you on Tuesday afternoon – as you propose. At any time which will suit you, between 3 and 5.¹

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. This seems to have been one of the first letters WC wrote on his return from Boston on the Cunard liner Parthia, which docked in Liverpool on 18 March, a Wednesday.

[1434] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 21 MARCH 1874

MS: NAL (MSL/1922/ 186/52). Published: B&C, II, p. 383 (as to Mrs W.P. Frith).

90, Gloucester Place¹ | 21st March 1874

Dear Mrs Frith,

I shall be delighted to dine with you at 7.30 on Thursday April 2nd – as you kindly propose.

We were lost in a fog on the voyage back – but the captain’s sea manship [sic] brought us safely through our difficulties. The rolling of the boat is still in my head – and I feel like a foreigner in my native climate.²

With best love to Frith, | Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. Handwritten address on paper watermarked ‘ORIGINAL | TURKEY MILL | KENT’.

2. WC had returned from Boston on the Cunard liner Parthia and docked in Liverpool three days earlier on March 18th. He was already beginning to suffer from the damp English climate.

[2984] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 22 MARCH 1874

MS: Morgan (Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS). Published: BGLL, IV Addenda, p. 402.

Summary: Apparently simply a dated autograph.

[1435] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 30 MARCH 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 23.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 30th March 1874

Dear Sirs,

Your kind present of the Canadian edition of “The Parisians” was one of the pleasant sights which met me here on my return.¹ Pray accept my best thanks.

I had a most agreeable voyage home – sailing from Boston on the 7th of this month in the Cunard Steamer, Parthia. All my friends are surprised at the improvement in my health since I left them in September last. I look back on my Tour with the most agreeable recollections – and I rank among the happiest of these associations the memory of my visit to Toronto and of the hospitable welcome which has made my Canadian publishers my Canadian friends also.

I am thinking of publishing my “readings” – here and in America. After I left you, I added to “The Dream-Woman”, a story founded on my early play of “The Frozen Deep”. You shall have early proofs when these works get into print – and you shall hear, in due time, of other literary projects which I have in view.

My godson, Mr Ward, remains for the present in the United States – at Boston. Before we parted, he begged me, when I wrote, to give you his kindest remembrances.

With all good wishes, | Believe me
Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

1. Bulwer-Lytton's novel, published in a single volume by Hunter, Rose of Toronto in 1874. No copy is listed in WC's library at his death (Baker).

[1436] TO FRANK WARD,¹ 31 MARCH 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 23–24.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.
31st March 1874

My dear Frank

Your mother has just called upon me and told me the good news! I am delighted – and I heartily congratulate you.²

Today, Messrs Duncan Sherman & Co have forwarded the Balance of my account to Coutts's. All quite right.³

We shall meet so soon that I need add no more – except to wish you as pleasant a voyage back as I had.

Yours always affly | Wilkie Collins

1. Francis Collins Ward (b. 1850), generally known as Frank, WC's godson, son of Charles and Jane Ward.

2. The good news was clearly that Ward was to work with his father at Coutts bank on his return from the United States – see [1475] to him of 29 July 1874.

3. WC's account in the United States with the New York banking firm, which, as his secretary, Frank Ward had been managing. The sum of £310-13s-2d was credited on 31 March to WC's bank account as 'Bill on Union Bk recvd by Messrs Duncan & Co'. This is the balance from his American tour. Leaving aside the expenses of the return journey to America, this could be seen as his profit. Compare this amount with the estimate in Peters: 'Wilkie had made about £2,500 from the trip' (p. 365).

[1437] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 2 APRIL 1874

MS: NAL (MSL/1922/ 186/39). Published: B&C, II, pp. 383–4.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | April 2nd 1874

Dear Mrs Frith,

I am obliged, I regret to say, to ask you to forgive my absence this evening.

I came back from America with a new stock of health – as I supposed. But my native climate has already made me so “bilious” that I can hardly see. My eyes are yellow, and my head aches, and the doctor positively forbids dinner today, and prescribes fasting and physic for the next four and twenty hours. I am very, very sorry to miss the pleasant meeting with you and Frith tonight.

Pray accept my excuses, and believe me | truly yours, | WC

1. Printed heading in centred, small blue capitals.

[1438] TO SQUIRE BANCROFT, 6 APRIL 1874

MS: Unknown. Published: Bancroft 1888, I, pp. 416–17, our copy text; BGLL, III, pp. 24–25.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square, W., | April 6, 1874

My Dear Bancroft,

I tried to call at Pleydell House yesterday,¹ but the London distances – I was obliged to go first to South Kensington – were too much for me.

The get-up of the piece is simply wonderful;² I never before saw anything, within the space, so beautiful and so complete: but the splendid costumes and scenery did not live in my memory as Mrs Bancroft's acting does. I don't know when I have seen anything so fine as her playing of the great scene with Joseph; the truth and beauty of it, the marvellous play of expression in her face, the quiet and beautiful dignity of her repentance, are beyond all praise.

I cannot tell you or tell her how it delighted and affected me. You, too, played admirably. The "key" was, perhaps, a little too low; but the conception of the man's character I thought most excellent. I left my seat in a red-hot fever of enthusiasm. I have all sorts of things to say about the acting – which cannot be said here – when we next meet. I heartily congratulate you in the meantime.

Yours ever, | Wilkie Collins.

1. The Bancrofts' residence in Grove End Road, St John's Wood – see [1117] to W. F. Tindell of 12 August 1871. Marie was the eldest daughter of Robert Pleydell Wilton and her first child was christened George Pleydell Bancroft (1868–1956).

2. The innovative production of Sheridan's School for Scandal which had just opened at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, with the Bancrofts playing the parts of Lady Teazle and Joseph Surface – see the review in the Times, 9 April 1874.

[1439] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 8 APRIL 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 25.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | April 8th 1874

Dear Mr Bentley

A thousand thanks for your telegram and your kind note. I have written to the American publisher, and requested him to inform me by return of mail of the period at which he can start the periodical publication in the United States. If October is too late, I suggested to him to begin with the first number in July. In any case, I will get on with the work – so as to have the Mss ready for any time.¹

You will hear of course the moment I receive my answer – and you shall have ample notice of the date of my first appearance.

I may possibly have another matter to speak to you about in a few days – when the holidays are over. I will call in New Burlington Street.

Yours vry truly | Wilkie Collins

1. As [1443] to Bentley of Thursday 7 May makes clear, the reference is to The Frozen Deep, and Other Stories (Readings and Writings in America), which Bentley issued in two volumes in November 1874. We have only been able to trace an American periodical publication of 'The Dream Woman', possibly unauthorized, in four parts in the New York Weekly, 9–30 November 1874. However, in early 1875 William F. Gill of Boston published, in single volumes, both The Frozen Deep (with 'A Terribly Strange Bed') and Alicia Warlock (A Mystery), and Other Stories ('The Dream Woman' with six other tales). Both include brief introductions signed by WC and are clearly authorized editions. See also [1490] to Oliver Wendell Holmes of 5 November 1874.

[1440] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 10 APRIL 1874¹

MS: Glasgow (891117/111). Published: BGLL, III, p. 26.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th April

My dear Tindell,

Talk of the devil – here he is summoning me on a Jury! Will the enclosed answer do? If yes – will you kindly send it to Chancery Lane by the first clerk who goes that way?

If No – what had I better do? Let the house instantly to Caroline? – eh?²

I hope your invalids are better. Send me a line to say how they are,³

Yours ever | WC

Will you come and take pot-luck any day next week – except Tuesday 14th? Hour. 7.

-
1. Dating from the stationery and the calendar: the distinctive notepaper (the printed address in rather broken blue type, centred) is only found soon after his return from the United States; and, during the period when WC writes to Tindell, 14 April falls on a Tuesday only in 1868 and 1874.
 2. Only male householders could serve on juries.
 3. Presumably a reference to illness in Tindell's family.

[3179] TO [ELÉONORE FECHTER],¹ 21 APRIL 1874

MS: Private. Published: A&C7, pp. 40–41 (as to Unidentified Frenchwoman).

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

21st April 1874

Chère Madame,

J'étais désolé de vous trouver sortie, Samedi dernier, quand j'avais l'honneur d'aller vous présenter mes respects. J'espère être plus heureux la prochaine fois.

En attendant, si je pouvais vous être aucunement utile à Londres, commandez chère madame – je suis à vos ordres.

Recevez je vous prie mes meilleurs compliments
Wilkie Collins

-
1. Although not identified by name here, the only woman with whom WC corresponded in French around this time was the actor Charles Fechter's wife: Eléonore Fechter née Rolbert (1819–1895: ODNB), actress of the Comédie Française under the stage name of Eléonore Rabut, who had married Fechter on 29 November 1847, and who, like her husband, had appeared in Mitchell's French Plays at the St James's Theatre, London. See [1469] to her of 1 July 1874.
 2. The many faults in the French are WC's. Translation:

I was sorry to find you out, last Saturday, when I had the honour to call to present my respects to you. I hope to be more fortunate next time.

Meanwhile, if I can be of any service to you in London, instruct me, dear madam – I am at your command.

I beg you to accept my best regards
Wilkie Collins

[3216] TO W. F. TILLOTSON,¹ 17 APRIL 1874

MS: Bergen (MS. nr. 790 L). Published: A&C8, pp. 13–14.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

17th April 1874

Dear sir,

I beg to thank you for your letter of the 13th April.

I shall be happy to give my best attention to any proposal with which you may favour me, on behalf of the Newspapers to which your letter alludes.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W. F. Tillotson Esq

-
1. William Frederic Tillotson (1844–89), head of Tillotson & Son, proprietors of a chain of Lancashire newspapers, including the Bolton Evening News (1867–) and Bolton Weekly Journal (1871–), which had expanded its business into the field of fiction syndication from 1873 – see Law, pp. 64–91. It would be another four years before WC signed a contract to produce work for Tillotson's publications. See [1747] to Tillotson, 4 May 1878.

[3290] TO [ELÉONORE FECHTER],¹ 23 APRIL [1874]

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, pp. 11–12.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
23^{me} avril

Chère Madame

Merci milles fois de votre aimable lettre.

J'attendrais l'honneur de vous recevoir ici Lundi [sic] avec le plus vif plaisir.²

Wilkie Collins³

1. The year and recipient are inferred from [3179] to [Eléonore Fechter] of 21 April 1874. This must be a reply to her reply to that letter.

2. WC writes on a Tuesday.

3. Translation: 'Dear Madam | Thank you a thousand times for your kind letter. I shall await the honour of receiving you here on Monday with the greatest pleasure.'

[1441] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 25 APRIL 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/130). Published: BGLL, III, p. 26.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th April 1874

My dear Tindell,

If you can possibly let me see you today, pray do. Let me know what time will suit you by the Bearer (who waits). Any time that is most convenient to you will do for me. I have something important to consult you about – something which will not bear delay.¹

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. The urgent subject of consultation has not been identified.

[1442] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 7 MAY 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 27.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Thursday 7th May 1874

Dear Mr Bentley,

I heard yesterday from my American publisher – and his letter makes it necessary for me to ask you to begin with the first number of The Frozen Deep in July next.¹ I send you the Mss with this note. It contains three monthly parts – which I reckon as each occupying from 16 to 20 of your Magazine pages. The other story ("The Dream Woman") will fill two numbers more. Five numbers in all. Or say – both stories together reach about half the length of "The New Magdalen".²

Will you kindly let me know before Saturday next what Temple Bar will give for the rights of periodical publication of the Mss of the two stories – all other rights being reserved by me?

If we agree as to terms (which I have no doubt we shall) it would be a convenience to my American Australian³ and Canadian⁴ publishers to have The Frozen Deep set up in parts as soon as possible.

I suppose there would be no objection to my republishing (in some form) a month in advance of the periodical conclusion?

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I also send the privately printed sheets of "The Dream Woman" – so that you may satisfy yourself as to the question of length.

N.B. I have no copy of the new Mss of The Frozen Deep – so the printers are requested to be careful of it!

1. See [1439] to Bentley of 8 April 1874.

2. The narrative version of 'The Frozen Deep' was serialized in Bentley's Temple Bar in August–October 1874, with

'The Dream Woman' following in November and December. 'John Jago's Ghost' was added for the volume edition of The Frozen Deep, and Other Stories, which appeared from Bentley on 2 November 1874.

3. The Frozen Deep was serialized in the Melbourne Leader, 25 July 1874–17 September 1874, and in the Queenslander, 22 August–3 October 1874 (Johnson-Woods, p. 96).

4. Hunter, Rose of Toronto published a Canadian volume edition in 1874, consisting of 'The Frozen Deep' and 'The Dream Woman'. No Canadian serial version has been traced, though [1476] to Hunter, Rose of 18 August mentions pirated versions in the newspapers.

[1443] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 7 MAY 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 28.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th May 1874

Dear Mr Bentley

You most kindly assisted me in trying to get Mr Edwin de Leon's articles in Harper's Magazine republished on this side of the Atlantic.¹ Here is Mr de Leon himself, who wishes to speak to you on the subject of some contemplated articles of the lively and amusing sort which might suit the pages of Temple Bar.²

You will oblige me if you will kindly consider his proposals. He has had great success as a writer in American periodicals of the highest class.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq^r

1. See [1392] to Bentley of 21 November 1873.

2. [1444] shows WC writing to George Smith on the same day in this regard. Though nothing by Edwin De Leon subsequently appeared in the Cornhill, his 'Infidel Smyrna' was published in Temple Bar, 43 (October 1874), pp. 523–534, with the author described as 'Ex US-Consul-General in Egypt'.

[1444] TO GEORGE SMITH, 7 MAY 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 28.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th May 1874

My dear Smith

Mr Edwin de Leon – an able and experienced writer in the United States, and especially acquainted with the present condition in the Southern States – is desirous of offering his services to The Cornhill Magazine.¹ If you will kindly place him in communication with the Editor,² you will oblige yours truly

Wilkie Collins

George Smith Esqr

1. See [1445] to George Bentley of the same date.

2. Then Leslie Stephen (1832–1904: ODNB), who performed the role from 1871 to 1882.

[1445] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 9 MAY 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 29.

90. Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. | W. | 9th May 1874

Dear Mr Bentley,

Many thanks for your kind note. I willingly accept the terms which you are so good as to propose for the right of publishing "The Frozen Deep" and "The Dream-Woman" in the Temple Bar Magazine.

As to the mode of payment, it can either be monthly on the publication of each part – or in two instalments during the period of publication – whichever is most convenient to yourself.

I shall be obliged if you will kindly give instructions to have The Frozen Deep set up in proof at as early a date as will suit you – for the sake of the foreign publishers.

You are well out of London. It is so cold today that I am obliged to return to my winter clothing. I hope the asthma is relieved in the mild air of Folkestone.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George Bentley Esqre

[1446] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 12 MAY 1874

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 280. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 29–30.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th May 1874

Dear Mr Bentley

Thank you for your valuable suggestion.¹ I hardly like to think (much less to say) how little I make by my books – entirely through bad management and neglect.

But it “is never too late &c &c”. I shall be delighted to adopt your suggestion – and I will write to Smith on the subject in a day or two. He will have no objection to make – he will only think me mad (!). If The Woman In White realises something in the new form – the two next most successful books (“Man & Wife” and “The Moonstone”) – neither of them reduced to the two shilling form, shall cast their lot in the series too.²

But what is the method of proceeding? Shall I propose to buy – or will you buy and debit my account with – the Stereo-plates now in Smith’s hands? And will it not be desirable to stop the 2/ Edition? or may that go on addressing another class of purchasers? The least expensive way of managing it will be the way most welcome to me at present. I have had some heavy payments to make lately – and there are more “outgoings” looming on the horizon!

Yours very truly | Wilkie Collins

1. As [1450] to George Smith of 18 May – together with what follows – makes clear, Bentley’s suggestion concerned the reprint editions of WC’s most perennially popular novel, The Woman in White. Bentley’s idea was that WC would make more money by dropping the two-shilling yellowback edition of the novel issued by Smith, Elder, and instead bringing out a six-shilling edition from Bentley in the same format as the 6s. single-volume reprints of Poor Miss Finch and The New Magdalen.

2. Though WC continued to react very positively to Bentley’s suggestion, in the end nothing came of the plan. George Smith pointed out that he already had considerable stock of the yellowback edition of The Woman in White on his hands (see [1452] to him of 27 May 1874), and by the autumn WC had decided to accept a more favourable offer for his available copyrights from Chatto & Windus.

[1447] TO J. STEELE MACKAYE,¹ 14 MAY 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12).² Published: BGLL, III, p. 30.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 14th May 1874

Dear Mr MacKaye,

I am (most unfortunately) obliged to keep an appointment at half past five this afternoon. Pray accept my best good wishes for your voyage – and my thanks for your kind offer of taking letters or messages to your own country for me. I have but one message – to tell all my American friends how sincerely grateful I am for the reception which they gave me, and how sincerely glad I shall be to find myself among them again. I owe them a visit and you a visit. We will not say goodbye – we will look forward to the time when I may take your hand in America.

Pray present my best wishes to Mrs MacKaye,³ and believe me
Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. In the spring of 1874 Mackaye was engaged in collaborations with Charles Reade and Tom Taylor before returning to the United States.

2. The last of WC’s extant letters to the American actor, this does not form part of the series held in the Rauner Special Collections Library at Dartmouth College – see [3233] of 5 February 1873.

3. Mary Keith MacKaye née Medbery (1845–1924), who, after her husband’s death in 1894, was to publish a popular dramatization of Jane Austen’s Pride and Prejudice (New York: Duffield, 1906).

[1448] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 16 MAY 1874

MS: Berg. Published: B&C, II, p. 384.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 16th May 1874

Dear Mr Bentley,

I will write to Mr Smith next week. The copyright of the book is entirely mine.² Your account of the sale of “East Lynne” amazes me.³

I hope you are going on well. I have got the gout flying about me – and keeping me nervous and unfit for work.

With many thanks for your letter.

Vy truly yours | WC

The Moonstone has been published in one 5/ volume.⁴ Sale, so far as I know, a little over 3000 copies so far. And this book has been translated into all the European languages!!⁵

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper.

2. The Woman in White – see [1446] to Bentley of 12 May.

3. The best-selling sensation novel by Mrs Henry (Ellen) Wood, first published in three volumes in 1861. ‘By 1876 Bentley had printed 65,000 copies of the work’ (Sutherland, p. 678).

4. By Smith, Elder in May 1861 – see [1078] to George Smith of 28 March 1871.

5. WC writes his postscript first at the foot, and then up the right hand side, of the otherwise blank third page.

[1449] TO THOMAS DIXON SPAIN,¹ 16 MAY 1874

MS: BL (Add. 45918, ff. 81–82). Published: BGLL, III, p. 31.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16 May 1874

Sir,

You are correctly informed about the Bellew Fund. Mr Bellew is seriously ill, and he stands sorely in need of all that his friends and admirers can do to help him.² A Committee has been formed to collect subscriptions of which I am one of the members – and an address to the public (containing the names of the Committee men) has been lately advertised in the newspapers.³ Subscriptions can be paid – either to the members of the committee, or to the London and Westminster Branch Bank, 4, Stratford Place Oxford Street London. – to the “Account of The Bellew Fund.”

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Tom D. Spain Esq.

1. Thomas Dixon Spain (1846–1925), at the 1871 Census a schoolmaster at Burgh le Marsh, Lincolnshire, and from 1874 Organising Secretary of the Church of England Temperance Society for Lichfield. He was ordained a Church of England priest in 1886 (Crockford, 1908).

2. J. C. M. Bellew, a neighbour of Collins, formerly a preacher and from 1868 a public performer. See [1368] to F. C. Beard of 1869–August 1873.

3. See, for example, the notice in the Times of 28 April 1874, p. 8a, which stated that Bellew’s illness ‘not only incapacitates him from present exertion, but renders it a matter of doubt whether he will ever again be capable of resuming any active occupation in life’. WC’s name headed the list of twelve committee members, which also included W. P. Frith, Henry Irving, J. C. Parkinson, G. A. Sala and Edmund Yates. WC planned a reading to support the fund but Bellew died before it could take place – see [1464] to Isabelle Frith of 23 June 1874.

[1450] TO GEORGE SMITH, 18 MAY 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 31–32.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | May 18th 1874

My dear Smith,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £54..3..4 on account of royalties due on reprints of “Man and Wife” “The Moonstone” and “Antonina” from September 1873 to February 1874.¹

I have lately had a proposal submitted to me for publishing “The Woman In White” at a more remunerative price than 2/-, and for dropping the 2/- edition as a matter of course.² Will you kindly cause inquiry to be made as to the amount of stock now on hand – and will you also let me know whether the Stereo-plates are in sufficiently good condition to bear reprinting from in a new and a more expensive form than the present? The profits from the two shilling issue are (necessarily) so small, that I shall not be risking much if I try to improve the value of the copyright.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Smith Esq

1. Credited in WC’s bank account ‘By recd of Smith Elder & Co’ on 18 May (Coutts: WC).

2. The proposal was from George Bentley – see [1446] to him of 12 May 1874.

[3388] TO EDWIN DE LEON,¹ 19 MAY 1874

MS: Private. Published: A&C14, p. 17.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square
19th May 1874

Dear Mr De [sic] Leon,

I have been suffering a little from a night attack of my old enemy, the gout – or I should sooner have acknowledged your letter. Pray excuse my delay.

I enclose a letter of introduction to my friend at The Daily News – Mr Edward Pigott.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Edwin de Leon (1818–91), American diplomat and journalist – see also [1681] to him of 1 June 1877; also [1443] to George Bentley, and [1444] to George Smith, both of 7 May 1874, providing letters of recommendation.

[1451] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 20 MAY 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 32.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 20th May 1874

Dear Mr Bentley,

I shall only get the proofs of the First number on Friday next – and this is a little late for Australia. Also, my agent in America has made a mistake in the matter of the advance sheets there.¹

Under these circumstances, I have taken it on myself (the mail to America going out yesterday) to defer the appearance of the First Part of The Frozen Deep from July to August. This will, I hope, not put you to any inconvenience. I have notified the change to Mr Munnings so that the arrangements for the July number may not suffer by a single day.²

(In great haste) | Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

I have written to Mr Smith – but have not yet received an answer.³

1. The American agent has not been identified.

2. James Munnings was then Bentley’s office manager – see [1482] to him of 9 September 1874. In the Bentley Archive at the University of Illinois, there is a letter from Munnings dated 19 May 1874, informing George Bentley that WC had called at the office that day and was in a hurry to receive proofs of the first monthly part of the story. Only then had the manuscript been sent to Clowes, the printer.

3. Concerning the Smith, Elder yellowback edition of The Woman in White. Smith must have written back a few days later with a complete list of his stock in hand of WC’s works – see [1452] to George Smith of 27 May 1874.

[1452] TO GEORGE SMITH, 27 MAY 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 33.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th May 1874

My dear Smith,

Many thanks for the list of the Stock on hand.

My letter referred to “The Woman In White” only. I have no present intention of disturbing the form of publication of the novels written prior to that work. There is therefore no difficulty – so far as I am concerned – about your executing the order for 100 sets of the books in sheets. You are quite at liberty to reprint 2000 copies of “The Dead Secret” and “The Queen of Hearts” whenever you like.

As to “The Woman in White” I must of course allow a certain time to elapse (in view of the stock in hand) before I decide on altering the price and the form of publication of that one book only. I will write to you again on this subject, when I have conferred with the publisher who made the proposal to me.¹

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. George Bentley – see [1470] to him of 3 July 1874.

[1453] TO GEORGE SMITH, 29 MAY 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 33.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th May 1874

My dear Smith,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £33..6..8 – being my royalty on a reprint of 2000 copies, each, of “The Dead Secret” and “The Queen of Hearts”¹

I will not fail to give due consideration to the point which you kindly mention, in regard to the sale of my books in sets.²

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Credited ‘Of Smith Elder & Co’ on the same day (Coutts: WC).

2. Smith had presumably pointed out to Collins that there were considerable economic advantages in having his novels issued in a uniform series, rather than piecemeal in different formats and from different publishers.

[1454] TO HUNTER, ROSE & Co., 30 MAY 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 34–35.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
30th May 1874

Dear Sirs,

I need hardly say that the copyright news from Canada surprises and disconcerts me.¹

The proposed act is simply an act of confiscation. A government which considers such an act, would be perfectly capable of diminishing even the wretched ~~royalty~~ compensation which they now propose to give to the plundered owners of English copyright. A book is a commercial commodity. On what ground of reason justice or political economy does the Government of Canada propose to force the producers and proprietors of a commercial commodity to sell it?

I suppose our copyright association here will call a meeting and once more appeal by a deputation to the Colonial Secretary. I know of no other means of resisting this proposed act of spoliation. As to English writers in general, there also is no union among them – and nothing to be done with them in this matter. Here by way of completing the hard usage of the writer, the Judges have unanimously decided that anybody may dramatise a writer's novel, without his consent – and more, even if the writer himself dramatises his own book, other persons have an equal right to dramatise it, after that!² Between English law and Canadian law, I am seriously thinking (when my outstanding engagements are fulfilled) of writing no more novels, and of devoting my pen entirely to dramatic literature.

In the meantime, I enclose with this, the first three monthly parts of my published Readings in America. You here have “The Frozen Deep” complete. It will be followed, in two more monthly parts by “The Dream Woman”. The periodical publication, beginning in August, will close in December. The two stories will be republished in book-form about six weeks in advance of the close of the periodical publication in Temple Bar. I will send you duplicate Revises by book-post. These duplicates will contain my latest corrections made at press. For the rest, I know I may trust to your kindness to do what you can for this little publication in Canada.³ If you wish for any further information, you have only to let me know.

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

1. Referring to new copyright legislation before the Canadian parliament. In the event the planned legislation did not pass into law (see [1476] to Hunter, Rose, 18 August 1874), but was replaced by an act of which WC could approve (see [1534] to the same recipient of 10 April 1875).

2. WC is perhaps referring to the decision in the case of Toole v. Younge of 1873. See [1190] of 27 January 1872 and [1299] of 25 February 1873, both to John Hollingshead.

3. WC's Readings in America, comprising the two tales mentioned, appeared in a single volume of 151 pages from Hunter, Rose of Toronto in 1874. A copy is held in the National Library of Canada.

[3217] TO THE EDITORS OF THE DAILY NEWS, THE STANDARD, ETC.,¹ 1 JUNE 1874

MS: Unknown. Published: Daily News (2 June 1874), p. 5, our copy text; and Standard (2 June 1874), p. 6; A&C8, pp. 14–15.

90 Gloucester-place, June 1

Sir,

A few weeks since the friends of Mr. J. M. Bellew announced, by public advertisement that he was suffering from serious illness, which rendered it impossible for him to pursue his vocation as a reader from the works of the poets and prose writers of England, and which made it necessary to request for him such pecuniary assistance as the sympathy of the public might be disposed to offer.² The appeal thus made – and already most kindly received – has produced in certain quarters a feeling of surprise as well as of regret. Permit me to alleviate that surprise by stating publicly that if Mr Bellew had thought more of himself and less of others there might have been no need of appealing to the public in his case. Throughout his career he has largely devoted the proceeds of his readings to charitable purposes. In the first four years of his residence in London he contributed (by preaching and reading) five thousand pounds to the charitable institutions of the metropolis. The St. Anne's Orphan Asylum, the Hospital for Incurables, the Cambridge Asylum, the Friends of the Clergy Corporation, the Commercial Travellers' Schools, and the Philanthropic Society of London are some among the benevolent institutions which have profited by his disinterested exertions in the days of his health and his prosperity. Is it claiming too much to ask that he may not be forgotten in the days of his adversity – when he needs the help which he has hitherto unreservedly given to others?

I remain, Sir, your obedient servant, | Wilkie Collins

P.S. Subscriptions can be paid to the account of the Bellew Fund, London and Westminster Branch Bank, Stratford-place, London, W.

1. The letter was clearly circulated to a number of London papers, with the appearances in the Daily News and the Standard the earliest thus far traced. Other appearances have been located in: the Morning Post (4 June 1874), p. 3; the Orchestra (5 June 1874), p. 155; and the Musical World (6 June 1874), p. 372.

2. Concerning Bellew and WC's acquaintance with him, see [1368] to F. C. Beard, 1869-August 1873, and [1449] to Thomas Dixon Spain, 16 May 1874.

[1455] TO W. P. FRITH, 2 JUNE 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 35.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd June 1874

My dear Frith,

Are you by any lucky chance disengaged on Friday evening next? If yes – Holman Hunt and W. Bradford (the American Painter of water scenery)¹ take pot-luck here at 7. on Friday – and I shall be delighted if you can meet them. No evening dress!

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. William Bradford, American painter whose depictions of the Arctic regions enjoyed considerable popularity in Britain – see [3214] to him of 18 December 1873. His 'Steamer "Panther" in Melville Bay, under the Light of the Midnight Sun' was exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1875.

[3180] TO HUGH BIERS, [MID-APRIL] 1874¹

MS: Unknown. Extract: Argus (Melbourne), 3 June 1874, p. 7.² Published: A&C7, p. 41 (as to Henry C. Biers, dated May to June 1874).

I have promised, if all goes well with me, to return to my good friends in the United States. In that case I will do my best to arrange for returning by way of Australia.

1. Conjectural dating based on the then standard journey time of 45 days for the rapid mail steamer from London to Melbourne via Suez.

2. The extract is introduced thus: 'Judging by the following extract from a letter received by Mr. H. Biers by the last mail, we may at no remote date expect a visit from Mr. Wilkie Collins, for the purpose of giving a series of the readings which have proved so successful in America:—'. WC, of course, neither returned to America nor visited Australia.

[1456] TO FLORENCE MARRYAT,¹ 3 JUNE 1874

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 35.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd June 1874

Dear Madam,

Mr Bernstein (of Berlin) is quite correct in stating that he is now acting as my agent on the Continent. During my experience of him, I have found him to be a perfectly trustworthy and honourable man.²

Believe me | Dear Madam | Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Mrs Ross-Church

1. See [1241] to her of 15 June 1872.

2. See [1596] to Bernstein of 8 February 1876.

[1457] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 5 JUNE 1874

MS: Unknown. On sale: antiquariat.de, 31 March 2016, with Sarony photograph. Summary: BGLL, III, p. 36. Published: A&C10, p. 24.

90, Gloucester Place | W.
5th June 1874

My dear sir,

Many thanks for your kind invitation.
I have two engagements for the 16th, already – and, under these circumstances, I fear I have no alternative but to ask you to accept my apologies, and the expression of my regret.¹
Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. No other engagements are mentioned in WC's letters around this time.

[1458] To H. O. MOORE,¹ 8 JUNE 1874

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, III, p. 36.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 8th June 1874

Sir,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of Twelve Postage Stamps forwarded kindly, through the Editor of The Standard, towards the Bellew Fund, as the subscription of a working man.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

H.O. Moore Eq^r

1. Unidentified contributor to the Bellew Fund – see [1449] to Thomas Dixon Spain of 16 May 1874.

[1459] To JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD, 13 JUNE 1874

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, III, p. 36.

90 Gloucester Place | W. | June 13th 1874

Dear Hollingshead,

Many thanks for your kind letter. All writers of novels (excepting the writers of trash) are under obligations to your energy and resolution which I, for one, am glad to acknowledge. Whatever help it may be in my power to give to the good cause is heartily at your service.¹

Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. From 1873 John Hollingshead had led the 'agitation for the reform of copyright law so as to prevent the dramatization of novels without the author's sanction' (ODNB).

[1460] To WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 14 JUNE 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/131). Summary: B&C, II, pp. 384–385. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 36–37

90 Gloucester Place | W. | 14th June 1874

My dear Tindell

Many thanks for your letter. I had something better to do than to go and be cross-examined¹ – I had a new book to begin.

This new book is for "The Graphic". Will you see if you possess my agreement for the Christmas Story "Miss or Mrs?" It will do as a form. In a day or two, you shall have the heads of the new agreement.² This time, I only sell the right of periodical publication in Great Britain and Ireland.

Also – can you tell me where to lay my hand on the Trial of Madeleine Smith at Glasgow for poisoning a young Frenchman – some few years since?³ I want that Trial, and any other Criminal trials which show the course of procedure [sic] under the Scotch Law in cases of murder. Any information you can direct me to, of this sort, will be of great use (and the sooner the better)

to yours ever | WC

1. Presumably relating to WC's efforts to avoid jury service – see [1440] to Tindell of 10 April 1874.
2. The Law and the Lady, to be serialized 26 September–3 March 1875 in the Graphic, where 'Miss or Mrs?' had appeared at Christmas 1871.
3. Madeleine H. Smith was tried before the High Court of Justiciary, Edinburgh, 30 June–9 July 1857, for the alleged poisoning of M. Pierre Emile L'Angelier in Glasgow, the verdict being one of Not Proven. The Law and the Lady echoes the story in many of its details – see Taylor, pp. xviii–xx.

[1461] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 15 JUNE 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/132). Published: B&C, II, p. 385.

90 Gloucester Place | W. | 15th June 1874

My dear Tindell,

I enclose the heads of agreement with the Proprietors of The Graphic.¹

Am I right in supposing that if a man marries a woman under an assumed name, the marriage is nevertheless a lawful one, if the woman has acted in good faith believing it to be the man's own name, and if the witnesses present are also innocent of all knowledge of the fraud?²

A line to confirm me in this.

Yours ever Wilkie Collins

1. Not found in the bound volume at Glasgow.

2. In The Law and the Lady, Eustace Macallan conceals his real identity and marries Valeria under the assumed name Woodville. Valeria checks with a lawyer and establishes that the marriage is indeed legally valid.

[1462] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 20 JUNE 1874

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 37–38.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | London
June 20th 1874

Dear Sirs,

I enclose a specimen of my next new book – in the shape of a Corrected Revise of the First Weekly Part. "The (London) Graphic" purchases the periodical right of the story this time for Great Britain and Ireland only. We start the first weekly number on the 5th of September next – and run on for, at least, twenty weeks.¹ The story is to contain at least 240 of my long manuscript pages – and I am to lengthen it, if necessary. N.B. The First Weekly Part is unusually long, the succeeding parts will be shorter. By way of helping you to estimate the length of the book, I may add that "The New Magdalen" contained only 200 of my manuscript pages – as compared with 240 on the present occasion. I think I have got a very strong domestic interest this time, and something quite new in the way of a story.

Will you kindly let me have, at your earliest convenience, what you feel disposed to offer for the advance-sheets of this new work for the "Weekly"? And, if you should hear any reports of other publishers having got possession of the story, set them down please as utterly without foundation. I have had proposals made to me – and that is all. Nobody but yourselves has seen the first number. Your Firm alone has – as a matter of course – the first refusal of the work.

You are all well I hope in Franklin Square. I have had some returns of gout since my ~~return~~ re-establishment in my own country. America (the British Lion must not hear this!) suits me much better as a climate to live in than England. One of these days (if all goes well) I shall ask you for another "cocktail" at that snug little tavern.

With kindest regards, | Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

My best remembrances to Seaver, to Nast, to Conant, and to all my friends in Franklin Square²

P.S. For the question of the Illustrations to the story, refer to Mr W.L. Thomas at the Graphic office³

1. The Law and the Lady, serialized in Harper's Weekly, 10 October 1874–27 March 1875.
2. Referring to William Seaver (in charge of the 'Editor's Drawer' in Harper's New Monthly Magazine), Thomas Nast (artist and cartoonist on Harper's Weekly) and S. S. Conant (editor of Harper's Weekly from 1869 to 1885, when he disappeared in mysterious circumstances).
3. William Luson Thomas (1830–1900: ODNB), engraver, founder of the Graphic in 1869.

[1463] TO CHARLES WARD, 22 JUNE 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 38–39.

90 Gloucester Place | W | 22nd June 1874

My dear Ward,

I enclose the cheque for Jones's remittance.¹

Many thanks for your efforts to get me the Trial.

Bellew died yesterday – and so my proposed reading is abandoned in consequence.²

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

I have just got a copy of the trial, borrowed for me by Tindell³

-
1. See [1025] to Ward of 21 September 1870.
 2. See [1464] to Isabelle Frith of the following day.
 3. See to William Tindell, [1461] 15 June and [1465] 25–26 June 1874.

[1464] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 23 JUNE 1874

MS: NAL (MSL/ 1922/ 186/47). Published: BGLL, III, p. 39.

90 Gloucester Place | 23rd June 1874

My dear Mrs Frith,

I was out trying to walk off the rheumatism when your kind note was delivered at my house. I have not succeeded particularly well – but I still hope to have the pleasure of making one among your guests on Thursday next.

There was no alternative, after poor Bellew's death, but to put off my reading. It was advertised "in aid of the Fund" – and the Fund was for "the relief of his immediate necessities".¹

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. See [1449] to Thomas Dixon Spain of 16 May 1874.

[1465] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 25–26 JUNE 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/133). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 39–40.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th June 1874

My dear Tindell,

The New Trial is perfect. I am so much obliged! Of course, you shall have it back when I have made my "Case".¹

Your messenger rushed away to his native wilderness before I could open your letter. He was asked if there was any answer wanted – and he said No, Good boy!

When the Graphic Agreement is clean copied, will you send it to the Office – addressed to Arthur Locker (the Editor), who will place it before the Directors.² Or, if you prefer, I will sign first.

Yours ever | WC

P.S. | 26th I had written this to enclose with the first copy of the Trial, and to be taken to Essex Street by Caroline. The rain has stopped her. But you shall have the book certainly in a day or two. I don't like to trust the book-post.

-
1. Clearly a different Scottish trial from that of Madeleine Smith – see [1460] to Tindell of 14 June 1874. This is likely to be the case of John Lovie, a farmer tried for the murder by arsenic poisoning of a servant who was carrying his child, which also resulted in a verdict of Not Proven. The case is recounted in J. Hill Burton's Narratives from Criminal Trials in Scotland (London: Chapman and Hall, 1852), a copy of which was found in WC's library at his death (Taylor, pp. 422–423; and Baker 2002, pp. 83–84).
 2. See [1186] to Locker of 18 January 1872.

[1466] TO JOHN MAXWELL,¹ 26 JUNE 1874

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 40.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th June 1874

Dear Mr Maxwell,

I have just been reminded of an engagement for Saturday (July 4th) which I had forgotten to put down. Let us say therefore – if you and Mrs Maxwell will let me² – Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday in next week – whichever day may be more convenient to yourselves.

Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

-
1. John Maxwell (1820–95), Irish publisher, companion (from 1861) and later husband of the novelist Mary Elizabeth Braddon – see R. L. Wolff, Sensational Victorian (New York: Garland, 1979) and Jennifer Carnell, The Literary Lives of Mary Elizabeth Braddon (Hastings: Sensation Press, 2000).
 2. Braddon and Maxwell lived as man and wife for many years before the relationship was formalised on 2 October 1874, following the death of his first wife on 5 September.

[1467] TO W. PHILLIPS,¹ 26 JUNE 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 40–41.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th June 1874

Dear Sir,

My father's first residence at Hampstead was in what was then called Pond Street (afterwards, I believe, rechristened Hampstead Green). The house was on the right hand, as you descend the hill – the second house (on the way down the hill) in a row of small houses which still remains. Here my late brother, Charles was born, in January 1828.

My birthplace was in New Cavendish Street London. (1824).

My father removed next to a larger house in “Hampstead Square” – as it was then called. He resided at Hendon only briefly (for the summer season) in 1825. The cottage in which he then lived (as I have been informed) no longer exists.

I regret that I cannot, on the spur of the moment, give you more detailed and more accurate information. Pray accept my thanks for the copy of your Journal, and

believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W Phillips Esqre

-
1. Unidentified correspondent inquiring after details concerning WC's childhood.

[1468] TO UNIDENTIFIED FRENCH TRANSLATOR, 30 JUNE 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 41.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 30th June 1874

Sir,

It is only possible for me to thank you for your kind letter, and to inform you that it reaches me too late. “The New Magdalen”, and all my other works, have been already translated into the French language.¹

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

1. It must be noted that this was something of an exaggeration.

[1469] TO ELÉONORE FECHTER,¹ 1 JULY 1874

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 41–42.

London | 90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

1. Juillet 1874

Madame,

Votre letter n'arrive il n'y a que quelques heures.

J'ai vu Monsieur Fechter peu de temps avant mon depart ~~from~~ de l'Amérique, au mois de Mars dernier. Il etait alors a New York, et il me disait qu'il comptait me suivre en Angleterre au mois de Juin.

Etant arrivé a Londres, j'ai écrit a Monsieur Fechter – toujours au mois de Mars – pour lui demander de ses nouvelles. Il ne m'a pas répondu, et depuis ce temps il ne m'écrit plus.

Malheureusement je ne connais personne à New York à qui m'adresser pour vous.

Voilà ma position actuelle envers Monsieur Fechter. Je regrette vivement, Madame, de ne pouvoir calmer votre inquiétude, et je vous prie d'agréer l'assurance de ma sympathie et de ma haute considération²

Wilkie Collins

1. See [3179] to her of 21 April 1874.

2. Translation:

Your letter arrived only a few hours ago.

I saw Monsieur Fechter a little while before my departure from America last March. He was still in New York, and he told me that he expected to follow me to England in June.

Having arrived in London, I wrote to Monsieur Fechter – again in March – to ask him his news. He didn't reply and he has not written to me since.

Unfortunately I know no-one in New York to ask to give you information.

There is my current position concerning Monsieur Fechter. I sincerely regret, madam, that I am unable to calm your worries, and I beg you to accept the assurance of my sympathy and my best regards.

Having stayed with Fechter for several days at his farm in Pennsylvania in early October 1873 (Hanes 2008, pp. 25–26), and having had a final dinner with him in New York in early March 1874 (Field, p. 172), when WC wrote this letter he must surely have been aware of the actor's relationship with the American actress Lizzie Price. What he probably did not know was that, in the meantime, the actor seems to have contracted a bigamous marriage with Price, soon after her own first marriage with William H. Wintle was dissolved at the beginning of May 1874 (see DAB: Fechter, Peters, pp. 360–361, and Lycett, p. 337).

Not long after Fechter's death on 5 August 1879, the following pathetic statement from Mme Fechter appeared in the London monthly, the Theatre:

After the departure of my husband for the United States ... I lived with my two children in the most profound retirement until cruel necessity forced me to seek a position for my daughter. This daughter had been educated as a lady, for she had always counted on the love and talent of her father to secure her position, so that in time she would marry and lead a domestic life. Up to 1873 we hoped for the return of an honourable man and a loving father, of a husband who had, during nineteen years, made his wife both proud and happy. The first misunderstandings in our until then happy home, so well worthy of respect in any sense, came through the person with whom he left London [Carlotta Leclercq], and afterward from the person [Lizzie Price] who ... tore from his children the respect and the love and adoration they had for their father, and that I was happy to encourage in them. Mr. Fechter appreciated this, for he thanked me for it in terms that proved that at times the life he was leading and dare not break away from made him very unhappy ... He needed a calm and honourable life ... She then dared to bury in her family grave the body that belonged to us alone, and above all ... send, four days after this horrible event, this telegram addressed to his daughter – 'Your father died Monday, I will write you the details and those of his property and his intentions. Lizzie Price Fechter.' I need not tell you our grief and our just indignation. Your heart will comprehend both. Since then we have had no news at all. We are absolutely without resources of any kind – my daughter being still too young to earn enough for our support, and my son not having yet begun his career.

‘En Passant’, Theatre, 3 (November 1879), p. 223

There had earlier been rumours concerning Fechter’s relationship with the actress Carlotta Leclercq, who from the early 1860s had acted as his leading lady at the Royal Princess’s Theatre, the Lyceum and the Adephe, and who accompanied him across the Atlantic at the end of the decade; see, for example, the following comments in the (New York) Star, not long after the pair began to perform together in the United States:

Fechter receives regularly his $500 per night, and sleeps calmly on it. Miss Carlotta Leclercq, who supports him in the leading roles, has a regular contract with Fechter, to receive one-fifth of his net profits, and this arrangement has subsisted between them for some eight or nine years. They are necessary to each other in an artistic sense, and worthily support each other. The taking away of one would be a serious bar to the success of the other. Some time since, it was said in a Boston paper that Miss Leclercq was Fechter’s wife. This is untrue, and Fechter wrote a letter stating so. He said he looked upon Miss Leclercq as a dear sister and friend, and a great artist. That her loss would take away half the fire he possessed, and that he hoped as long as he lived to have her by his side, to share his artistic triumphs.

(cited in the (Nevada) Carson Daily Appeal, 24 May 1870, p. 2)

[1470] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 3 JULY 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 42–43.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd July 1874

Dear Mr Bentley,

I beg to thank you for a check¹ for the profits on the sale of “the New Magdalen” from April 1st to June 30th 1874 – also for the account of the sales of “Poor Miss Finch” to June 30th.

I hope to be able to call in New Burlington Street next week, and have ten minutes talk with you about “The Woman in White”, and the sales of the other books. I own the contrast between my sales and Mrs Wood’s is not encouraging – and does not add to my faith in the British Public.²

Yours vry truly | Wilkie Collins

1. Following his visit to the United States, WC departs from his usual practice to spell ‘cheque’ as ‘check’.

2. During the 1870s, new printings of Bentley’s uniform 6s edition of Ellen Wood’s novels regularly recorded the sales figures of her best sellers – by 1879, for example, the tally was ‘East Lynne (85th thousand)’ and ‘The Channings (35th thousand)’.

[3129] TO MISS ALYER,¹ 10 JULY 1874

MS: Unknown. On sale: Freeman Fine Arts, Philadelphia (18 June 1998, lot 585/587, details unclear).² Published: A&C5, p. 9.

Summary: Thanking her for a letter and the gift of a book.

1. Otherwise unidentified

2. Information only on a file card with research papers for B&C, 1999.

[3362] TO MARY CUNLIFFE,¹ 10 JULY 1874

MS: Lewis collection. Published: A&C13, pp. 7-8.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.²
10th July 1874

My dear Mrs Cunliffe

Pray forgive this late acknowledgment of your very kind letter. I have not been very well – and I have been out of town for the last three or four days.

Tomorrow – if I can manage it – I go to Formosa, to stay till Monday.³ Tuesday and Wednesday I have appointments. But if Thursday next at 5 oClock in the afternoon /will be convenient/ I shall be delighted to call on you – and if you will give me the mildest of iced drinks, you will gratify my utmost ambition in the matter of refreshment. I suggest the afternoon because I am (most unfortunately for myself) obliged to occupy my mornings at my desk – beginning a new novel in this frightfully hot weather.⁴ If you are engaged on Thursday afternoon next, choose any later day at 5 that you like. I am entirely at your service. Your will is law, to yours truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Mary Cunliffe née Herschell (1836–1899). See [1308] to her, 13 March 1873. And Paul Lewis, Mary Cunliffe's Recollections of Wilkie Collins (April 2020: Wilkie Collins Society).
 2. WC's printed paper with address ranged right.
 3. Formosa is unidentified.
 4. The Law and the Lady.

[3130] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 10 JULY 1874

MS: Lewis. Published: Lewis website; A&C5, p. 10.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 10th July 1874

-
1. Apparently an autograph for a collector. On a rectangular piece of laid paper with the corners all clipped.

[1479] TO THE EDITOR OF THE (MELBOURNE) LEADER,¹ [EARLY JULY] 1874²

MS: Melbourne (Box 502/4), note on Graphic proofs of The Law and the Lady.³ Published: BGLL, III, pp. 48–49 (dated [August] 1874).

Corrected Revise

First Weekly Part in The Graphic (Weekly Illustrated Newspaper London,) September 5th 1874 and to be continued weekly from that date, until completed in 20 (twenty,) numbers.⁴

WC

-
1. The Leader (1856–1957) was a weekly associated with the daily Melbourne Age and was perhaps the first of the Australian colonial papers to carry regular serial fiction – see Johnson-Woods, pp. 40–44. The Law and the Lady appeared from 26 September 1874–1 May 1875 in the columns of the Leader, one of four works by WC to be serialized there (Johnson-Woods, pp. 95–96).
 2. The note must have been written before 16 July, since on that day WC wrote to Tindell ([1471]): ‘They have put off the time of beginning [of The Law and the Lady] in The Graphic from 5th Sept to 26th Sept – and there is no time for me to let them know it in Australia.’ The conjectural dating also fits with a deadline in Melbourne at the beginning of September and a standard journey time for the Victoria mail of 45 days.
 3. The State Library, Melbourne, holds sets of proofs of six of WC's works, all but one from the mid-1870s, on which he not only regularly marks corrections but also occasionally writes instructions. As here, some of these substantive notes seem to be directed to the editor of the Australian journal in which the story in question was published; others are specifically addressed to his friend and agent Hugh Biers. Biers who arranged these serial appearances – see [1576] to him of [15–17 November] 1875.
 4. In the event, the novel appeared in the Graphic in twenty-five instalments from 26 September, with the serialization in the Melbourne Leader following the same pattern. Presumably there had in fact been time for WC ‘to let them know it in Australia.’

[1471] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 16 JULY 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/134). Published: BGLL, III, p. 43.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16th July 1874

My dear Tindell,

Thanks for the Agreement. I pay the charges. Must it be witnessed? or will my signature alone, do? 1st Question

If I remember right, you decided that publication in Australia a few weeks in advance of publication in England, did not place my copyright in jeopardy? Am I right? 2nd Question (N.B. They have put off the time of beginning in The Graphic from 5th Sept to 26th Sept – and there is no time for me to let them know it in Australia.)¹

=

Another point has turned up in America.

Suppose they publish a story of mine periodically in the U.S. exactly on the same dates as those on which we publish periodically in England – will it vitiate my copyright if the republication (a second publication) in book-form, takes place earlier in the U.S. than in England? Or is the simultaneous first publication sufficient to protect me? 3rd Question²

I am not well – worried and bothered by these everlasting clashings of publishers' interests all over the world – and I don't thrive in hot weather. But if I am well enough, I will attend the Knight meeting.³ I am thinking of running away somewhere ~~and going~~ to escape letters and callers – I don't know where yet.

Yours ever | WC

1. In the event, The Law and the Lady was serialized in the Melbourne Leader from 26 September 1874 to 1 May 1875 (Johnson-Woods).

2. WC had hitherto been careful to ensure that the US serialization finished one week later than in Britain, but this began to change and simultaneous publication right to the last instalment became common.

3. Possibly a reference to the affairs of John Prescott Knight who on 12 April 1873 resigned as Secretary of the Royal Academy. Edward Pigott unsuccessfully applied for the position.

[1472] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 18 JULY 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Extract: Davis, p. 282. Published: BGLL, III, p. 44.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
18th July 1874

Dear Sirs,

Pray excuse this late acknowledgement of your kind letter. I have been suffering from gout, and I have been away from London.

I have to thank you for a B/E for £14..6..8 on account of sales of “The Dead Alive” to the date of your letter. (First and second B/E both received).¹

Let me next assure you how gratefully sensible of your kindness I am, when I look at my bookshelves and see the magnificent addition which you have made to my little library. The books have reached me in perfect condition – and I do most heartily thank you for these last new tokens of your friendly feeling. They are prized – the superb copy of “Champlain” especially² – among the choicest literary treasures that I possess.

Thinking of literature, I must make the confession that I have begun a new novel.³ The weekly numbers are to appear (illustrated) in “The Graphic” newspaper here – and in “Harpers’ Weekly” in America. The story will run for twenty weeks at least, and Weekly Part 1 is to be published on the 26th of September next.

I have reserved the Canadian Right (if any such thing will be left by this autumn!) – and I will send you some proofs of the opening chapters in a few days. The relative length of this book as compared with The New Magdalen may be thus estimated: –

The New Magdalen filled about 200 of my Mss pages

The present story will fill at least 240 or 250 of my Mss pages.

=

With kindest regards | Believe me, Dear Sirs,
always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

-
1. Conventional abbreviation for Bill of Exchange, typically sent in duplicate in case of loss by post. In this case it must have been payable at 60 days, as the amount of £14-6s-8d was credited to WC's account as 'Bill on McMaster & Bros' on 11 September. Hunter Rose's Bills were paid through a variety of banks (Coutts: WC).
 2. A copy of Oeuvres de Champlain (6 vols in 3, facsimile reprint, Quebec, 1870), was found in WC's library (Baker 2002, p. 88). Samuel de Champlain (1567–1635) was the French explorer who founded Quebec.
 3. The Law and the Lady.

[1473] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 21 JULY 1874

MS: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: BGLL, III, p. 45.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
21st July 1874

Dear Sirs,

In case of accidents by post, I write again to say that I sent you a letter by the mail of Saturday last (the 18th) (1) accepting your proposal for the publication in America of my new story; (2) informing you that the date at which the first weekly part of the story will be published in "The Graphic" newspaper (London) had been altered from 5th September to 26th September (Saturday)

I ~~also~~ forward to you, by registered book-post, (to-day's mail) the first three weekly parts of the Story to be published: – Sept 26th, October 3rd, October 10th. Duplicates shall follow.

The Story will be divided into two "Parts". Part First, Called "Paradise Lost." Part Second, called "Paradise Regained." The Title of The Story is not yet decided on.¹

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

-
1. Of The Law and the Lady – the part divisions and their titles were eventually abandoned.

[1474] TO MR PHILP,¹ 22 JULY 1874

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 45.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 22nd July 1874

My dear Mr Philp

Welcome to England!

I have just returned to London and have found your letter waiting for me.

You will find me here, and delighted to see you, if you will come and lunch with me quietly at 2 o'Clock on Monday next (the 27th).

I am not sure of being here at the end of this week – or would have named an earlier day.

One line to say if you can come. Or, if not, on what later date you can come.

Vy truly yours | WC

-
1. Unidentified, but presumably an acquaintance from the North American tour.

[1475] TO FRANK WARD,¹ 29 JULY 1874

MS: Collis. Published: BGLL, III, p. 46.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th July 1874

My dear Frank,

Here is the profit – so far as I am concerned – of the last performances of Wybert.² Cheque enclosed for £10.13.- to be paid to my account! Send me one line only to say you have got it safely.

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

1. Ward had recently returned from the United States and taken up a post alongside his father at Coutts's bank – see [1436] to Frank Ward of 31 March 1874. [1562] to William Tindell of 4 October 1875 reveals that one of Frank Ward's roles was as 'clerk in charge of the strong room'.

2. Wybert Reeve, the actor – see [1298] to him of [23] February 1873. The profit in question must have derived from Reeve's tour as Fosco in The Woman in White from late 1873 to mid 1874 at numerous venues in the United States, including the Broadway Theatre, New York. See [1306] to Reeve, 10 March 1873.

[1476] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 18 AUGUST 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Extract: Davis, p. 282. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 46–47.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
18th Augt 1874

Dear Sirs,

At last, I am able to find time enough to write to you.

By last Saturday's mail I sent to you corrected proofs of "The Dream Woman" – complete. N.B. These proofs contain my latest corrections. Also duplicate proofs (first six parts) of my new serial story "The Law and the Lady", and a first proof of the 7th weekly part. The first batch of proofs (6 weekly parts) was despatched to you on the 11th Augt. The seven weekly parts comprise (so far as I now know) one third of the whole story. We publish the first number in "The Graphic" here, and in "Harper's Weekly" in America on Saturday the 26th September next.

Pray accept my sincere thanks for your kind exertions in the matter of "The Frozen Deep" and the Canadian newspapers. If these miserable wretches steal the story, by all means let us proceed against them. In general, I am a very peaceable man – but there are limits, &c, &c. If the Canadian pirates touch me, pray consider me as having jumped into the skin of my dear old friend Charles Reade. I can say no more in proof of my readiness to go to law.¹

Mr Daldy is, I hear, in Canada² – working in the right direction. I am sure you will give him a helping hand if he requires it.

You know of course that the "spoliation" act – otherwise the act for legalising the robbery of owner's of English copyrights in Canada – has "lapsed". It failed to receive the Royal Assent before the 14th of June last – and, by constitutional form, there is an end of it. The remembrance of it will always be dear to me, as an unique specimen of human impudence.

I am working very hard at my new story. If the public turn out to be as much interested in it as I am, there is a great success "coming in the future"

With all good wishes | Yours most truly | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I suppose there is no hope of my seeing you in London this year?³

To Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

1. Referring to Reade's notorious readiness to engage in litigation to protect his rights as an author – see Sutherland, pp. 522–523.

2. F. R. Daldy (d. 1899), of Bell & Daldy, the London publishers, secretary of the Copyright Association, which issued The Colonial Copyright Acts with Longmans in 1889, with an introduction by Daldy.

3. Although the letter is clearly directed to the company, this postscript must be addressed to the proprietor, George Maclean Rose.

[1477] TO RICHARD BENTLEY JR, 20 AUGUST 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/16). Published: BGLL, III, p. 47.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 20th Augt 1874

My dear Sir,

I am relieved to hear that your father is improving in health. Pray give him my kind regards.¹

In the face of the 6/ edition, I am afraid our prospect of obtaining a good price for the remainder of the other edition, is not a hopeful one. I am almost inclined – unless your father thinks it decidedly bad policy to do so – to close with the £40 offer²

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Richard Bentley Esqr

In great haste to catch the post

1. George Bentley was away from the office due to illness during much of August and September. Richard Bentley was his son, grandson of the Richard Bentley WC first dealt with and who had died in 1871.

2. Referring to negotiations concerning a new Bentley edition of The Woman in White – see [1446] of 12 and [1451] of 20 May 1874, both to George Bentley, and [1450] to George Smith of 18 May 1874. Here ‘the £40 offer’ is presumably for the remaining copies of the Smith, Elder yellowback edition.

[1478] TO RICHARD BENTLEY JR, 31 AUGUST 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/16). Published: BGLL, III, p. 48.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 31st Augt 1874

My dear Sir,

I am not sure whether your father is yet able to attend to any matter of business. So I write to you, in the first instance, on the subject of a new work of mine for which a proposal has been made to me¹ – leaving it to you to communicate my letter to your father, if you think it right to do so.

The work to which I refer is a novel which is about to appear periodically in the Graphic newspaper. The offer which I have received contemplates the purchase of the right of republication of this work in book-form, and in various editions. The term covered by the purchase is to be seven years; and no edition of the book is to be published under the price of 2^s/6^d,² during that period. The copyright remains mine, and reverts to me, or to my representative at the end of the seven years.

I have abstained from closing with this proposal until I could first inform your father that I have received it. As I must give a definite answer within a reasonable time, I am obliged to trouble you on the subject, and I am unable to defer mentioning it until your father (to whom I send my kindest regards) is well enough to return to business.

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Richard Bentley Esqr

1. Concerning the volume edition of The Law and the Lady from Chatto & Windus. This was eventually accepted by WC in a contract signed on 9 September 1874 – see [1512] to Andrew Chatto of 8 February 1875.

2. WC in fact writes the ‘S’ and ‘D’, for shillings and pence, above the numerals ‘2’ and ‘6’.

[1480] TO RICHARD BENTLEY JR, 5 SEPTEMBER 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/16). Published: BGLL, III, p. 49.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Saturday Sept 5/74

My dear Sir,

Your promised answer to my letter has not yet reached me.¹ I am sorry to trouble you – but the matter to which I referred presses for a settlement of some kind. Added to this, I may mention that I shall most probably be going abroad for a short time on Wednesday or Thursday next. On this account also I must therefore beg that you will let me hear from you definitely by return of post.

With kindest regards to your father,

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Richard Bentley Esqr

1. Referring to WC's request in [1478] to Bentley of 31 August 1874 for a prompt response concerning the offer made by Chatto & Windus for The Law and the Lady.

[1481] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 7 SEPTEMBER 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 49–50.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th September 1874

Dear Mr Bentley,

I am very glad to hear that you are advancing steadily towards recovery, and very much obliged to you for the proposal which you make to me in your letter of the 5th. Personally, I regret that I cannot accept it. From the business point of view, however, the proposal which I mentioned in my letter to you, is, in many respects, the most advantageous to me. And I have therefore no alternative but to close with it.¹

Next month – when you are better able to attend to business – I shall have a word to say about the republication of “The Frozen Deep”, “The Dream-Woman”, and another story (which I wrote in America and which was periodically published here in “The Home Journal”).²

These stories will be published in book-form in America and by Tauchnitz, and also in German, French, and Dutch translations on Monday 2nd November.³ So we must hit on some plan for republishing here, on that date, in some form.

With best wishes for your speedy recovery,

Believe me | Dear Mr Bentley | Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

1. Referring to the agreement WC signed on 9 September 1874 with Chatto & Windus for £1,500 for the lease of the copyright of The Law and the Lady – see [1512] to Andrew Chatto of 8 February 1875.

2. ‘John Jago’s Ghost; Or, The Dead Alive’, serialized in London in eight weekly instalments in the Home Journal (Saturday 27 December 1873–14 February 1874) and reprinted in The Frozen Deep and Other Stories from Bentley. In North America it appeared under the title ‘The Dead Alive’ in the New York Fireside Companion and in the Canadian Monthly.

3. Though the Tauchnitz edition was dated 1874, the volumes from W. F. Gill in Boston only appeared in 1875. Gasson (p. 66) records translations into Russian (St Petersburg, 1874), Dutch (The Hague, 1876) and French (Paris, 1879). GV records an authorized edition of John Jago’s Geist from the Berlin house of Janke in 1875.

[1482] TO JAMES MUNNINGS,¹ 9 SEPTEMBER 1874

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Extract: Coleman, p. 218. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 50–51.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 9th Sept 1874

My dear Sir,

The Story contained in the little volume sent herewith, is to be added to the republication in book-form of “The Frozen Deep” and “The Dream-Woman.”² It is to form the third and last story in the Collection – which must be published, in Circulating Library form, on Monday November 2nd.³ I send the Title-Page, Contents, and altered first chapter of The Frozen Deep for the printers. The rest of The Frozen Deep and The Dream-Woman, can be set up from the proofs already in your hands.

You will hear further on the subject from Mr Bentley – to whom I write by today’s post.⁴

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

James Munnings Esqre

Any news yet of the first part of the Ms of “The Italians?”⁵

1. Office manager at Richard Bentley & Son, publishers, from the late 1860s until his emigration to the Australian Colonies at the end of 1875 (Employee papers, Bentley Archives, University of Illinois).

2. That is, ‘John Jago’s Ghost’ – the ‘little volume’ is perhaps a bound copy of the penny weekly Home Journal, in which the story first appeared in Britain from 27 December 1873.

3. The Frozen Deep and Other Stories, published by Bentley in a single volume on that date (Gasson).

4. See [1483] to George Bentley of the same date.

5. Probably referring to the novel The Italians by his friend Frances Elliot (formerly Dickinson), in fact published in three volumes by Hurst & Blackett in the following year. A copy was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 103).

[1483] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 9 SEPTEMBER 1874

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 51–52.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 9th Sept 1874

Dear Mr Bentley,

Let us by all means publish The Frozen Deep and the other two Stories on commission – as before. I doubt if the three Stories together will make more than One Volume (Circulating Library Form). However, I have today sent to Mr Munnings the third story (“John Jago’s Ghost”), with the Title Page etc etc.¹ So the printers can “cast off”, and begin setting up the proofs for the republication whenever you give the necessary orders.

I am going to Boulogne tomorrow (Thursday) for a week or ten days – no longer.² So I could look over the proofs of the republication here, on my return, before the 24th of this month. The proofs shall be returned for press exactly at the date required by printers and binders for publishing (without fail) on Monday, November 2nd 1874.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

My address at Boulogne will be | Hotel Derva[nt] | Boulogne-sur-mer | France.

George Bentley Esqr

1. See [1482] to James Munnings of the same date.

2. On his return from Boulogne, WC suddenly announced (in [1486] to Bentley of 27 October 1874) that he was moving all his available copyrights to the firm of Chatto & Windus. This he did in an agreement that was signed on 19 November 1874, leasing for seven years the copyrights to thirteen of his earlier works for £2,000 – see BGLL, IV, Appendix B, pp. 397–398 for full transcription.

. These included Poor Miss Finch, Miss or Mrs?, The New Magdalen and The Frozen Deep, the four new works that had recently appeared under Bentley imprints. Later Bentley wrote a rather bitter letter to WC, complaining not only that Chatto & Windus were infringing his rights, but also that WC had not given him the chance to make a similar proposal. A copy of the letters is found at the BL (46643, ff. 283–284):

Upton Park, | Slough, Bucks. | January 15 1875

Dear Mr Collins,

The enclosed appears in “The Academy” tomorrow.

The advertisement of a 6/- Edition of “The Frozen Deep” is, I know, not done with your sanction. The 2 vol^e Edition is in full Sale and the advertisement will immediately arrest it, & will injure your property even more than it will be injurious to me.

I should feel inclined to hold Messrs Chatto & Windus responsible for damages, as undoubtedly the advertisement is damaging to the Sale of the book in its present form. But before I write to them, I send this letter to you that I may do nothing in any way unpleasant to you.

The advertisement contains also the announcement of the other novels. This is premature, & I think very indelicate towards me on their part, the more so as I have taken pains to facilitate the transfer as Mr Chatto is aware.

The public rumour of the arrangement you have made may not be correct but should it be, I think you might have made a more favourable one, as I consider “The Woman in White” ought to sell at least as well as “East Lynne” of which @ 6s nearly 10,000 were sold in 1874.

I know you will allow me to say how much I regret that I had no option offered to me in this matter as I greatly valued the connexion with you, & sh^d have been disposed to go a good way to meet y^r wishes.

I am, dear Mr Collins | Yrs very truly (Sd) George Bentley.

[1484] TO THE EDITOR OF THE (MELBOURNE) LEADER, 24 SEPTEMBER 1874

MS: Melbourne (Box 502/4), note on Graphic proofs of The Law and the Lady. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 52–53.

Note from Author to editor: –

See the correction below. If it does not reach Melbourne in time, please insert the correction in the next weekly part of the story under the head of “Error in Weekly Part 4, correction received from the author.”¹

N.B. This alteration – though apparently trifling – is of very great importance

WC

London Sept 24/74

Duplicate Mr Biers² See below

New correction made at press. Follow the lines surrounded by ink mark.

WC

1. We are uncertain of the nature of the correction; the fourth weekly part of The Law and the Lady appeared in the Graphic on 17 October 1874.

2. That is, a duplicate copy of the corrections was sent to WC’s Melbourne agent, Hugh Biers – see [3177] to him of August 1873.

[1489] TO THE EDITOR OF THE (MELBOURNE) LEADER, [EARLY OCTOBER] 1874¹

MS: Melbourne (Box 502/4), note on Graphic proofs of The Law and the Lady.² Published: BGLL, III, p. 54 (dated [October] 1874).

Note to Editor: –

Destroy the proof of this Part already received, and reprint from this corrected Revise.

WC

New corrections See ink marks.

1. Conjectural dating deriving from length of the journey from London to Melbourne.

2. At the head of ch. 20, ‘The End of the Trial’, which marked the beginning of the eleventh weekly instalment, appearing in the Graphic on 5 December 1874.

[1485] TO LAURA SEYMOUR, 24 OCTOBER 1874

MS: Noel. Extract: Claeson, p. 111. Published: BGLL, III, p. 53.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 24th Oct 1874

A thousand thanks, my dear Mrs Seymour for your kind letter. I am very glad to hear that you find the new piece of work pretty well done. My proof-book is entirely at your service – if you would like to read what is ~~done~~ completed of the story.¹ I have written to Mrs Lehmann, who is now reading it, to send it on to you as soon as she has done. When you have done, if you will return it here you will do a favour to

yours ever | Wilkie Collins

My love to Reade

1. The Law and the Lady, running in the Graphic from 26 September 1874.

[1486] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 27 OCTOBER 1874

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 281. Published: B&C, II, pp. 385–386.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 27th Oct: 1874

Dear Mr Bentley,

I have waited to trouble you on another matter of business – until I could hear that /you/were still improving in health. I gladly heard, the other day, from Mr Munnings,² that you had appeared again in New Burlington Street for a few hours.

I have had a proposal made to me to pay /me/ a sum of money for a seven years' lease of all my copyrights. The proposal contemplates a further expenditure to purchase back ~~all~~ my copyrights in the possession of Messrs Smith and Elder – if they can be obtained on sufficiently [del] favourable terms. This accomplished, the publication of a complete new edition of all my novels is the object proposed.³

I have anxiously considered this offer. It is, in a pecuniary sense, an indisputably advantageous offer, judged by comparison with the profits which I am now making. It relieves me of anxiety, and it offers the advantage to the books themselves of being all published by one firm, with a pecuniary interest of unusual importance in the speculation. Under these circumstances, and, in my position, I feel that I have but one choice. I have accepted the proposal.

It is needless to say that I ~~am~~ personally regret removing “Poor Miss Finch” and “The New Magdalen” from your friendly care. But I have long felt uneasy at the division of my books between two publishing houses; and I am under the impression that they will do better by themselves in one series, than they do now in “Standard Libraries,” and in close competition with other books. Whether I am right or wrong in this – as a matter of business I have no wise alternative but to thank you heartily for your friendly interest in ~~the~~ /my/ books, and to try the experiment.

My present plan – if it is convenient to you – is to transfer the two novels on the 1st of February next. The Stereo plates, and stock on hand at the time, to be taken at a valuation.

Will you kindly let me know if this arrangement will suit you, as soon as you can conveniently let me have a line? Believe me

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | George Bentley Esq

“The Frozen Deep” will wait, of course, until the Circulating Library Edition has had its full and fair chance.⁴

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper.

2. Bentley's office manager, James Munnings; see [1482] to him of 9 September 1874.

3. Referring to the agreement that WC signed on 19 November 1874 with Chatto and Windus, leasing for seven years the copyrights to thirteen of his earlier works for £2,000 – see [1512] to Andrew Chatto of 8 February 1875. In the end this included Poor Miss Finch, Miss or Mrs?, The New Magdalen and The Frozen Deep, the four new works that had recently appeared under Bentley imprints, but excluded the three novels of which Smith, Elder owned the entire copyright and which they were unwilling to trade – No Name, After Dark and Armadale. These were not published by Chatto and Windus until 1890, after the author's death.

4. Postscript added in the margin. In fact, Bentley was to write to WC on 15 January 1875 complaining that Chatto & Windus were already advertising their 6s. edition to the detriment of the sale of the two-volume edition (BL Add. 46643 ff.283–284).

[1487] TO WILLIAM GALE,¹ 29 OCTOBER 1874

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.² Published: Coleman, p. 219; BGLL, III, p. 53.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th October 1874

Dear Sir,

Pray present the expression of my thanks to the members of The Graphic Society for the honour that they have done me in electing me an Honorary Visitor for the ensuing year.

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

Wm Gale Esqre

1. William Gale (1823–1909), painter – see [0257] to him of 9 June 1857.

2. Directed to ‘Wm Gale Esqre | Hon Sec: | Graphic Society | University College’, postmarked as dated.

[1488] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 30 OCTOBER 1874

MS: NAL (MSL/1922/186/56). Published: BGLL, III, p. 54.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 30th Oct 1874

Dear Mrs Frith,

I accept with the greatest pleasure your kind invitation for Tuesday, Novr 10th at 7.30, punctually. Pray tell Frith I was very sorry to miss him yesterday when he kindly called.

Yours vry truly | Wilkie Collins

[1490] TO OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, 5 NOVEMBER 1874

MS: Congress. Extract: Hyder, p. 57. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 54–55.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
November 5th 1874

My Dear Doctor Holmes,

I have just published my “Readings and Writings in America”¹ – and I have taken this liberty of dedicating the English Edition of the book to you. My excuse appears on the dedication-page. A line to say that you forgive me – when you have five minutes to spare – will add the more to the many pleasant appreciations which I connect with your name.

Believe me | most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I have sent a copy of the book to our friend Mr Gill² – requesting him to forward it to you, with this note.

1. Readings and Writings in America: The Frozen Deep and Other Stories was published in England by Richard Bentley in 1874. The dedication reads: ‘To Oliver Wendell Holmes in sincere admiration of his genius as poet, novelist, essayist and in cordial remembrance of our intercourse during my visit to America’.

2. William F. Gill (1844–1917) of Boston, author, publisher of the American edition of The Frozen Deep in 1875, which omitted the dedication.

[1491] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 6 NOVEMBER 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/135). Published: BGLL, III, p. 55.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 6th Nov 1874

My dear Tindell

Another transaction! It seems all right – so far as I can see. Should we add after ‘Exclusive right of publishing’ (see 5th line) these words – “in Great Britain and Ireland and in the English colonies, excepting Canada.” In Canada I have cheap editions – local editions – selling by arrangement with me – of some of the later books.

America of course we cannot except – as there is no copyright. Harpers are publishing a complete Edition of my books there – also by arrangement with me. Canada is the only point to consider. I am too busy to go to you myself. Say if I shall sign. The counterpart signed by the Firm is in my hands. (N.B. I see both copies are signed by the Firm.)¹

The price does not include what the Firm will have to pay to buy back No Name Armadale and After Dark from Smith & Elder – who have the copyrights.² So my new publishers have a “stake” in my books – and will push them merrily. I shall invest the money – and have no more anxiety about those novels for seven years (if I live so long).

Yours ever | WC

If you are engaged this will be left. Please let me have my answer by Monday morning next

1. The firm in question was Chatto & Windus, who offered £2,000 for the copyright for seven years to thirteen of WC’s works, the contract being signed on 19 November 1874 – see [1512] to Andrew Chatto of 8 February 1875.

2. A double vertical line in the left margin, possibly made by Tindell, flags the passage from ‘back’ to ‘Elder’. In the event George Smith refused to sell the copyrights in question to Andrew Chatto.

[3218] TO CHARLES DICKENS JR, 10 NOVEMBER 1874

MS: Bergen (MS. nr.790 L). Published: A&C8, p. 15.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

10th Novr 1874

My dear Charley,

I saw my name accidentally on the A.Y.R Poster today, and it occurred to me to ask what “the Treasurer”¹ has done with the money for those eighteen columns which “Fatal Fortune” filled, some little time since?² I fancy – as I am not on the regular staff – that the matter has been forgotten.³ Am I right?

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. George Holsworth, business manager of All The Year Round. WC’s first reference to him is found in [0310] to Charles Ward, 7 August 1859.

2. ‘Fatal Fortune’, All The Year Round (17 October 1874), pp. 13–17, and (24 October 1874), pp. 37–42.

3. WC received a cheque the next day (see [1492] to Holsworth, 11 November 1874), though WC’s Coutts account does not record a credit that can be identified with it. ‘Fatal Fortune’ occupied 58 columns so a payment of around £36 would be expected for it; it is possible the cheque was made out to ‘Bearer’ who would be paid in cash (see [0310] to Charles Ward, 7 August 1859). WC, however, was paid £100 ‘Of Chas. Dickens’ on 30 August 1877, presumably for ‘Percy and the Prophet’ published in the All The Year Round summer number of 2 July 1877 (Coutts: WC).

[1492] TO GEORGE HOLSWORTH,¹ 11 NOVEMBER 1874

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 55–56.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 11th Nov 1874

Dear Sir,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of a cheque, in payment for the right to publish “Fatal-Fortune” periodically in “All The Year Round”² – the copyright and all the other rights being reserved by the author.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mr G. Holsworth

1. On the staff at the Office of All the Year Round – ‘Holsworth the Brilliant’ was how CD had dubbed him in a letter to W. H. Wills of 31 August 1861 (Pilgrim, IX, p. 450).

2. ‘Fatal Fortune’ appeared in All The Year Round, 17–24 October 1874; it was reprinted under the title ‘A Mad Marriage’ in Miss or Mrs? and Other Stories in Outline (1875).

[1493] TO FRANK ARCHER, 16 NOVEMBER 1874

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.¹ Published: Archer, pp. 160–161; BGLL, III, p. 56 (both incomplete), amended A&C7, pp. 9–10.

Private

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W | 16th Nov/74

My dear Archer,

It is only right, in a friendly sense, to tell you that I have accepted a proposal for reviving “The New Magdalen” at the Charing Cross Theatre in January next.² I have hesitated – solely on your account, feeling the serious loss to the piece of not including you in the cast – but the proprietor of the Theatre concedes the guarantees that I have always insisted on in such cases, and I have no alternative (having said No so often) but to say Yes, when my wishes are all consulted in the matter – and when Miss Cavendish is willing and ready to try the experiment.

I have only today announced my consent. The serious question of replacing you – I suppose we must do that, so far as we can(!) – has not yet been discussed between Miss Cavendish and me.

Please keep this little morsel of news a secret for the present (until the cast is settled) from the “outside world”.

I want to be free to get better representatives of some of the subsidiary characters, than the representatives who originally played them – if the thing can be done.=

Yours ever, | WC

The fog was eating my back and shoulders on the first night – and I was obliged to leave “Society” to be seen at the earliest future opportunity.³

The guaranteed “run” is two months. – with four more at our disposal, if we succeed commercially.⁴

1. With WC’s monogram on the flap verso, signed and directed to ‘Frank Archer Esqre | Prince of Wales’s Theatre | Tottenham Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 4 | NO 16 | 74’, and with ‘WC 5’ in pencil in another hand on the recto.

2. Referring to the revival of The New Magdalen at the small Charing Cross Theatre from 9 January 1875, with Ada Cavendish as Mercy Merrick and Robert J. Markby as Julian Gray, the part originally performed by Archer when the play opened at the Olympic in May 1873. Archer was already engaged by the Bancrofts to perform the role of Lord Ptarmigan in the revival of Tom Robertson’s Society at the Prince of Wales’s Theatre (Archer, pp. 160–162, and Archer, ‘Theatre Salaries and Parts’, Bk. 1, pp. 86–87, Archer Archive). See [1405] to Archer, 6 January 1874.

3. This paragraph appears in Archer p. 161, but separated from the letter. Archer explains ‘the first night’ as that of “Sweethearts,” by Sir W.S. Gilbert’, which preceded Society on the bill at the Prince of Wales’s Theatre from 7 November. Presumably WC had left the theatre before the curtain rose on Robertson’s play.

4. The revival seems to have run for just the two months as payments stopped into WC’s bank account in early March. See [1505] to Archer, 24 January 1875 fn 5.

[1494] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 23 NOVEMBER 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/136). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 56–57.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 23rd Nov^r 1874

Private

My dear Tindell,

I don’t like to communicate with “Mr Stefan P.” without a word of advice. Please read copy of his note – and then send my answer if you think it will do.¹ If not, send an answer of your own in my name.

The object, of course, is to recover the position of my agent. If I refuse on the ground that the sum is too small – I accept his agency. If I refuse to communicate with him at all, I only make him a bitterer enemy still. A third way, of course, is to write to The Italian Publishers, and to take no notice of P. – but this is virtually accepting his agency – and I can’t tell the Italian Publishers of my objections to P. – it would be too long and too great a bore. The dodge of referring him to my London agents seems to me to be the right way out of it,

Yours ever | WC

A private messenger left this letter – I was away from home.

1. Though WC’s answer remains untraced, a copy of the note from Stefan Poles in WC’s hand is also found at Glasgow (891117/137):

(Copy) | 20 Great Marlborough Street | To Wilkie Collins | 22nd Nov^r 1874

Fratelli Treves Libraires | Editeurs 11. Via Solferino | Milan, offrent 200 francs pour le droit de reproduction du The Law and the Lady, | (signed) Stefan P.

=

Translation: –

Treves Brothers, publishers, 11. Via Solferino Milan, offer 200 francs for the right of reproduction of The Law and the Lady.

[3181] TO FRANK ARCHER, 30 NOVEMBER 1874

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.¹ Published: A&C7, pp. 10–11.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.² | 30th Decr 1874³

A thousand thanks, my dear Archer, for your kind note. Miss Cavendish seems to think that our best chance will be to try the present representative of “Julian”. He knows the business, and has “passed muster” at Liverpool and Edinburgh.⁴ And there is nobody else !!! which is a terrible argument.

I will mention Mr Vandenhoff to Miss Cavendish.⁵ She collects and pays the company – subject to my approval. I will write to you again, when I hear from her. Pardon haste, and believe me

yours ever | WC

1. With WC’s monogram on the flap, signed and directed to ‘Frank Archer Esqre | Prince of Wales’s Theatre | Tottenham Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | D5 | DE 1 | 74’, with ‘WC 6’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. Black embossed Gothic type ranged right.

3. The date has been corrected in pencil, with ‘Decr’ struck through and ‘Nov^r’ inserted below, probably by the envelope annotator. The amendment must be correct as the letter clearly predates [3182] to Archer, 27 December 1874.

4. Robert J. Markby, who had played Julian Gray in the provincial tour of the play.

5. Probably Charles Vandenhoff rather than his father H. Vandenhoff, though Charles was probably in America at this time (see The Dramatic List, 1880, p. 356).

[1495] TO MR TILFOR,¹ 30 NOVEMBER 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 57–58.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | Nov^r 30/74

Dear Sir,

Please send me all, or any, of the following books in your Catalogue.

1. Dr Blenkinsop’s Memoirs²
2. The Monk by Lewis³ (if this Edition is an unabridged and unaltered one)
- 3 The Mysteries of Udolpho – the 4 Vol Edition at 3/6⁴

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr Tilfor

1. Unidentified, but presumably a book-dealer advertising the various volumes WC requests.

2. Memoirs of Dr. Blenkinsop (London: Richard Bentley, 1852), a novel in two volumes by R. F. Walond, under the pseudonym Adam Blenkinsop. A copy was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 80).

3. M. G. Lewis’s Gothic novel first published in 1796.

4. A four-volume edition of Ann Radcliffe’s, Mysteries of Udolpho, with copper-plates (1803), was lot 167 at Puttick and Simpson’s sale on 20 January 1890 of books from WC’s library (Baker).

[1496] TO JOSEPH B. COOKE,¹ 11 DECEMBER 1874

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 58.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
11th December 1874

Dear Sir,

I shall be very glad to become a subscriber to your forthcoming work – and I wish you all possible success.

Pray excuse this brief answer to your note. I am very busily occupied just now, and my leisure moments are few.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Joseph B. Cooke Esq

1. The Loughborough author of, among other collections of verse, the slim volume Wanderings with the Muse (Leicester: G. Hassell, 1874), a presentation copy of which was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 96).

[1497] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 18 DECEMBER 1874

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 58–59.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
18th Decr 1874

Dear Messrs Harper,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter, and for its seasonable and friendly enclosure of a Draft for £500 Sterling (on account of The Law and the Lady) drawn on Messrs Low at 10 days sight.¹

I am very sorry that you should have been troubled in any way by “announcements” and “correspondences” – of which it is needless to say, I knew nothing – and I am much obliged to you for the kind consideration which you have shown to Mr Gill. He was of great service to me at Boston in many ways – and I tried to be of some service to him in return, not in the least foreseeing the complications which appear to have ensued. I note what you are so good as to tell me about the remittance to Mr Gill for your use of “The Frozen Deep”² – and I have no doubt it will all “come right in the end”, when he sends me remittances on his own account. In the meantime, my best thanks for the hint.

I forward you some more proofs. The story will fill 24 weekly parts in all as I now calculate. I am in the agonies of winding it up. It has been a very difficult accouchement this time – but the child thrives and is popular here. I hope he does credit to your nursing too!

With best wishes | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Harper & Brothers

1. The ‘Bill on S Low’ for £500 was duly credited eleven days later on 29 December (Coutts: WC).

2. The Boston publisher William F. Gill, who was authorized by WC to publish an American edition of The Frozen Deep.

[3131] TO MADAME EDAL,¹ 19 DECEMBER 1874

MS: Dunedin. Published: A&C5, p. 10.

90 Gloucester Place | London. W. | 19th Dec^r 1874

Dear Madam,

“The Law and the Lady” was purchased for translation into German, some months since, and the translators are now at work. The story will first appear (in German) in a Berlin newspaper (periodically), and will then be published in book-form.²

Under these circumstances, I can only beg that you will accept my best thanks for your kind letter.

I remain, Dear Madam, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Madame Edal

1. Unidentified translator.

2. Neither the newspaper nor the German publisher has been identified.

[1498] TO HARPER & BROTHERS,¹ 25 DECEMBER 1874

MS: Morgan (MA 1950).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 59.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | Decr 25th 1874
Proofs enclosed up to February 20th 1875
The Story will most likely be finished in the 24th weekly Part.
Your kind remittance of £500 acknowledged by mail of Decr 19th.² (with proofs).
WC

-
1. Without salutation, but the letter is clearly directed to Harper's as a firm. Endorsed on the otherwise blank back page, by a member of staff: 'Wilkie Collins, | Dec. 25/74'.
 2. See [1497] to Harper & Brothers, dated 18 December 1874.

[1499] TO CHARLES READE, 25 DECEMBER 1874

MS: Taylor.¹ Published: BGLL, III, pp. 59–60.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
Christmas Day 1874

My dear Reade,

A thousand thanks for the "Hero!"²

Admirably written – clear as crystal and live as steel. I remember your telling the story of "Lambert" here – so I felt a special interest in reading about him. Put me down for two guineas on the list of subscribers. I will bring the money with me – when I bring you the end of my story – before the end of the year I hope. N.B. I especially like L. being a little too fond of whiskey. But for this, his virtues would have been superhuman. As it is, being human, in the matter of liquid, he constantly becomes, to my perverted mind, loveable as well as great.

Yours always, | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Above WC's letter Reade writes: 'Wilkie Collins | A thoroughly characteristic letter my good friend, and [fellow] artist, will never rob a poor man of his beer. That's clear.'
 2. Charles Reade's forty-page pamphlet, A Hero and a Martyr, A True and Accurate Account of the Heroic Feats and Sad Calamity of James Lambert (London: Samuel French, 1874); see Malcolm Elwin, Charles Reade (London: J. Cape, 1931), pp. 275–87. The copy WC received was inscribed in Reade's hand: at the top of the title page, 'Wilkie Collins with | Charles Reades Love | Dec. 22. 1874 | Biography – not Fiction – on my Soul.'; above the frontispiece: 'Mind, this is Lambert; not Reade'; and on p. [1] above the text: 'Warranted Biography | and not Fiction | Charles Reade' (Parrish & Miller, p. 249). (Reade's narrative was also serialized in the Pall Mall Gazette, 25, 26, 28, 30 November 1874.)

[3182] TO FRANK ARCHER, 27 DECEMBER 1874

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.¹ Published: A&C7, pp. 11–12.

Private

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.² | 27 Decr 1874

My dear Archer,

My best thanks for your kind letter. Here is the "cast:" – ³

Mercy ————— A. Cavendish

Grace ————— K. Rivers

Lady Janet ——— Miss Le Thièrè

The women will be all good. WC⁴

Julian ————— Markby (?)

Horace ————— L. Boyne (???)

Physician [Ignatius]⁵ ——— D. Evans x x original representative⁶

No one but Mr B. was to be got for Horace. The other people applied to were incapable of seeing that the part is a thoroughly good one, and they all wanted to play “Julian”.

How it will end – God Knows (and perhaps the Devil) – certainly not,
yours always | WC

The freezing weather – and the last number of “The Law and The Lady” (which I am now writing) are my only consolations under existing dramatic circumstances. It seems to be simply impossible to find a moderately good actor who is not already engaged at (say) five times the salary he is worth.

1. With WC’s monogram on the flap, directed to ‘Frank Archer Esqre | 10. Charlotte Street | Bloomsbury | W.C.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 7 | DE 28 | 74’ and verso ‘LONDON W | A O | DE 28 | 74’, with ‘WC 7’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. Black embossed Gothic type ranged right.

3. For The New Magdalen at the Charing Cross Theatre. They included: Ada Cavendish who was the impresario and the original Mercy Merrick in the first production in 1873; Roma Guillon Le Thièrre, who played Lady Janet Roy in this and subsequent revivals of The New Magdalen (see [2110] to her, 16 February 1883); Robert J. Markby, who had played Julian Gray in the provincial tour of the play; Leonard Boyne, who played Horace Holmcroft in both the 1875 productions, and later played Midwinter in Miss Gwilt at the Globe in May 1876; and David Evans.

4. Written by the side of the names which WC marks with a curly bracket.

5. WC writes ‘Physician Ignatius’ very carelessly, but he clearly intends Ignatius Wetzel, the German surgeon played by David Evans at the Olympic Theatre in 1873.

6. Beneath WC draws a line right across the page.

[1500] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 29 DECEMBER 1874

MS: Glasgow (891117/138). Published: B&C, II, pp. 387.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 29th Decr 1874

My dear Tindell,

Is there any news for us yet, in the matter of Smith & Elder and the sale of the Stock in hand?² Or are the filthy “Christmas festivities” still an insurmountable obstacle to any proceeding that is not directly connected with the filling of fat bellies, and the exchange of vapid good wishes?³

Yours ever | WC

P.S. I have had a Christmas Box, in the shape of a big boy.⁴ We must add him, in a codicil (I suppose?) to the new will – merely stating that he is to have his share with the two girls. If you will kindly make a draft of the document, I will see to filling up the dates and names.

1. Black, Gothic, engraved type ranged right.

2. Presumably to Chatto & Windus who had bought the right to publish almost all Wilkie’s books for seven years.

3. WC generally disliked Christmas, referring to it in similar terms in a number of his letters; details are available at: <www.web40571.clarahost.co.uk/wilkie/christmas.htm>.

4. William Charles Collins Dawson (1874–1913), son of WC and Martha Rudd, born on Christmas Day at 10 Taunton Place, who must have been conceived very shortly after the author’s from North America (Peters, p. 368).

[1501] TO JANE BIGELOW, 31 DECEMBER 1874

MS: Bigelow. Summary: B&C, II, p. 388. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 60–62.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.
31st December 1874

Dear Mrs Bigelow ,

Which shall I do first – make my apologies for this late acknowledgment of your kind letter? Or wish you a happy new year? I will wish a happy new year first, to you and to Mr Bigelow, and to all yours – not forgetting my dear little friend Flora.¹ (Memorandum: – when I do return to America, F. shall have the latest novelty in perfumes that London can produce).

And now for my apologies. I have had two obstacles in the way of my correspondence. (1) "The Law and the Lady" (a number to be written every week, whether I am well or ill). (2) The Rheumatism – in other words a necessity for perpetual walking bathing and rubbing, except when the weather is dry – and when is it dry for three days together in England? Never! In your country, I felt five and twenty years old. In my country, I (not infrequently) feel five and ninety. Moral: – The sooner I am back again at Highland Falls, the better. Meanwhile, Mrs Bigelow, will please forgive me.

I am delighted to hear that you like the new story. It has been a very difficult story to write this time – but it is nearly done. Tomorrow, I begin the last weekly part.² So, barring accidents, I shall have finished, and shall get a holiday, on my birthday – 8th of January next. Age – of no consequence!

We have got the frost here (to my delight – frosty air being dry air) – We have also (at 2 in the afternoon today) got our noble British metropolitan fog. I am writing by candlelight, and the traffic is suspended in the streets. My literary agent in Germany is here on a little visit,³ and complains of the taste of coal smoke in the atmosphere. I can only answer "See what it is, sir, to be a Briton! We like it."

There is really no news here – except disastrous news of drowning burning and smashing travellers in ships and railway carriages.⁴ I cannot even tell you about Forster's health, having seen nothing of him, and heard nothing from him, for months past. Did I tell you how he once distinguished himself, on landing at Boulogne-sur-Mer – when I was at Highland Falls? I think not. F. was on a visit to [illegible word] Dickens – who then had a house at Boulogne. I was staying there at the time, and Dickens and I went to the Port to "clear" Forster (in the custom-house phrase) on his arrival. He could neither speak nor understand French at that time – whatever he may be able to do now. In due time, he landed, walking in his most majestic manner between the Custom house lines of rope. Having presented his passport (those were the days of passports for English men in France), he was next accosted by a very small French military official, in these customary terms: – "Avez vous rien à déclarer, Monsieur?" Forster paused, smiled his sweetest smile, bowed his grandest bow, and answered in his most mellifluous tones: – "Bon jour!" It is needless to add that he was instantly seized, and Dickens had to become answerable for him. To see F's astonishment and the little French man's indignation – is to have lived to some advantage and to have made the most of life.⁵

Pray give my kindest remembrances to Mr Bigelow – and make my excuses to him for leaving his very kind letter so long unanswered. Week after week (I am afraid I may say month after month), I have waited to write until "Franklin" made his welcome appearance.⁶ To my great disappointment (I remember how delighted I was with the "Autobiography") the book has never reached me. Can I make any inquiries here? Or would it be possible to send the book to me through the Harpers of New York? I hope soon to write to Mr Bigelow – and I should be really delighted if I could so acknowledge receipt of the book. In the mean time, I can only ask him to pardon my silence, and not to attribute it to forgetfulness of his kindness.

Believe me dear Mrs Bigelow | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The Bigelows' daughter Flora was born on 18 October 1868 in Highland Falls.

2. The Law and the Lady concluded its serialization in the Graphic on 13 March 1875 and in Harper's Weekly on 27 March 1875.

3. This must be Bernstein of Berlin – see [1456] to Florence Marryat of 3 June 1874 and [1586] to John Palgrave Simpson of 27 December 1875.

4. George Eliot wrote to her friend Mrs Mark Pattison on 3 January 1875: 'Let us all consider ourselves privileged persons to be surviving in comfort while our fellow-men are shattered in railways and burnt at sea. Were there ever such horrors accumulated about one Christmas?' The editor of her correspondence notes, 'On 25 December a railway wreck near Oxford killed 31 persons and a colliery exploded in Staffordshire, while on 25 December news was received of the burning of the Cospatrick, an emigrant ship bound for New Zealand, with the loss of nearly 500' (Haight, VI, p. 108 and n. 7).

5. For a general discussion of the relationship between WC and John Forster, see Peters, pp. 347–354.

6. A copy of John Bigelow's edition of the Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin. Edited from His Manuscript, with Notes and an Introduction (Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott, 1868) was in WC's library at his death. On the fly leaf is the inscription 'Wilkie Collins with the sincere regards of the Author' (Baker 2002, p. 110).

[1046] TO MISS [MARY LOUISA] FRITH,¹ [1873–74]²

MS: Fales.³ Published: BGLL, II, p. 227 (as to Miss Frith, [1870]).

My dear Miss Frith,

I send you two photographs – so that you may choose which you like best.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. This is likely to be to one of the three younger daughters of the painter W.P. Frith: Mary Louisa (b. 1850), Alice (b. 1853) or Mary Fanny (b. 1855). Despite the uncertainty of the dating, social convention suggests that the recipient is again most likely to be Mary Louisa – see [1044] of 27 December 1870, also addressed to 'Miss Frith'. In 1879 Alice married George Hastings, a doctor from Norfolk, while, according to the 1901 Census, Mary Louisa and Mary Fanny were then spinsters living together in South Kensington, both working as decorators.
 2. Conjectural dating by association with the only other letter to a daughter of W. P. Frith – see [1044] to Miss [Mary Louisa] Frith of 27 December 1870.
 3. WC uses a sheet of notepaper with the watermark 'TURKEY | MILL', some of which has been cut away.

[3074] TO WILLIAM F. GILL,¹ [1874]²

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay, June 2007. Published: A&C3, p. 61.

Wilkie Collins

-
1. William F. Gill, Boston publisher. WC visited Boston both in late October and mid-December 1873, but the first evidence of communication with Gill is [3159], an envelope bearing the postmark 14 January 1874. Gill issued WC's stories in book form in late 1874 (The Dead Alive, a single tale under the imprint of Shepard and Gill) and in early 1875 (two tales in The Frozen Deep, and eight tales in Alicia Warlock (A Mystery), and Other Stories, both under the imprint of William F. Gill & Co.).
 2. Conjectural dating based on WC's earliest extant communication with Gill, and the latter's note on the verso of the MS here, which seems to point towards a communication sent either during WC's stay in the United States or not long afterwards. This reads: 'Mr Collins is in England. I have cut the autograph from an envelope upon which it was written. It may serve your purpose. | Yours truly | Wm F Gill'.
 3. A clipping with the signature only.

[1502] TO CHARLES READE, 2 JANUARY 1875¹

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, III, p. 62.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Saturday 2nd Janry

My dear Reade

Friday next, 8th January is my birthday. Will you and Mrs Seymour come and dine here at 7 quietly – no evening dress. Do send me a line to say Yes.

I was very much pleased to find that you picked out that little outburst of the old woman's as being well observed.² To confess the honest truth, I did lay down the pen when I had written it, and think to myself "Come! My boy – that bit is true to Nature at any rate." I had another access of conceit when I found that you thought so too.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

I am at the last number – you shall soon have it all.³

-
1. Dating from the calendar and the reference to the novel.
 2. Probably referring to the outburst of old Mrs Macallan in ch. 25 of The Law and the Lady, then appearing as a serial in the Graphic.
 3. In [1514] of 11 February 1875, WC sends Reade proofs of the remainder of the story.

[1503] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 7 JANUARY 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/139). Published: BGLL, III, p. 63.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th Jany 1875

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks. I am very glad to hear that the matter is settled – thanks to you and Mr Bell.¹

Yours ever | WC

I have just finished my “Graphic” story – and now I must rehearse the revived New Magdalen, before Saturday night.²

1. Presumably referring to the stock on hand at Smith, Elder – see [1500] to Tindell of 29 December 1874. The publisher George Bell had provided an independent valuation of Smith, Elder’s stock, etc. – see Graham Law, ‘Collins and Chatto: The Reading Papers’, WCSJ, NS 5 (2002), pp. 49–56.

2. The New Magdalen was revived at the Charing Cross Theatre from Saturday 9 January 1875 – see the notice in the Times of 11 January 1875, p. 8c. See also [1505] to Frank Archer, 24 January 1875.

[1504] TO DENNIS POWELL,¹ 18 JANUARY 1875

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 63–64, amended A&C8, p. 24.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th Jany 1875

Sir,

I must beg you to excuse this late acknowledgement of the letter which you have been so kind as to address to me. Pressure of occupation and illness have lately made it quite impossible for me to keep up with the demands of a very large correspondence.

I have had many proposals made to me to reproduce The Frozen Deep on the stage – with the alterations and additions which are suggested by the story in its narrative form.² My experience in these matters – gained by successfully dramatising “The Woman in White” – “Man and Wife” – and “The New Magdalen” – warns me to wait until I can find an actor who is capable of performing the very difficult and delicate “part” of “Richard Wardour.”³

In the meantime perhaps you will kindly enlighten me on two points as to which I am not at present informed (1) Are the “situations” and “scenic effects” which you mention, of your own original invention or are they suggested by the story? (2) Have you had any practical experience as a writer for the stage?

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Dennis Powell Esqre

1. Unidentified – but see [1520] to the same recipient of 13 March 1875.

2. The Frozen Deep was originally written by WC in 1856, with amateur performances during 1857 in London and Manchester. He revised it in 1866 for a professional production at the Olympic Theatre. The story was published in book form in 1874 (2 vols, London: Richard Bentley). No stage production has been traced for 1874–1875.

3. Richard Wardour was played by CD in the 1857 productions and subsequently by Henry Neville at the Olympic.

[1505] TO FRANK ARCHER, 24 JANUARY 1875

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.¹ Published: Archer, p. 162; BGLL, III, p. 64, amended A&C7, pp. 12–13.

90 Gloucester Place | 24th Jany 1875

My dear Archer,

My only excuse for not having “reported progress” to you is – that I have been confined to my bed with ~~an~~ a violent attack of cold. I am only now able to get out again.

Financially, we are playing the piece at a profit.² – The first week’s returns (which are all

I have yet seen) are decidedly encouraging £93 / in the house on the first Saturday.

Excepting your part, the whole piece is far better played than it was at the Olympic. The Lady Janet³ and the Horace⁴ – both really very good, and received with genuine applause by the audience. Miss Cavendish greatly improved – and very successful with the public. Mr Markby plays “Julian” quietly and with discretion[.] I have no complaint to make.⁵

We shall see how we get on. The first week ~~is~~ was far better than I had ventured to expect. My weeks fees were at least ten pounds higher than my calculations anticipated.⁶

Give my love to Bancroft, and tell him the news “so far, is good.”

Yours ever | WC

1. Signed and directed to ‘Frank Archer Esqre | Prince of Wales’s Theatre | Tottenham Street| W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 7 | JA 25 | 75’, with ‘WC 8’ in pencil on the recto in another hand.

2. Referring to the current revival of The New Magdalen at the small Charing Cross Theatre – see [1493] to Archer, 16 November 1874.

3. Roma Guillon Le Thière, who played Lady Janet Roy in the 1875 and subsequent revivals of The New Magdalen (see [2110] to her, 16 February 1883). Archer 1912 adds the name of the actress (p. 162).

4. Leonard Boyne played Horace Holmcroft in both of the 1875 productions, and later played Midwinter in Miss Gwilt at the Globe in May 1876. Archer 1912 adds the name of the actor (p. 162).

5. Robert J. Markby about whom WC had had doubts.

6. WC’s bank account records five payments from Ada Cavendish totalling £331-7s-3d: 6 January, £177-16s; 13 February, £76-12s-3d; 22 February, £28-19s; 26 February, £24; 6 March, £24. As the play ran from 9 January to 24 April, the logic underlying these payments is difficult to fathom. The play ran for 89 nights from 9 January to 24 April, omitting Ash Wednesday and Good Friday so the total received would represent an average of £3-14s-5½d per night. No other payment from her is recorded until December, when she was producing Miss Gwilt in Liverpool, though the bank record does include a possibly relevant payment for £25-12s on 27 March which is marked simply ‘reced’ (Coultts: WC).

[1506] TO MISS FERGUSON,¹ 25 JANUARY 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 65.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th Jany 1875

Dear Miss Fergusson

I gladly comply with the request which your sister honours me by making – and I would sooner have obeyed her wishes, if I had been lucky enough to escape the customary “cold” of the “season”. I have been blind deaf and dumb – and I am only now beginning to recover my senses.

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Unidentified correspondent whose sister asks WC to provide her with an autograph. Since James Fergusson never married (ODNB), the sisters seem unlikely to be related to the architectural historian apparently referred to in WC’s letters [1295] and [1307] to William Holman Hunt of 14 February and 11 March 1873.

[1507] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 28 JANUARY 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/140). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 65–66.

90. Gloucester Place | 28th Janry 1875

My dear Tindell,

Bravo! Nothing can be better than the reply to the “pure-minded”. It puts the ruffian into his proper place.¹

I have got the whole Ms of The Law and The Lady in my possession. The publication day has been advertised weeks since – first the 12th Feby – then the 11th. I went from you to Chatto – and arranged to alter the date again to the 12th. This is the exact date at which the agreement provides for the republication in book-form.

Yours ever | WC

Looking again at your note about the Ms – I may add that the whole story to the end was in type at the Graphic Printing Office a fortnight since, at least.

1. Tindell must have written to Arthur Locker, editor of the Graphic. Locker had bowdlerized a passage at the end of the instalment of The Law and the Lady appearing in the issue dated 23 January 1875 (the close of ch. 35). WC had written to him to protest on 22 January (the letter has not been traced) and Locker had replied on 25 January 1875 (Glasgow 891117/158):

Dear Sir,

The passage in your story of the Law & the Lady to which you call my attention in your letter of Jany. 22^d described an attempted violation of the heroine by Dexter, & was, according to the unanimous opinion of the directors, myself, & other members of the establishment, unfit to appear in the pages of a family newspaper. I did not apply to the author to alter it, because I judged, from previous experience, that he would refuse to do so. I could have altered it more artistically, I admit, by putting in some words of my own, but the directors thought I had better confine the change to omitting the most suggestive paragraphs. I cannot help being surprised at your outburst of indignation. It is we, I think, who have the chief right to feel aggrieved, for you distinctly told me before the story began that as it was the autobiography of a young lady there would certainly be nothing coarse or improper in it, whereas, in my opinion, & in the opinion of a good many other people too, there is a disagreeable flavour pervading the story generally. An example of this occurs in the part for the present week when Valeria discovers that she is with child. Ladies don't care to have such subjects paraded in novels, & moreover – according to the judgement of two married ladies, Valeria's discovery is rather improbable, for women find out that they are pregnant, long before the quickening of the child, by other symptoms, the principal of which is of course the cessation of the monthly courses. In my opinion, in place of all these disagreeable suggestions, it would be plenty sufficient to say that Valeria was on the point of yielding to Mac's seduction but the recollection that she was shortly to become a mother, kept her firm. As I do not consider this passage so offensive, however, as that of last week, I shall not touch it, but I believe you would enhance your reputation by altering it between this & six pm. tomorrow.

I am, dear Sir, | Yours faithfully | Arthur Locker
W Collins Esq.

[1508] TO HENRY HERMAN,¹ 29 JANUARY 1875

MS: Illinois. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 66–67.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th January 1875

My dear Sir,

When you kindly sent me some tickets to fill in for admission to The Theatre (except on Saturdays), you did not mention how many orders it would be desirable for me to give, on any one evening. I find I have given to two different friends, orders for two to the Stalls (four persons admitted in all) on Tuesday evening next. Is this too much? If Yes, you have only to tell me so, as a guide on future occasions.

The business seems to be going on very favourably. The piece is so well produced that it deserves to succeed.

Yours faithfully | Wilkie Collins

I have given a Private Box for tonight, to a young lady and her friends.²

H. Herman Esqre

1. Henry Herman (1832–94: ODNB), born Henry Heydrac D'Arco, dramatist and later novelist, who had fought in the American Civil War with the Confederates. He was stage manager for the revival of The New Magdalen at the Charing Cross Theatre in 1875 and then prepared Miss Gwilt for production.

2. Unidentified.

[1509] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 29 JANUARY 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/142). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 67–68.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th Janry 1875

My dear Tindell,

A line to acknowledge the receipt of your letter and the copies – and to say that I think you have done right in receiving Locker's second letter. As long as it legally binds the Proprietors – it will do.

Of course, all the proofs are revised for Press to the end – How else could each weekly part be published simultaneously in London, New York, and Melbourne?¹ But it does not matter. The Graphic people have had their warning – and I shall look sharply after each published number, to the end.

Yours ever | WC

P.S. | C. Ward tells me I was right in supposing that those Promissory Notes ought to have had “payable at Messrs Coutts &c” written across them.² They will now be presented here, at maturity – to have those words written across them. No separate note or order will do. So Ward tells me – He will explain if you like to look in when you are going by.

-
1. The Law and the Lady was being serialized in Harper's Weekly and the Melbourne Leader, as well as the Graphic.
 2. Referring to Charles Ward, WC's friend at Coutts bank, and the promissory notes issued by Chatto & Windus – see [1512] to Andrew Chatto of 8 February 1875.

[1510] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 29 JANUARY 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/141). Published: B&C, II, p. 388.

90 Gloucester Place | Friday Janry 29/75

My dear Tindell,

Since I wrote to you, I have seen today's “Graphic”. The “castrated” passage is restored in a note at the end of this week's instalment of the story! in deference to information received from Mr W.C. “through his legal advisers”!¹

With this, and with the assurance for the future we may be satisfied. We have made these blackguards behave like gentlemen at last – thanks to “Benham & Tindell”.

Yours ever WC²

-
1. At the end of the instalment of The Law and The Lady in the Graphic of 30 January 1875, p. 107, the following passage was printed:

NOTE.—In last week's instalment of “The Law and the Lady” the following paragraph, which occurs on page 83, column 2, was printed thus:— “He caught my hand in his, and covered it with kisses. In the indignation of the moment I cried out for help.” In the author's proof the passage stood as follows:— “He caught my hand in his, and devoured it with kisses. His lips burnt me like fire. He twisted himself suddenly in the chair, and wound his arm round my waist. In the terror and indignation of the moment, vainly struggling with him, I cried out for help.” The editor of this journal suppressed a portion of the paragraph on the ground that the description as originally given was objectionable. Mr. Wilkie Collins having since informed us, through his legal advisers, that, according to the terms of his agreement with the proprietors of THE GRAPHIC, his proofs are to be published verbatim from his MS., the passage in question is here given in its original form.

2. WC writes the final paragraph and closure down his left-hand margin on the opening page.

[1511] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 4 FEBRUARY 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 68–69.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.
4th February 1875

Dear Sirs,

My best thanks for you kind letter of the 21st January – enclosing £10- from the St John Daily News (receipt of which I hereby acknowledge)¹ – and Mr Desbarats' memorandum. I have also received a letter from Mr Desbarats himself, complaining of the appearance of Harper's Weekly in Canada, and asking for “my cooperation” if Mr D. goes to law with them!

I have not yet decided whether I will answer Mr Desbarats or not. Harpers know that I reserve my Canadian rights, and they have always behaved so frankly (as well as so liberally) in their transactions with me that I very much doubt whether the “invasion” of Mr D’s rights has been committed with their sanction. Some “zealous” subordinate is probably to blame. The important part of the matter is that I shall probably – if litigation does take place – be compelled to abandon my Canadian rights, so far as periodical publication is concerned, when I write my next novel. If I am forced in the future to choose between Messrs Harper and Mr Desbarats (or any other proprietor of a Canadian periodical) I have personal, as well as pecuniary, reasons for not hesitating to side with the Harpers. In my position, I don’t see what else any man in possession of his sober sense could do. You are quite at liberty – if you think it desirable – to mention what I here write to Mr Desbarats or to any other Canadian newspaper proprietor who may speak to you on the subject. I have always expressly reserved my Canadian rights in communicating with my American publishers – and I can do no more.

You have once more shown your excellent good sense and your kind regard for my interests in not encouraging Mr Desbarats to sublet my story. I do not at all approve of the manner in which he is publishing it in his newspaper.² Instead of following my division of the weekly parts (as Harper & Brothers do) he publishes as much as he pleases each week – or in other words as much as will fill the vacant columns left at the end of his paper. It is quite possible that he is at this moment in advance of “The Graphic” publication here – or that he may end in advance of it. It may be as well to remind him that the “Graphic” publication ends on the 13th March.

Thank you heartily for your kindness to my friend Mr Payn I can answer for him that it is a kindness well bestowed on a really good fellow as well as a very clever fellow.³

The damp weather here has been very hard to bear. I have more than once wished myself back again in your fine continental atmosphere at Toronto.

With all good wishes, | Yours ever truly | Wilkie Collins

I was very glad to hear that you like “The Law and the Lady”. It is succeeding well on this side of the Atlantic. The story is being translated into French, German, Italian, Russian, and Dutch. There is an item of “Literary News” for Mr Desbarats’ paper!

-
1. The work by WC appearing in the Newfoundland paper has not been traced.
 2. WC’s The Law and the Lady was serialized in Desbarats’s Canadian Illustrated News.
 3. The novelist James Payn – see [1534] to Hunter, Rose of 10 April 1875.

[1512] TO ANDREW CHATTO,¹ 8 FEBRUARY 1875

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 69–71.

90. Gloucester Place, | Portman Square | W. | Feby 8th 1875

Dear Mr Chatto,

I beg to thank you for acceptances for the following amounts – completing the purchase-money for License to publish The Law and the Lady, and my other copyrights, as per agreement.

£500} For The Law and the Lady for seven years.² £500}

£333
333
333

333
333
335
£2000

For my other copyrights for seven years.³

I have refused to permit the publication in the Guernsey paper – as you advise me.⁴

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esq | Messrs Chatto & Windus | 74. Piccadilly

1. Andrew Chatto (1841–1913) took over the publishing firm founded in 1855 by John Camden Hotten (1832–73). Chatto & Windus issued its first catalogue in July 1874 and in 1876 bought Belgravia from John Maxwell. Chatto published WC's The Law and the Lady in mid-February 1875 and thereafter became his main publishers. See Weedon.

2. The memorandum of the agreement concerning the publication of The Law and the Lady, signed by WC, is now held at Reading. It specifies £1,500 for the seven-year lease of the novel for all British volume editions down to 2s-6d. It is dated 9 September 1874 and stamped on the 29 September 1874, while the seven-year period only begins with the formal date of the first publication of the novel in volume form, that is, 15 February 1875. WC's receipt for the first of the three payments of £500, also found at Reading, is dated 21 January 1875.

3. Both the unstamped draft (dated 5 November 1874) and the revised formal contract (dated 19 November 1874, transcribed at BGLL, IV, Appendix B, pp. 397–398) of the agreement referred to here are now found at Reading. The agreement covers British and colonial volume rights (with the exception of Canada) on all editions sold at not less than 2s to the following thirteen previously published works: Antonina, Basil, Hide and Seek, The Dead Secret, The Queen of Hearts, The Woman in White, The Moonstone, Man and Wife, Poor Miss Finch, Miss or Mrs?, The New Magdalen, The Frozen Deep and My Miscellanies. It states that copyright of each of these works should be leased to Chatto & Windus for a period of seven years. The publishers agree to republish all works within twelve months from 31 March 1875, with the seven-year period beginning from the formal date of publication (thus the lease effectively expires on 31 March 1883). WC receives payment of £2,000 in six instalments. Chatto & Windus are to purchase the existing stock, stereotype plates, woodcut illustrations, etc. of the novels from the previous publishers, Smith, Elder and Bentley. As the documents at Reading show, the sum paid was eventually £650, on the evaluation of George Bell, of Bell and Sons, who acted as arbitrator when Chatto and Smith failed to reach agreement. The process of evaluation is discussed in Andrew Chatto's letter to WC of 18 December 1874, the first of many letters to him from the publishing firm, preserved in the form of carbon copies in letter-books and now held in the Reading Archive. The agreement excluded the three novels of which Smith, Elder owned the entire copyright and which they were unwilling to trade – No Name, After Dark and Armada. These were not published by Chatto & Windus until 1890.

4. Andrew Chatto's letter to WC of 6 February 1875 (Reading), reveals that a Mr Elwes, representing a small Guernsey newspaper (untraced), had sent WC an honorarium with a request for permission to serialize The Law and the Lady in the paper. Chatto had advised WC to return the money in the light of worries about the copyright position expressed by WC's solicitor William Tindell.

[3345] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 8 FEBRUARY 1875

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C12 pp. 5-6.

I have mislaid the Editor's letter. Will this do?¹

Wilkie Collins | Feby 8th 1875

1. Placing the date at the bottom of the cut sheet indicates this is written for an autograph collector who perhaps had also asked for another signature.

[1513] TO [JAMES] MORTIMER,¹ 10 FEBRUARY 1875

MS: Unknown. On sale: Dominic Winter Book Auctions (14 May 2003), lot 336, in autograph album of Margaret (Jefferson) Farjeon (c. 1870–1910). Published: BGLL, III, p. 71.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square, W. | February 10th 1875

Dear Mr Mortimer,

Many thanks for your kind letter. I am about to leave town for a little while – and I have therefore no choice but to consider the pleasure of seeing you as a pleasure deferred for the present.

In the meantime – referring to the proposal which have you been so good as to make to me – I can only answer that my next novel (when I write it) is always a “promised novel” here, and in America. When I add that I have no sort of idea of what this ~~next novel~~ new work is to be, or of when I am to begin it, I am sure you will understand that all I can now do is to thank you for the compliment that you pay me, and to “ask for time”.²

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | J Mortimer Esq

1. Probably James Mortimer (1833–1911), American-born editor of the London Figaro: A Political, Literary and Satirical Journal (1870–98), a serio-comic penny paper with a Bohemian air, which had recently shifted from daily to bi-weekly publication. Serial novels were to be one of the attractions in the Saturday edition; a translation of Zola’s L’Assommoir ran in the paper from 19 July 1879, for example.

2. The Law and the Lady was just about to be published in book form and WC did not think about his next novel, The Two Destinies, for some months. See [1558] to George Bentley, 12 September 1875.

[1514] TO CHARLES READE, 11 FEBRUARY 1875

MS: Taylor. Published: BGLL, III, p. 72.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London W.
11th Feby 1875

My dear Reade,

Here are the proofs – at last. When you have read them, put them into the enclosed envelope, and seal them up for this post, please. They are going to Germany next.¹

A word of caution if you have anything more to do with The Graphic people. Take care to introduce into the agreement a clause forbidding them to alter your Revises in any way, before publication – without first obtaining your consent and approval. I had the clause made part of my agreement for The Law and the Lady – and, in spite of it, the Editor (placing a filthy interpretation of his own on a perfectly innocent passage) presumed to alter, and mutilate, a paragraph, without first consulting me. I had to force him, through my lawyers, to replace the omitted passage, in a note in the next week’s number.² I don’t know whether you are at work again or not – I hope and trust you are – but it is quite likely that “The Graphic” may apply to you for another story sooner or later – and, on the chance, that they may do so, I utter my little word of warning. It is needless to add that I know nothing of their plans – and, for my own part, I will never write another line in their paper. They are not likely to ask me, after what has happened – and that is one comfort!

When do you leave your learned retirement, and come back to the poor cockneys?³ And are you writing another novel? I want something to read that will really interest me.

Yours always | Wilkie Collins

P.S. How shall I send you my contribution to the old Hero?⁴ By P.O. order to you at Magdalen? – or shall I wait till you return to London? You have only to say. | WC

1. The Law and the Lady appeared from the Berlin house of Wederkind & Schweiger in 1875, as Gesetz und Frau, translated by N. von Winterfeld.

2. See [1507] and [1509] to William F. Tindell of 28 and 29 January 1875.
3. Reade was then staying at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he held a fellowship, rather than at his house in London.
4. Referring to James Lambert, celebrated in Reade's pamphlet A Hero and a Martyr (1874) – see [1499] to Reade of 25 December 1874.

[3047] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 13 FEBRUARY 1875

MS: Parrish (5/11/AM16824).¹ Published: A&C3, p. 50.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | July 13th 1875

-
1. On a square of laid paper – probably a simple autograph.

[1515] TO CARLOTTA LECLERCQ, 15 FEBRUARY 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 73.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
15th February 1875

My dear Carlotta,

I have been away from London – and I have only now read the miserable news which your kind letter brings to me.

It is needless to say that you (and he) have my heartfelt sympathy. I write to him (to Cincinnati) by this mail. A Cincinnati newspaper with a scandalous article about F. has been sent to me – I know not by whom. It was doubly a consolation to get your letter, confirming my belief that he was slandered, and telling me that he was out of danger.¹ There is not a word about him in the London papers. “Out of sight, out of mind” – poor fellow.

I earnestly hope that my letter will find you in better spirits, and with pleasant professional prospects before you while you remain in the States.² My return is indefinitely postponed until “better times”. We have revived the “Magdalen” here – with great success.³ Miss Cavendish plays “Mercy”. The rest of the cast is altered – in some respects greatly for the better. When we have done at the “West End”, we are going to try the outlying theatres in East London.

I have much more to say – but time fails me, and dozens of unanswered letters stare me in the face – so I must say goodbye for the present.

Thank you again and again for writing to me. With my best wishes – and my love to Arthur and “Madame”⁴

Believe me my dear Carlotta | Yours afftly | Wilkie Collins

1. At the beginning of January 1875, when Charles Fechter was starring in No Thoroughfare and Ruy Blas at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio, an accident at the theatre seems to have prevented him from performing. On 20 January 1875, p. 4, the (Cincinnati) Star carried the following explanation:

Mr. Fechter, the celebrated actor, is still at the Grand Hotel, under the treatment of Dr. Buck for an abscess upon his leg caused by a severe bruise received while playing at Wood's. No correct idea of his condition during the weeks past has been given the public, the fact being that for some days it was believed that an amputation of the leg would be necessary. He is, however, convalescing now, but still unable to leave his bed.

Earlier, however, rumours had circulated that Fechter's non-appearance was due to intoxication. The following extract might be from the scandalous report in a local newspaper to which WC refers:

The fuddled Fechter's baggage, containing in monstrous trunks the whole of his famous “picturesque” wardrobe, was a prominent pile in the rotunda of the Grand Hotel last night. Mr. Fechter, who goes from here to God knows where ..., will leave Cincinnati (we trust) this morning. In attempting to reach Wood's Theater Saturday night there was rain and it was freezing, it will be remembered he found that there was No Thoroughfare, and, accordingly, he did not even “go on” for “Ruy Blas.” It would be hard for a delicately nurtured foreign artist to go through a play, with an uncertainty upon his mind as to whether or not he would be able to get back to his hotel. At two o'clock this morning the great tragedian was asleep. At least so the bell-boys judged, from the fact that the calls to his room, which had been frequent during the day and evening – “as frequent as if a card party was going on,” said one of them – had ceased. It is generally conceded that “Charles” had been on a royal old spree. He is fond of ordering drinks by electricity, and the Grand furnishes admirable facilities for the indulgence of his peculiarity.

(Cincinnati Enquirer, 4 January 1875, cited in (Memphis, Tennessee) Public Ledger, 8 January 1875, p. 2)

More generally, for an account of Fechter’s estrangement from his former leading lady Carlotta Leclercq, his bigamous marriage and his descent into alcoholism, see Peters, pp. 360–361.

2. After crossing the Atlantic with Charles Fechter in late 1869, and parting company with him in 1872 when Fechter briefly returned to London, Carlotta Leclercq continued to pursue her solo career in the United States with limited success until 1876.

3. At the Charing Cross Theatre.

4. Both unidentified.

[1516] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 27 FEBRUARY 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/143). Published: BGLL, III, p. 74.

90 Gloucester Place | Saturday. Feby 27/75

My dear Tindell,

Shall I find you accessible on Monday or Tuesday next at 5. or 5.30 P.M.? I have another appointment in prospect – so I am obliged to propose rather a late hour. A line to say when. On Friday next (if all goes well) I am off to Paris.¹

Yours ever | WC

I have got a copy of The Law and The Lady for you.²

1. For the details, see [1518] to Chatto & Windus of 4 March 1875.

2. Published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus in late February 1875.

[1517] TO WILLIAM MOY THOMAS,¹ 1 MARCH 1875

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 220; BGLL, III, p. 74..

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W. | 1st March 1875

Dear Sir,

I am sorry to say it is not possible for me to attend the meeting today. I can only beg the members of the Association to accept my excuses.²

If the “scheme” to be submitted to the meeting is intended to be circulated among the members of the Association and if you will kindly send me a copy of it – it shall have my best attention.³ And if I can make any useful suggestions they shall be sent to you immediately

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Moy Thomas Esqre

1. William Moy Thomas (1828–1910: ODNB), literary journalist, regular contributor to Household Words and first editor of Cassell’s Magazine. At this time he was Honorary Secretary of the Association to Protect the Rights of Authors, founded in 1873 by Tom Taylor, Reade, WC and others – see Bonham-Carter, pp. 97–98, 229 n. In 1875 he was appointed a member of the Royal Commission on Copyright, under the chairmanship of Lord Manners, which reported in 1878.

2. Presumably a meeting of the Association to Protect the Rights of Authors.

3. The precise nature of the scheme has not been clarified.

[1518] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 4 MARCH 1875

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 221; BGLL, III, p. 75.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th March 1875

Dear Sirs,

Pray accept my sincere thanks for your most kind and liberal proposal.¹

It would be both ungracious and ungrateful, on my part, to say No. Feeling this, I gladly accept my new obligations to the kindness and the consideration which I have throughout experienced from your Firm. One request only I will venture to make. If this little transaction should end in any loss to yourselves, I beg you – as a favour to me – to permit me to make that loss good.

With the renewed expression of my thanks,

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

I leave for Dover (en route to Paris) tomorrow evening at 8 o’Clock – and I have arranged to return to London on Friday the 12th.

To | Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. Relating to the disposal of Sampson Low’s old stock of WC’s works of which the rights had passed to Chatto & Windus: ‘If it meets with your approval we should have no objection to paying you the 30£ Messrs S. Low & Co want for their interest in the stock, we taking in exchange these old copies of both “My Miscellanies & The Dead Secret”, to keep or to sell them as we may think least calculated to interfere with the new issues, and thus relieving you of any further trouble in the matter.’ (Chatto & Windus to WC, 3 March 1875, Letter-book 6:106, Reading).

[1519] TO THOMAS WOOLNER,¹ 4 MARCH 1875

MS: Sydney (Mitchell Library A31, p. 67). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 75–76.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th March 1875

My dear Woolner,

I am just leaving town for a week’s holiday in Paris.

On my return I will not fail to call immediately in Welbeck Street² – and do my best to identify the picture.³

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Thomas Woolner (1825–92), sculptor, poet and founding member of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. On the departure from the Brotherhood of James Collinson (1825–81: ODNB), WC’s brother CAC was a candidate to fill his place but Woolner held out to reject him and in the event the place remained empty.

2. Woolner lived at 29 Welbeck Street from 1860 to 1892.

3. Woolner was probably asking WC to confirm the provenance of WmC’s painting ‘The Ferry’ (1819), sold originally to William Danby (1752–1833) for 45 guineas (Memoirs, II, p. 344). Woolner sold this picture at auction in 1875 to Agnew for £289-16s (George Redford, Art Sales (2 vols, London, 1888), II, p. 14).

[1520] TO DENNIS POWELL,¹ 13 MARCH 1875

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, III, p. 76, amended A&C8, p. 25.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
13th March 1875

Sir,

I have been absent from England during the last week – or I should sooner have acknowledged receipt of the “model” which you have been so good as to send to me.

The objections which I feel to the production of the piece, under present circumstances – objections which I have already stated to you in a former letter – leave me no alternative but to abstain from availing myself of your suggestions, and to request you to accept my thanks and my excuses.

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

P.S. The model is returned – with this note²

Dennis Powell

1. See [1504] to the same recipient of 18 January 1875.

2. Not found with the letter.

[1521] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 13 MARCH 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/144). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 76–77.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 13th March 1875

My dear Tindell,

I returned from Paris last night.

Knowles has behaved with perfect fairness – as I think. The “Rowe” mentioned in the copy of Knowles’s letter, a literal copy – with his own grammar and punctuation,¹ which I send to you, is the actor for whom the play was written. It is only common justice to wait and give him a chance. You will find a rough draft of my proposed ~~letter to Rowe~~ reply to Knowles along with the copy of his letter. Please return it to me – if you approve – in time to be copied fair for Monday’s post. I wish to write with as little formality as possible to Knowles and without even the appearance of distrust.²

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

Shall I send you the copy of The Law and the Lady by Parcels Delivery to Essex Street – or to your private address?

Unless it is absolutely necessary I should wish to say nothing about destroying the agreements – Knowles’s letter surely supersedes them? The railway is still running in my head! I hope I am just intelligible?

1. Here, ‘a literal copy – with his own grammar and punctuation,’ is a later insertion by WC.

2. We are unable to elucidate the play in question here, though it is likely to concern a provincial production. Knowles may be John Knowles (1810–80), long the manager of the Theatre Royal in St Peter’s Street, Manchester, while Rowe is likely to be George F. Rowe (1829–89), actor and playwright, formerly lessee of the Theatre Royal, Edinburgh. Rowe had written to WC on several occasions in 1870 concerning a possible production of No Name – see WC’s reply to him of 22 August 1870 ([1019]). WC’s draft is not found at Glasgow and the letter itself remains untraced.

[1522] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 15 MARCH 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 77.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th March 1875

My dear Mrs Frith,

Our letters have crossed. You have, I hope, already received my excuses for my silence, and my thanks for your kind invitation – accepted, it is needless to say, with the greatest pleasure.

Vy truly yours | WC

[1523] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 16 MARCH 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/145). Published: BGLL, III, p. 77.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16th March 1875

My dear Tindell,

I sent you The Law and The Lady yesterday by Parcels’ Delivery. Do’nt trouble to write – if you receive it safely. Silence shall mean all right!

Yours ever | WC

[1524] TO THOMAS WOOLNER, 16 MARCH 1875¹

MS: Sydney (Mitchell Library A26, p. 106). Published: BGLL, III, p. 77.

44, Welbeck Street, | Cavendish Square, W.²
Tuesday | 2 oClock

Can I see the picture, if I call now?

Wilkie Collins

Or will you tell your servant to show me the picture if you are engaged?

-
1. Both date and recipient from [1519] to Woolner of 4 March 1875. WC had returned from Paris on Friday 12 March – see [1521] to Tindell of 13 March.
 2. Frank Beard's address printed in blue Gothic type. WC probably scribbled this note during a visit. Woolner lived at 29 Welbeck Street, a house almost directly opposite. WC must have sent this note offering to see the picture straight away.

[1525] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 18 MARCH 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/146). Published: BGLL, III, p. 78.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th March 1875

My dear Tindell,

If you will spend 6^d on "The World" for yesterday (March 17th) you will see an article, smartly condemning Lockers [sic] little explosion of spite.¹ The columns of the paper are open to me (between ourselves) – and, if you will have a correct copy of Lockers letter made and posted to me, (as soon as you conveniently can) I will send it to the Editor – and see what he thinks about it before the next number of The World goes to press on Monday next.² My belief is that L. will put something impudent into his paper by way of rejoinder – and then we will be down on him.³

Yours ever | WC

You have got L's letter – with the other papers.

-
1. On the same day that The Law and the Lady concluded its serial run (13 March), there appeared in the Graphic a brief review of the novel in volume form:

We do not usually review stories which have previously appeared in our own columns, as our readers are quite able to form their own opinion concerning them, but we may take the opportunity of remarking here that when an author of reputation is asked to write a story for a periodical it is the custom not to take "on approval," but to accept whatever he chooses to supply. Moreover in the case of "The Law and the Lady," the author insisted on the insertion of a clause in the agreement to the effect that his proofs were to be published without further alteration. We mention these facts in justice to ourselves, as the story is not one which we should have voluntarily selected to place before our readers.

In the World (17 March 1875, p. 15), this was described as an 'extraordinary paragraph', and the condemnation concluded: 'that the proprietors of the journal, after availing themselves of the largely-increased circulation which the publication of The Law and the Lady has presumably afforded them, should attack its author, thus kicking down the ladder by which they had climbed, is conduct as ungenerous as it is illjudged'.

2. Referring to WC's friend Edmund Yates; WC's lengthy letter to him in his capacity as editor was published in the World on 20 March 1875.
3. In the event there was no response in the Graphic.

[3132] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 18 MARCH 1875

MS: Unknown. On sale: Bloomsbury Auctions (15 October 2009, lot 379).¹ Published: A&C5, p. 10.

Wilkie Collins | March 18th 1875²

-
1. In a small blue bound Autographs book with no indication of the collector. The album contains other autographs of similar date together with others rather more modern, and includes many theatrical autographs such as that of Ada Cavendish.
 2. A dated signature for an autograph hunter on a small piece of cut paper.

[1526] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 18 MARCH 1875

MS: Lewis Collection.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 79.

Wilkie Collins | March 18th 1875

1. Fragment only, with printed booklist from c. 1885 glued on the reverse.

[1527] TO WILLIAM MOY THOMAS, 19 MARCH 1875

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 222.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th March 1875

My dear Sir,

I have just received the enclosed papers from my Canadian Publishers – Messrs Hunter, Rose, & Co of Toronto.¹ You are heartily welcome to them if they are likely to be of any use to you in preparing the new edition of the Report.²

I was very sorry to miss the meeting on Wednesday but I was really not well enough to attend at it.³

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. Messrs Hunter Rose & Co are good friends to copyright in Canada – and are to be implicitly trusted where the interests of English writers are concerned

Moy Thomas Esqre

1. WC's letters to Hunter, Rose from around this period do not throw any light on the nature of the enclosed papers, which presumably relate to colonial copyright questions.

2. Perhaps the annual report of the Association to Protect the Rights of Authors.

3. Presumably of the Association to Protect the Rights of Authors – see [1517] to Thomas of 1 March 1875.

[1528] TO THE EDITOR OF THE WORLD,¹ 20 MARCH 1875

MS: Unknown. Galley proofs: Morgan (MA 1950). Published: World (24 March 1875), p. 21, our copy text; Taylor, pp. 416–418; B&C, II, pp. 390–392 (as to Edmund Yates).

“THE LAW AND THE LADY”

To the Editor of The World

Sir, – In your last week's number you naturally express some surprise, after reading a paragraph in the Graphic reflecting in disparaging and discourteous terms on a story which I published periodically in the columns of that newspaper. Wherever I go, I find that persons who take any interest in literary matters share your view. Letters have even reached me from perfect strangers, asking (to use the picturesque language of one of my correspondents) “What the newspaper means by running down its own author?” Will you permit me to explain the mystery in your columns by means of a brief narrative of facts? It may be possible to amuse some of your readers who are my readers also, if I inform them of the curious difficulties which a writer has sometimes to contend with when addressing himself to the public.

At the express request of the proprietors of the Graphic I consented to permit them to publish a new work of mine, called The Law and the Lady, periodically, in their newspaper. The negotiations were conducted by their literary editor. Speaking as a mouthpiece of his proprietors, this gentleman's main anxiety in respect to my forthcoming work appeared to be, that it should “give no offence to the family circle” – the sensitiveness of this same “circle” being estimated, in the present case and in the interest of the proprietors, by the editor who was then dealing with me. As a means of quieting his fears, I informed him that I was about to write, this time (autobiographically) in the character of a young lady, and that I hoped I might be sanctioned, under those circumstances, as a perfectly harmless person by that British Domestic Inquisition, otherwise known as the family circle. On the editor's departure, considering what had passed between us – and not forgetting Swift’s immortal aphorism, which declares that a nice man is a man of nasty ideas – I thought it wise to insert a clause in my agreement forbidding the alteration of any portion of my story by anybody employed in the interests of the Domestic Inquisition at the Graphic office, without first obtaining my consent and approbation. The agreement, thus guarded, was signed on both sides, the The Law and the Lady made its appearance periodically in the columns of the Graphic newspaper.

Towards the latter portion of the story, I had occasion to describe an attempt made by one of the male personages in the story to kiss one of the female personages – an incident, permit me to add, which, being of frequent occurrence in “the family circle”, was therefore an especially fit incident for the pages of the Graphic. The little scene was described (autobiographically) by the heroine of the story in these words: “He caught my hand in his and devoured it with kisses. His lips burnt me like fire. He twisted himself suddenly in his chair, and wound his arm around my waist. In the terror and indignation of the moment, vainly struggling with him, I cried out for help.” That is all. The story is now in circulation at the libraries (in book form), and is accessible to anyone who wishes to make sure that I have correctly transferred the language used in the novel to your columns.

To my indescribable amazement, I found this passage, on its publication in the Graphic, clumsily altered, abridged and mutilated (without a word of warning to me), so as to make certain allusions which followed in the next number simply ridiculous. I at once wrote (with some natural indignation) to complain of this scandalous breach of courtesy, which was also a plain breach of the agreement. In reply, I received a letter from the editor, informing me that he had placed a nasty interpretation of his own on the perfectly innocent passage which I have just quoted, and that he and “the Directors” and other “members of the establishment” – all simmering together in a moral miasma of their own dirty raising – actually interpreted what I had written as describing “an attempted violation of the heroine of the story.” I have kept the letter, and I beg to assure you that I quote the writer’s language word for word.

It was impossible for me, after that, to communicate directly with the person with whom I had unfortunately connected myself for the time being. In other words, it was useless to appeal to their sense of what was due to Literature, or due to a writer who had for more than twenty years held an honourable place in the public estimation. I appealed (through my lawyers) to the agreement. The omitted passages were restored, under protest, in the next number of the newspaper; and the consequent explosion of spite, which you have justly described as “a gross violation of the rules by which literary courtesy and good feeling are governed”, follows as a natural explosion of the editor’s insolence and the editor’s hostile feelings towards myself. It is quite needless for me to defend the perfectly innocent passage which has been so indecently misinterpreted. It has been reprinted in America, in Australia, and in Canada; it has been translated into the French, German, Italian, Russian and Dutch languages, and not a word of objection has reached me in any form. In no country but England does a writer meet with obstacles at once so contemptible and so irritating as the sort of obstacle as I have described. Your excellent article is, in this sense, a service rendered to Literature, as well as a service rendered to me. – Accept my sincere thanks, and believe me faithfully yours,

WILKIE COLLINS

London, March 20th, 1875

1. WC’s friend Edmund Yates who had founded the society journal the World in July 1874. On 17 March 1875 an editorial in the paper had supported WC in the author’s dispute with the Graphic; see [1525] to William Tindell of 18 March 1875.

[1529] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 24 MARCH 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/147). Published: B&C, II, p. 392.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 24th March 1875

My dear Tindell,

Here is the cheque enclosed. Please tell the clerk to return the statement receipted – and all will be well. Don't forget my codicil, relating to my son – William Charles – born 25th December 1874 at 10 Taunton Place, Park Road, Regents Park, London – whom I acknowledge to be my child, and who is to share with his sisters in all benefits derivable under my will.²

See said Will, as relating to the other two children.³

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins.

1. Black Gothic engraved type ranged right.

2. See [1500] to Tindell of 29 December 1874.

3. WC had made the original will shortly before his trip to North America; see [1377] to Tindell of 12 September 1873.

[1530] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 27 MARCH 1875

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 80.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th March 1875

Dear Mr Bentley,

I am very glad to hear that you approve of my letter to “The World”. I can honestly say that I wrote – not in my own interests only – but in the interests of Literature as well.¹

All expenses connected with the purchase of the Stereo plates, illustrations, &c &c are to be charged to Messrs Chatto and Windus – under my agreement with them.²

If you will kindly communicate with them, I have no doubt that they will immediately put their best attention to the matter.

I have been away from London – or I should have called in New Burlington Street on the chance of finding you. I was very glad to hear from my young friend Beard,³ the other day, that your health was re-established and that you were back at business again!

At present, I am the idlest man living – but when I see my way to anything that seems likely to suit your pages, I will certainly not forget Temple Bar.⁴

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq

1. See [1528] to Edmund Yates of 20 March 1875.

2. Concerning the four works recently issued by Bentley's. On 5 April Chatto & Windus purchased the stock on hand of The New Magdalen and Poor Miss Finch. There were no outstanding copies of Miss or Mrs?, while The Frozen Deep remained temporarily on sale in the Bentley circulating library edition. Bentley had written to WC on 15 January 1874 to complain that Chatto & Windus were already advertising their 6s reprint, to the detriment of his original edition (BL Add. 46643, ff. 283–4).

3. Nathaniel Beard, now working at Bentley's.

4. WC afterwards contributed two works to Temple Bar – the serial novel The Two Destinies (January to September 1876) and the Christmas story ‘The Mystery of Marmaduke’ (January 1879).

[1531] TO RICHARD EDGCUMBE,¹ 27 MARCH 1875

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, III, p. 81.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
27th March 1875

Dear sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter.

I gladly avail myself of the honour of becoming a member of the Committee for The Byron Memorial – and I will assist, to the best of my ability, in helping forward the object – the excellent object, as I think – which you have in view.

Believe me dear sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Richard Edgcumbe Esqre

1. Richard John Frederick Edgcumbe (1843–1937), from the family of the Earl and Baron of Mount Edgcumbe, was Sergeant-at-Arms to Queen Victoria, Edward VII and George V. He was a tireless campaigner for a Byron memorial. He wrote a history of Byron's last years and later a pamphlet in which he mentions WC's support for his work (History of the Byron Memorial (London: Effingham Wilson, 1883), p. 9). It seems that WC was not very active in the organization.

[1532] TO F. C. BEARD, 29 MARCH [1875]¹

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: BGLL, III, p. 81.

MISS ADA CAVENDISH'S TOUR, 1874 |...²
Monday 29th March

My dear Frank,

At 3 tomorrow afternoon (Tuesday) – punctual to the moment – lunch, or dinner (whichever you like to call it) here. Ada Cavendish in the chair. You are positively expected – and must be here. I only understood today that it was a settled thing – or you should have known of it earlier. Shall I call for you at 2.30?

Yours ever | WC

1. In spite of the printed date on the notepaper, the letter is more likely to date from 1875, when 29 March was a Monday.

2. Beneath this heading, the printed notepaper WC uses lists the venues of the 1874 Cavendish tour, from 'SCARBOROUGH, 31 August, 6 Nights' to 'MANCHESTER, 14 December, 6 Nights'. It is unlikely this was printed as early as the spring of 1874.

[1533] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 9 APRIL 1875

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 82.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 9th April 1875

Dear Mr Bentley,

One line to thank you for your last kind notes, and to assure you that I feel sincerely sensible of the considerate and friendly readiness with which you have received the suggestion which I ventured to offer.¹ You have added one more to the pleasant appreciations which I connect with your House – in your father's time as well as in your time.

With all good wishes for the re-establishment of your health, believe me

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

1. On 5 April Richard Bentley & Son had passed on to Chatto & Windus the stock in hand of The New Magdalen and Poor Miss Finch (BL Add. 46643, ff. 289–290).

[1534] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 10 APRIL 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 82–84.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London | 10th April 1875

Dear Sirs,

I have to thank you for your kind letter and its enclosures. Also for two copies of our new venture – very nicely got up and printed.¹

As to the Desbarats business first.² It is clear to my mind that they mean to cheat me. I reserved my Canadian rights, as usual, when I was dealing with Harpers for “The Law and the Lady”. But I could not stop the circulation of the “Weekly” in Canada, among the regular Canadian subscribers to the paper. I have never done this on any former occasion – and the Canadian News has hitherto always honestly and ungrudgingly paid me the purchase-money agreed on, subject to the inevitable drawback. The object of the new company is evidently to make the “drawback” the excuse for paying only half the purchase-money. As to the letter addressed to me by the “company”, it contained a very clumsily set snare to entrap me into committing myself to publish my future novels in the Canadian News, on terms suggested by the proprietor. I purposely left this part of the letter unnoticed – and simply wrote to declare that I had reserved my Canadian rights as usual.

If I followed my own “instincts” in this matter, I should insist on the full payment – and should go to law if the full payment were refused. But I fear that this proceeding would, under the circumstances, involve not only expenses, but worries and difficulties innumerable. Moreover, the new act³ expressly provides, in the future, for the introduction into Canada of Harper’s newspaper or magazine version of my next story, as “British copyright matter” published with my consent – and I am accordingly prevented (as I understand it) from dealing with Canadian periodicals, by dealing with Harper. Of course I should always deal with Harpers in preference to dealing with any Canadian periodical – for the simple reason that Harpers pay me a very large sum – immeasurably more than Canada can afford. Therefore I have no cause to fight, and no interests to serve (as to periodical publication) in Canada (if the new act passes) when I write my next book.

Under these circumstances – and if my view is the right one – my course lies between taking the offered half sum myself, or allowing these literary filibusters to put the amount into their own pockets. Now I don’t like to let them pocket the money – and, at the same time, I still less like the idea of accepting their impudent compromise without protest. To meet the difficulty, I have written the enclosed “Note”. Read it – and, if you don’t object, hand it (on my behalf and at my request) to the “Burland Desbarats” Company – and let them do as they like. I have said my last word, and I will not give my excellent friends, Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co, any further trouble in this very contemptible matter.

To turn to a pleasanter subject, I think the new act, upon the whole, a very fair one, and a great improvement on previous legislation. So far as I can learn, this is the prevailing view among literary men in general. Personally I don’t see how this vexed question can be better settled – except by considering Canada, for all publishing purposes, as a part of England, and letting copyright law with us be copyright law with you. This – though I never could understand why – is apparently not to be done. So I throw my cap for the new act!

Only the other day, Payn was cordially thanking me for introducing him to you.⁴ So you see it is a case of “love on both sides.” A better fellow than P. never took pen in hand. I reckon him among my special friends.

For the present – as post time is coming on – I must say no more, except again to thank you.

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I am greatly taken with the paper cover this time. It is new and pretty. When you next send to England, if you would let me have six copies of the paper-bound “Law and Lady”, you would much oblige me.

To Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

-
1. WC's The Law and the Lady: A Novel, which appeared in a single volume of 381 pages from Hunter, Rose of Toronto in 1875 in both hardback and paperbound editions. A copy of the hardback is held in the National Library of Canada.
 2. In 1875 the Canadian Illustrated News passed out of the personal control of George Desbarats into the hands of a Montreal limited company known as the Burland-Desbarats' Lithographic and Publishing Co. (see T. F. Wood & Co.'s Canadian Newspaper Directory for 1876). The company seems promptly to have refused to pay WC the sum negotiated for the serialization of The Law and the Lady on the grounds that the Canadian sales of Harper's Weekly had spoiled their market.
 3. The Canada Copyright Act of 1875 (38 Victoria c.88), which received the Royal Assent on 2 August 1875. It granted Canadian copyright to British authors for a period of up to forty-two years if their works were physically reproduced, registered and deposited in Canada. It also prohibited other foreign reprints of these works from being imported into Canada, though this applied not to serialized versions in American periodicals but only to editions in volume form. At the same time, on the insistence of the British Parliament, it was forbidden to export such Canadian reprints to the United Kingdom. See Copinger, 3rd edn, pp. 612–615; and Nowell-Smith, pp. 88–89.
 4. James Payn's first novel to be published in a Canadian copyright edition by Hunter, Rose of Toronto seems to have been Walter's Word in a single volume in 1875.

[1588] TO FRANK ARCHER, 13 APRIL 1875

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.¹ Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 133; BGLL, III, p. 111 (dated 1875). Published: A&C7, p. 13.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.² | Tuesday

My dear Archer

A line to thank you for your kind note – and to congratulate you (on Mrs Graves's part as well as on mine) upon your excellent performance of the sleepy old lord.³

All good wishes for Saturday!⁴

Yours ever | WC

-
1. With WC's monogram on the point of the flap, signed and directed to 'Frank Archer Esqre | Prince of Wales's Theatre | Tottenham Street| W.', postmarked recto 'LONDON W | 4 | AP 14 | 75', with 'WC 9' in another hand in pencil on the recto.
 2. Black embossed Gothic type ranged right. Dated from the reference to the plays and the postmark.
 3. Archer was playing Lord Ptarmigan in T.W. Robertson's Society which the Bancrofts revived at The Prince of Wales's Theatre from 7 November 1874. The run ended on 13 April so WC and Caroline Graves had seen the penultimate performance.
 4. Archer was opening as Antonio in The Merchant of Venice at The Prince of Wales's on Saturday 17 April after three days' rehearsal ('Theatre Salaries and Parts', Bk. 1, p. 96, Archer Archive).

[1535] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 13 APRIL 1875

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 84.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 13th April 1875

Dear Mr Bentley,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £200 – on account of Sales of "The Frozen Deep" &c¹

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

-
1. Presumably for the 69 pages of The Frozen Deep and the 46 pages of The Dream Woman published in Temple Bar in the five issues from August 1874 to December 1874, a total of 115 pages at a rate of £1-14s-9 per page. Duly credited that day to WC's bank account (Coumts: WC).

[1536] TO GEORGE SMITH, 14 APRIL 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 84–85.

90, Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 14th April 1875

Dear Smith,

Will you kindly give instruction to your bankers to present my promissory note (for £300) – due the 16th inst – to Messrs Coutts & Co 59 Strand, to whom I have given the necessary instructions for paying the money.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George Smith Esqre

1. This payment probably represents WC's buying back rights still held by Smith, Elder in order to lease them to Chatto & Windus. Debited to WC's account on 16 April (Coutts: WC).

[1537] TO WILLIAM GALE, 17 APRIL 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), with envelope.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 85.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 17th April 1875

Dear Sir,

I beg that you will accept my apologies for the late acknowledgment of your kind letter, relating to the Conversazione of the 14th ult.²

Illness and absence from London have allowed me no earlier opportunity of writing to you than this.

Pray communicate to the Committee – as well as receive for yourself – the expression of my regret and believe me, dear Sir,

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Wm Gale Esqre | Hon: Sec: &c &c &c

1. Directed to 'Wm Gale Esqre | 19. Belsize Crescent | N.W.', postmarked as dated.
2. Presumably arranged by the Graphics Society, of which Gale was the Secretary.

[1538] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 29 APRIL 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/149). Summary: B&C, II, p. 392 (dated 27 April). Published: BGLL, III, p. 85.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th April 1875

My dear Tindell,

Here is the Dft – approved.¹

Will Saturday next at 5 suit you? or do you leave Essex Street earlier on that day? If not Saturday, will Monday at 5, do better?

Look also at the enclosed note received a little while since. "Keates" is a nick-name for Caroline (Mrs Graves). Is the fellow's brain softening? Of course, no notice has been taken of his letter.²

Yours ever, | WC
Let me have a line to say which day will do.

1. Perhaps of WC's latest will.
2. According to Clarke (p. 130), the note may have been from Joseph Clow. Caroline had married Clow on 29 October 1868 but had left him by the end of 1870 or early 1871, returning to Gloucester Place.

[1539] TO WILLIAM MOY THOMAS 7 MAY 1875

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 223; B&C, II, p. 393.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 7th May 1875

My dear Sir,

I am still ailing, and I am ordered to leave town by my doctor. But, if I can possibly manage it, I will be with you on Monday.

The strongest case to put is probably the case of Mrs Wood's "East Lynne". If I am rightly informed the novel was dramatised without asking her permission, and against her will – and not a sixpence of the large profits produced by the piece has ever found its way into Mrs Wood's pocket.² I am not personally acquainted with the lady – but I should think if the "Association" applied to her to state her own case in writing (so that no mistakes may be made) she would willingly assist us.³

My case is unluckily – in one respect – a weak one. I complain, in the abstract, of the gross injustice of the present state of the law – but I cannot also complain (in Great Britain) of any personal injury. I have dramatised my own books in the face of existing piracies. If I were asked the question I should be obliged to acknowledge that the piracies have been (financially) failures, and that my own /dramatic/ adaptations have, in every case, yielded me a good return in money. The obvious retort to this is – I fear – "What have you to complain of?"

Mrs Wood's case – if I am right in my facts – is an unanswerable case of the cruellest injustice.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Moy Thomas Esqre

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper, address ranged right.

2. Referring to Ellen (Mrs Henry) Wood (1814–1887: ODNB), novelist, whose second novel East Lynne was the popular hit of 1861. The original Dictionary of National Biography entry of 1900 states: "The dramatic versions are numerous, and the drama in one form or another remains one of the staple productions of touring companies both in England and abroad. The fact that Mrs Henry Wood never received any payment or royalty from the adapters of her novel became a stock example of the defects of our copyright law."

3. Referring to the Association to Protect the Rights of Authors, founded in 1873, of which Thomas was secretary.

[1540] CARRIE GRAVES TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 12 MAY 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 5/8). Published: BGLL, III, p. 86.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London.
May 12 1875.

Dear sir,

Mr Wilkie Collins has been suffering from illness. He is now improving in health – and he hopes, ere long to be able to ~~write to you~~ answer your kind note¹ himself.

In the meantime, he has received information which makes it necessary for him to caution you not to permit the visit of any person arriving in the United States from England who may make use of Mr Collins's name or who may claim relationship with ~~him~~ Mr Collins as a means of introducing himself to you. Any such person, – unprovided with a written introduction from Mr Collins – may be safely set down as an imposter.²

Believe me | Faithfully yours | H. Graves³ | (for Mr Collins).
W. A. Seaver Esqre

1. This and the later cancellation/correction are in WC's hand.

2. We have not been able to discover what provoked this melodramatic announcement.

3. Carrie Graves was baptized Harriet, and her signature varies.

[3250] TO [ANNE BENSON PROCTER],¹ 13 MAY 1875

MS: Unknown. On sale: Blackwells, August 2014, No. 54162, tipped into first edition of The Woman in White.
Published: A&C9, pp. 29–30.

90. Gloucester Place | May 13th 1875

Dear Madam,

Your kind invitation finds me – I regret to say – suffering from illness, and not able to take my place at your hospitable table. I can only trust to your indulgence to accept my thanks and my apologies.

Believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. We are inclined to accept the bookseller's identification of the recipient as the widow of the dedicatee of The Woman in White, Bryan Waller Procter, taking into account the fact the book bears the MS inscription, 'From Wilkie Collins | August 15th 1860', the date of initial publication in volume form.

[1541] TO GEORGE W. CHILDS, 17 MAY 1875

MS: Lewis Collection (L2799). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 86–87; Amended: A&C14, p. 30.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
17th May 1875

My dear Mr Childs,

Pray forgive this late acknowledgement of your very kind letter. The truth is – I have not been well enough to write. Our bitterly damp winter and spring here, have numbered me among their victims – and I am only now getting better slowly.

Your friendly invitation instantly recalled to me the happy hours that I ~~passed~~ spent in Philadelphia with you and Mrs Childs.² I dined with you again in that beautiful room, at that well-spread table. I drove out with you again in that pretty little carriage, and saw the splendid Park, and learnt from Mrs Childs how to pronounce the name of your noble river.³ In short, I lived again in some of the most agreeable of the associations which I connect with America – in other words, the associations which I connect with you, and yours.

When shall I return to my good friends on the other side of the Atlantic? When shall I find myself passing again through your handsome and hospitable doors? As yet, I cannot definitely answer this question. So much depends upon my literary engagements here, and so little upon my own will and my own wishes! All I can say at present is, that I shall seize the opportunity when it comes, and that I shall consider my engagement to you as the first engagement which it is alike my duty and my pleasure to keep when I am again in America.

In the meantime, pray present my best and kindest remembrances to Mrs Childs, and believe me, with sincere regard and esteem

always truly yours | Wilkie Collins.

Let me not forget to thank you for the "Public Ledger Almanacs".⁴ The quantity of information and amusement compressed within that one volume is really and truly wonderful!

1. Envelope postmarked 'MY 18 | 75', directed to 'Mr George W. Childs | Office of the Public Ledger | Philadelphia | Pa | U.S. America', and signed lower left beneath a curved line 'Wilkie Collins'. On the verso in another hand 'W. Collins' [sic] and dealer's pencil numbers. The envelope flap has a fine monogram.

2. WC met Childs and his wife Emma when he visited Philadelphia during his American tour; see [1382] to him of 21 October 1873.

3. Probably the Delaware, though there are several much less easily pronounceable rivers in Philadelphia such as the Schuylkill which passes near Bryn Mawr where the Childs lived.

4. Childs published the Public Ledger Almanac from 1864 until his death in 1894. See also [3357] to George W. Childs, 17 July 1868.

[1542] TO OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, 17 MAY 1875

MS: Congress. Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 225–226; B&C, II, pp. 393–395.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | London
17th May 1875

My dear Doctor Holmes,

That you possess all the social virtues, I know by pleasant experience. May I hope, for my own sake, that you also possess a certain reserve fund of indulgence for the social failings – and especially for that particular failing which produces a bad correspondent? Seriously, I have but one excuse for my otherwise unpardonable neglect in acknowledging your kind letter and the volume which accompanied it. All through the last cruel winter I have been on the invalid list, and my pen and I have been both “out of gear” together.² I sincerely hope that you have been, all this time, setting me an example of health, spirits, and literary activity. In any case, I am indebted to you for some of the happiest hours I have spent during this (to me) dreary year. Your last Poems have been – in bed and out of bed – my always welcome companions.³ I know them well enough to have my special favourites. “The Organ Blower” delights me by its delicate irony and its true and charming feeling. “At the Pantomime” – where the sudden revulsion of feeling is so finely touched – is, as I think, another masterpiece. Of the “War Songs”, all have the “ring” of true poetry in them. “Never or Now” is the finest thing of the kind I have read since Campbell laid down his pen for ever.⁴ Again, in quite another way, the delightful “Class Meeting” Poems have the same masterly hold over the feelings of the reader – simple, pathetic, unaffected and finely true. I am not a little proud to find the “Toast” with which you honoured me at that memorable dinner, included among your Poems.⁵ I may say for myself honestly that the kindness which has thus distinguished me has not been thrown away on an ungrateful man – and I may add that the little which I have here ventured to say on the subject of your “Songs of Many Seasons” is said truly with my whole heart.

There is no Art-news to tell you – even if I had left myself room to write at greater length. Except that “Salvini” in Othello has stirred the London waters,⁶ we are otherwise stagnant on this side of the Atlantic. For myself, I am still looking forward to my return to the States, and to a renewal of our too brief intercourse at Boston – and still unable to fix a date for my departure. The one thing I know is, that, when the opportunity comes, I shall not be slow in seizing it. Meanwhile with sincere regards, believe me, | my dear Doctor Holmes | Always truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

My kindest remembrances to Mr. Longfellow when you see him.

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper.

2. It seems likely that Holmes had sent the letter and volume in response to [1490] to him of 5 November 1874.

3. The volume in question must be Holmes’ Songs of Many Seasons, 1862–1874 (Boston: James R. Osgood, 1875), a presentation copy of which was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 185).

4. Thomas Campbell (1777–1844: ODNB), Scottish poet.

5. ‘A Toast to Wilkie Collins’ (see [1428] to Holmes of 7 March 1874) appeared on pp. 90–91 in the section entitled ‘Songs of Welcome and Farewell’; the other sections in the volume were ‘In the Quiet Days’, ‘In War Time’, ‘Memorial Verses’, ‘Rhymes of an Hour’, and ‘For the Meetings of the Class of 1829’.

6. Tommaso Salvini (1829–1916), Italian actor, performed Othello at Drury Lane in April 1875, creating a sensation and provoking the caricature in the society weekly Vanity Fair of 22 May 1875. Emphasizing the character’s sexual passion for Desdemona, Salvini delivered his lines in Italian while the rest of the actors performed in English.

[1543] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 7 JUNE 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 5/8). Extract: Davis, p. 280. Published: B&C, II, pp. 395–396.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | London | 7th June 1875

My dear Seaver,

The sight of your handwriting did me good – even when the devil whose name is Rheumatic Gout was in full possession of me. I have been long in thanking you for your letter, and for that excellently-timed ~~letter~~ and friendly little article /which you/ enclosed.² But I have also been long in getting to be “my own man again” – and with that excuse I throw myself confidently on the indulgence of my friend and comrade over many a good bottle of wine, in that happy time of my life which I passed at New York.

If I could have my own way, I should start from Liverpool by the steamer which will bring you this letter – call at your office in Broadway – and say “Seaver, come and dine at the Brunswick”. But I have involved myself somehow in certain dramatic experiments to be tried on the British public this year – and in England I must stay, whether I like it or not, until I am “damned” or “ovated” as the case may be.

But only let me get over this year – and then a sea-voyage I must have – and to New York it shall be – and what is more, before the Centennial Celebration if possible.³ We have been literally drenched in Exhibitions in the Old World. My feet ache, and my head whirls, and my stomach sickens, when I think of another exhibition and more Arts and Sciences and industrial triumphs and improvements of the mind and international courtesies and all the rest of it. But this is morbid sentiment – this is an unhealthy view – let me hasten to withdraw it – and let us look forward to meeting next year, unless you come to England in the meantime.

I have got some dry Champagne and some decent cigars and a hearty welcome thrown into the bargain. N. B. Travel by Cunard – he takes soundings in a fog, and is not in such a damned hurry that he has no time to think of the lives of his passengers.⁴

Goodbye for the present, my dear Seaver – give my love to my friends in New York – and believe me

Always truly yours | WC

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper.

2. Not found at Parrish and unidentified. Nothing pertaining to WC seems to have appeared around this time among Seaver’s ‘Editor’s Drawer’ series in Harper’s New Monthly Magazine.

3. Formally named the International Exhibition of Arts, Manufactures and Products of the Soil and Mine, the Centennial International Exhibition in celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, was held in Philadelphia from 10 May to 10 November 1876. It represented the first official World’s Fair in the United States, with just under forty nations participating and nearly 10 million visitors.

4. Probably referring to the American Eagle Company, whose ocean steamship the Schiller, which left New York on 27 April 1875 and ran aground in fog on 7 May on the Retarrier Ledges off the Isles of Scilly, with the loss of the vessel and over three hundred lives; see ‘Loss Of The Schiller’, Times (10 May 1875), and the extensive correspondence which followed the report. At the head of this paragraph, in place of indentation, WC draws a hand with pointing index finger.

[1544] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 21 JUNE 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/151). Published: BGLL, III, p. 88.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 21st June 1875

My dear Tindell,

My Italian publishers are worrying me now.¹

An Italian newspaper has pirated my “Law and The Lady”² – the publishers want to take proceedings. They ask me to send them a power of attorney to proceed against the newspaper in my name – said “power” to be countersigned by the Italian Ambassador – and God knows what more of the same sort.

Can you get a look at the International Copyright Treaty between England and Italy? I have already given the Italian publishers (1) First my authority in writing, appointing them sole publishers of the Italian translation (2). I have caused said “authority” to be formally certified by the seal and signature of the Italian Consul in London. (3) I have sent a copy of the English publication to said Publishers to be registered by them in Italy. The point is whether this is not enough (under the Treaty) to enable the Italian publishers to protect their property, in their own name? Can you settle this question by looking at the Treaty?³

When I tell you that the sum paid to me for the translation was 200 francs (£8)!!! – you will understand that I have had about trouble enough in this matter.⁴

Can you come and dine at 7 sharp on Friday next? No evening dress.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. Fratelli Treves – see [1545] to Tindell of 23 June 1875.

2. Untraced. The Law and the Lady was not one of WC’s novels found in Italian translation in his library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 95).

3. There seems in fact to have been no such treaty – see Copinger (2nd edition, 1881, ch. 17); and Nowell-Smith (pp.

40–41). Presumably WC had in mind the old treaty between Great Britain and Sardinia, which could have no legal force after the creation of the Kingdom of Italy in 1861, but which may have been treated as still prevailing by many parties. See [1094] to an unidentified Italian translator of 16 May 1871.

4. The payment cannot be identified in WC's bank account.

[1545] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 23 JUNE 1875¹

MS: Glasgow (891117/152). Published: BGLL, III, p. 89.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 23rd June

My dear Tindell,

I think it will save some correspondence if you write professionally and directly to the Italian Publishers, stating that I have applied to you as my lawyer, on the subject of the “Power” – and making the various stipulations which are mentioned in your letter to me. You write of course in English. The address is as follows: –

Signori Fratelli Treves | Via Solferino, 11. | Milano | Italia.

=

All right for Friday!

Yours ever | WC

1. Dating from the relation to [1544] to Tindell of 21 June, where WC had mentioned his Italian publishers and invited Tindell for dinner on the Friday.

[3048] TO J. TILFOR,¹ 2 JULY 1875

MS: Private (in family album entitled ‘Autographed Letters of Charles Dickens’ Friends’). Published: A&C3, p. 50.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd July 1875

Dear Sir,

If you still have Warrens “Diary of a Late Physician” and “Ten Thousand a Year” (advertised in your last Catalogue) please send them here when your messenger is coming my way.²

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mr J. Tilfor

1. WC wrote to the same book-dealer on 30 November 1874 ([1495]).

2. Samuel Warren (1807–1877); his novels Passages from the Diary of a Late Physician and Ten Thousand a Year were published in 1832–1838 and 1840–1841 respectively.

[1546] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 3 JULY 1875

MS: Stanford.¹ Facsimile: Bender. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 89.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London July 3rd 1875

Dear Sirs,

Here is a little story of mine which I have just written (at the request of the Editor) for “The World” – a lately-started and very successful newspaper here.²

If the “Canadian Illustrated News Company”, shows any disposition to pay the purchase-money agreed on for “The Law and The Lady” honestly – they may have this new story in miniature for nothing. If they persist in cheating me – then please hand the story to any rival Canadian newspaper which will publish it simultaneously with the London issue, and so prevent the Canadian News from copying the story from Harper’s Newspaper. It is needless to add that my bargain with Messrs Harper is – on this occasion, as regards Canada – what it has been on all other occasions: Viz: – I undertake not to interfere with the regular and established circulation of Harper’s Periodicals among their subscribers in Canada – and that is all.

I really hope I am not putting you to any serious inconvenience in this trifling matter. I could not write any new thing – short or long – without sending you a proof of it. If you see any better way of disposing of “The Clergyman’s Confession” than the way which I have suggested, pray use your own discretion in this matter. I leave it unreservedly in your hands.

With kindest regards, Believe me Dear Sirs,
always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

-
1. In another hand above the address is written: ‘I wrote enclosing £50 on | 22 July 1875 | Roberts’ (see [1532] to E. Roberts of 12 August 1875).
 2. ‘The Clergyman’s Confession’, a ghost story, published in the World, 4–18 August 1875, Harper’s Weekly, 14–21 August, the New York Times, 29 August and 5 September 1875, and in the Canadian Monthly, August– September 1875. It was included in WC’s Little Novels (1887) under the title ‘Miss Jéromette and the Clergyman’.

[1547] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 5 JULY 1875

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 90–91.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 5th July 1875

Private

Dear Mr Bentley,

Pray excuse this late acknowledgment of your kind note. I have been away from home for a little while – and this is my first opportunity of writing to you.

I am meditating something new – which I can make a long “something” or a short “something” – according to the public reception of it.¹ But I am not quite sure whether I can be ready by November – having some dramatic work to occupy me for the next two months.² However, setting this part of the question aside for the present, I should be sincerely glad – if we can arrange terms to your satisfaction and mine – to try my new experiment in your Magazine. If you will kindly let me know how much, per-page of Temple Bar, you feel disposed to offer for the right of periodical publication (say, for eight months to begin with) in Great Britain and Ireland only, I will at once reply definitely on my side.

I must beg you to consider this letter as strictly confidential. I have, thus far, accepted no proposals, and I have not even mentioned the new experiment which I think of trying to anyone but yourself.³

Believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. By-the-bye, our excellent Mr Munnings has never yet sent me in my accounts to the end of March last.⁴

George Bentley Eqr

-
1. This new project was delayed by illness but eventually became the novel The Two Destinies, serialized in Temple Bar from January to September 1876.
 2. ‘Miss Gwilt, the final version of the long-postponed dramatic Armada, was at last pulled into shape and staged by Ada Cavendish and her company at the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool, on 9 December 1875’ (Peters, p. 378). See also [1587] to Laura Seymour, 30 December 1875.
 3. Bentley replied on 23 July as follows (BL Add. 46443, ff. 296–297):

(copy) | Upton Park, | Slough, Bucks. | July 23 1875

Dear Mr Collins

I ought to have written to you before, but have been so full of business, that I have delayed more than I ought.

I see that before the honorarium was 30/- a page, which I understand is too far apart from what you are accustomed to receive that I have addressed myself to the matter with the desire of meeting you as far as I possibly can.

I propose to leave entirely to you whether the story be in four or five numbers, & to pay Two Hundred Pounds for its use in Temple Bar alone. Each number on an average not to be less than 24 pages, and as much more as you may like, up to 32.

You are kind enough to say that if we arranged terms you would wish to tell me something of the idea you have in your mind for the subject, & I will come to you directly you wish, on this. I shall be very glad if you can assent to my proposal & I do not anticipate that you will select a subject which you or I might deem unsuitable to Temple Bar.

Believe me Yrs | very truly | (signed) George Bentley
To | Wilkie Collins Esq

In the event Bentley agreed to pay WC £2 a page (see [1561] to the publisher of 30 September 1875), but after the sixth part WC volunteered to be paid £1-1s per page for the rest, so that eventually he earned around £314 in all for the 189 pages.

4. The cheque WC acknowledged on 13 April 1875 covered his dues for The Frozen Deep only, and did not include the sales of the other three works issued until recently by Bentley's.

[1548] TO EMMA B. CHILDS,¹ 13 JULY 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 91–92.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 13th July 1875

Dear Mrs Childs,

I only returned to London (from the country) at the end of last week – and I go away again on Thursday. Tomorrow (Wednesday) about 4 o'clock I will take my chance of being fortunate enough to find you at the hotel – on the understanding, of course, that I am not to interfere on any account w1875 07 25 Testard a [1549]ith any engagement which you may have previously formed. I cannot tell you how sorry I am that my absence from London has made me delay so long in thanking you for your card, and bidding you welcome to England.

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Emma Bouvier Childs née Peterson (1842–1928), wife of George W. Childs (1829–94), the Philadelphia publisher, presumably visiting London without her husband. WC had stayed with the couple during his reading tour of North America; see [1541] to George Childs, 17 May 1875.

[1549] TO HENRI TESTARD,¹ 25 JULY 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 92.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th July 1875

Dear Sir,

I have been away from London – and I can only now thank you for your letter.

The little story written for “The World” was purchased for translation into French, some weeks before your letter was delivered at this house.²

I remain | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

M. Henri Testard

1. French translator of, notably, a number of works by E. C. Grenville Murray; later author of Histoire de la littérature anglaise depuis ses origines jusqu'à nos jours (Paris: J. Bonhoure, 1882). Testard seems to have been resident in England, appearing in both the 1871 and 1881 censuses.

2. Concerning ‘The Clergyman’s Confession’.

[1550] TO KATE FIELD,¹ 28 JULY 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 92–93.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 28th July 1875

Dear Miss Field,

One line to make my apologies. I have been suffering from illness since my return to London. But I hope to call on you at your new address before the end of the week – bringing the play with me. The serious defect in the piece springs from the serious defect in the book – that is to say, from the contemptibly weak and cowardly character of the parson.² Speaking for myself as a man – I long to kick him!

Yours very truly | Wilkie Collins

1. Mary Katherine Keemle Field (1838–96), American actress, writer and advocate of women’s rights. WC first met her in 1873 through Anthony Trollope – see [1351] to him of 9 June 1873.

2. It has not been possible to identify the novel or play in which the cowardly parson appears. Since WC refers to the author in the past tense in [1557] to Field of 10 September 1875, it cannot be Trollope. The dramatic adaptation must be by Field herself.

[1551] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 29 JULY 1875

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 93.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th July 1875

Dear Mr Bentley,

Pray excuse this late acknowledgement of your kind letter. I have been ill – (a recurrence, between ourselves, of a former trouble with my kidneys) – and I am still under our friend Beard’s treatment. He feels no doubt about being able to set me right again – but he will not say how long he may be about it. Under these circumstances, I cannot feel myself justified in undertaking – just yet – any new work while I have a promised, and unfinished dramatic venture still in hand. In your interests, as well as in mine, I have no choice but to ask you to kindly let me consider our negotiation, as an adjourned negotiation for the present – leaving you entirely free, of course, to make any other literary arrangements for the Magazine which you may think desirable.¹

I am sincerely sorry – after the definite proposal which you have placed before me – not to be able to write more definitely on my side. But you know what illness is – and I am sure you will understand my position.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq

1. Referring to the planned serialization of The Two Destinies in Temple Bar.

[1552] TO E. ROBERTS,¹ 12 AUGUST 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 93–94.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W. August 12th 1875

Dear Sir,

Your “second” of exchange, signed by Duncan Sherman & Co, has reached me safely. The “first” B/E on being presented by my banker here, at Messrs Barings, was refused, and has been “noted” accordingly.² You will no doubt have anticipated this result, before you received my letter of acknowledgment preceding these lines.

With my kind remembrances to Messrs Hunter & Rose

I remain | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

E. Roberts Esq

1. Presumably an employee of Hunter, Rose on the accounting side – see [1546] to Hunter, Rose & Co., 3 July 1875, note 1.

2. The refusal of the bill on Duncan Sherman & Co. was due to the bankruptcy of that firm – see [1563] to Hunter, Rose & Co., 6 October 1875. WC was charged 1s-6d for the ‘noting’ on 6 August (Coutts: WC).

[3102] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 12 AUGUST 1875

MS: Unknown. On sale: International Autograph Auctions (9 February 2008, lot 599), with many other clipped signatures. Published: A&C4, p. 21.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | August 12th 1875

1. Presumably an autograph hunter.

[1553] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 26 AUGUST 1875¹

MS: Unknown. Copy in WC's hand: within second letter to Tindell of 27 August 1875 (Glasgow, 891117/155), our copy text. Published: BGLL, III, p. 94.

Dear Madam,

Pray accept my excuses for this late answer to your letter. Illness has allowed me no earlier opportunity of thanking you than this.

I will willingly comply with the request which you address to me on behalf of the widow of Mr Jones.² Will you kindly send me her address in Ireland – so that I may communicate with her when I have spoken to my advisers here in matters of pecuniary business.

I remain | Dear Madam | Faithfully yours
(Signed) Wilkie Collins

1. Concerning recipient and date, see [1555], see the second letter to Tindell of the following day [1555].

2. In his will WmC had left £21 per annum (£700 invested at 3% in 'the public funds of Great Britain') to his cousin 'Mrs Elizabeth Jones of Dublin ... during her natural life and after that ... equally between her two present children during their natural life and unto the survivor of them during his or her natural life'. WC did not like 'this pious bitch' (see [0877] to Ward, 22 March 1869) who died in 1870 (see [1025] to Ward, 21 September 1870), and the money was paid to her only surviving child, William Collins Jones, from that time (see [1081] to Ward, 30 March 1871). Clearly William has now died and his widow wishes the payments to continue, though there is no obligation under the terms of the will.

[1554] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 27 AUGUST 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/154). Published: BGLL, III, p. 95.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 27th Augt 1875 My dear Tindell,
My dear Tindell

Are you in town?

If not, when do you return to business and Essex Street?

I want to send you a letter to look at for me. Nothing very important – but you had better see it.¹

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. Clearly [1553], the letter on behalf of the widow of Mr Jones dated the previous day. Tindell must have been in town and responded promptly, allowing WC to send a second letter to him on the same day.

[1555] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 27 AUGUST 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/155). Published: BGLL, III, p. 95.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th August 1875
(Copy of Answer) | sent 26 Augt | See Note at the end¹

Note. A poor relation of my father's is just dead, and the lady who writes to me begs that I will continue the pension to his widow. I am quite ready to do this – but if the widow outlives me, I don't want my Exors to be saddled with the payment of the pension. Must I mention this in writing? Or – in the absence of a “document” – is it taken for granted that the payment to the widow is voluntary, and cannot be continued beyond my life-time? (N.B. The pension is £21...- a year only!)

I have been ill – and am only now hoping to get away in a week or so.

1. Written above the printed address in black Gothic engraved type ranged right. Beneath the printed address is a copy in WC's hand of [1553] to Unidentified Recipient of the previous day, followed by this note to Tindell.

[1556] TO CHARLES READE, 29 AUGUST [1875]¹

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 95–96.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Sunday Aug 29

My dear Reade,

You and Mrs Seymour are especially requested to dine here and taste the White Burgundy wine (which I mentioned the other day), either on Wednesday or Thursday next at 7. No evening dress, and no party. Choose which day will suit you best, please, and let me hear by an early post. The Editor of Harper's Weekly is in London for a few days,² and I want him to meet you – and he “wants” too. So say if it shall be Wednesday or Thursday, and believe me – with love to Mrs Seymour – yours ever

Wilkie Collins

1. Davis (pp. 267–268) tentatively assigns the letter to 1871, but the calendar makes 1869 and 1875 the only available years. The reference to S. S. Conant and the style of printed paper employed – black Gothic type ranged right – make a date after WC's visit to America far more likely.

2. S. S. Conant (1831–85) ‘came to us from the New York Times in the winter of 1868–9’ to assume the editorship of Harper's Weekly – see The House of Harper (New York: Harper, 1912), p. 224. See also [0946] to Conant of 1 January 1870. WC had of course met him in New York during his North American tour.

[1557] TO KATE FIELD, 10 SEPTEMBER 1875

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, III, p. 96.

Lowestoft | September 10th 1875

Dear Miss Field

One line to say that I hope you were not prevented by accident or illness from favouring me with a visit as you proposed.

I am here – for the moment – in pouring rain, with a very rheumatic back and shoulders. Possibly I may try the coast further north in a day or two. But, in any event, I propose to be back in London in a fortnight. If I can be of any service to you, pray let me know it. Letters addressed to 90. Gloucester Place will follow me wherever I may go.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I keep your play, until we can talk about it. That book is anything but easy to dramatise. The writer was the least dramatic of modern novelists – or one of the least, at any rate.¹

1. See [1550] to Field of 28 July 1875.

[1558] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 12 SEPTEMBER 1875

MS: Berg. Published: B&C, II, pp. 396–397.

Lowestoft | 12th Sept 1875

Dear Mr Bentley,

Your kind letter has followed me to this place. I am wandering about the Eastern Coast, on the way back to health. But the weather is against me so far – and I feel the damp of my native shores in my back and shoulders. However, I [del] have ceased to be one of our friend Beard's patients – and I must not complain. In ten days I propose to return to London. If the rheumatism goes back with me, I am afraid I shall not be fit for the Welsh mountains.¹ I shall be obliged to try Harrogate. I gladly [del] infer from your letter that you and the asthma have parted company in Wales.

Many thanks for your proposal. A short story, beginning and ending in one monthly number of the Magazine, is I am afraid out of the question. I have got an idea of another new story (of the fanciful kind with a touch of the supernatural in it) – but it would occupy four or five numbers at least.² When I get to work [del] on the new experiment, I will gladly report progress to you, before I say a word about it in any other quarter of the periodical world. The sooner I take up my pen again, the better for me, now.

Vy truly Yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. Wherever I may go, my letters will follow me from Gloucester Place.

To | George Bentley Esqre

Excuse this smeared page. Even my writing paper feels the sea-damp³

1. Bentley must have invited WC to join him during his holiday in the mountains of Wales.

2. Referring to The Two Destinies.

3. WC writes his second postscript vertically up the side of the fourth page. The ink shows signs throughout of bleeding through the paper.

[1559] TO KATE FIELD, 25 SEPTEMBER 1875

MS: Boston (KF 107). Published: Whiting, pp. 345–346; B&C, II, p. 389 (dated 25 February 1875).

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | London | Sept. 25, 1875.

Dear Miss Field,

I have just got back, and have held a court of justice on my servants. They all declared that no such lady as Miss Kate Field ever appeared at this house, or did me the honour of leaving [del] her card – and they all remember perfectly that I expressly instructed them to show Miss Field upstairs into my study on the day when I expected to have the pleasure of receiving her. The only explanations of this mystery are two in number (1) That the servants have /all three/ lied. (2) That you called at the wrong Gloucester Place. There are two Gloucester Places in London – the oldest and first named I live in. It is close to Portman Square (underlined on this address.). The other Gloucester Place [del] lies out Bayswater way, close to Westbourne Terrace – and is known as Gloucester Place, Hyde Park. The Editor of the Louisville Courier Journal, /when he was last in England,/ went to the wrong Gloucester Place (being invited to lunch with me. I asked “a party” to meet him – and while we were waiting vainly for him here, he was waiting vainly at the other Gloucester Place for us. I am so sorry and so ashamed at what has happened, that I take refuge in the theory that you have followed the lead of the editor. In any case, pray accept my excuses – and pray give me another chance when we are next in London together.

You deserve to succeed. In these days of mean intriguing and puffery, your resolution and self-respect are doubly admirable. Whatever I can do to help you I will shall be most gladly done. If you go to Edinburgh, I know the manager of the new Theatre and Winter Garden there – Mr. Wybert Reeve (my “Count Fosco” in America[])- and a letter to him is heartily at your service.

As for me, I am better, but not yet well. In a week or so, I think of going to Germany for a month. Letters will be forwarded from this address.

Yours truly| Wilkie Collins

1. WC uses Gothic printed paper, in fact triply underlining the address.

[1560] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 29 SEPTEMBER 1875

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, III, p. 97.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
September 29th 1875

My dear Seaver,

I had hopes of accompanying the bearer of this letter to New York – but I am not quite well enough for the voyage – and I must (to my own great regret) present my old friend Mr Frederick Lehmann – not personally, but to you by letter. He is in America on business – and when he has a leisure hour, if you will give him a share in some of that kindness which you so heartily bestowed on me, you will additionally oblige

Your every truly | Wilkie Collins

Mr W.A. Seaver Esqr

[1561] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 30 SEPTEMBER 1875

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 97–98.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 30th Sept 1875

Private

Dear Mr Bentley,

Pray forgive this late reply to your kind note.

The new story required some consideration, and the making of many notes, before I could answer for myself at all definitely. I shall hope to be able to appear in the January “Bar” (published Decr 20th) if you will be so good as to keep a place for me.¹

I gather from the proposal which you kindly made – to revert for a moment to money matters – that £2 – - per page of the “Bar” for the right of printing the story periodically (all other rights being reserved) would meet your views. These terms – if I am right – shall meet my views also, on this occasion. I only ask that the arrangement shall be considered as strictly confidential between you and me.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

It will be a great convenience to me if the Mss can be set up as fast as I write the monthly parts. I must send to America and Australia – also abroad in Europe.²

George Bentley Eqr^e

1. The serial run of The Two Destinies indeed began in Temple Bar in January 1876 and ran for nine months, filling 189 pages, though some at the end of an instalment were incomplete. WC voluntarily reduced his rate to £1-1s a page after the sixth issue.

2. The novel was serialized in New York in Harper's Bazar, 25 December 1875–9 September 1876, and in the Melbourne Age, 19 February–14 October. Gasson (p. 151) records European translations into Russian (St Petersburg, 1876), French (Paris, 1877), Dutch (The Hague, 1877) and Italian (Milan, 1884).

[1562] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 4 OCTOBER 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/156).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 98.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.
October 4th 1875

My dear Tindell,

I am going abroad for a little while, and I am sending my “papers” (in a tin box) to be kept safely in Messrs Coutts’s fire-proof room.² In case of accidents by fire in Essex Street, I want my Will to have the same protection as my other papers. Will you kindly send the Will, sealed up, to Messrs Coutts’s bank, this morning, before 12 o’clock noon, addressed to F.C. Ward son of Charles Ward³ – the clerk in charge of the strong room. If your clerk writes my name in the corner of the envelope, Mr Ward will know that he is to put it in my ~~strong~~ box, the key of which is in his possession. I cannot fetch the Will myself, as I am obliged to go to Birmingham tomorrow on dramatic business.⁴

Yours very truly | Wilkie Collins.

W. F. Tindell Esqre | Messrs Benham & Tindell. 18 Essex Street | Strand

-
1. Written in landscape format on distinctive plain paper folded at the short lefthand edge.
 2. It may have remained there until 30 October 1876 – see [1651] to Coutts & Co. of that date.
 3. Francis Charles Ward (b. 1850), now working at the bank with his father.
 4. The nature of the business remains unclear.

[1563] TO HUNTER, ROSE & Co., 6 OCTOBER 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 98–99.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
October 6th 1875

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a 1st B/E for £50.-.- replacing the previous remittance by Bill on Duncan Sherman & Co – not paid in consequence of the bankruptcy of that firm.¹ The new B/E has been sent to my bankers, and has no doubt been duly honoured.

I am very sorry to hear of Mr Hunter’s continued illness. Pray remember me to him kindly, and give him my hearty good wishes for his speedy restoration to health.²

For ~~myself~~ my part, I am something of an invalid still – and am going away to Germany to try change of air and scene.

Believe me | Dear Sirs | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

-
1. ‘B/E’ indicates Bill of Exchange. The amount of £50 drawn on the Bank of Montreal was credited to WC’s account on 6 October. On 8 October WC’s account was charged 8s as ‘Protest on Bill p: £50’, a banking term for refusing a cheque or other instrument, presumably here the original B/E, though he had already been charged 1s-6d for ‘noting’ that Bill – see [1552] to E. Roberts, 12 August 1875 (Coutts: WC). Duncan, Sherman & Co. was a New York bank which failed on 27 July 1875 owing more than $200,000 (see New York Times, 29 July 1875, p. 1, and 22 April 1876, p. 3). Presumably Hunter, Rose had banked there and replaced the worthless Bill at their own expense.
 2. The partner Robert Hunter, who was to die in 1877.

[1564] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 6 OCTOBER 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/157). Published: BGLL, III, p. 99.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 6th October 1875

My dear Tindell,

Many thanks. The Will is in the fire-proof room, with the other treasures.¹ But here is another worry. Please read the enclosed letter, and copy of my answer. My own idea is that the illustrious foreigner (of whom we know something already) is at the bottom of the business. I know nothing whatever of “Mrs Hamilton”.² If she should write – open the letter, and (if you think it best), answer professionally for me. Between ourselves, I shall not be able to get away before Friday afternoon. But I say that I have gone – to get rid of the various bores who besiege this house. If nothing happens is heard of “Mrs Hamilton” before I go, my address abroad until further notice, will be Poste Restante, Brussels. Why don’t you take a little holiday – and come to Brussels? There is time to decide before Friday.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins.

1. See [1562] to Tindell of 4 October 1875.

2. Neither the enclosed letter nor WC’s response is found at Glasgow, but the ‘illustrious foreigner’ must be Stefan Poles, while the Hamilton connexion is perhaps explained by Adam Leśniewski (‘A Certain Fiasco or the Role of Stefan Poles in the Polish Uprising of 1863’, Polish Review 23:4 (1978), p. 36) in an anecdote by no means favourable to Poles :

During his stay in Sweden [in 1863] Poles became friendly with the young Lady Ann Hamilton of Ovesholm, who maintained a correspondence with Count Manderström. In his letters the Minister of Foreign Affairs related, among other things, political gossip current in Stockholm and described his own critical opinions with respect to the intended reform of the parliamentary system. In some way Poles got the letters into his hands (according to Poles they were given to him for safekeeping, according to others – he obtained them by a trick). After Lady Hamilton had died (July 1866), Poles wrote a blackmailing letter to Manderström demanding money and threatening publication of the correspondence if his demands were refused. ... Although it is known that initially Manderström did not succumb to the blackmail, he might have paid Poles later, in 1868, a certain sum of money. After Manderström’s death in 1873, Poles repeated his demands, directing them this time to King Oscar II, who transmitted the case to Manderström’s family. It is not known whether the widow replied at all to this new attempt of blackmail; Manderström’s letters were never published.

[1565] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 8 OCTOBER 1875

MS: Berg. Summary: B&C, II, p. 397. Published: BGLL, III, p. 100.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 8th Oct: 1875

Dear Mr Bentley,

A line to say that I am going abroad for a month or six weeks – to lay in a stock of health (if I can) for the coming winter. I hope to write the first monthly part of the new story for the “Bar” at Brussels¹ – so as to be within easy reach of the English post. (I will send you the Mss by registered letter-post – with instructions for forwarding proofs if you conveniently can). Then to go on to Berlin and Dresden.² Any letters addressed to care of Charles J. Ward, Esqre | Messrs Coutts & Co | 59. Strand will be forwarded to me.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | The Editor can announce me whenever he pleases. If he mentions the “Story” it may be well to add a short story for the better information of readers.

George Bentley Esq

1. Temple Bar, which published The Two Destinies from January 1876.

2. Though WC indeed stayed in Brussels during the second half of October, his other ports of call were Antwerp and The Hague in Holland rather than the German cities he mentions here – see [1567] to Nina Lehmann of 26 October 1875.

[1566] TO BERTHE SCHLESINGER,¹ 17 OCTOBER 1875

MS: Congress. Photocopy: Kansas (MS P557:A5). Published: BGLL, III, p. 100 (as to Louise Schlesinger).

Hotel de Flandre | Brussels | Sunday October 17th 1875

My dear Mrs Schlesinger,

Your very kind note has followed me to this place.

I need hardly say that I should have been only too happy to make one among your guests, if adverse Fate had not placed me on the wrong side of the Channel. As it is, I can only trust that you will kindly accept my thanks and my apologies, and believe that I regret not being able to accept your invitation.

With kindest regards, | Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Berthe Schlesinger, née de Pourtales (1855–1905), who, on 14 September 1871 at the age of sixteen, had married the Sebastian Schlesinger, then thirty-three years old. The couple were then visiting London – see [1567] to Nina Lehmann of 26 October 1875.

[1567] TO NINA LEHMANN, 26 OCTOBER 1875

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 228; B&C, II, p. 397.

Hotel de Flandre | Bruxelles | 26th October 1875

Dearest Padrona,

The address must plead my apology. I need not say how sorry I am to have missed the dinner with you and the Sebastian S's.¹ But the sea is between us – I may waft my regrets and wishes, but I may not waft myself.

I have been here for a fortnight building up my shattered constitution, and writing the first monthly part of a new story which is to appear in “Temple Bar” for the next four or five months, dating from New Year’s Day 1876.² I hope I shall have some proofs for you before that time.

To-day, having finished my number, I go to have another look at Rubens, and the Cathedral, at Antwerp³ – then to shake hands with my Dutch publishers at the Hague⁴ – then back here – and then to England early in next month. I will not fail to report myself in Berkeley Square.⁵

I am delighted to hear of Fred’s safe arrival.⁶ Give him my love and good wishes when you write.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

I hope the Sebastians will be in London when I return.

-
1. Sebastian Schlesinger and his wife Berthe – see [1566] to her of 17 October 1875.
 2. The Two Destinies in fact ran in Bentley’s Temple Bar from January to September 1876.
 3. The Cathedral of Our Lady in Antwerp (the birthplace of Rubens) holds several of his paintings and there is a statue in Groenplaats, the square in which the church stands.
 4. Belinfante Brothers, who WC had made his authorised Dutch publishers in autumn 1869.
 5. The Lehmann’s London residence at 15 Berkeley Square.
 6. From his trip to the United States – see [1560] to William Seaver of 29 September.

[1568] TO CHARLES WARD, 26 OCTOBER 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 101.

Hotel de Flandre | Brussels | 26th Oct: 1875

My dear Ward,

Please do me a favour. I want the accompanying manuscript sent by Registered letter-post to

Messrs Harper & Brothers

Franklin Square | New York (City) | U.S. America

Add to the address in the left-hand corner of the envelope my name – and the right man at Harpers will open it.¹ Please despatch by the earliest mail.

(In great haste) | Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

We are off to Antwerp today. (All well) Send me one line, by return of post, to say that you have received the Mss safely. You ought to get it tomorrow (Wednesday) and then I can receive your letter at Antwerp the next day (Thursday). Address me

Hotel Saint Antoine | Place Verte | Antwerp

1. The first serial instalment of The Two Destinies – see [1567] to Nina Lehmann of the same day.

[1569] TO WILLIAM GALE, 28 OCTOBER 1875

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 229; BGLL, III, p. 101.

Brussels | 28th October 1875

Sir,

Your kind letter, and its enclosure have followed me to this place.

I beg that you will thank the members of The Graphic Society for doing me the honour of electing me an Honorary Visitor to the Conversazione for this ensuing year.¹

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W^m Gale Esqr

1. This was a renewal of the honour – see [1487] to William Gale of 29 October 1874.

[1570] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 28 OCTOBER 1875

MS: Unknown (formerly owned by Nuel Pharr Davis). Extract: Davis, p. 236.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 102.

I wrote ‘Major Namby’ without any idea of “intending it for public readings.”² Public readers simply took the story without asking my leave, and (it is needless to add) without considering themselves under any pecuniary obligation to me. In the present barbarous state of the laws of England, as regards literary property, I have no remedy, and no power of preventing this sort of piracy.

1. Davis writes: ‘His sketch was so feelingly written that people who gave public readings at once took it over as their stock in trade. They believed Wilkie had composed it especially for their use, and one of them later innocently wrote to express appreciation. Wilkie disabused him with the following rude reply:’.

2. ‘Pray Employ Major Namby!’ first appeared in All The Year Round (4 June 1859), pp. 136–141. WC must later have given permission for the story to be included in a book of ‘Selected Readings’ – see [2405] to the Revd John A. Jennings of 7 March 1885.

[2992] TO LLEWELLYN JEWITT,¹ 29 OCTOBER 1875

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie’s (Sale 5621, 7 June 2005, South Kensington, Lot 12). Published: A&C1, pp. 49–50.

Brussels | 29th October 1875

Dear Sir,

I have been travelling – and there has been some occasional delay in forwarding my letters.² This circumstance will, I hope, plead my apology for not having written to you sooner.

Having already subscribed to the Testimonial, I must beg you to excuse me if I refrain from availing myself of the proposal which you are so good as to address to me.³

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Llewellyn Jewitt Esqr

1. Llewellyn Frederick William Jewitt (c. 1816–1886: ODNB), engraver, art historian, archaeologist and Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. Friend of Samuel Carter Hall, editor of the Art Journal, with whom he wrote The Stately Homes of England (1874–77).

2. WC seems to have left London for the continent on or about 10 October, returning around a month later. He withdrew £50 ‘Travelling exps’ from his bank on 8 October (Coumts: WC).

3. The nature of the proposal remains unclear, though the testimonial might be that of £1,600 presented to Samuel Carter Hall and his wife Anna Maria on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary, 20 September 1874.

[1571] TO HENRY HERMAN, 8 NOVEMBER 1875

MS: Illinois.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 102.

90 Gloucester Place | 8th Nov 1875

My dear Sir,

I return the first Act of “Miss Gwilt” – with many thanks. So far as I can now judge the stair business appears to be admirably arranged – and I can only leave it to your knowledge and experience – in which I have perfect confidence – to prepare the piece for production. I hope to attend all the later rehearsals myself.²

You will well understand the importance of insisting on the actors being “letter-perfect” – in the case of a piece which tells an unusually intricate story – to an English audience, which is slow at following any story.

I telegraphed my approval of your proposal respecting Mr Boyne,³ from Calais, on Friday last.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

H. Herman, Esqr

1. With this letter is a sheet on which is written in WC’s hand: ‘Miss Gwilt | Act II | Prompt Copy’.

2. The run of the play began at the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool, on 9 December 1875, and the London opening was at the Globe Theatre on 15 April 1876. Herman generally appears in the Globe programmes as joint Acting Manager, along with R. P. Emery.

3. The actor Leonard Boyne, who played the part of Midwinter in Miss Gwilt.

[1572] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 8 NOVEMBER 1875

MS: Unknown. On sale: Much Ado, 108 Washington St, Marblehead, MA, May 2002.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 103.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

8th November 1875

1. It is unclear whether this is the fragment of a letter or merely an autograph.

[3251] TO HENRY HERMAN, 9 NOVEMBER 1875¹

MS: Illinois.² Published: A&C9, p. 30.

My dear sir,

Many thanks for your suggestion. The end of the act was originally written as you propose – and altered for reasons too many to be mentioned here. I think it likely you are right. At any rate we will try the experiment. On the preceding leaf is the end as it was originally written.³ The one change wanted is to give Dr Downward the line “That is the man” – and to drop the curtain.

Vy truly yours | W.C.

I returned you the first act by yesterdays [sic] post to care of Miss Cavendish Imperial Hotel.

1. Dating from [1571] to Henry Herman, 8 November 1875, enclosing Act I.
2. In a prompt book for Miss Gwilt as performed at the Adelphi Theatre, Liverpool, 9 December 1875.
3. Written in WC's hand on the first leaf before the letter begins is the alternative ending:

Miss Gwilt | Act 2. Page 42
Manuel (looking) | Is that the man?
Dr. D. (Dropping the curtain) | That is the man.
The End of The | Second Act | =

[1573] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 10 NOVEMBER 1875

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 103.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 10th Novr 1875

Dear Mr Bentley

I returned from my little trip on the Continent yesterday¹ – much the better for the change. You too are, I hope, in good health.

With this you will receive the copy for the first monthly part of my new story.² It is most important to me to be able to send it in proof to Australia by the mail of the 17th of this month. Will you kindly send it to the printers at your early convenience – to be set up as soon as possible?

I possess no copy of the Mss (the one copy made has gone to America) – or I would have sent it to you earlier by post. Under the circumstances, I did not quite like to trust the Belgian postal service.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Though [1571] to Henry Herman of 8 November suggests that WC was already back in London by that date.
 2. The Two Destinies.

[1574] TO [E. J.] ODELL,¹ 11 NOVEMBER 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 103.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W | 11th November 1875²

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to Mr Odell, and begs (at the request of H. Herman) to send him the part of “Doctor Downward” in the drama of “Miss Gwilt”, so that he may judge for himself whether he will play it or not.²

Mr Odell is requested to be so good as to telegraph his decision today to Mr Herman at the Theatre Royal Belfast – as it is of serious importance that the part should be cast immediately.

-
1. Probably the comic actor Edwin John Odell (1834–1928), whose benefit performance as Hamlet in Poole's Hamlet Travestie had taken place at the Globe on 14 November 1874 (see the Times, 16 November 1874, p. 5).
 2. WC writes the address and date at the foot of the second sheet.
 3. Odell seems to have refused the part, as Downward was eventually played by Arthur Cecil Blunt – see [1641] to him of 1 August 1876.

[1575] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 12 NOVEMBER 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/159). Published: B&C, II, p. 398.

90 Gloucester Place | 12th Novr 1875

My dear Tindell,

We are just back from Brussels and Antwerp – much the better for the change.¹ I wish you had been with us. You would have returned a new man.

A friend of Poles (to whom, of course, he has behaved in the most infamous manner) is raising a small subscription to ~~the~~ bury him.² I respect the friend's practical Christianity and give two pounds – but I privately think the money would have been more appropriately bestowed on a living object of charity, not an irreclaimable scoundrel. His friends have been written to – and his papers are in a lawyers' [sic] hands.

Yours ever | WC

I am hard at work again .

1. WC was away from 8 October to around 7 November.

2. Stefan Poles, who had proved to be an entirely unsatisfactory dramatic agent, died of emphysema and eclampsia in Middlesex Hospital on 5 November 1875, aged 36. The death certificate was in the name of Stephen Poles (GRO).

[1576] TO HUGH BIERS,¹ [15–17 NOVEMBER] 1875²

MS: Melbourne (Box 502/6), note with Temple Bar proofs of The Two Destinies. Published: BGLL, III, p. 104 (as to Henry C. Biers).

Note to Mr Biers: –

Any periodicals issued weekly which reprint “The Two Destinies” must so arrange the republication as never to let it be in advance of any part of the monthly publication in London.

N.B. The monthly publication in London always begins on the 1st of each month

1. WC's agent in Melbourne – see [3177] to him of August 1873.

2. The dating is conjectural, but presumably the note accompanied the first instalment of copy of the novel, and was posted several weeks before the date of publication in London. Two sets of proofs are found at Melbourne, both bearing on the front of the first instalment the stamp of ‘W^M CLOWES & SONS | . . . | STAMFORD STREET’, the printers of Temple Bar, and dated respectively on 15 and 23 November 1875. In [1573] to George Bentley of 10 November 1875, moreover, WC states specifically that he needs to send proofs of the first number to Australia by the mail of 17 November.

[1577] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 20 NOVEMBER 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 5/2). Published: BGLL, III, p. 104

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London | 20th Nov 1875

The Two Destinies | by | Wilkie Collins

No time before the mail goes, to correct the whole of the MS copy of Part 2. It is written and will follow by next Tuesday's mail. Pages 27–31 (both inclusive) complete the copy for the second monthly part.

WC

[1578] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 22 NOVEMBER 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 105.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 22nd Nov 1875

Dear Sirs,

I have been travelling – or I should sooner have returned to you the enclosed (protested) bill of Messrs Duncan Sherman & Co. I sincerely hope that you will recover some part of the loss.

It gives me real pleasure to hear that Mr Hunter is at last on the way back to health. I beg him to accept my hearty congratulations.¹

I shall soon send to you some proofs of a new story which I am writing.² The periodical right is sold to Messrs Harper – the new Canadian Act allowing his periodicals circulation in Canada. All therefore that I have to propose to your house is the republication in book-form. The story will begin periodically in January 1876 (appearing simultaneously in “Temple Bar” and in Harper’s Magazine) – and it will run (so far as I know) for four or five months before it is completed.

Believe me | Dear Sirs | Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

1. See [1563] to Hunter, Rose of 6 October 1875.

2. The Two Destinies.

[1579] TO GEORGE BENTLEY 29 NOVEMBER 1875

MS: Unknown. Photocopy: Ross, our copy text. Published: BGLL, III, p. 105.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Monday 29th Novr 1875

Dear Mr Bentley,

Here is the second Part of The Two Destinies,¹ ready for the printer. It will be a favour if I can have the proofs at your early convenience and theirs.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Chapters 5–8 of The Two Destinies, published in Temple Bar in February 1876.

[3363] TO KATE FIELD, 2 DECEMBER 1875

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C13, pp8-9.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
2nd Decr 1875

Dear Miss Field,

I have been away from London – and the opportunity of yesterday was my first opportunity of calling in Sloane Street.¹ It was a great disappointment not to find you at home.

I am in daily expectation of being obliged to go out of town again for a week or so.² May I hope that the day of your departure is deferred – and that I shall have a chance of finding you still in London, if I call on my return – about the 10th of this month?

In the meantime, I left the play with the servant [del] yesterday afternoon. The serious obstacle to its success, in its present form, lies (in my opinion) in the despicable character of the very unheroic hero. The first change to make is to make a man of him.³

Pray forgive a very hurriedly-written letter, and believe me
yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. WC had been away to Brussels and Antwerp – see [1575] to Tindell, 12 November 1875 – but was back by around 7 November.
 2. To Liverpool to supervise the production of Miss Gwilt at the Alhambra Theatre. He arrived on 6 December and left on the 11th.
 3. The third and last in a series of letters to Field about a dramatization she was writing of an unidentified modern novel (see [1550] of 28 July 1875 and [1557] of 10 September 1875, both to her).

[1580] TO HENRY HERMAN, 4 DECEMBER 1875

MS: Illinois. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 105–106 (as to Edward Saker), amended A&C9, p. 33.¹

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 4th Decr 1875

My dear Sir,

When your telegraph arrived, I was unfortunately too busily occupied by a literary engagement to be able to reply. Since then, Miss Cavendish (to whom I have written)² will have told you that I made the experiment of writing the argument – and found it simply impossible to compress that intricate story within any reasonable limits. The thing is not to be done without leaving out essential “threads” in the narrative – and producing a result which will simply mystify the public. If the story of the piece requires five acts to tell it properly – it cannot be told in a newspaper column.³

I sent to Miss Cavendish by yesterday’s post a sketch of a bill – with titles to the two last acts (forgotten in the printed copy). For the rest, I am sure I may trust you.

I am not well enough to be able to travel at night. On Monday afternoon, I hope to reach Liverpool, by the train which arrives at 5 p.m. I go to the Adelphi Hotel

If the production of the piece can be put off till the 9th, it should be done. If not, I must see the 4th and 5th acts rehearsed first, on Tuesday – in case I may find it necessary to make alterations which will require additional rehearsals, on the same day, of those dangerous Acts of the piece. The first three acts – under your experienced superintendence – may be trusted to go well – always provided that the actors know their parts thoroughly.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Found in the Miss Gwilt prompt book at Illinois, this is clearly another of the letters to Herman concerning the run of the play at the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool, from 9 December 1875, the first being [1571] to him of 8 November.
 2. Actress who had played Mercy Merrick in The New Magdalen from 1873 and was to perform the title role in Miss Gwilt.
 3. Presumably, in his telegram, Herman had requested a summary of the plot of the play for the purpose of newspaper advertisement.

[3219] TO [MARIE SAKER], [6–11] DECEMBER 1875

MS: LRO (920 MD 411), p. 35.¹ Published: A&C8, pp. 15–16 (dated December 1875).

“A man walks on the grass, listens to the birds, looks at the sky – and fastens down a hatch on his brother man! Who can fathom the abysses of the human heart!”

From “Miss Gwilt” | (The dramatised “Armada”) | by | Wilkie Collins²

-
1. In Album Amicorum of Marie Saker, née O’Beirne, who married the theatre manager Edward Saker in 1874. Saker was the manager at the Alexandra Theatre when Miss Gwilt played there from 9 December 1875. It appears to have been a short run and was certainly over by the end of December. WC arrived in Liverpool on the 6th and left on the 11th. The extract is thus likely to date from that period.

2. Followed in another hand “This is I, Hamlet the Same!” and signed (illegibly), 1876.

[1581] TO EDWARD SAKER, 12 DECEMBER 1875

MS: Wolff Collection (1345b). Published: Wolff, p. 257; BGLL, III, pp. 106–107.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 12th December 1875

Dear Mr Saker,

Incessant occupation has left me no earlier opportunity than this of presenting my excuses to you and to Mrs Saker for my absence from your dinner-table yesterday. As I think I told you, I was obliged to leave for London by the morning train, and so deprive myself very unwillingly of the pleasure of being your guest.

I take this opportunity of repeating the expression of my thanks for the valuable assistance that I received at the rehearsals from everyone connected with your Stage, and for the unremitting zeal and kindness with which that assistance was rendered to me. I shall always have a pleasant recollection of my association with the Alexandra Theatre.¹

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Edward Saker Esqre

1. See [3219] to Marie Saker of [6–11] December 1875.

[1582] TO WILLIAM MOY THOMAS, 14 DECEMBER 1875

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 230; BGLL, III, p. 107

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 14th December 1875

Dear Sir,

I am so hard at work just now that it will be – I regret to say – impossible for me to attend the meeting tomorrow.¹

So far as I can see – our proposed alliance with the American authors (headed by a writer so illustrious and so venerable as Bryant)² has many considerations to recommend it, with no serious drawbacks. If the American writers join us they publicly declare themselves (as I understand it) in favour of international copyright with their country. I don’t know whether “proxies” are allowed at our meetings. If they are, my vote is for receiving the American authors.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Moy Thomas Esqre

1. Presumably of the Association to Protect the Rights of Authors.

2. William Cullen Bryant (1794–1878), distinguished poet, at that time a partner with John Bigelow in the firm owning the New York Evening Post. He had been one of the guests at William Seaver’s breakfast in honour of WC in New York in October 1873. Bryant had been elected president of the American Copyright Club in New York back in 1843, and had frequently signed petitions to Congress favouring international copyright. Whether the proposed alliance was with the American Copyright Club has not been clarified.

[1583] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 16 DECEMBER 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/160).¹ Summary: B&C, II, p. 398. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 107–109

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 16th Decr 1875
Power of attorney

My dear Tindell,

Help! help! professional help!

I am so busy with making arrangements for performing the dramatised “Armada” (“Miss Gwilt”) all over the civilised earth (The piece was produced at Liverpool on the 9th under my direction – and proved to be really an immense success)² – and with writing my new serial story³ – that I have really hardly a moment to spare. Here is my “case” – if you can manage it.

(1). Can I have a power of attorney drawn out, investing my Australian Agent, with the sole authority to represent me in Melbourne, and throughout Australia and New Zealand, in respect of all new dramas of mine produced in the Colony – and of all new stories reprinted and published in the Colony? Name and address:

H. Biers | Office of Crown Lands and Survey | Melbourne⁴

If two powers are required to invest my man with authority to represent me as dramatist and novelist – then let one power be drawn out, relating to my dramas alone. This instrument ought to go to Melbourne by the mail of the 24th of this month. The necessity for taking some action of this kind is plain. Australia swarms with literary thieves – and I can only be effectually represented by a person who is fortified by legal authority of some sort. So ends the first case.

Second Case.

(1) Can you send to the Italian ~~Consulate~~ Consul’s Office, to enquire where a copy of the International Copyright Treaty between England and Italy can be obtained. I can get no reliable information as to the registering of new works in Italy – the Treaty must exist, and it would be of the greatest use to me.⁵ (2) to enquire whether the Consular seal and certificate are absolutely necessary, as part and parcel of any authority which I may grant to translate any new book of mine into Italian. (3) Do you see any objection to my supplying my Italian Agent with a power of attorney authorising him to act for me in all literary matters, relating to the Italian translations and publication of my new books.

=

This looks like a worrying letter – but what am I to do? I am beset by thieves in Australia and Italy, and I only want to be able to protect myself.

=

I should add that my Australian Agent is an old and tried friend.

=

My Italian Agent is a stranger – who occupies an official position at Florence, and who is managing the production of “The New Magdalen” on the Italian Stage. In this latter case, could the Power be granted for a certain time only – or could I strengthen his hands in any other way (by any other form of writing) – say for a year from this present date?

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

If you can get through this letter – tell me whether I shall follow it by putting in an appearance at Essex Street. Monday afternoon would do for me.

Of course if it is necessary that I should see you before Monday – you have only to say so and to make the hour not earlier than 4 P.M. if convenient to you.

1. There are two annotations, probably in Tindell’s hand: to the left of the address, ‘3 Nov 1860’, perhaps relating to the copyright agreement between Great Britain and Sardinia; on the second page, ‘Harry or Hugh’, obviously referring to the given name of WC’s Australian agent, H. Biers. With the letter is a pencil note in Tindell’s hand (Glasgow, 891117/153), on the verso of a brief letter from another Tindell client dated 16 December 1875. The note reads: “Miss Gwilt” a drama already played | “The Two destinies” a novel | Italy | restricted power – six months as to novels & plays | Albert Caccia | Florence | make arrangements & to receive moneys’.

2. The parenthetical sentence here is in fact a marginal comment by WC, with the place of insertion flagged by a pair of dotted saltires.

3. The Two Destinies in Temple Bar.

4. Hugh Biers acted as WC’s Australian agent until his death in 1886 – see [3177] to him of August 1873.

5. There was in fact no such treaty – see the note to [1544] to Tindell of 21 June 1875.

[1584] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 21 DECEMBER 1875

MS: Glasgow (891117/161). Published: BGLL, III, p. 109

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. Tuesday 21st Decr 1875

My dear Tindell,

Here is the Italian's name and address:

Albert Caccia | Secrétaire à la Direction Générale de la dette publique Florence | Italy.¹

=

I will be with you at 1 o'clock to-morrow.

Yours truly | WC

1. His agent in Italy – see [1583] to Tindell of 16 December 1875.

[1585] TO CARLOTTA LECLERCQ, 27 DECEMBER 1875

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 109–110.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th Decr 1875

My dear Carlotta,

Pray forgive a late reply and a brief reply to your kind letter. I am suffering from rheumatism.

My “Armadale” piece went some time since to my agent in New York¹ – and the “casting” of “Miss Gwilt” is so far as I know already settled. Until I hear again from New York, I cannot write more definitely.²

This time, the novel is not like the “Magdalen” a novel ready made to the dramatist's hands. My Armadale play is all but a new work – with scenes upon scenes which are not in the book. A pirated Armadale on the stage would be a conspicuous failure – except in the hands of an original dramatist (and he doesn't exist in the U.S.). The stage-versions done when the book first appeared in America all failed.

My best thanks for your kind wishes – which I heartily reciprocate.

Yours afftly | WC

1. Possibly the firm of Samuel French & Son – see [1633] to T. H. French of 24 June 1876.

2. In fact the play was not performed in New York until 1879, when it opened at Wallack's Theatre on 5 June, with Ada Cavendish in the starring role.

[1586] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 27 DECEMBER 1875

MS: Lewis Collection, damaged,¹ tipped into a copy of The Correspondence of Leigh Hunt (2 vols, London: Smith, Elder, 1862), II, p. 251. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 110–111.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th Decr 1875

My dear Palgrave Simpson,

You sent me a letter (from Mr Sasse)² which, in your own words, “evidently implied an absence of all trustworthiness in Mr Bernstein”,³ and you added that “this was the second time that doubts had been thrown on his character”. It is surely one man's duty to tell another when this sort of attack is made on his reputation? I thought it (and I think it still) my duty to Mr Bernstein to let him know what was being written about him behind his back – more especially as it had produced sufficient effect on your mind to make you feel uneasy about the fate of the piece – after I had previously vouched for Mr Bernstein as a perfectly trustworthy man.

So far as I can venture to offer an opinion, in the present state of the affair, it seems to me that you (or Clayton)⁴ might write to Mr Bernstein – saying whatever you think right on this question of Mr Sasse's attack on his character – to inqui[re] what he had [done] towards produci[ng “]All For Her”⁵ on the German stage, before he returned the manuscript. Until you know this, it does not seem to me to be easy to decide whether this course that he has taken in sending back the play, is, or is not, detrimental to the interests of the piece.

Forgive this late answer to your letter. I have been suffering from rheumatism.

With hearty good wishes to you and to Clayt[on for] the New Year,

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

1. A circular hole has been cut from the second leaf of the folding notepaper, just above the signature, with some loss of text. The words in square brackets towards the end of the letter indicate restorations that are to some extent conjectural.

2. Unidentified, but presumably a German.

3. WC's agent in Berlin – see [1456] to Florence Marryat of 3 June 1874.

4. The actor-manger John Clayton (1843–88) – see [1304] to Palgrave Simpson, 3 March 1873.

5. All For Her was written by Palgrave Simpson and opened at the Mirror Theatre (formerly the Duke's Theatre) in Holborn on 18 October 1875 (Nicoll). We have not been able to discover how the story of the German adaptation ends, but WC clearly continued to employ Bernstein as his agent – see [1596] to him of 8 February 1876.

[1587] TO LAURA SEYMOUR, 30 DECEMBER 1875

MS: Noel. Published: Clareson, p. 112; B&C, II, p. 399.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 30th Decr 1875

My dear Mrs Seymour,

I had hoped to be able to call today and thank you for the delicious brawn.² But the horrid necessity of /“/keeping in advance of the printer's”/³ chains me to my desk – so my gratitude must exhale itself on paper. When I say that I don't go to bed without a bit of the brawn to keep me company, you will understand that your present is appreciated as it ought to be.

In a little while I hope to have some proofs for you to read.⁴ Meanwhile, Caroline sends you some German cake which has just arrived from Berlin – and begs you to accept it. I had asked her to go and see how Reade was (not being able to go myself) – and so she was unfortunately out when you called.

My love to Reade

Yrs affly | WC

We had great luck with the Dramatic “Armada” at Liverpool.⁵ The [del] audience received the piece with open arms. It never was in jeopardy for a moment.⁶

1. Black, Gothic, engraved type ranged right.

2. Jellied meat made from a boiled pig's head. Clareson and B&C wrongly have ‘prawn’.

3. Both quotation marks are in fainter ink and thus appear to have been inserted later, perhaps as WC was checking the what he had written.

4. The Two Destinies began its serialisation in Temple Bar in January 1876 running through until September.

5. Miss Gwilt opened at the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool, on 9 December 1875 and transferred to London in April. See [1609] to Laura Seymour, 19 April 1876.

6. The postscript is squeezed in between the signature and the bottom of the page.

[1589] TO JANE WARD, 10 JANUARY 1876

MS: Private. Published: B&C, II, p. 399.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 10th January 1876

My dear Jane,

Thank you heartily for that very kind and very pretty token of your remembrance of me on my birthday. I keep it in my study, and look at it while I am at work, and try (quite ineffectually) to forget that Time has turned me into an elderly gentleman of fifty two!²

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

1. Black, Gothic, engraved type ranged right.

2. The gift has not been identified, but might be a framed photograph from WC's youth or the like.

[1590] TO FORD MADOX BROWN,¹ 15 JANUARY 1876

MS: Rylands (Eng.MS.1235). Published: BGLL, III, p. 112.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th January 1876

My dear Sir,

I beg that you will accept my best thanks for the volumes containing the literary remains of your son.²

My time happens to be very closely occupied just now – and I have only, thus far, made myself acquainted with the Memoir, and the story called “The Black Swan”. I can, with perfect sincerity, assure you that I have been touched and interested by what I have read. I see in “The Black Swan” – through the inevitable defects of youth and inexperience – a real vocation for the difficult art of writing fiction, and I entirely agree with the author of the Memoir that the untimely death of your son is a loss to literature which all friends of Art have true reason to regret. In this sense at least, I may ask you, and do ask you, to accept the expression of my true sympathy.

Believe me, my dear Sir, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Ford Madox Brown Esqre

1. Ford Madox Brown (1821–93: ODNB), painter, member of the Pre-Raphaelite circle, friend of CAC and John Everett Millais.

2. Oliver Madox Brown (1855–74: ODNB), Ford Madox Brown’s eldest son who died aged nineteen on 5 November 1874. The book The Dwale Bluth, Hebditch’s Legacy, and Other Literary Remains, eds William Michael Rossetti and Dante Gabriel Rossetti (London: Marston, 1876), was in WC’s library on his death (Baker 2002, pp. 82–83). There are similar letters in the collection of Oliver Madox Brown’s papers in Rylands, from: George Eliot, 20 December 1875; ‘Ouida’, 14 February 1876; and the painter Frederic James Shields, 21 December 1875.

[1591] TO HENRY HERMAN, 15 JANUARY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 112.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Saturday Janry 15/76

My dear Sir,

I shall be very glad to see you if you can favour me with a call here on Monday afternoon next at four o’Clock.¹

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

H. Herman Eqre

1. Presumably concerning the production of Miss Gwilt, then touring the provinces.

[1592] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 24 JANUARY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3).¹ Summary: B&C, II, p. 400. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 113–114.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
January 24th 1876

Dear Sirs,

I must beg you to forgive this late reply to your kind letter. Absence from home, and great pressure of occupation are my only excuses.

It has given me the greatest pleasure to hear that my good friend, Mr Hunter is steadily improving in health. These lines, I sincerely hope, find him completely restored in strength and spirits.

I enclose the documents which you kindly sent to me, filled in and signed² – together with the necessary “Analysis” on the next leaf. But, I have no wish to publish “The Two Destinies” periodically in any Canadian journal. After my experience of “the Desbarats Company” and of other Canadian newspapers, I prefer giving the Messrs Harper – who have always treated me honourably and liberally – as complete a monopoly as I can (under the new law) of the periodical publication of my work in Canada. I have told them this – and of course I wish to abide by my word. But, if any Canadian newspaper attempts to reprint the story, under these circumstances – in that case, I will presume upon your invariable kindness to me, and will ask you to stop the piracy by any means which suggest themselves to you as being the most efficacious. For the rest, I only wait a few days to send you a corrected set of proofs for the Canadian re-publication in book-form.³

With renewed thanks and with all good wishes,

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The proofs have reached me, while I write. I send them by Registered book-post – by tomorrow’s (U.S.) mail.

Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co

Brief analysis of the story of “The Two Destinies”

The book tells the story of two lovers, who are separated at an early period in their lives. They meet again, after a lapse of years, under circumstances which prevent them from recognising each other, and which appear to oppose an insurmountable barrier to their union. Events occur which lead unexpectedly to a recognition on either side. The obstacles to their marriage are removed; and they become, what their “Destinies” have fore ordained them, from the first, to be – Man and Wife.

-
1. On the blank fourth page in another hand: ‘Letter | Wilkie Collins | Jany 24 1876 | —| Ans 16 March 1876 | —’.
 2. The documents referred to – two forms relating to the registration of copyright under the act of 1875 in the Office of the Canadian Ministry of Agriculture, in the case where the applicant is a British subject resident in Britain (signed on 24 January 1876 and witnessed by Caroline and Carrie Graves) – are also found in the Parrish Collection. WC’s The Two Destinies appeared as a single volume of 327 pages, bound in green cloth with gold lettering, from Hunter, Rose of Toronto in 1876. It bears the necessary legal notice: ‘Entered according to the Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, by WILKIE COLLINS, in the Office of the Minister of Agriculture’.
 3. Copies are held in both the BL and the National Library of Canada.

[1593] TO NINA LEHMANN, 25 JANUARY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 231; B&C, II, p. 400.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 25th Jany 1876

Dearest Padrona

I am never “out of town” to you. On Saturday Feby 5th – then with the greatest pleasure.

This is every way a sad day – I am just writing a line to Boucicault² – and this was dear Charley’s birthday.³

Yours affly | WC

-
1. WC uses Gothic printed paper with the address centred.
 2. Dion Boucicault’s eldest son, Dion William (b. 1855), had died in a train collision at Abbot’s Ripton, north of Huntingdon, on 21 January 1876; see the detailed report, ‘The Abbot’s Ripton Accident’, Times, 24 January 1876, p. 10, which WC had perhaps read.
 3. Charles Collins had died around three years earlier of stomach cancer.

[3103] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 27 JANUARY 1876

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C4, p. 22.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 27th January 1876

-
1. Presumably an autograph hunter.

[1594] TO CHARLES READE, 2 FEBRUARY 1876

MS: Noel, damaged.¹ Extract: Clareson, p. 116. Summary: B&C, II, p. 400. Published: BGLL, III, p. 114.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Feby 2nd 1876

My dear Reade,

My luck is against me. Your kind invitation reaches me just after I have promised to go to another dinner on Sunday.² I need not say that I am disappointed. Better luck next time – and this time, forgive me.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

Another old friend gone – in Forster!³ He was angry with me because I did not “consult him” before I went to America! I am glad to think now that I was never angry with him.

-
1. The second leaf of the folding notepaper is torn but there appears to be no loss of text.
 2. WC writes on a Wednesday, so the invitation was presumably for Sunday, 6 February. WC dined with the Lehmanns on Saturday 5 February – see [1593] to Nina Lehmann, 25 January 1876.
 3. John Forster had died the day before, 1 February 1876.

[1595] TO HENRI TESTARD,¹ 2 FEBRUARY 1876

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), associated envelope in Parrish.² Published: Coleman, p. 233 (with recipient unidentified and dated 2 July 1876); BGLL, III, p. 115.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 2nd Feby 1876

Dear Sir,

Your kind letter again reaches me too late. The right of translating “The Two Destinies” into French (and into other foreign languages) has been already purchased. I am very glad to hear that you like the story, so far.³

I have nothing in my drawer to offer you. Everything that I have written is published and translated.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Translator into French – see [1549] to him of 25 July 1875.
 2. Directed to ‘Monsieur Henri Testard | Stone Street | Cranbrook | Kent’, postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 6 | FE 2 | 76’.
 3. The Two Destinies was serialized in Temple Bar from January 1876, so the second instalment had just appeared.

[1596] TO MR BERNSTEIN,¹ 8 FEBRUARY 1876

MS: Kraków (Acc.Ms. 1835.4). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 115–116.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
February 8th 1876

Dear Mr Bernstein,

I send to you under another cover (by registered letter-post) – “Miss Gwilt” partly reprinted, and with all the last corrections. This is the only copy for stage representation. We appear at The Globe Theatre here, at Easter.² It is quite another piece that I am writing for the Prince of Wales’s Theatre.³ Only the first act is done of this work.

Let me hear that you have got “Miss Gwilt” and believe me – with kindest regards from all of us –

Yours vy truly | Wilkie Collins

I am very glad to hear that the play and the story are both liked. An American woman whom I never heard of in my life, threatens to dramatise “The Two Destinies”!⁴ I write by this mail to stop her.

1. WC's agent in Berlin – see [1456] to Florence Marryat of 3 June 1874. We have not been able to trace the given name.
2. Miss Gwilt opened at the Globe on 15 April 1876, following the run at the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool.
3. The Moonstone, WC's next drama after Miss Gwilt. The play was originally suggested for the Prince of Wales's under the management of the Bancrofts with Mr and Mrs Kendal to play Franklin Blake and Rachel Verinder. Both WC and the Bancrofts, however, considered the play too melodramatic in its treatment for the Prince of Wales's and it was eventually produced at the Olympic running for 54 performances from 17 September to 17 November 1877. See Bancroft 1888, II, pp. 62–63.
4. There is no record of a dramatic version of The Two Destinies in either Britain or the USA.

[1597] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 28 FEBRUARY 1876

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 116.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 28th Feby 1876

Dear Mr Bentley,

Thank you for the cheque for the “March Number”.¹

I am glad to hear that you are holding out well against our native climate (at this time of year). I am rheumatic but I don't complain – as long as my eyes escape. Poor Beard will be long before he is his jovial self again. He is still confined to his bed.²

Always glad to see you when you come my way; and generally at home until 3.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq

1. A credit of £48 ‘of R Bentley & Son’ was entered in WC's bank account on 26 February (Coutts: WC). He was paid at the rate of £2 per page (see [1561] to Bentley of 30 September 1875). Chapters 9–13 of The Two Destinies occupied pp. 289–313 of the March number of Temple Bar but the total counted for 24 pages, as the text started nearly half way down p. 289 and occupied less than half of p. 313.

2. Frank Beard is still reported ill in [1602] to Charles Reade of 21 March 1876.

[3220] TO HENRY HERMAN,¹ LATE 1875-EARLY 1876

MS: Unknown. Cited: Dunkel, p. 16.² Summary: A&C8, p. 16 (as to R.C. Carton). Amended: A&C12 p. 17.

Topic: Recommending Arthur Wing Pinero to Herman for the part of Darch in Armadale when it transferred to the Globe Theatre, London in April 1876.

1. The addressee of this letter cannot be R. C. Carton, as Dunkel states. This was the stage name of Richard Claude Critchett (10 May 1856–1 April 1928: baptism and death records, Ancestry.com); however, he was aged only nineteen at this time, had no play performed until May 1885, and was never a manager at the Globe Theatre. Rather the recipient must be Henry Herman, who is named as ‘Acting Manager’ in the Globe Theatre programme for the opening night of Miss Gwilt, whose first play was performed in May 1875 (Nicoll, p. 305, p. 419), and with whom WC was in correspondence around this time – see [1508], [3251], [1571], [1580], [1591], all to Herman. Carton was in fact a contemporary and friend of Pinero (Dawick, p. 55).

2. Dunkel writes:

Pinero moved to Liverpool, with good recommendations from the Wyndhams. Again he was lucky and got a part as a “walking gentleman” in a play written by the well-known novelist, Wilkie Collins. The part was unimportant. What counted was that the popular Mr. Collins had written the play and consequently came to see its production. And he saw Pinero and liked him immediately! This of course was sheer luck, but the ability to meet people and win their friendship was becoming for Pinero a highly developed talent.

Just at this time Collins was excited about the dramatization of his popular novel, Armadale, and thought Pinero was the type to play the character of Mr. Darch in the forthcoming production.

Collins wrote about Pinero to R. C. Carton (1853–1928), who was dramatizing the novel. Carton was not only a popular playwright of the day but the influential actor-manager of the Globe Theatre in London. Pinero, thus introduced to Carton, agreed to terms and returned home at twenty-one, a full-fledged actor.

Indeed, Dunkel seems to have been confused about more than the recipient. According to a letter cited by Walter de la Mare (in 'The Early Novels of Wilkie Collins', The Eighteen-Sixties, ed. John Drinkwater, Cambridge: Cambridge UP, 1932, pp. 68–69 n. 1), Pinero himself states:

I was then an actor in the 'stock' company of the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool and Collins came to ... produce ... his dramatic version of 'Armada' entitled 'Miss Gwilt' ... I was cast for the small but important part of Mr Darch ... and in the course of the rehearsals Collins was extremely kind to me.

So, it seems rather that WC appreciated Pinero's performance as Darch in Liverpool and thus recommended him to Herman to play the same part in the London production.

[1598] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 4 MARCH 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 116–117.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
4th March 1876

Dear Sirs,

I send with this the April number of "The Two Destinies"

In the (Toronto) "Globe", I see "The Two Destinies" reprinted (Number for Feb'y 11th). Also a note in the number for January 28th stating that the next portion will be published on receiving the proofs from the author. I suppose I am right in assuming that you have kindly made an arrangement for me with the "Globe"? If not, pray take the necessary steps to stop this piracy.¹

I sincerely hope that Mr Hunter is now quite himself again. What does he think of a trip to England for a little holiday and a salutary change? If he comes, busy as I am, I will make a holiday too!

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The reply from Hunter, Rose has not been traced, but, judging by [1603] of 30 March 1876 from Harriet Graves to the firm on WC's behalf, the serialization had not been authorized by Hunter, Rose. The novel appeared intermittently in the Toronto Weekly Globe from 7 January 1876, with the notice 'Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act of 1868'.

[1599] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 4 MARCH 1876

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/61), with envelope.¹ Published: BGLL, III, pp. 117–118.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
4th March 1876

My dear Sebastian Schlesinger,

Thank you sincerely for your friendly letter. Bad news could not have been sent more kindly. With this reflection I dismiss the subject – only adding that I gratefully accept your proposal to arrange with me for the payment of the premiums in future, and that I thank you for relieving my mind of all further anxiety on that head.²

When you return to the tottering old mother country, I hope I shall be less rheumatic and less busy than I have been for some months past. My life is the life of a hermit. I go nowhere and see nobody. The other day, I missed the pleasure of meeting Mrs Sebastian at dinner – being then ninety years old reckoning by rheumatism. The infernal dampness of the British climate will end in driving me out of my native land. Enough of these groans. Let us meet as soon as we can. I have got some old, old Champagne for you to taste (dry). So goodbye – for the present only.

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

I write by this mail to thank Mssrs Rollins-Morse for their kindness in paying the money a second time – and to say that I have sent an order to Coutts to repay the sum. I have ordered the payment to be $400 – in round numbers. If this is not the exact sum will you kindly advance the difference? Alas! I made the premium payable to Frothingham. Have you received the copy of his last letter to me? Was there ever such doubly dyed-and-d—d scoundrel???

-
1. Signed and directed to 'Sebastian Schlesinger Esqr | Messrs Naylor & Co | 6. Oliver Street | Boston | Mass: | U.S. America', postmark largely obliterated.
 2. Schlesinger's bad news must relate to the loss of that year's premiums on WC's life insurance policies in the United States, perhaps, as the postscript suggests, due to fraudulence on the part of his agent Frothingham. WC had paid 'C H Frothingham's bill' for £73-5s on 13 February 1875 which is the right amount and date for the premiums. For details of the two policies that WC took out before leaving the United States in 1874, see [1426] to William Tindell of 3 March 1874. The documents had been left in the care of Schlesinger, who now offers to assist WC in arranging the payment of the annual premiums. From now on until WC's death, the premiums were paid by Naylor & Co from 1876 until WC's death; for example, £70-8s-7d was paid on 7 April 1876.

[1600] TO JESSUP, PATON & CO.¹ 14 MARCH 1876

MS: Morris (AM18676).² Published: BGLL, III, p. 118.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 14th March 1876.

Dear Sirs

I beg to thank you for the volume called "Shakespeare as an Artist," which has reached me in excellent condition.³

I have already written to thank Mr Strang for his kindness.⁴

I am, dear sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Jessup, Paton & Co.

-
1. Presumably Morris K. Jessup, Paton & Co., the large banking house at Union Building, 52 William St, New York City, acting on behalf of a client.
 2. In Carrie's hand, signed by WC.
 3. Henry Joseph Ruggles, The Method of Shakespeare as an Artist, Deduced from an Analysis of His Leading Tragedies and Comedies (New York: Hurd & Houghton, 1870), found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 144).
 4. The letter has not been traced and Strang is unidentified.

[1601] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 15 MARCH 1876

MS: Berg. Published: B&C, II, p. 401.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | March 15. 1876.

Dear Mr Bentley.

I am again laid up with Rheumatic Gout in the eye. So far the attack is not so serious as on former occasions, but there is enough pain to make dictation to an amanuensis not very easy.² The result is that the May Number of the "Two Destinies," will be in any case a short one,³ and I may have to ask you for an extra (or seventh) month so as to spare my head, by concluding the Story in three short Monthly Parts instead of (as I had proposed) two long ones.⁴

In a day or two, I will send the copy already completed for the May Number to New Burlington Street, and I will try what I can do to lengthen it a little by dictation.

I hope you are keeping well in this boisterous weather.

Believe me very truly your | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley esq[Ⓜ]

-
1. Black Gothic type, ranged right.
 2. The signature is the only part of the letter in WC's hand, with the rest in that of Carrie Graves, his amanuensis.
 3. In the event, the May number consisted of chapters 19–21, occupying 23 pages of Temple Bar, only a little shorter than the March and April numbers.
 4. Eventually, due to WC's poor health, the novel appeared in nine monthly parts, with the instalments for June to August rather on the short side.

[1602] TO CHARLES READE, 21 MARCH 1876

MS: Noel, with envelope.¹ Published: Clareson, p. 117; B&C, II, pp. 401–402.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.² | 21st March 1876

My dear Reade,

Just a word (by means of Miss Graves's pen)³ to thank you heartily for your friendly and consoling letter. You know what a very high value I set on your opinion in questions of Art, and you will not be surprised to hear that you have encouraged me just at the time when I wanted such encouragement as only a brother writer can give.

I am beginning to hope that I have passed through the worst and fiercest ordeal of the pain, and that the disease will be content this time with attacking one eye only. In the inevitable absence of poor Beard still laid up, I am looked after by Mr Critchett,⁴ who is not only a great oculist [sic], but also the kindest and pleasantest of men.

Thank Mrs Seymour for her kind words, and with my love to you both,
Always yours.- | Wilkie Collins

1. Directed in the hand of Caroline Graves's daughter Elizabeth (Carrie) to 'Charles Reade esq^{re} D.C.L | 2. Albert Terrace | Knightsbridge | S.W.', and signed in the lower left 'Wilkie Collins' within a curving line. Postmarked 'LONDON . W | S | MR 21 | 76', and also franked on the reverse 'LONDON. S.W | ?? | MR 21 | 76'. On the flap is the monogram 'WC'.

2. Black Gothic type ranged right.

3. The letter is also in Carrie's hand, though it is signed by WC.

4. George Critchett (1817–1882), M.D., WC's eye surgeon.

[1603] CARRIE GRAVES TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 30 MARCH 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 119.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
March 30th 1876

Dear sirs,

Your kind letter dated 16th March has arrived this morning. I regret to say that Mr Wilkie Collins is suffering from another attack of Rheumatic Gout in the eye. This misfortune will prolong the story by two months, at least. Mr Collins hopes to keep it going without missing a month, but the numbers to come will probably be shorter than usual.

The fourth monthly part for April was sent to you, in proof, on Tuesday March 14th. I now enclose herewith, all that will be published of the fifth number for May. The periodical publication will certainly extend to July at the least. The republication in book form (of which you shall have due notice) will take place one calendar month in advance of the conclusion of the story in "Temple Bar."

Mr Collins thanks you sincerely for your kind attention to his interests, and earnestly hopes to hear better news of Mr Hunter when you next write.

I remain, dear sirs, | Faithfully yours | H.E. Graves
Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co.

[3252] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ [MARCH 1876]²

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C9, p. 30.

... suffered. Pray accept my excuses, and

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Cut from the end of a letter in the hand of Carrie Graves, who acted as WC's amanuensis, but signed by WC. Pasted into vol. I of a copy of the third edition of Man and Wife.

2. In all probability, the letter dates from the second half of March 1876, when Wilkie was laid up with gout in the eye and Carrie Graves wrote several letters for him explaining his inability to fulfil literary and other duties.

[1604] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 11 APRIL 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Summary: B&C, II, p. 402. Published: BGLL, III, p. 119.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 11th April 1876

Dear Mr Chatto,

I am sorry that I missed seeing you when you kindly called here.

“The Two Destinies” has been a little delayed by my falling ill (gout in the eye). The “May” instalment will only be a half number – and not a line for June has yet been written. I hope to conclude the story in July or August. Most likely not till August.¹

As soon as I see my way clearly to the end, you shall know it. We will publish a month in advance of the serial conclusion. I think we can stretch the story to two volumes.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. In the event the novel ran in Temple Bar until September 1876.

[3161] TO ANNE BENSON PROCTER, 11 APRIL 1876

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C6, p. 12.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 11th April 1876

My dear Mrs Procter,

I have had the gout again in the eye – and I am only allowed to write you two or three lines, now that I am getting better.

I rejoice to hear that you have found the right place at last – and in such a good situation.¹ When you are settled I shall hope to present myself without a black patch over my eye. The gout stopped “The Two Destinies” at half a number – which will appear next month.² I am glad you like it.

yours afftly | WC

1. Presumably her new home in the recently built Queen Anne’s Mansions in Petty France, Westminster, where she lived with her daughter Edith (1881 Census RG11/118/36/58). Her husband Bryan Waller Procter (1787–1874) had died eighteen months earlier (ODNB).

2. The Two Destinies was serialised in Temple Bar from January to September 1876. The first four parts led each issue and were 23, 23, 25 and 26 pages long. The May part was just 13 pages long and the following parts were 17, 17, 20, and 25 pages long. In effect, WC spread his work over seven months rather than six. From the May issue his story lost its place as the lead, which was taken over by Anthony Trollope’s The American Senator.

[3291] TO REVD DOCTOR LEARY,¹ 11 APRIL 1876

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, pp. 12–13.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.²

11th April 1876

My dear sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter. The Memoir in “Men of The Time” is I think correctly written as to facts and dates.³ I can add nothing to it which would be in the least likely to interest the public.⁴ The last “event” in my life was my time in America in 1873-4. I read in public two of my shorter stories (“The Dream-Woman” and “The Frozen Deep”) – and I met with a reception from the people of the United States which I shall remember gratefully to the end of my life.

This is really all that I can say to any purpose about myself. My only claim to the honour of a memoir is represented by my books. I am glad to hear that I may count you among my indulgent readers.

Believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
The Revd Doctor Leary

1. Thomas Humphrys Lindsay Leary (c. 1827–1906), the only possible candidate in Crockford, 1878 (p. 428 [21]). In 1876 Leary was curate at St George’s, Camberwell (1874–1881). His census entries indicate he was born in Ballybay, Co. Monaghan, Ireland, and, apart from his clerical work, he is described in the 1871 Census as a ‘journalist and reviewer’ (R.G.10 1333).

2. Written at the top of the letter in another hand, ‘Wilkie Collins’.

3. Men of the Time was first published by David Bogue in 1856, with a short entry on WC which contained several errors, including giving his birth year as 1825 and stating his mother was the daughter of a painter. He sent corrections to the new editor Edward Walford ([0411] 17 April 1861), and it is presumably the revised 1862 edition to which he refers here.

4. Despite WC’s general reference to ‘the honour of a memoir’, it is not clear why Leary wanted the information. It was not used in his contributions to the London Quarterly Review and the New Quarterly Magazine around this time, which concerned poetry and biblical translation (Wellesley Index, vol. V, p. 455).

[1605] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 11 APRIL 1876

MS: Iowa. Published: BGLL, III, p. 120.

“Everybody is sorry for me; everybody is kind to me. But the lost place is not to be regained.”

From “The New Magdalen”² by | Wilkie Collins

11th April 1876

1. Clearly a fan requesting an autograph.

2. Speech by Mercy Merrick in the second chapter:

“Everybody is sorry for me,” answered the nurse, as patiently as ever; “everybody is kind to me. But the lost place is not to be regained. I can’t get back! I can’t get back!” she cried, with a passionate outburst of despair – checked instantly the moment it had escaped her. “Shall I tell you what my experience has been?” she resumed. “Will you hear the story of Magdalen – in modern times?”

[1606] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 14 APRIL 1876

MS: Berg. Summary: B&C, II, p. 402. Published: BGLL, III, p. 120.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Good Friday 1876

Dear Mr Bentley,

My eye still persists in recovering – in spite of the unfavourable weather. This week I have been obliged to devote all the energies which my illness has spared to the rehearsals of my new play – which is tried in London for the first time tomorrow night.¹ Next week I hope to devote entirely to the June number of “The Two Destinies.” Will you kindly let me know when you go to press with the June number of the “Bar”. If it is only a short instalment again, let me do something!²

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. Miss Gwilt opened in London at the Globe Theatre on 15 April 1876.

2. In the event, the June instalment consisted of chs 22–24, occupying seventeen pages only.

[1607] TO JANE BIGELOW, 17 APRIL 1876

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 120–121.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London.
17th April 1876

Dear Mrs Bigelow

I have but one excuse for not having sooner thanked you for your welcome letter. The Gout has attacked me again – and once more in the Eye. I am now recovering but – as you can see – I am still obliged to use another pen than my own.¹ It was a great pleasure to me to have my darkened room brightened by news of you all. I am fonder of Flora than ever since she made that memorable protest on the subject of the sacred refreshment table at church.² Tell her from me, that I have not forgotten her empty scent bottle, and that when I return to America, British perfumes intended for Miss F. will invade the New York custom house. When this will be is another question. During the present year it will be impossible for me to leave England, but in 1877 if all goes well, I have some hope of making a short trip to the States, with perhaps a new play, and a new actress, to try the American public with.

The immediate cause of poor Forster's death, was (as I have heard) diabetes or "Bright's disease." His other ailments had, as you suppose, fatally weakened his constitution, and when his last vital energies gave way, they gave way rapidly. I saw but little of him after my return from America. He took offence, I was told, at my not having first consulted him before I went to the United States ↓ and his manner to me was certainly altered when I called on him after my return. He offered no explanation – and I parted from him (as I'm glad to remember now) as cordially as usual on my side. He has left his books and pictures to the Nation. The money reverts, of course, to Mrs Forster. This is really all I know about it.³

Forgive a dull letter from an invalid and believe me Dear Mrs Bigelow,
With kindest regards to you all, | (and love to Flora)
Yours always truly, | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Apart from the signature, and the final word 'truly', the letter is entirely in Carrie Graves's hand.
 2. Jane Bigelow's youngest daughter Flora, now aged seven.
 3. See [1594] to Charles Reade, 2 February 1876, and Peters, pp. 347–348.

[1608] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 19 APRIL 1876

MS: Berg, on plain card. Published: BGLL, III, p. 121.

April 19th 1876

When do you go to press with the June number of Temple Bar? How long can you give me before the copy must go to the printer?¹

Wilkie Collins

-
1. See [1606] to Bentley of 14 April 1876.

[1609] TO LAURA SEYMOUR, 19 APRIL 1876

MS: Noel. Extract: Clareson, p. 111. Published: B&C, II, p. 403 (incomplete); BGLL, III, p. 122.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. ¹ | 19th April 1876

My dear Mrs Seymour,

You are the trump of trumps – and the best and truest of friends and I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

I have but one excuse for not having sent you the best places in the theatre – I was afraid to ask any of my friends to go to the first night.² Though I had but one eye to look through, on the few last occasions when I could go to rehearsal, I saw that the scenery was so backward and (excepting the first act) so bad, and the people connected with the theatre (for the most part) such a set of incapable idiots and blackguards – that I fully anticipated a failure on the first night – and I own I did not like the idea of inviting my friends to hear me hissed! The kindness of the audience, as things really were (I believe they caught it mesmerically from you) has really left me deeply grateful. Never before have I been so indebted to my good and dear public.

At 8 o'clock the scenes were not all ready! At 9 o'clock the scoundrels of carpenters were lying about drunk – and their chief utterly lost his head. No more of it! I have not been able to prevail upon myself to go near the theatre since.

I am so sorry to hear such unfavourable accounts of your health and of Reade's. Give him my love, and say I shall soon appear at number 2,³ with a little linen curtain and a black patch over my eye, to have a talk. The inflammation has gone – the only danger now is catching cold. And so, for the present, exit

Yours always affly | WC

1. Black Gothic type ranged right.

2. Of Miss Gwilt, which had opened at the Globe on 15 April 1876.

3. The residence of Reade and Seymour at 2 Albert Terrace, Knightsbridge.

[3292] TO ALFRED O. CAPPER,¹ 20 APRIL 1876

MS: Unknown. On sale: Dreweatts Bloomsbury Auctions, Maddox Street, London (4 September 2015, lot 13).
Published: A&C10, p. 13.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | April 20th 1876²

1. Although WC does not give an addressee, the item is on a small piece of cut paper in an album of more than 100 signatures, letters, and envelopes. Where there is an addressee it is A. Capper or Alfred Capper or Alfred O. Capper, while one preserved envelope gives his address as Beechwood, Hill Lane, Southampton. The 1871 and 1881 Censuses record Alfred O. Capper at this address respectively as a scholar aged 12 (RG10/1199), and a Merchant's Clerk aged 22 (RG11/1221). He was born Alfred Octavius Capper in Q3 1858 (Southampton 2c40). His autobiography, A Rambler's Recollections and Reflections (London: Allen & Unwin, 1915), records: 'When at school I also collected autographs. I wrote to nearly every celebrity, enclosing a stamped addressed envelope, and I have in consequence, a very valuable collection, including Tennyson, Gladstone, Ruskin, Anthony Trollope, Millais, Wilkie Collins, Sothorn, Phelps, Buckstone, and hundreds of others.' (p. 21). See <<https://archive.org/details/ramblersrecollec00capp>>.

2. The date is added after the signature, as is usual when WC responds to an autograph request from a stranger.

[1610] TO KATE FIELD, 22 APRIL 1876

MS: Boston (KF 108). Published: Whiting, p. 346; B&C, I I, pp. 401–402 (incomplete); BGLL, III, pp. 122–123.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 22nd April 1876

Dear Miss Field,

I was very sorry to miss you – but I sleep badly since my illness, and cannot get up in the morning

The doctor allows me to get out for a walk (with a patch over my eye) – but he has not yet allowed me to see my own play,² and he forbids me to see your “matinée.”³ The lights and the atmosphere are the things he objects to – and I am afraid he is right. The pain I have suffered has seriously weakened me. I can only wish you success most sincerely – and hope for another chance of making one of your audience.

I am glad you liked the piece and the acting. You must have been looking at the wrong “compartment” when Cecil drew the curtains and opened the windows. It is (of course) the first thing he does on entering the “poisoned room.” The play cannot end unless he does it – for the “major” and the policeman in plain clothes (who bring the curtain down) enter by the window.⁴ The rest of your questions I hope to answer viva voce – but I am surprised at your never having met in real life with a woman who fell in love with a man utterly unworthy of her. Oh, Miss Keemle! Miss Keemle! have you still to discover one of the brightest virtues of the sex?

Yours always truly | WC

Will you be doubly kind – and send me one line to say if you are content with your reception as

Volanti?⁵

-
1. Black Gothic type ranged right.
 2. Miss Gwilt at the Globe.
 3. Billed as ‘Miss Keemle’ (her full name being Mary Katherine Keemle Field), the American actress was to appear with Miss Geneviève Ward (1837–1922), American born actress and soprano, in a play entitled The Honeymoon on Wednesday, 26 April from 2.30 to 5pm at the Gaiety Theatre (‘Schools and children half price’ – see the announcement in the Times, 20 April 1876, p. 8e).
 4. Concerning the closing scenes of Miss Gwilt.
 5. Thus for Volante, her role in The Honeymoon.

[1611] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 26 APRIL 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 279. Published: Coleman, p. 232; B&C, II, p. 404.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 26th April 1876

My dear Fred,

Tell me about Sebastian.² He kindly called here when Critchett had forbidden me to see anyone³ – and he left word that he was “going away.” If I had known it was S. I would have disobeyed orders. He has not “gone away” to Boston U.S. I hope. Where can I find him – or rather when does he return to London?

I am slowly mending – able to use my good eye, and still obliged to take care of the other. Add arrears of work on any story that must be made up, and a play for Bancroft that is in progress⁴ – and you will not be surprised at my failing to call in Berkeley Square. I am still forbidden [del] Dinners, Theatres, and all assemblies in which part of the pleasure consists of breathing vitiated air and swallowing superfluous particles of flesh given off by our fellow creatures and ourselves in the act of respiration. Work, walk, visit to my morganatic family⁵ –

such is life to yours affly | WC

My love of loves to the Padrona

-
1. Black Gothic type ranged right.
 2. Sebastian Schlesinger.
 3. Referring to WC’s oculist, George Critchett.
 4. Squire Bancroft of the Prince of Wales Theatre.
 5. This is the first instance in WC’s extant correspondence of the use of this phrase to refer to Martha Rudd and their three children. The relevant OED definition of ‘morganatic’ is ‘designating ... a marriage in which a man of high rank marries a wife of lower rank, but neither the wife nor any children of the marriage have any claim to the possessions or title of the husband’, making WC’s usage distinctly ironic given the nature of his will.

[1612] TO MRS AUSTIN,¹ 28 APRIL 1876

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 124.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 28th April 1876

Dear Mrs Austin,

I enclose with the greatest pleasure two stalls for Tuesday evening next May 2nd. The drama begins at eight.²

With kind regards. | Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. This might be Letitia Mary Austin née Dickens (1816–93), CD’s younger sister, childless widow of the civil engineer Henry Austin (1811/12–1861: ODNB), whom she had married in 1837.
 2. Miss Gwilt at the Globe.

[1613] TO H. R. MOORE,¹ 3 MAY 1876

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 3rd May 1876

Dear Sir,

The personages in my new dramatic work are unusually few in number – and the question of their representatives on the stage has been a decided question for some time past.²

Under these circumstances, it is only possible for me to beg to accept my thanks for your letter.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | H. R. Moore Esqre

1. Unidentified actor looking for a part.

2. This should not be Miss Gwilt, which had already been running at the Globe for more than two weeks; perhaps the reference is to the dramatic adaptation of The Moonstone – see [1641] to Arthur Blunt of 1 August 1876.

[1614] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 3 MAY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: B&C, II, p. 405.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | London | 3rd May 1876

Dear Mr Rose,

I am indeed grieved to hear so sad an account of Mr Hunter.² Change of air and scene are – as I should think – the very remedies for such a case as his. But if you cannot prevail upon him, I have but little chance of succeeding, I fear. Pray assure him of my sympathy and of my best wishes for his complete restoration to health.

I only wish I could take that pleasant voyage to Canada this summer. I have too pleasant a recollection of the days I spent with you and Mr Hunter, not to wish to see Toronto again. But I have engagements to produce new plays in London which will not allow me to leave England until the fine season is over. I have some hope – if all goes well – of returning to the “States” perhaps in 1877 – and of then seeing you once more.

In the meantime, believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I am getting on well towards recovery. Nothing wrong with the gouty eye now but weakness. I shall send more “Two Destinies” soon.

1. Black Gothic type ranged right.

2. Robert Hunter, George Maclean Rose’s senior partner in the publishing firm, who was to die the following year.

[1615] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 3 MAY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 125

London 3rd May 1876

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of a dft for Fifty pounds sterling (£50-) on account of royalties, and to thank you for the same.²

I remain | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co

1. Business note written on integral leaf of [1614] to George Maclean Rose of the same date.

2. The draft was presumably at 60 days notice as it appears in WC’s account on 6 July as ‘Bill on Bk of Montreal’ (Coutts: WC).

[1616] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 4 MAY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/2). Published: BGLL, III, p. 125

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
May 4th 1876

The Two Destinies

Second Portion. Conclusion of the part for June. Letter sent with the first portion for June – forwarded April 25th.

Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

[1617] TO JAMES PAYN, 5 MAY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), damaged.¹ Published: BGLL, III, pp. 125–126.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 5th May 1876

My dear Payn,

I am very sorry – but I am going to “bother”.

“Armadale”, “No Name” and “After Dark” were, I think, once published (by Smith, Elder & Co) in one volume form, at five, or six shillings, each. Will you kindly inquire if any remainders exist of this edition – preceding the present edition at 2/- – and if there are any copies to be had (either in boards or in sheets – it doesn’t matter which) will you direct the skilled person in whose department VICTORIA MAIL it lies to send me half a dozen copies of each of the three books (with the customary invoice of course)?²

The fact is – that I want to bind a few complete sets of my novels for “presentation copies” – and the two shilling editions of the books just mentioned (far too cheap at the price!) leave something to be desired in the matter of appearance. So please make this inquiry like a good fellow – and let me have a line of reply.

[valediction and signature excised]

1. A rectangle at the foot of the second leaf of the note-paper has been neatly torn off, removing the valediction and signature without significantly damaging the text of the rest of the letter.

2. Payn had been a reader for Smith, Elder since 1874, when he had resigned the editorship of Chambers’s Journal. A scribbled and largely indecipherable note in what is perhaps Payn’s hand is found on the back of the letter, which may include the phrase ‘no remainders exist of No Name in old 5s edition’.

[1618] TO CHARLES READE, 14 MAY 1876¹

MS: Noel. Summary: Clareson, p. 123 (undated). Published: BGLL, III, p. 126.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Sunday May 14th

My dear Reade,

If you have nothing better to do on Wednesday next will you and Mrs Seymour lunch here at two o’clock. No party – only two American gentlemen who will be charmed to meet you.² Do come if you can!

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. Dating from the calendar and the notepaper.

2. William Henry Milburn and his son – see [1624] to Seaver of 20 May 1876.

[1619] TO JULIA ADDISON,¹ 15 MAY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 126–127.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th May 1876

My dear Miss Addison,

I well remember those pleasant days at Ickenham, and the friendly welcome that I always received at the Rectory.²

There are reasons which make it not desirable for me to write the introduction which you ask for. But, if you turn to the next page, you will find a few lines presenting your MS to Mr Bentley who is the publisher of the popular “Temple Bar”. You have only to tear off the leaf – and to send it with your novel to 6. New Burlington Street.³

Wishing you every success, | I remain vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Julia Addison (1826–78), daughter of John Addison, rector of St Giles, Ickenham, Middlesex, and authoress of a number of romances, including Crow's Nest Farm (London: Saunders, Otley, 1861) and Isabel St. Clair (London: Remington, 1876), her last published work which seems not to have been serialised.

2. The occasion has not been identified.

3. It is not clear who was the publisher to whom WC declined to introduce Miss Addison. The lines to George Bentley constitute the letter [1620] to him of 15 May 1876, which is separately recorded. However, given that the leaf in question remains attached to WC's letter to Miss Addison, it was presumably never sent.

[1620] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 15 MAY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 127.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th May 1876

The accompanying manuscript is presented for Mr Bentley's consideration by Wilkie Collins

The authoress is

Miss Julia Addison | 7. St Mary's Terrace | Maida Hill West | W.

To | George Bentley Esq

1. On integral leaf of [0619] to Julia Addison of the same date, above.

[1621] TO NINA LEHMANN, 15 MAY 1876

MS: Lewis Collection. Summary: BGLL, III, p. 127 (with location of MS unknown). Published: A&C11, pp. 20–21.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

15th May 1876

Dearest Padrona,

Here is a line of introduction for the Abishag of the American King David.¹ And if you tear off the next leaf, you can send the other lady her “bit” from “The Woman in White”²

always yours aftly | WC

N.B. Mrs Houston must write her address on her mss – and if it is “not suitable” must either send for it – or send postage-stamps. I return her address.³

1. On the relationship between the aged King David and the ‘fair damsel’ Abishag, see I Kings 1:1–4 (AV). Here, the ‘American King David’ must be the blind American author William Henry Milburn – see [1624] to Seaver of 20 May 1876. As WC's postscript makes clear, ‘Abishag’ must be Mrs Houston, a writer acquainted with Nina Lehmann, who we are unable to identify any further. If the name is written incorrectly, however, this might be Mrs Matilda Charlotte Houstoun, née Jesse (1811–1892), English author of the travel books Texas and the Gulf of Mexico: or, Yachting in the New World (1844) and Hesperos: or, Travels in the West (1850), as well as a long series of novels beginning with the anonymous Recommended to Mercy (1862) – see <http://orlando.cambridge.org/public/svPeople?person_id=housma>. If so, the biblical metaphor is rather misleading regarding the authoress, who was twice married and more than ten years older than both Milburn and WC.

2. The leaf has been torn off and is not found with the letter, but it must be [3104] to Unidentified recipient, 15 May 1876, which consists of a short dated quote from The Woman in White. Unfortunately, this ‘other lady’ – clearly also an acquaintance of Nina Lehmann – cannot be further identified.

3. WC writes the N.B. sideways up the inner margin of the letter, with a dotted saltire after ‘David’ and another at the start of the N.B.

[3104] UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 15 MAY 1876

MS: Unknown. On sale: Bonhams (New York, 10 October 2012, lot 2183). Published: A&C4, p. 22.

15th May 1876²

- - - “We both wanted money. Immense necessity! Universal want! Is there a civilised human being who does not feel for us? How insensible must that man be! Or how rich!”

From Count Fosco’s Confession | in
The Woman In White | by | Wilkie Collins

1. Clearly a female acquaintance of Nina Lehmann (see [1621] to her of the same date, to which this autographic extract was formerly attached).

[1622] TO REGINALD HANSON,¹ 19 MAY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 127.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th May 1876

Mr Wilkie Collins begs to thank Mr Reginald Hanson for honouring him with an invitation to meet the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs. He regrets to say that ill health will oblige him to be absent from London next month – and he has no choice but to trust to Mr Hanson’s kindness to accept his apologies and the renewed expression of his best thanks.

1. Reginald Hanson (1840–1905), Chairman of the Library Corporation of the City of London and Lord Mayor of London, 1886–87 (see Hall, II, p. 688).

[1623] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 20 MAY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 128.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
May 20th 1876

The Two Destinies | 6th Part

Delayed by my illness. Acknowledgment of the Dft for £50/ sent by previous mail.¹ I am rapidly recovering. I hope Mr Hunter is doing the same. In haste.

WC

1. Presumably the same Draft he acknowledged in [1615] to Hunter, Rose & Co., 3 May 1876. The credit appears in WC’s account on 6 July as ‘Bill on Bk of Montreal’ (Coutts: WC).

[1624] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 20 MAY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/8). Published: BGLL, III, p. 128.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London | W
20th May 1876

My dear Seaver,

One line to say that Mr Milburn and his son have been received here – and every where – with a hearty welcome.¹ They lunched with me the other day – and met Charles Reade, and some young ladies, and the good blind man laughed and talked and (as he told me when I saw him again this morning) thoroughly enjoyed himself. We only wanted you to make us complete. Next time, you must not write, you must personally produce yourself. Young Milburn too seemed to be liked every where – a nice modest lad.

My work is waiting for me as usual! Give my love to my friends in Franklin Square and elsewhere – and believe me
always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. William Henry Milburn, author of The Rifle, Axe, and Saddlebags, and other lectures (London, 1857) – see [1630] to him of 14 June 1876.

[3221] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 25 MAY 1876

MS: Lewis Collection, pasted into a first edition of Miss or Mrs. Published: A&C8, p. 16.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | May 25th 1876¹

1. The format suggests a signature for a collector.

[1625] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 31 MAY 1876

MS: Berg. Published: B&C, II, pp. 405–406.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | 31st May 1876

Private²

Dear Mr Bentley,

I beg to thank you for a Cheque for the June number.³

It is a matter of regret to me that I should have (unintentionally) misled you on the subject of the length of the “Destinies”. The story is a very difficult one to manage – and I am now considering how I can turn it so as to be able to finish it in August. It is mainly a question of my being able to write a long number – instead of the short numbers with which my illness has /hitherto/ forced me to be content since May last. At the very worst, I cannot possibly be later than September – but I repeat I hope to finish in August.⁴

There is another point about which I am not quite comfortable. When you kindly met my views on the subject of terms, we both supposed that we were dealing with a short story. May I venture to suggest – as an old friend – that the June number should be considered as terminating our agreement, so far as the extra terms are concerned, and will you let me send you the concluding numbers of the story at the average page-remuneration of the “Bar”?⁵ I am sure I may trust to our long friendship to excuse my making this proposal frankly – as an act of plain justice towards you.

Believe me | Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Eq

-
1. Black Gothic type ranged right.
 2. Written diagonally across the top left of the first page.
 3. £34 for 17 pages, paid in on 1 June 1876.
 4. In the event, the serial continued until September.
 5. WC was paid one guinea (21s) per page for the remaining instalments.

[1626] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 6 JUNE 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/2/AM19719). Published: BGLL, III, p. 129.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 6th June 1876

The Two Destinies

Conclusion of the number for July 1876.

Wilkie Collins

In haste to catch the mail

Messrs Harper & Brothers

[1627] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 6 JUNE 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/2). Published: BGLL, III, p. 129.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
6th June 1876

Sent by today's mail under different cover

The Two Destinies

=

Conclusion of the number for July 1876. I had hoped to have sent more – but I am obliged to rest for a few days, and I am unwilling to keep you waiting.

WC

To | Messrs Harper & Brothers

[1628] TO MADAME LAURENT-DESVIEUX,¹ 9 JUNE 1876

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 129–130.

Londres | 90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. 9^{me} Juin 1876

Chère Madame Laurent-Desvieux,

C'est avec une vive douleur que j'ai appris que mon ami aimé Desvieux n'est plus. C'était le camarade le plus amiable, l'ami le plus sincère. Si je regarde la perte d'un tel homme comme une vraie calamité – que doit être votre chagrin, chère Madame! Je puis bien vous offrir – a vous et a Mademoiselle votre fille – toute ma sympathie dans cette affliction immense. Hélas! c'est peu dire – mais je le dis du fond du coeur.

Votre tout devoué | Wilkie Collins

A | Madame Laurent-Desvieux²

1. Though clearly a mutual friend of both WC and CAC, Desvieux has not been satisfactorily identified. See the undated letter to CAC [1869–72], which seems to refer to Desvieux's departure from London.

2. Translation:

Dear Madame Laurent-Desvieux,

It is with great sadness that I have learned that my dear friend Desvieux is no more. He was the most amiable of companions, the most sincere of friends. If I consider the loss of such a man as a true calamity, what must your distress be, dear Madame! I can certainly offer to you – both to yourself and to Mademoiselle your daughter – all my sympathy in this immense affliction. Alas! It is not much to say – but I say it from the bottom of my heart.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins.

[1629] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 13 JUNE 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 130.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Tuesday 13th June 1876

Dear Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

A line (written in Great haste) to say that “The Two Destinies” will be completed in the September monthly part of Temple Bar. The republication here, in book form, will take place on the first of August next.

I hope Mr Hunter's health is improving.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. The Two Destinies | = | Total number of pages (as well as I can now calculate) about 170

pages of the Temple Bar size
Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

[1630] TO WILLIAM HENRY MILBURN,¹ 14 JUNE 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 130–131.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 14th June 1876

My dear Mr Milburn.

A thousand thanks for your kind letter. Unfortunately for me, I am about to leave London for a few days, this afternoon – and I can only wish you the success at St Michael’s which you achieve everywhere else.²

I have not been very well – my nerves are not strong enough yet after my illness to resist the heavy smoke-laden London air. But for this, I should have called on you long since.

I enclose two stalls for Mr Fletcher with my kindest regards. The play begins at 8 punctually³

Believe me | Dear Mr Milburn | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. William Henry Milburn (1823–1903), blind American author and lecturer who WC seems to have met during his reading tour of North America. He was then in Britain with his son, preaching and lecturing in various parts – see [1624] to William A. Seaver of 20 May 1876 and [1731] to Andrew Chatto of 20 February 1878.

2. Presumably referring to a London church where Milburn was to speak, perhaps St Michael’s in Cornhill in the City of London.

3. Fletcher has not been identified, but the play must be Miss Gwilt at the Globe.

[1631] TO ALBERTO CACCIA,¹ 15 JUNE 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 131.

London | 15th June 1876

Dear Signor Caccia,

My terms for authorising a reprint of 500 copies of the Italian translation of The Two Destinies are: – 400 lire: the copyright, and all rights relating to future reprints of this novel, being reserved by the author.²

Believe me truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

To | Signor Alberto Caccia

1. Then acting as WC’s authorized Italian translator and agent – see [1583] and [1584] to William Tindell of 16 and 21 December 1875, and [1687] to Georgina Hogarth of 12 July 1877.

2. Presumably the Italian translation was already appearing as a serial, and the terms relate to the book edition. No serial appearance has been traced, though a two-volume Italian edition (I due Destini) published in Rome in 1876 was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 95).

[1632] TO CHARLES DICKENS JR,¹ 15 JUNE 1876

MS: Morgan (Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 131–132.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th June 1876

My dear Charles,

The arrangement made for my present Christmas Story provides for its being completed in [two] month’s time – but leaves me uncertain whether it will be published in 1876 or 1877, until the end of August next.² At that date, the question of publication is to be positively decided and then I can write to you definitely. If any new proposal reaches me in the meantime, I will let you know of it.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Charles Dickens Jr (1837–96), son of CD, who became sole proprietor and editor of All The Year Round from January 1871.

2. This must refer to ‘The Captain’s Last Love’, WC’s first Christmas story for E. A. Buck of the New York Spirit of the Times, which was published there on 23 December 1876.

[1633] TO T. H. FRENCH,¹ 24 JUNE 1876

MS: Lewis Collection.² Published: BGLL, III, pp. 132–133.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Saturday. 24th June 1876

Private | “Miss Gwilt”

Dear Mr French,

Your kind letter of the 5th June has reached me.

You have no doubt already heard from your father that I had proposed to keep the piece in reserve, on the chance of that Miss Cavendish may go to the United States next year, and play “Miss Gwilt” herself.³ If, however, you receive a good offer from Mr Cheney⁴ (or, failing him, from any other responsible person) for the exclusive right to play the piece in America – I am perfectly willing to sell it. The question of terms in such a case as this is a very difficult one to decide. It seems to me that I ought not to sell the entire right of playing the drama in America under $5000 – say one thousand pounds Sterling (£1000). If your experience tells you that this is too high a price to ask in the States, then lower the demand to seven hundred and fifty (£750) pounds sterling. I leave the decision entirely to your discretion. In the meantime, it may be as well to settle matters, one way or the other, with Mr Cheney. If he makes an acceptable offer for the piece (on the terms which I have just mentioned) let him have it. If not, withdraw it from Mr Cheney’s Theatre – either to hold it in reserve until next year, or to sell it to any other respectable and responsible person who may make a sufficient offer, and who will pay the money “in cash” (as we say in England).

These are the only instructions that I can now send to you. Let me have a line please to say that you have received my letter, and believe me, yours truly,

Wilkie Collins

T.H. French Esqre

1. Thomas Henry French, the son of Samuel French, theatrical publisher with offices in both London and New York. In his letter [1703] to Augustin Daly of 22 September 1877, WC describes his recipient here as ‘Mr French Junior my agent in New York’.

2. Found in a storage envelope printed with ‘Samuel French & Son, Dramatic Publishers. 122 Nassau Street, N.Y., and 89 Strand, London All plays 15c each. – Send for Catalogue’.

3. The play was eventually taken to New York by Ada Cavendish in 1878–79.

4. Unidentified American theatre manager or proprietor.

[1634] TO COUTTS & Co., 27 JUNE 1876

MS: Coutts. Published: BGLL, III, p. 133.

London | 27th June 1876

Gentlemen,

Please withdraw the Bill for £333.-.- drawn in my favour by Messrs Chatto & Windus, and due the 30th of this month,¹ and substitute for it the bill at six months for £250.-.- enclosed.²

Wilkie Collins

To Messrs Coutts & Co

1. See [1512] to Andrew Chatto of 8 February 1875.

2. The difference of £83 was credited to WC’s account the next day as ‘reced of Chatto & Windus’. The smaller Bill at six months was credited on 2 January 1877 (Coutts: WC).

[1635] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 4 JULY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 133.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th July 1876

Dear Mr Chatto,

I am thinking of leaving London shortly. Will you kindly direct one of your clerks to send a line to the binders, inquiring when I may expect to receive the first of the two of my works which you were so good as to get bound for me?

I want, if possible, to present this first set of the books before I leave town (most likely on Monday next). The second set the binders can finish at their own convenience.¹

Excuse me for troubling you in this little matter.

Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. There is no outgoing letter at Reading referring to this matter, and the two works in question remain unidentified.

[1636] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 4 JULY 1876

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 134.

90. Gloucester Place | 4 July

Dear Mr Chatto

Many thanks for your kindness.

I entirely agree with you as to the carelessness of the binder. As you saw, I wrote the plainest and clearest instructions. He has altered the title and he has omitted the numbering of the Volumes – an essential thing.

I will wait for his second attempt on Saturday – with many thanks for the trouble you have taken. I return the set by this messenger.

Very truly | Wilkie Collins

It might be as well to instruct the binder to finish one – first – in case he cannot get the two sets done by Saturday next. Do you think it is humanly possible to get this idea into his head? I am not sanguine about it myself!

[1637] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 13 JULY 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 134–135.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W | July 13th 1876

Dear Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

I am going away from London for a little while – and I have left directions to forward to you a Revise of the monthly Part of “The Two Destinies” for August. In the September number (as I have already informed you) the story will be completed. You shall have the September number in proof as soon as I can get it done.

I have had a letter from Messrs Harper (of New York) complaining bitterly of the damage done to them by the importation of Canadian editions of new English books into the United States, to the detriment of American editions of the same books for which Messrs Harper have paid the authors in taking advance-sheets. I am sure you will do all that you can to prevent the Canadian edition of “The Two Destinies” from interfering in this way with Messrs Harper’s edition of the same book. This is all for which you and I can be responsible. As to the general question, it seems to me to rest with the Government of the United States to keep Canadian reprints out of their country – exactly as we keep Tauchnitz’s Continental Reprints out of Great Britain. For the rest, Harpers have always behaved very liberally to me, and I only write now because I wish to respect the rights which they have purchased from me. I know your honourable way of doing business so well that I am quite sure you will respect them too.¹

Sincerely hoping that Mr Hunter is going on well in health, believe me yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. As the ensuing correspondence with WC's Canadian and American publishers shows, this was to become an increasingly thorny problem.

[3162] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 17 JULY 1876

MS: Unknown. On sale: International Autograph Auctions, Nottingham (13 February 2010, Lot 442). Published: A&C6, p. 12.

Wilkie Collins | 17th July 1876

1. On a card with four tiny holes to each corner. Possibly once attached to a bookmark.

[1638] CARRIE GRAVES TO HUGH BIERS,¹ [25–26] JULY 1876

MS: Melbourne (Box 502/6), note on Temple Bar proofs of The Two Destinies.² Published: BGLL, III, p. 135 (as to [Henry C. Biers]).

1st Proof –

Uncorrected. No time to communicate with Mr Wilkie Collins who is away for his health. Look out for press errors – and expect by the next Victoria Mail, a complete corrected proof containing the matter herewith sent, to the conclusion of the story.

H. G.

1. See WC's similar note to Biers of [15–17 November] 1875 ([1576]).

2. At the head of ch. 35, 'By Land and Sea', which marks the beginning of the final monthly instalment, appearing in Temple Bar in September 1876; the proof is stamped 'W^M CLOWES & SONS | SENT OUT | 25 JUL 76 | STAMFORD STREET', which justifies our conjectural dating.

[1639] TO FRANK ARCHER, 26 JULY 1876

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.¹ Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 280. Published: Archer, pp. 183–184; BGLL, III, pp. 135–136, amended A&C7, p. 14.

Worthing | 26th July 1876

My dear Archer,

I am wandering about the South Coast – and I have only just picked up my letters here, during a stay of a day or two. This is my excuse for not having thanked you for your letter long since.

My present plans are of the purely idle sort. I have just finished a story called "The Two Destinies" – and I am feeling too much fagged to do any more work for some little time to come.² I wish I had something good to offer you – but I must, for my health's sake, let my brains rest – and I can only wish you hearty success when you step on a new stage. I hear that your "Russian Prince" was admirable. But I was too ill with the gout to go and see it.³

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | My plans for | the coming autumn | are to go abroad, | I think, and get new ideas among new scenes.

1. With WC's monogram on the point of the flap, initialled and directed to 'Frank Archer Esqre | 10. Charlotte Street | Bedford Square | London | W.C.', postmarked recto 'WORTHING | D | JY 26 | 76' and verso 'LONDON | W | J 27 | X', with '10' in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. The Two Destinies was published by Chatto & Windus in August 1876, and finished serialization in Temple Bar in September.

3. Referring to Archer's performance in the role of Prince Perovsky in T.W. Robertson's Ours, originally written in 1866 and revived by the Bancrofts at the Prince of Wales's Theatre from 8 May to 4 August 1876. This was to be Archer's last performance at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, and he was clearly on the look-out for work. He records 'Eight Weeks Interval Bedford and London. No income'. He was then employed by Henry Neville to play The Duke of Gonzagues in The Duke's Device from the end of September. He states that he 'joined Henry Neville at the Olympic Theatre for a time' (Archer, p. 184), but after 11 November he was again without work, this time for thirty-four weeks ('Theatre Salaries and Parts', Bk. 2, pp. 14–21, Archer Archive).

[1640] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 29 JULY 1876

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 136.

Worthing | 29th July 1876

Dear Mr Bentley,

I beg to thank you for the cheque for the August number.¹

In a day or two I return to town – then go away again in some other direction. The last number of the “Destinies” is in proof. The September Temple Bar will close the story – at last!

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq

1. The August number consisted of chs 30–34, occupying pp. 508–527. Since WC had overrun the originally agreed number of monthly parts, the rate of remuneration was now in fact one guinea (£1-1s) per page. However, the payment for the August number – which would have been 20 guineas or £21 – does not appear in WC's bank account (Coutts: WC). As with other 'missing' payments it is possible that he simply cashed it without paying it in.

[1641] TO ARTHUR BLUNT,¹ 1 AUGUST 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 136–137.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Augt 1st 1876

My dear Arthur Blunt

Your kind letter followed me to Worthing.² Soon after we last met, I began to drift backwards in the matter of health, and the doctors sent me away to get better. I am now only in town, on some literary business for a day or two – and then I go away again for a long rest.

I am really disappointed not to have seen your matured representation of the Doctor. My consolation must be that I have been, at any rate, fortunate enough to give you the opportunity of winning new distinction in your profession. May we work together again! and the sooner the better.

yours ever | Wilkie Collins

You shall certainly see the dramatic “Moonstone”. I am only waiting until I can write the last Act – which is thus far still in Scenario.

1. Arthur Cecil Blunt (1843–96), actor under the stage name Arthur Cecil, then playing the part of Doctor Downward, the dubious physician in Miss Gwilt, at the Globe Theatre.

2. See [1639] to Frank Archer of 26 July 1876.

[1642] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 3 AUGUST 1876

MS: Reading (tipped into Outgoing Letter-book 8). Published: BGLL, III, p. 137.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.
3rd August 1876

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for your kind letter of yesterday's date, and to say that I willingly agree to the proposal which you submit to me for publishing the reprint of “The Two Destinies” in two-volume form. I reserve the copyright of the book as my own, of course – and I understand that I am to give you the refusal of issuing future editions of the book in other than the two-volume form.¹

Believe me Dear Sirs | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs | Chatto & Windus

1. This letter, though unstamped, constitutes the only agreement to be found at Reading concerning the initial publication of The Two Destinies in volume form. Andrew Chatto's letter to WC of 2 August 1876 (Reading), reveals that WC had acted generously in light of the poor sales of the three-volume edition of The Law and the Lady, the first of his works to be carried by his new publishers. Since only 1,150 copies of that edition of 2,000 copies had been sold, WC agreed to waive payment on the first 850 copies sold of the two-volume edition of The Two Destinies, and accept only a 5s royalty on all copies above that total.

[3183] TO SIGNORA MARINI,¹ 21 AUGUST 1876

MS: Unknown. Published: Era (24 September 1876), p. 4c, our copy text;² A&C7, pp. 41–42.

London, 90, Gloucester-place, W. 21st August, 1876.

Madame,— My friend Signor Caccia³ has informed me of the dramatic representation of my work, called The New Magdalen, at Florence, and has greatly interested me by his account of your admirable impersonation of the chief character in the story. In congratulating you on having added one more to the list of your triumphs, permit me also to congratulate myself on the honour which you have conferred upon me in introducing my Magdalen to the Italian public. Believe me, Madame, with sincere esteem, your faithful servant.

WILKIE COLLINS.

1. Italian actress, otherwise unidentified.

2. A cutting from the Era is pasted into Frank Archer's scrapbook ('Personal Criticism, Bills, etc' vol. 1, Archer Archive), along with material from the 1873 production of The New Magdalen in which he took the leading role. The letter comes at the end of a critique of the play.

"The New Magdalen" in Florence.

(From an Occasional Correspondent.)

A few days since The New Magdalen, a comedy, taken by Signor Albert Caccia from Mr Wilkie Collins's novel of that name, was represented at the Arena Nazionale of Florence. I cannot say that the success was complete, but on the whole the comedy pleased, because the adaptor had known how to make good use of the dramatic situations of the romance. The dénouement, however, was not at all satisfactory; but Signor Caccia intends modifying it, in compliance with advice received from Mr Collins himself. The interpretation of the work was perfect, more particularly on the part of Signora Marini, one of the best Italian actresses of her day. Her creation of Mercy Merrick was sublime, and such as to leave an ineffaceable impression on the spectators. I happen to know that, after the first representation of The New Magdalen, Signor Caccia wrote to Mr Wilkie Collins, informing him how it had been received by the public, and of the superior manner in which it had been interpreted. Mr Collins, with his usual courtesy, wrote Signora Marini the following letter:—

3. WC's Italian agent; see [1583] and [1584] to Tindell, 16 and 21 December 1875

[1643] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 4 SEPTEMBER 1876

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 138.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th Sept 1876

Dear Mr Bentley,

Thank you for the cheque for the September (concluding) number of "The Two Destinies."¹

I feel on my side, I can assure you, greatly obliged by your kindness in letting me so largely over-run my own limits!

I am in town for a few days – and then I go away again for a month.² When I return, you will always be welcome when you can favour me with a call.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The September number consisted of ch. 35 onwards, occupying pp. 61–85 of the new (48th) volume. A payment of £26-5s (25 guineas) labelled ‘P Letter’ was credited to WC’s bank account on 5 September (Coumts: WC). This was the correct amount at one guinea per page for the final 25 pages.
2. WC withdrew £130 ‘Travelling Expenses’ on 16 September (Coumts: WC).

[1644] TO HENRY POWELL BARTLEY,¹ 17 OCTOBER 1876

MS: Private.² Published: BGLL, III, pp. 138–139.

Hotel Westminster | Paris | 17th Oct: 1876

My dear Harry,

A line to thank you for your kind letter. I am indeed sorry that the claims of business obliged you to leave us here.³ We all miss our travelling companion, and all wish you could have gone⁴

I hope we shall meet in Gloucester Place.

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

To | Henry Powell Bartley Esqr

1. Henry Powell Bartley (1854–97), who qualified as a solicitor in August 1877 and set up practice at 30 Somerset Street, Portman Square, almost immediately becoming WC’s legal adviser in place of William Tindell. Bartley married Carrie Graves, three years his elder, on 12 March 1878 (see Clarke, pp. 191–194). This letter suggests that Harry Bartley was an intimate at Gloucester Place well before these events.
2. Written on a thin sheet of plain paper, cleanly cut on the left-hand side, the closure on the verso in landscape format.
3. Little is known about this visit to the Continent. Later letters ([1646] to Charles Reade of 18 October and [1654] to W. P. Frith of 15 November 1876) show that WC went as far as Switzerland. The likelihood seems to be that Bartley had accompanied WC, Caroline and Carrie to Paris, but had returned early to London while the author and his party continued their tour. In [1643] to George Bentley of 4 September 1876 following the completion of The Two Destinies, WC mentions an upcoming trip of a month. He withdrew £130 ‘Travelling Expenses’ on 16 September (Coumts: WC), and wrote again from Gloucester Place only on 21 October.
4. There is no period after ‘gone’ at the foot of the opening page and it is likely that the letter is incomplete, lacking the second leaf of a sheet of folding notepaper; in other words, the second page of a three-page letter may have been excised. The content also supports this theory: ‘gone’ seems to require a complement to complete the sense – presumably something along the lines of ‘gone ... with us to Switzerland’.

[1645] TO WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 17 OCTOBER 1876

MS: Glasgow (891117/162). Published: BGLL, III, p. 139.

Hotel Westminster | Paris | 17th Oct: 1876

My dear Tindell,

The enclosed copy of a letter which I have addressed by this post to Mr Neville of the Olympic Theatre, will explain itself.¹ I shall be here until the morning’s post delivery on Thursday next – then start for Calais at 11.45 a.m. and cross in the “Castalia” on Friday for London.² It is for you to say if a letter from “Benham and Tindell” shall be addressed to Mr Neville before my return – in the event of his publicly advertising the performance of No Thoroughfare at his theatre.³ I need only add now that no agreement has been drawn up – a personal agreement by word of mouth, on the conditions stated in my letter, is all that has passed between us, and no time for the production of the piece was absolutely fixed before I went abroad a month since.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. The copy is not found at Glasgow and was presumably destroyed; in [1647] of 18 October, WC requests Tindell to ‘consider my yesterday’s letter as not received, and return me the copy of my letter to Mr Neville by post to Gloucester Place’.
2. The Castalia was launched in 1875 by the English Channel Steam Ship Co. Designed by William Thomas Young Dicey, the steel ship had a revolutionary double-hull which was supposed to prevent sea-sickness, though WC was always proud of his sea-legs and never suffered in this way.
3. No Thoroughfare opened in November 1876 at the Royal Olympic Theatre, Wych Street, Strand. Henry Neville, the manager, appeared in the part of George Vendale, whom he had played in the original Adelphi production in 1867, while Arthur Stirling was Obenreizer. It was produced by Neville and Charles Reade's partner Laura Seymour. WC's annoyance with Neville about the production continued despite the involvement of his friend, Laura Seymour – see [1646] to Reade of 18 October 1876 and [1652] to Seymour of 10 November 1876.

[1646] To CHARLES READE, 18 OCTOBER 1876

MS: Noel. Extract: Clareson, p. 116. Published: BGLL, III, p. 140.

HOTEL WESTMINSTER 11 & 13 R DE LA PAIX | PARIS

October 18th 1876

My dear Reade,

Many thanks for your letter. I do not recognise in the failure of “The Duke’s Device”,¹ and in my absence in Switzerland,² any consideration which justifies Mr Neville in casting my piece without allowing me a voice in the matter.³ However, the mischief is done – and I gather from what you tell me that I shall subject the Theatre to serious pecuniary loss, if I do not yield to circumstances. On this account – and because I am also sincerely sensible of your friendly services – I write to Mr Neville by this post to let him produce the piece on the one condition that he guarantees me a run of thirty nights. For the rest, I shall not attend the rehearsals,⁴ because I will not accept a responsibility which Mr Neville has taken from me and placed on his own shoulders, and because I have not the slightest hope of doing anything to any good purpose with some of the actors engaged – notably with Mr Stirling.⁵ If all goes well, I shall be at home again on Friday night⁶ – and I will immediately provide Mr Neville with a written form of agreement which will set his mind at rest.

With love to Mrs Seymour

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. According to the announcements in the Times, a play adapted from the French featuring Frank Archer and Henry Neville and running at the Olympic during October.

2. See [1644] to Harry Bartley of 17 October 1876.

3. Henry Neville, manager of the Olympic, who played George Vendale in a revival of No Thoroughfare at his theatre from November 1876.

4. Though see [1652] to Laura Seymour, 10 November 1876

5. Arthur Stirling played Jules Obenreizer ‘after a long absence from the Stage’ (original programme note).

6. WC writes on the Wednesday.

[1647] To WILLIAM F. TINDELL, 18 OCTOBER 1876

MS: Glasgow (891117/163). Published: BGLL, III, p. 141.

HOTEL WESTMINSTER | 11 & 13, R DE LA PAIX | PARIS

18th October 1876

My dear Tindell,

Since I wrote to you yesterday, I have heard again from the theatre. The matter has gone too far to be stopped – and I have no reasonable alternative but to insist on “a guaranteed run” for the piece, and to let things take their course, and hope for the best. This I have done by today’s post.¹ So please consider my yesterday’s letter as not received, and return me the copy of my letter to Mr Neville by post to Gloucester Place.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

W.F. Tindell Esqre²

1. The letter to Henry Neville (referred to also in [1646] to Reade of the same date) remains untraced.

2. This is the last letter to Tindell in the bound volumes at Glasgow, and no later letters have been traced.

[3105] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, [5 SEPTEMBER-19 OCTOBER 1876]¹

MS: Private.² Published: A&C4, p. 22.

Welcome ... [excised text] | arrival at home.
Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Undated fragment, cut roughly from the foot of a letter, with no text on the verso. The thin paper appears the same as that used in [1645] of 17 October 1876 from the Hotel Westminster, Paris and the tentative dates mark his time there. The brief content might suggest that it comes from towards the end of that period, anticipating his return.
 2. Removed from an album together with a photographic reproduction of the 1850 J.E. Millais portrait of Collins.

[1648] TO THE LORD MAYOR AND LADY MAYORESS OF LONDON,¹ 21 OCTOBER 1876

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 141.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 21st October 1876

Mr Wilkie Collins regrets that absence from London on the 24th October will prevent him from having the honour of accepting the invitation of the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress.²

Under these circumstances Mr Collins hopes that the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress will be so good as to accept his thanks and his apologies.

-
1. William James Richmond Cotton (1822–1902), MP, Lord Mayor of London 1875–76, and his wife Caroline née Pottinger. He was made a baronet in 1892.
 2. One of Cotton's last events as Lord Mayor (his successor, Sir Thomas White, took over on 2 November) was to host a dinner for 300 people mainly from the dramatic profession on 24 October in the Egyptian Hall of the Mansion House, which is the Lord Mayor's residence. It began at 2 pm so the guests could perform their roles in the theatres that evening. See 'The Lord Mayor and the Drama', Times, 25 October 1876, p. 6a–c.

[1649] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 25 OCTOBER 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 142.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th Oct: 1876

Dear Mr Chatto,

I am just at home again, after travelling abroad – or I should have thanked you sooner for the copies of the "Destinies".¹

The proprietors of an American paper have tempted me to write a short story for their Christmas number. It will only occupy ten or eleven pages of the Temple Bar size – and it will be published in America on the 23rd December – or the 24th – I am not quite sure which day. Your December number of "Belgravia" is no doubt already filled up. But I don't like to make arrangements for publishing the story in any other English periodical without telling you first that I am writing it.²

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The Two Destinies, published in two volumes by Chatto & Windus in late August 1876.
 2. 'The Captain's Last Love', published in New York in E. A. Buck's Spirit of the Times, 23 December 1876, the first of the twelve stories which WC wrote for the publication, each Christmas until 1887. Andrew Chatto responded positively to WC's suggestion in a letter of the same date (Reading), but suggested the January issue would be more appropriate to prevent a pirated edition appearing in America.

[1650] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 26 OCTOBER 1876¹

MS: Melbourne (MS 6162/1). Published: BGLL, III, p. 142.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 24th Oct: 1876

Dear Mr Chatto,

Many thanks for your kind letter.

I must apologise for a slip of the pen. Instead of “December” I ought of course – as you point out – to have written “January” as the month for publication.² Christmas Eve will exactly suit the American publisher as well as yours vry truly

Wilkie Collins

I hope to be able to send you the title tomorrow or Monday at latest. It is not yet settled. If I think of anything in time, later post shall inform you.

1. Although the date on the letter undoubtedly indicates 24 October, this must be an error on WC’s part, as the contents make clear that this letter responds to Andrew Chatto’s letter of 25 October (Reading), which is in turn a reply to [1649] bearing the same date.

2. Referring to ‘The Captain’s Last Love’ – see [1649] to Chatto of the previous day. The story duly appeared in Belgravia in January 1877.

[1651] TO COUTTS & CO., 30 OCTOBER 1876

MS: Coutts (10003 Box 12/57b).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 143.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
30th October 1876

Gentlemen,

Please deliver to Mrs Charles Ward the tin box marked with my name, now in your possession.²

Wilkie Collins

Messrs Coutts & Co

1. On the verso: ‘30 Oct 1876 | Received the within named By | Jane Ward’.

2. In October 1875 WC had put his will and other important papers into a ‘tin box’ in the fire-proof room at Coutts bank. See [1562] to William Tindell, 4 October 1875.

[1652] TO LAURA SEYMOUR, 10 NOVEMBER 1876

MS: Noel. Extract: Clareson, p. 114. Published: BGLL, III, p. 143.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 10th Novr 1876

My dear Mrs Seymour,

One line to assure you that it is not my fault that I am absent from today’s full rehearsal. Mr Neville’s letter dated the 9th,¹ and informing me that the rehearsal begins today (10th) at 11 o’clock,² reached me this afternoon at half past twelve. Add another half hour to get to the Theatre – and there you have the dilemma. It is useless of course for me to attend the rehearsal two hours after it has begun.

If there is another full rehearsal tomorrow I have written to Mr Neville to say that I will attend it with pleasure.

My best thanks for all that your kindness has done for the piece.

Yours aftly | Wilkie Collins

1. Henry Neville, manager of the Olympic Theatre.

2. Of his revival of No Thoroughfare which opened this month. In [1646] to Charles Reade of 18 October 1876, WC had stated that would not attend the rehearsals, but this was before the play came ‘under the direction of Mrs Seymour and Mr Henry Neville’ (original programme note).

[1653] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 11 NOVEMBER 1876

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London

11th November 1876

Dear Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co

Forgive this late acknowledgment of the presentation-copies of the “Destinies” – (so prettily ornamented and so well printed!) – and of the Canadian newspaper, which has also reached me safely. My only excuse is that I have been travelling abroad, and have been laying in a stock of health for the winter season. I sincerely hope that my good friend Mr Hunter has also discovered the road that leads back to health. A line (when you have leisure) to tell me that he is really no longer an invalid will be very welcome.

I need hardly say that I have read those copyright articles with some consternation.¹ Are we never to have that vexed question set at rest? I really did think when that last “Act” passed into law, that we had found our way out of the troubled waters at last!

I am taking a good long holiday this time. And I don’t know yet when I am going to write another story – or what the unwritten story is likely to be. Nothing has a chance of occupying the public attention now but the question of War or No War.² Even the return of the Arctic Expedition has not caused much interest.³ In the literary world nothing seems likely to disturb the general stagnation.

With all good wishes | Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The articles on copyright in the Canadian newspapers have not been traced. As Copinger explains (3rd edn, pp. 615–616), many Canadian publishers considered that the 1875 Act gave them liberty to reprint British copyright works without the consent of or any remuneration to the author, which gave rise to a number of law suits.

2. Referring to the ‘Eastern Question’ – see [1660] to Sebastian Schlesinger of 30 December 1876.

3. The 1875 expedition led by George S. Nares on board HMS Discover, which returned in November 1876 having continued the mapping of Greenland and Ellesmere Island, but having failed to reach the North Pole.

[1654] TO W. P. FRITH, 15 NOVEMBER 1876

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, III, p. 145.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th November 1876

My dear Frith,

A thousand thanks. I shall be delighted to dine with you on Sunday at 7.30.

I have been away in Switzerland last month – and I only now know of Mrs Frith’s illness. Your invitation for Sunday is additionally welcome – for it tells me that the time of anxiety is a time that has happily passed away.¹

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. The nature of the illness remains unidentified, though Isabelle Frith (b. 1823) was to die just over three years later on 28 January 1880.

[1655] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 7 DECEMBER 1876

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, III, p. 145.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | Decr 7th 1876

Dear Mr Bentley,

My best thanks for your kind note. If Wednesday next the 13th will suit you, it will do admirably for me. If Wednesday is not quite convenient, I am entirely at your service on any later day.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[1656] TO HUNTER, ROSE & CO., 21 DECEMBER 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 145–146.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London.

Thursday 21st Decr 1876

Dear Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co

The enclosed letter (received from Messrs Harper of New York) speaks for itself.¹ If it is not too late to ~~you can~~ take legal proceedings to stop this abominable infringement of the rights of my American publishers, pray do so. If nothing can be done, I shall be, most reluctantly, obliged to give up publishing Canadian editions of my books. Harper & Brothers pay me large sums for my advance-sheets, and for the right of publishing in the States. In the States their right is generally respected. It is only Canada that gets between us and that threatens to deprive me of the valuable sale of my books in America.

How this man Belford can sell (of course at a profit to himself) a book for 72 cents which you publish at $1.50. passes my comprehension. Surely there must be ruinous trade allowance on the published price of a book in Canada? Is it not possible to publish so cheaply (if there is no other remedy) as to stop this unprincipled exportation? I would rather give up all profit from Canada on my side than be robbed by Belford Brothers of my sale in America.²

Pray let me hear from you by return mail. I sincerely hope that Mr Hunter's health is restored.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Hunter Rose & Co

1. The letter was from Belford Brothers of Toronto, who were famous in 1872 for their pirated Canadian edition of Tom Sawyer which, to the disgust of Mark Twain, was sold widely in the United States (see 'Alexander Belford', Publishers' Weekly, 20 October 1906, p. 1099). They were also the object of a successful action by Samuel Smiles after they reprinted his Thrift in late 1875 without authorization following the Canada Copyright Act of that year (see Copinger, 3rd edn, pp. 615–616). A copy of the letter in question is found in Parrish:

Toronto, Ont, | Aug 28th, 1876

Dear Sir,

We send you by to-day's mail sample copy of Wilkie Collins's new novel, "The Two Destinies", cloth, $1.50 American Currency.

We will lay them down to you in Buffalo at 72¢ net Amer. Currency in lots of not less than 250 copies.

The book we think will have a large train sale.

You can order by telegraph at our own expense.

Awaiting your reply, | We remain | Respy yours

(sgd) Belford Bros | (Belford Bros)

Mr Williams, Union News Co | N.Y.

2. From the spring of 1878, following the death of his partner Robert Hunter the previous summer, George Maclean Rose in fact briefly joined forces with the Belford brothers (Charles, Robert and Alexander) to form the Rose-Belford Publishing Company, with Rose as president and Robert Belford as manager. At that time, Belford's Monthly Magazine was amalgamated with Rose's Canadian Monthly under the new title Rose-Belford's Canadian Monthly and National Review – see Marilyn G. Flitton, Index to the Canadian Monthly (Toronto: Bibliographical Society of Canada, 1976), p. xviii.

[1657] TO THE REV. W. H. FREEMANTLE,¹ 23 DECEMBER 1876

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, III, p. 146.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 23rd Dec 1876

Dear Sir,

I have the pleasure of enclosing my contribution to your Poor Fund – for this year.

With all good wishes, | Believe me | truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Hon^{ble} & Rev^d | W. H. Freemantle

1. William Henry Freemantle (1831–1916), Fellow of Balliol, Canon of Canterbury – see to him [1806] of 18 December 1878. The amount of £5 was debited to WC’s bank account on 29 December as to ‘The Poor Fund’ (Coumts: WC).

[1658] TO LAURA SEYMOUR, 29 DECEMBER 1876

MS: Noel, with envelope.¹ Summary: Clareson, p. 123. Published: BGLL, III, p. 146.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th December 1876

A thousand thanks, my dear Mrs Seymour for your kind letter. If I could keep my eyes open and occupy a sitting-position after eleven o’clock at night, I should be only too glad to make one of your guests on Sunday.² But this damp and depressing weather crushes me with rheumatic pains and robs me of all my energies. I am fit for nothing but bed, before the time when you will be all sitting down to your joyous supper. Pray forgive my absence, and pray accept in this form – for yourself and for my dear old friend Reade – all the good wishes of the season.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Directed to ‘Mrs Seymour | 2. Albert Terrace | Knightsbridge | S.W.’, postmarked as dated.
2. New Year’s Eve – the letter was written on the Friday.

[1659] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 30 DECEMBER 1876

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 147–148.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.
30th Decr 1876

Dear Mr Rose,

Pray accept my thanks for a B/E for £25...- on account of royalties on “The Two Destinies”.¹

By this time you have no doubt received my letter relating to the proceedings of Mr Belford. I sincerely hope that the “decision” to which you refer may extend its prohibitory influence to the underselling in the United States of books published in Canada. If not, I see no hope of dealing in future with Messrs Harper – unless I leave them to fight the battle unembarrassed (for three months at any rate) by any publishing arrangements of mine in Canada. How sorry I should be to do this, I am sure I need not say.

I cannot tell you with what regret I read that part of your kind letter which relates to poor Mr Hunter. You are both associated with the pleasantest days I passed in Canada, when I remember that pleasant dinner at Mr Hunter’s on Christmas Day – and when I think of him now as a confirmed invalid – my news from Toronto is the saddest news that I have received for some time past.

With all good wishes | Believe me yours truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The sum had been credited as ‘Of Hunter Rose’ on 27 December (Coumts: WC).

[1660] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 30 DECEMBER 1876

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/33). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 148–149.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.
30th December 1876

My dear Sebastian Schlesinger,

Here I come troubling you about my premiums of Insurance in Boston, due in January next, as I believe. If you will kindly pay the premiums for me, you will be adding one more to my obligations.

The sum diminishes a little every year – or alters in some way – through profits bonuses and God knows what. Not knowing what the present amount may be, I cannot now send it through my bankers – Messrs Coutts & Co Strand, London. But I can remit through Messrs Rollins Morse when you tell me the sum. Or if it is easier – can you “draw” on Coutts for it? I leave it to you – knowing (as you will too plainly perceive) nothing whatever of the subject!¹

My best and kindest remembrances to Mrs Schlesinger. You are both I hope quite well. Here, there is nothing going on but rain and the Eastern Question.² I laid in a stock of health in Switzerland during the autumn – and it is not quite worn out yet. You have heard I suppose that Fred is in Ireland, canvassing the Election at Waterford. He seems to have a good chance of getting into Parliament this time, so far as I can learn.³

Ever yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. E. Rollins Morse & Brother, Boston. WC continued paying into the insurance policy for the rest of his life – see [2805] to Schlesinger, 25–26 January 1888.

2. The Eastern Question, never far from the surface of British politics, re-emerged in late 1875 with Lord Derby’s and Disraeli’s acquisition of the majority of Suez Canal shares and increasing unrest in the Ottoman Empire. Super-power rivalry and Russian ambitions resulted in the outbreak of the Russian-Turkish War of 1877–78.

3. Fred Lehman unsuccessfully contested the Irish parliamentary seat for the County of Waterford in a by-election. The result was announced in the Times on the day following the election (23 January 1877, p. 5d): ‘The High Sheriff declared the following to be the result of the polling for the county of Waterford: – [James] Delahunty, 1,799; Lehmann, 534. It is stated that Mr. Lehmann will petition against the return on the ground of priestly influence.’ Lehman wrote a letter on the subject to the editor of the Times (25 January 1877, p. 10a).

[3163] TO THE DIRECTORS OF THE NEW ENGLAND MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, 2 JANUARY 1877

MS: Massachusetts HS (Foster Family autograph collection, Box 5 Folder 20). Published: A&C6, p. 13.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
London | 2nd January 1877

Gentlemen,

I trouble you with a line to inform you that my friend, Mr Sebastian Schlesinger, of the firm of Naylor & Co 6, Oliver Street, has kindly undertaken to pay the premium on my Policy of Insurance N^o 53404,¹ due on the 12th of February next.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To the Directors of | The New England Mutual | Insurance Co | Boston. U.S.A²

1. For details of the policy, see [1426] to Tindell, 3 March 1874.

2. Written at the top of the first page above the printed address.

[1661] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 2 JANUARY 1877

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/65), with envelope.¹ Published: BGLL, III, pp. 149–150

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
2nd January 1877

My dear Sebastian Schlesinger,

In case of accidents by post, here is one more line to say that I wrote by last Saturday’s mail to accept your kind proposal to pay my premiums of Insurance in Boston – due, as I discover on referring to an old diary, on the 6th and 12th of February next.

This will give us time to exchange letters. You can (without any trouble to yourself I hope) let me know what the premiums amount to this year in English money – and I can remit the sum by return mail, through Coutts & Co.

Thanking you beforehand – and with kindest remembrances
Yours always | Wilkie Collins

I have written to the respective offices to say that you will pay the premiums in case of some such formality being “de rigueur”. In any case it may save you the trouble of sending a messenger. An idea has just “shaken me to the soul”!² Suppose, by any extraordinary chance, that you should be away from Boston, on business or pleasure? I have written to Messrs Rollins Morse to beg them – if you should be absent – to act for me in your place. It will do no harm to take this extraordinary precaution – and now “my mind is at ease”!³

1. Signed and directed to ‘Sebastian Schlesinger Esqr | Messrs Naylor & Co | 6. Oliver Street | Boston | Mass: | U.S. America’, no postmark, but franked in Boston on 14 January.

2. WC quotes Miss Gwilt: ‘Those are the words which have shaken me to the soul. Those are the words which make me feel as if the dead man had left his grave, and had put his hand on the place in my heart where my terrible secret lies hidden from every living creature but myself’ (Armada, Book Third, ch. 14, ‘Miss Gwilt’s Diary’).

3. This even more common phrase is not found in WC’s work until later: ‘Agnes shook her head sadly. “I wish I could agree with you, Henry – I wish I could honestly say that my mind is at ease.”’ (The Haunted Hotel (1879), ch. 15). He was to use the phrase again in Heart and Science in 1883, chs. XXII and LVI.

[3222] TO EMILY CHARLOTTE TWEED,¹ 9 JANUARY 1877

MS: Häusser. Published: A&C8, p. 17.

90. Gloucester Place, | Portman Street. W.
9th January 1877

Dear Mrs Tweed,

You are quite right. There was no address on your first letter – and I unluckily threw aside the envelope, or the post-mark might have helped me.

If you will send me one of your daughter’s stories as a specimen I will read it with pleasure – and I will tell you frankly what my impression is.² The number of ladies who are plunging head foremost into Literature is alarmingly large – and the competition is formidable as a necessary consequence.

But there is always a welcome ready for a writer who has a real vocation for the Art.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Absence from London has delayed my answer. Pray excuse me.

1. Emily Charlotte Tweed née Joseph (1830–1904) was the fifth child of Sir Samuel Joseph (1791–1850), the sculptor known to WC’s father William. There are two letters from WmC to Joseph in WC’s biography of his father, and in the preface he lists him as one of WmC’s friends who gave him ‘valuable assistance’ (see Memoirs, I, pp. vi, 186, 262, 277–279, 287).

2. The daughter referred to is probably Beatrice M. Tweed (born 1855), second child (of twelve) of Emily and George Tweed who were married in 1852 (information from the wife of Beatrice’s great grandson who owns this letter). No stories by Beatrice have been traced.

[3293] TO UNIDENTIFIED FRENCH TRANSLATOR,¹ 12 JANUARY 1877

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, pp. 13–14.

Londres | 12 Janvier 1877

Je vous prie d’accepter mes remerciements sincères pour l’interessante [sic] addition que votre bonté vient de faire à ma bibliothèque. Votre traduction du chef d’oeuvre [sic] de l’un des plus grands écrivains de toutes les époques ou de toutes les nations est, autant que je puis en juger, admirablement réussie. Je suis surtout frappé de la manière dont vous avez rendu les saveurs (si je puis m’exprimer ainsi) de la délicatesse exquise du style de [Herne].² La réussite en pareille matière devait être excessivement difficile à obtenir et vous y êtes parvenu.

Je peux déjà prévoir le plaisir que j’éprouverai à voir mon petit roman traduis [sic] dans votre langue.

Croyez moi votre bien dévoué
Wilkie Collins.

Je ne veux pas fermer ma lettre sans féliciter l'artiste de les [sic] charmantes illustrations. Leur execution [sic] est magistrale. Ce sont des tableaux dans le meilleur sens du mot.³

-
1. Apparently to someone who was to translate one of WC's shorter works.
 2. Reference unidentified.
 3. Translated with minor errors, possibly by an assistant more competent in French than WC, and written in another hand with what seems to be WC's own signature.

London | 12 January 1877

My dear sir,

Please accept my sincere thanks for the interesting addition your kindness has just made to my library. Your translation of the masterpiece of one of the greatest writers of all ages or nations is, as far as I can judge, admirably successful. I am particularly struck by the manner in which you have rendered the flavours (if I may so express myself) of the exquisite delicacy of the style of [Herne]. Success in such matters must be exceedingly difficult to obtain, and you have succeeded.

I can already foresee the pleasure I will experience seeing my little novel translated into your language.

Believe me your devoted | Wilkie Collins.

I do not want to close my letter without congratulating the artist on the charming illustrations. Their execution is masterly. These are paintings in the best sense of the word.

[1662] TO KATE FIELD, 19 JANUARY 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 150.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 19th January 1877

Dear Miss Field,

By all means send me the piece – and I will make time to look over it.¹

Is the original by a modern French writer? If yes, you must please get his leave before it is acted. The law now provides for this – if he takes the lawful precautions. The original author's permission and a share for him in the profits are “articles of religion” with

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

Miss Cavendish has taken my advice, and the advice of her other friends in the U.S. – and has deferred her visit to America.²

After I have looked at the piece, I will call on you, and report my impressions

1. The piece, a translation from the French and set during the Napoleonic Wars, is described in some detail in [1664] to Kate Field of 9 February 1877, but has not been identified.

2. Kate Field was thinking of Ada Cavendish for the principal female role in the French play – see again [1664] to her of 9 February 1877.

[1663] TO CHARLES DICKENS JR, 29 JANUARY 1877

MS: Morgan (Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/ 18). Copy: Wolff Collection (1363g), with minor variants (suggesting a first draft), in WC's hand on MS of letter from Charles Dickens Jr of 26 January 1877. Published: Wolff, p. 263 (from copy); BGLL, III, p. 151.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 29th January 1877

My dear Charley,

I will make time to write for you – and I will do my very best – for your sake, and in remembrance of old times that can never be forgotten by me.

Turning to the business side of the matter, I accept your terms with pleasure – and I understand them to be these:

I am to write you a story extending from thirty to thirty five columns of “All The Year Round” size. The copy is to be sent in not later than May next – and you are to have the right of publishing the story in your “extra number” only – on payment to me of One hundred pounds.¹

On my side, I retain the copyright – and the right of authorising reprints and translations beyond the limits of Great Britain and Ireland – the United States of course being included in the rights of the author.

As to reprinting, in book-form, here, the story will be too short to stand alone – and it will only be included in the next new volume of my collected works, after it has served its purpose in your pages.²

Believe me | my dear Charley | always truly yours | WC

P.S. One line to say that I rightly understand this proposal, and I will get to work.

1. See the letter from Charles Dickens Jr asking WC to write a serial for All The Year Round (Wolff Collection, 1363f; Wolff, p. 263).

2. In the event the story was ‘Percy and the Prophet’ (All The Year Round, 2 July 1877), occupying fifty-nine columns.

[1664] TO KATE FIELD, 9 FEBRUARY 1877

MS: Boston (KF 109). Published: Whiting, pp. 340–341; BGLL, III, pp. 151–152.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 9th Feby 1877.

Dear Miss Field,

Three times I have tried to get to New Cavendish Street – and three times some atrocious obstacle has started up and stopped me. Today I go to Paris for a week or ten days – and when I come back “I’m darned if I don’t try again!”¹

In the meantime, I have read three acts of the piece – with all the more interest, seeing that I know it thoroughly well.² I saw it (superbly acted by the principal woman) in Paris – about seventy or eighty years ago.³ I have also got it among my volumes of plays. There is no doubt about the “situations” – but they won’t do for the English stage in their French form. As to Miss Cavendish, I have spoken to her about it. At present, she is so ill that she can barely get on to the stage – and she is too young and slim to “make up” for a woman with a big son who fights duels in the “sacred cause of virtue”. It is a part for an older actress – supposing it has not already been tried on the English Stage. I must inquire, and tell you what I can find out when I return.

I send back the Mss with this note. It would be easy to change the scene of the piece to our War in the Peninsula against Napoleon – and to make the soldiers Englishmen. But we must first be sure that this has not already been done. It would be essential to the success of the play in England.

In great haste | Yours truly | WC

1. By the quotation marks, WC merely intends to indicate that the phrase is to be rendered in an American accent.

2. The French play in question has not been identified – see [1662] to Kate Field of 19 January 1877.

3. In jest. WC is now fifty-three years old and must mean ‘a long time ago’, perhaps during his first visit to Paris with Charles Ward in August 1844.

[1665] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 9 FEBRUARY 1877

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 152–153 (incomplete). Amended: A&C13, p. 20.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
9th February 1877

Dear Madam

Your kind letter reached me yesterday evening.

I regret to /inform you/ ~~say~~ that it is now too late to translate my story into French. The right of French translation has been purchased from me – and the book is on the point of being published in Paris.¹

In this case, the writer who translated “The Two Destinies” when it first appeared, periodically, in a Paris magazine, is the person who has bought the right of now publishing the story in book-form.² The same translation serves, of course, in both cases.

Believe me | Madam | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
I write in great haste – on the point of leaving London.³

1. The French edition was published as Les Deux Destinées by Librairie Hachette et Cie. in Paris in 1877, though no payment from Hachette is recorded in WC's bank account between £40 on 8 February 1875 and £70 on 1 September 1879. It was translated by Alfred Hédouin (BnF: 1819–1898), with a note that it was an authorized translation: 'Roman Anglais traduit avec l'autorisation de l'auteur'. WC was first introduced to Hédouin by Louis Blanc (1811–1882) a French politician and historian. In 1864 he wrote to WC from a London address:

A friend of mine, Mr Alfred Hédouin would be happy to obtain your assent to his translating into French your last novel Armadale. Mr. Hédouin is a man of great attainments and a perfect master both of the French and the English language. His is a beautiful style; nor do I think you could possibly find a person more competent to the task.

(Louis Blanc to Wilkie Collins, 2 December 1864 (Private collection)).

In fact Armadale was translated by Emma Allouard and published by J. Hetzel and A. Lacroix (Paris, 1867) – see [0599] to George Smith, 26 October 1864.

2. Alfred Hédouin's translation was serialised in La Mode Illustrée in 26 parts from 7 May 1876 to 29 October 1876.
3. Bound for Paris 'for a week or ten days' – see [1664] to Kate Field of the same date.

[1666] TO MRS WAGG,¹ 21 FEBRUARY 1877

MS: Unknown: On sale: Pickering & Chatto Antiquarian Booksellers' Catalogue, November 1986. Published: BGLL, III, p. 153.

90 Gloucester Place, Portman Square, 21st February 1877

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to Mrs Wagg, and encloses with great pleasure his autograph – on the next page.²

-
1. Unidentified autograph hunter.
2. 'No enclosure is now present', according to the sellers' catalogue.

[1667] TO JOHN LATEY,¹ [EARLY MARCH 1877]

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:14/P55 7D), incomplete.² Published: BGLL, III, p. 153.

... can favour me with a visit on Wednesday next, between 3 and 4 o'Clock. If this appointment should not be convenient, any later day in the ...

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
J.C. Latey Esq

1. Probably John Lash Latey (1808–91), editor of the Illustrated London News from 1863 to 1890, whose name WC has perhaps confused in the addressee line. It might just be his son John Latey Jr (1842–1902: ODNB), then editor of the companion Penny Illustrated Paper, who also had an editorial role at the ILN.

2. Fragment cut off an otherwise untraced letter for WC's autograph, with seven lines of text on the recto, and the valediction, signature, and address line on the verso. The style of the hand and signature might suggest a date in the 1870s, and the letter may well be in connection with the appearance of 'My Lady's Money' in the Illustrated London News at Christmas 1877 – see [1672] to John Latey of 17 March 1877. The tentative dating derives from the relationship to that letter.

[1668] TO KATE FIELD, 10 MARCH 1877

MS: Boston (Eng 505). Published: BGLL, III, p. 154.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th March 1877

Dear Miss Field,

I heartily wish I could say Yes. But the Gout has got me again – and I have no hope of being able to go to the Theatre so soon as Wednesday next.¹ It is needless to say that you have my best wishes for your success.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Referring to Field's performance in the leading role in her own one-act play Extremes Meet opening at the St James's Theatre – see the brief notice in the Times of 27 March 1877. On a leaf attached to WC's letter, there is the note 'The price of success is unflagging will. | Kate Field | London. March 13. 1877'.

[1669] TO P. SEMTER,¹ 10 MARCH 1877

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 234 (as to 'H. P. Sumter'). Published: BGLL, III, p. 154.

90. Gloucester Place | London. W. | 10th March 1877

Dear Sir,

I can only thank you for your proposal, and for the kind terms in which you write of my little story. The right of translating "The Captain's Last Love" into the German language has been already purchased from me.²

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Herr P. Semter

1. Otherwise unidentified German translator. It seems highly likely that WC mistakenly assumes his correspondent is male and that P. Semter is in fact the female German translator to whom he writes with irritation on 17 March ([1673]).
2. Published in the New York Spirit of the Times, 23 December 1876, and in Belgravia in January 1877. No German translation of the story seems to be recorded in GV.

[1670] TO MADAM LUÉ,¹ 15 MARCH 1877

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 155.

90. Gloucester Place | London. W. | 15th March 1877

Madam,

Messrs Chatto and Windus have forwarded your letter to me – the copyright of my novels being my property.

I regret that you did not communicate with me before you undertook the translation of "Man and Wife". All my works are translated into French – and other European languages. The right of translating "Man and Wife" into the French language was purchased from me by Messrs Hachette and Cie the eminent Parisian publishers some years since – and the book was published in French ("Mari et Femme") as long ago as the year 1872.

I remain Madam, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Madam Lué

1. Unidentified translator.

[1671] TO WYBERT REEVE, 15 MARCH 1877¹

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, III, p. 155.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Thursday 15th March

My dear Reeve,

I shall be delighted to see you tomorrow (Friday) at one o'Clock. I am obliged to suggest this hour – as I have an appointment tomorrow at two o’Clock. If earlier than one will do better – I am at your service, at your own time.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Dating confirmed by the address, the notepaper and the calendar.

[1672] TO JOHN LATEY,¹ 17 MARCH 1877

MS: Clarke Collection. Published: BGLL, III, p. 156.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Saturday. 17th March 1877

Dear Mr Latey,

I shall be happy to see Mr Ingram here on any day next week (the earlier day the better) which may be most convenient to him,² and at any hour before three o’clock.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. See the fragment to the same man, dated [early March 1877].

2. Probably William James Ingram (1847–1924), managing director of the Illustrated London News from 1868, though it might also be his younger brother Charles L. N. Ingram, who also had a managerial role from the early 1870s. Both were the sons of the founder of the paper, Herbert Ingram (1811–60), who drowned in 1860.

[1673] TO [P. SEMTER],¹ 17 MARCH 1877

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 235 (recipient unidentified); BGLL, III, p. 156.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London

17th ~~April~~ March 1877

Dear Madam,

Your letter has been translated to me by a friend.² I do not unfortunately understand the German language.

If the translation is correct, I fear you did not find my last letter so intelligible as I tried to make it. I can only repeat that the right of translating the story into German has been purchased from me by a German publisher. He, and he only, has the right of publishing it in Germany. I have no further authority over it. And if you publish it, you commit a violation of the law, and expose yourself to an action for damages.

Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. See [1669] to this recipient of 10 March 1877. Given that this is clearly WC’s second letter to the German correspondent in question concerning translation rights, it seems highly likely that this is again P. Semter – assuming that WC mistook her for a man in the first instance.

2. Perhaps through Charles Ward (see [0374] of 2 October 1860 and [0451] of 13 December 1861, both to him); or perhaps by Fred Lehmann or one of his clerks (see [2807] to him of 3 February 1888).

[1674] TO FRANK ARCHER, 22 MARCH 1877

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.¹ Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 283. Published: Archer, p. 185; BGLL, III, p. 157, amended A&C7, pp. 15–16.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.²

22nd March 1877

My dear Archer

Thank you heartily for the Portrait. It is not only an excellent likeness – but, as I think – a finely-executed photograph.³ You are in luck – it is not everybody who is well treated by photography Richmond (the portrait-painter) described photography, from his point of view, as

“Justice without Mercy”!⁴

Your kind letter finds me just recovering from another attack of gout – not so severe as usual this time.

It is needless to say that I shall feel interested in the result of the Hamlet-experiment.⁵ Your old friend “Julian Gray” still “strolls” through the country theatres with Miss Cavendish.⁶ He has been translated into Italian, and turned into an austere magistrate – the Italian public won’t have a priest of any sort on the stage! The piece has been a great success at Rome, Florence,⁷ and Milan.⁸

The ladies join with me in kind remembrances

Yours always truly | WC

1. With a pink embossed device on the point of the flap, signed and directed to ‘Frank Archer Esqre | 24 Grove Terrace | Highgate Road | N. W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | X | MR 22 | 77’ and verso ‘LONDON N.W | L N | MR 22 | 77’, with ‘WC 11’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. Black embossed Gothic type ranged right.

3. Perhaps the handsome portrait by Window & Grove, reproduced as the frontispiece in Archer’s An Actor’s Notebooks, which must date from around this time.

4. Referring to George Richmond (1809–96), RA, whom WC probably met during the family trip to Rome in 1838 (see [0035] to him, 20 May 1847; also Memoirs, II, pp. 130–132). Richmond’s witty phrase exploits the traditional pairing of justice and mercy found in both classical and biblical sources, and had already been echoed twice by WC in his fiction. In Armada he notes that the ‘dreadful justice of photography would have had no mercy’ on Neelie Milroy (Book Second, ch. 2), while in The Moonstone Betteredge accuses gentlefolk of ‘staining your fingers in the pursuit of photography, and doing justice without mercy on everybody’s face in the house’ (First Period, ch. 8). There is more on WC and photography posted at the Lewis website.

5. Archer had not worked since 11 November, and did not appear in Hamlet until 6 July at the Princesses Theatre, Edinburgh. He records that ‘with expenses of advertising, printing, posting, extra company, fees &c &c made the cost amount to (Loss) – £17-5-11’ (‘Theatre Salaries and Parts’, Bk. 2, p. 21, Archer Archive).

6. Gray is the character in The New Magdalen which Frank Archer had played in the London production at the Olympic Theatre, from 19 May to 27 September 1873.

7. See [3183] to Signora Marini, 21 August 1876.

8. See [1687] to Georgina Hogarth, 12 July 1877. The play was translated into Italian by Professor Paolo Ferrari; it was also performed in Paris, Berlin, the Hague, Moscow and Boston (clipping from the Daily Telegraph, 26 June 1873, pasted into ‘Personal Criticism, Bills, etc’, vol. 1, Archer Archive).

[1675] TO HARRIET JACKSON,¹ 26 APRIL 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 158.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London

26th April 1877

Dear Miss Harriet,

Your kind letter found me in bed – suffering from the painful malady called rheumatic gout.

Now that I am getting better, I find my desk covered with unanswered letters. I take you as my first correspondent – and I contribute to your autograph-collection with the greatest pleasure.

We are thousands of miles away from each other – but I kiss my young reader’s hand nevertheless, and beg her to forgive me if I only write this brief reply.

Believe me | Dear Miss Harriet | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Miss Harriet Jackson

1. A young autograph hunter, perhaps in the United States or the Australian Colonies.

[1676] TO [HUGH BIERS], 10 MAY 1877

MS: Melbourne (Box 502/5), note on All The Year Round proofs of ‘Percy and the Prophet’.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 158 (as to [Henry C. Biers]).

May 10th 1877

Note: – First Portion set up in proof. The whole story will be published in London complete, on Monday July 2nd 1877, in The (Extra) Midsummer number of “All The Year Round.”

1. We have been unable to trace the appearance of the story in an Australian journal (Johnson-Woods covers only longer serial novels), so it seems best to assume that the note was directed to WC’s Melbourne agent – see [1680] and [1683], related notes of 30 May and 8 June 1877.

[1677] TO RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, 15 MAY 1877

MS: Trinity (Houghton 6/84). Published: BGLL, III, p. 158.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 15th May 1877

Dear Lord Houghton,

I can only thank you for the invitation with which you have honoured me, and beg you to accept my excuses. An attack of rheumatic gout keeps me still a prisoner in my room.

Believe me | most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[1678] TO LAURA SEYMOUR, 25 MAY 1877

MS: Noel. Published: Clareson, p. 114; BGLL, III, p. 159.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 25th May 1877

My dear Mrs Seymour,

I have no wish to introduce “a firebrand” into the theatre – and we will certainly try all that can be done to find another actor as good as [del] /Mr Firebrand/ without personal objections to him.¹ The misfortune is that I am still crippled by my rheumatic knees – when I ought to be going to the theatres and looking out for the men that the piece wants.² Milder weather is my only hope because it will allow me to get out.

Betteredge

Godfrey Ablewhite

Sergeant Cuff

How are we to cast those three parts?³ I write to Mr Neville today to ask him what he thinks about engaging Mr Mead – whose “Pistol” in Henry the Fifth struck me as showing him to be a thoroughly trustworthy actor.

Yrs affly | WC

1. Here WC (or possibly a later hand) appears to have cancelled the real name of the actor in question (who remains unidentified) and substituted ‘Mr Firebrand’.

2. The dramatic version of The Moonstone at the Olympic from 17 September 1877, in which Henry Neville played Franklin Blake and Laura Seymour Miss Clack. It was her last part before her death in 1879.

3. In the event Thomas Swinbourne was Cuff, after the part had been offered to Charles Collette (see [1693] to him of 6 August 1877), while J. W. Hill played the part of Betteredge and Charles Harcourt that of Ablewhite.

[1679] TO E. TURNER,¹ 27 MAY 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 159–160.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square W. | 27th May 1877

Dear Sir,

I shall be obliged if you will kindly send to me one more complete proof of “Percy and the Prophet”, when you send the proofs in triplicate of the concluding portion of the story – from slip 16.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
On receipt of these proofs, I shall at once return my own proofs corrected for Revise.
Mr E. Turner

1. Presumably the man responsible (to Charles Dickens Jr) for the printing of All The Year Round, the 1877 summer number of which carried WC's 'Percy and the Prophet'.

[1680] TO [HUGH BIERS], 30 MAY 1877

MS: Melbourne (Box 502/5), note on All The Year Round proofs of 'Percy and the Prophet'. Published: BGLL, III, p. 160 (as to Henry C. Biers).

Corrected Proof for Melbourne.

"Percy and The Prophet" Concluded. The first four slips were sent in corrected proof /by Registered letter-post/¹ by direct Victoria Mail of May 11th. No other direct mail before May 31st – or you would have had this earlier.

WC

May 30/77

1. The phrase 'by Registered letter-post' is an afterthought, with the place of insertion indicated by a line.

[1681] TO EDWIN DE LEON,¹ 1 JUNE 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 160.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 1st June 1877

Dear Mr De Leon

My evil destiny has made my vacation one long interval of illness. Rheumatic gout again – all over me – ending in my knees. I am just getting well enough to be helped into a carriage to take the air – and when I am brought home again, I am so weak that I generally fall asleep. But I am getting on – and I hope soon to write again and report myself well enough to have the pleasure of seeing you before you leave London.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Edwin De Leon, American diplomat and journalist, whose work WC had earlier recommended to London publishers (see, for example, [1392] to George Bentley of 21 November 1873). See also De Leon's autobiography, Thirty Years of My Life on Three Continents (2 vols; London: Ward & Downey, 1890).

[1682] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 1 JUNE 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Extract: Davis, p. 284. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 160–161.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London 1st June 1877

Dear Mr Rose

I am indeed grieved (though hardly surprised) by the sad news which your letter conveys to me.¹ You know the grateful sense I have always entertained of the kindness shown by your firm to me and my godson during our visit to Toronto. I have since that time thought of you and of poor Mr Hunter as of two valued friends – and already only the memory is left of one of those friends! You have my sincerest sympathy – and I can well understand what the loss of him must be to you. Quiet modest and unaffected as he was I think I could see something – even in one short intercourse – of those other virtues under the surface which made him essentially a lovable man.

I have but a poor report to send you of myself. The miserable English spring of this year has been marked (in my calendar) by another attack of rheumatic gout. I am only now able to get into a carriage with help, and to take the air in that way as a means of restoring my strength. Later, I must try what a change to the drier air of the continent will do for me.

Pray accept my best thanks for a B/E for £25...- on account of royalties, enclosed in your letter; and believe me

With all good wishes | Yours most truly | Wilkie Collins

To | Geo Maclean Rose Esq

1. Rose's partner Robert Hunter had recently died after more than two years of illness, aged 39. Born in 1838 in Manchester, England, he had founded Hunter Rose with George Maclean Rose in 1861 in Quebec City, moving the firm to Ottawa in 1865 then Toronto in 1871. He left a wife, Catharine, and a daughter, Hannah, aged 15 (records from Ancestry.co.uk). He is buried in Saint James Cemetery, Toronto.

[1683] TO [HUGH BIERS], 8 JUNE 1877

MS: Melbourne (Box 502/5), note on All The Year Round proofs of 'Percy and the Prophet'. Published: BGLL, III, p. 161 (as to [Henry C. Biers]).

Duplicate | June 8th 1877 Corrected Revise

Note: – | Corrected proof previously sent as follows – in two portions.

First portion by direct mail of May 11th/77

Second Portion. Completing the story, by direct mail of May 31st

The present Duplicate is despatched in the next direct mail – June 8th.

WC

[1684] TO WILLIAM WINTER,¹ 18 JUNE 1877

MS: Folger (1733 Yc588/3). Published: B&C, II, pp. 406–407.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.² | 18th June 1877

My dear Sir,

You need no introduction to me – though I am glad to hear from my friends Whitelaw Reid³ and Boucicault. I was one of your readers in America, and I was sorry that I missed the opportunity – which you now kindly offer to me – of becoming personally acquainted with you.

Until within the last few weeks, I have been confined to my room by rheumatic gout. The malady has now descended from my eyes to my knees. Getting in and out of a carriage and taking a chair or leaving a chair are still /such/ serious difficulties to me that I must ask you to forgive me, for the present, if I fail to follow my letter personally. But, when you are passing near this street, pray take the opportunity (if you can spare me a few minutes) of letting me see you here. I am always at home until half past two in the afternoon. Soon after that time, I am taken to certain electric baths, which I hope are helping me to get well. Choose your own day, and think only of your own convenience – and/, meanwhile,/ believe me,

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

William Winter Esq

1. William Winter (1836–1917), drama critic of the New York Tribune from 1865 to 1909.

2. Black, Gothic type centered. Above the printed address is added in Winter's hand: 'Received. June 18. 1877. Answered.'

3. Whitelaw Reid (1837–1912), Cincinnati journalist, editor of the New York Tribune from 1872.

[3106] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 26 JUNE 1877

MS: Unknown. On sale: Barry Cassidy Rare Books (June 2008); Up Country Letters (February 2009); David J. Holmes Autographs (September 2009).¹ Published: A&C4, pp. 22–23.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 26th June 1877

Dear Mr Winter,

I return the articles with my best thanks – and with sincere admiration of the keen critical insight which they exhibit, and of the admirably calm unprejudiced tone in which they are written. Your review of that unhappy woman’s first attempt at acting might have excited her gratitude – it is so generous as well as so just.² But I have seen her and heard her³ – and nothing she says or does on the stage or off it, will ever surprise me!

I am getting on slowly, but I hope surely, with the help of my baths.⁴ I am really vexed that my illness prevents me from giving you the welcome to England which, under happier circumstances, I should so gladly have offered.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

William Winter

1. According to the description provided by David J. Holmes, the manuscript letter is accompanied by newspaper cuttings, and features a marginal annotation in purple ink, ‘Received June 26 | Wilkie Collins | Articles on Miss A. Dickinson referred to are within. Answered June 28’. There is also an addition in black ink in the same hand at the top of the page above the printed address, ‘One of the precious letters of my dear old friend Wilkie Collins. – | William Winter’.

2. The reference is to Anna Elizabeth Dickinson (1842–1932), authoress, public speaker, and advocate of the rights of both women and African Americans, who took up a career as an actress from spring 1876, performing first in her own historical drama, A Crown of Thorns, a feminist retelling of the story of Anne Boleyn. The play had its first night at the Globe Theatre, Boston, on 8 May 1876, and, after, touring in New England and New York State, opened at the Eagle Theatre, New York City almost a year later on 4 April 1877. William Winter was present on both these opening nights and thus wrote two reviews, each published in the New York Tribune on the day following the performance. The second of these commented on the difference between the two appearances:

When we first saw Miss Dickinson upon the stage, the question raised by her performance was the question whether it is possible for a woman to succeed as an actress, in the highest line of dramatic art, who attempts the theater in mature life and without a theatrical education. Miss Dickinson’s representation did not leave us long in doubt. It was not only crude; it was not only deficient of that sort of talent which is specifically called dramatic; but it displayed a mind and temperament rigidly and inflexibly determined upon the self-assertion which is totally incomptable with the assertion of identities distinct from self. Miss Dickinson presented Miss Dickinson – and, being considerable flurried, did not present her to great advantage. Last night, in a stage appearance which raised the same familiar question to which we have referred, she again presented the same familiar personage. This time, however, she was not dazed by strange surroundings, and so her peculiar individualism ... seemed to find full and ample expression. Miss Dickinson is a type of force, and as a type of force she was sufficiently successful. ... Firmness, combativeness, primness, acerbity, loquacity, mental sufficiency, and a kind of shimmering metallic hardness of disposition were the salient elements of this embodiment.

(New York Tribune, 5 April 1877, p. 5)

In response to this and other hostile press notices, Dickinson spoke at length to the Eagle audience at the conclusion of the performance on 9 April 1877, declaring: ‘if I have been known for anything among you, I think I have been known as a defender of the wronged and the oppressed. Candidly and honestly, I really know of no more utterly wronged and oppressed person in some respects in this town than the woman who stands before you.’ (reported in the New York Tribune, 10 April 1877, p. 5).

3. Since there is no record of Dickinson crossing the Atlantic, this must have been during WC’s North American reading tour, though there is no mention of such an occasion in Hanes 2008. However, James Redpath of the Boston Lyceum (who took over the arrangements for WC’s tour – see [1397] to him of 9 December 1873) had acted as agent for Dickinson’s public speaking engagements for several years (J. Matthew Gallman, America’s Joan of Arc: The Life of Anna Elizabeth Dickinson (OUP, 2006), pp. 66–68).

4. A reference to the ‘electric baths’ mentioned in WC’s first letter to Winter of 18 June 1877 ([1684]).

[1685] TO LAURA SEYMOUR, 4 JULY 1877

MS: Noel. Published: Clareson, p. 114–15; BGLL, III, p. 162.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th July 1877

In great haste

My dear Mrs Seymour,

Caroline left at your house yesterday the first act of The Moonstone.

The second act I am now correcting for you. You have only to send me a line when you want it.

I should have written yesterday – but I was very busy with Neville on the subject of the “cast”. We have decided this difficult question to my entire satisfaction. If the negotiations succeed, the complete performance will, as I believe, be really remarkable.¹

I hear you go to Margate this afternoon. May the weather be all that you can wish! and may Miss Clack begin to assume a living form when you return! (N.B. I am quite confident about Miss Clack and the public with you to make them known to each other).²

Yrs affly | WC

My love to Reade

1. Neither critics nor public really took to the heavily altered dramatic version. Dutton Cook calls it ‘more ingenious than interesting’, and suggests that it ‘suffers by the suppression of its more romantic qualities’ (Cook, p. 341).

2. Laura Seymour played Miss Clack when the play opened on 17 September but by the end of the run she had been replaced by Miss Gerard. One critic called her interpretation of the role ‘ultra-farcical’ (Clareson, p. 123 n. 12). Dutton Cook says Miss Clack ‘wearies far more than she amuses’ and adds that Seymour was ‘an actress prone to exaggeration and indiscreetly anxious to be droll’ (Cook, p. 343).

[1686] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 7 JULY 1877

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 162–163.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th July 1877

My dear Bentley,

I am still suffering from crippled knees – and only slowly recovering with the help of electricity.

I have written to Mr Whitfield to beg him to let me defer the sitting until I am stronger, and looking a little less like “the ghost of myself.” You may depend on my not forgetting to report myself to him at the right time.¹

I am glad to hear from “Nat” that you are setting me an example of health.²

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

1. Probably George C. Whitfield of Lock & Whitfield of Regent Street, who photographed WC for his ‘Men of Mark’ series, with biographies written by Thompson Cooper, published in seven parts by Sampson Low, Marston, Searle & Rivington, 1876–83. The issue containing WC’s picture and biography was published in 1881.

2. Frank Beard’s son Nathaniel, still on Bentley’s staff.

[1687] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 12 JULY 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 163–164.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

12th July 1877

Thank you, my dear Georgina, for your very kind note. It is the manager – one Signor Bellotti-Bon – who is to blame for the omission of my name, and for any “cuts” which disfigure the piece.¹ Signor Caccia is my authorised translator in Italy² – he has saved me from piracy and translated me admirably – and he dramatised The New Magdalen under my advice and authority. But we were obliged to sell the piece entirely to the aforesaid Manager – seeing that I was quite unknown as a dramatist in Italy – and we are at his mercy in consequence. Next time (this piece having been a commercial success at Rome and Florence) we shall have our choice of managers and make our own bargain. As it is, I can only send the playbill to Signor Caccia, and “state the circumstances”. Pray make my most sincere acknowledgments to your correspondent when you next write. I feel really obliged to him for the interest that he has taken in this little matter.³

Let me hear when you are settled in the new house. In the meantime I congratulate you both on having got that “worry” off your minds.⁴

I am slowly recovering from another attack of rheumatic gout. My next winter (if I live) must be passed in some more merciful climate than the climate of England.

With love to you both, always, my dear Georgina, affectionately yours
Wilkie Collins

1. Luigi Bellotti-Bon (1820–83), famous playwright and theatrical impresario.

2. See [1631] to Caccia of 15 June 1876.

3. It has not been possible to identify Georgina Hogarth’s Italian correspondent, who must have sent her a playbill of a Bellotti-Bon production of WC’s play which did not feature the author’s name.

4. Georgina Hogarth lived together with Mamie Dickens. Around this time they seem to have moved from Gloucester Terrace (see [1136] to Georgina Hogarth of 12 October 1871) to Strathmore Gardens (see [1876] to her of 2 October 1879), i.e. from the north side to the west side of Hyde Park.

[1688] TO CHARLES COLLETTE,¹ 26 JULY 1877

MS: Lewis Collection, envelope only.² Published: BGLL, III, p. 164.

Charles Collette Esqre | Prince of Wales’s Theatre | Liverpool
Wilkie Collins

1. Charles Henry Collette (1842–1924), actor who played Robert, a servant, in The Dead Secret at the Lyceum from 29 August 1877. See [1693] to him of 6 August 1877.

2. Post-paid, postmarked as dated.

[1689] TO CHARLES KENT, 27 JULY 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4). Published: BGLL, III, p. 164.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th July 1877

(In great haste)

My dear Mr Kent,

I shall be delighted to see you tomorrow (Saturday) at 4 o’Clock
always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[1690] TO FANNY DAVENPORT,¹ 28 JULY 1877

MS: Unknown. Photocopy: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, pp. 236–237; Farmer 1999, pp. 602–604 (with facsimile); B&C, II, p. 407.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. ² | 28th July 1877

My dear Miss Davenport,

I am indeed sorry to hear that you are obliged to hurry your departure – but I see the necessity, and deplore it.³

The best likeness of me is unfortunately not on card-board. I enclose it, as a temporary offering, until I can send something more durable. Thank you most sincerely, for the charming photographs which have accompanied your kind letter. The “make-up” in “Posthumia” is really marvellous – quite as true to nature, and quite as effective in a dramatic point of view as the “make-up” of the French actress.⁴

I must ask you to let me send the piece after you.⁵ The printers have not got more than half way through it – and the manuscript is in their hands. You shall have the proofs. [del] If I address to the Fifth Avenue Theatre. N.Y. I suppose my letter will reach you.

Whatever I can do, shall be done, rely on it, when you return to us. In the meantime, I will keep “The Moonstone” piece free, so far as America is concerned, until you have kindly sent me a line to say whether the principal part is “a part of Miss Davenport” – or not. We begin here on the 1st or 8th of September next.

My rheumatism keeps me terribly dependent on the weather. But I will try hard to get to you on Monday /just to/ ~~to~~ say goodbye /and then to run away again,/ a few minutes before ~~before~~ six. ~~But~~ If the damp cripples me as it cripples me today – then I must put up with my disappointment, and heartily wish you and your fellow travellers, the most peaceful and prosperous of all possible voyages /(/in this letter)/.

Yours most truly | Wilkie Collins

1. Fanny Lily Gipsy Davenport (1850–1898: DAB), American actress, daughter of actor and theatre manager Edward Loomis Davenport. She later married twice, to Edwin B. Price in 1879, and, following their divorce, to Melbourne Macdowell in 1889. For Augustin Daly at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, she played the part of Blanche Lundie (in preference to that of Anne Silvester) in Man and Wife in 1870, and in 1871 Mrs Wragge in Daly’s adaptation of No Name. See: Daly, pp. 90ff; also Winter 1913.

2. Black, Gothic type centred.

3. The reason for the actress’s hurried departure for America remains unclear.

4. Posthumia is the blind grandmother of Fausta in Alexandre Parodi’s tragedy Rome Vaincue (1876). The ‘French actress’ is Sarah Bernhardt, who played the role at the Comédie Française in Paris in 1875–76.

5. WC’s privately printed dramatic version of The Moonstone, which opened on 17 September 1877 at the Olympic and ran to poor houses for nine weeks.

[1691] TO KATE FIELD, 30 JULY 1877

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 164–165.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 30 July 1877

Dear Miss Field,

Do you know – personally or by reputation – Mr (or Doctor?) Sayre of New York?¹

The question was put to me yesterday – and I was obliged to acknowledge that I had not the honour of knowing Dr Sayre. I may add that the inquiry merely related to the degree of medical celebrity attained by this gentleman in New York. I have no personal interest in the question – beyond the act of civility implied by answering it. If you can kindly enlighten me with a scratch of your pen, I shall thankfully “receive the same”. If not, the waste-paper basket is at hand.

Yours always truly | WC

1. Lewis Albert Sayre (1820–1900: ANB), orthopaedic surgeon practising in New York, an advocate of the medical benefits of circumcision, who visited Britain in 1877 to give a series of lectures.

[1692] TO CARLOTTA LECLERQ, 1 AUGUST 1877

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 238–239 (as to Mrs Lillian A. Neilson); B&C, II, pp. 408–409.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.¹ | London
1st Aug 1877

My dear Mrs Nelson²

Let me first assure you that I am not guilty of the rudeness of leaving your /earlier/ letter unanswered. I never received it. And I only heard of your marriage through “The Era”.³ My congratulations are late – but they are still sincere. I know you will understand this.

As to “Black and White”, the whole piece was written by me. Fechter suggested the subject and helped me with the Scenario – and therefore thought it right that his name should appear with mine on the original playbills. Strictly speaking, the right (so far as Great Britain and Ireland are concerned) rests with me as the writer of the piece. I have never allowed it to be published, or to be placed on the list at the Dramatic Authors' Society.⁴

But, where you are concerned, I will gladly assume that a half share in the piece is all that I need claim, in the matter of fees only. [del] I allow no piece of mine to be performed in the country, except on payment of five pounds a night. Halve that – and you are welcome to “Black and White” (and to my name), for two pounds, ten shillings a night. If this arrangement suits you, you have only to write and say so – and to ask Mr Nelson to sign the letter also (in case of my executors interfering in the matter!)⁵ – and there is the business settled.

I have been so wretchedly ill that the reference to my executors is not quite so good a joke as it might once have been. Rheumatic gout again. First in my eyes – now in my knees. When my new “Moonstone” piece is produced in September next at the Olympic, I go to try what the mountain air of Switzerland or the Tyrol will do for me – and I may be obliged to winter out of England. I will write /to you/ again before I go – if you will kindly send me a general address “at head quarters”, from which letters can be forwarded wherever you may be.

In the meantime, with all good wishes, and with my compliments to Mr Nelson,

Believe me | always but yours | Wilkie Collins

There is a little story of mine /published/ in The Summer (Extra) Number of All The Year Round called “Percy and the Prophet”⁶ which may amuse you on a long railway journey, and which has dramatic capabilities. I have not got a copy left – or I would have sent one (Price 6^d!). You will find it at all railway stations.⁷

1. Black Gothic type, centred.

2. Having returned from the United States the previous year, in York on 26 February 1877 Carlotta Leclercq had married John Neilson, who acted under the name John Nelson.

3. The weekly theatrical paper published in London; see ‘Marriage of Carlotta Le Clerq’, Era, 4 March 1877, p. 12.

4. Thus preventing companies from making applications to perform the work.

5. Since the letter was written before the Married Women’s Property Act of 1882, formally the wife’s financial transactions would have to be carried out in the husband’s name.

6. Published on 2 July 1877.

7. The final sentence of the postscript is squeezed down WC’s left-hand margin.

[3008] TO GEORGE CLARIDGE,¹ 1 AUGUST 1877

MS: Lewis Collection, clipped front of envelope only.² Published: Lewis Website; A&C2, p. 64.

George Claridge Esqre | 23. Harp Lane | E. C.
Wilkie Collins

1. City of London wine merchant with premises just behind the Custom House, who appears as payee in WC’s bank account at Coutts & Co. on a number of occasions around this time.

2. Post-paid, postmarked as dated.

[1693] TO CHARLES COLLETTE, 6 AUGUST 1877

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; BGLL, III, pp. 165–166.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Augt 6th 1877

Dear Mr Collette,

I hear by a letter from Neville,¹ received this morning, that your engagement is not completed yet – although he has put off his “opening” to suit your convenience.

If you had told me, when I had the pleasure of seeing you here, that you would not accept the part without first reading the piece, some time and trouble might have been saved. As it is, I of course hasten to send you the only copy of the piece that I possess.² It is in rough proof, with corrections which were only intended for the printers' eye. But everything must give way to the absolute necessity of settling the "cast" at once.

I must beg you will consider the proofs herewith sent to you, as in every respect representing a private and confidential letter. I shall also be obliged if you will kindly let me have them back at your earliest convenience.

The part which is offered to you is "Sergeant Cuff" (the detective policeman of the novel).³

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Will you kindly let me have a line to acknowledge the safe receipt of the proofs?

Charles Collette Esqr

1. Henry Neville, manager of the Olympic Theatre from 1873 to 1879.

2. The dramatic version of The Moonstone which opened at the Olympic in September.

3. In the event, the part of Cuff was played not by Collette but by Thomas Swinbourne (d. 1895).

[1694] TO NATHANIEL T. BEARD,¹ 13 AUGUST 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: Beard, p. 326; (New York) Collector, no. 87 (February 1895), p. 52; Robinson 1951, p. 265; BGLL, III, p. 166 (as to Nathaniel J. Beard), amended A&C2, p. 70.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 13th August 1877

My dear Nat

Once upon a time, while I was on my way to a grand breakfast in the city of New York, I was stopped in one of the Squares by a very wellbred young gentleman, who said he recognised me by my photographic portraits, and who asked me if I would give him an autograph. I said "Yes – but where am I to send it? or will you call for it?" He said, "Quite unnecessary sir. If you don't mind, you can give it to me now." With that, he pulled an autograph book out of one pocket, a pen out of another, and an ancient "ink-horn" out of a third. "How am I to write it?" I asked. He answered "You can write it on my back." He turned round, and "gave me a back" as if we were playing at leap-frog. I wrote him his autograph (greatly to the amusement of the public in the square) – and we shook hands and parted.

I quote this young gentleman's example as giving you a useful hint in the pursuit of autographs. If he had not stuck to me while he had me, I might have forgotten him – just as inexcusably as I forgot you. And now, here is my autograph at last!

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Nathaniel T. Beard

1. The younger son of Francis Carr Beard Nathaniel Thomas Beard was born in 1856 and became chief clerk at Bentley's in the later years of the publishing house. He and his brother Launce were keen autograph collectors. See the note in Parrish collection with the Beard letters.

[1695] TO WYBERT REEVE, 16 AUGUST 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), formerly laid in a copy of the dramatic adaptation of The Moonstone (1877). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 166–167.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
London 16th Augt 1877

My dear Reeve

My best congratulations on the success of G.G.¹

Delighted to see you when you are in town. Choose your own day – and (if you can) make the hour 3.30 P.M. I have got the dramatic "Moonstone" and a Christmas Story both on my hands together. That is why the afternoon will do best for me.

One line to say which day it shall be
Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. George Geith, a five-act play by Reeve which had opened on 6 August 1877 at the Theatre Royal, Scarborough, of which the actor was then lessee and manager – see the notice in the Era, 12 August 1877, p. 7b. The play was based on the novel George Geith of Fen Court, 3 vols (London, 1864) by Charlotte Riddell, under the pseudonym F. G. Trafford.

[3253] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 18 AUGUST 1877

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C9, p. 31.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | London | August 18th 1877

1. Probably an autograph collector based outside London, as the place and date are written at the foot of the page.

[3295] TO SIDNEY FRANCES BATEMAN,¹ 24 AUGUST 1877

MS: Unknown. On sale: Hansons Auctioneers (2 April 2016, lot 730), with many letters and effects relating to the Bateman sisters. Published: A&C10, pp. 14–15.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.
24th Augt 1877

Dear Mrs Bateman

Pray accept my thanks for your very kind letter, and my heartiest good wishes for the success of the piece.

I should be only too glad to profit by the opportunity which you are so good as to offer me – if my health would permit it. But with “The Moonstone” rehearsals to look after in the day time, I am obliged to give my evenings up to the rest which I sorely need by that time. The day after the piece is produced, I go to try the mountain air in the Tyrol.²

If you will kindly let me have three seats for the first night – or two if three should be too many – I shall have a full report of the public reception of The Dead Secret, and, it is needless to say, of the acting as well.

Once more – May you succeed! and may I see the piece when I return from the Continent!
Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The American-born actress Sidney Frances Bateman née Cowell (1823–81), the widow of actor and theatre manager Hezekiah Linthicum Bateman (1812–1875), and herself manager of the Lyceum from his death until 1878. She played Sarah Leeson in a dramatization by E. J. Bramwell of The Dead Secret which opened at the Lyceum on 29 August 1877. It received poor reviews in the Times (3 September 1877, p. 10e) and the World (5 September 1877). Both praised WC but did not like the adaptation or Miss Bateman’s acting. The last performance was 17 November (see the Times of that date, p. 8e). The programme and the adverts in the Times both say the story was adapted with WC’s permission, which the friendly tone of this letter supports. Moreover, [3049] to Jane Ward of 27 August 1877 clearly states that the actress had requested permission. WC received three payments of £24 each from Bateman, the first on 27 September, the last on 7 December, representing a rate of around one guinea per night (Coumts: WC).

2. It is not clear if WC was ‘bringing forward’ his trip to the Tyrol – which he finally took from 21 September to early December – as an excuse not to see the play, or if he in fact postponed it due to pressure of work. In [3049] to Jane Ward of 27 August 1877 he said he was ‘so busy I need hardly know where to turn’ but ‘I will try hard to call and say goodbye.’ However, he was certainly in London on 8 September (see [1698] to Fanny Devonport of that date). His bank account does not show him taking money out for a foreign trip until 21 September.

[3049] TO JANE WARD, 27 AUGUST 1877

MS: Berg. Published: A&C3, p. 50.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 27th Aug^t 1877

My dear Jane,

I have not only not written the play of “The Dead Secret” – but I don’t even know who has written it. Under these circumstances I am afraid I can hardly ask ~~the~~ for orders. Mrs Bateman was polite enough to ask my permission to take the piece from the novel.¹ But the barbarous English laws, allow anybody to make plays from novels without my permission being in the least necessary.

I will try hard to call and say goodbye. At present I am so busy I hardly know which way to turn.

Yours affly | WC

1. See [3295] to Sidney Frances Bateman of 24 August 1877. The Dead Secret by E. W. Bramwell, which opened at the Lyceum on 29 August, was advertised as ‘A NEW PLAY Adapted by the Author’s express permission from the Popular Novel of WILKIE COLLINS’.

[1696] TO [HUGH BIERS], [SUMMER] 1877

MS: Melbourne (Box 502/3), note at head of galley proofs of My Lady’s Money.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 167 (as to [Henry C. Biers]). Amended: A&C11, pp. 17–18.

Isabel Miller; | or | My Lady’s Money: | A Domestic Story | By | WILKIE COLLINS.²

This story will be published in London, in The Illustrated London News Christmas Number for 1877. The exact date in December 1877, at which this story will be published in England, will be announced on the later proofs. The slips now sent represent rather less than one half of the story.³

WC

1. We have been unable to trace the appearance of the story in an Australian journal, so it seems again best to assume that the note was directed to WC’s Melbourne agent – see the similar notes [1676], [1680], and [1683] of 10, 30 May and 8 June 1877 concerning ‘Percy and the Prophet’. As WC indicates, the story first appeared in the 1877 Christmas number of the Illustrated London News, in fact published on 12 December (see [1709] to Bernhard Tauchnitz of 3 December 1877). However, WC’s letter [1695] to Wybert Reeve of 16 August 1877 suggests that the composition of the story was already well under way by that time – hence our conjectural dating of this note.

2. The author’s name is printed while the title is inserted carefully above in WC’s hand. In the Illustrated London News, the tale in fact appeared under the title ‘My Lady’s Money: An Episode in the Life of a Young Girl’, and the proofs at Melbourne seem to represent the only extant evidence that WC originally planned a different title incorporating the name of the heroine.

3. Concerning the sending of the remainder of the story, see [3352] to [Biers], [Late Summer] 1877.

[1697] TO JOHN LATEY, [SUMMER 1877]

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:16).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 168.

My copyist is out of town like most other people – and I have no second copy of slips 45 to 62. They are therefore commended to the special care of the printer.

The sooner the [text excised]

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

John Latey Eqre

1. Fragment cut off an otherwise untraced letter for WC’s autograph, with six lines of text in a small hand on the recto and the valediction, signature and addressee line on the verso. The letter must be in connection with ‘My Lady’s Money’, appearing in the Illustrated London News at Christmas 1877 – see [1672] to Latey of 17 March 1877. In addition to the internal reference to most people being ‘out of town’, the tentative dating reflects the fact that WC left on his Italian trip in September and must have finished the Christmas story early – see [1695] to Wybert Reeve of 16 August 1877.

[3325] TO [HUGH BIERS], [LATE SUMMER] 1877

MS: Melbourne (Box 502/3), note on slip 17 at head of galley proofs of final portion of My Lady's Money.¹
Published: in note 3 to letter of [Summer] 1877 to [Henry C. Biers], BGLL, III, p. 167; A&C11, pp. 17–18.

Isabel Miller. | Continued from slip sixteen | (Christmas Story by Wilkie Collins)
To be Published in December 1877. | Exact date in December not yet settled

1. In WC's hand, this was perhaps sent from London by the Victoria Mail following that carrying [1696] to [Biers] of [Summer] 1877, and certainly before WC left for the Continent around the last week of September.

[1698] TO FANNY DAVENPORT, 8 SEPTEMBER 1877

MS: Unknown. Photocopy: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, p. 240; Farmer 1999, pp. 603, 605; BGLL, III, p. 168.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
Saturday Sept 8th 1877

My dear Miss Davenport,

Here is the piece.¹ I have only time to send it off by today's mail. Next week, I will write more at length on the subject.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – | It may be as well to add (on the question of protecting the piece in America) that many of the chief scenes and situations are not in the novel at all, and are now first invented by me.

1. The dramatic version of The Moonstone – see [1690] to Davenport of 28 July 1877. On the opposite leaf has been drawn (presumably by WC) what appears to be a quick sketch of what the staging will look like. See the facsimile in Farmer 1999, p. 603.

[1699] TO HENRY NEVILLE, 12 SEPTEMBER 1877

MS: NLS (MS 3713/317). Published: BGLL, III, p. 169.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 12th Sept 1877

My dear Neville,

I forgot entirely to give you the Dft of the Moonstone agreement today¹ – and, as I am quite capable of forgetting again tomorrow, I send it while I think of it.

Clauses 3, 4, and 5 are the important clauses. The others, as you will see, are purely formal.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. Still manager of the Olympic, Neville played Franklin Blake in the unsuccessful production of The Moonstone running there from 17 September 1877 (see Gasson, pp. 108, 113; Peters, p. 380).

[1700] TO LAURA SEYMOUR, 13 SEPTEMBER 1877¹

MS: Noel. Published: Clareson, p. 115; BGLL, III, p. 169.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 13th Sept

My dear Mrs Seymour,

My knees won't work today – they are so rheumatic that I cannot attend the rehearsal.² Rest will soon put me right again.

The plaid which you so kindly lent to me is in Alfred's care.³

Yours ever | WC

1. Dating from the play.
2. Of The Moonstone.

3. Perhaps a servant, Alfred remains unidentified.

[1701] TO JANE WARD, 14 SEPTEMBER 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 169–170.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W.

Friday 14th Sept 1877

My dear Jane,

I have got four (4) good dress circle places (front row) for the first night of The Moonstone – Monday the 17th.¹ Would you and the girls like to go?² If yes – please let me hear by return of post. If you are engaged – a line to say no – in that case also.

The stalls – except those given away to the newspapers – are all gone. I have had nothing but dress circle places – and the box which is reserved “for the author”

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

1. At the Olympic.

2. Referring to the Wards’ three unmarried daughters, Emily, Lucy and Polly.

[1702] TO ALFRED DE STERN,¹ 18 SEPTEMBER 1877

MS: Salomons. Published: BGLL, III, p. 170.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 18th Sept 1877

Dear Mr De Stern,

I am indeed sorry to have missed you again, when you so kindly called to see me. The truth is that I am ordered by my doctor – now that I have in some degree recovered the use of my knees – to be as much out of doors as possible. I walk as far as I can – and I drive when I cannot walk. Now that my play has been produced, I am going abroad (at last) on Thursday next.² But for this, I should have asked you to kindly mention an hour at which I might have seen you. As it is, unless we meet abroad, I can only hope that the pleasure of seeing you will come a little later in the autumn. My route is entirely undecided. Where I can find dry air and fine weather – there I shall go. I shall possibly get away from England by way of Belgium and the Rhine – but I really know nothing of my ultimate destination and can only travel until I find a dry air that will do for me.

Thanking you once more for your friendly interest in my recovery,

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Alfred de Stern (b. 1852), son of Herman Baron de Stern (1815–84) and Julia née Goldsmid (1823–99); elder brother of Laura de Stern (1855–1935), who married Sir David Lionel Salomons (1851–1925); see Stern family (per. c. 1830–1964: ODNB). Generally on WC’s relations with the Salomons, Goldsmid and Stern families, see Gasson & Baker, pp. 181–184.

2. WC writes on the Tuesday. His Continental tour lasted until December 1877 and included Belgium, Bavaria, Italy and France.

[1703] TO AUGUSTIN DALY, 22 SEPTEMBER 1877

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 170–171.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London

Sept 22nd 1877

Dear Mr Daly,

I sent a privately-printed copy of the (Dramatic) “Moonstone” sometime since to Miss Davenport.¹ In the affliction that has befallen her she may well have forgotten all about it.² As we arranged (when Miss Davenport was in London) that she should have the refusal of playing “Rachel” – or even “Miss Clack” if she saw her way to it – and as our arrangement of course contemplated making the first offer of the piece for the U.S. to you, I now send to you a second copy of the piece by today’s registered book-post. It is for your own eye only – until you decide. If your decision is adverse, please send the copy to Mr French Junior my agent in New York.³ If your decision is favourable – in that case communicate directly with me, as an agent’s services will not then be necessary.

The cuts and changes on the copy now sent are all made by me, after experience at rehearsal, and experience of our audiences here. Every one of them is essential to the dramatic interests of the piece. But – if “Miss Clack” is acted with extraordinary ability, the alterations so far as she is concerned may be re-considered. Here we find her in the way of the interest in the 3rd Act and her “business” is “cut” accordingly.

We have had a great success in London – financially speaking (so far), as well as artistically. I hear of people turned away for want of room as early as the third and fourth nights of representation.⁴ This is rare in London.

Note one thing – in the matter in securing the property in America. No paste-and-scissors version of the novel can compete with my version: for this plain reason that many of the chief scenes and situations are of my own invention, and are not in the novel at all.

This is all I need say at present.

With kind regards, | Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I was charmed with Miss Davenport, and so was everybody else who saw her in London. We were only sorry she left us so soon.

I leave London for the continent (to get a little rest and change) today. Letters addressed to me here will follow me wherever I go.⁵

1. See [1698] to Fanny Davenport, 8 September 1877. The Moonstone: A Dramatic Story in Three Acts, Altered from the Novel for Performance on the Stage was ‘privately printed for the convenience of the author’ (Gasson, p. 108).

2. Though the precise nature of her affliction remains unclear, Fanny Davenport was in London in 1877 but had cut short her visit and returned suddenly to New York.

3. See [1633] to T. H. French of 24 June 1876.

4. In fact the play ran at the Olympic from 17 September to 17 November 1877 only and ‘was not well received’ (Peters, p. 380). The two leading performers ‘Henry Neville (Franklin Blake) and Laura Seymour (Miss Clack) left the cast before the end of the run’ (Gasson, p. 108). See Farmer 1999, Appendix F, pp. 606–702, for details of ‘Collins’s Stage Adaptation of The Moonstone’ and the full text of the play, and also Appendix G, pp. 703–13, for ‘Reviews of the Olympic Theatre Performances of Wilkie Collins’s The Moonstone’. Despite that, Neville sent WC a total of £242-7s in seven payments from 27 September to 12 December for the nine week run, an average of £4-9s-9d per night (Coutts: WC).

5. With Caroline WC visited Germany, Italy and France, returning early in December 1877. The day before WC took out £200 as ‘Travelling Ecps’ from his bank account (Coutts: WC).

[1704] TO AUGUSTIN DALY, 25 SEPTEMBER 1877

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, III, p. 172.

Brussels | Sept 25th 1877

Dear Mr Daly,

Since I wrote to you, and sent you the corrected copy of the (Dramatic) “Moonstone”, it has struck me that I shall do well to alter the title of the piece in America.¹ If it is a success, there will be plenty of paste-and-scissors Moonstones issued by plenty of theatrical thieves. As I told you in my other letter, there is no fear of piratical adaptations doing any injury to my piece – because the best scenes and situations are not in the novel at all, and cannot be pirated. But we cannot protect the title of “The Moonstone” – and rival “Moonstones” may mislead the public and do serious injury. I am all for a new title – which can be protected, and which will therefore always distinguish the genuine version of the story from the counterfeits. In the translation of this piece in Italian (soon to be produced – at Florence I think first) the title is altered to | The Indian

Diamond²

I append on the next leaf some other titles to choose from. Your letters will follow me on my tour wherever I go.

With kindest remembrances to Miss Davenport,
Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

Other Titles

1. The Colonel's Diamond.
2. The Yellow Diamond.
3. The Innocent Thief
4. Dreaming and Waking.
5. The Adventures of a Night
6. The Dressing Gown.
7. False Appearances

Of these N^o 2 is, to my mind, the best of all – and N^o 4 next best.

1. The Moonstone in its dramatic version 'never reached the American stage'. See Robert P. Ashley, 'Wilkie Collins and the American Theater', Nineteenth Century Fiction, 8 (March 1954), p. 254. See also [2985], [1803] to Daly of 31 October and 10 December 1878.

2. The Italian adaptation of the play has not been traced, but there was a 1933 translation of the novel entitled Il Diamante Indiano as No. 60 in a series of translated adventures, 'I Libri Gialli' (The Yellow Books) from Collana. The work has also appeared in Italian: as La Pietra della Luna in four volumes, 1870 (Vols. I-III) and 1871 (Vol. IV); and La Maledizione del Diamante Indiano (2001).

[1705] TO CARLOTTA LECLERCQ, 26 SEPTEMBER 1877

MS: Fales. Envelope: Lewis Collection (L2863).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 173. Amended: A&C14, p. 30.

Brussels. Sept 26th 1877

My dear Mrs Nelson,

This late answer to your kind letter is not so completely inexcusable as it may appear.²

After a six months illness, the daily rehearsals of "The Moonstone"³ and the necessity of completing a new work of fiction by a given time,⁴ both claimed me together, and so completely exhausted me that I was fit for nothing when my labours were over but to rest and husband my resources for the next days' demand on them. I was not only unable to answer letters – I did worse still, I never even opened them – until the day after the piece was produced, and then the preparations for travelling forbade me to use my pen. At this place, I am resting (being not strong enough for long journeys) on my way to South Germany and the Tyrol – and I seize the opportunity of writing at last to make my excuses to you and to Mr Nelson. The pleasure of making Mr Nelson's acquaintance is only I hope a pleasure deferred until my return to England. Now that you know under what adverse circumstances – so far as I was concerned – your letter reached me, I am sure you will forgive my inevitable silence.

If there should be any payments to make, under the arrangement agreed on for "Black and White", my bankers – Messrs Coutts & Co 59. Strand London – will receive any monies that are paid in to my account.⁵

Believe me | Dear Mrs Nelson | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Envelope directed to 'Mrs John Nelson | 160. Hampstead Road | London | N.W.' It is signed 'Wilkie Collins' lower left and has 'Angleterre' in his hand diagonally and underlined top left. This envelope is held separately from the letter but is almost certainly associated with it. It is the only known letter to Carlotta Leclercq written from anywhere outside England and the use of 'Angleterre' on the envelope indicates a French speaking country, in this case Belgium.

2. Concerning her marriage to the actor John Nelson, see [1692] to her of 1 August 1877.

3. At the Olympic Theatre from 17 September.

4. This must be 'My Lady's Money' for the Christmas 1877 number of the Illustrated London News.

5. Again see [1692] to her of 1 August 1877.

[3050] TO AUGUSTIN DALY, 28 SEPTEMBER 1877

MS: Folger (Yc2885/1). Published: A&C3, p. 51.

Brussels | Sept 28th 1877

Dear Mr Daly,

Another letter! You will naturally say “this is a persecution”! But I have no other alternative than to write again. There is a report in “Galignani’s Newspaper” that you are giving up the management of the Fifth Avenue Theatre.¹ If this report should by any chance be founded on the truth, I hasten to make my excuses for troubling you about my dramatic affairs at a time when you have far more important subjects to think of.² I can only add that I sincerely regret losing the opportunity of renewing my dramatic relations with you.

I have written to Mr French Junior³ – always, of course, supposing the report to be true – requesting him to relieve you of the trouble of taking care of the copy of “The Moonstone” piece which I have innocently sent to you at so unpropitious a time.⁴

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. ‘Rumors were in circulation during last week, and again on Monday, to the effect that Mr. Augustin Daly, the manager of the Fifth-Avenue Theatre had failed and was about to enter into banruptcy’ (New York Times, 12 September 1877, p. 1): the rumours were well founded. Galignani’s Messenger, published in Paris in English, was widely relied upon by English visitors to the Continent.

2. Referring to [1703] to Daly of 22 September 1877.

3. Thomas Henry French, son of the theatrical publisher – see [1633] to him of 24 June 1876.

4. Again, see [1703] to Daly of 22 September 1877.

[1706] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 23 OCTOBER 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 173–174.

Hotel des Quatre Saisons | Munich | Bavaria | 23rd October 1877

Dear Sirs,

Your kind letter of the 9th has followed me to this place.

I beg to accept the terms which you propose for the right of publishing cheap editions of “The Two Destinies” – uniform with the cheap editions of my other works – for a period of seven years from the present date.¹

I also note that you accept my new short story for publication in the number of “Belgravia” for January 1878, on the same terms as those agreed on for “The Captain’s Last Love” – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.²

The number of Belgravia for January last was published, if I remember correctly, about the 23rd or 24th of December – on which date the American publication of “The Captain’s Last Love” also took place. If this same date will suit you for the publication of next January’s number will you kindly add it to the enclosed notice for the information of the American publisher, and send it to New York by the next mail. I believe it is the same date. I hear there may be some difficulty in suiting the convenience of the American publication. Time presses, and I am not within easy reach of you – or I would of course hand you this myself.

Early in next month, a fair copy of the new story shall be sent to you to print from.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I leave this place on Saturday next. After that date, letters forwarded from 90 Gloucester Place. Welcome back to England. I am very glad to hear from my good friends, Seaver and Bixby. WC³
To | Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. The letter to WC from Chatto & Windus, dated 9 October 1877 (Reading), reveals that £150 was the sum offered for the right to issue single-volume editions of The Two Destinies, although this included the sum of £20 owed as royalty on the two-volume edition – merely 930 copies had been sold, of which only 80 yielded royalty (see the notes to [1642] to Chatto of 3 August 1876).

2. Referring to ‘The Duel in Herne Wood’, eventually published in New York in Spirit of the Times, 22 December 1877, pp. 541–544, and in Belgravia in January 1878.

3. Andrew Chatto, who had added a personal postscript to the letter to WC from Chatto & Windus of 9 October, had just returned from the USA and sent greetings from their mutual friends in the New York publishing world, Dan Bixby and William Seaver.

[1707] CARRIE GRAVES TO FRANK ARCHER, 30 OCTOBER 1877

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.¹ Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 288. Published: BGLL, III, p. 174 (incomplete), amended A&C7, p. 16.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | Tuesday – Oct^r 30.

Dear Mr Archer,

Wilkie & my mother are abroad travelling – he is better for the change. When I last heard, they were at Munich.²

Thank you for your courteous reminder about the letter. As I have charge of his correspondence during his absence, I have written for it.³

Hoping you are well

Truly Yours | H.E.C. Graves⁴

F. Archer esq^{re}

1. Directed in Carrie’s hand to ‘Frank Archer esq^{re} | The Green Room | 10. Adelphi Terrace | W.C.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON N.W. | 7 | OC 31 | 77’ and verso ‘LONDON N.W. | 7 | OC 31 | S.M.P.’, with ‘12’ and ‘Miss Graves | (Mrs Bartley afterwards)’ in pencil in another hand on the recto.

2. WC had written to Chatto & Windus from Munich on 23 October 1877 ([1706]).

3. Robinson sheds no light on the letter in question (p. 288).

4. Although registered at birth on 3 February 1851 as Elizabeth Harriet, Caroline Graves’s daughter turned her names around and was known as ‘Carrie’, hence the ‘C’ added to her initials. Caroline herself was christened Elizabeth.

[2985] TO AUGUSTIN DALY, 31 OCTOBER 1877

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, IV Addenda, pp. 402–403.

Munich | Bavaria | Oct: 31st 1877

My dear Mr Daly,

I have been waiting to thank you for your kind letter – until I could get thoroughly reliable news of “The Moonstone” piece from London. The result of this correspondence is – I regret to say – that I must withdraw the piece from representation in the United States.

When I wrote to you the piece was drawing excellent houses¹ – profitable to the manager and profitable to me. This went on for three weeks – and then the receipts began to drop. Week after week, they have fallen lower and lower, and I have arranged with Mr Neville that the piece is to be withdrawn on the 17th of November.²

Nobody can explain this curious collapse – following on an unusually successful start. But there it is.

The play might, of course, do better in New York than in London. But (in all our interests) I will not run the risk. I have original plays in my mind (not adaptations from my novels) – and I want to appeal to the American public, without a failure to make a shadow in my background. You, too, have had anxieties enough in management, without having another anxiety added by me. And Miss Davenport must not waste her excellent ability on a part, the public reception of which (so far as I am concerned) might be cold and discouraging.³ For all these reasons, I thank you heartily, and withdraw the piece from performance in the U.S.

Pray give my kindest remembrances to Miss Davenport, and thank her in my name for her friendly interest in “The Moonstone” piece. I beg her to wait until I can give her a part which may be worthier of her, in respect to its acceptance by chances with the public, than the part which she was kindly willing to play in my unfortunate work.

In my present uncertain state of health, I dare not make any definite engagements for the future. I don’t even know whether I shall be in England next spring. If I am there, all that I can do for ~~her~~ Miss Davenport I will gladly do.⁴ And in the meanwhile, I will look at the piece you mention, and tell you at least how it strikes me, if you care to send it to 90 Gloucester Place, Portman Square, London – under these circumstances.⁵

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. See [1703] and [1704] to Daly of 22 and 25 September 1877, written shortly after WC’s theatrical version of The Moonstone opened in London at the Royal Olympic Theatre on 17 September.

2. Referring to Henry Neville, actor-manager at the Olympic who played Franklin Blake in The Moonstone – see [1699] to him of 12 September 1877.

3. The American actress Fanny Davenport – see [1698] to her of 8 September 1877.

4. There is no evidence of WC meeting Davenport again until the spring of 1879 – see [1825] of 27 February and [1830] of 10 March 1879, both to Henry Herman.

5. The letter [1713] to Daly of 10 December 1877 on WC’s return to London offers no hint of whether the piece in question was in fact sent or indeed what it might be.

[1708] CARRIE GRAVES TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 22 NOVEMBER 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: Davis, p. 284; BGLL, III, p. 175.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square. | London. W.
November 22nd 1877

Dear sir,

I am going to reply to your letter for my godfather, Mr Wilkie Collins (whose amanuensis I am) because he is travelling in Italy. The two notes for £25 have come safely, and I have sent them to the bank.

You will be pleased to know that the foreign travel has made Mr Collins quite well again. I expect him home about the middle of December. I hope your health will keep good in spite of Canadian cold.

I forward your letter to godpapa when I next write.

I am, sir | Yours most respectfully | Harriette E. L. Graves

To Mr G. M. Rose

1. Two bills each for £25, one a duplicate; as usual from Rose this was payable at 60 days, so that the £25 was credited to WC’s account on 26 January 1878 as ‘Bill on Bosanquet Bank’ (Coutts: WC).

[1709] TO BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ, 3 DECEMBER 1877

MS: Unknown. Published: Otto, pp. 77–78, our copy text; BGLL, III, pp. 175–176.

Hotel Westminster, Paris, December 3rd, 1877.

I have only to-day heard that My Lady’s Money is to be published in the Christmas Number of the Illustrated London News on the 12th of this month (Wednesday 12th). If you can conveniently publish the Continental Edition on the next day – the 13th, the priority of publication in London will be sufficiently observed.¹

This information will, I hope, reach you in good time. My travels in Italy were of so erratic a nature – so entirely without fixed plans of any sort – that it was impossible for my letters to follow me. Otherwise, I should have been able to write to you at an earlier date. The question of time has obliged me to get back to England by the French route – and to my great regret I miss the chance of shaking hands with you at Leipzig. This pleasure is, I hope, only a pleasure deferred. My health is so much improved by change of scene and air that I look forward to making a longer stay in Germany at my next visit. In the meantime, let me once more thank you for your kindness and believe me, with best remembrances to your son,² always ...

I return to London, after a short rest here.

1. In order to preserve the British copyright. My Lady's Money and Percy and the Prophet was published by Tauchnitz on 3 January 1878 as vol. 1706 (Todd & Bowden, p. 280).

2. Presumably Christian Tauchnitz. See [1908] to him of 22 March 1880.

[1710] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 3 DECEMBER 1877¹

MS: Harkness. Published: BGLL, III, p. 176.

Hotel du Helder | Monday Dec^r 3rd

Dear Sir

I am only in Paris on my way back from Italy to England – and I leave tomorrow by the train for Boulogne – and I have an appointment to keep in the morning before I go. Under these circumstances, I hope you will excuse me if I am unable to take advantage of the proposal which you make to me – and if I am obliged to put off the pleasure of seeing you until another occasion when I may make a longer stay at Paris.

Yours faithfully | Wilkie Collins

1. Year from the calendar and WC's return trip from Italy. However, see the previous letter of the same date directed from a different hotel.

[1711] TO NORRIS J. FOSTER,¹ 4 DECEMBER 1877

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, III, p. 176.

Paris | 4th December 1877

Dear Sir,

I have been travelling in Italy – and I have only received my letters from London on reaching this place.

Under these circumstances, I can only beg you to excuse the inevitable delay which has taken place in sending my acknowledgement of the receipt of your letter. The debate at the Institute has no doubt, taken place long since – and you have manfully “defended your position”, I am sure, without needing my help.

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Norris J. Foster Esq

1. Unidentified debater at an unidentified institute.

[1712] TO CHARLES READE, 4 DECEMBER 1877

MS: Noel, on faintly lined paper. Published: Clareson, pp. 110, 123; BGLL, III, p. 177.

Paris | 4th Decr 1877

My dear Reade

My letters have been waiting for me here while I have been travelling in Italy – and I only now know of Mrs Seymour's severe illness. I am indeed grieved to hear this bad news. Mrs Seymour has my sincerest sympathy, and my most earnest wishes for her recovery. In a few days more, I hope to be back in London, and to hear better accounts of the sufferer. May this letter find you at least free from any further cause for anxiety.

Yours, my dear friend, always truly | Wilkie Collins

Mrs Graves begs to add the expression of her sympathy. Mrs Seymour has her love and best wishes.

[1713] TO AUGUSTIN DALY, 10 DECEMBER 1877

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 177–178.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London.
10th Decr 1877

My dear Mr Daly,

I have just returned to England – and received your kind letter of November 24th. Keep the copy of “The Moonstone” by all means. I know you will not allow it to fall into strangers’ hands – and I take it as a compliment that you wish to preserve the work in your library.¹

I arrived at my resolution to withdraw the piece from America with great regret – but I felt at the same time that it was the safest course to take, under the circumstances. If I obtain a great success with another piece in the States, we will then return to the question of producing “The Moonstone” at a time when the opinions of play goers are specially predisposed in my favour. In the meanwhile, let the work repose on your shelves. I am very glad to hear that you thought well of it. In spite of the indifference of the public reception here, I think it myself one of the best things of the kind that I have written.

It is needless to say that I shall be delighted to see you, if you visit the old country in the Spring.²

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The bulk of Daly’s extensive library was sold after his death in 1899 at the American Art Galleries in March 1900 in 3,787 lots. ‘The sale of the art objects, books, and manuscripts occupied ten days of two sessions each. The library was primarily dramatic in character, but rather as a history of the stage than as a collection of the work of the great dramatists’ (American Book-Prices Current, compiled by Luther S. Livingston (New York: Dodd, Mead and Company, 1900), p. vi). This presumably included the privately-printed copy of WC’s The Moonstone: A Dramatic Story in Three Acts (1877). Moreover, the sale included the manuscript of WC’s first and then unpublished novel, which must have been given to Daly on another occasion (presumably when Daly visited Britain towards the end of 1878 – see [1803] to him of 10 December 1878). Details are found in Wilkie Collins, Ioláni, The Original Manuscript (New York: Glenn Horowitz Bookseller, [1991]); and see also Ira Nadel’s edition of Ioláni; or Tahiti as it was. A Romance by Wilkie Collins (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1999), pp. ix–xi. See also Daly, Appendix C, pp. 652–659.

2. Again, see [1803] to Daly of 10 December 1878.

[1714] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 10 DECEMBER 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 178–179.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | London
10th Dec 1877

Dear Mr Rose,

I have just returned from a three months tour in the Tyrol and in north Italy – and I have also just read your kind letter.

My amanuensis has, I hear, already written to acknowledge the receipt of the B/E for £25...- on account of Royalties.¹ It only remains for me to thank you for the remittance.

The change of air and scene has greatly improved my health. I hope I have gathered reserve enough of strength to confront the English winter. Your dry cold in Canada would be better than the damp cold of this country. When I was in Montreal, I remember thoroughly enjoying a drive in a sledge, with the temperature down to “zero”.

There is no chance, I fear, of your trying a change to the air of Scotland, and of my being able to welcome you on your way through London.² Your business-responsibilities will keep you in Toronto. I need not tell you that you have my best wishes for the future, and that I shall not fail to let you know it, when I see my way to future publication in Canada. At present, I am vaguely contemplating some more work in the field of fiction, without having definitely settled what the work is to be, just yet.

I have returned to find many letters waiting for answers. If I say goodbye for the present a little abruptly, let my arrears of correspondence plead my excuse, and believe me
always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. See [1708], Carrie Graves to George Maclean Rose, 22 November 1877.
 2. Referring to Rose's Scottish origins.

[1715] TO AN EMPLOYEE OF THE TIMES,¹ 10 DECEMBER 1877

MS: Texas (Times Recipients 3/81). Published: BGLL, III, p. 179.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 10th December 1877

My dear Sir,

I am ashamed that you should have had the trouble of forwarding a letter from an idle person in Germany who is a perfect stranger to me.² Pray accept my best thanks, and believe me,
Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Most of the letters in the 'Times Recipients' files at Texas are addressed to the Editor and intended for publication, though this is clearly not the case here.
 2. The correspondent and letter in question remain untraced.

[3326] TO WYBERT REEVE, [EARLY DECEMBER 1877]¹

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4f, our copy text; Reeve 1891, p. 118; Reeve 1906, p. 461.² Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 219–220 (as one of three extracts in [2663] to Reeve on WC's health problems, compositely dated 1871–86). See A&C11, p. 18.

I am away in France, so as to get the completest possible change of air and scene. God knows I want it.

-
1. Conjectural dating within the range of dated letters to Reeve, based on WC's last recorded visit to France, on his return from 'a three months tour in the Tyrol and in north Italy' with Caroline Graves (see [1714] to George Maclean Rose of 10 December 1877, where he comments, 'The change of air and scene has greatly improved my health.')
 2. In Reeve 1889, the extract follows on directly from [2663] to Reeve, early 1885.

[3051] TO WILLIAMS & NORGATE, 19 DECEMBER 1877

MS: Lewis Collection.¹ Published: Lewis website; A&C3, p. 51.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 19th Dec 1877

Dear Sirs

Will you kindly send to me – in the enclosed envelope – the necessary form, authorising you to receive for me through the Customs House six copies of the Tauchnitz edition in one volume of a new work of mine immediately to be published at Leipzig.²

I will return the form to you, signed – taking a copy previously, so that I need not trouble you on the next occasion³

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Williams & Norgate

-
1. Originally pasted into an album with an ownership slip: 'To Muriel White with love and best wishes Mildred B Shaw'.
 2. My Lady's Money and Percy and the Prophet was published by Tauchnitz on 3 January 1878; copies are recorded from December 1877 (Todd & Bowden, p. 280)

3. For examples of the form used by the publishers acting as agents to Tauchnitz, see [0321], the first extant letter to them of 24 December 1859, and its note 1.

[1716] TO W. P. FRITH, 26 DECEMBER 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 179.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 26th December 1877

My dear Frith,

I shall be only too glad to dine with you on that auspicious anniversary – 9th January 7.30 sharp.¹ On the 8th of that month, I made my appearance in the world. And oh Lord as long ago as 1824! I am trying to forget it.

For nearly three months I have been abroad – recovering after another attack of rheumatic gout. I have now returned to try if I can get through the English winter.

With truest good wishes for the New Year,

Believe me | My dear friend | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

W.P. Frith Esq RA

1. Frith was born on 9 January 1819 (ODNB); though he lived until 2 November 1909, this is WC's last extant letter to him.

[1717] TO NINA LEHMANN, 28 DECEMBER 1877

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Extract: Davis, p. 285. Published: B&C, II, pp. 409–410.

28th December 1877 | 90. Gloucester Place | London. W.

Dearest Padrona,

I guess I shall be just in time to wish you and Fred, and the sons and the daughter, all possible health health and happiness in the year to come. If I could have offered you my good wishes at your villa, need I say how much better I should have been pleased? But there /are/ all sorts of impediments – literary and personal – which keep me in England at the most hateful of all English seasons (to me), the season of Cant and Christmas.

Good natured friends tell me that I look twenty years younger after my travels. I am certainly much stronger than I was – and I hope to¹ fight through the winter. The fog and rain met me at Paris, and prepared me for the horrors of London.

I am charmed to hear that the Cannes climate has done you so much good. Thirty years ago, I remember it as a delightfully snug small, cheap place – with two English people only established in it, Lord Brougham, and another Britisher whose name I forget. It is plain that I should not know Cannes again if I saw it now. Brougham – beginning with a B – reminds me of “Samuel Brohl & Cie”.² I am going to begin the book tonight in bed. Thank you for remembering to send it. But for Christmas-time, I should have read it long ago. I have returned to heaps of unanswered letters, bills, payments to pensioners, stupid and hideous Christmas cards, visits to pay – and every other social nuisance that gets in the way³ of a rational enjoyment of life. As to modern French novels in general, I read them by dozens on my travels – and my report of them all is briefly this: – Dull and Dirty. The “Nabob” by Daudet⁴ (of whom I once hoped better things) proved to be such realistic rubbish, that I rushed out (it was at Dijon) to get something “to take the taste out of my mouth,” as the children say. Prosper Merimée’s delicious “Colomba”⁵ appeared providentially in a shop window – I instantly secured it, read it for the second time, and recovered my opinion of French Literature. You know the book of course? If not, I must sent it to you instantly!

There is no news. Everybody is eating and drinking and exchanging conventional compliments of the season. You are well out of it all. Give my love to Fred, and thank him for his kind letter – and write again and tell me that you are getting [del] immense reserves of health, and /announce/ when you too are likely to be recaptured by the great London net.

Goodbye dear Padrona. | Yours affly WC

-
1. WC continues on the third page of (rather than the second) of the four-page notepaper, at the top of which he writes '2' with a curved line underneath.
 2. Referring to Victor Cherbuliez's new novel, Samuel Brohl & Cie (1877).
 3. WC returns to the second page of the four-page notepaper, turning the paper to write in landscape format, at the top of which he writes '3' with a curved line underneath.
 4. Alphonse Daudet's latest novel Le Nabab (1877) appeared in English in three volumes from Smith, Elder in early 1878 as The Nabob.
 5. Prosper Merimée's Colomba, a novella set in Corsica, first appeared from July 1840 in the Revue des Deux Mondes.

[1718] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 31 DECEMBER 1877

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 180.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 31st December 1877

Dear Mr Bentley

Here is a note with three objects. I. to wish you all happiness in the coming year. II. To report myself very much the better for my travels abroad, and bold enough to try if I cannot face the English winter. III. To trouble you with a Mss novel written by an old friend of mine – whose petition that I will introduce the work to you I cannot refuse, as I refuse most other requests of the same kind.¹ If you will have the work looked at in the customary way, with a view to see whether it is worthy of publication, either periodically, or in book-form, you will oblige

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The work remains unidentified, but was eventually rejected by Bentley – see [1724] to him of 25 January 1878. Perhaps this was another work by Frances Dickinson (see [1482] to James Munnings of 9 September 1874).

[1719] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 4 JANUARY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: B&C, II, p. 410.

90. Gloucester Place | London. W. | 4th January 1878

Dear Sir,

I have been travelling abroad for the last three months – and the first letter to which you refer has not reached me. I now send with pleasure the information for which you ask in your second letter of December 17th, last.

My father and mother are both dead. My father was born in London on the 18th September 1788. As William Collins R.A. his name is well known in Great Britain, and among picture-collectors in America. He was a Royal Academician of the Engli[sh] Academy of Arts – and he i[s]² celebrated as a painter of the coast scenery and the cottage life of England.

My mother was born in the near neighbourhood of the Cathedral town of Salisbury (England). Her father [del] was an officer in the army – and her maiden name was Miss Harriet Geddes.

I was born in London on the 8th of January 1824. I was christened “Wilkie” after the name of the famous Scottish Painter, David Wilkie, who was my father's dear and intimate friend.

=

With this contribution to your collection,
I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. From the content of the letter, presumably an American autograph collector.
 2. The lower right corner of the page is torn, removing the final letters of the words ‘English’ and ‘is’, though there can be little doubt about the reading.

[1720] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 7 JANUARY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: B&C, II, p. 411.

90. Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 7th January 1878

Private¹

Dear Mr Chatto,

Inquiries have been addressed to me on the subject of publishing my next work of fiction in a Magazine. And I write to you confidentially, before I reply that I am free to negotiate.

I have an idea – if I can carry it out – of dividing my next novel into three Parts, /or Books,/ each sufficiently complete in itself for separate publication. Each Part would occupy from one hundred to one hundred and thirty pages /(100 to 130)/ of my customary MSS, as I now calculate – and [del] my MS page may be taken as representing roughly a printed page of “Belgravia”. I should propose to be guided by the public reception of the first Part in the matter of continuing the work in the same form through the two other Parts – and I should not be ready to publish the first monthly instalment of the first Part or Book before June or July next. I should, as usual, reserve the copyright, and the right of deciding in what form the reprint should be issued on the completion of the first part of the story periodically.²

Will you kindly let me know whether you wish to arrange with me for the right of periodically publishing the first “Part”, or not.

In the event of the work assuming larger proportions than I now contemplate, /or if the state of my health obliges me to defer writing the work,³ I should propose to give my publisher due notice, and to substitute some other (and shorter) complete story – so that the magazine might still have me as a contributor,⁴ and at the same time be perfectly free to consult its own convenience in the matter of re-opening the original negotiation on a larger scale.

Believe me | Dear Mr Chatto | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Andrew Chatto Esq

1. Written on an upward slant to the left of the hand-written address.

2. Referring to The Fallen Leaves, of which only the first part was ever written. This, in the event, appeared in weekly parts in The World from 1 January to 23 July 1879.

3. Added vertically down the left-hand margin, with the place of insertion denoted by a saltire cross.

4. In the event WC’s novella ‘The Haunted Hotel: A Mystery of Modern Venice’ was serialized in Belgravia Magazine, from June to November 1878; see [1721] to Chatto of 12 January 1878.

[1721] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 12 JANUARY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: B&C, II, p. 412.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 12th January 1878

Private¹

Dear Mr Chatto,

I have decided, on reflection, to defer arranging for the periodical publication of my contemplated novel. The question of issuing the story as a monthly serial requires longer consideration than I am able to give to it just now.

As to a shorter story, complete in itself, I have an idea of writing one of about the same length as “My Lady’s Money” (which occupies 110 of my MSs pages), with a view to republishing the two together in two volumes (Circulating Library Form) about next Christmas time. Would it help you in making an arrangement with me for “Belgravia” if I you had the right of [del] republishing the new story and “My Lady’s Money” for the Libraries?²

Will you kindly consider this idea, at your convenience, and let me know what you think of it?

vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esq

1. Written on an upward slant to the left of the hand-written address.
2. 'My Lady's Money: an Episode in the Life of a Young Lady' appeared with the new story, 'The Haunted Hotel', in book-form in two volumes from Chatto & Windus in October 1878.

[1722] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 12 JANUARY 1878

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, III, p. 181.

London | 12th January 1878

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of a cheque for Thirty Guineas for the right of publishing in Belgravia "The Duel in Herne Wood" – on the terms arranged in the letters already exchanged between us.¹

I have also to thank you for a Bill at four months for £150.-.- for the right of publishing cheap editions of "The Two Destinies", during the same period and on the same terms as those agreed on for the cheap publication of my other novels.²

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. See Andrew Chatto's letter to WC of 9 October 1877 (Reading), and WC's reply of 23 October 1877 ([1706]).
2. See the first note to [1706] to Chatto & Windus of 23 October 1877. The Bill was credited to WC's account four months later on 11 May 1878 (Chatto: WC).

[1723] TO SQUIRE BANCROFT, 13 JANUARY 1878

MS: Unknown. Published: Bancroft 1888, II, pp. 130–131, our copy text; BGLL, III, pp. 181–182.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square, W., | January 13, 1878

My Dear Bancroft,

I went to the theatre with rheumatism in my back and in my knees, and I was (I need not say how unwillingly) obliged to get home to bed after seeing the first two acts of the piece only,¹ but I saw enough to justify me in sincerely congratulating you and Mrs. Bancroft.

You have won a great success, and you have most thoroughly deserved it. I have never seen you do anything on the stage in such a thoroughly masterly manner as the performance of your part in the great scene. Your Triplet was an admirable piece of acting, most pathetic and true, but the Russian (a far more difficult part to play) has beaten the Triplet.²

There was no mistaking the applause that broke out when you left the scene. You had seized the sympathies of the audience.

Of the great success of the English Dora there is no manner of doubt, and I heartily rejoice in it.

Yours always truly, | Wilkie Collins

1. Diplomacy, adapted by Clement Scott and B. C. Stephenson (as 'Savile and Bolton Rowe') in four acts for the English stage from Victorien Sardou's comedy Dora. The play opened at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on 12 January 1878.
2. In Diplomacy the Bancrofts played the parts of Count Orloff and Countess Zicka. James Triplet is the leading role in Masks and Faces (1852) by Charles Reade and Tom Taylor. The Bancrofts' revival of the play opened at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on 6 November 1875.

[1724] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 25 JANUARY 1878

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 182.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.¹

25th January 1878

Dear Mr Bentley,

If it does not cause any great trouble I shall be much obliged if you will kindly send the Ms back to this house. Thank you for giving it a trial.²

I shall be delighted to see you when you can look in. I am generally at home until 4. P.M.
Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. New printed stationery, with roman capitals centred and a 'WC' monogram to the top left.

2. See [1718] to Bentley of 31 December 1877.

[1725] TO WALTER W. JONES,¹ 1 FEBRUARY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 182–183

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st Feby 1878

Dear Sir,

Pray excuse this late reply to your Circular. It was mislaid among the multitude of my letters – and only recovered today.

If I am not too late to say Yes, I gladly give my consent to the placing of my name on your list of Stewards.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W.W. Jones Esqre Secretary

1. Walter William Jones, Secretary of the Newsvendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution – see [0964] to him of 4 April 1870.

[1726] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 1 FEBRUARY 1878

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 183–184.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 1st February 1878

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter. I am sincerely sensible of the interest which you feel in my works, and sincerely gratified to hear of it.

I think you forget that the phrase “sit at his feet” has a figurative as well as a literal sense.² In its figurative sense as expressing entire submission – and in that sense alone – I have used it. People talk of “sitting under a preacher” – though their pews may be in the gallery considerably above him – and lawyers speak of their clients “coming into Court with clean hands,” without stopping to consider whether the physical state of the said client’s hands happens to be dirty or clean. Indeed, I myself once heard a man who had lost one of his arms declare, with great fervour and sincerity, that he “washed his hands” of a son who had been a great trouble to him! In something of the same frame of mind I used the unfortunate expression which, in its literal sense, is certainly open to the objection that you make to it.

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The addition of the word ‘London’ to the printed address suggests a correspondent overseas or in the provinces.

2. Referring to the phrase used with regard to the legless Miserrimus Dexter in ch. 41 of The Law and the Lady, first published in 1875, and long available in cheaper single-volume editions. The passage reads:

Miserrimus Dexter and Ariel were still where Benjamin and I had left them together – in the long room. They were watched by skilled attendants, waiting the decision of Dexter’s nearest relative (a younger brother, who lived in the country, and who had been communicated with by telegraph). It had been found impossible to part the faithful Ariel from her master without using the bodily restraints adopted in cases of raging insanity. The doctor and the gardener (both unusually strong men) had failed to hold the poor creature when they first attempted to remove her on entering the room. Directly they permitted her to return to her master the frenzy vanished: she was perfectly quiet and contented so long as they let her sit at his feet and look at him.

[1727] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 6 FEBRUARY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 184.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th February 1878

Dear Mr Chatto,

Will you kindly look over the enclosed dft of agreement and let me have it back to be copied in duplicate if it meets with your approval?¹

Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Presumably the agreement concerning 'The Haunted Hotel', formally signed on 20 February 1878 and now found at Reading. Chatto & Windus published the novel both in Belgravia, June–November 1878, and in two volumes with 'My Lady's Money' in October 1878.

[1728] TO FREDERICK LOCKER,¹ 12 FEBRUARY 1878

MS: Houghton (MS Eng 875 (31)). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 184–185.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

12th Feby 1878

Dear Locker,

I was indeed sorry to miss you yesterday.

Most unwillingly (for I am suffering from rheumatism) I was obliged to go out yesterday morning – and I only returned late in the afternoon to find your note, and that dreadful "sensational work" which you honour me by choosing as a birthday present for Mrs Locker.² It is needless to add that I have written the inscription which you suggest, with the greatest pleasure. The book is sent today, addressed to you at the Travellers' Club.³

My best congratulations on your daughters marriage⁴ – and my best thanks for those delicately-turned little poems which I had already tasted with relish in the Magazine⁵

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

I have already been away from England for some months – and I am afraid I shall have to go away again to enjoy an unrheumatic life in a dry climate. Where do the small hairs come from that get into ones [sic] pens???

1. Poet and book collector – see [0713] to him of 27 November 1866.

2. Locker's first wife died in 1872, and in July 1874 he married Hannah Jane Lampson, formally taking on the name Locker-Lampson.

3. It is not clear which of WC's 'dreadful' novels he was asked to inscribe.

4. Eleanor Locker married Lionel Tennyson on 28 February 1878. For an account of the wedding see G. H. Lewes's Diary (in George Eliot Letters, VII, p. 14).

5. Perhaps the 1878 edition of Locker's London Lyrics.

[1729] TO JAMES PAYN, 13 FEBRUARY 1878

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 242; B&C, II, pp. 412–413 (incomplete); BGLL, III, p. 185.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th Feby 1878

My dear Payn

Two words to thank you for your friendly letter – and to report that I am (say) half alive. While I was away last year in the Tyrol and Italy, I was 25 years old. Towards the end of 77, being obliged to return to my native damps and changes, I became, by rheumatic reckoning, 95. And what is the moral of this? The moral is – not to pass another winter in England.

As to making calls – we can't either of us do it, and thank God we both know it and are as old friends and as true friends as ever.¹ Keep the publishing business active – or the Apollinaris water will drown it!²

My kindest regards to Mrs Payn.³

Always yours truly | WC

1. Payn also suffered badly from gout – which the ODNB diplomatically diagnoses as ‘rheumatism’.

2. Thus for ‘Apollinaris’, popular bottled German mineral water, still sold today by Apollinaris & Schweppes GmbH. The spring in Bad Neuenahr-Ahrweiler was purchased in 1878 by the Apollinaris Company Limited of London, of which the publisher George Smith was the chief shareholder. To Smith it came to represent a rather larger source of income than the publishing concern. Payn had become literary adviser to Smith, Elder in 1874 and was to take over the editorship of the Cornhill Magazine in 1883.

3. Payn had married Louisa Adelaide Edlin in 1854 soon after coming down from Cambridge.

[1730] TO MRS LANSING THURBER,¹ 16 FEBRUARY 1878

MS: Unknown. On sale: Houle Rare Books & Autographs, Los Angeles (April 2004). Published: BGLL, III, p. 186.

I contribute with great pleasure to your collection of autographs.

1. Presumably Charlotte Thurber (b. c. 1834), wife of Lansing Thurber, New York music dealer.

[1731] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 20 FEBRUARY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 186.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th Feby 1878

Dear Mr Chatto,

I enclose duplicates of our agreement.¹ One signed by me. The other for your signature and Mr Windus's. If Mr Windus should not be at the office at this time, the customary signature of your firm will of course do equally well.

The book which I also send is written by an American friend of mine (also a very old friend of Seaver's). It was reprinted in England about 20 years since – and the question is, Would it be wise to try a new English edition at the present time? The author (blind) has been preaching and lecturing with great success all over England, and has in that way got a little public of his own.² Will you kindly look at the book when you have a spare half hour, and let me know what your experience suggests? One line to say Yes or No to the re-publication in question will be quite enough. Pray forgive me for troubling you in this matter – but the good blind man appeals to my opinion – and, in the case of a book of this sort, I really hardly know how to advise him.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I will send for the book when it is ready to be returned

1. For the publication of ‘The Haunted Hotel’.

2. William Henry Milburn, who WC met in London in 1876 – see [1624] to William Seaver of 20 May 1876. The publication referred could be either The Rifle, Axe, and Saddlebags, and other lectures, published in London in 1857, which includes a brief life of the author by Thomas Binney, or Ten Years of Preacher Life: Chapters from an Autobiography of 1859. None of Milburn's works seems to have been republished by Chatto & Windus.

[1732] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 11 MARCH 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 187.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th March 1878

Dear Mr Chatto,

I don't like to answer the enclosed letter, without first communicating it to you. Shall I accept the suggestion to destroy the copies?¹

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esqre

1. Though the enclosed letter was returned to WC and has not been traced, Andrew Chatto's reply of 15 March 1878 (Reading) reveals that it was from Sampson Low, Marston & Co. concerning their 209 unsold copies of the one-volume edition of Basil published originally by Blackwood in 1856. Chatto suggested that Collins write an order for the volumes to be transferred to Chatto & Windus – see [1736] to Andrew Chatto and [1737] to Sampson Low, both of 16 March 1878. The novel was one of the titles by WC reprinted by Chatto & Windus in a number of single-volume editions from 1875 (see Topp, III).

[1733] TO TOM CULLEN,¹ 13 MARCH 1878

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 187.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 13th March 1878

Dear Sir,

I contribute with pleasure to your collection of Autographs.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Tom Cullen Esq^{re}

1. Unidentified autograph collector.

[1734] TO MISS MARY,¹ 13 MARCH 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 187–188.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th March 1878

My dear Miss Mary

I have just sent some of my photographs to be mounted. They came from New York, where the best likenesses of me were taken ~~five~~ three or four years since.² The moment I get them back, I shall have the greatest pleasure in sending my contribution to your book.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Unidentified correspondent requesting a photograph for her album. The mode of address perhaps suggests the child of a friend.

2. By Sarony.

[1735] TO CHARLES A. RAYMOND,¹ 13 MARCH 1878

MS: Isserlis. Published: BGLL, III, p. 188.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 13th March 1878

Dear Sir,

I have just received your kind letter. It is needless to say that I contribute with pleasure to your book of Autographs.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Chas A Raymond | Editor | Denver Tribune

1. Charles A. Raymond, American newspaper editor and autograph collector, later described in the Journalist of New York as ‘a prominent capitalist of Denver, Colo., ... business manager of the old Denver Tribune when it was in the zenith of its fame’ (17 September 1892, p. 2).

[3009] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 13 MARCH 1878

MS: Yale (Tinker 720), accompanied by signed photograph.² Published: A&C2, p. 6.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | London
13th March 1878

Dear Sir,

Two famous Indian Diamonds – the “Sancy Diamond”, and the “Koh-i-Noor” (now in the possession of the Queen of England)³ – were originally ornaments in Idols worshipped by the Hindoos. Being “sacred gems”, they were watched night and day by the priests attached to the Temples – and certain disaster was predicted to any sacrilegious person who might attempt to steal them. These were the only facts known to me when I wrote “The Moonstone.”⁴ The journey of the three Priests to England in search of ~~the~~ their diamond (and every other incident in the book), took its rise in the imagination of

Yours vy truly | Wilkie Collins
I write in great haste to catch the mail

1. Judging from the enclosure and the postscript, perhaps an American fan of The Moonstone requesting an autograph.
2. An oval portrait taken during winter 1874 by Napoleon Sarony of New York, one of the series of the author in a fur coat; signed ‘Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins’.
3. Famous jewels apparently of Indian origin, each with a chequered history. After being purchased in 1570 by the French Ambassador to Constantinople, the Seigneur de Sancy, the first is now held in the Louvre. The second may have belonged to the early Mughal emperors. Under the Treaty of Lahore following the British conquest of the Punjab, it was controversially presented by Duleep Singh to Queen Victoria in 1851. It was first put on display at the Great Exhibition and is now held in the Tower of London among the Crown Jewels. See Lawrence L. Copeland, Diamonds: Famous, Notable, and Unique (Los Angeles: Gemological Institute of America, 1974).
4. See the Prologue to The Moonstone, ‘The Storming of Seringpatam (1799)’.

[1736] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 16 MARCH 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 188

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
16th March 1878

Dear Mr Chatto,

My best thanks for your kind note. – On the next leaf I have written the order to deliver the copies to your firm.¹ Forgive me for troubling you in this little matter.

Vy truly yours | WC

1. See WC’s note to Sampson Low, Marston & Co. of the same date, requesting the delivery of the remaining copies of Basil to Chatto & Windus.

[1737] TO SAMPSON LOW & CO., 16 MARCH 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 189.

90. Gloucester Place, London | 16th March 1878

Gentlemen,

Please deliver to Messrs Chatto & Windus 209 copies of “Basil”, now in your care.¹

Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs S. Low, Marston & Co

1. See the note to Andrew Chatto of 11 March 1878 ([1732]). Diagonally across the upper left-hand corner of the MS, in another hand is written ‘Warehouse | Mar 19 / 78’. At the foot of the letter below the signature, in yet another hand, is ‘Please deliver to Leighton | for Chatto & Windus | [A Dessing]’. As with a number of other manuscripts of WC letters to companies, there is a single vertical ink line struck through the letter, presumably by a member of staff to indicate that the matter had been dealt with.

[1738] TO ELÉONORE FECHTER,¹ 21 MARCH 1878

MS: Private, with associated note from Mary Louisa Boyle.² Published: BGLL, III, p. 189.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W | 21st March 1878

Dear Madam,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter, and my sincere congratulations on the success which has attended your daughter’s first appearance in opera in England.³

I am suffering from rheumatism – and I leave London today for a short time to try what change of air will do for me.⁴ For the present then I can only express my regret at not being able to have the pleasure of calling upon you and Mademoiselle Fechter. But I hope to return to London in a week or ten days, and then to have the pleasure of presenting my respects.

Believe me | Dear Madam | Sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Wife of Charles Fechter; see [3179] to her of 1 July 1874.

2. Boyle (see [0424] to her of 13 June 1861) was clearly a friend of Eléonore Fechter’s daughter, Marie-Thérèse, and attended her début as the heroine of Gounod’s Faust with the Carl Rosa Company at the Adelphi (see the Times, Thursday, 14 March 1878, p. 8), the operatic performance mentioned in the body of the letter.

3. According to [2001] to James R. Osgood of 18 January 1882, Fechter and his wife had two children, Paul and Marie-Thérèse; see also [1071] to Marie-Thérèse Fechter of 10 March 1871 and [1469] to Eléonore Fechter of 1 July 1874.

4. It seems that WC did not in fact leave London at this time – see [1739] to Edward Pigott of the following day.

[1739] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 22 MARCH 1878

MS: Kentucky (61m4, f. 97). Published: BGLL, III, p. 190.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd March 1878

My dear Ted,

Mr Monty was out when I called on him¹ – and I was too hard at work to see him, when he called again here. I have asked him, by way of making a meeting certain, to lunch here on Tuesday next the 26th at 2. p.m. Can you come and meet him? Send me a line – and pray say Yes.

Affectly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Monty remains unidentified.

[1740] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 1 APRIL 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 190.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st April 1878

Dear Mr Chatto,

At what time will it be convenient to you to set up the first monthly part of my little story – to begin in “Belgravia” in June next? I am obliged to trouble you with this question as I must send the first monthly part abroad, either in proof or in Ms copy with as little delay as possible.¹

One line in reply will oblige
Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

1. Concerning ‘The Haunted Hotel’ – the various overseas serializations are outlined in [1743] to Andrew Chatto of 24 April 1878.

[1741] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 6 APRIL 1878

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 190–191.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 6th April 1878

Dear Mr Rose,

In case of accidents by post, I will repeat the substance of a letter which I wrote to you by the mail of March 23rd last.¹

My new story (of which the first monthly part is herewith enclosed in corrected proof) will be completed in from 100 to 120 pages – of the size of the printed page of the proof – ranging over 4 or 5 monthly publications in all – and being republished here a month in advance of the periodical conclusion, (in book-form).² The advance-sheets are for disposal in the United States, as well as to you. If you can help me to dispose of the advance-sheets in the United States to any proprietor or publisher of a periodical – excepting Harper & Brothers – I shall owe another obligation to your kindness. If you cannot do so, I know you will kindly let me know it by return mail. N.B. I have refused the Harpers’ proposal for the story.³ (In haste).

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The earlier version of WC’s letter has not been traced.
2. The first edition in book form of The Haunted Hotel: A Mystery of Modern Venice, to which is added My Lady’s Money was published by Rose-Belford in Toronto in 1878. It appeared serially in Rose-Belford’s Canadian Monthly and National Review, July–December 1878, a month behind Belgravia.
3. See [1746] to George Maclean Rose of 1 May 1878.

[1742] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 8 APRIL 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 191.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
8th April 1878

Dear Mr Chatto

Will you kindly address the enclosed for me to the representative of the “Australasian?” I write to him about “The Haunted Hotel” before I write to my agent in Melbourne on the 12th.¹

My best thanks for the proofs which came in excellent time.²

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. WC responds to an approach from the London representative (with offices at 80, Fleet Street) of the Australasian (1865–1946), a weekly miscellaneous paper from the same publishers as the Melbourne daily Argus, before writing to his Australian agent Hugh Biers. The Haunted Hotel was not in fact serialised in the Australasian but in the (Melbourne) Weekly Times, the miscellany linked to the (Melbourne) Daily Telegraph.
2. Again of The Haunted Hotel.

[1743] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 24 APRIL 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 192.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th April 1878

Dear Mr Chatto,

I enclose copy for the second monthly Part of “The Haunted Hotel” – and corrected proof of the first monthly part. I find I have underestimated the number of proofs that I want. So I am obliged to ask for three more pulls (Revises) of the revised first part, and six pulls of the proof of the second Part. Canada and United States – Australia – France – Germany – Italy – (and one for myself) – make up this unholy demand for proofs!¹ If I can have the Revises and proofs on the 30th it will be doing me a kindness.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Apart from the Australian appearance in the (Melbourne) Weekly Times from 13 July 1878, only the Canadian serialization – in Toronto in the Canadian Monthly – has been traced.

[1744] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 30 APRIL 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 192.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th April 1878

Belgravia | “The Haunted Hotel”

=

The reserve of the right of translation must appear in each number – and must not be put at the foot of the page as a note – but must remain where I put it, as part of the title of the story. You don’t appear to know that the copyright treaty with Germany was revised in 1870, and made far more strict.¹

I must ask you to return the revises of the first page of the proofs, with the reserve, in each case, put back in its proper place – or you will involve me in a correspondence with foreign translators. Pray follow the copy exactly in future – and then if there is any mistake it will be my fault, not yours.

Wilkie Collins

P.S. The reserve of translation on the cover of Belgravia is not worth a straw – it protects nothing.

1. See [1745] to Andrew Chatto of the following day.

[1745] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 1 MAY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 193.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st May 1878

Dear Mr Chatto

I send the second monthly part of “The Haunted Hotel” corrected for press.

In case the Editor should be surprised at the manner in which I reserve my right of translation, I may explain that the said Reserve must form part of the title of the story – must not be placed as a note at the bottom of the page – and must be repeated on each separate monthly instalment of the story. All this fuss is to meet the German law. The French interpretation of the copyright treaty is more liberal.¹

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I lose from £40 to £80 (according to the length of the story) if I lose my German right of translation, by failing to comply with the formalities!

1. On the reciprocal copyright agreements in force at this time with Germany and France, see Copinger, 2nd edn, ch. 17.

[1746] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 1 MAY 1878

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, p. 288. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 193–194.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 1st May 1878

Dear Mr Rose,

I send with this, a corrected proof of the second monthly part of “The Haunted Hotel” to be published here in the July number of “Belgravia”.

I have to thank you for some specimen numbers of Canadian monthly publications which I have looked at with interest. You will know best which to choose for the periodical publication in Canada.

As I have not yet heard from you by letter, I fear, I am subjecting you to some trouble in the matter of the periodical republication in The United States. It is now too late for me to attempt to help you – even if I knew where the difficulty lies. I can only hope for the best.¹ There is certainly a chance of attacking the Harper monopoly this time² – for the story is a very strong one, and has (as I believe) the elements of popular interest in it. I am anxious to hear what the prospect is.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Rose in fact seems to have arranged serialization in the New York World – see [1773] to George Stewart Jr of 16 September 1878.

2. WC was in dispute with Harper & Brothers concerning the sale of Canadian editions of WC’s work in the United States. No new works by WC appear with their imprint from this time until 1883. According to Gasson (p. 76), the first American edition of The Haunted Hotel was in George Munro’s Seaside Library Pocket Edition, no. 977 (1887).

[1747] TO W. F. TILLOTSON,¹ 4 MAY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 194.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London. 4th May 1878 | Saturday

Dear Sir,

I shall be happy to see you, if you can favour me by calling at this house, at 4. P.M. on Tuesday next. If this appointment will do, don’t trouble to write again. If not, send me a line to choose your own hour on Thursday next, before 4. P.M.²

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | W.F. Tillotson Esqre

1. William Frederic Tillotson (1844–89), head of Tillotson & Son, proprietors of a chain of Lancashire newspapers including the Bolton Evening News (1867–) and Bolton Weekly Journal (1871–), which had expanded its business into the field of fiction syndication from 1873 – see Law, pp. 64–91.

2. It is not certain on which day the two men met for the first time, but on 11 July 1878 WC signed a contract to produce a serial novel for syndication by the Bolton firm. This proved to be Jezebel’s Daughter, which ran in a dozen provincial newspapers, including the Bolton Weekly Journal, from September 1879 – see Law, pp. 238–239.

[1748] TO UNIDENTIFIED PAIR OF GENTLEMEN, 9 MAY 1878

MS: Columbia (MS Coll. Schang), on a printed calling card. Published: BGLL, III, p. 194.

The ticket presented to these two gentlemen is given to them by me.¹

Wilkie Collins

9th May 1878

1. The nature of the ticket remains unclear.

[3164] TO LADY LOUISA GOLDSMID,¹ 10 MAY 1878

MS: Unknown. Extract: Gasson & Baker, p. 185. Published: Marks & Löwy, p. 109, our copy text; A&C6, pp. 13–14.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | May 10, 1878

MY DEAR LADY GOLDSMID,

Pray forgive me if I intrude too soon on your great sorrow.² I will not trust myself to speak of the dreadful calamity that has fallen on you. Let me only say that I do indeed feel for you with my whole heart, and that as long as I live I shall gratefully and affectionately remember the friend whom I have lost.³

Believe me, | Most truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

1. Lady Louisa Sophia Goldsmid, wife of the lawyer, MP and Jewish community leader, Sir Francis Goldsmid – see [0424] to her of 14 June 1861.

2. Referring to the untimely death of Sir Francis in a railway accident at Waterloo Station on 2 May 1878 (see the Times 4 May 1878, p. 7e, and 6 May 1878, p. 6d.)

3. WC was a visitor to the Goldsmids at their London home at St. John's Lodge in Regent's Park and at their country residence; see to Louisa Goldsmid, [0677] 15 May 1865 and [0708] 28 September 1866. WC was also in social touch with other members of the Goldsmid family, see, for example, [0958] to Miss Goldsmid, 2 March 1870. See also Gasson & Baker, pp. 182–184.

[1749] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 16 MAY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 195.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16th May 1878

Dear Sirs,

I am sorry that a slip of my pen should have given you the trouble of sending to me.¹ It will be better I think to continue the numbering of the chapters (without reference to the “Parts”) straight on from Chapter I. I have accordingly altered the Second Chapter IV – into chapter V. The chapters in the Second Monthly Number will require to be renumbered, Chapters VI, VII, VIII and so on. I have only my own proof of the Second Monthly Number, or I would have sent you a corrected proof with the numbers of the chapters altered. But it is easily done on your own proof.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Referring to the manuscript of ‘The Haunted Hotel’. As what follows makes clear, WC had inadvertently given the heading ‘Chapter IV’ to both of the last two chapters in the first serial instalment, to appear in June 1878.

[1750] TO BLANCHARD JERROLD,¹ 31 MAY 1878

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 195–196.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London 31st May 1878

Sir,

I beg to thank the Société des Gens de Lettres² for the invitation for which they have honoured me, and to assure you that I sincerely regret being unable to attend the meetings of the Congress.

Permit me to add that I entirely approve of the objects which you have in view in attending the deliberations of the Congress, and that I look forward with no ordinary interest to your proposed report of the proceedings.³

I have the honour to be | Sir, | Your faithful servant | Wilkie Collins
To | Blanchard Jerrold, Esqre | &c &c &c

1. Blanchard Jerrold (1826–84: ODNB), journalist and novelist, son of Douglas Jerrold.
2. La Société des Gens de Lettres was founded in 1838 by Balzac, Hugo, Dumas and George Sand and was charged with collecting royalties from print publishers.
3. The International Literary Congress met in Paris on 11 June 1878 to discuss the adoption of common international copyright regulations. More than 300 delegates attended and Victor Hugo presided. Jerrold apparently did not make his report – see [1864] to Sala, 25 June 1879. In his library WC had a copy of Sidney Jerrold’s A Handbook of English and Foreign Copyrights in Literary and Dramatic Works, published in 1881 (Baker 2002, p. 122). See also Gasson, pp. 42–43.

[1751] TO EDUARD HALLBERGER,¹ 3 JUNE 1878

MS: Fales, on lined paper, with envelope.² Published: BGLL, III, p. 196

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London. 3rd June 1878.

Dear Sir

Pray accept my thanks for your kind note. “The Haunted Hotel” has been sold (by previous agreement) to the publisher of the little work which preceded it, called “My Lady’s Money”, for translation into German both periodically and in book form. The proofs are already in the hands of the translator, and the first published number has gone to Germany in duplicate to be registered.³

Under these circumstances, I can only ask you to accept my excuses.

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

Herr Eduard Hallberger

1. Of Verlag Eduard Hallberger, Stuttgart publishers.
2. Signed and directed to ‘Herr Eduard Hallberger | Redaktion von | Ueber Land und Meer | Stuttgart | Germany’, postmarked as dated.
3. Probably referring to the Berlin house of Janke, though their earliest translation of The Haunted Hotel found in GV is that of 1892, while no translation of My Lady’s Money appears to be recorded.

[1752] TO GEORGE F. ROWE, 10 JUNE 1878

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 196–197

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London 10th June 1878

Dear Mr Rowe,

I have been away from London – and I must beg you on that account to excuse my delay in answering your kind letter.

I regret to say that I can only thank you for your proposal – I cannot take it into consideration.¹ Some months since, “No Name” (altered in certain respects with my permission, and indeed under my direction) was tried by Mr Wybert Reeve in the country, on the understanding (if the piece was successful) that he was to have my authority to act it during his coming tour in Australia and afterwards in the United States.² The piece has proved successful in the country, and the right of performing it was conceded by me to Mr Reeve some weeks before your letter reached me. I can only ask you therefore to accept my excuses and the expression of my regret.

Believe me, Mr Rowe | Sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Geo: Fawcett Rowe Esqr

1. Rowe had also wanted to produce No Name eight years earlier – see [1019] to him of 22 August 1870.
2. In Australia, for example, Reeve appeared for the first time as Captain Wragge in No Name at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne for six nights from Saturday, 26 October 1878, after starring as Fosco in The Woman in White at the same venue the previous week; from performances such as these, on 27 December 1878, £26 was credited to WC's bank account 'By recd of W Reeve' (Coutts: WC). More generally, see Gasson, p. 131.

[1753] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 15 JUNE 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 197.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th June 1878

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £50.-.- being the June payment, due as per agreement for "The Haunted Hotel".¹

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. Duly credited on 17 June (Coutts: WC), this was the first of five identical payments for the right to publish five serial instalments of the story in Belgravia, as arranged in the agreement of 20 February 1878 (Reading). The story in fact went into a sixth instalment – see [1767] to Andrew Chatto of 14 August 1878.

[1754] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 19 JUNE 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 197

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Wednesday | 19th June 1878

Dear Sirs,

I send to you with this, copy for the fourth Monthly part of "The Haunted Hotel". I shall be much obliged if the printers will let me have the proofs (6 pulls) not later than Tuesday evening the 25th.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To Messrs Chatto & Windus

[1755] TO CHARLES DICKENS JR, 19 JUNE 1878

MS: Morgan (Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/ 19). Published: BGLL, III, p. 198.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19 June 1878

My dear Charles,

A country newspaper-proprietor makes me an offer in money for permission to reprint "Percy and the Prophet" in certain newspapers with which he is connected, circulating in the country only.¹ Do you see any obstacles to this? I trouble you on this subject because (on looking over our correspondence) I find that the right of serial publication in England, after a lapse of time, never occurred to me as a right to be reserved – and, although I find myself stipulating in my letter to you that the only right sold was "the right of publishing the story in your extra number only", still I had no such reprint then in contemplation as the reprint that is now for the first time in my experience proposed to me.

As I see it, "Percy" has served his purpose in A.Y.R. by this time, and the manner in which he may be reprinted in the country is of little consequence, except to me – seeing that P. is too short to run alone in bookform. One line please to let me know what you think,

truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I ought to add that I know this newspaper proprietor to be a perfectly responsible man, and that I am now in treaty with him for a long serial story²

-
1. See [1756] to Leader & Sons of the following day.
 2. The Black Robe, though it did not appear until 1880.

[1756] TO LEADER & SONS,¹ 20 JUNE 1878

MS: Unknown. Draft in WC's hand: Parrish (Box 4/12), our copy text.² Published: BGLL, III, pp. 198–199. Amended: A&C14, p. 30.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 20th June 1878

Dft

Dear Sirs,

Here is “Percy and the Prophet” at your service ~~on the terms~~ for serial publication only, in ten provincial newspapers ~~stated in your last~~ on the terms stated in your letter of June 13th. Copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.³

Faithfully yours | (signed) Wilkie Collins

Messrs Leader & Sons

-
1. Liberal proprietors of the Sheffield Independent (1819–1912), who had moved into the fiction syndication business in 1873 – see Law, p. 57.
 2. As WC indicates clearly, the heavily corrected MS is only a draft – the final version has not been traced.
 3. See [1755] to Charles Dickens Jr of the previous day concerning the sale of ‘Percy and the Prophet’ to the Sheffield firm. The story appeared in the Sheffield and Rotherham Weekly Independent in five weekly parts from 1 February to 1 March 1879, while other venues so far traced are: the Liverpool Weekly Courier, (Dublin) Weekly Freeman and Irish Agriculturalist, (Edinburgh) Scottish Reformer and Weekly Review, Newcastle Courant, and Bradford Observer Budget. Leader & Sons was also to syndicate the novel The Black Robe as a newspaper serial from autumn 1880.

[1757] TO W. H. STEEDMAN,¹ 2 JULY 1878

MS: Private.² Published: BGLL, III, p. 199.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
2nd ~~June~~ July 1878

Dear sir

I regret that illness has prevented me from communicating with you at an earlier period on the subject of Mrs Elliotts [sic] novel.³

I have now the pleasure of sending you on the next leaf a line to Messrs Tinsley authorising them to deliver to you the M.S now in their charge⁴

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To W H Steedman Esq

-
1. Unidentified.
 2. In the hand of Caroline Graves, and signed by WC.
 3. This must be Mrs Frances Elliot. The novel in question is not known, though six novels by Elliot were found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 103).
 4. The second leaf of the folding notepaper has been torn away.

[1758] TO CHARLES GALE,¹ 4 JULY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 5/11). Published: BGLL, III, p. 199.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | July 4 1878

1. Unidentified – presumably the organizer of a charity sale. In the hand of Caroline Graves on the second leaf of the MS: ‘Mr. Wilkie Collins is suffering from illness, and is only able to contribute the above autograph to the Bazaar | Mr Chas Gale’.

[1759] TO GEORGE STEWART JR,¹ 11 JULY 1878

MS: Huntington (Rare Book 120320).² Published: BGLL, III, p. 200.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 11th July 1878

“The Haunted Hotel”

Duplicate of Fourth Monthly Part enclosed (Revise) with Mr Wilkie Collins’s compliments. /

1. Then editor of Rose-Belford’s Canadian Monthly, in which The Haunted Hotel appeared from July to December 1878.

2. In a bound copy of a set of Belgravia proof sheets which has the MS half title ‘Geo Stewart Jr | Dec 8th 1878 | Toronto’ and the MS title page ‘The Haunted Hotel | A Mystery of Modern Venice | By Wilkie Collins | Advance Sheets | Toronto 1878’. The volume contains numerous hand-written amendments and eight pages of new material in WC’s hand, forming a new ending and postscript.

[1760] TO CHARLES READE, 14 JULY 1878

MS: Noel. Summary: Clareson, p. 123. Published: BGLL, III, p. 200.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday 14th July 1878

My dear Reade,

I had hoped to ask you to let me present to you at a little dinner here my friend Mr Gill¹ (of Boston U.S.). But though I am getting better, I am not well enough yet to see my friends in this way. Let this note therefore introduce Mr Gill. He is one of your innumerable American admirers – and he wishes to shake hands with “Charles Reade” before he returns to America. Any kindness shown to him is a kindness shown to me.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. The Boston publisher William F. Gill, who had issued two collections of WC’s stories in 1875 – see [1439] to George Bentley of 8 April 1874.

[1761] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 24 JULY 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 200–201

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th July 1878

“The Haunted Hotel”

Dear Sirs,

I shall be obliged if you will kindly have the enclosed copy set up by the printers as soon as convenient and sent to me in proof. I have been suffering from illness – or you would have had the complete fifth number – closing the story – by this time.¹ As it is, here is a portion of the copy only – and I want to see how many pages I have filled, in the proof.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

It will be a convenience if the part can be sent, not later than the end of this month.
Messrs Chatto & Windus

1 . Concerning WC's illness, see [1763] to William Winter of 5 August 1878.

[1762] TO THE EDITOR OF THE SPORTING AND DRAMATIC NEWS,¹ 3 AUGUST 1878

MS: Wolff Collection, with envelope.² Summary: Davis, p. 288. Published: BGLL, III, p. 201.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

August 3rd 1878

Dear Sir,

Your kind letter finds me committed to literary engagements which will occupy my working hours (if all goes well) for the next two years.³

I can only thank you for the proposal which you have been so good as to make to me, and regret that it is not in my power to be one of the Contributors to your next Christmas Number.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The Editor of | The Sporting and Dramatic News.

1. The Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News, a sixpenny weekly paper started up in February 1874 by Thomas Fox, which issued a special Christmas number full of seasonal tales along the lines of the Illustrated London News and the Graphic.

2. Signed and directed to 'The Editor of | The Sporting and Dramatic News | 148. Strand | W.C', postmarked 'LONDON-W. | 7 | AU 5 | 78'.

3. WC was already committed to producing an annual Christmas story for the New York Spirit of the Times; 'The Mystery of Marmaduke', his 1878 effort, appeared in Britain in Bentley's Temple Bar. On 11 July 1878, WC had also signed his first agreement with Tillotson's of Bolton, contracting him to produce a serial novel to begin in August or September 1879.

[1763] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 5 AUGUST 1878

MS: Stanford.¹ Facsimile: Bender. Published: Winter 1909, pp. 206–208; B&C, II, pp. 413–414.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London August 5th 1878

My dear Mr Winter,

Your kind and friendly letter found me in a darkened room, suffering again from one of my attacks of rheumatic gout in the eye. I am only now well enough to use my eyes and my pen [del] once more – and I hasten to ask you to forgive me for a delay in writing to you which has been forced upon me, in the most literal sense of the word.

Let me now get away from the disagreeable subject of myself and my illnesses – and beg you to accept my most sincere thanks for the gift of your last volume of poems. My first renewal of the pleasure of reading is associated with your pages. I ought to warn you that I am an incorrigible heretic in the matter of modern poetry, of the sort that is now popular. I positively decline [del] to let the poet preach to me or puzzle me. He is to express passions and sentiment in language which is essentially intelligible as well as essentially noble and /musical/ [del] – or I will have nothing to do with him. You will now not be surprised to hear that I delight in Byron and Scott – and, more extraordinary still, that I am a frequent reader even of Crabbe!² Having made my confession, I am sure you will believe I speak sincerely, when I thank you for some hours of real pleasure derived from your volume. Both in feeling and expression I find your poetry (to use a phrase which I don't much like, but which exactly expresses what I want to say) "thoroughly sympathetic". "The Ideal" "A Dirge" and "Rosemary" are three among my chief favourites. I thank you again for them – and for all the rest.³

I have been too completely out of the world to have any news to tell you. As to literature, we are in a sadly stagnant state in London. And as to "the British Theatre" the less (with one or two rare exceptions) said about it the better. Writing of the Theatre, however, I am reminded that my “New Magdalen” Ada Cavendish sails on the 24th to try her fortune in the United States. She has, as I think, more of the sacred fire in her than any other living English actress of “Drama” – and she has the two excellent qualities of being always eager to improve and always ready to take advice in her Art. I am really interested in her well-doing, and I am specially anxious to hear what you think of her. In the “Magdalen” and also in “Miss Gwilt” (a piece altered from “Armada,” by Regnier (of the Theatre Francais)⁴ – and by myself) she has done things which electrified our English audiences. If you should be sufficiently [del] /interested in her/ to give her a word of advice in the art, she will be grateful, and I shall be grateful too.

I am “bestowing my tediousness” on you without mercy⁵ – and my paper warns me that the time has come to say for the present goodbye. Let me come to an end by expressing a hope that you⁶ will give me another opportunity of proving myself a better correspondent. In the mean time, with all good wishes, believe me ever yours

Wilkie Collins

When you see Mr Jefferson pray remember me kindly to him⁷

1. In another hand, presumably Winter’s, in the left margin by the printed address: ‘Received | August 19th 1878 | Ans’d July 15. | 1879’.

2. An eight-volume edition of Crabbe was found in WC’s Library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 141).

3. Among other works by Winter, a copy of Thistledown: a Book of Lyrics (1878), which included the three pieces mentioned, was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 527).

4. WC omits the accents in ‘Régnier (of the Théâtre Français)’.

5. Citing Thomas de Quincey (1785–1859): ‘I grew hotter and hotter in my purgatory, and thought with more and more horror of bestowing my tediousness upon the long line of amiable female faces which I saw ranged on the other side of the table’ (‘Mrs Hannah More’, Tait’s Edinburgh Magazine IV (December 1833), pp. 293–321; here p. 320).

6. From this point to the signature, WC writes vertically up his left margin.

7. Postscript added by WC above the printed address.

[1764] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 6 AUGUST 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 5/8). Published: B&C, II, pp. 414–415.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London 6th Augt 1878

My dear Seaver,

The never sufficiently-to-be-damned-and-blasted-rheumatic gout, has [del] hit me in one of my eyes again. I am only now able to use my other sound eye without damaging its inflamed neighbour. The illness seized me just after I had called on Miss Eytinge,¹ and had had a most pleasant talk with her. From that time to this, to my great regret, I have not been well enough to see her again – and next week I am to be exiled to the seaside by my doctor’s order. Forgive me for boring you with these troubles – I only want you to know that I am never wilfully neglectful of any friend of yours.

And now, there goes sailing to long suffering America, another English actress – but this time a true artist. My nice little “New Magdalen”, Ada Cavendish, ~~sails~~ leaves us for New York on the 24th of this month. See her in the “Magdalen” and in “Miss Gwilt” (my “Armada” transformed for the stage) – and if you can do her a kindness, don’t forget that it is another kindness shewn to me.

Goodbye, my dear friend, for the present.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

My last morsel of note-paper – until the Stationer sends some more!²

1. The American actress Rose Eytinge (1835–1911), who paid her second professional visit to Europe in 1878. She gives an unflattering account of WC in The Memories of Rose Eytinge (New York, 1905), pp. 296–297, which makes clear she also visited him at Gloucester Place: ‘He was “the mildest-mannered man,” and almost the smallest, I ever met, who was not positively a dwarf. His hands and feet were almost dwarfed, and as he sat perched up on a rather high chair at his writing-table, with his grizzled beard flowing over his breast, and his low, soft voice flowing out in silvery accents, his head surmounted with a quaintly shaped skull-cap, he looked rather like a wizard who had fallen under the ban of his fairy godmother, who in anger had deprived him of his legs.’

2. Postscript added above the printed address.

[1765] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 10 AUGUST 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 202.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | Aug^t 10th 1878

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £50.-.- (Fifty pounds) – being the July payment, as per agreement, for “The Haunted Hotel”¹

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. The second of five payments for the right to publish the serial instalments of the story in Belgravia, as arranged in the agreement of 20 February 1878 (Reading).

[1766] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 12 AUGUST 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 202.

Monday 12th Aug^t 1878

“The Haunted Hotel”

Dear Sirs,

I send some more copy for the last number of the story. My illness has made me later than the calculated time for completing the work – and I must send advance sheets to Australia and the United States at the end of the present week. Will you kindly send the enclosed copy at once to the printers, and instruct them to set up as much as they conveniently can between this and Friday next, and let me have three pulls of the proof on Friday evening for certain. I hope to send the conclusion of the story (in Mss) in two or three days more.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Chatto & Windus

N.B. I have no second copy of the Mss!!!

[1767] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 14 AUGUST 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 203.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
14th Aug^t 1878

Dear Mr Chatto,

I was sorry to miss you when you kindly called here. My eye is getting better – and I hope to go to Ramsgate on Saturday next, and get some fresh air on the sea.

In the meantime, do you see any objections to cutting the last monthly part of “The Haunted Hotel” into two parts, and so finishing in November instead of in October next? I am afraid this number will run to too great a length as it now stands – and I also want to get the longest possible advance on the American Pirates.¹

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
I will send you my address when I get to Ramsgate.

1. In other words, the later the end of the story appears in a periodical in Britain, the less time other North American publishers will have to bring out unauthorized versions to compete with the authorized edition issued by Rose-Belford in Toronto in late 1878. See [1775] to Chatto of 30 September 1878.

[1768] TO GEORGE STEWART JR, 17 AUGUST 1878

MS: Huntington (Rare Book 120320).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 203.

90. Gloucester Place | London | Saturday 17th Augt 1878

Dear sir,

I send you a corrected proof of the 5th Monthly Part. The Story will be lengthened to a 6th Monthly Part – ending in November.²

A Revise shall follow this proof as soon as I can get it from the printers. I am only now recovering from illness – and my amanuensis is out of town, ill too!

You will have the October number a month beforehand – the November will follow in a week or ten days. If the duplicate October Revise does not arrive in time, my illness is to blame. I have done my best.

Yrs faithfully | Wilkie Collins

1. Bound in with the set of Belgravia proofs of The Haunted Hotel – see [1759] to Stewart of 11 July 1878.

2. Since the Canadian Monthly was running a month behind Belgravia, the serial in Canada in fact concluded in December. 203

[1769] TO CARLOTTA LECLERCQ, 19 AUGUST 1878

MS: Ross. Published: BGLL, III, p. 204.

Ramsgate | 19th Augt 1878

My dear Mrs Nelson

Forgive a late acknowledgement of your kind letter – I have been suffering from my old enemy the gout, and I am here to get better by trying some yachting. There will be no chance of my being back in London in time to have the pleasure of receiving you. Don't trouble about the returns – your report is quite enough. I wish, for your sake, it had been more favourable¹

Forgive a short letter. I am overwhelmed with a mass of unanswered letters while I have been sailing.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I am not at liberty to treat for the “Magdalen”. I can only say – Thank you.

1. Probably concerning a play at a provincial theatre. None of WC's plays was in production in London at that time.

[1770] TO GEORGE STEWART JR, 26 AUGUST 1878

MS: Huntington (Rare Book 120320).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 204.

(Duplicate) | Corrected Revise

Note to Mr Stewart: The corrected proof was sent to you Via U.S. on the 17th of August. This Revise contains additional corrections, which should appear if possible, in the periodical reprint. If the Revise arrives too late, please give instructions that this Revise only is to be printed from in the republication in book-form.

The concluding number (for November) will follow in a week's time – if the printers are punctual.

WC Augt 26th

1. Note written on The Fourth Part (continued), ch. XXI, p. 1 (collation 245 A) of the Belgravia revises of The Haunted Hotel.

[1771] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 31 AUGUST 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: B&C, II, p. 415.

Aug^t 31st 1878

Dear Mr Chatto,

The cheque followed me to Ramsgate, the day after I received your kind note. On the next page you will find the formal acknowledgement.¹

If you see Bret Harte again, pray give him my kindest remembrances – I am very sorry to miss seeing him during his present short visit to London.²

As soon as I begin the International Review story [del] /I am to hear from the London Editor when they proposed to publish. You shall know the date/ without fail.³ The last breezy days have soaked me in salt water – and the wind seems to have blown my brains out of my head.

But I hope to make a beginning next week.

Vy truly yours | WC

I enclose the Revise of the October number – to go to the printers, please, with some new corrections for Press.

Proofs of the last number received this morning. Sunday, 1st September.⁴

1. See [1772] to Chatto and Windus of the same date, which is written on the third page of the same sheet of folded notepaper.

2. Francis Bret Harte (1836–1902), distinguished American author and US consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia (1878), and later Glasgow (1880–1885). Harte was among the guests at the Lotus Club for the New York dinner in WC's honour, 27 September 1873.

3. Referring to 'A Shocking Story', published in New York in A.S. Barnes's bi-monthly The International Review (1874–83) in November 1878, and in London in Chatto's Belgravia Annual at Christmas 1878.

4. Both postscripts are written beneath the signature, with a line drawn between them.

[1772] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 31 AUGUST 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 205.

4. Nelson Crescent² | Ramsgate | 31st August 1878

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £50...- being the August payment due, as per agreement, for "The Haunted Hotel"³

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. On integral leaf of [1771] to Andrew Chatto of the same date.

2. Probably an error by WC for 14 Nelson Crescent, where he habitually stayed.

3. The third of five payments for the right to publish the serial instalments of the story in Belgravia, as arranged in the agreement of 20 February 1878 (Reading).

[1773] TO GEORGE STEWART JR, 16 SEPTEMBER 1878

MS: Huntington (Rare Book 120320).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 205.

Duplicate Corrected Revise | Sept. 16th.

November Monthly Part. | Conclusion of the Story.

See new corrections – to be added to the proof sent to you by U.S. mail of September 7th. – before you forward this revise to the World (New York).²

WC

1. Note written on The Fourth Part (concluded), ch. XXVI, p. 1 (collation 261 A) of the Belgravia revises of The Haunted Hotel.
2. Though we have not been able to confirm the details, this implies that the novel also appeared as a serial in the New York newspaper.

[1774] TO GEORGE STEWART JR, [LATE SEPTEMBER] 1878¹

MS: Huntington (Rare Book 120320).² Published: BGLL, III, pp. 205–206.

Author's Proof

Use these proofs of the first two monthly Parts for the reprint in book form. They contain the latest corrections. The monthly parts which follow these two, can be reprinted from the proofs already in ~~yr~~ [sic] sent to you for the periodical publication.

WC

-
1. Conjectural dating based on WC's comments to Andrew Chatto on the timing of the Canadian volume edition of The Haunted Hotel (see [1775] to Chatto & Windus of 30 September 1878).
 2. Note at the top of the opening page of the first monthly instalment of The Haunted Hotel in the set of bound Belgravia proofs. In another hand is added: 'For the print in book form'.

[1775] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 30 SEPTEMBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17) Published: BGLL, III, p. 206.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | Sept 30th 1878

Dear Sirs,

I only returned on Saturday evening last – or I should sooner have thanked you for the proofs of the Library Edition and for your note.¹

In Canada and the U.S. the book-edition of The Haunted Hotel will be published as early in October as possible – before the pirates can steal the conclusion of the story. We may as well publish here in October also – if you think the time favourable.

I enclose the last monthly part (November) corrected for press.

Will you kindly instruct the printers to send me duplicates of "The Haunted Hotel" book-proofs – to send to Tauchnitz. I will return the printer's proofs corrected as soon as I can transfer corrections to Tauchnitz's duplicates.²

My new story in "The International Review" will be published in New York on the 1st of November next.³ I will send you a duplicate of the Mss tomorrow. As the conclusion of The Haunted Hotel appears in the November Belgravia – it is for you to decide whether it will be advisable for the "International" story to appear in the same number – or whether you will put me into "The Gentleman's Magazine" this time. I must do something for the Gentleman's Magazine – so as to call myself a fellow-contributor with Doctor Johnson!⁴

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The Haunted Hotel: a Mystery of Modern Venice, to which is added My Lady's Money, in two volumes from Chatto & Windus, the first English volume edition, issued in November 1878.

2. The Haunted Hotel formed vol. 1785 in Tauchnitz's Collection of British Authors, My Lady's Money having been already published in 1877 in a separate volume (vol. 1706) with 'Percy and the Prophet' (Todd & Bowden).

3. 'A Shocking Story', published in New York in A. S. Barnes's International Review (1874–83) in November 1878.

4. The Gentleman's Magazine (1731–1914) was the longest-running British literary magazine, having been founded by Edward Cave, who employed Samuel Johnson as a regular contributor. The journal had started to carry light serial fiction in 1868 and had been bought by Chatto & Windus in 1877. In the event WC never contributed to the magazine and 'A Shocking Story' appeared in London in Chatto's Belgravia Annual at Christmas 1878.

[1776] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 2 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 207.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Wednesday | 2nd Oct: 1878

Dear Sirs,

Here is the story for “The Belgravia Annual.”¹ Don’t be alarmed at the size of it! My regular copyist has failed me – and this is the work of a Volunteer, who covers a great deal of paper and (naturally) abounds in mistakes.

I shall be much obliged if you will kindly have the copy set up at once, and send me three pulls of the proof in time for next Tuesday’s or next Thursday’s American mail. In the difficulty about the copyist I have had to send my own MS to New York – and it is a question whether they can read it when it gets there (unless I help them with a timely proof.)

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The book-proof of The Haunted Hotel shall be sent to you corrected tomorrow.

Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. ‘A Shocking Story’.

[1777] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 10 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 207.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Thursday. 10th Oct: 1878

“The Haunted Hotel”

Dear Sirs,

The proofs printed from the Magazine Revise have not yet arrived. So, to save time, I repeat the latest corrections on the book proofs – and send them herewith. The printers will do well to read the book-proofs by the Belgravia Revise for November, in case of my having forgotten something.

Yours truly | WC

I sent you the Belgravia Annual story corrected for proof by Tuesday’s post.

“The Haunted Hotel”

I forgot to say that I shall have a few lines of Preface to add to the 1st Volume.¹ They shall be sent with the next batch of corrected proofs.

WC | 11th Oct:

1. The short preface to the first edition of the novel in two volumes.

[3052] TO AUGUSTIN DALY, 11 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Folger (Yc2885/2). Published: A&C3, p. 52.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Friday 11th Oct: 1878

My dear Mr Daly

I have just got back to London for a few days. If you have nothing better to do between 4 and 4.30 on Monday afternoon next (the 14th) I shall be delighted to see you. Don’t trouble to write again, if this date will do. Silence shall mean Yes.¹

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Augustin Daly Esqre

1. Following Daly’s bankruptcy in New York (see [3050] to him of 28 September 1877), the American impresario came to London in autumn 1878 in an attempt to restore his theatrical fortunes.

[1778] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 11 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 208.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th Oct: 1878

My dear Georgina,

I will be with you next week with the greatest pleasure. But – if it does not inconvenience you – I can manage it better in the afternoon than in the evening. What do you say to Wednesday next (the 16th) at 4.P.M? If this will suit you, don't trouble to write again. If it is in any way inconvenient, then choose your own afternoon on any day after Wednesday at 4.¹

Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The consultation between WC and CD's sister-in-law probably concerned her projected edition of CD's letters – see [1783] to Andrew Chatto of 21 October 1878.

[1779] TO CHATTO & WINDUS,¹ 12 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 208.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Saturday 11th 12th Oct: 1878

Title-page and dedications returned for Press.² Copy for Preface also enclosed. Please send duplicate proofs of Preface – one of which shall be sent back for press, by return of post.

WC

1. Though there is no salutation or formal indication of the addressee, the note can only be addressed to the firm of Chatto & Windus.
2. For the first volume edition of The Haunted Hotel.

[1780] TO EDWARD J. COLLINGS,¹ 15 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 208–209.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 15th October 1878

Dear Sir,

I send you my photograph – with my best wishes for the success of the Bazaar

Pray excuse a short note. I have very recently returned to London – and my desk is covered with unanswered letters.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Edward J. Collings Esqre

1. Unidentified – presumably another organizer of a charity sale (see [1758] to Charles Gale of 4 July 1878).

[1781] TO J. LUDLOW,¹ 16 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Unknown. On sale, damaged envelope only:² eBay (22–29 September 2004), by 'autographic', London, item 2271987337. Published: BGLL, III, p. 209.

With Mr Wilkie Collins's compliments

1. Unidentified, but perhaps merely an autograph hunter.
2. Torn roughly across through the middle of the address line leaving perhaps the upper two-thirds intact, including a note in WC's hand on the back flap. Directed in another hand (possibly that of the recipient) to 'M' J Ludlow | 108 [illegible word] Road' (address conjectural), with the stamp removed but a clear postmark: 'LONDON-W | 5 | OC 16 | 78'.

[1782] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 17 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 209–210.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Thursday Oct: 17th 1878

Dear Mr Rose,

I wrote to Mr Frank Leslie by the mail of Tuesday last, stating the conditions on which I was willing to send him the advance-sheets of my new story.¹

I enclose a copy of these conditions.² They represent my ultimatum. If they are not literally complied with, I beg to thank Mr Leslie for his proposal, and to withdraw from the negotiation.

To save time, I have requested Mr Leslie to send his reply to you – and I have undertaken, at the same time, to send the first advance sheets to you – to be transmitted to him without delay, in the event of his accepting my conditions.

I write in haste – and have only time to thank you for the service you have so kindly rendered to me.

I have had a kind note (in your absence) from Mr Belford.³

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

G.M. Rose Esqre

1. The Fallen Leaves, for which WC seeks an American serial publisher. Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, the first American weekly pictorial paper to follow the model of the Illustrated London News, had been published in New York since 1855.

2. The copy of the conditions (in WC's hand) is also found in Parrish and reads as follows:

Copy of the Conditions, on which Wilkie Collins accepts Frank Leslie's offer for the advance sheets of his forthcoming novel – to begin periodically in January 1879.

London. 15 October 15th 1878.

1. That the first number of the story issued in America, shall be published on the same day as the day selected for the first publication in England – and on no account before it. It is understood that I (Wilkie Collins) send you (Frank Leslie) word of the exact date of first publication here, in sending the first advance sheets
2. That no changes of any sort are to be made in the story, without first obtaining the author's permission. And, if the publication in America be monthly, that such publication be so arranged as never to be in advance of the weekly publication in England.
3. That the author is to have the privilege of republishing the story in America in book-form, and of issuing such republication in America one month in advance of the termination of the story in America in its periodical form.
4. That the purchase-money for the advance-sheets is to be paid in two Bills of Exchange for Fifty pounds sterling each, at not more than one months sight each. The first Bill to be sent to the author on receipt of the first half of the advance-sheets, and the second Bill on receipt of the conclusion of the story.

I understand, on my side, that I am (health permitting) to post the weekly advance sheets in London six weeks in advance of the date of publication. I am also to inform Mr Leslie – at the same time or earlier – of the title of the story. (N.B. Said title is not yet (Oct 17th) finally decided on.)

3. Robert Belford – now partner with George Maclean Rose in the firm of Rose-Belford.

[1783] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 21 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 210–211.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st October 1878

Dear Mr Chatto

Some friends of mine have asked me what the expense would be for printing, paper, and cloth binding, in bringing out 2000 copies of a work in two volumes, containing 400 pages in each volume, of the crown 8^{vo} size of your reprint of “Life in London”.¹ If you can, with your large experience, note down the whole sequence (in the three items named) in round numbers, without any trouble, you will be doing me a kindness. But if I am ignorantly asking for information which is not very easily given, I beg you will not think of answering this letter.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Presumably referring to Georgina Hogarth’s plans for a two-volume edition of CD’s letters, eventually published by Chapman & Hall in 1880 – see [1778] of 11 October 1878 and [1831] of 18 March 1879, both to her. Here ‘Life in London’ indicates, simply as an example of the type of volume required, the long-standing Chatto & Windus edition of Pierce Egan Sr’s tale of ‘Tom and Jerry’, first published in numbers in 1820–21. Andrew Chatto replied on the same day (Reading), suggesting that the amounts per volume would be £50 for composition, £45 for presswork, £60 for paper and around 2d per copy for binding (around £17 for 2,000 copies), making a total of around £172.

[1784] TO ROBSON & SONS,¹ 21 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 243; BGLL, III, pp. 211–212

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st October 1878

Dear Sirs,

I am instructed by Mr Edmund Yates to send you enclosed the first weekly part of a new story of mine which is to ~~appear~~ begin in The World with the New Year. It is necessary to have the copy set up many weeks in advance of publication in England – for the purpose of transmission in proof to America, Canada, Australia – and for translation in Europe. If you can set up the copy enclosed for the first weekly part, so as to let me have two three pulls of the proof on Saturday next I shall be obliged. Please follow the copy exactly, in every respect, and return it with the proofs to the address at the head of this letter.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Kindly let me have one line to say that you have received the copy safely, and that my various requests are sufficiently clear. | WC

To | Messrs Robson & Sons

1. Printing firm in Pancras Road, running between Kings Cross and St Pancras Stations. They printed the society weekly the World, edited by Edmund Yates, in which The Fallen Leaves was serialized from 1 January to 23 July 1879. Charles Thomas responded on behalf of the firm – see [1786] to Thomas of 24 October 1878.

[1785] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 23 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 212.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23rd Oct: 1878

Dear Mr Chatto

Many thanks for your kind and prompt compliance with my request.¹

In advertising the new book, it strikes me that it will be best only to mention “The Haunted Hotel”. The title is so striking that it will stand (as I think) better alone than coupled with the less remarkable title of “My Lady’s Money”.

I leave this entirely to your decision – so pray don’t trouble to write. If “the trade” is likely to object to only advertising one story when two are published, or if there is anything otherwise irregular in my suggestion, I withdraw it beforehand. The idea struck me (with a view to the public) and I send it at a venture!²

Truly yours | WC

-
1. Referring to the information requested in [1783] to Chatto of 21 October.
 2. In the event, Andrew Chatto did not take up WC's suggestion. In the 'Times Column of New Books and New Editions' (8 November 1878, p. 10), the Chatto & Windus announcement of publication read:

Mr. WILKIE COLLINS'S NEW NOVEL. – 2 vols. 8vo. Illustrated, at every library.
THE HAUNTED HOTEL; and My Lady's Money. By WILKIE COLLINS. Author of "The Woman in White."

[1786] TO CHARLES THOMAS,¹ 24 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), with the envelope held in private hands.² Published: BGLL, III, pp. 212–213 (without envelope).

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 24 Oct: 1878

Dear Sir,

Please add the enclosed title as heading to the proofs of the first weekly part of my story.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Title | The Fallen Leaves³ | By Wilkie Collins

-
1. Though there is no indication of the addressee on the letter itself, this must be the first in the long series to Thomas as a representative of Robson & Sons, printers of the World – see [1784] to them of 21 October 1878 and [1788] to Thomas of 28 October 1878.
 2. Directed to 'Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20. Pancras Road | N.W. | Wilkie Collins' and postmarked 'LONDON | N.W. | 4 | OC 24 | 28', with the word 'Title' written in pencil.
 3. The word 'Title' is in semicircle at the top of the sheet, and there are triple dashes beneath the words of the title and double dashes beneath WC's name.

[1787] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 26 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 213.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London. Oct: 26th 1878

Dear Mr Rose,

Here is the first weekly part of my new story for "The (London) World" in corrected proof. It is not published in England, until the 1st January 1879.

If Mr Frank Leslie has written to you, engaging to accept all the conditions on my side, of which I sent you a copy, by the mail of October 17th, then please forward the proof to him at once.¹ If not, keep the proof carefully in your own possession until you hear from me again.

In any case, a duplicate proof shall follow next week, for the Canadian periodical publication.²

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I assume that you have now returned to Toronto. How has "The Haunted Hotel" begun in the matter of sale?³

-
1. The Fallen Leaves was in fact published as a serial in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper in New York in parallel with the appearance in the World in London.
 2. In the Canadian Monthly, February 1879–March 1880.
 3. WC's The Haunted Hotel: A Mystery of Modern Venice appeared in a single volume of 225 pages from Rose-Belford of Toronto in 1878. A copy is held in the National Library of Canada.

[1788] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 28 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Private, envelope only.¹ Published: BGLL, III, pp. 213–214.

Copy and corrected proof. Oct. 28th/78

Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20. Pancras Road | N.W.
Wilkie Collins

1. Originally containing corrected proofs for The Fallen Leaves. Rear panel has broken imprint of WC's seal in red sealing wax.

[1789] TO MATHILDE GRÜNEISEN,¹ 28 OCTOBER 1878

MS: Schiller. Published: BGLL, III, p. 214.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London 28th Oct: 1878

Dear Madam,

The right of translating “The Haunted Hotel” into the German Language has already been purchased from me – and I am engaged to offer to the German publisher of this story, the first refusal of the right of translating the next story that I write.²

Under these circumstances, I can only beg you to accept my excuses, and my thanks for your kind letter.

Believe me, Dear Madam, | Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | I may add that it is always difficult to enter into an agreement with a translator [sic], (however accomplished) unless there is also a proposal from a publisher, relating to the question of terms.

To | Miss Grüneisen

1. Mathilde Grüneisen (b. 1834), daughter of theologian Carl Grüneisen from Tübingen and translator into German of English novels.

2. Possibly Janke of Berlin, who published later editions of The Haunted Hotel in 1892 and 1898, and The Fallen Leaves in 1880 (GV). See also the following letters mentioning German translations [1743] to Andrew Chatto, 24 April 1878, and [1751] to Eduard Hallberger, 3 June 1878.

[1790] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 5 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 214–215.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
5th November 1878

Dear Sirs,

The cheque due for the month of October has not been paid.¹

I have been accidentally informed that “The Haunted Hotel” is published. If this is true (I don't see the book advertised in your list in The Times), I must also remind you that I have not received the two bills, at three months and six months date from the day of publication, which form part of the arrangement for the publication of the book.²

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mssrs Chatto & Windus

1. The last of five payments of £50 for the right to publish the serial instalments of the story in Belgravia, as arranged in the agreement of 20 February 1878 (Reading).

2. The two promissory notes for £200 for the lease to publish the story together with ‘My Lady's Money’ in volume form, also as arranged in the agreement of 20 February 1878 (Reading).

[1791] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 6 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 215.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London 6th Nov 1878

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of a cheque for £50.-.- for the October instalment of “The Haunted Hotel”, and of the promissory notes at 3 and 6 months for £200 each, in further payment for “The Haunted Hotel” and “My Lady’s Money” as per Agreement.¹

Pray accept my thanks for the presentation copies of the Story in its 2 Volume form. It is needless to say that I am greatly pleased with the handsome appearance of the book. The design of the binding is quite surprisingly good – perfectly new and in perfect taste. I seldom see the two qualities combined in these days.²

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. See the notes to [1790] to Chatto & Windus of 5 November, to which Chatto & Windus replied on the same day (Reading), enclosing the cheque, promissory notes and six author copies of the two-volume edition of the two stories. The £50 was credited as ‘of Messrs Chatto & Co’ to WC’s bank the next day. Also the next day, the first promissory note for £200 was credited as ‘Chatto & Cos P/N discd’, while WC was debited £3-1s-9d as ‘Discot on £200’ for the early payment, a charge of 1.54%. The second promissory note was included in ‘2 Bills Discod’ on 20 February 1879 totalling £261-18s-2d, with a discount charge of £1-18s-9d, a rate of 0.74% (Coutts: WC). See also [1817] to Chatto & Windus, 23 January 1879.

2. For a description of the binding of the first English edition of The Haunted Hotel, see Gasson, p. 76.

[1792] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 12 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/67), with envelope.¹ Published: B&C, II, p. 416.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 12th November 1878

My dear Sebastian Schlesinger,

If todays [sic] Steamer to Boston gets along nicely, it will bring you a little box, with two volumes of a new book of mine – and if you will look at the 1st Volume, on the Dedication page, you will see that I have taken the liberty of inscribing the book to you and Mrs Sebastian² – to whom I beg to send my kindest remembrances.

Tell me if you get the book safely and if you both forgive me. I have been long wanting to send you some little token of my remembrance of those happy days in Marlborough Street – and I only waited until I had done something especially successful. Here – and in Germany and Russia – “The Haunted Hotel” has been one of the most popular stories I have ever written – so I took my opportunity in case I might write something worse next time – or cheat my dear American insurance offices by dying too soon – or Lord knows what else.

I have /been/ trying to get nice and healthy by cruising at sea. The yacht was too small – otherwise I should have brought my books to Boston myself.

With best wishes to both of you

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

Box sent “to Port of landing only” [del] by G.W. Wheatley Co, Globe Foreign Express Office 23. Regent Street, London. Carriage paid.³

1. Directed to ‘Sebastian Schlesinger Esqr | Messrs Naylor & Co | 6. Oliver Street | Boston | Mass: | U.S.A.’, with the signature, ‘Wilkie Collins’. Postmarked ‘LONDON – W. | D5 | NO 12 | 78’ and ‘BOSTON | NOV | 23’.

2. WC dedicated The Haunted Hotel to ‘Mr. & Mrs. Sebastian Schlesinger, in Remembrance of Much Kindness and of Many Happy Days.’

3. Postscript written beneath the signature in minute letters.

[1793] TO JAMES PAYN, 15 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 216.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th Nov^r 1878

My dear Payn,

Many thanks. I shall be delighted to dine with you on the 26th at 7.30. sharp. By that time, I may have recovered the shock which the sudden change in your handwriting has produced in me. Never mind! I am taking lessons too. My best handwriting is “90 Gloucester Place &c” at the top of this letter. Just look back at it – will you?¹

Yours ever | WC

1. WC, whose own address here is printed, refers in jest to Payn’s notoriously bad handwriting: ‘Payn wrote an execrable hand ... and his letters were always passed over to S. S. Conant to ascertain their obscure meaning’ (J. H. Harper, The House of Harper (New York: Harper, 1912), p. 483).

[1794] TO TRÜBNER & Co.,¹ 18 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Stanford. Facsimile: Bender. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 216–217.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th November 1878

Dear Sirs,

The Story to which your letter refers was written for The International Review,² at the express request of Mr Barnes of New York – conveyed to me (in writing) through Mr Barnett Smith, his London representative.

I was also informed by Mr Barnett Smith, in another letter, that The International Review was “an American publication.”

Under these circumstances, I made it a condition of consenting to write the story at all, that Mr Barnes should concede to me the right of simultaneous publication in an English periodical, as the absolutely necessary course to take (under the English law) for the preservation of my copyright. Mr Barnes, in reply, unreservedly conceded to me (through his London representative) the right that I had claimed.

In the exercise of that right, I offered to my publishers, Messrs Chatto and Windus, the opportunity of publishing the story in England.³ It is needless to add – after what I have already written – that I certainly did not (and do not now) recognise the claim of any other periodical to violate my copyright by publishing my story within the limits of Great Britain and Ireland.

I remain Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | WC

To Messrs Trübner & Co

1. London publishing company founded in 1851 by Nicholas Trübner (1817–84), which published fiction on commission and acted as agent for a number of American houses. WC’s Considerations on the Copyright Question was issued as a pamphlet by Trübner in 1880.

2. ‘A Shocking Story’ published in the International Review, 5 (November 1878), pp. 846–875. This was published by A. S. Barnes in New York from 1874 to 1883, which also appeared in London at half-a-crown with the Trübner imprint. On 15 November Josiah Child had written to WC: ‘Dear Sir, We find that “A Shocking Story” is in the “International Review”. Kindly let us know at once if you sold that story to Chattos subject to the Circulation of the “International” here and oblige yours respectfully (signed) Trübner & Co. per Josiah Child.’ (Parrish).

3. In the Belgravia Christmas Annual for 1878, pp. 1–28. The story was reprinted as ‘Miss Mina and the Groom’ in Little Novels (1887).

[1795] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 19 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 217–218.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th November 1878

Private

Dear Sirs,

I beg to enclose copy of a correspondence between Messrs Trubner & myself, relating to “A Shocking Story”.¹

I may add for your private information that the circulation in England of “The International Review” was described to me, by the London representative of that Journal, as being “so small that he did not imagine it would at all interfere with my plans of publication in England” – before I offered the right of periodical publication to your firm. It is needless to add that “The International Review”, being an American publication, “copyrighted in New York” can have no copyright in England, and can therefore claim no right to republish in England articles written by British subjects – or indeed by American citizens either.

However, if you are of opinion that the republication of the Review in England has unfavourably influenced the circulation of my story in your Annual, I cannot of course hesitate to withdraw any claim on you for the purchase-money for the Story.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs | Chatto & Windus

1. See [1794] to Trübner & Co. of the previous day. Following this letter in the Parrish Collection are copies in WC’s hand both of that letter and of Trübner & Co.’s original letter to him of 15 November 1878.

[1796] TO TRÜBNER & CO., 19 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Stanford. Facsimile: Bender. Published: BGLL, III, p. 218.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.¹

Nov^r 19th 1878

Dear Sirs,

I have communicated with Messrs Chatto & Windus – and they agree with me that it is needless to put you to any inconvenience in reference to the English Circulation of the number of The International Review which contains my story. Neither my publishers nor I raise any objection to the circulation of my story among your subscribers in England, to the extent of the 50 or 60 copies mentioned in your letter to me of today’s date.

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Trubner & Co

1. WC uses printed paper with blue centred address, which bears a circular stamp at the top right: ‘TRUBNER & Co | LONDON | 20 NOV 78’.

[1797] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 20 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 219.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th Novr 1878

Dear Sirs,

I have written to Messrs Trubner & Co, in accordance with the view expressed in your kind letter.¹

You state correctly the sum owing to me for the right of publishing “A Shocking Story” in the Belgravia Annual for this year – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.²

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. See the letter to WC from Chatto & Windus of 19 November 1878 (Reading) and [1796] to Trübner & Co. of the same day.
2. The sum was 30 guineas, as the letter to WC from Chatto & Windus of 19 November makes clear (Reading). The amount of £31-10s was credited to WC's bank account on 31 December 1878 'of Chatto & Co' (Coumts: WC).

[3346] TO THE PRINTER OF THE SPIRIT OF THE TIMES, 23 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Private.¹ Published: A&C12 p. 6.

Novr 23/78

Note to Printer

Follow the copy exactly, in punctuation, and for new paragraphs.

WC

1. A note in pencil on the first page of the manuscript of 'The Mystery of Marmaduke' for the 1878 Christmas number of The Spirit of the Times in New York dated 28 December 1878. The story was also published in London in Temple Bar, January 1879. WC's note perhaps indicates that there will be no time for him to receive and correct proofs before publication.

[1798] TO ALICE WOOLNER,¹ 25 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 219.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th November 1878

Dear Mrs Woolner,

I should have been only too glad to join your pleasant little dinner tomorrow if I had been free. But I have another dinner engagement tomorrow (26th) – and I can only ask you and Woolner to accept my thanks and my excuses.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Alice Gertrude Waugh (b. c. 1845) married Thomas Woolner (1825–92), the sculptor and poet, in the third quarter of 1864 and had six children with him.

[1799] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 25 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 219–220.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday 25th Nov^r 1878

Dear Mr Bentley,

You kindly offered to let me have proofs of the story, when wanted.¹

I enclose first half of the copy – the second and concluding half to follow tomorrow. Can I have four pulls of the proof either on Friday night next, or on Saturday morning before noon? If this does not give time enough please return the copy sent herewith. I must in that case have a Mss duplicate made to go to New York by mail of Saturday next.

(In great haste) | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

1. Referring to the Christmas tale 'The Mystery of Marmaduke', published in New York in the Spirit of the Times on 28 December 1878 and in Bentley's Temple Bar in January 1879.

[3389] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 25 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Lewis Collection (L2907), envelope only.¹ Published: A&C14, p. 17.

Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20. Pancras Road | N.W.²
Wilkie Collins³

1. With one penny and ½d stamps indicating then a weight of between 1oz and 2oz and presumably enclosing proofs for The Fallen Leaves. Sealed with three red seals. On the verso two circular postmarks 'LONDON.W | A I | NO25 | 78' and 'LONDON.N.W | E N | NO25 | 78'.
2. See several other such examples of envelopes to Thomas around this time; for details see [1786] to Charles Thomas, 24 October 1878.
3. Signature lower left marked off by a curved line.

[1800] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 26 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 220.

Nov 26th 1878

Dear Mr Bentley

Here is the completion of the copy – with my best thanks for your kind compliance with my request.¹

Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins

1. 'The Mystery of Marmaduke' – see [1799] to Bentley of the previous day.

[1801] TO ISABELLE FRITH, 29 NOVEMBER 1878

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, III, p. 220.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

29th Nov^r 1878

Dear Mrs Frith,

My luck is against me. I have already accepted a dinner engagement for Sunday.¹ Need I say that I am indeed sorry to miss the opportunity you kindly offer me? I can only ask you to accept my thanks and my excuses.²

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. WC writes on the Friday.
2. This is WC's last surviving letter to Frith's wife, who died on 28 January 1880, aged 57.

[3045] TO WYBERT REEVE, 1874-AUTUMN 1878

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4d, our copy text;¹ Reeve 1891, p. 108; A&C3, p. 49 (with Reeve 1891 as copy text).

I cannot reconcile myself to the idea.² You, who have assumed the responsibility, surely ought to be the first gainer. I thank you most heartily, but pray forgive me if I ask you, for my sake, to say no more about it.

1. This extract follows [3042] to Wybert Reeve, June 1873. Reeve prefaces it with 'Later on, I wished to make a difference in our arrangements, more to his advantage. He replies:-'.
2. Of changing the financial arrangements concerning Reeve's long-running authorised production of The Woman in White, in which he played Fosco. By the time that Reeve emigrated to Australia in the autumn of 1878, he was to claim that he had played the part more than 2000 times, not only in London and the provinces, but also in Scotland, Ireland, the United States and Canada (see [3042] to Reeve, June 1973, note 2). In tentatively dating the extract, we have assumed that Reeve's 'Later on' relates not to the closing stages of the provincial run of 1872–73, but to later tours perhaps further afield. In the Coutts records, there are no payments to WC specifically linked to Reeve until 1878–79, when four appear between 9 March 1878 and 14 July 1879; the later two (each for £26) seem to be related to Australian performances of The Woman in White, while the earlier two (each for £20) probably relate to a further tour of the English provinces.

[1802] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 9 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Private, envelope only.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 221.

Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20. Pancras Road Monday 9th Decr 1878.

Copy for 7th weekly part enclosed.

You shall have the corrected proof of Part 6 for Revise, by post tomorrow.

1. Originally containing corrected proofs for The Fallen Leaves. Rear panel has three imprints of WC's seal in red sealing wax.

[3185] TO GEORGE BARNETT SMITH,¹ 4 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Private.² Published: A&C7, pp. 42–43.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square. W. | 4th Dec 1878

My dear Sir,

I can only suppose that another false report of my having finished "Edwin Drood" has been set afloat in America.³ I was asked to finish the story, soon after Dickens' death – and positively refused. Any assertion or newspaper report which associates me in any way with any attempted completion of the story is absolutely false. I shall be obliged if you will at once communicate this reply of mine to Mr Barnes, with my authority to positively contradict the rumour which has deceived him, and which may deceive others.

I hope myself to write to Mr Barnes, in a few days, in answer to a letter lately received from him, touching on this subject – which completely puzzled me until I read the letter which you kindly left here today. But I am very busy just now – and you will do me a kindness if you will forward this necessary contradiction immediately.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | George Barnett Smith Esq

1. George Barnett Smith, London representative of A.S. Barnes of New York; see [1794] to Trübner & Co., 18 November 1878.

2. Inserted into an extra-illustrated copy of Memoirs.

3. CD died when he was about half way through Edwin Drood. In 1871, soon after his death, the American writer Henry Morford anonymously published John Jasper's Secret, which claimed to a sequel to Edwin Drood, composed by unnamed authors with knowledge of Dickens' intentions. In 1878 the work was translated into French by Bernard Derosne in an edition which specified the original authors as Charles Dickens Jr and WC. See [1807] to Harper's Bazar, 18 December 1878, [1836] to Chapman, 28 March 1879, and [1864] to Sala, 25 June 1879.

[1803] TO AUGUSTIN DALY, 10 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, III, p. 221.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th Decr 1878

Dear Mr Daly,

I have been suffering from my old enemies gout and rheumatism, since I had the pleasure of seeing you here¹ – and, though I am getting better, I cannot (I am sorry to say) be sure enough of my health yet to appoint a day for your meeting Mr Trollope here. So I enclose a letter of introduction which I hope will meet your wishes.²

When I write again, I hope to report myself in better order, and to get to see the next play when it is running smoothly, and when I can enjoy it without an aching back and shoulders.

Yours vry truly | Wilkie Collins

I write in haste – with arrears of work that must be attended to³

1. Daly visited London in the autumn of 1878 and in a letter dated 18 October 1878 wrote that he had ‘called on Wilkie Collins, but the interview was short though pleasant. He is not in town “for good” yet, & when he returns we are to dine & have a long chat. There was just a hint that we might do a play together.’ In a further letter of 11 November 1878 Daly described Charles Reade as ‘a very surly old gentleman’ and wrote that his ‘bearing was decidedly a contrast to dear gentle Wilkie Collins’ (Daly).

2. See [1804] to Trollope of the same date.

3. WC was working on The Fallen Leaves, which began serialization in the World on 1 January 1879.

[1804] TO ANTHONY TROLLOPE,¹ 10 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, III, p. 222.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th December 1878

My dear Trollope,

This letter will be presented to you by my friend Mr Augustin Daly² – formally manager of the Fifth Avenue Theatre New York, and author of several highly successful dramatic works.

Mr Daly is in treaty for the production of one of his plays in London. A portion of the story is founded on incidents in one of your novels – and Mr Daly is anxious to consult you personally, in order to obtain your approval before he permits the play to be represented.³

I need say no more than this, I am sure, in introducing him to you.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

To | Anthony Trollope Esqre

1. WC said Trollope was ‘as staunch a friend as ever lived’; see [2102] to William Winter, 14 January 1883. For Trollope’s opinion of WC’s work in his Autobiography, see Gasson, p. 150.

2. Apart from a reference to his adaptation of Mosenthal’s Deborah (1819) running in London in February 1864, there is no mention of Daly in Hall.

3. This was Daly’s play Divorce (1871), partly based on Trollope’s novel He Knew He Was Right (1869); WC had earlier been asked by Daly to help to find a venue for the play in Britain – see [1124] to William Tindell of 19 September 1871. The play had opened in New York in September 1871 but seems to have first appeared in Britain only in December 1881, at Edinburgh (Nicoll, II, p. 333).

[1805] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 14 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Berg. Published: B&C, II, pp. 416–17.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 14th Decr 1878

Dear Mr Bentley,

I was indeed sorry to hear that I had missed seeing you when I got back to the house yesterday evening.

Let me thank you for the kind manner in which you have settled the matter of the “Marmaduke” story (the formal acknowledgement is on the next leaf)¹ – and for the addition which you have been so good as to make to my library. It seems to me to be an excellent idea – carried out (so far as externals are concerned in the first place) with thorough good taste, [del] and I don’t doubt equally well [del] managed in relation to the literary substance inside.² I am already deep in the “Penal Servitude” – a book I had long wished to read – and I am delighted with it. The writer (whoever he may be) is not only a born observer – ~~but~~ he has also the rare merit of being able to make other people really see what he has seen himself.³

If you are likely to be in New Burlington Street, on Tuesday next, I will take my chance of shaking hands with you, between two and three o’Clock. Don’t trouble to write again – unless Wednesday will do better than Tuesday.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

One word about reserving the right of translation. My German publisher tells me that ‘All rights reserved’ reserves nothing in his country. The phrase must be ‘The Right of Translation is Reserved’ – because that is the only right you and I have in Germany!!!⁴

1. When Bentley called round at Gloucester Place he must have left a cheque in payment for the right to publish ‘The Mystery of Maraduke’ in the January 1879 issue of Temple Bar – the leaf with the acknowledgement has been torn away.

2. Bentley must also have left a copy of an unidentified new work published by his house.

3. Five Years’ Penal Servitude, by One Who Has Endured It, issued anonymously but in fact by Edward Callow, and published in one volume in 1877 by Bentley. This was presumably an earlier donation to WC’s library from the publisher.

4. The postscript, added above the printed address, presumably refers to the reservation printed at the head of the text of ‘The Mystery of Marmaduke’ in Temple Bar. The German publisher in question – possible the owner of a periodical – has not been identified.

[1806] TO THE REV. W. H. FREEMANTLE, 18 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 222–223.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th December 1878

My dear Sir,

I have the pleasure of enclosing my little offering to the Poor Fund (five pounds), with my best wishes.¹

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The Hon^{ble} & Rev^d | W. H. Freemantle | &c &c &c

1. See [1657], the similar note to him of 23 December 1876. The amount of £5 for ‘St Mary’s Poor Fund’ was debited to WC’s bank account on 31 December (Coutts: WC).

[1807] TO THE EDITOR OF HARPER’S BAZAR,¹ 18 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: B&C, II, pp. 417–418.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London. | 18th December 1878

To The Editor of Harper’s Bazaar²

In the “Sayings and Doings” column of Harpers Bazaar, for the 14th of December there is a paragraph which states that I am the author of a completion of “Edwin Drood,” recently published, in the French language in Paris.³

I shall be obliged if the Editor will publicly contradict this report – so far as I am concerned in it – at the earliest opportunity. I never even heard of the work falsely attributed to me, until I saw the allusion to it in the Bazaar.

The writer of the paragraph in question, accounting for the publication of the spurious “Edwin Drood” in French, further adds that “British copyright law does not prevail in Paris” – thus associating me, by implication, with a meanly-planned evasion of the law of my own country, in relation to the unfinished work of one of my oldest and dearest friends! It may not be amiss to inform the contributor to “Sayings and Doings” – who must surely have been thinking of the United States while he wrote – that there is an International Copyright Treaty between England and France, and that the rights of literary property (duly asserted under the Treaty) are strictly respected in Paris.

Wilkie Collins

-
1. The editor of Harper's Bazar from its start in 1867 until her death was Mary Louise Booth (1831–89).
 2. Written above the printed address; WC mistakes the spelling of the title of the paper throughout.
 3. The reference is to Le Crime de Jasper (Paris: Dentu, 1878), a translation by Charles Bernard-Derosne of John Jasper's Secret (Philadelphia: Peterson, 1871), which purported to be a sequel of Dickens's Edwin Drood written by English acquaintances of the deceased author, but was in fact penned by the American author Henry Morford. The French edition specified Charles Dickens Jr and WC as the writers responsible. Derosne had translated WC's Man and Wife into French in 1872.

[1808] TO NINA LEHMANN, 20 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Extract: Davis, p. 288. Published: B&C, II, p. 418.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 20th Decr 1878

I have but one excuse, dearest Padrona, for not having long since thanked you for your kind letter – the old excuse of hard work and poor health. But I hold up my head still – and lead the life of a hermit – and (may I confess it?) enjoy the life. Your Wilkie is getting old – there is no mistake about that! A

And how do you like Paris! And how does my dear “blonde Mees” Nina finish her education? She must remain like herself mind – she must not be made into a French ingénue. With this important message, take my love and give a bit of it to N.¹

Do you sometimes lie awake, and want a little something to read you to sleep again? I send you /by book-post/² two little stories which they have bribed me to write in America – and which have been of course republished here.³ Don't trouble to send them back. Tear them up when you have done with them.

Later I shall have more proofs (of the love story which is coming out in The World)⁴ to send to you – perhaps to bring, if I can make a holiday, six weeks or so hence.

We have had lights all day long in London – and the fog has got into my head – and I must go and walk it out again – and get an appetite for the glorious paté which the good Fred has sent to me.

Will you write again, I wonder, to your affectionate | WC?

-
1. The reference is to Fred and Nina Lehmann's only daughter Nina Fredericka Mary Teba, born on 15 October 1861, now seventeen and apparently attending finishing school in Paris.
 2. Insertion written vertically down WC's left-hand margin, with the place of insertion marked with a saltire cross.
 3. 'A Shocking Story' and 'The Mystery of Marmaduke'.
 4. The Fallen Leaves, serialized in the World from 1 January 1879.

[3133] TO GEORGE STEWART JR, 24 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Private, envelope only.¹ Published: A&C5, p. 11.

Via United States | Decr 24th | George Stewart Esqre Junr
Office of Rose-Belford | Canadian Monthly | Toronto | Prov: of Ont: | Canada
Wilkie Collins

1. Postmarked 'LONDON | XA | DE 24 | 78', with 'Collins' in another hand written vertically in the left margin. The verso is stamped 'MONTREAL | 8 | JAN 8 | 79 QUE', thus indicating a delivery period of around 14 days. Another fainter mark seems to bear the same date and the city 'Toronto'.

[3364] SIR HENRY THOMPSON,¹ 26 DECEMBER 1878

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

26th December 1878

My dear Sir,

I accept with great pleasure your kind invitation for Friday, January 3rd at 7.30. precisely.²

Believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Sir Henry Thompson | &c &c &c

1. Sir Henry Thompson (1820–1904: ODNB), surgeon and painter who exhibited at the Royal Academy 1865–85. He was a specialist in the genito-urinary tract – see [2891] to Jim Pigott, 14 September 1888.

2. From 1872 Thompson gave ‘Octaves’ – ‘dinner of 8 courses for 8 guests at 8 o’clock’ (see Haight, VII, p. 32 n.3), hence the very precise time of arrival. WC enthusiastically accepted another such invitation in 1880 (see [3366] to Thompson, 23 March 1880) but refused one in 1886 ([2636] to Thompson, 3 November 1886).

[1809] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 27 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 223–224.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27th Decr 1878

Dear Mr Bentley

I have discovered “A Rogue’s Life”, in my library copy of Household Words.¹ The story is 95 columns long – so there is no fear of not properly filling the Volume. But I should like to correct my “Rogue” here and there – and I cannot remember to whom “Household Words” was sold. I think it was Ward & Lock – but I am not sure. On the next leaf you have a memorandum of the dates, if you will kindly help me to buy either the back numbers – or, if they are not to be sold separately, then the volume containing the story.²

With these lines, I send the MS of Mr Walter Goodman, which you were good enough to say you would submit to your reader.³

Accept my best wishes for the new year –
and believe me, vy truly yours | WC

“A Rogue’s Life.”

Published in | Household Words | 13th Volume. Dating | from January 19th to July 12th 1856.

=

The Story occupied five weekly parts; beginning with N^o 310. published March 1st / 56 | and | ending with the | number for March 29th.

1. The bound run of Household Words, with vol. 15 wanting, was still in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 101).

2. The old serial was to be reprinted in volume form by Bentley, with revisions, so WC required a reading copy on which to make the necessary changes.

3. Probably Walter Goodman, author of Pearl of the Antiles: or, an Artist in Cuba (London, 1873). His The Keeleys on the Stage and at Home was published much later by Bentley – in 1895.

[1810] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 30 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 224.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th Dec 1878

Dear Sirs,

Please remind the “financial partner” that he got “A Shocking Story” (in the Belgravia Annual) on unusually cheap terms, and that I expect him to pay for it punctually. (N.B. – the American purchase money was paid a month since).¹

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. In other words, William Edward Windus has been much slower in paying for the right to publish the story (in the Belgravia Annual) than the proprietors of the International Review.

[1811] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 31 DECEMBER 1878

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 224.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | London
31st Dec 1878

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of a cheque for Thirty Guineas (£31..10..-) paid by you for the right of publishing “A Shocking Story” in the Belgravia Annual for 1878 – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.¹

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. Duly credited that day to WC’s bank account (Coutts: WC).

[1812] TO ALFRED DE STERN,¹ 11 JANUARY 1879

MS: Salomons. Published: BGLL, III, p. 225.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | January 11th 1879

My dear Mr de Stern,

I am very sorry to have missed you when you have so kindly called. When this work is done, the exercise begins – or there is no health for me. If you have nothing to do on Tuesday afternoon next (the 14th) do come and take your lunch here with me at two o’clock – and say you forgive me for not having been able to return your call.

Yours always | WC
This is just the weather I like.

1. See [1702] to him of 18 September 1877.

[1813] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 14 JANUARY 1879

MS: Unknown. Published: Ward, p. 195, our copy text; BGLL, III, p. 225..

January 14, 1879.

My Dear Mrs Ward,

I have only this moment heard from Charles that Edward is seriously ill. Your residence in the country and my busy life in London have been great obstacles in the way of our meeting for too long a time. But I do not forget the old friends, and the old times, and I take this way, rather than no way, of assuring you of my sympathy and my earnest hope for better news before long of the health of my old friend.¹ At this time of anxiety pray don’t think of answering my letter. If there is improvement, and if Alice will write just one line to say so, I shall be rejoiced to hear it.

With love to you all. | Yours always truly, | Wilkie Collins

1. Her husband E. M. Ward, who since 1874 had been suffering from periodic depression, had cut his throat in his dressing-room at home on 10 January 1879 and died on 15 January (see ‘The Death Of Mr. E. M. Ward, R.A.’ in the Times, 18 January 1879, p. 11a).

[1814] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 16 JANUARY 1879

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 226.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 16th Jany 1879

Dear Mr Bentley

My best thanks for the Rogue. He shall be interleaved – and whatever I can do to make him additionally presentable shall be done.¹

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

1. As WC had requested in [1709] his letter to Bentley of 27 December 1878, Bentley had acquired a copy of the A Rogue's Life as it had appeared in 1856 in Household Words, so that the author could set to work on the process of revision for publication in a volume from Bentley. The interleaved copy seems not to have been amongst WC's books when he died and its present whereabouts are unknown.

[1815] TO LESLIE WARD,¹ 20 JANUARY 1879

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 244; Ellis, pp. 49–50; B&C, II, p. 419.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 20th January 1879

Dear Leslie Ward,

No ordinary engagement would prevent me from paying the last tribute of affection to my dear lost friend. Illness alone makes it impossible for me to join those who will follow him to the grave tomorrow.² I am suffering from rheumatism – and, in the present state of the weather, the doctor's advice obliges me to give up the hope of being with you.

I first knew your father when I was a boy – forty years since – and it is no figure of speech, it is only the sad truth, to say that I do indeed share in your grief, and feel the irreparable loss that you have suffered as, in some degree at least, my loss too. I do not venture to intrude so soon on your mother's sorrow, after the dreadful calamity that has fallen on your household. I only ask you to assure her of my heartfelt sympathy, when it is possible for her to think of old friends.

Believe me | always most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Leslie Ward Esqre

1. Leslie Ward (1851–1922: ODNB), artist best known for his 'Spy' caricatures in Vanity Fair, knighted in 1918, eldest son of E.M. Ward. The latter had died on 15 January, after cutting his own throat five days earlier.

2. E.M. Ward was buried in his father's grave at Upton Old Church on 21 January.

[1816] TO ALFRED DE STERN, 21 JANUARY 1879

MS: Salomons. Published: BGLL, III, p. 226.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 21st January 1879

My dear Mr de Stern,

I am really ashamed that you should not have been at once shown into my study when you kindly called today as we had arranged. My servant's only excuse is that "she forgot." On the next occasion let me beg you (for there is no contending with human stupidity) to walk straight upstairs, and see for yourself whether I am or am not in my room.¹ And, in the meantime, pray accept my apologies and the sincere assurance of my regret.

Yours truly | W. C

I write in great haste – with the pangs of rheumatism fixed in my back!

1. WC used to write in his large first floor drawing room at Gloucester Place.

[3390] TO THE EDITOR OF THE BOLTON WEEKLY JOURNAL, 23 JANUARY 1879

MS: Unknown. Published: Bolton Evening News, Saturday, 25 January 1879, p. 3c, our copy text; and Sheffield Daily Telegraph, multiple occasions from 25 January 1879, p. 7b.¹ Published: A&C14, pp. 18-19.

London, 23rd Jan., 1879.

To the Editor of the Bolton Weekly Journal.

Sir, – I have only this moment seen an advertisement in The Scottish Reformer, announcing the publication of a “new story” by me, called “Percy and the Prophet”.² I cannot permit any work of mine to be advertised in terms which mislead the public. “Percy and the Prophet” is not a new story. It was first published in the extra Midsummer number of All the Year Round for 1877.³ The right of reprinting the story periodically was purchased from me by the proprietors of an English country newspaper,⁴ on the distinct understanding that “Percy and the Prophet” had already been published in another periodical. In justice to my friend Mr. Charles Dickens,⁵ as well as to myself, I request you to publish this plain statement of facts.–

Faithfully yours, Wilkie Collins.

1. The newspaper article featuring the letter was headed, ‘LETTER FROM MR. WILKIE COLLINS.’ and prefaced, ‘The following letter is from Mr. Wilkie Collins, author of “The Woman in White,” &c., &c.:–’. The letter was followed by this explanation:

Whilst readily complying with the request of Mr. Wilkie Collins, and thus doing an act of justice to that talented author, as well as to his friend Mr. Charles Dickens, we must add that we also do so in justice to ourselves, Mr. Wilkie Collins having arranged to supply in MSS. an Original Story written expressly for publication in our columns. This New Story, upon which the author is now engaged, is to be ready for publication in the autumn of this year. –Bolton Journal.

The ‘New Story’ referred to was in fact Jezebel’s Daughter, which was to be serialized in the Bolton Weekly Journal in 21 parts from 13 September 1879 to 31 January 1880, the first full-length novel by WC to be syndicated by W.F. Tillotson of the Bolton Fiction Bureau. This perhaps explains why WC’s complaint was sent to the Bolton newspaper, which bore no responsibility for the reissue of ‘Percy and the Prophet’: it seems likely that WC may have been encouraged to pen this letter by Tillotson in order to garner advance publicity for their new venture. WC himself would be far less likely to become aware of the advertisement for ‘Percy and the Prophet’ in the Scottish paper than Tillotson, while the newspaper syndicators of this second-hand story (at the Sheffield and Rotherham Independent) were the latter’s upstart business rivals. The Sheffield Daily Telegraph, on the other hand, which reprinted the letter on multiple occasions in its advertisement columns, was both a local rival of the Independent and a client of Tillotson for Jezebel’s Daughter. Such local rivalries concerning the syndication of fiction were quite common in the last quarter of the nineteenth century.

2. We have not been able to view the Scottish Reformer and Weekly Review, but the companion (Scottish) Daily Review carried notices of the publication of this ‘new story’ from Monday, 20 January 1879, p. 4a; however, from Friday, 31 January 1879, p. 4a, the phrase in question was removed and replaced by ‘(Republished by Arrangement.)’

3. In fact published on 2 July 1877; see [1663] WC to Charles Dickens Jr, 29 January 1877.

4. Referring to J.D. and R.E. Leader of the Sheffield Independent; see [1755] to Charles Dickens Jr, 19 June 1878, and [1756] to Leader & Sons, 20 June 1878.

5. That is, Charles Dickens Jr.

[1817] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 23 JANUARY 1879

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 227.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 23rd January 1879

Dear Mr Rose,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt, this morning, of your letter dated Jan^y 7th, enclosing a B/E at 60 days after sight for £61..18..2, in payment of the Canadian republication of “The Haunted Hotel” in bookform.¹

I thank you for your kind offer to take charge of my interests, in relation to the American periodical reprint of “The Fallen Leaves”. It is needless for me to trouble you in this matter. I am now in direct communication with Mr Frank Leslie, and he has asked me to let him know when he shall pay me the first half of the purchase money for the advance proofs.²

I have discontinued sending proofs of “The Fallen Leaves” to Canada. Up to this date “The Rose-Belford” Publishing Company has not addressed any proposal to me for the right of periodically reprinting “The Fallen Leaves” in Canada. Under these circumstances, it is needless to say that I do not sanction the proposed reprint of the story in The Canadian Monthly, and that I reserve to myself the right of disposing of the advance proofs. Out of regard for you personally, I will wait three weeks more (from the date of this letter) to receive a proposal, before I take any further steps in the matter.³ But I shall send no more proofs until terms are offered, and are accepted as satisfactory terms by

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins
G. M. Rose Esqre

1. The Haunted Hotel was published in a single volume from Rose-Belford of Toronto in late 1878, following serialization in the Canadian Monthly (Gasson, p. 76). WC’s bank account combined this with a previous pending Promissory Note for £200 and both were credited on 20 February as ‘2 Bills Discod’ amounting to £261-18s-2d, with a charge of £1-18s-9d debited the same day (Coumts: WC). See [1791] to Chatto & Windus, 6 November 1878.

2. The Fallen Leaves was serialized in Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper in New York parallel with the appearances in the World in London.

3. The source of the problem seems to have been a dispute between the editor and the owner of Rose-Belford’s Canadian Monthly. See [1823] to George Stewart Jr of 15 February and [1840] to George Maclean Rose of 10 April 1879.

[1818] TO W. E. ADAMS,¹ 1 FEBRUARY 1879

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 245; BGLL, III, p. 228.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | London | 1st February 1879
Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for the “cuttings”, and for the publicity which you have kindly given to my exposure of the stupid fraud which some of your contemporaries have attempted to practice on their readers.²

I quite agree with you that enough has been now done to serve the interests of truth, and that we may wisely let this matter drop.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
W. E. Adams Esqre

1. William Edwin Adams (1832–1906), author of Our American Cousins, radical journalist who edited the Newcastle Weekly Chronicle. See Owen R. Ashton, W. E. Adams: Chartist, Radical and Journalist (Whitley Bay: Bewick Press, 1991).

2. The Newcastle Weekly Chronicle carried syndicated fiction regularly from the mid-1870s and featured Jezebel’s Daughter as a serial from September 1879, the first of several WC novels it accepted from Tillotson’s. There were frequent disputes with the rival Tory weekly the Newcastle Courant concerning the rights to fiction by metropolitan authors. One of the cuttings in question must be that found in the Newcastle Weekly Chronicle of 25 January 1879, p. 4. It reads:

MR. WILKIE COLLINS

An Advertisement has appeared in the Newcastle Courant, announcing the publication in that journal, on February 7th, of a new novel by Wilkie Collins. We have Mr. Wilkie Collins’s authority for stating positively that he has not written a new novel for publication in the Newcastle Courant.

[1819] TO HENRY HERMAN, 4 FEBRUARY 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 228–229.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 4th February 1879

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your proposal, and for the list of towns which accompanies it. It seems very probable that a competent and wellmanaged company might prove to be profitable tried on the plan that you suggest.¹

But I have lately decided (for reasons with which it is needless to trouble you) no longer to subject the performance of my plays in the country to the chances of profit or loss – so far as I am concerned. The only proposal which I can now consider is a proposal which offers me a sum of money for the right of performing my play for a given time. I may add that I have already refused two proposals made to me for the “Magdalen” because they were not made on these terms. If you feel disposed to treat with me on the basis that I have suggested, your renewed proposal shall have my best attention immediately.

I remain, | My dear Sir, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
I have been suffering from a severe cold – or I should sooner have acknowledged your letter.
H. Herman Esqre

1. Herman was involved in the provincial production of Miss Gwilt (see [1571] to him of 8 November 1875), and must have written to propose a similar tour with a revival of The New Magdalen.

[3053] TO HENRY HERMAN, 7 FEBRUARY 1879

MS: Chicago.¹ Published: A&C3, p. 52.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London. 7th Feby 1879

My dear Sir,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday’s date.²

I must ask for time, on my side, to consider the proposal which you are so kind as to make to me.

Under these circumstances therefore I readily accede to your suggestion that I should “give you the refusal of the piece for six weeks,” reckoning from the date of this letter.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
H. Herman Esqre

1. Tipped into a copy of James T. Field, Yesterdays with Authors (Boston: Ticknor & Fields, 1882), with the bookplate of Frank O. Lowden.

2. WC had written to Herman on 4 February 1879 ([1819]).

[1820] TO GEORGE HOLSWORTH,¹ 10 FEBRUARY 1879

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 229.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 10th February 1879

Dear Sir,

If I remember correctly, Mr Edmund Yates referred me to you, after we had settled the financial part of our arrangement for “The Fallen Leaves”. By that arrangement, the first half of the purchase-money became payable on the completion of the first half of the story. Thirteen out of the twenty six weekly parts of which this work is to consist are now in type – and the fourteenth part goes to the printers today.²

The bankers are Messrs Coutts & Co 59. Strand. Am I right in supposing that it would be most convenient to you to pay the money to my account?

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
I will of course send the necessary receipt on hearing from you.

To | Mr Holsworth

1. As [1492] of 11 November 1874 shows, Holsworth was then on the staff of All The Year Round but now clearly worked for Edmund Yates at the World.
2. The novel was serialized in the paper from 1 January to 23 July 1879.

[1821] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 10 FEBRUARY 1879

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 230.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 10th Feby 1879

Dear Mr Bentley,

I will get to work on the Rogue tomorrow – and send him to you, I hope, in two or three days time.¹

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

1. See [1822] to Bentley of 13 February.

[1822] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 13 FEBRUARY 1879

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 230.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | Thursday,
Feby 13th 1879

Dear Mr Bentley,

Here is “The Rogue” corrected and improved.¹

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

Proof in duplicate please – when the printers begin.

1. That is, WC’s revisions to the serial version are now complete.

[1823] TO GEORGE STEWART JR,¹ 15 FEBRUARY 1879

MS: Private, with envelope.² Published: BGLL, III, pp. 230–231.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 15th February 1879

Dear Mr Stewart,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter. I accept the explanations which you are so kind as to send to me in the same friendly spirit in which they have been offered.³

By last Thursday’s Canadian Packet, I sent to you Revises in advance (to 26th March) by registered post.

I accept the terms, offered in your letter, for the Canadian publication of “The Fallen Leaves” – viz: – £40..0..0 – for the Serial right, and £60..0..0 – for the book-right – the payment to be made on receipt of the concluding proof of the Story, by a Bill of Exchange for £100.. at thirty days’ sight.⁴

In the case of “The Haunted Hotel”, I was kept waiting for the Canadian payment, for more than two months after publication – and when the Bill arrived it was at Sixty days sight. In the case of “The Fallen Leaves”, I am paid for the periodical right, in England, in cash, every month.⁵ And Mr Frank Leslie has made his half payment, for the first half of the advance-sheets, in a Bill at sight. Under these circumstances, I hope my conditions of payment will be found both just and moderate.

Will you favour me by acknowledging the safe receipt of this letter, and of the proofs.

With all good wishes for the New Year, and with kind regards to Mr Rose,
I remain | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | George Stewart Esqr Junior

1. Briefly editor of the Canadian Monthly until around April 1879 – see [1845] to George Maclean Rose of 8 May 1879.
2. Signed and directed ‘Via United States, Feby 15th | George Stewart Esqr Junior | Office of | The Rose-Belford Publishing Company | Toronto | Prov: of Ont: | Canada’, postmarked as dated.
3. See [1817] to George Maclean Rose of 23 January 1879 for the point at issue.
4. The Fallen Leaves was thus serialized in the Canadian Monthly from February 1879 to March 1880.
5. It was serialised in The World in 31 episodes from 1 January to 23 July (see Andrew Gasson, ‘Wilkie Collins, Edmund Yates, and The World’, WCSJ IV, 1984, pp. 5–17). Six cheques of £100 from The World were credited to WC’s bank account each month from 12 February to 14 July (Coutts: WC). This perhaps represents a payment of £20 per issue for a total of 30 issues (which WC overran).

[1824] TO HENRIETTA WARD, 24 FEBRUARY 1879

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 246; BGLL, III, pp. 231–232.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | London¹
24th Feby 1879

My dear Mrs Ward,

A line only to thank you for both your kind letters, and to say how much I regret not being able to assist you in recovering the early correspondence of my old friend. My only letters from him were letters of two or three lines – and these the autograph collectors have carried away. All his correspondence while he was abroad was carefully preserved (and copied, I think) by his father. Perhaps Charles may be able to help you in this better than I can.²

With all good wishes to you and your’s | Always affly | WC

1. WC uses printed paper, the address centred, next to which he adds the word ‘London’. Henrietta Ward must have needed a change of scene after her husband Ned had committed suicide and been buried in his father’s grave at Upton, Slough on 21 January 1879. See [1815] to Leslie Ward, 20 January 1879.
2. Her brother-in-law, Charles Ward.

[1825] TO HENRY HERMAN, 27 FEBRUARY 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 232.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 27th February 1879

My dear Sir,

I have only time to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday’s date, and to say that I have written to Miss Davenport on the subject.¹

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

H. Herman Esqre

1. Fanny Davenport, the American actress. Neither Herman’s original letter, nor WC’s to the actress, have been traced. The subject under discussion remains unclear, though WC returns to it in [1830] to Herman of 10 March.

[1826] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 27 FEBRUARY 1879

MS: Ross, envelope in Lewis Collection.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 232.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 27th Feby 1879

Dear sir,

When you send me the proofs and Revises on Saturday next, will you kindly add one more Revise of Weekly Portion 13 – which begins on slip 50.²

Excuse the trouble I am giving you. I have had to send an extra Revise of Thirteenth Portion to America³ – and have no Revise for myself.

Faithfully yrs | Wilkie Collins

To | Mr Thomas

-
1. Signed and directed to ‘Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20, Pancras Road | N.W.’, postmarked as dated.
 2. Of The Fallen Leaves.
 3. For publication in Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper.

[1827] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 3 MARCH 1879

MS: Private, envelope only.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 233.

17th weekly portion. Copy complete. Slips 138 to 146. 3rd March.

Corrected proof of 16th Portion Tomorrow

Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20. Pancras Road

Wilkie Collins

-
1. Originally containing corrected proofs for The Fallen Leaves. Rear panel has imprint of WC’s seal in red sealing wax.

[1828] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 5 MARCH 1879

MS: Berg. Published: B&C, II, pp. 419–420.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 5th March 1879

Dear Mr Bentley,

I hope to send the Rogue corrected for Press to the printers this week – with a few prefatory lines, relating to the ~~orig~~ original publication of the Story.¹

As well as I can remember, the enclosed Draft represents the arrangement which we made in that never-to-be-forgotten sanctuary of literature which I first entered more than a quarter of a century since!² Will you kindly look the Dft over, and, if it satisfies you, let me have it back again to be fair copied in duplicate?

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

Excepting the portion which relates to the half profits, the Dft is merely a copy of the customary formal document which I have used for some years past.

1. In the ‘Introductory Words’, dated ‘March 6th 1879’, to A Rogue’s Life: From his Birth to His Marriage, published by Bentley on 7 April 1879, WC writes: ‘The critical reader may possibly notice a tone of almost boisterous gaiety in certain parts of these imaginary Confessions. ... I can only plead, in defence, that the story offers the faithful reflection of a very happy time in my past life. It was written at Paris, when I had Charles Dickens for a near neighbour and a daily companion, and when my leisure hours were joyously passed with many other friends, all associated with literature and art.’ (pp. [iii]-iv). The story had originally appeared as ‘A Rogue’s Life: Written by Himself’ in five parts in Household Words, 1–29 March 1856.

2. Referring to the Bentley office in New Burlington Street where WC sold his first published novel Antonina: or the Fall of Rome (1850). The present agreement seems to reflect the remuneration arranged then, £100 on publication and £100 after the sale of 500 copies; see [0063] and [0064] to Richard Bentley of 22 and 26 November 1849.

[1829] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 10 MARCH 1879

MS: Berg. Summary: B&C, II, p. 420. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 233–234.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 10th March 1879

Dear Mr Bentley,

Please send me back the Dft agreement. You shall have the Colonies – excepting Canada.¹

I had not clearly understood you about the £100/ supposing it to be a species of premium – which you would certainly not pay to an unknown writer, in due consideration of the risk that you might run in publishing his book – but which might not be an excessively venturesome payment where there might perhaps be small profits, but not a probability of loss. However, as this is no doubt my mistake, I hasten to say that I accept the £100/ as a payment on account of profits, made in advance – and I will alter the Dft so as to express this plainly.²

Many thanks for Howitt’s letter – which I herewith return.³ It is needless to say that I have read it with interest. Literary men are – God Knows why! – such a divided body in England that I never personally knew Howitt, in the days when he was living and working in this country.

I am glad the little reference in the Preface has pleased you.⁴ The last proofs will be received for press by Billing this afternoon.⁵ They were posted last night.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | George Bentley Esqre

1. A Rogue’s Life was published as a single volume in Bentley’s Empire Library at half-a-crown on 7 April 1879 (Gasson, p. 133). The agreement with Bentley concerning A Rogue’s Life, now held at the BL (Add. 46619, ff. 147–148), reserves the right of publication in the Dominion of Canada. WC presumably intended Hunter, Rose to publish the work in Canada – though they appear not to have done so.

2. As the signed agreement held at the BL shows, the agreement was for half profits but also contained this clause: ‘6 The said George Bentley shall upon the signing of this agreement pay to the said Wilkie Collins as one of the conditions on which he obtains the right of republishing the said Story in the said Series the sum of One hundred pounds’. This amount was to be deducted from WC’s half-share of the profits if that sum passed £200 within one year. It seems that it never did, as £100 was paid into WC’s bank account on 26 March and no further payment from Bentley is recorded in the account before WC’s death (Coutts: WC).

3. William Howitt (1792–1879: ODNB), prolific poet, novelist and journalist, who died on 3 March in Rome, where he had been resident since 1870. The letter in question remains unidentified.

4. WC writes in the opening paragraph of the preface: ‘My friend, Mr. George Bentley, invites me to take a place in his new series of pretty volumes in red; and I revive the old story as the most acceptable contribution which present circumstances permit me to offer.’

5. Of the firm Billing & Sons, printer to the house of Bentley.

[1830] TO HENRY HERMAN, 10 MARCH 1879

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie’s (12 July 2000), lot 723, tipped into extra-illustrated copy of G. A. Sala, Life and Adventures (London, 1895), V, p. 381. Published: BGLL, III, p. 234.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 10th March 1879

My dear sir,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, this morning.

I have acted in this matter in perfect good faith, under the impression that [Miss] Davenport was treating with me in your behalf – and I can, with perfect sincerity, express my regret at the unexpected turn (to me) which the affair has taken.¹

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

H Herman esq.

1. See [1825] to Herman of 27 February 1879.

[3327] TO GEORGE STEWART JR, 13 MARCH 1879

MS: Unknown. Published: Pall Mall Gazette, 16 October 1889, p. 7, our copy text;¹ A&C11, pp. 10–11.

London, Thursday, March 13, 1879.

My dear Stewart, – A line to thank you for the Canadian Monthly – which reaches me regularly – and to say that I enclose three more revises of ‘The Fallen Leaves,’ in advance of the publication here on the 2nd, 9th and 16th April next. On February 13th I wrote to answer your letter – sending revise to the end of March, and asking for a line in reply to assure me that the business part of my communication was clearly understood between us.²

You will find that the 16th weekly part introduces a new character, belonging to a class which some of my brethren are afraid to touch with the tips of their pens. She is, nevertheless, the chief character in the story – and will probably lead me into another novel in continuation of ‘The Fallen Leaves.’³ You will see (especially when you receive the revise of part 17, for April 23rd) that the character is so handled as to give no offence to any sensible persons, and that every line is of importance to the coming development of the girl, placed amid new surroundings. But, perhaps, some of the ‘nice people with nasty ideas’ on your side off the ocean may raise objection. In this case, you are entirely at liberty to state as publicly as you please (if you think it necessary) that my arrangement with you stipulates for the absolute literal reprinting of ‘The Fallen Leaves’ from my revises, and that the gentle reader will have the story exactly as I have written it, or will not have the latter portions of the story at all. I don’t anticipate any serious objections. On the contrary, I believe ‘Simple Sally’ will be the most lovable personage in the story. But we have (as Mr. Carlyle reckons it) 30 million of fools in Great Britain and Ireland – and (who knows?) some of them may have emigrated.

I intended to write a short letter. ‘Hell is paved—,’ you know the rest.– Yours very truly,
WILKIE COLLINS.

George Stewart, Jun., Esq.

1. The letter is introduced thus:

WILKIE COLLINS ON “FALLEN LEAVES.”

An American journalist, while editing the Canadian Monthly ten or eleven years since, had the personal friendship of Wilkie Collins. He has just published a letter which he received from the novelist which refers to the story of “The Fallen Leaves,” published in 1879. It has never been published before: –

We have been unable to find where Stewart initially published the letter.

2. Presumably referring to [1823] to Stewart of 15 February 1879.

3. On WC’s plans for a second or even third book, see [1720] to Andrew Chatto of 7 January 1878. In fact the rather hostile reaction to the book (Page, pp. 2, 205–206) meant WC never wrote a sequel to the story, though it seems he harboured the desire to for many years. See [1968] to Charles Willes, 8 August 1881, [2168] to Ezra Bower, 19 June 1883, [2496] to Eleanor Selfe, 16 November 1885, [2505] to J. Saunders, 3 December 1885, and [2559] to S. Weeks, 7 May 1886.

[1831] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 18 MARCH 1879

MS: Illinois. Published: Davis, pp. 290–291; B&C, II, pp. 420–421.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.¹ | 18th March 1879

My dear Georgina

My opinion is decidedly against publishing either of the two letters.²

The letter relating to Bentley, refers to a matter afterwards arranged amicably – and, as you remember, the late Richard Bentley was Dickens’s guest at Gadshill. The injury being forgiven – it is most undesirable to return to it now.³

The second letter would lead, I think, to a very false idea of Dickens’s character in the readers [sic] mind. The references to [del] Scott, Bulwer, and Marryat would be misunderstood as expressions of overweening self-esteem – and the present Chapman would not like the tone in which the partners are referred to. I vote for suppressing this letter too.⁴

Can I help you with the brief biographical narrative preceding the first “epoch” (or collection) of the letters – briefly describing his social and domestic position – his residences, his work, his old and new friends within the interval embraced in his earlier letters? If Yes – you have only to say so. It is most important that the public should be placed, in some degree, in the position of persons who knew him, at the time when he wrote the letters.

I am obliged to worry you with my affairs. I am bringing an action in Paris against the man who has written (or translated) a conclusion to Edwin Drood, and put my name to the published /French/ book, with Dickens's. It is an outrage /offered/ to Dickens's reputation to associate his great name with rubbish which is utterly unworthy of it – setting my own injury out of the question. The formal declaration which I enclose may be wanted at the trial. If you feel the slightest hesitation about signing it, tear it up and say nothing about it. If not, you will be doing me a kindness, if you let me have it back signed at your earliest convenience. I ought perhaps to add that the only object of the action is to force the man to declare by public advertisement, that I have never written a conclusion to 'Edwin Drood', and to make the publishers take my name off the title of the book.⁵

always yours affly | WC

1. Upper case black roman type, centred.

2. Georgina Hogarth and Mamie Dickens were preparing an edition of CD's letters – initially published in two volumes by Chapman & Hall in 1880 as The Letters of Charles Dickens. Edited by his sister-in-law and his eldest daughter. See Peters, p. 348, and Dickens, Letters, I, ix–x, 164–165.

3. Referring to the quarrel of 1837–38 between CD and Richard Bentley. The specific Dickens letter in question cannot be securely identified, though it may well be that to W. Harrison Ainsworth of 26 March 1839 (Dickens, Letters, I, 530–532). On WC's attempt to persuade John Forster not to rake up the matter in the Life of Charles Dickens, see [1167], [1170], and [1177] to George Bentley of 24, 30 November and 11 December 1871.

4. The letter in question must be that to Thomas Mitton of 23 August 1841 (Dickens, Letters, II, 364–367). There CD ponders how he 'had spoilt the novel sale – in the cases of Bulwer, Marryatt [sic], and the best people – by my great success', and pictures the partners 'little Hall and big Chapman knocked by a thunderbolt'.

5. WC first heard about the spurious work Le Crime de Jasper in the New York paper Harper's Bazar – see [1807] to the editor of 18 December 1878. On the details of the case, see [1836] to Frederick Chapman of 28 March 1879.

[1832] TO CHARLES READE, 21 MARCH 1879

MS: Noel. Published: Clareson, p. 116; BGLL, III, p. 235

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st March 1879

My dear Reade,

Here are the Leaves.¹ When you have read them (and Mrs Seymour, of course, if she likes) lock them up please till I can call for them, and have a talk with you.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

Try some good wine – and beware of whiskey and water (the last fashionable delusion of the doctors!)

1. Presumably proofs of a forthcoming instalment of The Fallen Leaves, then running in the World.

[1833] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 24 MARCH 1879

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 235–236.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th March 1879

Dear Mr Bentley,

Here is the duplicate of Agreement. When you have signed and dated it, at your convenience, I will return my signed duplicate – dated on the same day.¹

I will not forget your suggestion – but I am hardly able, at present, to do justice to it. The new story which I am now publishing in "The World",² excites and exhausts me in the writing – as no other story of mine as [sic] ever excited me. When the weekly number is written, I am fit for nothing else, until the day comes for beginning the new number. I am in advance of the press to May – and in six weeks more, or thereabouts, I hope to have completed my task, – or, in case the story expands into two novels, the first part of my task.³ I will report myself when the pen is laid down for a while – and we will talk over the Dickens article.⁴

Yours vry truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The publication agreement for A Rogue's Life, dated 24 March 1879.
 2. The Fallen Leaves.
 3. WC's hopes of the sequel did not materialize after the poor reviews of the book. He wrote to several fans over the next seven years mentioning 'obstacles' in the way. See [1968] to Charles Willis of 8 August 1881, [2168] to Ezra Bower of 19 June 1883, [2496] to Eleanor Selfe of 16 November 1885, [2505] to J. Saunders of 3 December 1885, and [2559] to S. Weeks of 7 May 1886.
 4. Presumably Bentley had suggested that WC write reminiscences of his days in Paris with CD for Temple Bar (see [1829] to Bentley of 10 March 1879). If so, these were never written.

[1834] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 25 MARCH 1879

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 236.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
25th March 1879

Dear Mr Bentley,

Pray accept my best thanks for your liberal gift of the "Rogue". The book is charmingly got up¹ – and I do earnestly hope we shall have the good reception which we deserve! Yours truly
WC

-
1. 'Red flexible cloth, covers blocked in black, spine lettered in gilt, black endpapers' (Gasson, p. 133).

[1835] TO J. H. ADDISON,¹ 28 MARCH 1879

MS: Unknown. On sale: John Wilson, 1995; similar item formerly reported at Manchester (ref. Brothers Autographs 47). Published: BGLL, III, p. 236.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
28th March 1879

Mr Dear Sir,

I shall be happy to see you here at twelve o'clock (noon) on Tuesday April 1st.
Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

J.H. Addison, Esqr

-
1. 'Mr Addison of the Liverpool Daily Post' – see the memorandum accompanying [1995] to A. P. Watt of 5 December 1881; also [1837] to Bentley of 1 April 1879.

[1836] TO FREDERIC CHAPMAN, 28 MARCH 1879

MS: BL (X.907/1649).¹ Published: B&C, II, pp. 421–422.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.²
28th March 1879

My dear sir

Miss Hogarth agrees with me that the book which I send to you with this note ought to be seen by your firm.³

The person responsible for the fraudulent use made of Dickens's name and of mine is one Bernard Derosne⁴ – employed as a translator. I have never written a line of the work attributed to me, and I am bringing an action against Derosne in Paris which will be probably decided in two or three day's time.⁵

The agent (and friend) who is managing the matter for me in Paris has /recently/ compared the French book with 'Edwin Drood' – and finds that there is not even a pretence of translating Dickens's uncompleted story. His name also has been used to sell a book which contains nothing of his writing.⁶

I should add that M. Dentu (the publisher) has undertaken to remove my name from the title-page and cover of "Le Crime de Jasper".

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Frederic Chapman Esqre

-
1. The shelfmark of the book into which the letter is tipped, between the title page and p. 1: the first of the two volumes of Charles Dickens and Wilkie Collins, Le Crime de Jasper (Paris: Dentu, 1878).
 2. Pale blue type, centred.
 3. Chapman was at the helm of Chapman and Hall, Dickens's principal publishers, and from 1870 controlled all Dickens's copyrights (Sutherland, p. 116).
 4. Charles-Bernard Derosne, who translated two of Collins's novels into French, Mari et Femme (Man and Wife), Paris: Hachette, 1872, and La Morte Vivante (The New Magdalen), Paris: Hachette, 1873. His wife Julie Bernat also translated L'Abîme (No Thoroughfare), Paris: Hachette, 1870.
 5. 'Some time since "Le Crime de Jasper" was issued in Paris, purporting to be a translation of Dickens' "Edwin Drood," as completed by Wilkie Collins. Mr. Collins sued the real writer, one M. Darosne ... and obtained judgment. Damages were withheld, but the court ordered the decision to be advertised at defendant's expense.' ('Literary and Trade Notes', Publishers' Weekly, 12 July 1879, p. 31).
 6. WC seems unaware that the book was in fact a translation of John Jasper's Secret by Henry Morford (Philadelphia: Peterson, 1871), which had also been published in London in 1872 by Wyman & Sons.

[1837] To GEORGE BENTLEY, 1 APRIL 1879

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 237.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st April 1879

Private

Dear Mr Bentley,

The proprietor of a provincial newspaper wishes to negotiate with me for the right of reprinting "A Rogue's Life", in his newspaper.¹ I take it I am right in supposing that this would be considered by you as an obstacle in the way of the sale of this book, and that the right thing for me to do is to say No?²

I hope you are feeling the benefit of the milder weather.

Your truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The provincial newspaper proprietor in question must be J. H. Addison of the Liverpool Daily Post – see [1835] to him of 28 March 1879, in which WC arranges for Addison to call at Gloucester Place on 1 April.
 2. In the end there was no newspaper serialization of A Rogue's Life – see [1842] to Bentley of 22 April 1879. However, the companion Liverpool Weekly Post was among the syndicate of provincial papers which carried Heart and Science as a serial – see Law, pp. 238–239.

[3107] To CHARLES S. JOSLYN,¹ 3 APRIL 1879

MS: Syracuse (Oneida Community Collection, Manuscripts and Personal Papers, V-Z). Published: A&C4, pp. 23–24.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 3rd April 1879

My dear Sir,

I have been away from London – and I hope you will excuse, on that account, my delay in thanking you for your kind letter.

The hospitable reception which I owed to your kindness at Wallingford is still fresh in my memory. Those traces of my appreciation of a very pleasant and interesting visit to your Community which you perceive in ‘The Fallen Leaves’, have been purposely made vague traces. As your guest (though only the guest of a day!) I felt that it was part of my duty to you not to associate your Community too plainly with a work of fiction.

I live in the hope of visiting the United States again – though I cannot as yet see my way to a future day of departure from England. But, when I do find myself once more in New York, you may depend on it, I shall not fail to report myself. I am interested in the serious social experiment which has attained so large a measure of success among your Communistic Societies in America—and I should especially like to see you all at Oneida.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
To C. S. Joslyn Esqre Secy. O. C.

1. Charles S. Joslyn (1832–1906) acted as guide for WC’s visit to the Oneida community on 4 March 1874 (Hanes 2008, pp. 84–88). As WC suggests, he made use of that visit in The Fallen Leaves.

[1838] TO CARLOTTA LECLERCQ, 9 APRIL 1879

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 247–248 (as to Mrs Lillian A. Neilson); BGLL, III, pp. 237–238.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th April 1879

My dear Mrs Nelson,

I was very sorry to miss you, when you and Mr Nelson called here.¹ But I only got back last night and I go away again this evening.

I have read the Prologue and the First Act of the piece. The situation which ends the Prologue is the “No Thoroughfare” fall over the precipice – with the rescue, which (if you remember) we could not manage at the Adelphi.

The First Act contains the resemblance between the two women, leading to the same confusion of identity which is the foundation of The Woman In White – together with the deliberate personation, by one woman, of another woman’s character, which is the foundation of The New Magdalen. Looking to the last scene, after these discoveries, I found it a robbery of the scene in Miss Gwilt, in which the wife denies the husband to his face. After that, I own that I shut up the MS. You certainly will not want to act in any plays of mine if you produce this piece – for all my situations are presented in one grand jumble, in the course of one evening! (N.B. The bed-making scene I saw in Paris, years ago). The piece, in short, is such rubbish, that I should not be in the least surprised if it proved to be a success – out of the large cities of course.²

Vy truly yours, | WC

I have left the MS. addressed to you. I would have sent it – but I am not sure of your address. Your letter says Alfred Place, Bedford Square – your card says Alfred Place, Beaufort Square. Only knowing Alfred Place, Bedford Square, I direct this accordingly.³

1. Her husband, John Nelson the actor who was to die on 25 July 1879 – see Carlotta Leclercq’s ODNB entry.

2. The dramatic piece which WC reads in manuscript and describes as ‘rubbish’ has not been identified and may never have been performed.

3. Alfred Place, north of Bedford Square, parallel to Tottenham Court Road.

[1839] TO OLIVE LOGAN SIKES,¹ 10 APRIL 1879

MS: Hanes. Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 249; BGLL, III, pp. 238–239, amended A&C4, p. 31.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W. | 10th April 1879

Dear Madam,

The day after you and Mr Sikes honoured me by calling here, an engagement took me away from London. I leave town again tomorrow for a few days only. If you will kindly accept my apologies, under these circumstances, I hope to make my excuses in person, on Tuesday or Wednesday next – if I am fortunate enough to find you in Wells Street,² in Easter week.

Believe me | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

To | Mrs Olive Logan Sikes

-
1. Olive Logan (1839–1909: ANB) was born into an acting family and was herself an actress and journalist. She acted in Augustin Daly's company during the mid-1860s and is credited with writing a dramatisation of Armadale in 1866. It is possible that WC met her during his American trip but the formal salutation ('Dear Madam') to this first known letter – changed to 'Mrs Sikes' in his next [1849] of 28 May 1879 – argues against that. William Wirt Sikes (1836–83), a fellow author who she had married in late 1871, was appointed in June 1876 to act as American consul in Cardiff, though the couple seem to have spent a good deal of their time in London. However, Olive Sikes makes no mention of WC in her autobiography, Before the Footlights and Behind the Scenes (San Francisco, Cal.: Bancroft, 1870).
 2. To the north side of Oxford Street, east of Oxford Circus – probably referring to a town residence rather than a hotel.

[1840] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 10 APRIL 1879

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 239–240.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 10th April 1879

Dear Mr Rose,

By today's Canadian Packet, I send Revises of "The Fallen Leaves", in advance to the 14th of May, addressed to "the Editor of the Canadian Monthly".

Mr George Stewart Jun^r has written to inform me of the circumstances under which he has terminated his literary connection with the "Rose Belford Publishing Company"¹

Without making any remark on those circumstances, it seems desirable in a business point of view – after what has happened – to revert to the terms offered to me for "The Fallen Leaves" in your behalf, and in behalf of the Rose-Belford Publishing Company, by Mr Stewart, at the time when he wrote to me in the character of your representative. In his letter of January 25th last, he writes as follows: –

"Mr Rose has requested me to offer you, in behalf of the Rose-Belford Publishing Company, subject of course to your approval, £40...- for the Serial Right, and £60...- for the book right of "The Fallen Leaves".

I wrote to accept this proposal, requesting that the money might be paid by a Dft at 30 days sight, on receipt of the last proof-sheet of "The Fallen Leaves"

On March 4th last Mr Stewart acknowledged my letter in these terms: –

"I have spoken to Mr Rose this morning, and he has promised to remit your Dft at 30 days sight on receipt of the last proof-sheets".

Mr Stewart adds that his resignation is to "take effect 15th of March".

I have no doubt that Mr Stewart has stated quite correctly the instructions which he received from you; but in case of illness or absence, I naturally prefer – under the circumstances – dealing with principals, in a matter which is of some importance to me. A line from you, in confirmation of my negotiation with your late representative, will be a favour which I shall appreciate – more especially if it reaches me by return mail, as I may be leaving England in a month's time for the Continent.

Believe me, Dear Mr Rose, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

You have, I hope, not suffered seriously from rheumatism during the hard winter. I have escaped fairly well – in the damp intervals of our frost here.

1. Stewart claimed that he was due royalties on his book Canada under the Administration of the Earl of Dufferin, published by Rose-Belford in 1878, though the firm claimed that the work had been written in his capacity as editor of Rose-Belford's Canadian Monthly. Stewart took Rose-Belford to court in May 1879, but lost the case – see Marilyn G.

Flitton, Index to the Canadian Monthly (Toronto: Bibliographical Society of Canada, 1976), p. xix.

[1841] TO THE EDITOR OF THE CANADIAN MONTHLY,¹ 16 APRIL 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 240.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 16th April 1879

“The Fallen Leaves”

Dear Sir,

I have found it desirable to modify the character of “Regina”, in the tenth chapter of the story, so as to bring it into better harmony with the later development of this young lady in the succeeding chapters. As you don’t get beyond the sixth chapter, in the April number of The Canadian Monthly I hope my corrections will reach you in time to be incorporated in the June number of the magazine. The May number, as I calculate, will not get beyond the 8th or 9th chapters at most.

Will you kindly let me have one line to say that the corrections have reached you safely? I am anxious that they should appear, as they are of some importance, critically considered.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | The Editor of | The Canadian Monthly

P.S. – If by any unlucky chance, I am too late for the Magazine will you oblige me by placing the corrected chapter in the hands of the printer of the republication in book form.

1. Probably Graeme Mercer Adam, who took over the editorial chair vacated by George Stewart Jr; his name first appears on the July issue of the magazine.

[1842] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 22 APRIL 1879

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 241.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd April 1879

Dear Mr Bentley

Have you been able to read the proofs of “The Fallen Leaves” yet?¹ As I have not heard from you, I am afraid this wintry spring may perhaps have renewed your old troubles with the asthma. In that case, pray let your son send me a line.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I have decided not to reprint the story in the country newspapers.²

1. WC gave the first option to Bentley to publish the triple-decker edition of The Fallen Leaves, though the book was eventually issued by Chatto & Windus – see [1846] to Bentley of 13 May and [1846] to Andrew Chatto of 21 May 1879.

2. A Rogue’s Life – see [1837] to Bentley of 1 April 1879.

[3054] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,¹ 23 APRIL 1879

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C3, p. 52.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 23rd April 1879

1. Apparently sent as an autograph or with an enclosure, it has been attached, probably at a later date, to a small coloured print of Macclesfield Bridge, Regent’s Park.

[1843] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 28 APRIL 1879

MS: Private, envelope only.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 241.

The Fallen Leaves

28th April. Copy for weekly portion 24. Slips 204–210 inclusive.

The conclusion of copy for this portion and corrected proof of 23 tomorrow.

Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20. Pancras Road

From | Wilkie Collins | 90 Gloucester Place | W.

1. Originally containing corrected proofs for The Fallen Leaves. Rear panel has imprint of WC's seal in red sealing wax.

[1844] TO JOHN W. HINTON,¹ 1 MAY 1879

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 241–242.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 1st May 1879

Dear sir,

I have only returned to London today and found your kind letter and its enclosures waiting for me, among many other letters.

So far, I have only had time to look at “The Circle on the Prairie”.² The subject is entirely new to me, and I shall read your narrative with great interest.

In the meantime, pray accept my thanks | and believe me

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

John W. Hinton Esq

1. Probably John W. Hinton (1817–1901), Wisconsin author, with titles concerning slavery and free trade.

2. Untraced.

[1845] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 8 MAY 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Extract: Davis, p. 289 (dated 9 May 1879). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 242–243.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 8th May 1879

Dear Mr Rose,

Both your kind letters have reached me safely. The letter of April 18th enclosed a B/E for ten pounds (first) on account of royalties on books of mine sold since the last remittance – for which I thank you.

I am very glad to hear that you confirm the arrangement for “The Fallen Leaves” which I agreed to with Mr George Stewart, acting at the time, on behalf of the Rose-Belford publishing-company.¹ With this letter you will I hope receive safely three more Revises of the story, in advance of the 4th of June next (in the weekly publication). I find my materials this time so ample that I have decided to make two separate novels of “The Fallen Leaves”. It is not possible to treat the subject fairly in one book. The present (or First Book) I hope to finish with the 28th weekly part – it will certainly, at the longest, not exceed the 29th or 30th weekly part – and it will reach a point in the hero's life which makes it complete in itself. As to the second (Sequel novel), there are various obstacles to my beginning it for some months to come. – Perhaps I may be obliged to put it off until next year. Whether I finish the present work with the 28th part – published here July 9th, or with the 30th, published July 23rd, I see no objections – if it suits you – to publishing your issue before the pirates in America can reprint the complete work from the weekly publication in F. Leslie's Paper. If you will refer back to my “conditions” when we first negotiated with Mr Leslie, I think you will find that I stipulated for republishing a month in advance of the conclusion in F. Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper – and Mr Leslie accepted all my conditions – which shall of course be your conditions too. In the meantime I begin writing the 26th weekly part tomorrow – and I will see that you are informed of the exact date on which I shall finish, as soon as I know it myself. For the purpose of calculating the size and price of the republication in book form by your firm, I hope my present calculation may be close enough for that object.

As you have a new Editor, you will perhaps kindly remind him that our arrangements for 'The Fallen Leaves' provide for the exact reprinting of the story from my revises – without alteration of any sort. I mention this, because I am treating some very delicate and difficult subjects this time – which might alarm some men, especially a new man nervous, anxious perhaps to do his best. I am writing with exceeding care and restraint, conscious of my responsibility.

You will think my letter endless. Let me only thank you for your photograph – which is an excellent likeness, and congratulate you on keeping the rheumatic enemy at a distance – and then say goodbye.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

My photo: (which I also enclose) is by Sarony – done when I was last in New York. Nothing half so good has been produced by anyone else.

G.M. Rose Esqre

1. See [1840] to Rose of 10 April 1879.

[1846] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 13 MAY 1879

MS: Berg. Summary: B&C, II, p. 422. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 243–244.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th May 1879

Private

Dear Mr Bentley

Here are some more proofs of "The Fallen Leaves". I have decided to close the story at a culminating point – and to take it up again from that point in another book.

You will see that the treatment which shows the girl (from physical causes) to be the innocent victim of a degradation which ~~it seems~~ is her misfortune and not her fault, is continued. Her life with "Amelius" will be left a pure life at the end of the present division of the story.¹

I must make my arrangements for the book republication immediately. Will you kindly tell me whether you are disposed to make any arrangements for the novel? And will you let me have the proofs back when you have read them? I will take no further steps in the matter until I have heard from you.²

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

1. The continuation of the story was never in fact written.

2. Bentley apparently turned WC's offer down – the novel was not favourably received when serialized in the World. The Fallen Leaves: First Series was published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus on 1 July 1879 – see [1847] to Andrew Chatto of 21 May 1879.

[1847] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 21 MAY 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 244.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st May 1879

Private

Dear Mr Chatto,

I have not received any proposal from your firm, relating to the reprint of “The Fallen Leaves” (now appearing periodically in “The World”). Shall I take this silence as leaving me at liberty to make arrangements for the publication of the book elsewhere?¹

Vy Truly Yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esq

1. [1846] to George Bentley of 13 May shows him already offering the novel to another publisher when its British serial run ended. Presumably he was refused. Andrew Chatto replied on 21 May making an appointment for the following day to discuss the volume publication of WC’s latest novel. As [1850] to Chatto & Windus of 28 May shows, the negotiations must have succeeded.

[1848] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 21 MAY 1879

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, III, p. 244.

90 Gloucester Place | W. | 21st May 1879

Dear Mr Chatto,

Tomorrow (Thursday) about 12 oClock will suit me perfectly.¹

Vy truly Yours | Wilkie Collins

1. The appointment was to discuss the volume publication of The Fallen Leaves – see the earlier letter to Chatto of the same date.

[3010] TO MARIAN J. SNOOK,¹ 21 MAY 1879

MS: Unknown. On sale, with envelope:² Jeffrey Thomas, Fine & Rare Books, San Francisco 94147-1205, December 2005, priced $950. Published: A&C2, p. 65.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th May 1879

Dear Miss Marian,

I am quite incapable of disappointing a young lady who is one of my kind readers. Your first letter never reached me – so far as I can remember. I contribute with the greatest pleasure to your collection of autographs, and I hope you will excuse me for keeping you waiting – quite unintentionally.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Miss Marian J. Snook

1. An autograph hunter writing from San Francisco; from the census data, probably Marian J. Snook (b. 1855), daughter of George A. Snook, a plumber and gas fitter.

2. Directed to ‘Miss Marian J. Snook | N.^h cor: Franklin & Fell Streets | San Francisco | California | U. S. A.’, with legible postmarks ‘LONDON W | ZX | MY 21 | 79’ and ‘SAN FRANCISCO | CAL | JUN | 10 | 1 PM’. The stamp has been roughly torn away and the letter is redirected in pencil to ‘San Diego | Cal’. The envelope is pasted on the inside of the blank leaf of the folding notepaper.

[1849] TO OLIVE LOGAN SIKES,¹ 28 MAY 1879

MS: Columbia (Spec. MS Coll. J. H. Samuels). Published: BGLL, III, p. 245.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th May 1879

Dear Mrs Sikes,

The contributors to The World give a dinner to Edmund Hodgson Yates on the 31st – and I have promised to be one of the guests. I am indeed sorry to miss the opportunity which you and Mr Sikes are so good as to offer to me. I can only trust to your kindness to accept my apologies.

But I have to thank you, most sincerely, for something else. I have just read the kind – too kind – article in our excellent “Spirit”.² I have not ventured to look in the glass since, thinking it quite possible that I might find “My head turned”. But I really believe, red as I am, that I must have blushed, and so have been indebted to you for a temporary recovery of my youth – to say nothing of a recognition of myself and my books which I shall always remember gratefully.

Most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. See [1839] to her of 10 April 1879.

2. We have not been able to locate Sikes’s article praising WC in the Spirit of the Times, the popular New York paper.

[1850] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 28 MAY 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 245–246.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th May 1879

The Fallen Leaves

Dear Sirs,

I send you printed copy for the First Volume – containing 84 of my large MS pages.¹ The First Volume of “The Law and The Lady” contains 246 printed pages – making 82 of my MS pages. This will, I hope, help the calculation for the new book.

I will ask you to kindly let me have proofs in duplicate. One to return corrected to you – and one to send to Leipzig for the Tauchnitz Edition.²

The printed copy for the Second Volume shall be sent to you in a few days.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – | I reckon the whole length of the book at between 250 and 260 of my Mss pages
Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. From the serialization of the novel in the World.

2. The Fallen Leaves (1879) occupied vols 1833–1834 in Tauchnitz’s Collection of British Authors (Todd & Bowden).

[1851] TO CHATTO & WINDUS,¹ 30 MAY 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 246.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th May 1879

= | The Fallen Leaves. | =

Printed copy for the Second Volume – complete.²

WC

1. Although there is no salutation or formal indication of the addressee, the note can only be addressed to the firm of Chatto & Windus.

2. Again from the serialization of the novel in the World.

[1852] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 3 JUNE 1879

MS: Private, envelope only.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 246.

The Fallen Leaves. June 3rd 1879

29th weekly part. 5 slips of copy. More tomorrow.

28th weekly part. Proof corrected for revise.

Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20. Pancras Road

Wilkie Collins | 90 Gloucester Place.

1. Originally containing corrected proofs for The Fallen Leaves. Rear panel has imprint of WC's seal in red sealing wax.

[1853] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 5 JUNE 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17); envelope Lewis Collection (L2770).¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 247. Amended: A&C14, p. 31.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th June 1879

Dear Mr Chatto,

This letter will be presented to you by Mr Charles Gregory, who is desirous of extending his practice as a painter to the art of book illustration.² I have advised Mr Gregory to show you one or two specimens of what he can do as an illustrator. Any advice and encouragement which you may find yourself able to offer to him, will greatly oblige.

Yours very truly | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esq

1. Directed to: 'Andrew Chatto Esqre | Messrs Chatto & Windus | 74. Piccadilly | W. | Wilkie Collins'. Above the address WC writes 'Favoured by Mr Charles Gregory' and he marks off his signature with a curved line.

2. Charles Gregory (1849–1920), historical and genre painter and illustrator whose work appeared in the Illustrated London News during the late 1870s; see Simon Houfe, A Dictionary of Nineteenth-Century British Book Illustrators (Woodbridge: Antique Collectors' Club, 1978).

[1854] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 10 JUNE 1879

MS: Private, envelope only.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 247.

Tuesday June 10th. "The Fallen Leaves."

30th weekly part. 3. more slips. 260–261–262

The conclusion tomorrow, Wednesday morning

Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20. Pancras Road

From Wilkie Collins. | 90 Gloucester Place.

1. Originally containing corrected proofs for The Fallen Leaves.

[3296] TO EUPHEMIA MILLAIS,¹ 11 JUNE 1879

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, pp. 14–15.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th June 1879

Mr Wilkie Collins accepts with great pleasure the honour of Mr and Mrs Everett Millais' invitation for July 25th at 8 o'Clock

1. See [0881] to her of 7 April 1869. Invitations were conventionally sent by the woman of the house, to whom WC replies here.

[1855] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 11 JUNE 1879

MS: Melbourne (MS 6162/2). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 247–248.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th June 1879

The Fallen Leaves

Dear Sirs

Here is the 3rd Volume, as far as the Revises extend to the present date. I have just finished the story in the 30th weekly part.¹ Tomorrow I shall have leisure to see to the reading of the book proofs, which I have not yet had time to return for press.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The remaining revises shall be sent to you as soon as they reach me. Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. Again referring to the serialization of the novel in the World.

[1856] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 11 JUNE 1879

MS: Lewis Collection, envelope only.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 248.

Part 30. Conclusion of copy. WC

To | Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20, Pancras Road | N.W.

From | Wilkie Collins. 90 Gloucester Place. W.

1. Originally containing corrected proofs of The Fallen Leaves.

[1857] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 11 JUNE 1879

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 248.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th June 1879

Dear Sirs,

The two concluding slips of copy for the 30th, and last, weekly portion of “The Fallen Leaves” were posted to you this afternoon.¹ I enclose the corrected proof of part 29.

I am much obliged to you for correcting my mistake in numbering the chapters.

While I am writing, let me thank you for your kind attention to the requests with which I have troubled you during the progress of this story through the press – and let me also congratulate you on the admirably correct manner in which the proofs have been read, before they reached my hands.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr C. Thomas

1. To appear in the World on 23 July 1879.

[3391] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 18 JUNE 1879

MS: Lewis Collection (2970), envelope only.¹ Published: A&C14, p. 19.

Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20. Pancras Road | N.W.²

Wilkie Collins³

1. With one penny and ½d stamps indicating then a weight of between 1oz and 2oz and presumably enclosing proofs for The Fallen Leaves. Sealed with one red seal. On the verso two circular postmarks ‘LONDON.W | | JU18 | 79’ and ‘LONDON.N.W | A N | JU18 | 79’.

2. See several other such examples of envelopes to Thomas around this time; for details see [1786] to Charles Thomas, 24 October 1878.

3. Signature lower left marked off by a curved line.

[1858] TO CHARLES WARD, 18 JUNE 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 249.

18th June 1879

My dear Ward,

Caroline is fetching a new cheque Book for me. I have given her the necessary order, so that you may not be interrupted at this busy time.¹

If Lady Burdett Coutts should ask you to recommend a courier, when she next goes abroad, do say a word for Migliore 25. Adam Street, Baker Street. He is simply the best courier living. From the Prince of Wales downwards, he has served friends of Lady Coutts's – and he is anxious to serve her.²

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins³

1. The year end at Coutts was on 23 June (Midsummer Day): then the books were all made up to date, with a copy of every account transcribed into annual volumes. The volumes for WC are the source of our information concerning his account.

2. Angela Georgina Burdett Coutts (1814–1906), friend of CD who shared his philanthropic work. She inherited the controlling shares in Coutts & Co., where both WC and CD had accounts. See Pilgrim, I, p. 559.

3. This is the last extant letter to Charles Ward, who died of cancer in mid-1883 at the age of 69.

[1859] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 21 JUNE 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 249–250.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.
Saturday 21st June 1879

Dear Mr Rose,

The Revises of the last (30th) Weekly Part of “The Fallen Leaves” have reached me today – and I at once send to you the conclusion of the story. The periodical conclusion will not take place until July 23rd – so you will have an advance on the American pirates, for the Canadian book reprint, of nearly three weeks as I calculate. We have the same advance for our reprint here – in 3 volumes. Please add to the title page, on your reprint, the words First Series. The last paragraph of the story will explain this request.¹

The terms of payment arranged between us, on receipt of the conclusion of the story, are already in your possession. So I need say nothing more on that point.

I am feeling my work a little – and, as soon as we have launched our book here, I shall go away and get a little sailing in the English Channel. I should have preferred crossing the Atlantic and seeing you and Niagara again – but my engagements, I am sorry to say, will not permit it.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | G.M. Rose Eqr

1. The novel concludes:

Were the forebodings of Rufus destined to be fulfilled? This question will be answered, it is hoped, in a Second Series of The Fallen Leaves. The narrative of the married life of Amelius presents a subject too important to be treated within the limits of the present story – and the First Series necessarily finds its end in the culminating event of his life, thus far.

[1860] TO CHARLES THOMAS,¹ 21 JUNE 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 250.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 21st June 1879

Many thanks for the last Revises. I have one last trifling correction to make. See below.

WC

“The Fallen Leaves.” Revise of 30th Portion. Slip 120. Sixth line, reckoning upwards from the bottom of the slip: –

“She clasped him round the neck, and hid &c &c &c” dele “clasped him round the neck” – and let the line run thus: –

She hid her blushing face on his bosom.

1. Though there is no indication of the addressee on the letter itself, this is clearly one of the last in the series to Thomas concerning the serialization of The Fallen Leaves in the World.

[1861] TO CHARLES THOMAS, 23 JUNE 1879

MS: Lewis Collection, envelope only.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 250.

Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | Printers | 20. Pancras Road | N.W.
Wilkie Collins

1. Postmarked ‘LONDON-W | D7 | JU23 | 79’. This probably indicates an independent communication, although the envelope might go with [1860] to Thomas if there were a delay in posting.

[1862] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 24 JUNE 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 251.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th June 1879

Private

Dear Mr Chatto,

I enclose the Dft of agreement for “The Fallen Leaves”, – to be returned to me if it meets with your approval.¹ As the payment to be made is entirely by Bills, I have suggested, as you will see, that the first bill should be at 3 months instead of at 4 – in case I might want my bankers (Messrs Coutts & Co) to discount it.²

The printed copy completing the 3rd Volume,³ and the corrected proofs (the last sent to me) reached you I hope yesterday morning.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esqre

1. The completed agreement, dated 25 June 1879, is found at Reading. Above the printed address of WC’s letter is added in another hand, presumably that of Andrew Chatto or his partner, the briefest of summaries of the terms of the agreement: ‘£200 June 25 3+6+9’ (i.e. three bills of credit at three, six and nine months, dated 25 June 1879, each for £200).

2. That is, so that WC could obtain a reduced amount of cash immediately rather than waiting for the full sum on the date of the promissory note.

3. The remaining serial instalments of the novel in the World.

[1863] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 25 JUNE 1879

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, III, p. 251.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 25th June 1879

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of three Bills of Exchange for Two hundred pounds each – in payment for the right of publishing “The Fallen Leaves” secured to me by the terms of our agreement.

The Dft of agreement is now being engrossed – and a copy shall be sent to you immediately¹

I remain, Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. See note 1 to [1862] to Andrew Chatto of the previous day. WC uses ‘engross’ in the technical sense of ‘to write out or express in legal form’.

[1864] TO GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA, 25 JUNE 1879

MS: Yale. Extract: Davis, p. 291. Published: BGLL, III, p. 252.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th June 1879

My dear Sala

Thank you sincerely for your friendly letter. My lawyer withdrew the claim for damages – because the rascal had no money to pay them with! He has not even a right to the name (‘Derosne’) that he assumes!¹ I am in legal ‘hot water’ also with Italian printers – who have stolen the book I am now writing, after I had sold the right of Italian translation under the International Treaty! We had need be [prudent] of our Art considering the sort of people whom it brings us into contact with. Of the two harmless creatures – a race horse and an author – I ask myself which of the two innocently collects about him the greater number of vagabonds?

I return that audacious circular – having heard nothing from our International Representative since. He wrote me word of the great things he was going to do for Literature some time since – and asked me if I approved of it, and would like to have a report of the proceedings. And I said I approved and would like a report – and I have never heard anything since! My only fear, if you take public notice of B. J.² is that you will advertise him by merely taking notice. The stream of oblivion must eventually flow over him – kick as he may.

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins
George Augustus Sala Esqre

1. Charles-Bernard Derosne, who had translated two of WC’s books into French for Hachette – Man and Wife (1872) and The New Magdalen (1873). He had published a conclusion to Edwin Drood purporting to be by WC. See [1831] to Georgina Hogarth, 18 March 1879, and [1836] to Frederick Chapman, 28 March 1879.

2. Blanchard Jerrold, journalist and novelist – see [1750] to him of 31 May 1878. According to his entry in the ODNB, ‘Jerrold was founder and president of the English branch of the international Société des Gens de Lettres, dedicated to the assimilation of copyright laws; it was on account of this work that he was awarded the palmes académiques by the French government’.

[1865] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 26 JUNE 1879

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, III, p. 253.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

26th June 1879

Dear Mr Chatto,

I enclose the duplicate agreements. If you will kindly return both agreements when you and Mr Windus have signed, my lawyers will have them duly stamped – and will return your duplicate. This formality must be observed within 14 days from June 25th.¹ I sent you the necessary acknowledgement of the Bills of Exchange yesterday – with the corrected proofs. The story will end in “The World” on the 23rd of July

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Andrew Chatto Esqre

1. Chatto & Windus in fact returned the signed agreement on 30 June and it was duly stamped on the same day (Reading).

[1866] TO MRS JAMES ELDER,¹ 26 JUNE 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 253.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

26th June 1879

Dear Madam,

I am always glad to hear from my good American readers – and I beg to thank you very sincerely for your kind letter.

Believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mrs James Elder

1. Unidentified American reader of WC's novels.

[1867] TO EMMA B. CHILDS,¹ 27 JUNE 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12), with envelope.² Published: BGLL, III, pp. 253–254.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27th June 1879

Dear Mrs Childs,

I have just heard of your arrival in London. At what hour may I hope to find you at home either tomorrow afternoon or Monday afternoon? I am obliged to leave town on Tuesday next – and I might be unlucky enough, if I “took my chance”, to hear that you had gone out. This is my only excuse for troubling you with a letter.

Believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Wife of George W. Childs of Philadelphia, who had visited London in 1875; see [1548] to her of 13 July 1875.

2. Directed to ‘Mrs Childs | Bristol Hotel | Burlington Gardens | W.’, postmarked: ‘LONDON-W | 11 | JU30 | 79’.

[1868] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 30 JUNE 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 254.

Monday 30th June 1879

Dear Mr Chatto

Here are the last sheets corrected for press.

I must ask for a Revise of the title-page, and for proofs in duplicate of the Dedication and the few words in place of a Preface, if you please.¹ They shall be sent back for press by return of post, if they can reach me not later than Wednesday morning next. Late on Wednesday, I leave town for a little while.

The addition to the reserved right of translation is rendered necessary to stop foreign piracies, and to make my case unanswerable if I am compelled to prosecute. The story having been actually translated, before its publication in book form, it is legally desirable (as my Italian translator informs me) to state the fact as part of the reserve of my right. Four Italian newspapers have stolen the story – after I had sold it under the Treaty to an honest newspaper proprietor! So there is no alternative but to insist on my right to my own property.²

Vy truly yours | WC

1. The dedication to the first edition of The Fallen Leaves reads simply 'To Caroline' (indicating Caroline Graves), while the prefatory remarks involve only a brief paragraph dated 'July 1st, 1879'.
2. No Italian serialization has been traced. Though both Great Britain and Italy were to sign the Berne convention in 1886, there seems in fact to have been no mutual treaty in force at this time between the two states (see [1544] to William Tindell of 21 June 1875).

[3297] TO CHARLES THOMAS, OCTOBER 1878-JUNE 1879¹

MS: Unknown. On sale, envelope only: Robert Temple Books. Published: A&C10, p. 16.

90. Gloucester Place. W.²

Mr C. Thomas | Messrs Robson & Sons | 20 Pancras Road
Wilkie Collins

1. Dated from the period when WC was sending proofs by post to Thomas, the printer of The Fallen Leaves in The World. See [1786] to him of 24 October 1878.
2. The address and signature are written at the left foot of the envelope surrounded by a wavy line. The reverse of the envelope has WC's wax seal with his initials. The empty envelope is apparently unopened.

[1869] TO MISS ALGER,¹ 10 JULY 1879

MS: Unknown. On sale: Holmes Autographs, Catalogue 66 (1996), item 22. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 254–255.

Summary: From Ramsgate, answering request for a photograph and offering thanks for a book.

1. Unidentified.

[1870] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 15 JULY 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 255.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th July 1879

Dear Sirs,

I have just returned to London for a day or two – and have found the presentation copies of “The Fallen Leaves” waiting for me. Pray accept my thanks, and my congratulations on the charming design for the binding.¹ My Italian translator, to whom a copy was sent by my directions, calls it an “Edition de luxe” – and he is quite right.² It is a really beautiful book.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Chatto & Windus

1. The binding is described in Gasson, p. 60.
2. The Italian translator and his translation have not been traced.

[2993] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 18 JULY 1879

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie's (15 July 1999, lot 186/2). Partial facsimiles and extracts: Christie's catalogue, pp. 139–140.¹ Extracts: A&C1, pp. 50–51.

18th July 1879

My dear Georgina,

The terms seem to me to be simply preposterous.² You are quite right in refusing to accept them. Ouvry's calculation is unanswerable.³ I send you a brief sketch of the terms that I should insist on. The 3rd Clause leaves you free, if you are not satisfied with the result of the sale of the first edition, to try another publisher, or to adopt a new method of publication, in regard to the second edition....

Terms

=

[10 per] cent commission
[Accoun]ts to be rendered [regul]arly – and profits, [deduction]s stipulated [cropped], to be paid ... promptly] at the date [when th]e account is rendered. . . .

1. The lot includes three of the many extant letters to Georgina Hogarth concerning the edition of Dickens's letters planned by her and Mamie Dickens. The three are described thus in the catalogue: '13 pages, 8vo, the first letter incomplete ... London and Ramsgate, 18–29 July 1879.' The accompanying illustration shows five overlapping leaves, exposing seven pages of text, of which five are visible only in part, though we have recorded cropped text wherever this is meaningful. This image suggests that the incomplete letter of 18 July is made up of two small leaves, each torn from a sheet of folding notepaper. Christie's catalogue states that the letter shows WC 'expressing his opinion that the terms seem to him "to be simply preposterous" ("...Ouvry's calculation is manoeverable [sic]...), sending fresh proposed terms (including 10% commission) which he thinks Chatto & Windus would accept, and suggesting that another publisher (such as Macmillan) could be approached for a second edition'.
2. As the following letter to Hogarth makes clear, the 'preposterous' terms must have been those initially proposed by Chapman & Hall who published the volumes on commission for the authors.
3. The solicitor Frederic Ouvry (1814–81: ODNB), who had served Dickens for many years. Also in the Christie sale (Lot 186/1) was a two-page memorandum on the costs of printing Dickens's letters, dated 17 December 1878, suggesting that the profit on an edition of 2000 copies priced at 30 shillings each should be around £1100.

[2994] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, [27] JULY 1879¹

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie's (15 July 1999, lot 186/2). Partial facsimiles and extracts: Christie's catalogue, pp. 139–140.² Extracts: A&C1, pp. 51–52.

. . . [the] alternative lies [between] £2.... and £1..10... [there] is no harm in [a delay o]f a day or two [to wr]ite confidentially [to Mr] Bentley, and [consult h]is experience. . . .

Notes on the Agreement³

=

1st Clause:- "The first edition of the Work of 2000 copies" – deducting such copies as may be required for presentation, ~~and~~ for the newspapers, and for delivery to the British Museum & [illegible]

Query:- Add to the Clause words to this effect (?)

5th Clause. I fancy the sale of copies over the counter to ...

2)

[Mr Chap]man has [consented] to the altered [terms – i]t might be [more grac]ious to [consult hi]m on [this as we]ll as [on the point] respecting [the agents' Com]mission [which is quite] a [new element so far as my experience goes.]

1. Conjectural dating based on the fact that WC writes on the same day from Ramsgate to George Bentley, consulting his experience on the question of the pricing the Dickens's letters (B&C, II, p. 423).
2. The image suggests that the letter comprises five pages in all, four on a single sheet of folding notepaper, and the fifth on a separate half-sheet headed '2'. The third page is fully visible, the second and fifth partially so.
3. According to Christie's catalogue, in this letter WC considers 'the agreement with Chapman & Hall "beyond criticism", but quibbles about certain clauses including the proposed price of the volumes ("... I should be inclined to say £1..10..."), cites advertisements in the Athenæum as "a safe guide to follow", and seeks clarification of some wording ("... Or – seeing that Mr Chapman has consented to the altered terms – it might be more gracious to consult him on this as well as on the point respecting the agents' Commission which is quite a new element so far as my experience goes ...")'.

[1871] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 27 JULY 1879

MS: Berg. Published: B&C, II, p. 423.

Ramsgate | 27th July 1879

Private¹

Dear Mr Bentley

I think I told you that I was advising Miss Hogarth and Miss Dickens, in the business of editing Dickens's Letters. They ask me to help them to decide the question of price. The book will be in two volumes demy oct: and each volume will contain 456 pages. – Thirty shillings or Two pounds – which is the wisest selling price to decide on? Do you think I am right or wrong in supposing that the lower price (£1..10.. –) is the safest price to ask in these times?²

I am ashamed to trouble you on a subject [del] in which the interests of other persons are concerned. But you have great experience in this matter – and my ignorance only asks for (literally) one line of reply, as a favour to me.³

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I am cruising about the English Channel. Letters addressed to 90 Gloucester Place as usual, will always follow me.

To | George Bentley Esqre

1. Written above the address.

2. The two volumes were in fact published at the editors' expense by Chapman & Hall in 1880 and sold at 8s. each. A third volume at 14s. appeared in 1882. See Pilgrim I, pp. ix-x.

3. According to Arthur A. Adrian, Georgina Hogarth and the Dickens Circle (Oxford: OUP, 1957) p. 291n27, Bentley replied on 28 July 1879 and WC wrote to Georgina Hogarth on 29 July 1879 ([2995]). These letters were then owned by Henry Charles Dickens.

[2995] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 29 JULY 1879

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie's (15 July 1999, lot 186/2). Partial facsimiles and extracts: Christie's catalogue, pp. 139–140.¹ Extracts: A&C1, p. 52.

... [cou]nsele caution in the matter of those “people living abroad” – mentioned in Mr Chapman's letter.

... – to [Mr Lippin]cott, and [ask h]im for his [prop]osal by return [of] mail. It may not be amiss, in the mean time, to ask Mr Chapman to name the person ...²

1. The image suggests that this letter consists of four pages of text on a single sheet of folding notepaper, though only lower portions of the second and third pages are clearly visible.

2. According to Christie's catalogue, in this letter WC 'refers to George Bentley's view of the price, suggests seeing “what Forster did, in the case of the ‘Life’” (“...His account with Chapman would be of some use as a guide...”), notes that Smith & Son and Mudie “are monopolists who have you at their mercy”, mentions arrangements for correcting proofs, and comments on the “anonymous applicant” whose potential offer should be considered.' Given the apparent mention of the Philadelphia publisher J. B. Lippincott, this last reference probably concerns the question of publication in North America, reverted to in the letters to Hogarth of 11 and 16 October 1879.

[1872] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 29 JULY 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 255–256.

Ramsgate | England | 29th July 1879

Dear Mr Rose,

I beg to thank you for a B/E for £100...- - as per agreement for the Canadian rights and the advance sheets of “The Fallen Leaves.”¹ I need hardly add that you have my hearty good wishes for the success of the book-reprint.² The U.S. publishers are becoming a literary nuisance as well as a literary disgrace. My hope (and belief) is that they are hastening the advent of International Copyright.

I am cruising about the Channel – and saturating myself to the best of my ability with sea air and water. Within the last day or two, the wintry aspect of this year’s summer has disappeared – and the fine hot weather has come to us at last.

I am sincerely glad to hear that you are “hearty” – as the English country people say. Why not pay a visit to the old country, and give us some days in London, on your way North?³

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Geo: Maclean Rose Egre

1. Apparently a Bill ‘at sight’ as it was banked on 5 August as ‘Bill on Bosanquet & Co: Rose Belford & Co.’ (Coutts: WC).

2. WC’s The Fallen Leaves: A Novel appeared as a single volume of 350 pages from Rose-Belford of Toronto in 1879. A copy is held in the National Library of Canada.

3. That is, to his family home in the north of Scotland.

[3328] TO WYBERT REEVE, [LATE JULY 1879]¹

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4f, our copy text; Reeve 1891, p. 118; Reeve 1906, p. 461.² Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 219–220 (as one of three extracts in [2663] to Reeve on WC’s health problems, compositely dated 1871–86). Amended: A&C11, p. 19.

I am cruising in the Channel, and getting back my strength after a long attack.

1. Conjectural dating within the range of dated letters to Reeve, based on the remarkably similar phrases ‘cruising about the English Channel’ and ‘cruising about the Channel’ found respectively in [1871] to George Bentley, 27 July 1879, and [1872] to George Maclean Rose, 29 July 1879.

2. Reeve 1889 introduces the extract, ‘Another time he is in Venice, trying to shake off this continuous suffering; or’, afterwards mentioning WC’s ‘habit of taking opium in considerable doses.’ The visit to Venice referred to must be that of November 1877. This extract is the last of three concerning WC’s health, which together follow [2663] to Reeve of early 1885.

[1873] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, [SUMMER 1879]¹

MS: CDM? (Storey Papers C92, found there in 1989 but since apparently mislaid). Published: BGLL, III, p. 256.

14 Nelson Crescent, Ramsgate²

My Dear Georgina,

We are almost neighbours.³ I am here for a while to lay in a little tonic stock of sea air. I should ask M. LeClerq either £30 or £40 for the right of French translation – 750 or 1000 francs. And if you know as little of him as I do (which is nothing) I should ask to see the translated “Forster’s Life” – so as to judge of his capacity to translate – If you are satisfied give him the permission in exchange for the money ... and make it a condition that he does not abridge or alter the English original in any way, without your permission and Mamie’s. ... I shall be here for the whole week ...

1. Conjectural dating from WC’s presence in Ramsgate and negotiations about the edition of CD’s letter edited by Georgina Hogarth and Mamie Dickens.

2. Other letters of 1879 suggest that WC was in Ramsgate for much of the July at least, while there are no extant letters clearly dated in the August.

3. Presumably she was at Broadstairs, where she had often stayed at the Fort House with CD.

[3108] TO THOMAS A. JANVIER,¹ 26 SEPTEMBER 1879

MS: Lewis Collection. Part published: Lewis website; A&C4, p. 24. Amended: A&C13, p. 20-21.

I remain, dear Sir, faithfully yours² | Wilkie Collins
To | Thomas A. Janvier Esqre³

Thomas A. Janvier Esqre³ | The Times Building
cor: Chesnut [sic] and Eighth Streets | Philadelphia | Pa | U.S.A.
Wilkie Collins⁴

-
1. Thomas Allibone Janvier (1849–1913: Wikipedia), storyteller and historian born in Philadelphia.
 2. The ‘y’ of faithfully and the ‘y’ of yours are elided into one.
 3. Although the ending of the letter and the envelope were purchased separately and some years apart, the ink, pen, and hand are identical and we are confident they belong together – see illustration below. No other letters to Janvier are known.
 3. Envelope postmarked ‘LONDON.W. [D 5 | SE 26 | 79’, with postage stamp franked ‘W | 19’, and countermarked on the reverse ‘PHILADELPHIA.PA. | OCT | 7 | 4PM | REC’D’.
 4. Signed bottom left and marked off by a curved line. There are some dealer’s pencil notes on the obverse.

[1874] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 28 SEPTEMBER 1879

MS: CDM? (Storey Papers C92, found there in 1989 but since apparently mislaid). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 256–257.

... Don’t go to work on the preface until the whole book is “set up”, you don’t know what necessity may arise for adding and altering something even yet. We of the “literary lot” always put off writing the Preface until the last ...¹

-
1. Concerning the edition of CD’s letters. See [1831] to her of 18 March 1879.

[1875] TO CHARLES READE, 29 SEPTEMBER 1879

MS: Noel. Published: Clareson, p. 115; BGLL, III, p. 257.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday 29th September 1879

My dear Reade,

With all my heart, I will be with you tomorrow. You know how I appreciated her fine qualities as an artist, and how sincerely I admired and prized her bright true and generous nature as a woman. In some degree at least, my dear old friend, I may claim to share in your sorrow, and to value as I ought the sad privilege of paying the last tribute of affection and respect to her memory.¹

Yours affectionately, | Wilkie Collins

I will take care to be at your house, punctually to the time – 11.30.

-
1. Laura Seymour died on 27 September 1879 leaving to Charles Reade all her possessions – totalling up to £4,000. This letter refers to her funeral on Tuesday 30 September 1879, thought to have been at St Mary’s, Willesden – see Reade & Reade, II, pp. 417–419.

[1876] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 2 OCTOBER 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11), envelope only.¹ Published: BGLL, III, p. 257.

Miss Hogarth | 11. Strathmore Gardens | Kensington W.
Wilkie Collins

1. Postmarked 'LONDON-W | 3 | OC 2 | 79'.

[1877] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 11 OCTOBER 1879

MS: CDM? (Storey Papers C92, found there in 1989 but since apparently mislaid). Published: BGLL, III, p. 257.

Ask Chapman [to] stipulate that Harper or Appleton ... shall, one or the other, publish the American reprint and if you get his written consent to accept the conditions take the £70.¹

1. Concerning the American edition of CD's letters.

[1878] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 16 OCTOBER 1879

MS: CDM? (found there in 1989 but since apparently mislaid). Published: BGLL, III, p. 258.

Summary: Concerning Catherine Dickens's health,¹ and also financial arrangements for publication of CD's letters in the USA.

1. CD's widow, who died on 22 November 1879.

[1879] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 23 OCTOBER 1879

MS: Illinois. Extract: Davis, p. 292. Published: B&C, II, pp. 423–424.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Thursday Oct 23/79

My dear Georgina,

I must make one minutes' [sic] use of my sound eye to thank you with all my heart for the beautiful and welcome gift that reached me yesterday. A more charming token of remembrance could not have been offered to me.¹

In spite of the damp foggy weather, I don't fall back – the sight is only slightly affected – and the pain is trifling. I have every hope of escaping one of my long illnesses this time.

Pray remember that I am still entirely at [del] your service. Don't sanction many small advertisements. One "across columns" [sic] /in the weekly newspapers,/ (one big one) is [del] worth a dozen little ones – and costs less.²

Yours always affectionately my dear Georgina | WC

1. The precise nature of the gift remains uncertain, though it was presumably a memento of Dickens.

2. Referring to the forthcoming edition of Dickens's letters by Georgina Hogarth and Mamie Dickens, dated 1880 but in fact appearing at the end of 1879. The volumes were published at the expense of the editors, who were thus responsible for arranging advertising.

[1880] TO E. A. BUCK,¹ 6 NOVEMBER 1879

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Summary: Brussel, p. 54 (conflated with summary of [1883] to Buck of 15 November 1879). Published: Coleman, p. 250; BGLL, III, p. 258.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | November 6th 1879

Mr dear Mr Buck,

I am only mending slowly – but I will do my best for The Christmas Spirit. What do you say to

The Devil's Spectacles

as a title this time? | or | (if "The Devil" is too sacred a personage in the U.S. to be used in this way) – then try this weaker title of

The Magic Spectacles²

~~~~~
Let me have one line (with a view to the simultaneous publication in England) to tell me which title you decide on.<sup>3</sup>

(In great haste) | Yours ever | Wilkie Collins
To | Mr E. A. Buck

---

1. Edward Buck, editor of the popular New York weekly sporting and entertainment paper the Spirit of the Times: A Chronicle of the Turf, Agriculture, Field Sports, Literature and the Stage, founded in 1831 by William T. Porter. WC's Christmas stories appeared there every year from 1876 through to 1887.

2. The words in both versions of the title are in fact triply underlined.

3. The story in fact appeared in the Spirit of the Times on 20 December 1879 as 'The Devil's Spectacles'. In Britain the story was sold to the Tillotson syndicate and appeared in a number of local newspapers from Christmas 1879 – see [1883] to Buck of 15 November 1879. One of the few appearances so far traced was in the Bath Herald, in two parts, 20–27 December 1879. The story appeared in Tillotson's own Bolton Weekly Journal as late as 20–27 December 1884.

[1881] TO F. D. FINLAY JR,<sup>1</sup> 7 NOVEMBER 1879

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, III, p. 259.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
7th November 1879

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for the invitation to the “Sala” dinner<sup>2</sup> – and, I am sorry to be obliged to add, my excuses as well. I am only now recovering from an attack of rheumatic gout, and I have no hope of being able to dine out so soon as the 13th instant.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
F.D. Finlay Esqr.

---

1. Francis Dalzell Finlay, the younger (son of Francis Dalzell Finlay, 1793–1857: ODNB), who succeeded his father as editor of the Belfast Northern Whig, a daily paper.

2. A dinner given on 13 November at Willis's Rooms for George Augustus Sala (1828–95), prior to his sailing for the USA (see VFRG, 19/20, p. 254).

[1882] TO EUPHEMIA MILLAIS, 14 NOVEMBER 1879

MS: Morgan (MA1485 K180). Published: BGLL, III, p. 259.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
14th November 1879

Dear Mrs Millais,

At the end of this month, I am sorry to say I shall be away from London.<sup>1</sup>
I can only send my heartiest good wishes to the bride in this form<sup>2</sup> – and beg you and Everett to kindly accept my thanks and my excuses.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. There is, however, no evidence of WC leaving town at this time.

2. Referring to the marriage of the Millais's daughter Effie Gray (then aged twenty-one) to William Christopher James on 28 November 1879.

[1883] TO E. A. BUCK, 15 NOVEMBER 1879

MS: Lehigh (ALS 504). Photocopy: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Summary: Brussel, p. 54 (conflated with summary of [1880] to Buck of 6 November 1879). Published: Coleman, p. 251; BGLL, III, p. 260.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Saturday 15th Novr 1879

Mr dear Mr Buck,

The necessities of advertising here have obliged me to mention a date for the English publication of your Christmas Story. As you know, if it is not published in England, I lose my copyright.

You are to receive the Mss on December 10th. Judging by former experience, I have assumed that ten days from that time – viz: – December 20th – will find you ready for publication. The next day is Sunday – and Monday the 23rd 22nd would be surely be a ruinously late date in your big country for Christmas publication.

I may add that the story is sold this time to some country newspapers here – and I don't suppose it will be published in London at all.<sup>1</sup>

“Liberavi animam meam”<sup>2</sup> – and I sincerely hope to your satisfaction. We stick to “The Devil's Spectacles” as the title here – and the Devil shall have no cause to be ashamed of the story if I can help it.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To Mr E. A. Buck

---

1. For the details of publication, see the notes to [1880] to Buck of 6 November.

2. Popular Latin motto from the letters of Saint Bernard: literally, ‘I have set my soul free’, or, perhaps more freely, ‘I have had my say’.

[1884] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 28 NOVEMBER 1879

MS: Illinois. Extract: Davis, p. 291. Published: B&C, II, p. 424.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1879

My dear Georgina,

It is so difficult to estimate what the Continental Reprint is really worth to Tauchnitz (I don't even know how many /of his/ volumes it will fill) that I should advise putting the ~~question~~ matter thus to young Tauchnitz: –

“We publish the book at our own [del] risk and cost in England and have therefore had no dealings with publishers which can at all guide us in [del] asking terms. We [del] know that we are treating with [del] friends as well as publishers in sending our book to your father and to yourself – and we therefore venture to ask you, who can estimate the value of the continental reprint better than we can, to afford us the benefit of your experience, and to tell us frankly what /terms/ you think you ~~will expect to~~ /are justified in/ offering”

You are dealing with gentlemen – and I think something of this sort will produce a reply that may be satisfactory on both sides.<sup>1</sup>

When you next write, I hope and trust to hear that Mamie's health is improving.<sup>2</sup> I think of my poor dear Mother's death bed and know but too well how long-continued sorrow and suspense affect the body as well as the mind.

With love to you both, your ever affly | WC

“Freiherr von Tauchnitz” is the title on Tauchnitz Junior's cards<sup>3</sup>

---

1. The Tauchnitz Continental edition of The Letters of Charles Dickens, by Georgina Hogarth and Mamie Dickens, was published in three volumes in February 1880 (see Todd and Bowden, items 1868–70, p. 299).

2. Referring to Dickens's daughter Mary, who lived with Georgina Hogarth at Strathmore Gardens on the west side of Hyde Park.

3. Christian Carl Bernhard Tauchnitz, who in 1866 became a partner in the firm founded by his father, Baron Christian Bernhard von Tauchnitz.

[1885] TO A. S. BARNES & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 3 DECEMBER 1879

MS: Clarke Collection. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 260–261.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 3rd December 1879

Dear sir,

Some time since, you kindly offered to undertake literary business for me in the U.S. – on your customary terms of commission.

I send to you, by today's registered book-post, proofs of the first half of a new work of mine (called "Jezebel's Daughter") now appearing week by week in certain country newspapers in Great Britain – the proprietors of which have subscribed among them to buy the periodical right of publication.<sup>2</sup> The story has not been published in any London periodical – and it has been written, with so small an advance on the press here, that I have been unable to send advance proofs either to America or Canada. If the story has been discovered – and pirated in any American newspaper, I know nothing of it.<sup>3</sup>

Towards the latter part of January next, the periodical publication will be completed here – and we shall then reprint in London in bookform. I can offer the chance of publishing in bookform in America, simultaneously with the book publication in England, or a few days even in advance of the completion of the periodical issue in England.

This would give a start in advance of the pirates. Will you kindly try what sum of money can be obtained (cash payment) for the right that I can offer – and let me know the result, at your earliest convenience?<sup>4</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

I have more proofs ready to send as soon as I hear that they are wanted.

To | Messrs A.S. Barnes & Co

---

1. The New York publishers who had published WC's 'A Shocking Story' in the International Review in November 1878.

2. The novel was syndicated by Tillotson's of Bolton, Lancashire – see [1747] to Tillotson of 4 May 1878.

3. No pirated American serialization of the novel has been traced. (Tillotson's 'Fiction Bureau' did not as yet have client newspapers in the United States – see Law, pp. 72–77.)

4. No other letter to A. S. Barnes & Co. is known and it seems they did not act for WC in this matter. Jezebel's Daughter was published in 1880 in an unauthorized edition by George Munro, New York, as no. 696 in his Seaside Library.

[3055] TO RUDOLF LEHMANN,<sup>1</sup> 10 DECEMBER 1879

MS: Unknown. Extract: 'Death', p. 3b;<sup>2</sup> A&C3, pp. 52–53.

... I must ask you to kindly consent to a delay of a few weeks until I and the printers (who are now close at my heels) have parted company for the time. In January next the hard work will, I hope, be over, and I shall have regained some of the "colour" which has latterly suffered in the service of pen, ink, and paper.

---

1. The artist Rudolf Lehmann (1819–1905), older brother of Frederick Lehmann, who commissioned Rudolf to paint a portrait of WC in oils for Nina's fiftieth birthday in 1880. See [1914] to him of 16 April 1880. An image is found at the Lewis website.

2. The extract is found in a section of WC's Daily Telegraph obituary headed 'From One Who Knew Him'. It is introduced: 'Just ten years ago Mr. Wilkie Collins was giving sittings to an artist for the first portrait taken of the novelist, and being still a sufferer from rheumatic gout, as he had been for some years previously, the sittings were necessarily few and far between. He was also much engaged in literary work, and was, therefore, often unable to keep his appointments. In a letter, dated Dec. 10, 1879, he writes to the artist, ...'.

[1886] TO HENRY HAMMOND,<sup>1</sup> 11 DECEMBER 1879

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 261–262.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th December 1879

Dear Sir,

The first edition of The Dead Secret was published by Messrs Bradbury and Evans in two volumes, so long ago as 1857.<sup>2</sup> The first appearance of the story in the periodical form was in the pages of “Household Words” – either in the same year, or at the close of 1856.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Hy Hammond Esqre

---

1. Unidentified

2. On 1 June 1857

3. In fact from 3 January to 13 June 1857.

[3392] TO E. A. BUCK,<sup>1</sup> 12 DECEMBER 1879

MS: Unknown. Published: in Boston Sunday Globe, 1 March 1896, p. 16f; Published: A&C14, pp. 19-20.

Original MS of the ‘Devil’s Spectacles’ complete (excepting the first page – mislaid).<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The recipient is deduced because of the timing – Buck was the editor of the Spirit of the Times where the story was published on 20 December 1879 – see also [1880] to E. A. Buck, 6 November 1879. Collins requested that this story, along with ‘Love’s Random Shot’ and ‘Fie! Fie! or, the Fair Physician’, should not be republished after his death.

2. Taken from the Boston Sunday Globe, 1 March 1896:

Wilkie Collins’ Manuscript.

In the January catalog of Mr Downing of Birmingham [England] occurs this not uninteresting item:

An Original Manuscript of Wilkie Collins – A short story by Wilkie Collins, entitled “The Devil’s Spectacles,” in the author’s autograph and original envelope with his endorsement; 22 closely written quarto pages, with the author’s erasures, corrections and additions, complete with envelope, dated Dec 12, 1819 [sic for 1879], unique, £2 2s.

Unfortunately, Wilkie Collins mislaid the first page of the manuscript, which omission is noted on the envelope, as under: “Original MS of the ‘Devil’s Spectacles’ complete (excepting the first page – mislaid).”

We have however, supplied the first page from the printed story.

The MS, with the first two pages in another hand, had been included in the William Randolph Hearst Collection and is now in private hands in the UK.

[1887] TO PAUL JÜNGLING,<sup>1</sup> 18 DECEMBER 1879

MS: Parrish (Box 4/12). Published: BGLL, III, p. 262.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London 18th December 1879

Dear Sir,

I must beg you to excuse this late answer to your kind letter. I have been away from London – and I have had no earlier opportunity of writing than this.

All my novels have been translated into German – the right being always purchased by publishers or by proprietors of newspapers.

With regard to the future, I have another proposal before me for my next work.<sup>2</sup> If the negotiation should not come to a satisfactory conclusion, I will let you know more particularly on what terms I sell the right of translation.

Believe me faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Herr Paul Jüngling

---

1. German translator of 39, Behrenstrasse, Berlin, who in August 1882 was to begin to translate Heart and Science. However, a dispute quickly arose between him and WC regarding the registration in Germany of the British newspaper serialization – see [2133] to the Berlin law firm of Simson of 5 April 1883.

2. See [1888] to Unidentified Recipient of the same date.

[1888] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 18 DECEMBER 1879

MS: Wolff Collection (1359c). Extract: Davis, p. 293. Published: Wolff, p. 262; BGLL, III, pp. 262–263.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th Decr 1879

Private

Dear Madam,

My secretary wrote to inform you of my illness. Now that I have recovered, I write myself.

I have a new story by me which will be finished I hope in January next.<sup>2</sup> But, as to the German translation, I will only sell the right to a German publisher who will pay me my terms (Fifty pounds sterling, in this case) either by cheque or by a “bill of exchange at sight” in return for the written authority to publish the translation. Excepting my good friend, Baron von Tauchnitz, and a publisher at Frankfort,<sup>3</sup> I am sorry to say that I find German publishers very unsatisfactory persons to deal with. English, American, Canadian, Australian, French, and Dutch publishers have all honourably performed their engagements with me for my last work – “The Fallen Leaves” – The one publisher who has obliged me to write to him, and who has even now only paid half of the debt that he owes to me, is a German publisher.<sup>4</sup> For years past this has been my experience – and I have now resolved (in the case of German translation) to take the money with one hand, and give the authority to translate with the other!

Will you kindly tell me if you know of any publisher who will open his German purse on these conditions? I have received another proposal for my next work – but I will not answer it definitely until I hear from you.<sup>5</sup>

In the meantime I can only ask you to let my illness be my excuse for this late reply.

Truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The book will be certainly as long as two volumes of the customary “circulating library” form in England. Mr Charles Reade is suffering from a severe domestic affliction. It is impossible to address him on any matters of business.<sup>6</sup>

---

1. It is possible that this is the female German translator to whom WC wrote on 17 March 1877 ([1673]), who in turn is perhaps the P. Semter to whom he had written on 10 March 1877 ([1669]).

2. Jezebel's Daughter – the serial run in British provincial newspapers, including the Bolton Weekly Journal, ended on 31 January 1880.

3. GV does not record any WC novels published in Frankfurt.

4. Weltes Laub, the German translation of The Fallen Leaves, appeared from the Berlin house of Janke in 1880 with the translator unidentified.

5. See [1887] to Paul Jüngling of the same date. No German translation of Jezebel's Daughter seems to be recorded in GV.

6. Reade's companion Laura Seymour had died on 27 September 1879. Presumably WC's correspondent had requested an introduction.

[1889] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, [1879]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 264.

... me by sending me one line to say if you have an afternoon in the week, when you and Mamie are always to be found at home. When I call in Strathmore Gardens, I don't want to hear that ...
[text excised]

With love to Mamie, Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

1. Conjectural dating based on the assumption that WC wished to meet both Georgina Hogarth and Mamie Dickens in connection with their edition of CD's letters; the two moved to Strathmore Gardens only around the summer of 1877 – see [1687] to Georgina Hogarth of 12 July 1877. There is a possibility that this letter might be associated with the envelope at Parrish directed to Georgina Hogarth and postmarked 2 October 1879.
2. A fragment only cut from the letter for the autograph, the valediction and signature on one side and the remaining text on the other. Watermarked 'ROYAL EDINBURGH' in a circle surrounding a crown; this is only found from May 1878 to December 1879.

[3329] TO HOWITT FAMILY MEMBER,<sup>1</sup> [1870s]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Unknown. On sale: Dominic Winter (8 November 2017, lot 332, item 21), an album of 72 pages, containing signatures from a variety of literary and political figures. Published: A&C11, pp. 11–12.

Every yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Judging from other items in the same album, which relate to the family of authors William and Mary Howitt.
2. Speculative dating based on other items in the album.

[1890] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> [1870s]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:13).<sup>3</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 264.

... over the 100 before I can properly wind up the story. Is it desirable to have the length in your printed pages calculated, so as to decide the question of ... [text excised]

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Presumably the publisher of the serial version of one WC's shorter fictional works. Since this is found at Kansas along with two other fragments addressed to John Latey, it is possible that this one is to the same recipient and may therefore concern the appearance of 'My Lady's Money' in the Illustrated London News at Christmas 1877.
2. The style of the hand and signature also suggest a date around the 1870s. The valediction 'Vy truly yours' is not found in WC's extant letters until 1865.
3. Fragment cut off an otherwise untraced letter for WC's autograph, with eight lines of text on the recto and the valediction and signature on the verso.

[1891] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, [1870s]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:15/P55 7D).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 264–265.

In the mean[time] ... [text excised]

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The style of the hand and signature suggest a date around the 1870s. The valediction 'Vy truly yours' is not found in WC's extant letters until 1865.
2. Small fragment cut off an otherwise untraced letter for WC's autograph, with one indented line of text on the recto and the valediction and signature on the verso.

[1892] TO RUDOLPH CHAMBERS LEHMANN,<sup>1</sup> 1 JANUARY 1880

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, p. 252 (with recipient misidentified as Rudolf Lehmann, Fred's brother); BGLL, III, p. 265.

90, Gloucester Place, | Portman Square, W. | Jan. 1st, 1880

My dear Rudie,

Thank you for your kind letter. I will dine with you with the greatest pleasure – and date the beginning of my second youth from January 5th, 7:30.

Always truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Rudolph Chambers Lehmann (b. 1856), son of Fred and Nina Lehmann, addressed by WC as Rudie or Rudy. This is the first of only two extant letters to him. However on 23 August 1872, WC translated Horace, Book 1, Ode 12, into verse for the sixteen-year-old Rudy, who ‘secured very good marks’ the following morning – see Lehmann, pp. 62–64, for details and the complete translation. The MS in the boy’s copperplate hand is in the Parrish Collection.

[1893] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 8 JANUARY 1880

MS: Wolff Collection (1359d). Published: Davis, p. 292; Wolff, p. 262 (dated 9 January 1880); BGLL, III, pp. 265–266.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th Jan<sup>ry</sup> 1880

Dear Mr Chatto,

I don’t know whether “I am getting along too fast for you” – but I report myself to you, in the first place, as having a new story almost ready for book publication. It has only appeared periodically in a dozen subscribing country newspapers – and it is not a sequel to “The Fallen Leaves”<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esqr

---

1. That is, Jezebel’s Daughter, syndicated by W. F. Tillotson of Bolton in a series of provincial weekly newspapers from September 1879 to February 1880 (Law, pp. 238–239). WC had originally intended The Fallen Leaves to be the first part of a trilogy (see [1720] to Chatto of 7 January 1878). [1968] to Charles Willis of 8 August 1881 shows that WC was then still intending to write a sequel, but the novel’s failure eventually persuaded him against this course.

[1894] TO MRS MEREDITH,<sup>1</sup> 8 JANUARY 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 266.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th January 187 1880

Dear Mrs Meredith,

One line to thank you most sincerely for a very pretty token of your kind remembrance of an anniversary – which is beginning to remind me that I was born very, very long ago!

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Unidentified correspondent who has remembered WC’s fifty-sixth birthday.

[1895] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 9 JANUARY 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 253; BGLL, III, p. 266.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th January 1880

My dear Fred,

I should be ungrateful indeed for a new proof of the kindness of my dear old friend, if I answer your letter in any way but one. Your brother has only to send me my appointment at his own entire convenience – and he shall find me the most willing subject that has ever sat to him.<sup>1</sup>

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Rudolph Lehmann painted WC’s portrait in 1880, a commission from Fred Lehmann as a present to his wife. See [1914] to Rudolf Lehmann of 16 April 1880.

[1896] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 27 JANUARY 1880

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 266.

Edward F. Pigott Esqre | 1. Beach Terrace | Hastings
Wilkie Collins

1. Pre-paid and postmarked 'LONDON W | ZX | JA 27 | 80'.

[3298] TO THE EDITOR OF THE SPIRIT OF THE TIMES,<sup>1</sup> 29 JANUARY 1880

MS: Unknown. Published: (New York) Spirit of the Times, 14 February 1880, p. 36c, our copy text;<sup>2</sup> A&C10, pp. 16–17.

LONDON, Jan. 29, 1880.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SPIRIT OF THE TIMES:

DEAR SIR: In your weekly number, dated Jan. 17, you quote a paragraph from a newspaper called the Detroit Free Press, asserting that “The Devil’s Spectacles” is a plagiarism from a work written by Mr. George William Curtis.<sup>3</sup>

The curious form of human stupidity which exhibits itself in charges of this sort, is so common and so contemptible that I only propose to reply by stating a plain fact, in justice to the proprietor of the Christmas Number of THE SPIRIT, who arranged with me for the publication of my story in the United States.

I not only never read Mr. Curtis’ story of “Tidbottom’s Spectacles,” I never never even heard of the work, until your journal reached me in due course of post this morning. Believe me, dear sir, faithfully yours,

WILKIE COLLINS.

1. WC’s friend Edward Buck, who arranged for a copy of the popular New York weekly to be sent regularly to the author in London.

2. WC’s published letter is both preceded and followed by extensive editorial comments, concluding, ‘we are sure that the Detroit Free Press will give the full denial of Mr. Wilkie Collins as prominent a publicity as that which it bestowed upon the letter charging him with plagiarism.’

3. Signed only ‘G.P.G.’, the original letter began: ‘Plagiarism is perhaps no more common now, proportionately, than it was centuries ago, but the discoveries of it are of more frequent occurrence now than heretofore. I have recently made what seem to me two rather interesting discoveries.’ (‘Literary Larcenies’, Detroit Free Press, 4 January 1880, p. 10). The first involved the French sage Michel de Montaigne back in the sixteenth century, while the second was WC’s story in the special Christmas issue of the Spirit of the Times for 1879. The paragraph cited in the Spirit of the Times (17 January 1880, p. 589a) read:

There is another most glaring and audacious case of literary priggish that came under my eye on glancing over the Christmas number of THE SPIRIT OF THE TIMES, in which was printed, after much flourishing of advertising trumpets, a Christmas story by Wilkie Collins, entitled ‘The Devil’s Spectacles.’ In that story Mr. Collins disposes of two Arctic explorers who are lost from their shipmates in an effort to get a glimpse of the open Polar sea. One freezes to death and the other eats his remains. The Devil comes along and gives the survivor a pair of spectacles, on looking through which the wearer reads the most secret thoughts of those persons on whom they are focused. I had a vivid recollection that those identical spectacles were inherited by a certain ancient assistant book-keeper, and that the brilliant George William Curtis told their curious story in one of his charming ‘Prue and I’ sketches, entitled ‘Tidbottom’s Spectacles,’ many years ago. I wrote to Mr. Curtis regarding it. In reply he says: ‘My “Tidbottom’s Spectacles” was an old fancy of mine, obvious enough, yet I do not recall it elsewhere. I used it first in a fairy story, which I wrote thirty-five years ago for my younger brothers which is not published. I have not seen Wilkie Collins’ paper.’

Both here and in subsequent issues (14 February 1880, p. 36c, and 21 February 1880, p. 61b), the Spirit of the Times expressed outrage, demanding either evidence to back up the accusation or an apology from all responsible parties. Prue and I, by the distinguished American author George William Curtis (1824–92: DAB), had in fact been published by Dix, Edwards & Co. of Broadway, New York, back in 1856, including the whimsical tale ‘Titbottom’s Spectacles’ [sic] (pp. 99–138). In the end, the Detroit Free Press seems to have reprinted WC’s letter and withdrawn the accusation, though it exonerated Curtis of any responsibility and laid the entire blame on the anonymous correspondent, at the same time criticising the Spirit of the Times for its ‘ill-tempered’ approach to the issue (Spirit of the Times, 28 February 1880, p. 85b).

[1897] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 2 FEBRUARY 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 267.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd Feby 1880

“Jezebel’s Daughter”

Dear Sirs,

On the 28th of January (in the evening) I received from you proofs to the end of Vol I. Some person (without consulting me) had taken it on himself to decide the place at which the volume should end – and had so completely destroyed the effect of the story that it was impossible for me to suffer the mistake to pass. I indicated (on page 282 of the proof) the place at which the volume naturally and properly ended – and to save time, sent it by that evening’s post direct to Messrs Spottiswoode – so that they might receive it by the first delivery on the morning of the 29th.<sup>1</sup> They have taken no notice whatever of this necessary correction. Today at 1. P.M. I telegraphed to them – and received no reply. If they had attended to my alteration when they received it, four days since, there would have been neither trouble nor expense in altering the end of the 1st Volume and the beginning of the 2nd – it would have been merely a matter of correcting the paging of the first sheet or two of the 2nd Volume. As it is, I cannot be responsible for any results which may follow Messrs Spottiswoode’s discourtesy and neglect. If you will be so good as to tell them that I will not send the last sheet of the first volume to press, or let them have any more printed copy, until my alteration is made, and sent to me in duplicate proof – perhaps they will understand that I am in earnest, and that I expect to be treated with decent civility by the printing office in New Street.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Spottiswoode & Co. of New Street Square, off Fetter Lane, were printers to Chatto & Windus.

[3365] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 3 FEBRUARY 1880

MS: Private. Published: A&C13, pp. 9-10.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup> | London

3rd February 1880

Dear Sir,

I contribute with great pleasure to the autograph album in aid of your Church.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC’s printed paper with address centred. Written on a single page mounted on card, trimmed top and bottom removing the name and address of the recipient.

2. WC was in the habit of sending letters to people who asked him by letter for his autograph. The dateline indicates a church outside London and possibly outside the UK.

[1898] TO W. F. TILLOTSON, 15 FEBRUARY 1880

MS: Bolton (ZBEN/4/6/16). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 267–268.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 15th February 1880

My dear Sir,

I return the receipt (signed) for the last instalment of the purchase money as by agreement.<sup>1</sup>

I also enclose with pleasure my two contributions to Mrs Tillotson's collection.<sup>2</sup> Dickens's letter bears some signs of having been in the hands of the printers (before the recent publication of his "Letters")<sup>3</sup> – but, as my cleaner specimens are only signed in initial, I hope Mrs Tillotson will excuse the condition of the first page in consideration of the full signature.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The third instalment of the £500 payment for serial rights to Jezebel's Daughter.
  2. Tillotson's wife Mary née Lever (whose brother William was in the family soapmanufacturing business and was to become the first Lord Leverhulme) collected literary autographs – see the file ZBEN/4/6 at Bolton Metropolitan Library. As what follows makes clear, one of the letters sent was from CD to WC, though no such letter is today found at Bolton. The author of the second letter WC sends cannot be ascertained.
  3. Referring to the two-volume edition of CD's letters, published by Chapman & Hall in 1880.

[1899] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 19 FEBRUARY 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 268.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th February 1880

“Jezebel's Daughter”

Dear Sirs,

I enclose our customary form of agreement for signature at your convenience.<sup>1</sup> The 26th of this month is stated as the day of publication – being the nearest guess I can make at the right date – to enable my lawyers to draw out the agreement.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

My signed duplicate will of course be sent to you, as usual, when the date is filled in on your copy.

-
1. The agreement, also dated 19 February 1880, for the lease of the copyright of the novel for seven years for £600 (Reading).

[1900] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 20 FEBRUARY 1880

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, III, p. 269.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th February 1880

Dear Sirs,

I beg to enclose my duplicate of our agreement for “Jezebel's Daughter”, duly executed.

I have also the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your cheque for £200 together with the bills at six and nine months, for £200..-.. each, in accordance with the terms of our agreement.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Chatto & Windus

-
1. Chatto & Windus had replied to [1899] of 19 February 1880 on the same day, enclosing their signed version of the agreement and the agreed payments. An amount of £200 simply labelled ‘Recd’ was credited to WC's bank account the next day. The two bills were credited six and nine months later on 28 [August] and 29 November (Coumts: WC).

[1901] TO FREDERICK ENOCH,<sup>1</sup> 24 FEBRUARY 1880

MS: Huntington (HM 33789, bound in MS of Armada, HM 33786, II, p. 6) Published: BGLL, III, pp. 269–270.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th Feby 1880

My dear Sir,

I have been very busily occupied – and I must beg you to excuse this late reply to your kind letter.

The manuscript that I gave to you represents my first attempt to adapt “Armada” for performance on the stage.<sup>2</sup> It was, however, not found suitable for this purpose – and it has never been, and never can be, performed on the stage. With the assistance of M. Regnier (of the Comédie Française) I wrote a second dramatic version of “Armada” which has been performed some hundreds of nights – in England and in America.<sup>3</sup> The manuscript which you are so good as to value is, I am afraid, little better than the record of a failure. But you are heartily welcome to it, such as it is – and as a little memorial of our pleasant literary relations in past years. I am quite sure it is safe in your care.

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Frederick Enoch Esqre.

---

1. Enoch had been on the staff of Smith, Elder when that house published Armada as serial, novel and play – see the sequence of letters to him from [3028] of 15 September 1864. According to Reginald J. Smith, the husband of George Smith’s daughter Isabel and head of the publishing house from 1899: ‘Shortly after ... 1868 Enoch left the house of Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co., his leaving being unexplained. Later, falling on evil days and poverty, he retired to Ringmer, in Sussex’ (cited in J. W. Robertson Scott, The Story of the Pall Mall Gazette (London: Oxford University Press, 1950), p. 99).

2. WC sent the manuscript to Enoch in the summer of 1866 to be privately printed by Smith, Elder – see [0686] of 14 June and [0695] of 6 July 1866, both to Enoch. The manuscript is now held at the Huntington Library, together with a printed copy of the play and the manuscript of the novel, bound in two volumes.

3. The successful dramatic version of 1875 bore the title Miss Gwilt – see Peters, pp. 277–279.

[1902] TO BRAM STOKER,<sup>1</sup> 24 FEBRUARY 1880

MS: Leeds. Published: BGLL, III, p. 270.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th Feby 1880

Dear Sir,

Pray present my thanks to Mr Irving for the opportunity which he has so kindly afforded to me of attending the performance on Thursday evening next.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Bram Stoker, Esqr

---

1. Bram Stoker (1847–1912: ODNB), best known as the author of Dracula (1897), was secretary and touring manager from 1878 to Sir Henry Irving (1838–1905: ODNB), afterwards writing Personal Reminiscences of Henry Irving (London: Heinemann, 1906).

2. On Thursday, 26 February Henry Irving was performing at the Lyceum Theatre as Shylock in The Merchant of Venice, with Ellen Terry as Portia.

[1903] TO NINA LEHMANN, 28 FEBRUARY 1880

MS: Unknown. Published: Lehmann, pp. 71–72, our copy text; BGLL, III, pp. 270–271.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W.,
Saturday, 28 Feb., 1880

Dearest Padrona,

Need I say that I engage myself with the greatest pleasure? – but also with a certain feeling of awe. You know in your boudoir in Berkeley Square what I say and do here. Yesterday morning you heard me use “ungentlemanlike language,” and saw me throw into the fire an unoffending morsel of muffin polluted by —’s cart-grease. I declare it is true. Your delicious butter came on the very day when I was thinking of keeping a private cow in the back-yard, and presiding myself over the pastoral churn. Judge of my gratitude, if you can – words fail to express my feelings.

Ever Yours, | W. C.

Oh! I was foolish enough to eat slices of plain joints two days following. The bilious miseries that followed proved obstinate until I most fortunately ate some pâté de foie gras. The cure was instantaneous – and lasting.

[1904] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 2 MARCH 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 271.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd March 1880

“Jezebel’s Daughter”

Dear Sirs,

The purchasers of the German right of translation, ask me to send them an early copy.<sup>1</sup> Will you kindly let me hear by bearer if this story is published yet?

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. The German translation has not been traced.

[1905] TO W. H. PARKS,<sup>1</sup> 2 MARCH 1880

MS: Shakespeare (P.82.5, Acc. No. 2981, f. 97).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 271–272.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 2nd March 1880

Dear Sir,

I beg to offer to you a presentation copy of “The Frozen Deep” (in its first dramatic form) in acknowledgment of the kind feeling which your letter expresses towards my books. The Play is “not published,” in order to keep it out of the reach of unscrupulous persons who might perform it without my permission on the public stage.<sup>3</sup> I know that the little book will be safe in your care.

“The Lighthouse” has never been printed.<sup>4</sup>

The publishers of my “Rambles beyond Railways” are Messrs Richard Bentley & Son, 8 New Burlington Street London.

Believe me, Dear sir, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mr W. H. Parks

---

1. Unidentified fan.

2. The letter is pasted into the presentation copy of The Frozen Deep (1866), with a dedication and an annotated cast list for the Tavistock House performance of 1857.

3. The Frozen Deep: A Drama in Three Acts was printed but ‘not published’ in 1866.

4. Although there is no printed version of The Lighthouse in English, E. D. Forgues made an authorized translation into French as Le Phare which appeared on pp. 285–346 of Une Poignée de Romans: Seconde Serie (Paris: J. Hetzel & Lacroix, [1864]). WC’s original manuscript is now held at the Victoria and Albert Museum, London.

[1906] TO MISS H. A. LOWE,<sup>1</sup> 4 MARCH 1880

MS: Unknown. On sale: Maggs Catalogue 61 (1994), item 42. Published: BGLL, III, p. 272.

I contribute with pleasure to your collection of autographs.

---

1. Unidentified.

[1907] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 13 MARCH 1880

MS: Illinois (Bentley Archives). Published: BGLL, III, p. 272.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

~~12~~ 13th March 1880

Dear Mr Bentley

Just a word to say how sorry I was to miss you when you kindly called yesterday, and to report myself in reasonably good health, in spite of rumours to the contrary!

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[1908] TO CHRISTIAN TAUCHNITZ,<sup>1</sup> 22 MARCH 1880

MS: Unknown. Published: Otto, p. 78, our copy text; BGLL, III, p. 272.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London, March 22nd 1880.

I should be very unworthy of your most friendly and generous suggestion, if I hesitated to accept it. Let me most sincerely thank your father and you for an arrangement which is more than considerate towards my interests – and which is, in every respect, highly gratifying to me ...<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Christian Carl Bernhard Tauchnitz, second Baron Tauchnitz, son of Bernhard Christian Tauchnitz, who became a partner in the firm in 1866.

2. Presumably referring to Tauchnitz's projected publication of Jezebel's Daughter as volumes 1895–96 in the Collection of British Authors, recorded as on 5 May 1880 (Todd & Bowden, p. 301), though [1913] to Williams and Norgate of 14 April 1880 suggests an earlier date in the third week of April.

[3366] SIR HENRY THOMPSON, 23 MARCH 1880

MS: Lewis Collection (L2528). Published: A&C13, p. 10.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23rd March 1880

My dear Thompson,

Many thanks for your kind note. It will give me the greatest pleasure to dine with you on the 15th April at 7.30 precisely.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Sir Henry Thompson

&c &c &c

---

1. For one of his 'Octaves' – see [3365] to him of 26 December 1878.

[1909] TO HENRY POWELL BARTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 31 MARCH 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/14). Published: BGLL, III, p. 273.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 31st March 1880

My dear Harry

What do you say to a day or two here, in the intervals of business? We can put you up whenever you like to come. – Kimber is ready. Goodchild sends his duty – and regrets to say that he fell over the cliff some time since, and is now getting drunk in a better world.<sup>2</sup>

Mama sends love to wife – and so do I. Why not bring her here with the baby?<sup>3</sup>
Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Though Davis suggests the recipient is Henry Bullar (p. 326 n. 18), this must be Henry Powell Bartley, who had married Carrie Graves in March 1878.
2. Here, the jocular references to life at Nelson Crescent escape us.
3. Carrie and Henry Bartley's first child, Doris Edith, was born on 9 July 1879.

[3056] TO CHARLES E. FERGUSON,<sup>1</sup> 6 APRIL 1880

MS: Indiana (Ferguson Mss). Published: A&C3, p. 53.

Ramsgate | England | 6th April 1880

Dear Sir,

I am staying at this place for a few days only – and your letter has followed me.

With the view of protecting myself from unauthorised representations of the dramatic works which you mention, I have declined to allow them to be published – and I can only therefore reply to your question that they are not to be obtained.

Regretting that you should be disappointed.

I remain | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Charles E Ferguson Esqr

---

1. Charles Eugene Ferguson (1856–1945) was a physician from Indianapolis, Indiana, whose papers are held at the Lilly Library. His interest in WC's plays is not known though he did write to many literary figures about their work.

[1910] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 9 APRIL 1880

MS: Unknown. On sale: Autograph Letters (23 June 1921), Henkels Catalogue 1282, lot 33.<sup>1</sup>

[text unknown]

---

1. London, two octavo pages.

[1911] TO LEONORA E. FRANK,<sup>1</sup> 12 APRIL 1880

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, III, p. 273.

90. Gloucester Place | London. W. | 12th April 1880

Dear Madam,

I beg to thank you for your very kind letter – and I accept with pleasure the place that you offer to me in your book of Autographs.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mrs Leonora E. Frank

---

1. Unidentified autograph collector – presumably from America or the provinces, judging from the way WC writes his address.

[1912] TO CARLOTTA LECLERCQ, 12 APRIL 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 274.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 12th April 1880

My dear Mrs Nelson

I cannot doubt that you are quite right to accept the offered apology.<sup>1</sup> It acknowledges the cruel wrong that has been done to you, and it pays a due tribute of respect to your reputation, personally and professionally. Not the least of its merits, in my opinion, is that it spares you the anxiety and agitation of a trial in a court of law – on terms which you can with perfect propriety and dignity permit to be offered to you.

Accept therefore my sincere congratulations, as well as my good wishes for the future – and believe me

always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I have just returned from the seaside – and I shall probably be leaving London again in a day or two.

---

1. The wrong suffered by the actress has not been identified, though it probably relates to her relationship to Charles Fechter who had died in August 1879, and might concern the criticisms of Leclercq recently made by Fechter's widow, Eléonore, as reported in 'En Passant', Theatre, 3 (November 1879), p. 223 (see note 2 to [1469] to her of 1 July 1874).

[1913] TO WILLIAMS & NORGATE,<sup>1</sup> 14 APRIL 1880

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 274–275.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W. | 14th April 1880

Dear Sirs,

Baron von Tauchnitz informs me that he hopes to publish next week (in his Continental Series) my last novel, called "Jezebel's Daughter".<sup>2</sup> He will send me six copies, and he refers me to you to kindly clear them through the Customs House. I send a copy of the customary "authority" on the next page.<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Williams & Norgate

To | The Honourable Commissioners of H.M's Customs: –

I hereby authorise Messrs Williams & Norgate to import for my own use six copies of my work entitled "Jezebel's Daughter", of an Edition printed and published by Bernhard Tauchnitz of Leipzig.

London | 15th April 1880 | Wilkie Collins

---

1. London agents for Tauchnitz, who acted regularly to obtain customs clearance for presentation copies of the Tauchnitz editions of WC's novels – see [0321] to them of 24 December 1859.

2. According to Todd & Bowden (p. 310), the Tauchnitz edition appeared as vols 1895–1896 on 5 May 1880.

3. The authority remains attached.

[1914] TO RUDOLF LEHMANN, 16 APRIL 1880

MS: BL (Add. 42575, f. 159r.). Published: BGLL, III, p. 275.

90 Gloucester Place | W. | 16th April 1880

Dear Rudolph Lehmann (Let us drop "Mister" if you please!) –

I have returned with an improved complexion – and I am at your service at 10.30. on Monday next and following days.<sup>1</sup> If this will do – don't trouble to write. Silence says Yes.

Yrs truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. To sit for his portrait. The artist Rudolf Lehmann (1819–1905) was the brother of WC's close friend Frederic Lehmann. He spelt his name 'Rudolf' but WC consistently misspelt it 'Rudolph'. Lehmann wrote in his autobiography: 'I painted him, a commission from my brother, in 1880. Being the son of a Royal Academician, he proved a most patient sitter. He had a full beard and always wore spectacles. A peculiarity of his otherwise regular features was a swelling of the frontal bone, considerably protruding on the right side of his spacious forehead' (An Artist's Reminiscences (London: Smith, Elder, 1894), p. 233). The portrait, dated 1880, is now in the National Portrait Gallery. There is an image on the Lewis website.

[1915] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 20 APRIL 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 275.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th April 1880

Dear Mr Chatto,

Many thanks for your kind note. I write to the Colonel<sup>1</sup> by today's mail to bid him welcome beforehand to – what an American friend of mine calls – “this blarsted old country”!

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to Colonel William Seaver – see [3057] to him of the same date.

[3057] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 20 APRIL 1880

MS: Parrish (5/8/AM16030). Published: A&C3, p. 53.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. |

London | 20th April 1880

My dear Seaver

Mr Chatto has just told me that you are going to cross the Pond – under the protection of Cunard<sup>1</sup> – and appear like a comet on the British horizon. This contains a modest request that you will flash the light of your presence on this house at the earliest possible opportunity. Mark the address (in case you have forgotten it) – and may the heavy “joints” of the good Cunard's cabin dinner table sit more lightly on your stomach than they did on mine!

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

If I remember correctly, I think you like your champagne dry?

---

1. WC's Atlantic crossings in autumn 1873 and spring 1874 were both aboard Cunard steamers (outward on the SS Algeria and homeward on the SS Parthia).

[1916] TO LEADER & SONS,<sup>1</sup> 30 APRIL 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 276.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London 30th April 1880

Dear Sirs,

I willingly give my consent to the choice of the proprietor of the “South London Press” as the London subscriber to my new story<sup>2</sup> – and I beg to thank you for the list of the other subscribing newspapers up to the present date.<sup>3</sup>

Mr Sinclair's opinion of the conditions of success has been practically carried out by every writer who knows his art, and who publishes a story periodically.<sup>4</sup>

The first weekly part of “The Woman In White” (published in 1860–1861 – long before the newspaper subscription plan was ever thought of) occupies no less than 18 of the closely printed pages of the cheap edition. A little later (when I begin to work) I should have written to you – not only to suggest a long first weekly part – but to warn you that the succeeding parts might vary in length to suit the literary necessities of the story, and that the whole work might in all probability occupy one or two more numbers than our agreement strictly provides for. I need hardly remind you that a work of art must be allowed certain privileges of development which no formal agreement can provide for.

Believe me, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Proprietors of the Sheffield Independent, who had operated a fiction syndication agency from 1873 – see [1756] to them of 20 June 1878. The firm were to arrange the serialization of The Black Robe in a series of provincial newspapers from 2 October 1880 – see Law, pp. 56–57.
2. The South London Press was a widely circulating liberal weekly newspaper owned by James Henderson, which had carried serial fiction from its opening issue in 1865.
3. The only other newspaper venues for The Black Robe so far traced are the Cardiff Weekly Mail, the Glasgow Weekly Herald, and Leader’s own Sheffield Independent – see Law, pp. 238–239.
4. Probably referring to Alexander Sinclair, editor of the Glasgow Weekly Herald, though the specific opinion mentioned here has not been identified.

[2996] TO A.S. BARNES & CO., [SPRING] 1880

MS: Unknown. Extract: International Review NS 8:6 (June 1880), p. 18; A&C1, pp. 52–53.

It [this article] has my name attached to it because I wish to take on myself the entire responsibility of the tone in which this little protest is written. If the article is published, I must ask as a condition that it shall be published without alterations of any kind, excepting palpable errors or slips of the pen, exactly as it is written.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. WC refers to ‘Considerations on the Copyright Question’, published by A.S. Barnes & Co. of New York in their monthly International Review (June 1880), pp. 609–618. Following the signed article appears the following note:

The editors agree with Mr. Collins in thinking that a treaty securing International Copyright is in every way just and proper; but they must disclaim all responsibility for the language adopted by him in his argument. In a letter to the publishers of this Review Mr. Collins says: [cites extract as above] The article is printed in exact accordance with this request.

[1917] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 20 MAY 1880

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, III, p. 277.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
May 20th 1880

My dear Seaver,

Welcome to London. Come here, and dine quietly tomorrow (Friday 21st) at 7 o’clock – and tell me what your plans are, and how long you stay in London, and what you want to see, and all the rest of it. I purposely abstained from writing back by your messenger because I felt sure he would wake you.

Needless to say that you come here in your travelling dress. No time for ceremony and a party.

Yours always | Wilkie Collins

Tell your cabman to drive you to Gloucester Place, Portman Square, (see address). There is another Gloucester Place in London. You are too far away – you must move to “the Langham Hotel.”<sup>1</sup> It is dreadful to think of you – far away in “the city.”

Don’t trouble to write. If I don’t hear to the contrary, I shall expect you at 7. tomorrow.

---

1. The Langham Hotel, in Langham Place, within easy walking distance of WC’s house, just over a mile away in Gloucester Place.

[1918] TO THE EDITOR OF FRANK LESLIE’S ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER,<sup>1</sup> 1 JUNE 1880

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 277–278.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st June 1880

Dear Sir,

I have signed agreements to publish a new serial story in England – under these conditions, among others: –

1. The story is to be published weekly. The first weekly part to appear in England on Saturday October 2nd 1880

2. The story is to consist of “not less than twenty consecutive weekly instalments,” and the author has arranged to begin writing the work at a sufficiently early date to set up the proofs two months in advance of publication.<sup>2</sup>

These particulars I had arranged to communicate to the late Mr Frank Leslie. I now make you acquainted with them, before I negotiate with any proprietor of periodicals in The United States.

Will you kindly let me know, by return of mail, if you feel disposed to make me an offer for the advance sheets. In this case, I may mention it, as a customary condition on my side, that the proposed payments be made in two instalments – one to be paid on receiving the first half of the story in advance proof: the other, on the conclusion of the story.<sup>3</sup>

Let me take this opportunity of thanking you for your kindness in sending me the weekly numbers of the [“Illustrated Newspaper”.]<sup>4</sup> The illustrations are full of interest – spirited and admirably varied – and the literary part of the paper seems to me to be thoroughly well “edited”. This is at least the testimony of one of your “constant readers”.

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | [illegible]

---

1. Who edited the paper around this time is by no means clear. Frank Leslie died in January 1880 leaving the paper and his name to his wife Miriam Florence Leslie. For more on Frank Leslie, see [2103] to Jane Bigelow, 16 January 1883.

2. The Black Robe, serialized in a syndicate of weekly newspapers in Britain, and also in the Canadian Monthly, November 1880–June 1881.

3. The serial duly appeared in Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper in weekly parts from 2 October 1880.

4. The reading here is secure, though a thin strip at the foot of the second leaf has been cut away, excising the lower part of the final line of text on both sides, leaving the name of the addressee on the verso obscure. Still legible there, however, is an endorsement on 14 June 1880, indicating that an answer had been sent from the newspaper publisher.

[1919] TO THE REV. WILLIAM SHARMAN,<sup>1</sup> 1 JUNE 1880

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 278–279.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 1st June 1880

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter. I can say, with perfect sincerity, that such sympathy as your’s is a reward to me for what has been done in the past, and an encouragement for what remains to be done in the future.

If my home-travels lead me westward this summer, I shall be indeed glad to make your acquaintance personally, and to gather some of those new materials which you so kindly offer to me.

Believe me Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
The Rev<sup>d</sup> | Wm Sharman

---

1. Probably the Reverend William Sharman (1841–89) of 20 Headland Park, Plymouth, Unitarian Minister and member of the Socialist League, who also corresponded with William Morris around this time (see The Collected Letters of William Morris, Volume II, Part A: 1881–1884, ed. Norman Kelvin (Princeton, NJ: Princeton UP, 1987), p. 206.

[1920] TO RUDOLPH CHAMBERS LEHMANN,<sup>1</sup> 3 JUNE 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 254; BGLL, III, p. 279.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd June 1880

My dear Rudy

Welcome to the composite coach – we shall be delighted to have you for companion.

Call here, of course, on Sunday next – and we will go on together to Payn's.<sup>2</sup> P. wants a walk in Richmond Park. So – if it is fine – be here at 4.30.

If it rains – or threatens rain – then be here at 5.45 – in that case, we shall pick up Payn at 6, and get to Richmond by dinner-time at 7.<sup>3</sup> In the other case, we can have a good hour in the Park.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Son of Fred and Nina Lehmann.

2. James Payn, the novelist and journalist, who lived at 43 Warrington Crescent, Maida Vale – see [0780] to him of 25 October 1867.

3. It remains unclear where the companions were going to dine in Richmond.

[1921] TO MISS PAYN,<sup>1</sup> 5 JUNE 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 279.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th June 1880

Dear Miss Payn

I am indeed sorry to hear of your father's illness. Pray tell him, from me, that he has the sincere sympathy of a fellow-sufferer as well as of an old friend. In a few days, I shall call to make my inquiries, in the hope of hearing better news from the bedside.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Lehmann has just written to tell me that the dinner is put off.

---

1. One of the six daughters of James Payn, all of whom lived with him and his wife Louisa.

2. James Payn, who had an appointment to walk with WC in Richmond Park the following day before dining together (see [1920] to Rudolph Lehmann of 3 June), was also subject to attacks of gout.

[1922] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 9 JUNE 1880

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 280.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th June 1880

Dear Sir

The enclosed letter and book speak for themselves. Both were sent back to me by the Post Office – (in April last) – with the official announcement that you were not known at the address then given – and accurately copied by me from your stamped and addressed envelope.

I informed you of this circumstance ~~in a note enclosed~~ enclosing my returned envelope, in this same smaller envelope of your own directing. No answer reached me – and this second letter was not returned. I now “try again” – leaving you to clear up the impenetrable mystery of your own disappearance from your own address!

Very truly yours | WC

I am obliged of course to use a larger envelope than yours – to hold the book.

I return your addressed envelope – so that you may be assured that, this time also, I have correctly copied the address

[1923] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 18 JUNE 1880

MS: Portsmouth. Published: BGLL, III, p. 280.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. |

London | 18th June 1880

Dear Sir,

Many thanks. I shall be very glad to receive the book which you kindly propose to send to me.

Faithfully Yours | WC

(In great haste)

[1924] TO LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON,<sup>1</sup> 22 JUNE 1880

MS: Congress. Published: B&C, II, p. 429.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 22nd June 1880

Dear Mrs Moulton,

I have read your kind letter with sincere pleasure. The expression of your sympathy is one of those encouragements which I very highly prize.

The Second Series will be written – if all goes well with me – when our English system of publication sanctions the issue of the first cheap edition of “The Fallen Leaves”. That is to say, the first Edition which really appeals to the people. I know “the General reader”, by experience, as my best friend and ally when I have certain cliques and classes in this country arrayed against me – and, when I “return to the charge”, I shall write with redoubled resolution, if I feel that I have the Great Public with me – as I had them (for example) in the case of “The New Magdalen”.

The married life – in the second part – will be essentially a happy life, in itself. But the outer influence of the world which surrounds the husband and wife – the world whose unchristian prejudices they have set at defiance – will slowly undermine their happiness, and will, I fear, make the close of the story a sad one.

With renewed thanks | believe me | most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Louise Chandler Moulton (1835–1908), American poet and journalist, literary correspondent of the New York Tribune, 1870–1876. WC was to meet her at the Society of Authors’ dinner in honour of American men and women of letters then in England in July 1888. See the report in the Times, 26 July 1888, p. 6e, and [2880] to A.P. Watt, 30 July 1888.

[3165] TO THOMAS ATKINSON JR,<sup>1</sup> 28 JUNE 1880

MS: Yale (Gimbel H1297). Published: A&C6, p. 14.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | London | 28th June 1880<sup>2</sup>

Dear Sir,

I have forwarded your letter to Mr Payn. He is now well advanced – as I hear – towards recovery.<sup>3</sup>

“The Lighthouse” is not published. As long as I keep the play in manuscript, I keep it out of the reach of the theatrical thieves – who set the law at defiance for the excellent reason that they have no money to pay damages.<sup>4</sup>

The notice of my life in the volume called (I think) “Men of the Time” was corrected by myself. It is very short necessarily – the “events” in my life being not of a nature to interest the public. Circumstances have spared me the “picturesque” obstacles which have stood in the way of many literary men.<sup>5</sup> And the best part of my life is in my books.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To Thos Atkinson Eqr Junior.

---

1. Unidentified but probably an American fan because of the London dateline and the ‘Junior’ after the name.
2. Handwritten.
3. WC’s friend, the writer James Payn. On his recent illness, see [1921] to Miss Payn, 15 June 1880.
4. The Lighthouse was first written and performed for CD’s amateurs in 1855. WC sold the professional performance rights for two years in 1857 and the play opened at the Olympic Theatre on 10 August that year. Despite full houses it closed after 9 weeks on 17 October. See [0269] to John Palgrave Simpson, 17 October 1857, for early plans to print the play. WC seems to have decided soon after that not to allow further productions – see [0299] to E. Nelson Hazell, 27 April 1859, and [0349] to John Palgrave Simpson, 2 June 1860. But WC relented and Simpson did perform the play many times, though it remained unprinted in English – see [0502] to John Palgrave Simpson, 17 November 1862. There was, however, a French translation by E. D. Forgues as ‘Le Phare’ in Une Poignée de Romans, Second Série (Paris, J. Hetzel & Lacroix, [1864]).
5. WC had first corrected the entry in Men of the Time almost twenty years earlier – see [0411] to Edward Walford, 17 April 1861. Three years later a further correction was sent – see [0578] to Routledge, Warne & Routledge, 21 April 1864. See also [1992] to Henry J. Nicoll, 28 November 1881, for a similar reliance on this biographical account.

[3058] TO RUDOLF LEHMANN, [APRIL-JUNE] 1880

MS: Unknown. Extract: ‘Death’, p. 3b;<sup>1</sup> A&C3, p. 54.

... my friend (and medical advisor) tells me that I want a change of air, and I feel that he is right
... If I “fall below par” (as they say in the Share Market), then comes the gout.

---

1. See [3055] to Lehmann of 10 December 1879. In WC’s obituary in the Daily Telegraph of 24 September 1889, the extract is introduced: ‘In another note, written later on, after he had given a sitting or two, he says ...’.

[1925] TO MISS TINY,<sup>1</sup> 20 JULY 1880

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, p. 255; BGLL, III, p. 281.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th July 1880

Dear Miss Tiny,

How can I sufficiently thank you for one of the prettiest presents I ever received, and for the charming manner in which you have associated your pencil with Mrs Page’s kind remembrances of me?<sup>2</sup> I can only assure you that (even if I gave dinner-parties) I admire my floral cards far too sincerely to put them on the table and let other people take them away from me. I shall keep them all under my own eye, and in artistic society of my own choosing.

Believe me most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Unidentified correspondent sending a gift of floral cards.
2. Also unidentified.

[1926] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 3 AUGUST 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 281–282.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 3rd August 1880

Dear Mr Rose,

I am not quite sure that “the market” for reprinted serial stories is still open in Canada. The later numbers of the “Canadian Monthly” seem to contain nothing of the kind – and “The Bystander” is described as “a Record of Events”.<sup>1</sup>

However, I may as well tell you in two lines that a new serial story of mine, in “not less that twenty consecutive weekly parts” is to be published in the later autumn. The first weekly part is to be published on Saturday the 2nd of October next. Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper has secured the advance sheets for the United States.<sup>2</sup>

In sending you this morsel of literary news, I have the opportunity of asking in return for a word of news relating to yourself. When you have ten minutes to spare, let me hear something of your health, and of publishing prospects in Canada. I suppose it is useless to hope that you will give yourself a holiday in England and take London on your way to Scotland.

So far as I am concerned, I have been wonderfully lucky in keeping the gout “at a respectful distance” from me. Our weather here, has been very oppressive. Undeveloped thunderstorms, perpetually threatening, and only now and then fulfilling the threat, press a little heavily on sensitively-organised people (of whom I am one) – but that is not much to complain of. I hope soon to go yachting with a friend. I wish we had the time to cross the Northern Atlantic, and to see you (and Niagara) again!

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins
G.M. Rose Egre

---

1. The Bystander: A Monthly Review of Current Events, Canadian and General, published in Toronto from January 1880.

2. Referring to The Black Robe, which was published as a serial in Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper in New York in parallel with its appearance in a syndicate of English newspapers.

[1927] TO TILLOTSON & SON, 16 AUGUST 1880

MS: Bolton? (found there previously but apparently mislaid). Published: BGLL, III, p. 282.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16 Aug<sup>t</sup> 1880

Dear Sirs,

I am much obliged to you for your letter of Aug<sup>t</sup> 9th. When the serial story on which I am now engaged is completed,<sup>1</sup> I shall probably return to writing for the stage. In any case, my plans are too uncertain to allow me to pledge myself to the production of any new work at a given time.<sup>2</sup>

Pray excuse my delay in answering your letter. I have been away from London – and my correspondence is all in arrear.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Tillotson & Son

---

1. The Black Robe.

2. The Bolton syndicators had clearly asked WC for a second serial novel.

[1928] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 19 AUGUST 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 282–283.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1880

Dear Mr Chatto

Many thanks for your note. I will be ready at a quarter to 4 tomorrow, as you kindly propose.<sup>1</sup>

Mrs Graves requests me to thank you and Mr Seaver for your kind invitation. She is engaged to dine with her daughter tomorrow – and can only add her excuses to her thanks, and offer to Mr Seaver her best wishes on his departure, when you and he call here tomorrow.

Always truly yours | WC

1. Chatto's private note concerning a meeting with Colonel William Seaver is not found in the Chatto & Windus letter-books.

[1929] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 23 SEPTEMBER 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: B&C, II, pp. 429–430.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 23rd Sept 1880

My dear Mr Chatto,

Pray accept my best thanks for the new “Jezebel’s Daughter” – bound so tastefully in my favourite colour. As you kindly encourage me to look back towards similar editions of Jezebel’s predecessors, I may say that I have not yet received “The Haunted Hotel” and “The Two Destinies” – in the same form as “Jezebel” and “The Fallen Leaves” – which last story you kindly sent me on its publication in one volume form (cloth).<sup>1</sup>

I should have called in Piccadilly to say this – but I am hard at work again, and likely to be soon leaving town.

always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to the Chatto & Windus ‘Piccadilly’ editions of WC’s novels, in a single volume bound in green cloth and sold at 3s-6d.

[3299] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 6 OCTOBER 1880

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C10, pp. 17–18 (dated 18 August 1877).

6th October 1880

“Why are we to stop her, sir? What has she done?”

“Done! She has escaped from my Asylum. Don’t forget: a woman in white. Drive on.”<sup>3</sup>

Wilkie Collins

---

1. Presumably a member of the London theatrical community.

2. In an album of theatrical signatures and notes dated 1878–1888.

3. The quotation is found at the end of section IV of Hartlight’s initial narrative in The Woman in White. It had concluded the first part of the serial story in All The Year Round (26 November 1859), vol. II, p. 104.

[1930] TO FREDERIC CHAPMAN,<sup>1</sup> 25 OCTOBER 1880

MS: De Coursey Fales. Published: BGLL, III, p. 283.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th October 1880

Dear Mr Chapman,

I return the proofs of the Prospectus with thanks, and such little alteration and additions as seem to me desirable.<sup>2</sup> Make any use of them you like, and believe me

vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Frederic Chapman, Eq

---

1. Son of Edmund Chapman, joint founder of Chapman & Hall, CD’s principal publishers. In 1870 the firm had bought up all of CD’s copyrights and in 1880 was incorporated as a limited company.

2. Presumably the Prospectus for the two-volume edition of CD’s letters, edited by Georgina Hogarth and Mamie Dickens, shortly to be published by Chapman & Hall.

[3300] TO MRS CAMPBELL,<sup>1</sup> 26 OCTOBER 1880

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, p. 18.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

26th Oct: 1880

My dear Mrs Campbell

Thank you most sincerely for the photograph of your charming little child. I may perhaps claim a sort of Godfatherly interest in her, after the compliment which you have so kindly paid to the other “Magdalen” in the book.<sup>3</sup>

The production of the play is deferred – for many reasons too numerous to mention – and I am still pledged to certain engagements made long since.<sup>4</sup> All that I can now say is, that I will not forget your letter. In the mean time, I congratulate you on the success announced in the newspaper slips – and I hope for another opportunity of seeing you on the London stage.<sup>5</sup> Latterly, I have not been able to see anything of the “modern drama”. The damp weather has found its way to the rheumatic side of me, and I cannot leave the house at night.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Unidentified actress. Probably not the Mrs Campbell he wrote to sixteen years earlier (see [0586] of 1 July 1864).
  2. On green headed paper with logo ranged left and address ranged right.
  3. Presumably the child was a girl named Magdalen, after Magdalen Vanstone in No Name published in 1862.
  4. Perhaps Mrs Campbell was enquiring if WC intended to stage No Name (which he never did in England).
  5. We have found no mention of a Mrs Campbell in a play in London in the Times or Era around this time.

[1931] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 26 OCTOBER 1880

MS: Yale. Extract: Davis, pp. 293–4. Published: B&C, II, p. 430.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 26th October 1880

My dear Seaver

The sight of your handwriting is the one cheerful circumstance in my present existence. You left the vilest weather behind you when you wisely returned to the happy country which has its Garfield and its Hancock [sic],<sup>1</sup> and which even contrives to keep the Irish quiet.

While you have “settled down into steady laziness”, I have settled down into rheumatism, agravated [sic] by printers. If I had only finished my new story, I should follow you across the American Channel. But I have not finished. So here I stay, and (well or ill) stick to my work.

I well remember that pleasant lunch<sup>2</sup> – celebrated over again in the N.Y. Times.<sup>3</sup> But as to my share in the conversation – that has slipped away from me into oblivion. You see I talked perpetually for six months in the U.S. – and very nearly succeeded in catching the “American accent”.

Goodbye, old friend, for the present. Be idle and happy – and accept Mrs Graves’s kindest remembrances, and mine. At existing dates this is all you can do for me.

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. James A. Garfield (1831–1881: DAB), 20th American president who defeated the Democratic candidate Winfield Scott Hancock (1824–1886: DAB) in the 1880 presidential election.
  2. A reference to the banquet in WC’s honour organized by Seaver at the Union Club in New York on 22 October 1873.
  3. Reference untraced.

[3301] TO E.A. BUCK, 6 NOVEMBER 1880

MS: Unknown. Facsimile: (New York) Spirit of the Times (27 November 1880), p. 425, our copy text.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C10, pp. 18–19.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 6th November 1880

Dear Mr Buck, Here is the title of the new story: –

=
Who Killed Zebedee?<sup>3</sup>

=
yours ever | Wilkie Collins

To Mr E.A. Buck

---

1. The facsimile appears on the front cover under the heading ‘A New Christmas Story, By Wilkie Collins’. On the leader page appears the following explanation: ‘Wilkie Collins, with characteristic kindness, sends us the title of the story he is writing expressly for THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT in such a form that we are able to present it to our readers in fac-simile. “Who killed Zebedee?” will be the literary question of the holidays.’ (Spirit of the Times, 27 November 1880, p. 434b). A couple of weeks earlier, readers had been promised ‘a letter, which we shall publish next week, from the greatest living novelist, Wilkie Collins, in which he declares that, like Maud S. and St. Julien [famous race horses], he intends “to beat the record” with his new story’ (13 November 1880, p. 388b). Presumably the promise was made before the letter was received.

2. WC uses printed stationery with his monogram ranged left. He writes in portrait format to complete the address and date lines, then turns the paper round to landscape format to write the rest of the letter. The facsimile itself is printed in landscape format.

3. There is in fact quadruple underlining in the middle of each of the three words.

[1932] TO CHARLES KENT, 22 NOVEMBER 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 284.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd November 1880

My dear Mr Kent,

I will second you at the Athenaeum with the greatest pleasure<sup>2</sup> – and I thank you for giving me this opportunity of replacing (in some degree) our dear lost friend.<sup>3</sup>

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Charles Kent Esq

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. WC had been a member of the club since 1861; Kent was eventually elected in June 1881.

3. The reference is to CD – see [1962] to Palgrave Simpson, 24 June 1881.

[1933] TO CHARLES KENT, 7 DECEMBER 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 284.

7th December 1880

My dear Mr Kent,

I have been away from London – and I have only today been able to place my name in the book as your seconder.<sup>2</sup> Being “on the spot” I have made inquiries about the possible date of election – and I am told that it may be, after all, doubtful if your turn will come during the present year – in consequence of the great number of names which accidentally precede your name in the book. In any case, you will receive ample notice – and you will have my best wishes and (if I am in London at the time) my best efforts, when the day of the ballot-boxes arrives.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Charles Kent Esq

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. At the Athenæum Club – see [1932] to Kent of 22 November 1880.

[1934] TO KATE FIELD, 14 DECEMBER 1880

MS: Boston (KF 110). Published: Whiting, pp. 404–405; B&C, II, p. 431.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14th December 1880

Dear Miss Field,

I am suffering from my native /winter/ climate, and I am writing a serial story (with printers and publishers waiting here, there, and everywhere, New York included, for their weekly instalments). Add to this, correspondence and “taking care of one’s health” – and you will, I hope, excuse me for not having more speedily answered your letter.

If you are not in a hurry – a very serious “if,” in these days – I will gladly search my archives for such few letters of poor dear Fechter as autograph-collectors have left to me. And, if there is anything I can tell you besides, you shall be welcome to some of the least melancholy recollections associated with my old friend.<sup>1</sup> But if the book must be published immediately, I fear I must wait for a new edition. The strain of this last story is heavy on me. But I hope to be free from my “Black Robe” in six weeks’ time.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins.

I have received a letter [del] from Mr Osgood, on the same subject. I write to acknowledge it -- and I venture to refer them to you for the things called “particulars”

---

1. Dated 18 January 1882, the result was published as ‘Wilkie Collins’s Recollection of Charles Fechter’, in Field’s Charles Albert Fechter (1882), pp. 154–173. The piece concludes:

I wish I could add to these last words some of the letters addressed to me by Fechter, which I have thought it right to preserve. Even these are not only too personal to be presented to the public, but they are, in many places, so expressed (unconsciously on his part, it is needless to say) as to be in danger of leading to erroneous impressions of him in the minds of strangers.

This memorial portrait of Fechter would not be improved as a likeness by borrowing his own words.

Writing to me on the death of a friend whom we both dearly loved, Charles Dickens says, ‘We must close the ranks and march on.’ On a dreary English winter day I close these pages, and escape from my recollections by turning to my work. (p. 173)

Fechter’s lonely and bitter decline into alcoholism had resulted in his death on 5 August 1879 at the farm which he had purchased near Quakertown, Pennsylvania.

[1935] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 23 DECEMBER 1880

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 285.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Thursday. 23rd Decr 1880

Dear Mr Rose,

This is “Canadian Packet” day.<sup>1</sup> So I send you a few more Revises of “The Black Robe” – comprising weekly Parts 15 to 18 inclusive.

On the 18th November last, I sent you a packet containing weekly Parts 8 to 14 inclusive. These I hope have reached you safely.

With sincere good wishes for the Christmas and the New Year.

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Excuse a short letter. I am still very hard at work. The story will run beyond 20 numbers. I only expect to finish in 24 or 25 weekly parts.

G.M. Rose Esqre

---

1. That is, the last day for posting letters to catch the mail steamer bound for New York with an overland connection to Toronto.

[3330] TO ABEL HEYWOOD JR,<sup>1</sup> 8 JANUARY 1881

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C11, p. 12.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. London

8th January 1881

Dear sir,

The article called “The Unknown Public” was first published in “Household Words” twenty years since<sup>2</sup> – and is now included in a republished collection of my Essays and Sketches called “My Miscellanies”.

Three editions, in different forms, have been published of “My Miscellanies”. The first is out of print.<sup>3</sup> The two other editions are published in one volume, as part of my collected works, by Chatto and Windus, Piccadilly London. The volume is sold, in the cheap form, at two shillings<sup>4</sup> – and in another one volume form at a rather higher price.<sup>5</sup>

After the time that has elapsed, some of the estimates of the number of readers of “penny-novel-journals” will now be found far below the mark.<sup>5</sup> In all other respects, my facts may be depended on.

I have not yet read my friend’s article<sup>7</sup> – being very busily occupied [just now].

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Abel Heywood Jnr Esqre

---

1. Abel Heywood Jr (1840–1931) was a publisher and bookseller in Manchester. He was the son of Abel Heywood (1810–1893: ODNB), publisher, bookseller, radical politician and twice Mayor of Manchester. See [3314] of 28 July 1860 to Abel Jr’s brother, G. W. Heywood.

2. Household Words, 21 August 1858, vol. XVIII, pp. 217–240.

3. The two-volume edition from Sampson Low, first issued in 1863.

4. The ‘yellowback’ edition in pictorial boards from Chatto & Windus, first issued in 1877.

5. The Illustrated Library Edition from Chatto & Windus, at six shillings with illustrations by Alfred Concanen, issued from 1875.

6. WC uses the term ‘penny-novel-journals’ throughout ‘The Unknown Public’ to refer to penny entertainment papers like the London Journal and Family Herald, whose circulations had increased markedly in the intervening decades.

7. Not identified.

[1936] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 12 JANUARY 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 5/8). Published: BGLL, III, p. 285–286.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 12th January 1881

Private

Dear and admirable Seaver

I approach you in two capacities. First, (though I am twelve days late) your friend wishes you with all his heart a happy New Year. Secondly, your faithful novelist puts a question to you (confidentially) as “Elector of New York” – and therefore a Royal Fountain-Head of information. What sort of paper does your Highness consider the New York (or Sunday) Mercury to be?

I have a letter from the proprietor Mr W<sup>m</sup> Cauldwell,<sup>1</sup> proposing to negotiate for advance-sheets of my next work or works – and telling me that he desires to be an exception to the ordinary rule of thieving foreign literary property in the Great U.S.A.<sup>2</sup>

I have written by this mail, to thank him – and to beg that he will submit some definite pecuniary proposal, which I engage on my side to consider and answer. If the matter ends with no proposal – Amen. If I receive an acceptable proposal, tell me (like a dear Good fellow) whether I can safely say Yes.

Always yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | My last two stories have been republished in F. Leslie<sup>3</sup> – by arrangement with me. I find them perfectly honourable in their dealings with me – but the terms are not high – and I am free for the future – if there is a higher bid.

Mr W.A. Seaver.

-
1. William Cauldwell (1824–1907), editor and proprietor of the New York Sunday Mercury.
  2. WC's pamphlet attacking what he saw as American literary piracy, Considerations on the Copyright Question. Addressed to an American Friend (1880), begins 'You were taking leave of me the other day, Colonel', suggesting that the American friend WC had in mind was Colonel William A. Seaver.
  3. Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper (New York), to which WC had sold the serial rights to The Fallen Leaves and The Black Robe.

[3393] TO JANE WARD, 12 JANUARY 1881

MS: Unknown. Sold: Potter & Potter (26 February 2022, lot 304, auction #111, Chicago). Published: A&C14, p. 20.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

12th January 1881

My dear Jane,

Four days since I ought to have thanked you for that charming token of remembrance and kindness.<sup>1</sup> My only excuse is that I am smothered in the folds of "The Black Robe". In plain English, I am so hard at work on the concluding chapters of a new story, that I am not even fit to write a letter when the day's task is done.<sup>2</sup> This is only an apology for a letter – but I delight in the lovely flowers – and I most sincerely thank you.

My love to all at home.<sup>3</sup>

Yours affectly | Wilkie Collins

Mrs Charles Ward

-
1. See [1589] to Jane Ward of 10 January 1876, for a similar letter of thanks for a birthday gift.
  2. The story was being serialized in The Sheffield and Rotherham Independent and other provincial newspapers and would conclude on 26 March, so WC was indeed writing the final chapters at this time to keep ahead of the press. See [1943] to Andrew Chatto, 3 March 1881, for more on WC's work on this story which by then was almost concluding. The story was published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus in April 1881.
  3. Charles and Jane Ward had eleven children and the 1881 Census taken on 3 April shows that four of them aged 21 to 32 were unmarried and living with them at 11 John Street, Westminster together with a butler, a cook, and three other servants (RG11-332-17-7).

[1937] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 27 JANUARY 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: B&C, II, pp. 431–432.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 27th January 1881

Dear Mr Rose,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter and for a B/E for £20 ,, ,, in payment of one half of the purchase money agreed on for the Canadian right of publishing "The Black Robe".<sup>1</sup>

The story will be completed periodically in the 26th weekly Part – published here, on March 26th next. A "syndicate" of country newspapers subscribe to buy the periodical right for Gt Britain. They are, I think, ten in [del] number – /my utmost limit in the agreement is twelve/<sup>2</sup> and they all publish of course on the same weekly date. The "Sheffield Independent" undertakes the payment of my fees – and one local London paper of great circulation, called "The South London Press" is among the subscribers. I get my own terms – and I have every right of republication in my own hands.

Frank Leslie's paper reprints in the U.S. They are a few days behind the weekly publication here. At present, I don't know whether we shall republish in London a week before the close of the periodical publication or not. But, if it will help you against the pirates, I see no objection to your /re/print appearing on the 19th March instead of the 26th. /I begin the last weekly part tomorrow. It is a great success with periodical readers here.<sup>3</sup> When I send you the remaining weekly parts to the end, I shall be able, I hope, to write more definitely as to our date of republication.

The thaw has come at last. I lament it. The harder the frost, the better I am. I ought to be with you in Canada.

Lord B. is the greatest impostor of modern times. In politics a glib tongue and no scruples will do wonders. But literature under false pretences, betrays the pretender. I sincerely believe that man to be the very worst novelist that has ever appeared in print,<sup>4</sup>

yours always | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The Black Robe was published as a serial in Rose-Belford's Canadian Monthly, November 1880 to June 1881, and as single volume of 308 pages from Rose-Belford in mid-1881. A copy of the book is found in the National Library of Canada. The money was credited to WC's bank account on 1 February as 'Bill on Bosanquet & Co.' (Courtts: WC).

2. Insertion written down WC's left-hand margin, the place of insertion flagged with a saltire cross.

3. Insertion written down WC's left-hand margin, the place of insertion flagged by a line and a square bracket.

4. Referring to Lord Beaconsfield (Benjamin Disraeli); Peters (p. 397) observes that WC was 'incensed' at the £10,000 offered for Disraeli's last completed novel, Endymion (1880).

[1938] TO CHARLES KENT, 3 FEBRUARY 1881

MS: Berg,<sup>1</sup> with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: Dickensian, 5:6 (June 1909), p. 161; BGLL, III, pp. 286–287, amended A&C3, p. 68.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
3rd February 1881

My dear Mr Kent,

It is not easy to resist the temptation to say Yes, to any request of yours – but, for consistency's sake, I must refrain from accepting the proposal of the amateur company. I can certainly not “count on my two fingers” the number of applications to perform “The Frozen Deep” which have reached me<sup>3</sup> – and which have been refused for one sufficient reason. No amateur company that I ever saw or heard of can perform the piece. I shall be reminded of the amateur company which did perform it. Let me see a new amateur company with two such born actors in it as Charles Dickens and Mark Lemon, and they shall have the piece directly – and what is more those two “leading men” ~~they~~ shall be offered Fifty pounds a week, each (supposing them to be amateurs of moderate income) to appear on the public stage, in two new parts of my writing.

Forgive a late reply to your kind letter. The printers are close behind me

Yours always truly | WC

Many thanks for the information about the British Museum. The piece shall be sent there, of course.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. In made-up souvenir volume, The Frozen Deep by Wilkie Collins, Performed at the Gallery of Illustration, 8 August 1857, formerly owned by W. Glyde Wilkins of Philadelphia

2. Directed to 'Charles Kent Esq | 1 Campden Grove | W.', postmarked as dated.

3. See, for example, [1504] of 18 January and [1520] of 13 March 1875, both to J. [Dennis] Powell.

4. Reference unidentified.

[1939] TO BARONESS DE STERN,<sup>1</sup> 8 FEBRUARY 1881

MS: Salomons. Published: BGLL, III, p. 287.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th Feby 1881

Dear Madam,

Your very kind note finds me – I am sorry to say – engaged to dinner tomorrow. I can only hope that you will accept my excuses.

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Julia née Goldsmid, Baroness de Stern (1823–99), who married Herman de Stern in 1845 and was mother of Alfred de Stern. See also Gasson & Baker, pp. 182–184.

[1940] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 12 FEBRUARY 1881

MS: Unknown. On sale: BMD Books, Huntsville, Texas (September 2004), laid in copy of The Woman in White, (2nd edn; New York: Harper, 1861).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 287.

Summary: Presentation card signed by WC and dated 12th February 1881, with a penciled note from his secretary.

---

1. The book itself apparently has an owner's signature on the flyleaf, dated '1861', though this might be unrelated to the recipient of the presentation card.

[1941] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 17 FEBRUARY 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: B&C, II, pp. 433–434.

90 Gloucester Place | London. W. | 17th February 1881

My dear Schlesinger,

Both your kind letters are received. I shut my eyes and see myself again, ascending the steps of that nice house, under protection of the consular pole, and hear your voice in the innermost regions when the door is opened, calling to me to come in. You have the rare merit, in a man, of bringing yourself personally before your correspondent, by writing as you talk. The women are masters in this art – but the men are few who can write their letters naturally.

But the main object of these few lines is to send you the autograph for Miss Blaine.<sup>1</sup> Her celebrated father it is needless to say I know by reputation. Miss Blaine must not have a common autograph. I have copied a few lines, on the next leaf, from “The Moonstone” – and signed them. Tear it off please, and send it to the lady with my compliments as a little contribution to her book. “George Eliot's” autograph is very difficult to find. She had some strange objection to writing it. But I don't despair of finding a letter or at least a signature – if you give me time to inquire. The one or two little notes I received from her, in past years, have long since been taken away by collectors.<sup>2</sup>

This is not a letter – it is only an excuse – an upside-down excuse, as I see by the printed address at the bottom instead of the top of the page. I will behave better next time.

Yours always truly WC<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Probably Alice Stanwood Blaine (1860–90), the eldest daughter of James Gillespie Blaine (1830–1893: DAB), distinguished Republican statesman, formerly Speaker of the House of Representatives and from 1876 a member of the Senate.

2. No letters from the authoress to WC are found in Haight's edition of The George Eliot Letters, nor in William Baker, The Letters of George Henry Lewes, Vol. III, with New George Eliot Letters (University of Victoria, 1999).

3. WC accidentally uses his printed stationery without monogram upside down, so that the closure and initials are written beneath the inverted printed address.

[1942] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 23 FEBRUARY 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 288.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.
February 23rd 1881

Dear Mr Rose,

I have just discovered a slip of the pen in the early part of “The Black Robe.” If you have not yet gone to press with the first sheets of the Canadian reprint, favour me by giving the enclosed note to your editor or reader.<sup>1</sup>

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

P.S. We have not yet begun to reprint in London.

W.M. Rose Eqre [sic]

---

1. The note is also found at Parrish and reads as follows, with the heading enclosed within a curving line:

For The republication in the Canadian Edition. | “The Black Robe”
See, = | “Book The First. | Chapter VI. The | Order of the dishes.” | =
Correction to be made in the 25th paragraph, counting from the beginning of the chapter: –
In place of, | “An only child now. She had a sister, who is dead.”
Read, “One of her two sisters is in a convent. The other is dead.”

In another hand is added: ‘Corrected. p (68) | P.L.’.

[1943] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 3 MARCH 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 288–289.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
3rd March 1881

Dear Mr Chatto,

I hope to finish correcting the newspaper proofs of my new story “The Black Robe” for republication tomorrow. The periodical publication terminates on the 26th of this month.<sup>1</sup>

Have you leisure-time enough to look at the proofs yourself, if I send them to your office on Saturday next? The story has taken so strong a hold of “periodical” readers here and in America<sup>2</sup> – and the subject is so new – that I am inclined to think the book (properly “pushed”) ought to meet with great success this time. Germany, Holland, and Sweden are already beginning to translate – and France, Italy, and Spain will follow.<sup>3</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The Black Robe was syndicated in a series of provincial weekly newspapers by Leader’s of the Sheffield Independent, the serialization terminating on 26 March in all cases traced – see Law, pp. 238–239.

2. In Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper.

3. The Dutch translation was published in 1881 by Belinfante Brothers of the Hague, while the German translation (Der Schwarze Rock, trans. J. von Bötticher) appeared from the Berlin house of Engelmann in 1882 – see GV.

[1944] TO BARONESS DE STERN, 5 MARCH 1881

MS: Clarke Collection. Published: BGLL, III, p. 289.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
Saturday. 5th March 1881

My dear Madam,

Many thanks for your kind note. It will give me the greatest pleasure to join the dinner party tomorrow at 8 o’Clock.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The Baroness de Stern

[1945] TO ALFRED DE STERN, 10 MARCH 1881

MS: Salomons. Published: BGLL, III, p. 289.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th March 1881

Dear Mr de Stern,

I have been obliged to give up Ramsgate – in the interests of my new book.<sup>1</sup> The publishers are anxious to produce this work at the earliest possible moment – and I must be within easy reach of the printers to read and return the proofs without delay. Excuse this late report of myself in consideration of my being very closely occupied, and believe me

Vy truly yours | WC

When will it suit you to see “Lear” – after Wednesday next? Booth is not advertised in any new part, so I assume that “Lear” will be [visible] during the whole of next week.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The Black Robe.

2. Edwin Booth (1833–93), the visiting American tragedian, played King Lear at the Princess’s Theatre from February 1881 (Cook, pp. 449–451).

[1946] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 11 MARCH 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 290.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th March 1881

Dear Mr Chatto,

Many thanks for your kindness in sending me a copy of our agreement in 1874. May we both live to renew it!<sup>1</sup>

I am having our “Black Robe” agreement drawn out. The printers need fear no delay in getting the proofs returned for press. I have only to look through them, and send them back. But I don’t know what day to mention as the publication day in the agreement. What do you say? The end of March? or the first week in April?<sup>2</sup>

I am sorry to trouble you to write again – but (literally) one line will do.

Yours truly | WC

---

1. As Andrew Chatto’s letter to WC of 9 March 1881 makes clear (Reading), this refers to the agreement signed on 19 November 1874 concerning the seven-year lease of the copyright of thirteen of WC’s earlier works, which would effectively expire at the end of March 1883.

2. Above and to the left of the printed address of WC’s letter, ‘Ap. 5’ is written in another hand, presumably that of Andrew Chatto, indicating the chosen date of publication. The formal agreement, now found at Reading, signed on 7 April 1881, indeed gives 5 April as the official day of publication. This was to mark the beginning of the seven-year lease on the volume rights.

[1947] TO ALEXANDER ANDREW KNOX,<sup>1</sup> 11 MARCH 1881

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 290–291.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th March 1881

My dear Knox,

I have heard pleasant reports of you from Pigott – and I shall be delighted to judge for myself of the “renewal of Your Youth” on the 19th at 7.30 as you kindly propose.<sup>3</sup> If you must leave us again, it is consoling to think that you will fumigate the ruins of Carthage – after the infectious sitting of that murderous old classical impostor who “posed” – as I firmly believe for his photograph – in the last moments of his existence.<sup>4</sup>

With love and kindest regards | Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Alexander Andrew Knox (1818–91: ODNB), journalist, barrister and magistrate, who had been called to the bar as a member of Lincoln’s Inn in 1844, two years before WC began his legal studies. Knox had retired from legal service in 1878, and in 1881 published The New Playground, or Wanderings in Algeria. For another reference to this ‘old friend’ see [1202] to Thomas Satchell of 29 February 1872.

2. Signed and directed to ‘Alexander A. Knox Esqr | 91 Victoria Street | S.W.’, postmarked as dated.

3. According to the ODNB, Knox had suffered a stroke in 1878.

4. We are unable to identify the ‘murderous ... impostor’, unless this represents a comedic version of what WC half-remembered of his schoolboy studies of Hasdrubal, the commander of the Carthaginian forces when the city was destroyed by the Romans at the end of the Third Punic War (around 146 BC), of whose character Polybius drew a very dark picture which Victorian historians tended to follow. Compare, for example, Chapter 20 of Reginald Bosworth Smith’s Carthage and the Carthaginians (London: Longmans, Green, 1878), where Hasdrubal is described as ‘the Marat and Robespierre in one of the reign of terror which he had established’ (p. 403). Bosworth Smith’s book is cited approvingly by Knox in The New Playground (p. 260).

[1948] TO WALTER GOODMAN,<sup>1</sup> 29 MARCH 1881

MS: Ross, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 291.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

29th March 1881

My dear Goodman

Thank you for kind letter, and for the card (which duly reached me). It has been impossible for me to see your pictures, or any pictures, this year. I am chained to my desk – just at the time when your labours are ending – by the necessity of correcting proofs of new book [sic] of mine which is to be finished early next month.<sup>3</sup>

Pray accept my excuses and my best wishes. I shall see your picture I hope on the walls of the Academy.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. This must be Walter Goodman (b. 1838), an artist who exhibited three portraits at the Royal Academy between 1872 and 1888, including that of Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany (youngest son of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert) in 1881.

2. Pre-paid, directed to ‘Walter Goodman | 44, Baker Street | W.’, and postmarked as dated.

3. The Black Robe, published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus in April 1881.

[1949] TO C. L. KENNEY,<sup>1</sup> 29 MARCH 1881

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 32). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 291–292.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

29th March 1881

Dear Kenney,

In my list of supernatural acquaintances, you are an especially welcome ghost. Pray be an indulgent ghost as well, and let hard work on a new book soon to make its appearance plead my excuse for a little delay in answering your kind letter.<sup>2</sup>

I have lately received certain proposals, relating to my new play, which, in the present unfinished condition of the work, I cannot as yet positively accept or reject. This is one obstacle to any definite reply on my part – and it is not the only obstacle, I am sorry to say.

I was out of England when Miss Kenney made her successful appearances at Drury Lane – and I have not since had an opportunity of seeing her act. Under these circumstances, I cannot venture to decide whether the character of “the leading lady” in my piece will enable her to do herself full justice. From what I have heard of your daughter, I am inclined to think that she would be better suited with a more youthful and artless part than the part in my present dramatic experiment.<sup>3</sup>

Before I close my letter, let me make two requests. First, that Miss Kenney will believe me when I assure her that I shall be sincerely glad to lend her a helping hand in her dramatic career – if not now, then at the first opportunity. Secondly, that you will help me to judge for myself of her finest capabilities as an actress, and (what is of equal importance to my mind) of the impression which she produces on her audience, by kindly letting me know when your daughter next acts in London, or within easy reach of London.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
C. L. Kenney Eqre

---

1. Charles Lamb Kenney (1821–81: ODNB), actor and dramatist, son of the dramatist James Kenney (1780–1849: ODNB), and father of the actress Rosa Kenney (see [2027] to her of 17 May 1882 and also [3331] to him of 9 July 1881).

2. The Black Robe.

3. Rank and Riches, on which WC had started to work in 1880, though it did not open until June 1883, at the Adelphi theatre.

[1950] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 30 MARCH 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 292–293.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th March 1881

Dear Mr Chatto,

Both my lawyer and I think that the proposed alteration in the agreement might be made to assert your interests more explicitly in the form which you will find on the next page.<sup>1</sup> We assume India and Australia to be the only colonial markets for the English publication in book-form – Canada being reserved.<sup>2</sup> If we are wrong, you have only to add any other colony not mentioned here.<sup>3</sup>

Yours truly | WC

On hearing that you approve, I will send you the agreement with the added words.

---

1. Referring to the agreement leasing the copyright of The Black Robe to Chatto & Windus. The latter half of the folding notepaper containing the proposed alteration has been torn off, but the completed agreement, dated 7 April 1881 and now found at Reading, contains the following marginal addition initialled by WC: ‘the right hereby reserved by Messrs Chatto and Windus and conceded by Wilkie Collins which permits the said Messrs Chatto and Windus to sell copies of “The Black Robe” in the Book form of publication in the Colonies of India Australia and New Zealand’.

2. Canada is reserved because of the arrangement with the Toronto publishers Rose-Belford to publish WC’s novel in volume form there.

3. Chatto & Windus presumably added the right to sell in New Zealand.

[1951] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY,<sup>1</sup> 2 APRIL 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19), damaged.<sup>2</sup> Summary: B&C, II, pp. 434–435. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 293–294.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 2nd April 1881

Dear Sir,

Your kind letter reached me yesterday evening – and, on this occasion, it has reached me in good time.<sup>3</sup> I have decided not to renew my past relations with the purchasers in Paris of some of my recent novels, including “The Haunted Hotel” – and I have, as yet, not had time [enough] even to think of any new arrangements.<sup>4</sup>

“The Black Robe” will be published here, in three volumes, on Tuesday or Wednesday next. For the right of translating a work of this length into French I receive Seventy pounds sterling (£70...-). This sum purchases my written “authority” to publish both periodically and in book-form.

If you are disposed to accept these terms, I am afraid I must trouble you – as I have, for the present, no agent in Paris – to refer me to some trustworthy person with whom I can communicate on the subject of registering the story, in its book-form, so as to protect the right of translation. This has hitherto always been done for me – and I am not quite sure whether one copy, or two copies, are required to complete the registration by French law.

Believe me, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

I ought perhaps to add that the “Tauchnitz” Edition of “The Black Robe”, reprinted from the book proofs, will shortly be published.<sup>5</sup>

To | Monsieur | Le Vicomte Pontarvice [sic] de Heussey

---

1. Vicomte Robert-Yves-Marie du Pontavice de Heussey (1850–93), ‘Breton author ... a cousin and biographer (1893) of Villiers de l’Isle-Adam ... the son of the exiled revolutionary poet Hyacinthe du Pontavice de Heussey, who died in London in 1876’ (John Philip Couch, George Eliot in France (Chapel Hill, NC: U. of North Carolina Press, 1967), p. 109). His translation of The Black Robe, mentioned in subsequent letters from WC, seems never to have appeared, though his version of The New Magdalen, Madeleine, pièce en 4 actes ... d’après Wilkie Collins, was published in Paris in 1887. Three of de Heussey’s books were found in WC’s Library (Baker 2002, p. 117).

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, which in this case has been cut off in a jagged square, damaging a small portion of the text on the verso. The word in square brackets in the opening paragraph is a conjectural reading of the lost text.

3. Presumably de Heussey had previously made an unsuccessful approach to WC concerning the possibility of translating his work.

4. Librairie Hachette & Cie of Paris, was WC’s main French publisher. Founded in 1826 it had published many of WC’s novels in French translation, from The Dead Secret (as Le secret (1858), trans. Émile Forgues) to The Haunted Hotel (as L’hôtel hanté (1881), trans. Henry Dallemagne). Despite WC’s decision Hachette went on to publish Jezebel’s Daughter (as La Fille de Jézebel (1887) trans. Henry Dallemagne), and “I Say No” (as Je Dis Non, (1888), in two volumes, trans. Camille Valdy). Hachette also published Blind Love (C’était Écrit (1892) trans. Hephell) after WC’s death. In total t published fourteen authorised translations, all issued in orange paper wrappers. Most recently, the firm had paid WC £70 on 1 September 1879 (Coutts: WC).

5. Todd & Bowden, p. 311.

[1952] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 7 APRIL 1881

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 294–295

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th April 1881

Dear Sirs,

I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your letter enclosing your Notes for 3, 6, & 9 months for £200 each – in accordance with the terms of our agreement.<sup>1</sup>

With this, you will receive my duplicate of the agreement duly executed – and your duplicate for signature. It is necessary that the marginal addition to each copy of agreement should be “initialled” by you and by me.<sup>2</sup>

The presentation copies which you kindly offer to me have not yet arrived.<sup>3</sup>

Vy truly yours | WC

To | Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. With their letter to WC of 6 April 1881, Chatto & Windus enclosed the agreed payment for The Black Robe in the form of three promissory notes on the City Bank. They were duly credited on 11 July (‘Note on Chatto Windus’), 11 October (‘Note on Messrs Chatto Windus’), and 11 January 1882 (‘Messrs Chatto Windus P/note’), (Coutts: WC).

2. See the note to [1950] to Andrew Chatto of 30 March 1881.

3. The Chatto & Windus letter to WC of 6 April 1881 mentioned that six author copies of the new novel had been sent.

[1953] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 7 APRIL 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 295.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th April 1881

Dear Sirs,

Ten minutes after I had sent to the post my letter containing our agreements<sup>1</sup> – the presentation copies arrived! I congratulate you on the discovery (which I had hitherto supposed to be impossible) of an entirely new design in binding – delightfully quaint and original.<sup>2</sup> Pray accept my best thanks.

Vy truly yours | WC
Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Referring to the two copies of the new agreement for The Black Robe, also signed on 7 April – see the previous letter to Chatto & Windus bearing the same date. Weedon (p. 180) summarizes the agreement now held at Reading as follows: ‘Agmt. Black Robe seven-year lease from 5 April. Terms: not to be retailed for less than 2/-. Pay Collins £600. If more 1000 copies of three-volume edition, pay author additional £25 for each 100 sold.’

2. For a description and illustration of the binding on the first English edition of The Black Robe, see Gasson, pp. 19–20.

[1954] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 7 APRIL 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Summary: B&C, II, p. 435. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 295–296.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 7th April 1881

Dear Mr Rose,

I beg to thank you for a Dft at three days for £20...- completing the purchase money agreed on for the Canadian edition of “The Black Robe”.<sup>1</sup> I am also obliged to you for the presentation copies – as clearly printed and as tastefully bound as usual with your publications. I am glad to hear that you like the story. We must all do what we can to keep those “black-robed” gentlemen within due limits. The French government has acted most wisely (in my opinion) in getting rid of the Jesuit enemies of the Republic<sup>2</sup>

We are all shivering here in a bitter East wind that has now been blowing for weeks. Thus far, I have been a lucky exception to the general rule of coughs and colds.

I most sincerely hope that the better trade-prospect may grow brighter and brighter. Honourable publishers live in a bad literary neighbourhood when they live near the U.S.A. I don’t blame the American people – it is the Government which is answerable for the shameful theft of the literary property of foreigners which degrades America in the eyes of Europe. There is talk, once more, of international copyright – with the trade interests of American publishers carefully reserved (!) I doubt if it will come to anything.<sup>3</sup>

With all good wishes | Ever truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Credited on 12 April as ‘Bill on Bosanquet & Co’ (Courtts: WC).

2. In 1880, under the new Third Republic, Jesuit schools had been outlawed in France.

3. For a lengthier statement of WC’s strong opinions on the issue of international copyright, see his Considerations on the Copyright Question. Addressed to an American Friend, issued as a sixteen-page pamphlet by Trübner in 1880; reprinted in the International Review (June 1880), in the Author (16 June 1890, as ‘Thou Shalt not Steal’). More recently, it has been reprinted as a pamphlet by the Wilkie Collins Society (1997).

[1955] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 8 APRIL 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 296–297.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th April 1881

Dear Mr Chatto,

Many thanks for your letter. It is all my fault. I ought to have sent the agreement to you for signatures when it was requested in March last.

On Monday afternoon next, I will call in Piccadilly at 4 P.M. – and bring my agreement with me. We will then make another marginal addition – say “April 1881” – and add more “initials.”<sup>1</sup>

Yours ever | WC

If this appointment does not suit you, pray choose your own afternoon next week. I am ashamed to give you more trouble about a matter which I ought to have set right.

Silence shall mean Monday next at 4.

---

1. Andrew Chatto’s letter to WC of 7 April 1881 (Reading) makes clear that the reference is to the agreement for The Black Robe. Chatto writes that the phrase ‘fifth of April next’ (originally drafted in March) now needs to be changed to ‘fifth of April last’ to prevent the unintended extension of the lease from seven to eight years. The contract at Reading does not in fact carry the marginal annotation WC suggests, though the word ‘next’ has been lightly erased.

[1956] TO [EVELINE M.] BURNBLUM,<sup>1</sup> 15 APRIL 1881

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 256; BGLL, III, p. 297.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 15th April 1881

Dear Miss Burnblum,

If my photograph will help me to express my thanks for your kind letter, here it is – heartily at your service.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie

---

1. Perhaps Eveline M. Burnblum – see to her from Kate Greenaway, 27 November 1882, in the de Grummond Collection at the University of Southern Mississippi. The 1881 Census records only one Eveline M. Burnblum, aged 25, born in Hampstead, a governess in the household of Charles A. Gale, Rector of Uppingham, Rutland (RG11/3188, p. 29). No US Census records this name.

[3367] TO CHARLES WARD, 16 APRIL 1881

MS: Lewis Collection (L2490). Published: A&C13, pp. 10-11.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16th April 1881

My dear Ward,

The enclosed Dft /for £60-“-“<sup>1</sup> arrived this morning.<sup>2</sup> It is for a French translation of “The Black Robe”.<sup>3</sup> I suppose “M. Jouin”...<sup>4</sup>

...authority to translate by return of post – this is why I bother you with my little inquiry.<sup>5</sup>

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Inserted over a caret.

2. On 22 April 1881, ‘Bill on Crédit Lyonnais’ for £60 was credited to WC’s bank account (Coumts: WC). This payment is the only one recorded from Crédit Lyonnais in the account.

3. The novel had just been published in three volumes in London by Chatto & Windus at the end of its serialization in various local newspapers in England from October 1880 to 26 March 1881 (Law, pp. 238-239). No French translation of the book has been traced, but WC refers to one six weeks earlier in [1943] to Andrew Chatto, 3 March 1881. He had also offered the rights to Robert du Pontavice de Heussey for £70 a fortnight earlier – see [1951] to him, 2 April 1881. A much later letter makes it clear that de Heussey was indeed his appointed translator but the French version had not yet appeared (see [2078] to Robert du Pontavice de Heussey, 3 November 1882).

4. Unidentified. The letter has been neatly torn across the page at this point so the remainder of the first side is missing.

5. Ward was WC’s banker at Coumts as well as his friend, so the enquiry may have concerned the time taken to clear the payment before WC could give the permission which had been requested by return of post. Wilkie writes to Ward on a Saturday so the matter is clearly urgent to him. It could be that M. Jouin had written on behalf of de Heussey with a lower offer of £60 which WC had presumably accepted.

[1957] TO ALFRED DE STERN, 27 APRIL 1881

MS: Salomons. Published: BGLL, III, p. 297.

Wednesday | 90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27th April 1881

Dear Alfred de Stern

I was indeed sorry to miss you when you kindly called here a second time. It will give me great pleasure to try that second dramatic pilgrimage with you tomorrow (Thursday).<sup>1</sup> You don't mention the dinner hour. Unless I hear from you to the contrary, I will be at the Garrick at 7. sharp.<sup>2</sup> The Tragedy does'nt begin till 8.15.<sup>3</sup>

Vy truly yours | WC

-
1. The first 'dramatic pilgrimage' must be that referred to in [1945] to de Stern of 10 March 1881.
  2. The word is triply underlined. WC had resigned as a member of the Garrick Club on 18 March 1865, but Alfred de Stern was a member from 1876 until 1900.
  3. The tragedy in question must have been the revival at the Drury Lane Theatre of Virginus (1820) by Sheridan Knowles, which, according to the notice in the Times, was the only such performance to start at 8.15. There was a favourable review in the Times of 27 April 1881, p. 9f.

[3059] TO HENRY PHILLIPS JR,<sup>1</sup> 7 JUNE 1881

MS: HSP (Gratz Collection 11/15). Published: A&C3, p. 54.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th June 1881

Dear Sir,

Pray excuse this late acknowledgment of your interesting translation of Chamisso's "Faust."<sup>2</sup> I am slowly recovering from severe illness – and I am (literally) only able to write "a few lines".

With many thanks for the addition which you have kindly made to my library,

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Doctor Henry Phillips Jr | &c &c &c

-
1. Henry Phillips Jr (1838–1895) of Philadelphia, author on archeological and numismatic subjects and translator from German, Spanish and Italian.
  2. Adelbert von Chamisso (1781–1838) originally published his interpretation of the Faust legend in 1804. A presentation copy of Phillips's translation, Faust: A Dramatic Sketch (Philadelphia: 1874), of which only one hundred copies were printed for private circulation, was found in WC's library (Baker 2002, p. 88).

[1958] TO JANE BIGELOW, 8 JUNE 1881

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, III, p. 298, amended A&C5, p. 20.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 8th June 1881

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

Don't think I can forget you, while I have such a thing as a memory.

I am an object for your sympathy – I write these few lines in bed, after a month's torment with rheumatic gout. When I shall get out of my room depends on weather and strength – and I don't know what besides. The seaside air is to cure me when I can endure a railway journey of an hour or two.

Thank you for your kind letter – and forgive this incoherent and short reply. I keep up my spirits. But the pain and the remedies have left me too weak to say more just yet,
Ever yours | WC

[1959] TO CHARLES KENT, 20 JUNE 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 435.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup> | 20th June 1881

My dear Mr Kent,

All that I can do for you by writing to my friends at the Club (sadly reduced in number by death) I will gladly do. Under happier circumstances, I should have personally looked after your interests. But adverse Fate has tortured me with rheumatic gout for weeks past – and my recovery is [del] so slow (or rather my weakness is so great) that I can only crawl up and down the sunny side of the way for half an hour, and return to the sofa with legs that tremble as if I was ninety years old!

With sincerest wishes for your “triumphant entry” on Monday next,<sup>3</sup>
always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq. | Campden Grove | W.’, with postmark obscured.

2. WC uses printed paper without monogram.

3. Presumably to the Athenæum Club – see [1932], [1933] to Kent of 22 November and 7 December 1880.

[1960] TO NINA LEHMANN, 22 JUNE 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 257; B&C, II, p. 436.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

22nd June 1881

Two words, dearest Padrona, to thank you for those kind pencil lines on your card. The inflammatory and painful /part/ of this last gouty visitation is at an end. Weakness is now the obstacle to be got over – my knees tremble on the stairs, and my back aches after half an hour’s walking – no, tottering – on the sunny side of the street. I am told to “drive out” – but I won’t. An “airing in a carriage” is (to me) such a depressing proceeding that I am ready to burst out crying when I only think of it. I will get stronger on my wretched old legs – and report myself in Berkeley Square as soon as I have ceased to be a human wet-blanket.<sup>2</sup>

Yours affly | WC

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. Referring to the Lehmann’s London residence at 15 Berkeley Square.

[1961] TO KEMSLEY & ST KINGTON,<sup>1</sup> 22 JUNE 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 298–299.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd June 1881

Dear Sirs,

I am much obliged to you for your kind letter.

Excepting my first work of fiction – on a classical subject, unsuitable for newspaper publication, and for Australian readers<sup>3</sup> – all my novels have been periodically published in Melbourne at one time or another. I can only regret that I have really nothing by me to offer to the new Journal. If I am to make my appearance in your columns, we must look to the future – and then you will have achieved a great success, and will not want me!

With renewed thanks | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Kemsley & St Kington

---

1. Presumably the proprietors of a new Australian newspaper. Since the firm has not been traced in the appropriate volumes of Mitchell's Newspaper Press Directory, their 'new Journal' may not have been successful.
2. Apart from the addressee line and signature, written in an unknown hand.
3. Antonina.

[1962] TO JOHN PALGRAVE SIMPSON, 24 JUNE 1881

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, III, p. 299.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th June 1881

My dear Palgrave Simpson

If you happen to be in the neighbourhood of the Athenaeum on the day of the ballot – Monday next, between 4 and 6 – will you oblige me by voting for my friend, Mr Charles Kent? I have seconded him – in the place of poor Dickens.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Palgrave Simpson Esq

[3331] TO C. L. KENNEY, 9 JULY 1881

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C11, p. 13.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th July 1881

My dear Kenney,

For weeks past, one of my eyes has been disabled by rheumatic gout. In the day-time I am able to get out for a little while with a "patch" on – when the weather is in my favour. But the doctor won't hear of my confronting gaslight and night air.

I can only thank you for giving me the chance of seeing Miss Kenney act – and regret that I have lost another opportunity. Let me have "another trial", and believe me

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins
You will, I am sure, make my apologies to Miss Kenney

---

1. WC did finally see her act on 15 May 1882 (see [2027] to Rosa Kenney, 17 May 1882).

[1963] TO JANE BIGELOW, 12 JULY 1881

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, III, p. 299.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 12th July 1881

Dear Mrs Bigelow

Thank you most sincerely for the charming flowers – and for your kind remembrance of a miserable victim to Gout.

I have suffered a relapse – and I am again imprisoned in the house. If you are driving this way, any afternoon – and if you don't mind seeing a man with a bandaged eye – do "look in" here before you return to the U.S., and let me thank you personally.

I would have written yesterday – but a severe attack of pain in "the bad eye" quite disabled me.

Always yours truly | WC

[1964] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 13 JULY 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 299–300

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th July 1881

My dear Mr Chatto,

I heartily wish I could accept your kind invitation<sup>1</sup> – but the obstacle of illness is not to be overcome. For a month past, I have been suffering from rheumatic gout. Just as I was recovering “a relapse” has declared itself – and I am again a prisoner in the house.

Pray accept my thanks and excuses. When I do get out again, I will call in Piccadilly.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esq

---

1. Chatto’s presumably private invitation is not found in the Chatto & Windus letter-books.

[1965] TO JAMES R. OSGOOD,<sup>1</sup> 15 JULY 1881

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 300.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Friday 15th July 1881

My dear Sir,

Severe illness will, I hope, plead my excuse for not having long since communicated with Miss Kate Field.<sup>2</sup> I am now slowly recovering – and I hope to be well enough to have the pleasure of seeing you here – if you will favour me with a call at 2.30 on Tuesday afternoon next.

If this appointment will suit you, pray don’t trouble yourself to write again. If not, you have only to choose your own day (at 2.30) after Tuesday next.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

James R. Osgood Esqr

---

1. James Ripley Osgood (1836–92: DAB), distinguished Boston literary publisher of authors such as Longfellow, Twain, Howell and Whitman, with a rather chequered business career. He began as a clerk for Ticknor & Fields, became a partner in 1864, before reforming the firm as James R. Osgood & Co. in 1870. This company was dissolved briefly from 1878 and finally went bankrupt in 1885. Then Osgood was employed by Harper & Brothers of New York, until setting up in business again as Osgood, McIlvaine & Co. in 1891, not long before his death. Georgina Hogarth’s selection of The Letters of Charles Dickens to Wilkie Collins was published by Osgood, McIlvaine in London in 1892. WC probably first met the American in Boston in 1873–74, though at this point Osgood is clearly on a visit to London.

2. The American actress and feminist. WC’s ‘Recollections of Charles Fechter’ appeared in her Charles Albert Fechter, published by James R. Osgood & Co. in Boston in 1882. See [1934] to her of 14 December 1880.

[1966] TO CHARLES KENT, 27 JULY 1881

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 258; B&C, II, p. 436.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

27th July 1881

My dear Mr Kent,

Only a line to convey to you my thanks and my excuses. Calomel and colchicum<sup>2</sup> so completely “floored me” on the day when you kindly called that I was too pitiable and speechless an object to be presented to the view of my friends. I am now getting better again (after my ~~suff~~ relapse) – but so weak that even the writing of this little note is an effort.

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. WC uses printed paper without monogram.
2. Calomel is mercury chloride, Hg<sub>2</sub>Cl<sub>2</sub>, a laxative. Colchicum is a herbal medicine from the plant Meadow Saffron, then used widely in the treatment of gout.

[1967] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 2 AUGUST 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 301–302.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd Aug<sup>t</sup> 1881

Dear Sirs,

I am collecting my short stories – not yet republished – having an idea of stringing them together on a new thread of interest.<sup>1</sup> My stories in “Belgravia” have either been mislaid here – or have been sent to readers who have never returned them. On the next leaf, I have written the titles – and have guessed at the dates. Will you forgive the trouble I am giving you, and direct one of the clerks to consult the files of the Magazine?

Has Mr Chatto left town? If not will he kindly tell me, how long he will be visible at the office. I hope to be soon well enough to call in Piccadilly.

Faithfully yours Wilkie Collins

To | Messrs Chatto & Windus

“The Black Robe”

There is a trifling error to be corrected in “The Black Robe” (a legal error) before the cheap edition is published. My lawyer is coming this week to instruct me how to set it right.<sup>2</sup>

Belgravia

Short Stories by Wilkie Collins.

“The Duel in Herne Wood” | (?) January 1878 (?)<sup>3</sup>

“The Captain’s Last Love” | (?) January 1876 – or 1877 (?)<sup>4</sup>

“A Shocking Story” | (?) Midsummer Number<sup>5</sup>

=

Query: –

Was there another story of mine called | “Fatal Fortune” | published in Belgravia. (?)<sup>6</sup>

If there are any other short stories of mine I have forgotten them.<sup>7</sup>

---

1. In fact, this projected new collection of short stories did not appear until May 1887, in the form of Little Novels.

2. See [1969] to Andrew Chatto of 10 August 1881.

3. WC’s guess is correct. This and the following two story titles have been ticked in pencil at the left, presumably indicating that they have been located by someone at the Chatto & Windus office.

4. In fact in January 1877.

5. In fact in the Belgravia Annual at Christmas 1878.

6. ‘Fatal Fortune’ was in fact first published in All The Year Round, 17–24 October 1874. It had already been reprinted in Britain, as ‘A Mad Marriage’ in the 1875 Chatto & Windus edition of Miss or Mrs? and Other Stories in Outline.

7. In fact no other short stories by WC had appeared in Belgravia to this date.

[1968] TO CHARLES H. WILLES,<sup>1</sup> 8 AUGUST 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), formerly laid in The Fallen Leaves, 1879, I, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Extract: Griest, p. 54; Davis, p. 291. Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Parrish & Miller, pp. 111–112; Coleman, p. 259; BGLL, III, pp. 302–303, amended A&C3, p. 68.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 8th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1881

Dear Sir,

I am sure you will forgive this late (and brief) reply to your kind letter – when I tell you that I am only slowly recovering from a severe attack of rheumatic gout.

I have felt sincerely pleased in hearing of the impression produced on you by “The Fallen Leaves”.

Thus far, the second part of the story only exists in my “rough notes”. I am waiting to write the work itself (for one among many reasons) until the “First Series” has been circulated in the third, and cheapest, form of publication, among a far wider circle of readers than any to which the book has yet appealed.<sup>3</sup> You can hardly form an idea of the astonishment and indignation with which the character of “Simple Sally”<sup>4</sup> has been received in certain prudish and prejudiced quarters. On this account, I am waiting (with some confidence, inspired by previous experience) for the Verdict of the People.<sup>5</sup>

Thanking you for your letter,

I remain | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Charles H. Willes Esqre

---

1. Unidentified fan in Ireland. Davis describes him mistakenly as ‘an American admirer’ (p. 291).

2. Postmarked as dated; originally directed to ‘Charles H. Willes Esqre | Camden Fort | Crosshaven | Co Cork | Ireland’, though the second two lines of the address have been struck through and the letter redirected twice, in different hands, first to ‘Clonakilty’ and then to ‘Carlisle Fort | Whitegate’.

3. The yellowback edition of the novel appeared from Chatto & Windus in summer 1881, but the proposed sequel to the story was never completed.

4. The prostitute heroine of the novel.

5. Most reviews of The Fallen Leaves were decidedly negative (see Page, pp. 2, 205–206).

[1969] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 10 AUGUST 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 303.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1881

Dear Mr Chatto,

I am making the necessary (legal) corrections in “The Black Robe”<sup>1</sup> – and shall send them to you in a day or two, with my best thanks for the copy of the book<sup>2</sup> – and for “The Professor’s Wife”. There is really merit in the story – with a regrettable absence of mental discipline and discretion.<sup>3</sup>

My new novel (I don’t mean the collected stories) is beginning to want to get on paper. If you are still free for January 1882, do you see any objection for waiting for a week before you decide on the choice of a story?<sup>4</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. First mentioned in [1967] to Chatto of 2 August, the legal errors in the serial version of The Black Robe concern the legal concept of land placed in ‘mortmain’, that is, land held inalienably by an ecclesiastical body, which was prohibited in a series of acts beginning in 1279 known as the Statutes of Mortmain – see [1975], WC’s subsequent letter to Chatto of 9 September 1881.

2. Unidentified, but possibly relating to the legal difficulties in The Black Robe.

3. Leonard Graham’s novel The Professor’s Wife, published in a single volume from Chatto & Windus in 1881.

4. WC’s first mention of what would become Heart and Science. Chatto & Windus replied on 11 August that the January commencement date was too early, and the novel was eventually serialized both in Belgravia from August 1882 to June 1883 and in a syndicate of weekly newspapers, from July 1882 to January 1883, with publication in three volumes by Chatto & Windus in April 1883 (see Steve Farmer and Graham Law, “‘Belt-and-Braces’ Serialization: The Case of Heart and Science”, WCSJ, NS 2 (1999), pp. 61–71).

[1970] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 18 AUGUST 1881

MS: Reading (tipped into Outgoing Letter-book 14). Published: BGLL, III, p. 304.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1881

Private

Dear Mr Chatto,

Here is “The Black Robe” made (legally) water-tight. The corrections will be found on Pages 72, 73, 74. Vol III.<sup>1</sup>

My doctor knows better than to forbid me from writing – but he strongly opposes my beginning a new serial story just yet. The result is that the periodical publication of my next novel will be deferred (if I and my country “syndicate” agree on terms), until August 1882.<sup>2</sup> Will this post-poned date suit you? One line to tell me will oblige,<sup>3</sup>

Yours vry truly | WC

P.S. | I am not sure of remembering correctly what is your average rate of payment for the right of periodically publishing serial stories in your Magazine. Is it one pound (or one guinea) for each printed page?<sup>4</sup>

---

1. The single page of manuscript containing the most detailed corrections has survived and is now in the Lewis Collection. Under the heading “The Black Robe” Vol. III. Page 73. Insert the following copy in place of the dted paragraph at Page 73.’, there follows the passage which appears first in the single-volume ‘Piccadilly’ edition of the novel, in Book 5, ch. 3, ‘The Harvest is Reaped’, from ‘Father Benwell smiled sadly.’ to “... let us have some wine.” The manuscript passage itself bears a number of emendations and there is a further note in the top right-hand corner which reads ‘To the Printer: – See also, corrections at Pages 72 and 74 of Vol. III. WC’. Presumably WC also sent Chatto a copy of the final volume of the triple-decker edition of the novel with these emendations.

2. Concerning the periodical publication of Heart and Science, see Farmer & Law, “‘Belt-and-Braces’ Serialization’, WCSJ, NS 2 (1999).

3. Chatto & Windus replied on the same day agreeing to the deferral.

4. The Chatto & Windus reply confirmed that the offered rate was one pound per printed page in Belgravia.

[1971] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 18 AUGUST 1881

MS: Reading (tipped into Outgoing Letter-book 14). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 304–305.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th August 1881

Dear Sirs,

A line to thank you for your letter of today’s date and for the perfectly satisfactory arrangement proposed in it.<sup>1</sup> As soon as I have completed my negotiation with the country newspapers, I will send you a Draft of agreement. In the meantime, let me add that the right of republishing my next year’s novel in book-form shall be secured to you on the same terms as those arranged between us for “The Black Robe”.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me | Dear Sirs, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs | Chatto & Windus

---

1. See notes to WC’s earlier letter to Andrew Chatto bearing the same date.

2. The agreement concerning Heart and Science was eventually signed on 3 April 1883 (Reading).

[1972] TO GEORGE MANVILLE FENN,<sup>1</sup> 2 SEPTEMBER 1881

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins I B/45). Published: Coleman, p. 260; BGLL, III, p. 305.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 2nd September 1881

Dear Mr Manville Fenn,

By all means, make the proposed extract from my books.<sup>2</sup>

I must leave the choice of the extract (with perfect confidence) to your decision. After some months of suffering from gouty inflammation of the eyes, I am reported to be cured. But the doctor still forbids me to use my eyes either for reading or writing. I may snatch a minute or two at a time – and then I must put down the pen or the book, and look at objects in general, the larger the better.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
G. Manville Fenn Esqre

---

1. Prolific journalist and novelist, formerly editor of Cassell's Magazine – see [1183] to him of 31 December 1871. In his 'The Art of Mystery in Fiction', North American Review, 15 (1893), pp. 432–438, Fenn criticized WC's characterization but praised his 'ingenuity of construction' (cited in Coleman, p. 260).

2. We have not been able to identify what the extract chosen was and where, or indeed whether, it was in fact published. Since the letter to Fenn is found at Texas in an album of letters addressed to Cassell, Peter, & Galpin, it seems likely that the publication was from Cassell's.

[1973] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 3 SEPTEMBER 1881

MS: Berg. Extract: Davis, pp. 23, 294. Published: Winter 1909, pp. 218–219; B&C, II, p. 437.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>
London, | September 3rd 1881.

My Dear Mr Winter,

If you have long since dismissed me from memory, you have only treated an inexcusably bad correspondent as he deserves. When I was at school, – perpetually getting punished as “a bad boy,” – the master used to turn me to good moral account, as a means of making his model scholars ashamed of their occasional lapses into misconduct: “If it had been Collins I should not have felt shocked and surprised. Nobody expects anything of him. But You!! &c &c”

In the hope that you, by this time, “expect nothing of Collins” I venture to appeal to your indulgence. In the intervals of rheumatic gout I still write stories – and I send to you my last effort, (called “The Black Robe”) by registered book-post, in the belief that you will “give me another chance,” and honour me by accepting the work. It is thought to be the best thing I have written for some time past, on the European side of the Atlantic – in Roman Catholic countries as well as in Protestant England. And it is memorable to me as having produced a freely offered gift of forty pounds from one of the pirates who has seized it on the American side!!!<sup>2</sup>

I write with your new edition, – so kindly sent to me, – in the nearest book-case.<sup>3</sup> In the Poems I rejoice to see my special favorites included in the new [del] publication – “The Ideal,” “Rosemary” and the exquisitely tender verses which enshrine the memory of “Ada Clare.”<sup>4</sup>

I have heard of you from Miss Cavendish. May I hope to hear of you next – from yourself?
Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. This is likely to be George Munro, in whose (New York) Seaside Library The Black Robe appeared in mid-1881 as #990.

3. The Poems of William Winter (Boston: 1881), which was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 161).

4. ‘The Ideal’ and ‘Rosemary’ had both appeared in Winter's Thistledown: a Book of Lyrics (1878); see WC's comments on them in [1763] to Winter of 5 August 1878.

[1974] TO JANE BIGELOW, 6 SEPTEMBER 1881

MS: Bigelow. Summary: B&C, II, pp. 437–438. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 306–307.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London. | 6th September 1881

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

Your charming letters – and the dry flowers, now in my own special drawer of my own special table – have been my most welcome visitors. I see you again in my study, a vision of bright robes and flowers and inexhaustible kindness, presented to a miserable wretch who could only look at you with one eye. For awhile air and water kept the roses from a premature death – until the fatal day came when they fell on the table, and were carried away by my housemaid for burial.<sup>1</sup> I have not dared to ask how they were buried. My idea is that they were “cremated” in the kitchen fire – a form of burial I should like to secure for myself, when I fall in pieces like the flowers, but the expense is too great. One has to be taken to Germany. British liberty does’nt include the burning of British bodies yet.

I am so glad to hear that the story helped to amuse you on the wearisome sea-voyage. If I could only have been present to hear young “Kansas” holding forth,<sup>2</sup> my highest ambition would have been satisfied. Some tremendous letters from Roman Catholics have reached me about “the Black Robe.” They are all shocked that I should not know better than to doubt the Jesuits – the most harmless and innocent assembly of Gentlemen on the face of the earth.

I am at last well on the way to recovery. Both my eyes see again as well as ever. But they are so weak, after what they have gone through, that I am forbidden to use them – except for a few hours by daylight. So when evening comes, I sit and think – and smoke when I am tired of thinking – and wish I was on my way again to my dear United States, when I can neither smoke or think any longer – and then my dear old dog comes, looks at me, wags his tail, and groans. This means in his language, “now, Wilkie, it’s time to go to bed.”<sup>3</sup> So the evening closes. And my letter must be like the evening – and must close too.

Give my love to all “at home” – and take as much of it for yourself as Mr Bigelow may sanction. And, oh, tell Flora that her old friend is as fond of pets as she is, and feels for those bereavements with all his heart. If she can find the wretch who threw the cat overboard,<sup>4</sup> when I come to America, I will invent “a plot” for drowning him – without the slightest fear of discovery.

Believe me Dear Mrs Bigelow | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I am going to the seaside – as soon as the present unmercifully cold and rainy weather will let me. More news from Highland Falls (this is a gentle hint) will be forwarded to me, wherever I may go.

---

1. Concerning the flowers, see [1963] to Jane Bigelow of 12 July 1881.

2. The Bigelows have recently sailed back to the United States, and here WC presumably refers to an anecdote of their sea voyage, recounted in the letter to which he replies.

3. Of Tommy, WC’s Scotch terrier, who features in his short story ‘My Lady’s Money’ of 1878, in which he acts as detective, and helps to unravel the mystery (Clarke, pp. 178–179).

4. Again presumably an anecdote from the Bigelows’ voyage home.

[1975] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 9 SEPTEMBER 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 307–308.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th September 1881

Dear Mr Chatto,

I return the proofs for press – with many thanks. The corrections at page 244 (intended to shorten the over-running lines) can be followed or not, as may be most convenient to the printers.

The other corrections (at pages 254, 307, and 308) trifling as they are in appearance, are necessary consequences of the infernal “Statutes of Mortmain” – and are therefore of some importance.<sup>1</sup>

I am free to publish the American Christmas Story in Belgravia,<sup>2</sup> on (what our friend the Colonel would call) “the English side.”<sup>3</sup> The MS is to be ready for you on the 1st of October next. Wednesday next I hope to get to Ramsgate, and to pick up an idea for you at sea.

Ever yours | WC

You kindly offered me some copies of “The Fallen Leaves”, in the new popular form:<sup>4</sup> If I may have five copies at your entire convenience they will make up the half dozen, with the copy I took home – and I shall be obliged to you for the best book I have written since “Man and Wife”.

-
1. See the note to [1969] to Chatto of 10 August 1881.
  2. ‘Your Money or Your Life’, published in London in the Belgravia Annual at Christmas 1881, but not in the end, as planned, in New York in the Spirit of the Times – see [1986] to Chatto & Windus of 3 November 1881.
  3. Chatto and WC’s mutual friend Colonel William Seaver.
  4. That is, in the two-shilling ‘yellowback’ edition, the cheapest version of WC’s novels then available from Chatto & Windus. The publication of the yellowback edition of The Fallen Leaves was announced in the Athenæum on 7 May 1881 (see Topp, III).

[1976] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 10 SEPTEMBER 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 308.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9 10th Sept: 1881

Dear Mr Chatto,

A line to say that the presentation copies have reached me safely – and to return my best thanks. Your kind letter also received.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Chatto & Windus had replied on the same day to [1975] to Andrew Chatto of 9 September, enclosing five author copies of the yellowback edition of The Fallen Leaves.

[1977] TO CHARLES KENT, 21 SEPTEMBER 1881

MS: Fales, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 438–439.

Ramsgate | 21st September 1881

My dear Kent

(Let us drop “Mistering each other) – and let me report myself to be winning back the lost strength, not very quickly, but steadily as I hope and believe. My eyes are still weak enough to want an umbrella over them when I swallow my sea-air in the balcony here. Time however will put this defect right. As for the “dolce far niente”<sup>2</sup> I am too lazy even to write my letters – and I begin to believe myself to have been an author in some former state of existence.

Lord Lytton kindly brought the “Brutus” play to me while I was in town. And, in spite of my weak eyes, I read with delight and admiration that masterly work. As dramatic poetry it is, to my mind, far in advance of “The Lady of Lyons” and “Richelieu” – and as an acting play there is such true power in the characters and the “situations” that I could see the scenes on the stage while I was reading them. And this masterpiece remains unacted!<sup>3</sup> If [del] you want to know why, look at the theatrical advertisements in the newspaper – and don’t forget that the theatres are in a state of unexampled prosperity.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

My plans for staying here are still unsettled. All letters forwarded from Gloucester Place
To | Charles Kent Esqre

-
1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esqre | 1 Campden Grove | Kensington | London W’. Postmarked ‘Spt | 21 | 81’, and, on the back, ‘LONDON | SP 22 | 81 | 9’. WC uses paper watermarked ‘JOYNSON | SYNDICATED FINE’.
  2. Proverbial Italian phrase meaning ‘sweetness of doing nothing’, often written with the definite article as ‘Il dolce far niente’, the title of William Holman Hunt’s portrait of Annie Miller.
  3. Bulwer-Lytton’s unpublished tragedy Brutus (1847), was eventually performed in 1885 as The Household Gods, produced by Wilson Barrett at the Princess’s Theatre; see the Earl of Lytton, The Life of Edward Bulwer, First Lord Lytton (1913), II, p. 96. Bulwer’s The Lady of Lyons was first performed in 1838, his Richelieu in 1839.

[1978] TO JAMES R. OSGOOD, 22 SEPTEMBER 1881

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 308–309.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | September 22nd 1881 | Ramsgate
(Letters always forwarded from London.)<sup>1</sup>

Dear Mr Osgood,

My patience has been severely tried – and, worse still, I am obliged to make demands on your patience next. After I had the pleasure of seeing you in London,<sup>2</sup> the gout got the better of me and of the doctor for the third time. Only a few days since, I gathered strength enough to bear the short journey to the seaside. I write to you from Ramsgate – beginning at last to feel the benefit of the change of air.

You will now know why this letter of apology comes to you, instead of my promised recollections of poor Fechter.<sup>3</sup> Until I reached this place, I have not even been able to answer my letters by dictation. With the brighter prospect now before me, my next communication will I hope contribute a few pages to the contemplated Memoir, and will not be much longer delayed.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, with the date, true address and the parenthetical comment added below the valediction and signature.

2. See [1965] to Osgood of 15 July 1881.

3. WC's 'Recollections of Charles Fechter', appearing in Kate Field's Charles Albert Fechter (Boston: Osgood, 1882), pp. 154–173.

[1979] TO RICHARD D'OYLY CARTE,<sup>1</sup> 8 OCTOBER 1881

MS: Fales, damaged. Published: BGLL, III, p. 309.

Ramsgate | 8th October 1881

Dear Mr D'Oyly Carte

One line to thank you for your kind card invitation – and to [leave] absence from London to plead my excuse for ... [remainder of text excised]

Good wishes for the success of The New Theatre,

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Richard D'Oyly Carte (1844–1901), whose New Savoy Theatre in the Strand – the first to be entirely lit by electricity – opened with Gilbert and Sullivan's Patience in 1881.

[1980] TO GEORGE WILMAN,<sup>1</sup> MID-SEPTEMBER–MID-OCTOBER 1881<sup>2</sup>

MS: Unknown. Extract: 'Death', p. 3b, our copy text; Robinson 1951, p. 300 (with source and recipient unidentified); Davis, p. 294 (with Daily Telegraph as source, and recipient identified as George Wilman, p. 334n22); B&C, II, p. 439 (using Robinson as copy text, with recipient unidentified and dated 'Autumn 1881').

We are the Corsican brothers of human infirmity.<sup>3</sup> For three months the gout has again tortured my eyes – and here I am recovering within two miles of you! Are you well enough to get here by railway (if walking is still bad for you) and take your luncheon, on any day you like, from two to 2.30? I could then answer your questions in the pleasanter way<sup>4</sup> – besides sparing my eyes letter-writing at length in the interests of some light work which I am just able to do after four months of utter literary eclipse. Why don't I go to you at Broadstairs? It is the most dreadful place in the world to me now. The ghosts of my brothers Dickens, Augustus Egg, and of two other dearly-loved friends<sup>5</sup> – who all lived with me at Broadstairs – now haunt the place. Two years ago I tried to go to Broadstairs. At the first view of ‘the Fort House’ the old and dear associations completely overwhelmed me and I turned back to Ramsgate.

---

1. Author of Sketches of Living Celebrities (London: Griffith & Farran, 1882), consisting of brief pen portraits of twenty-eight contemporary celebrities, all male. The book is divided into sections on actors, authors, dramatists and artists, with the sketch of WC found at the head of the second, pp. 55–59. As its frontispiece the volume has one of the Sarony portraits of WC, wearing a fur coat over his suit, signed ‘Wilkie Collins. 1882.’ On the day after WC died, the passage above appeared in the Daily Telegraph in a section of his obituary entitled ‘From One Who Knew Him’, following extracts from two letters to Rudolf Lehman (see [3055], [3058] to him of 10 December 1879, and [April–June] 1880). The passage here is introduced by the following remarks: ‘Towards the latter end of 1881 the novelist had a bad attack of gout in the eyes, which compelled him to rest for some months. He was then living at Nelson-crescent, Ramsgate – his favourite watering place – and, in writing to a friend, who was at that time recruiting his own health at Broadstairs, he says, ...’. There is no other evidence, however, that the relationship between WC and George Wilman was one of friendship rather than business.

2. Adjacent letters limit to this period WC’s stay in Ramsgate following his severe attack of gout.

3. Referring to Don Boucicault’s popular revenge drama The Corsican Brothers (1852), where the action is designed so that the roles of the identical twin brothers can both be played by the same actor (Charles Kean in the original production at the Princess’s Theatre).

4. Presumably questions relating to his biographical sketch of WC for Sketches of Living Celebrities.

5. Thus in the Daily Telegraph obituary. Like Robinson (p. 300), though without citing his authority, Davis (p. 294) here gives ‘The ghosts of my brother, Dickens, Augustus Egg, and of two other dearly-loved friends’, which seems a more satisfactory reading in terms of both form and content.

[1981] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 17 OCTOBER 1881

MS: Melbourne (MS 6162/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 309–310.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th October 1881

Dear Sirs,

I return one of the proofs which you have kindly sent to me, corrected for press. The petition for three more pulls of the clean proof is occasioned by the necessity of sending duplicates to foreign parts – a safeguard which escaped my memory when I last wrote.<sup>1</sup>

When you decide on your day of publication, it will be a favour if you will let me know it so that I may answer inquiries from foreign periodicals.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs | Chatto & Windus

---

1. Presumably referring to ‘Your Money or Your Life’.

[1982] TO WILLIAM RALSTON, 20 OCTOBER 1881

MS: Baylor. Published: B&C, II, p. 440.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup> | 20th October 1881

Dear Mr Ralston,<sup>2</sup>

I don’t remember whether Dante’s Hell includes among its tortures Gout in the Eyes. If the Divine Poet has not anticipated me, I may claim without presumption to have invented an infernal circle of my own, and to have suffered in it lately for more than three months. My sight is saved – and I am steadily on the way to recovery. But to my sincere regret, I am not yet quite strong enough to take my place at your table on Saturday next. It is really a disappointment to me to miss the opportunity of meeting Mr Tourgèneff [sic],<sup>3</sup> and of thanking him for the happy hours that I owe to his masterly and delightful pen. Do you remember kindly giving me your translation of one of his most subtly and delicately treated stories? Incautiously opening the book, with a hard day’s work before me, I scattered “the materials of our craft” to the winds, and spent the day with “Lisa” [sic].<sup>4</sup>

Be my good friend still – and accept my thanks and my excuses.
Ever yours | Wilkie Collins
To | W.R.S. Ralston Esq

---

1. Printed address ranged right, with monogram to the left.
2. Distinguished Russian scholar; see [1092] to him of 26 April 1871.
3. On the Russian author's relationship to London society in general and Ralston in particular, see Patrick Waddington, Turgenev and England (London: Macmillan, 1980), which refers to Ralston as 'Turgenev's constant cicerone' (p. 155).
4. Referring to Liza; or, 'A Nest of Nobles'; A Novel, by Ivan S. Turgenieff, translated from the Russian by W. R. S. Ralston (2 vols; London: Chapman & Hall, 1869).

[1983] TO E. A. BUCK, 24 OCTOBER 1881

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie's Catalogue, 22 October 1992, item 442A. Published: BGLL, III, p. 310.

Summary: Enclosing a proof of a new work written after an illness.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. This must be 'Your Money or Your Life' – see [1981] to Chatto & Windus of 17 October 1881. In the event this story did not appear in the Spirit of the Times (see [1986] to Chatto & Windus of 3 November), and WC wrote a second story for Buck. This was 'How I Married Him' (published 24 December). It appeared also in Britain, in Belgravia (January 1882), and was reprinted as 'Miss Morris and the Stranger' in Little Novels (1887).

[1984] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 28 OCTOBER 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Published: BGLL, III, p. 310.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 28th October 1881

Dear Vicomte de Heussey,

One line to thank you for your kind letter. If my acknowledgement does not reach Paris in time to catch you, you will find waiting for you at Rennes, a long, long reply, despatched by this post, to wait your return – suggesting among other things that you should keep the MS. for the present, and giving reasons which will I hope meet with your approval.<sup>1</sup>

Yours always truly | WC

---

1. This longer reply has not been traced and the manuscript in question has not been securely identified. See [1987] to de Heussey of 8 November 1881.

[1985] TO W. S. JOHNSON,<sup>1</sup> 1 NOVEMBER 1881

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 311.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday 1st Nov<sup>r</sup> 1881

Dear Mr Johnson

Have you half an hour to spare, either tomorrow (Wednesday) or Thursday next? and can you favour me by calling here, on either day, at any hour most convenient to yourself, after 12 o'Clock (noon)? I have declined a proposal made to me by a "Syndicate of Newspapers" – and I should be glad to say a word on the subject mentioned in your kind letter addressed to me last year.<sup>2</sup>

I am only now recovering from a severe attack of illness – and I am still so dependent on "favourable weather" that I could not be sure of keeping my appointment if I proposed to call on you.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

W.S. Johnson Esq

---

1. Possibly William Spencer Johnson (1813–97), theatrical producer and agent.
2. WC approached the literary agent A. P. Watt in a similar way the following month – see [1995] to Watt, 5 December 1881. As the notes to that letter suggest, the syndicate referred to here was probably that of W. F. Tillotson of Bolton.

[3134] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 1 NOVEMBER 1881

MS: Unknown. On sale: James D. Julia Auctions (7 February 2009, lot 1155, PO Box 830, Fairfield, Maine 04937, <www.jamesdjulia.com>);<sup>2</sup> Profiles in History, #10023, November 2009. Published: A&C5, p. 11.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | London | 1st November 1881

---

1. Probably American because of ‘London’ in the valediction and the location of the sale; possibly addressed to M.L. or Grace L. Boyd. See note 2 below.
2. Described in the catalogue thus:

ANTIQUÉ AUTOGRAPH ALBUM. The blue autograph album having 33 pages, each page having from one to four autograph cards glued on. Approximately 105 signature cards. Mostly actors, actresses, authors and notable figures from the late 1870’s to the early 1880’s. Autographs include Henry W. Longfellow; William Cullen Bryant; Oliver Wendell Holmes; John G. Whittier, Wilkie Collins; Jules Verne; Horatio Alger; Thomas Wentworth Higginson; Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain); Harriet Beecher Stowe; Susan B. Anthony; W F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) and many more. We believe this album was accumulated by the Boyd family as some autographs refer to M.L. Boyd and Mrs. Grace L. Boyd. Accompanying the book is a large signed engraving of Henry W. Longfellow by William Edgar Marshall (American, 1837–1906). Pencil signed. Full list of signatures available upon request. SIZE: Album is 11” x 9”. Engraving is 44-1/2” x 33” w. CONDITION: Generally very good. The engraving is presently rolled with damage to edges with rips. 9-94986 ($1,000-$2,000).

[1986] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 3 NOVEMBER 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 311–312.

November 3rd | 1881

Dear Sirs,

I have this moment seen your advertisement of the Christmas number of Belgravia – “to be published early in November”.

This precipitate publication (of which I have heard nothing) entirely destroys my market in America – and puts me in a most awkward position towards the old friend for whose Xmas publication in New York I have written for the last seven years. It may not be amiss to add that I shall lose £50...-.- besides.<sup>1</sup> You will remember that I wrote to Mr Chatto asking especially for the date in “the week before Christmas” at which you would publish my story here. Before I write or telegraph to America, can you let me know what the circulation of the “Annual” is there?<sup>2</sup>

Wilkie Collins

---

1. That is, if WC’s Christmas story ‘Your Money or Your Life’ (of which copy was probably submitted to Chatto & Windus at the beginning of October) were published in early November, unauthorized American versions would almost certainly appear before the authorized publisher, E. A. Buck, could bring out the story in the Christmas issue of his Spirit of the Times on 24 December.
2. Thus, if the circulation of the Belgravia Annual in the USA were negligible, it might still be possible for the story to be published in the Spirit of the Times.

[1987] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 8 NOVEMBER 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 312.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th Novr 1881

Dear Mr Chatto,

Two questions:

- (1). On what date in December next do you publish the January (1882) number of Belgravia? Can it be a day or two before Christmas Day?
- (2) Can you help me by setting up the new story in proof as soon as I can send you the MS?<sup>1</sup>

Yours truly | WC

Title of the new Story | “How I Married Him;” | “A ~~Tale~~ Story of Leap Year.”

---

1. WC’s solution to the premature publication of ‘Your Money or Your Life’ in the Belgravia Annual (see [1986] to Chatto & Windus of 3 November) is to write a second Christmas story, ‘How I Married Him’. This should appear both in New York in the Spirit of the Times on 24 December 1881 and in London a day or two earlier for the January 1882 issue of Belgravia. Such a procedure would prevent both piracy in America and the loss of his English copyright through prior publication in the USA. Andrew Chatto replied on the same day with the date of publication (21 December) and a promise to set up the story in proof ‘within a day or two’ of the receipt of WC’s manuscript (Reading).

[3109] TO E. A. BUCK,<sup>1</sup> 8 NOVEMBER 1881

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C4, p. 24.

Registered 8th November 1881<sup>2</sup>

Mr E. A. Buck<sup>3</sup> | Office of “The Spirit of the Times”

102. Chambers Street | New York (City) | U.S.A.

Wilkie Collins<sup>4</sup>

-
1. Envelope front only with two stamps, 4d and ½d, both cancelled ‘W | 25’. The number ‘57002’ in blue stamp lower down and ‘8’ handwritten in green to the left. The envelope is crossed by blue lines indicating it is Registered.
  2. Enclosed by a line at the top centre of the envelope.
  3. Given WC’s comments on the still incomplete story in [1988] to de Heussey of the same day, this cannot have contained copy for ‘How I Married Him’, published in the Spirit of the Times, 24 December 1881. [1989] to Chatto of 19 November 1881, suggests that the story was not completed until that day.
  4. Enclosed by a line at the bottom left of the envelope.

[1988] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 8 NOVEMBER 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 312–313.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 8th November 1881

Dear Collaborateur,

Thank you for the copy of the alterations in the Prologue. They could not be better – and I am sure they will increase our chances of success.<sup>1</sup>

It is needless to say that I shall be delighted to see your brother, and to do all that I can to make his visit to London agreeable to him.<sup>2</sup> That wretched cold, which lost me the chance of seeing you again still hangs about me.<sup>3</sup> I am going to try a little change of air, as soon as I can finish some unexpected work, which has been thrown on me by a mistake of my publishers, in advancing the publication of my Christmas story so as to make the simultaneous publication in America impossible. The result is that I must write (and am now writing) another short story!!<sup>4</sup>

But my work, and my contemplated absence will not occupy much more than a fortnight both together – so I can be at your brother’s service later in the present month. What will he think of the weather – if it continues in its present detestable state!

Yours ever | WC

If you cannot easily discover Madame Marie Laurent’s address I will write to a friend in Paris. My friend in London cannot give me the information.<sup>5</sup>

Yes – by all means let us try the managers, without waiting for an actress.

---

1. Possibly alterations to de Heussey’s play Madeleine, based on WC’s The New Magdalen – see the reference to ‘the MS.’ in [1984] to de Heussey of 28 October 1881.

2. The brother of du Pontavice de Heussey has not been identified, but see a reference to him in [2456] of 14 August 1885.

3. The occasion remains unclear.

4. ‘How I Married Him’ – see [1986] to Chatto & Windus of 3 November and [1987] to Andrew Chatto of 8 November.

5. Marie Laurent must be the Parisian actress who sat for Manet’s ‘Autumn’ in 1881, and whom WC perhaps wished to approach concerning the leading role in Madeleine.

[1989] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 19 NOVEMBER 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 313–314.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W | 19th Nov<sup>r</sup>1881

Dear Mr Chatto

Here is the new story.<sup>2</sup> The sooner it can be set up the more obliged I should be.

WC

Please follow copy exactly – and send me three pulls of the proof, as soon as you conveniently can.<sup>3</sup>

WC

Nov 19th 1881

---

1. The first part of the note is written in blue crayon, including the originating address and date below the note itself. The second part is written in ink on the verso, with the date repeated at the foot of the page.

2. ‘How I Married Him’.

3. So that copy can be sent to New York in time for publication in the Spirit of the Times.

[1990] TO F. C. BEARD, 22 NOVEMBER 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 314.

Imperial Hotel | Torquay | 22nd Nov<sup>r</sup> 1881

My dear Frank,

“Brevity is the Soul of wit”<sup>2</sup>.

1. The new actress won’t do.

2. We (Pigott and I) have arranged to return on Friday evening next.

3. I hope I shall find you better.

4. Excellent hotel here. Delicious French cookery.

Yours affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘F. Carr Beard Esq | 44. Welbeck Street | Cavendish Square | London | W.’, postmarked in Torquay as dated.

2. Echoing Polonius in Hamlet, II. ii. 90.

[1991] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 21–23 NOVEMBER 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 314.

The Imperial Hotel | Torquay | Monday 21st Novr 1881
Sent on Wednesday | ~~by hand~~ | 23/11/81<sup>1</sup>

Dear Sirs,

Are the printers likely to send you the proofs of my little Christmas story (“How I Married Him”), not later than Thursday next? If they can be sent to me at the above address by Thursday’s post, so that I could be sure of getting them here at the latest on Friday morning next, it would be a great convenience to me.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

The copy reached you safely this morning I hope.<sup>2</sup>
Messrs Chatto & Windus

-
1. Written diagonally across the upper part of the letter in WC’s hand.
  2. The publishers’ reply is not found in the letter-books at Reading.

[1992] TO HENRY J. NICOLL,<sup>1</sup> 28 NOVEMBER 1881

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 261–262; BGLL, III, pp. 315–316.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 28th November 1881

Dear Sir,

I have been away from London – and I have had no earlier opportunity of answering your letter than this.

My answers to your questions are as follows:

1. I was born on the 8th January 1824, in New Cavendish Street, London.
2. The later editions of “Men of the Time” contain a Memoir of me, corrected by myself.<sup>2</sup>

There is really nothing of any interest to the public to be added to the few facts mentioned in that publication. My visit to the United States of America in the autumn and winter of 1873–1874 – and the extraordinary kindness of the welcome offered to me in that great country – will be a subject of grateful remembrance to me as long as I live, and may perhaps be mentioned in your work as one more proof of the warm appreciation of modern English Literature in America.

3. My only anonymous writings have been contributed to “Household Words” and “All The Year Round,” in the form of short stories and sketches. The best of these have been already republished (and acknowledged) in the collections called, “After Dark” (Smith & Elder), and “The Queen of Hearts” (Chatto and Windus).<sup>3</sup>

4. The articles written about my novels – abroad as well as at home – are too numerous to be referred to. I have not kept any of them by me – and I regret to say that my memory does not enable me to refer you to dates and titles. As to biographical notices, I can only answer for the correctness of the Memoir already mentioned. In one word, the best part of my life is in my books.

Pray excuse a letter written in great haste, so as not to keep you longer waiting.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | ~~Henry J. Nicoll~~ Esqre<sup>4</sup>

-
1. Probably the literary scholar Henry James Nicoll, several of whose works are found in the BL Catalogue, including Landmarks of English Literature (London: John Hogg, 1883).
  2. See [0411] to Edward Walford of 17 April 1861, and [0578] to Routledge Warne & Routledge of 21 April 1864.
  3. The Queen of Hearts had, of course, first carried the imprint of Hurst & Blackett (in 1859), and then those of Sampson Low and Smith, Elder, before appearing from Chatto and Windus in 1875.
  4. Though cancelled, presumably by a later hand, the name remains perfectly legible.

[1993] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 3 DECEMBER 1881

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 316.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd December 1881

Dear Sirs

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £31..10.- in payment of the right to publish “Your Money or Your Life” in the Belgravia Annual for 1881 – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Duly credited on 5 December (Coutts: WC).

[1994] TO LUCY WARD,<sup>1</sup> 3 DECEMBER 1881

MS: Private. Published: B&C, II, pp. 440–441 (with recipient unidentified).

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

3rd December 1881

Every night when I take my feet out of my slippers – every morning when I put my feet in again – I shall turn in a south easterly direction (towards John Street Adelphi) and include in my other devotional practices the adoration of Lucy. I possess already a fur cap and a fur great coat. Never, until now, has my existence been completed by fur slippers. I kiss the hands that have perfected my winter wardrobe – and will not trust myself to say more.

WC

---

1. Born in 1852, Lucy Ward was the fifth of the eleven children of Charles and Jane Ward, then resident at 11 John Street Adelphi. In 1883 she married William Walters.

2. WC uses pale green printed paper with his monogram ranged left.

[3394] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> LATE NOVEMBER, EARLY DECEMBER 1881<sup>2</sup>

MS: Private. Published: A&C14, pp. 70-71.

...there it is. Are you satisfied with his efforts as agent?<sup>3</sup>

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Fragment torn from the end of a letter for the autograph with eleven words of text. Traces of glue on verso.

2. Conjectural dating, shortly before WC first met A. P. Watt and then engaged him – see to Watt [1995] and [1996] 5 and 10 December 1881.

3. Probably a letter to a fellow author asking about A. P. Watt as an agent before WC met him on 7 December.

[1995] TO A. P. WATT,<sup>1</sup> 5 DECEMBER 1881

MS: Pembroke, with the monogram excised. Summary: B&C, II, p. 441. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 316–318.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday, 5th December 1881

Dear Sir,

I am desirous of consulting your experience, on the subject of the periodical publication of a serial story, which I contemplate writing in the course of next year.<sup>2</sup>

Latterly I have been suffering from rheumatic gout – and I am not quite sure of being able to keep an appointment if the weather is against me. Can you favour me by calling here, either on Wednesday or Thursday next, at any hour most convenient to yourself, between 12 and 3 o'Clock?

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

If neither Wednesday nor Thursday will suit you, please choose any day next week (between 12 and 3) which may be more convenient.<sup>3</sup>

To | A.P. Watt Esqre

---

1. Alexander Pollock Watt (1834–1914), literary agent to whom WC turned to increasingly for advice during the 1880s. A pencil annotation at the top of the letter in Watt's hand reads 'The first letter from Wilkie Collins'. The bulk of Watt's half of the correspondence is also preserved in the Berg Collection, New York Public Library, in the form of the carbon copies on India paper in Watt's literary letterbooks. The volumes covering the periods July 1882 to June 1883 (Letter-books 5– 6), August 1886 to May 1887 (Letter-books 11–12) and December 1887 to March 1888 (Letter-book 14), however, are not extant. (The Letter-book 11 held at the Berg, covering the period April to November 1886, appears to belong to a different series devoted to the advertising side of Watt's agency, and includes no letters to authors.)

2. The following memorandum, which was handed to Watt at their first appointment (see Watt's letter to WC of 8 December 1881, Berg), and which gives details of the proposed serialization of the story which would become Heart and Science, is bound into the volume at Pembroke preceding WC's first letter to Watt.

Private

Notes for Consideration

December 1881

1. The proposed serial story is to be offered to "a syndicate of country newspapers."
  2. It is not necessary to apply to Mr Tillotson (of Bolton). He has already made a proposal for the new work, which has been declined. Messrs Leader & Son (of Sheffield) undertook the newspaper publication of the author's last work ("The Black Robe"). It is not necessary to apply to them, on this occasion. With the exception of these two, any other proprietors of country newspapers may be addressed. Mr Addison of the Liverpool Daily Post applied to the author some time since. Literary engagements, then, prevented the negotiation from being carried out
  3. The conditions under which the right of serial publication may be offered are as follows: –
  4. The work will contain not less than twenty-six weekly parts. The first weekly part will be ready for publication in August 1882. The newspaper proprietor who undertakes the serial publication of the work has the right of obtaining "subscriptions" from twelve different country newspapers, besides his own newspaper. "Country newspapers" are held for this purpose to mean newspapers published within the limits of Great Britain and Ireland – excepting newspapers or any other periodicals published in London.
  5. The right of obtaining "subscribers" in London is among the rights reserved by the author. The right of publication in the Belgravia magazine has been already purchased. Mr Chatto has no objection to a second London subscription being obtained – provided that the subscribing periodical shall be a London local newspaper, such as "The South London News." This journal subscribed to "The Black Robe." On the conclusion of that work no other story has appeared in the South London Press.
  6. The other rights reserved are,
    - I. Copyright
    - II. Right of Republishing the story in book form.
    - III. Right of authorising translations in all foreign languages
    - IV. Right of reprinting the story on the continent of Europe (Tauchnitz edition) – also in the United States of America, in the colonies of Great Britain, and elsewhere beyond the limits of Great Britain and Ireland.
  7. The purchase-money for the rights offered for sale in Clause 4, is to be divided into three instalments, each payable in cash. First instalment payable on receipt of the first third of the MS. – second instalment on receipt of second third – last instalment on receipt of conclusion.
- For further particulars, see previous "agreements."

3. As Watt's letter to WC of 8 December 1881 makes clear (Berg), the appointment in fact took place on Wednesday 7 December.

[1996] TO A. P. WATT, 10 DECEMBER 1881

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 318.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th December 1881

Dear Sir

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 8th of this month. You therein correctly state the nature of the arrangements (literary and pecuniary) agreed on between us, when

I had the pleasure of seeing you on Wednesday last.<sup>1</sup>
I remain, Dear sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | A.P. Watt Esqre

---

1. See [1995] to Watt of 5 December 1881.

[3395] TO A. P. WATT, 21 DECEMBER 1881

MS: Lewis Collection (L2928). Published: A&C14, p. 21.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>
21st Decr 1881

My dear Sir,

I shall be very glad to see you tomorrow, about two o'clock as you kindly suggest.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

A. P. Watt Esqr

---

1. Grey centred type.

2 An early meeting between them after WC had appointed Watt as his agent a week or so earlier – see [1996] to A. P. Watt, 10 December 1881.

[1997] TO JANE BIGELOW, 2 JANUARY 1882

MS: Bigelow, with torn envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, pp. 441–442. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 318–320.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 2nd January 1882

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

With all my heart, I wish you the happiest of birthdays in the present – and the longest renewal of ever-welcome birthdays in the time to come.<sup>2</sup> My one regret is that I am obliged to write my congratulations, instead of personally addressing you, among the host of your devoted friends.

I, too, have my agreeable associations with Baltimore.<sup>3</sup> I well remember the lovely women, the pleasant city, the successful public reading of my story, and the hospitable kindness of Mr Latrobe and the members of his family.<sup>4</sup> My stay at Baltimore was shortened, to my sorrow, by an engagement to give another reading at Washington. Here it was again my good fortune to find many new friends – but, comparing the two cities (may I confess it with all humility in a whisper?) I greatly preferred Baltimore. The prodigious streets and “avenues” at Washington depressed me indescribably – and I never could get over the idea that the enormous cupola of the Capitol was slowing squeezing the weak and attenuated building underneath into the earth from which it had feebly risen. (N. B. – I write with a bad pen, in a British fog, and some of my long words want [rewriting] to be legible.)

I am better than I was when you cheered my wretchedness in the character of my good angel bearing flowers.<sup>5</sup> But the merciless Gout still hangs about me. Nevertheless, I am meditating a new story – and you may perhaps see the first chapters in an American periodical, if you will only wait until next August.<sup>6</sup>

In the meantime – with all good wishes – believe me
always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Perhaps, you'll let me hear more of the new house, and how you like it, and how the birthday celebration prospered – when you have some spare minutes? Gramercy Park<sup>7</sup> reminds me of some merry hours passed with poor Sothorn (the actor) then living at the hotel.<sup>8</sup>

---

1. Signed and directed to 'Mrs John Bigelow | 21. Gramercy Park | New York | U[S.A.]', postmarked as dated.

Misplaced in the archive with [1379] to Jane Bigelow of 30 September 1873.

2. Jane Bigelow turned forty-three on 16 January 1882. The letter is posted in time to arrive for the anniversary.

3. See [1394] to John Elderkin of 26 November 1873. Baltimore was Jane Bigelow's birthplace.

4. Probably Ferdinand Claiborne Latrobe (1833–1911), seven times mayor of Baltimore.

5. See [1963] to Jane Bigelow of 12 July 1881.

6. Heart and Science was serialized in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper in New York.

7. The Bigelows' new city residence at 21 Gramercy Park. This was a gift from the Democratic politician and unsuccessful presidential candidate, Samuel J. Tilden (1814–86), 'who purchased it in 1881 while the Bigelows were in Europe, then deeded it to Bigelow's eldest daughter [Grace, b. 1852] to forestall the protests he knew his friend would make' (Margaret Clapp, Forgotten First Citizen (Boston: Little Brown, 1947), p. 318).

8. Edward Askew Sothorn (1826–81: ODNB), English comic actor who was based at the fashionable Gramercy Park Hotel in Manhattan, New York, during his period of residence in the United States from 1874. He had returned to the London stage in 1878, residing not far from WC at Vere Street, Cavendish Square, and died there on 21 January 1881 after a long and painful illness.

[1998] TO JANE WARD, 6 JANUARY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 320.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 6th January 1882

My dear Jane,

It is needless to say that I gladly comply with Mr White's kind suggestion.<sup>1</sup> Any day next week (about one o'clock) which may be most convenient to Mr White will do for me. I say "next week", supposing that tomorrow (Saturday) may be too early a date. If not, I shall be at home until 3 o'clock.

The wedding was a triumph – and we were all the better for it.<sup>2</sup> I look back on it with but two subjects for regret. First, the bridesmaids petticoats were too short. Secondly, I was medically forbidden to drink Champagne.

"Keets's" love and congratulations.<sup>3</sup>

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

To | Mrs Charles Ward

---

1. Mr White and his suggestion remain unidentified.

2. On 4 January 1882 WC was one of the witnesses to the marriage of the Wards' second daughter, Emily Blanche (1848–95), to the solicitor William Thomas Waller of Putney, at the Chapel Royal off the Strand in London.

3. A pet name of Caroline Graves, often written 'Keates' – see [1538] to William Tindell of 29 April 1875.

[1999] TO CHARLES KENT, 8 JANUARY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 442.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup> | 8th January 1882

My dear Kent,

Some flowers on my table remind me that this is my birthday – and that I cannot find a better occasion for [del] offering to you my best wishes for the New Year.

I began the year badly – with a threatening of gout, and terrifying appearances in one of my eyes. But the doctor and I have made a good fight of it this time – and I hope I am safe.

Condemned to the nastiest drink (not actually physic) that I know of – weak brandy and water – I am filled with morbid longings to ~~get~~ destroy myself and my character by getting drunk on the excellent port in the solemn coffee-room at the Athenaeum. You shall receive the "due notice" if this longing overpowers my better sense.

In the meantime, when you pass this way again, come up stairs. If I am hard at work, we can at least shake hands – produce a few whiffs of tobacco smoke – and adjourn to a leisure hour at the first opportunity. You understand what literary work is. I say no more.

Ever yours | WC

1. Directed to 'Charles Kent Esre | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.'. Postmarked: 'LONDON. W. | 7 | JA 9 | 82'.
2. WC uses printed paper without monogram.

[2000] TO CHARLES KENT, 16 JANUARY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 321.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16th January 1882

My dear Kent,

I have read the little story with a very sincere appreciation of the originality of it, in these conventional days. The notion of the man somersaulting himself backwards into his childhood – and then, in a moment of excitement, turning head over heels into nothing is as quaintly terrible as anything in Hoffmann. So far as I know, nothing like it has been written by anybody else.

Let me once more thank you for a present on my birthday which is indeed an addition to my library of rare interest, in a most handsome form. If I possessed Herr Crambo's enviable superiority to rheumatism, I should have turned a somersault of exultation when I had put the book on my shelf.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours, | WC

-
1. Directed to 'Charles Kent Esre | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.', postmarked on the following day.
  2. Referring to Kent's unsigned tale in two parts, 'Herr Crambo: A Psychological Phenomenon', All the Year Round 27:649–650 (7–14 May 1881), pp. 133–139, 154–157.

[2001] TO JAMES R. OSGOOD, 18 JANUARY 1882

MS: Unknown. Copy, probably in Caroline Graves's hand: Boston (KF 111), our copy text. Published: Whiting, pp. 406–407; BGLL, III, pp. 321–323.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | London

18 January 1882

Dear Mr. Osgood,

By mail of Saturday next – the 21st – I shall at last send you my Recollections of Fechter. My health is mainly to blame for this long delay. But besides this, the subject is beset with difficulties, and requires careful handling with a margin of time to do it in.

If I am too late – I can only say I am sorry, and ask you to let me have the MS. back again.<sup>1</sup>

If the book is still to be written, then my recollections are at Miss Kate Field's service – on one condition: viz: that they are printed and published, without alteration of any sort, exactly as I have written them.

My motive for making this stipulation – which I am sure I may trust to your care to see strictly carried out – is expressed in the MS. I may add, remembering what has been foolishly and falsely said of Fechter in the United States (and repeated, I am sorry to find, by Miss Field in one of her letters to me) that I will not appear before my American readers, unless I tell the truth honestly – on my own responsibility, as one of the very few Englishmen now living, who knew Fechter intimately in every aspect of his character.<sup>2</sup>

Therefore, please accept this letter as authority for at once returning my MS to me, if you have any reason to suppose that the stipulation which I attach to it is not likely to be literally observed.

Please tell Miss Kate Field, with my kind remembrances, that the questions about Fechter which she puts to me in her letters – in so far as they are not treated of in the "Recollections" – are questions which I am quite unable to answer. His two children's names are "Marie" and "Paul" – "Marie" being the eldest. Beyond this, I know nothing of his domestic affairs. I am not even acquainted with the address of his widow.<sup>3</sup> As for his “book” of Othello I do not possess it – and I would not lend it for public quotations if I did. His “Othello” and his “book” were among the mistakes of his career, poor dear fellow.<sup>4</sup> For the sake of his memory, I ask Miss Field to pass over them.

Nothing more occurs to me just now – and my letter is too long already.

I contend with this dreadful damp winter (in England) more successfully than I had hoped. If I could only breathe your dry air in Boston (dry by comparison with our island air on the worst day you have), I should do very well.

Believe me, dear Mr. Osgood | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Please let me hear if the MS. is safely received. If it is set up in type, proofs in duplicate, might help me perhaps to make some additions.

James R. Osgood, Esq.

---

1. Dated ‘18 January 1882’, WC’s ‘Recollections of Charles Fechter’ duly appeared in Kate Field’s Charles Albert Fechter (Boston: Osgood, 1882), pp. 154–173.

2. On Fechter’s problems after he went to the United States, see [1515] to Carlotta Leclercq of 15 February 1875, and Peters, pp. 360–361.

3. According to Field (p. 56), Fechter ‘married, 29 Nov. 1847, Mlle. Roebert, a pensionnaire of the Comédie Française, by whom he had a son, Paul, and a daughter, Marie, who became an operatic singer’. He had also entered into a bigamous second marriage in the United States with the Philadelphia actress, Lizzie Price – see Peters, p. 360. See [1071] to Marie-Thérèse Fechter of 10 March 1871, and [1469] to her mother of 1 July 1874.

4. Othello: Charles Fechter’s Acting Edition (London: W. R. Sams, 1861) – a copy of the second edition is found in the BL. The actor had performed in the play both in French (at l’Odéon, Paris, in 1858) and in English (at the Princess’s Theatre, London, in 1861, where he began as Othello but later took on the role of Iago).

[2002] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 28 JANUARY 1882

MS: Birmingham CA.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 323.

Vy Truly Yours | Wilkie Collins | 28th January 1882

---

1. A fragment pasted in an album; from the format probably simply an autograph.

[2003] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 29 JANUARY 1882

MS: Reading (tipped into Outgoing Letter-book 15). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 323–324.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

29th January 1882

Dear Mr Chatto,

Will you kindly add Charles Reade’s present address to the enclosed, and let it go with your letters to the post?<sup>1</sup>

On reflexion, I think it will be easier and better, if we exchange letters relating to our new arrangements – as you suggested.<sup>2</sup> Let me put two questions – and I will at once do this.

1. Does the new lease of “The Law and the Lady” date from the 1st of next month? Or am I mistaking the first for a later date in February?<sup>3</sup>

2. Does your right of selling the collected stories, in book form, in Australia and New Zealand, refer to the one volume edition only? and perhaps to remainders of the 3 volume edition? I ask this because an Australian newspaper has already purchased the right of periodically publishing the stories in their forthcoming form, as parts of one new story, on which they are all made to hang together.<sup>4</sup>

Your Indian right is of course conceded, without reserve. If your Australian right followed it, when the Circulating Libraries have done with the book here, I should hope this would suit both sides.<sup>5</sup>

Yours ever | WC

Another question! Has the one volume edition of “The Black Robe” come out yet?<sup>6</sup>

---

1. The enclosed letter to Reade remains untraced, though his new address is given in the following letter to Charles Kent. The letter seems to have concerned Athenæum Club business.
2. The suggestion was presumably made at a meeting between WC and Andrew Chatto, as there is no prior reference found in the letter-books at Reading to the agreements discussed here.
3. Referring to the renewal of the publishing lease for the novel, which in fact was due to expire on 15 February 1882.
4. Referring to WC’s plans for publishing a new collection of short stories, that in the event was not fulfilled until Little Novels appeared in 1887. The Australian serialization is not found in Johnson-Woods.
5. [2007] to Chatto & Windus of 1 February 1882 (one of two of that date, with a third to Andrew Chatto personally) constitutes the initial publishing agreement for what was to become Little Novels, as well as that for the renewal of the lease for The Law and the Lady.
6. The single-volume ‘Piccadilly’ edition of the novel had in fact appeared in late 1881.

[2004] TO CHARLES KENT, 31 JANUARY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 324.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

31st January 1882

My dear Kent,

Thank you for your friendly and useful note. The infernal weather has fixed its fangs in my chest – and I am coughing myself into oblivion – on the great somersault principle of Herr Crambo.<sup>2</sup>

I have written to Charles Reade – and Chatto has kindly addressed the letter. C.R.’s present address turns out to be,

3. Bloomfield Villas | Uxbridge Road | W.

I have told him to write to the Sec<sup>y</sup> mentioning his change of abode (?) will he do it?<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I will do my best to be well enough to get to both the ballots

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. See [2000] to Kent of 16 January 1882.

3. This seems to concern an election at the Athenæum Club, which Kent now regularly frequented – see [2015] to him of 10 February 1882.

[2005] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 1 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Reading (tipped into Outgoing Letter-book 15). Published: BGLL, III, p. 325.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st February 1882

Dear Mr Chatto

Let me very sincerely thank you for the kind concession which you have made to my interests in the matter of the collected stories, and the Royalty on extra copies – and let me add my best acknowledgements for the presentation copies of “The Black Robe” in its new form.<sup>1</sup>

I will write to Melbourne by the direct mail this month. There can be no doubt that the periodical publication in Australia will be at an end before you reprint the stories in one volume.<sup>2</sup>

The business letters are enclosed.<sup>3</sup> I have been obliged to specify what the “exclusive right of publication in book-form” means – in case you have to deal with my Exors.<sup>4</sup> Tauchnitz – and booksellers in Canada and the U.S. also publish in book-form. I have as I hope and believe fully stated your rights. If I have made any mistake you have only to let me know.

Ever yours | WC

1. Andrew Chatto's letter to WC of 30 January 1882 (Reading), offered a 5s royalty on all copies of the first edition sold above 750, as opposed to the 1,000 specified in the agreement concerning The Black Robe. Enclosed with Chatto's letter were a number of author copies of the 'Piccadilly' edition of that novel.
2. See the second question raised by WC in [2003] to Chatto of 29 January 1882. In his reply of 30 January, Chatto had asked for further details about the reprinting of WC's short stories in Australia.
3. WC's two letters to Chatto & Windus of 1 February – [2006] and [2007].
4. Referring to the possibility of WC's death before the expiry of the publishing lease, when the author's part would be assumed by his executors.

[2006] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 1 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 325.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st February 1882

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £31..10.- in payment of the right to publish "How I Married Him" in the Belgravia Magazine for January 1882 – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs | Chatto & Windus

---

1. Duly credited on 2 February 1882 (Chatto: WC).

[2007] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 1 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Reading.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 326–327.

90. Gloucester Place. | Portman Square | London

1st February 1882

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a promissory note for one hundred pounds, in payment for the right – which I hereby confer – of publishing "The Law and the Lady" in book form (at no lower price than the retail price of two shillings per copy) during a period of seven years dating from the 15th February 1882. It is further understood between us as part of this arrangement, that the right of publishing "The Law and the Lady" shall be exclusively yours, during the seven years' lease, within the limits of Great Britain and Ireland, and also in the British Colonies of India, Australia, and New Zealand.<sup>2</sup>

It is further agreed on between us that for a payment to me of three hundred pounds (in two bills, as stated in your letter of 30th January last) you are to purchase a seven years' publishing lease of a new collection of my short stories – similar in respect of the rights of book publication exclusively conferred, and of the minimum limit of retail price at which copies may be sold, to the seven years' lease of "The Law and the Lady". It is also conceded by you, that a Royalty of twenty five pounds, upon each hundred copies of the three volume edition of these new stories sold beyond the first seven hundred and fifty copies, shall be paid to me, in addition to the stipulated payment of three hundred pounds. The work is to be ready for publication in the coming spring, and is to be long enough to fill three volumes of the usual circulating library form. The right of authorising foreign translations, and reprints on the Continent of Europe and in Canada and the United States is reserved by the author.

With kind regards, believe me, Dear Sirs,
Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins<sup>3</sup>
To | Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Since the letter in fact constitutes a legal agreement, it is on thick foolscap paper and is endorsed with a stamp dated 7 February 1882.

2. The old publishing agreement concerning The Law and the Lady, first published in volume form on 15 February 1875, is described in the note to [1512] to Andrew Chatto of 8 February 1875.

3. On the blank third page of the letter following the signature is found the following postscript, originally composed by WC in [2688] to Andrew Chatto of 15 March 1887. Here it is copied (with minor accidental variants) in another hand but signed by WC. It defers the commencement of the publishing lease for the collection of short stories until an unspecified date in April 1887:

Postscript

Circumstances for which I am responsible having delayed the publication of my short stories in book form as contemplated in the second paragraph of my letter to Messrs Chatto and Windus dated 1st Feby 1882 I hereby confirm in every respect what I have therein written, and I further desire that the seven years lease of the right of publication ceded to Messrs Chatto and Windus shall be newly dated from the [space] day of April 1887.

Wilkie Collins

[2008] TO O. H. PECK,<sup>1</sup> 4 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 327.

90. Gloucester Place | London | 4th February 1882

Dear Sir,

I thank you for your kind letter – and I contribute with pleasure to your collection of Autographs.

Vy truly Yours | Wilkie Collins

To Mr O.H. Peck

---

1. Unidentified autograph hunter.

[2009] TO A. P. WATT, 4 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 327–328.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th February 1882

Private

Dear Mr Watt,

If I remember correctly, I think we arranged that you should kindly take in hand the interests of my contemplated story in the United States. In any case, I shall be obliged to you if you will help me in this matter also, in the capacity of my representative.

“Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Paper” paid, I find, no more than £100.–. for the advance sheets of “The Black Robe”.<sup>1</sup> If the proprietors are willing to treat for the new story on the plan which you followed in the case of Dr Macdonald<sup>2</sup> – that is to say, that a Magazine in the U.S. is also to be free to treat for the advance-sheets – then “Frank Leslie” might be offered the first refusal. If the proposal is declined a similar offer should be made to Mr W. Cauldwell (proprietor of the New York Sunday Mercury), who has asked to be allowed to deal with me for advanced sheets. If he does not accept our terms, the market is open to you freely, so far as my literary relations with the U.S. are now concerned.<sup>3</sup>

The magazine to be chosen for our negotiations will of course (in Mr Chatto’s interests) not be one of the American magazines having a sale in London. I should add that I could not treat with Harper’s periodicals under any circumstances.<sup>4</sup>

If you are passing this way, at, or after, two o’Clock, you have only to let me know the day. Excepting when there is a gleam of fine weather, I am still a prisoner in the house.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I suppose time is of importance – considering the inevitable delays in corresponding with America.

A.P. Watt Esqre

-
1. Only one payment clearly from 'F Leslie' appears in WC's account, on 11 August 1879 for £51-7s-9d (Coumts: WC).
  2. George MacDonald (1824–1905: ODNB), friend and early literary client of Watt's; see Watt's correspondence on MacDonald's behalf in the Berg Collection.
  3. Watt wrote to Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper of New York on 15 February 1882 with this proposal, and again on 31 March to accept an offer of £100 (Berg), so that Heart and Science duly appeared in that paper from 22 July.
  4. WC had fallen out with the New York publishing firm of Harper & Brothers over Canadian editions in 1878, though amicable relations were soon to be restored. Both serial and volume editions of WC's next novel "I Say No" were published by the firm (see Gasson, pp. 74–75).

[2010] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 6 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 328–329.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th Feby 1882

Dear Mr Chatto,

Here I am – with another question! It relates to the drama this time, and addresses you in the capacity of publisher of Tom Taylor's and Gilbert's plays.<sup>1</sup>

Am I right in assuming that the copyright of a play is limited, like the copyright of a novel, to forty two years? And, when a play is published in book-form is it (as I also suppose) an act of piracy in the eye of the law, to perform that play on the stage without first obtaining permission from the proprietor of the copyright?<sup>2</sup>

A line of reply (if you can write it without trouble) will help me to give some advice, with "a conscience at ease".<sup>3</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The gout has attacked me again – not so severely as usual. Otherwise I would have called to ask you for information.

-
1. Referring to the distinguished Victorian dramatists Tom Taylor (1817–80) and W. S. Gilbert (1836–1911). Chatto & Windus were the publishers of, among other works, Taylor's Historical Dramas (including 'Clancarty' and 'Jeanne Darc'), first issued in 1877, and Gilbert's Original Plays (including 'The Wicked World'), first published in 1875.
  2. WC's understanding of the law was basically correct. Performing rights were first protected under the Dramatic copyright Act of 1833 (3 & 4 William IV c.15), commonly known as 'Bulwer Lytton's Act'. The Copyright Act of 1842 (5 & 6 Victoria c.45) extended both copyright and performing right in published plays to a period of forty-two years, or the life of the author plus seven years, whichever should be the longer. Until the Copyright Act of 1911 (1 & 2 George V c.46), however, the law seems to have remained unclear concerning whether the period of copyright in unpublished plays was perpetual or the same as that for published plays. See Copinger, 5th edn, chs 2–3.
  3. Chatto's reply is not found in the letter-books at Reading; [2013], WC's following letter to him of 9 February, suggests that he responded by calling on the author at Gloucester Place, while [2011] to A. P. Watt confirms that Chatto called on 7 February.

[2011] TO A. P. WATT, 8 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: B&C, II, pp. 442–443 (incomplete); BGLL, III, pp. 329–330.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th Feby 1882

Dear Mr Watt

Mr Chatto called here yesterday – and told me that you are still being worried by some of the curious savages with whom you are unfortunately in negotiation on my behalf. For your sake, as well as for mine, this must be stopped. Please direct your clerk to copy the enclosed letter, and send it to Mr Bartlett – and send other copies to those other people in the North.<sup>1</sup> They are wasting our time – and we shall do wisely to open negotiations with other periodicals or newspapers.

Vy truly yours | WC

Many thanks for your kind acknowledgement of my letter relating to the United States<sup>2</sup>

1. 'The enclosed letter' ([2012]) is also addressed to Watt and dated 8 February 1882. 'Mr Bartlett' is Ellis Ashmead Bartlett (1849–1902: ODNB), proprietor of the popular metropolitan Tory weekly England, which carried Heart and Science as a serial from July 1882, while the 'other people in the North' are the editors/proprietors of the provincial newspapers which also carried the story (see Law, pp. 103–104). Watt's correspondence with the papers carrying the story is preserved in the Berg Collection, but WC's complaints seem only to apply to Bartlett. Bartlett wrote on 31 January with a list of conditions before accepting the story, though an agreement had already been reached by 6 February. Watt wrote back to WC on 9 February stating that he would not in fact forward the letter to Bartlett as the negotiations had already been completed, but suggested diplomatically that the points made there would be useful in future negotiations with the provincial proprietors.
2. See [2009] to Watt of 4 February 1882; Watt's acknowledgement is not found in the Berg letter-books.

[2012] TO A. P. WATT, 8 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: B&C, II, p. 443 (incomplete); BGLL, III, pp. 330–331.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th Feby 1882

Dear Sir,

I hear with surprise that your negotiations for the periodical sale of my next novel are delayed by certain proprietors, who wish to see the MS – to know what the characters are, and what the title is to be – before they can decide to purchase the right of publishing the work in their newspaper columns.

In twenty years' experience, this extraordinary form of distrust approaches me for the first time. The late Mr Charles Dickens neither read, nor wished to read, a line of The Woman in White before we signed our agreement for the appearance of the work in "All The Year Round." Neither did he know the title until after the work had been advertised as "a new story". The same confidence in me was testified by Messrs Cassell & Co. when I published "Man and Wife" in their magazine – by Messrs Bentley & Son, when I published "The Two Destinies" in "Temple Bar" – by Messrs Chatto and Windus, when I published "The Haunted Hotel" in "Belgravia" – and by Messrs Leader & Son of "The Sheffield Independent", who purchased the periodical right of my last work "The Black Robe". Every one of these gentlemen remembered that my works were circulated by hundreds of thousands wherever the English language was read, and were translated into all the languages of Europe. They understood that a man with this reputation and this responsibility was to be implicitly trusted as a writer. If the proprietors with whom you are now in treaty do not see that they are bound to do me this same justice, I beg that you will at once close the negotiations. In justice to former publishers and proprietors, and in justice to myself, I refuse to communicate a line of my MS. – or to mention my title, until I think it right to do so. My forthcoming novel will deal with English life, and the period will be the present time. I may say this – but I will say no more,

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

A.P. Watt Esqre

[2013] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 9 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 331.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th Feby 1882

Dear Mr Chatto

When you kindly called here the gout must have stupefied me. I entirely forgot that I had, among my own collection of newspaper slips, the Reade v. Lacy case.<sup>1</sup> Let me return your slip with many thanks – and with acknowledgment of the kindness which refused yesterday to let my servant buy for me some extra copies of Belgravia – and handed them to him as a free gift.<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever WC

---

1. The action in 1861 by Charles Reade against Thomas Hailes Lacy, publisher of Lacy's Acting Editions, to restrain him from publishing a dramatization of Reade's novel It is Never Too Late To Mend (1856), which was itself based on Reade's previously published play Gold (1853). Although the court was satisfied that Lacy had acted in ignorance of the existence of Gold, the case was decided in favour of the plaintiff; see Copinger, 2nd edn, pp. 339–340. The case is also discussed in the context of developments in the concept of dramatic property in Stephens, ch. 4, especially pp. 98–99.

2. Possibly copies of the January issue of the magazine, containing WC's story 'How I Married Him'.

[2014] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 10 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Huntington (HH 94). Published: BGLL, III, p. 332.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th Feby 1882

My dear Holman,

By registered book-post (this afternoon) I send you my last novel "The Black Robe" – in the new edition just published. The story has been so successful, both at home and abroad, that I have good hope of its relieving you for an hour or two of anxieties which I grieve to hear of.<sup>1</sup> I am slowly getting on – as well as a man can get on with the gout in one of his eyes.

This reminds me that I must not trouble my sound eye with much work – and warns me to say goodbye for the present.

Always afftly yours | Wilkie Collins

Holman Hunt Eq

---

1. Recently returned from abroad, Hunt had artistic and financial problems as well as typhoid fever.

[2015] TO CHARLES KENT, 10 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, pp. 263–4; BGLL, III, pp. 332–333.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th Feby 1882

My dear Kent,

One of my eyes is again in a state of gouty eclipse. There is little or no pain this time – that is the best I can say for myself.

I can only look to you to tell me how the ballot has ended – when you are passing this way. When C.R. last wrote to me (about a week ago) he informed me that he had decided (in consideration of his "broken health" and his self-isolation from society) on withdrawing his candidature before the ballot.<sup>2</sup> A day or two later, I received the Secretary's customary circular, informing me of the ballot on Monday next. I forwarded this to Reade, reminding him that he had no time to lose. And since that time, I have heard – nothing! He may have changed his mind or he may have forgotten all about it.

Yours ever | WC

I have written to tell Palgrave Simpson,<sup>3</sup> what I have just told you. There is no chance of my being able to get out by Monday.

Of course, if C.R.'s name remains on the list, you will say nothing of his having intended to withdraw.

I forget whether I did, or did not, tell Palgrave Simpson of Reade's present address – if it should be officially required. It is: – 3. Bloomfield Villas | Uxbridge Road | W.

---

1. Directed to 'Charles Kent Esqre | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.', postmarked as dated.

2. Referring to Charles Reade and what is probably an election of the officers of the Athenæum Club, of which both WC and Kent were members.
3. Simpson was also a member of the Athenæum. WC's letter to him mentioned here has not been traced.

[2016] TO A. ARTHUR READE,<sup>1</sup> 10 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Huntington (HM 20424, Bixby Collection). Transcript: Kansas (MS P557:A9). Published: Reade, p. 36; BGLL, III, p. 333.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | London
10th February 1882

Dear Sir,

When I am ill (I am suffering from gout at this moment) tobacco is the best friend that my irritable nerves possess. When I am well – but exhausted for the time by a hard day's work – tobacco revives and composes me. There is my evidence in two words.

When a man allows himself to become a glutton in the matter of smoking tobacco, he suffers for it. And if he becomes a glutton in the matter of eating meat, he just as certainly suffers – in another way. When I read learned attacks on the practice of smoking, I feel indebted to the writer. He adds largely to the relish of my cigar.

Believe me faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

A. Arthur Reade Esqre

---

1. Alfred Arthur Reade (1851–1917), who had written to ask about the effect of alcohol and tobacco on WC's work as a writer. He recorded this and other replies in Study and Stimulants (1883). Towards the end of the book (pp. 198–199), Reade mentions WC once more in advising young people to avoid the consumption of tobacco in particular:

Even among those who smoke there is a considerable difference in the times chosen for smoking. Though the Rev. A. Plummer declares himself a firm believer in the use of tobacco, he smokes before work, after work, rarely while at work. Mr. Wilkie Collins smokes after work, and Mr. James Payn smokes all the time he is working. Mr. Francillon's consumption of tobacco, and his power of work, are in almost exact proportion. Similar testimony comes from Mark Twain. ... I hope that young smokers will not conclude that by following the example of Mark Twain, their brain will become as fertile as his. To them tobacco is bad in any form. It poisons their blood, stunts their growth, weakens the mind, and makes them lazy.

[2017] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 10 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/9). Published: Winter 1909, pp. 209–211; B&C, II, pp. 443–444.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
10th Feby 1882.

My dear Winter:

You were indeed happily inspired when you sent me that generous and sympathetic article in The Tribune. Still tormented by the gout, I forgot my troubles [del] /when I opened the newspaper, and/ felt the encouragement that I most highly value – I mean the encouragement that is offered to me by a brother-writer.<sup>1</sup>

If what I hear of this last larcenous appropriation of my poor “Magdalen” be true, what an effort it must /have/ been to you to give your attention, even for a few hours only, to dramatic work so immeasurably beneath your notice! How did you compensate your intelligence for this outrage offered to it by this last “adapter” of ideas that do not belong to him? Did you disinfect your mind by reading, or writing, – or did you go to bed, and secure the sweet oblivion of sleep?

I wonder whether I ever told you of an entirely new view taken of “Magdalen” by the last of the great French actresses – Aimée Desclée.<sup>2</sup> After seeing the piece in London she was eager / (on her return to Paris) / to play “Grace Roseberry” (!) “Develop the character a little more, in the last act,” she said to me; “I will see that [del] the play is thoroughly well translated into French – and I will make Grace, and not Mercy Merrick, the chief woman in the piece. Grace's dramatic position is magnificent: I feel it, to my fingers' ends. Wait and see." She died, pour soul, a few months afterward. And "Grace Roseberry" will, I fear, never be properly acted now.<sup>3</sup>

Don't forget me, my dear Winter – and let me hear from you sometimes. I set no common value on your friendship and your good opinion.

Ever yours, | Wilkie Collins.

P.S. – | I address you as Mr on the envelope. Our curiously common mock-title of Esquire is declared by Fenimore Cooper to be a species of insult, and even a violation of the Constitution of the U.S. when attached to the name of an American citizen. Is that great Master (shamefully undervalued by Americans of the present day!) right or wrong about Esq.? N.B. I have just been reading "The Deerslayer" for the fifth time.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. While Winter's generous and sympathetic article, presumably (as suggested by WC's following paragraph) a review of an unauthorized dramatization of WC's novel, has not been traced, the following notice has been located: 'Miss Clara Morris will again appear as Mercy Merrick, in "The New Magdalen" at the Union Square Theatre this afternoon.' ('Music and Dramatic Notes', New York Tribune, 11 January 1882, p. 4f).

2. Aimée-Olympe Desclée (1836–1874), French actress, best known for her performances in contemporary dramas such as Ludovic Halevy and Henri Meilhac's Frou-Frou (1869) and La Princesse Georges (1871) by Alexandre Dumas, the younger.

3. A French translation of The New Magdalen by R. du Pontavice de Heussey, Madeleine: Pièce en Quatre Actes dont un Prologue, d'après Wilkie-Collins, was published in Paris by Ollendorff in 1887.

4. A 31-volume edition of the Novels of J. Fenimore Cooper was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 96).

[2018] TO CHARLES KENT, 28 FEBRUARY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 334.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th Feby 1882

My dear Kent,

If you still have the Kelly Memorial by you, write at once to Edward F. Pigott Esq | Lord Chamberlain's Office | St James's Palace – | and propose a time when you will call on him, with the Memorial for his signature.<sup>2</sup>

Mr Pigott (a very old friend of mine) is the "Examiner of Plays". He will not only give you his signature but will speak to Lord Kenmore (the Lord Chamberlain) on the subject of Miss Kelly's claims – and through Lord Kenmore, you may get a private and personal word said to "The Prime Minister".

Ever yours | WC

If the gout had not stupefied me, I should have thought of this before.

If the Memorial has gone to Downing Street, you would do well to see Mr Pigott, and tell him of the interesting "case" – and of the names which back you in your good work. In this way, he will be able to interest Lord Kenmore in helping our object

---

1, Signed and directed to 'Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.', postmarked on the following day.

2. Concerning Frances Maria Kelly (1790–1882), the retired actress who formed a school for young actresses at her home in Dean Street, Soho, which was granted a Lord Chamberlain's license in 1845. See L. E. Holman, Lamb's 'Barbara S—': The Life of Frances Maria Kelly, Actress (London: Methuen, 1935). WC had staged A Court Duel at Miss Kelly's Theatre on 26 February 1850 (see Robert C. Hanna, 'A Court Duel as Performed by Wilkie Collins, with an analysis of the Manuscript, Playbill, and Advertisement', Dickens Studies Annual 47 (2016), pp. 223–288). Kent's edition of Charles Lamb's works of 1875 had discussed the latter's relationship with Kelly at some length. In the event, the memorial signed by Lord Lytton produced a royal grant of £150 but it arrived close to her death on 6 December 1882 and was used to pay funeral costs.

[2019] TO A. P. WATT, 10 MARCH 1882

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th March 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

My best thanks for your friendly remembrance of my interests.

An old friend of mine, settled at Melbourne, has acted as my agent in Australia for many years past.<sup>1</sup> He is now, I believe, negotiating for the new story among the newspapers of that Colony.<sup>2</sup>

But for this circumstance, it is needless to say that I should have gladly availed myself of this opportunity of enlarging our business interests. In the meantime, I am always glad to see you, when you are passing this way.

I have just received from “Mr Munro” of “The Seaside Library” (New York) a voluntary offering of the pecuniary sort (in recognition of my “moral” claim) for a little Christmas Story of mine “annexed” to his publication!<sup>3</sup> Here is an advance towards copyright!

[valediction and signature excised]

-
1. Hugh Biers, WC’s Australian agent – see the letters to him from [3177] of August 1873 to [2042] of 16 June 1882.
  2. Watt had written to WC on the previous day asking if he should respond to an application for a story from an unnamed Melbourne newspaper (Berg). The Australian paper which eventually carried Heart and Science is not found in Johnson-Woods.
  3. George Munro’s Seaside Library was one of the most successful of the many cheap reprint series to take advantage of the absence of copyright protection for foreign authors in the United States. Titles by WC carried in the series are listed in Gasson, pp. 137–138. The volume in question here is probably Who Kiled Zebedee? (1881, no. 928).

[3347] M. D. MACLEOD,<sup>1</sup> 23 MARCH 1882

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C12 pp. 6-8.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>3</sup>

London | 23rd March 1882

My dear sir,

Your welcome letter has, I can sincerely assure you, pleased and interested me in no ordinary degree. If I am late in saying this, and if my reply is shorter than I could wish it to be, you will, I know, make allowances for me when I tell you that I am hard at work – and that [del] my health, sorely tried, by repeated attacks of gout in the eyes, makes it no easy task for me to keep up with the demands of a large correspondence, in my intervals of leisure.

My list of the books that I consulted in writing “Poor Miss Finch” is unfortunately destroyed. My most useful information came, I remember, from conversations with a blind man whom I mercilessly [del] examined and cross-examined, and from my doctor. The first has left England, I believe – and the last is himself, I am sorry to say, seriously ill.<sup>4</sup> Many passages in the book – among others the passage which your sympathetic and intelligent criticism has specially remarked – came from my own instinctive sense of what the character portrayed would think and feel. To me, my characters are living beings, and my mind becomes (in some way quite incomprehensible to me) their mind, in the process of creating them. I make no apology for speaking of myself in this way to you. Such experience as your’s [sic] of the inner mental mysteries may even be interested in the mental process which produces works of fiction. When I am walking up and down my study, completely [del] absorbed in the joys and sorrows of a non-existent person, I am inclined (when the “fit” is over) to ask myself if the line may not be a fine one which divides this sort of excitement from the approaches perhaps of certain forms of insanity? Or, to put it more correctly, from the metaphysical point of view – if the imaginative faculty which works in this way, be not counterbalanced /and controlled/ [del] by an equally developed faculty of judgment or reason, or whatever the opposite of imagination may be.

To return to “sound sense”, I have to thank you for the pamphlet you have sent to me.<sup>5</sup> I wait to read it for one of my days of rest, when I hope to do it justice. In the meantime, believe me

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

When “Poor Miss Finch” was first published, a newspaper paragraph was sent to me anonymously, describing a successful operation on a man who had been blind [del] for years.<sup>6</sup> In his blind state, he was a harmless person. Restored to sight, he ended in committing some of the lighter crimes and became an irreclaimably bad character. I had no means of [del] ascertaining the truth of this.<sup>7</sup>

To MD. Macleod Esqre | &c &c &c<sup>8</sup>

---

1. Murdoch Donald Macleod (1851–1908), who qualified as a doctor from Edinburgh University in 1873. Later that year he took up a post as Assistant Medical Superintendent at the Cumberland and Westmoreland Asylum at Garlands, near Carlisle. In 1882 he was appointed to the post of Medical Superintendent at the East Riding of Yorkshire Asylum at Beverley taking over an asylum with more than 250 patients and around 40 staff. He remained in charge until his own illness, which began in 1904, led to his retirement in 1906. He died in Beverley in 1908, aged 56. Macleod was a keen golfer and active in the British Medical Association and the Medico-Psychological Society. He wrote occasional articles for the Journal of Mental Science.

2. The letter was sold by Forum Auctions, 29 November 2018, lot 25, with a number of other items from the collection of James Stevens Cox F.S.A. (1910-1997). It was accompanied by the page from the catalogue of the auction on 10 February 1948, where Cox purchased it for £2 along with five other items.

3. WC uses engraved headed paper of a green-blue colour with the monogram ranged left which he employed from autumn 1880 to summer 1882. The letter has at some point before its purchase in 1948 been torn across the horizontal centre fold with no loss of text.

4. Possibly Frank Beard, though there is no evidence that he was ill at this time.

5. The pamphlet has not been identified but in April 1877 Macleod wrote a short article in the ‘Clinical Notes and Cases’ section of the Journal of Mental Science: ‘Cases of insanity in which Impairment or Loss of one or more of the Special Senses seemed the exciting Cause of the Disease’ (Vol. XXIII, April 1877, pp. 95-97). It gave examples of people who had become blind and then exhibited signs of mental illness. A cutting or offprint of this piece could have been the item Murdoch had enclosed.

6. The newspaper clipping has not been identified.

7. The postscript is squeezed under the valediction and the last sentence is written vertically up the right hand side of the page.

8. The name is written at the top of the first page above WC’s monogram.

[2020] TO CHARLES KENT, 31 MARCH 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 335.

90. G.P. | 31st March 1882

My dear Kent,

Needless to say that I was very sorry to miss you when you so kindly called. After working hard, I had gone out to get a natural Turkish Bath by the nearest approach to brisk exercise that I can accomplish. I am (for the 50th time) recorrecting my play<sup>2</sup> – and framing some short stories, with new gilding and decorations.<sup>3</sup> Next time you are near me – don’t forget that I want to know (1) how your health “gets along” – and (2) if you have any encouraging news yet of the Kelly Memorial.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Pigott was here the other day – delighted to have known you. So I may congratulate myself on having made two friends.

---

1. Direct to ‘Charles Kent Esqre | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. Rank and Riches, begun in 1880 but not staged until 1883.

3. See [2023] to Andrew Chatto, 24 April 1882.

4. See the note to [2018] to Kent of 28 February 1882.

[3368] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 31 MARCH 1882

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C13, p. 11.

With Mr Wilkie Collins's | compliments

---

1. The cut front panel of an envelope 71x130mm. It is addressed to 'C. L. Greene | Waltham | Massachusetts | U.S.A.' with a postmark 'LONDON W | 3 | MR 31 | 82'. The postage stamp has been removed. The address is not in WC's hand and his message is written on the inside of the envelope. A handwritten pencil note above the address in yet another hand reads 'See inside'. Originally glued to a page of an album numbered 39, along with a newspaper clipping of the text of [1694] to Nathaniel Beard, 13 August 1877. The clipping cites Temple Bar, where Beard's transcription of the letter appeared in the 1894 article 'Some Recollections of Yesterday' (Beard, p. 326). The MS was sold with a cabinet photograph of WC by Sarony.

[2021] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 11 APRIL 1882

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 336.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | London |
11th Avril 1882

Cher Vicomte de Heussey

Ma santé n'est pas encore rétabli. Ne pouvant quitter Londres, je vous prie de vous charger, comme ami et collaborateur, de toutes les démarches auprès de Monsieur de la Rounat,<sup>1</sup> relative à ma Comédie – "Le Pasteur".<sup>2</sup>

Je regrette vivement d'avoir perdu l'occasion d'être présenté à Monsieur le Directeur de l'Odéon.

A vous de cœur, | Wilkie Collins<sup>3</sup>

Monsieur Le Vicomte | du Pontavice de Heussey

---

1. Charles de la Rounat (1818–84), director of the Odéon Theatre in Paris and author of La Comédie de l'Amour.

2. No theatrical piece by WC that could correspond to this title is known.

3. Translation:

Dear Viscount de Heussey,

My health is still not restored. Unable to leave London, I beg you to take responsibility, as friend and collaborator, for dealing with Monsieur de la Rounat, in all matters concerning my play – "The Pastor".

I greatly regret having missed the opportunity to be introduced to the Director of the Odeon.

Yours sincerely, | Wilkie Collins

[2022] TO FRANK MARSHALL,<sup>1</sup> 22 APRIL 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 336–337.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
22nd April 1882

My dear Marshall,

Do you know what it is to have "threatenings" of gout? – you do.

This morning, certain signs appeared (sent in a bottle to the Doctor) which have been acknowledged as gouty signs by the arrival of a prescription. Weak brandy and water – nothing nice to eat – damnable ill-temper combined with what we used to call, "Funk", at school – there are my prospects, and there is the moral point of view from which I look at them. You are too good natured not to forgive me if (for the present) I only thank you heartily for your kind letter – and ask to be excused. It is really the truth to say that I don't know yet, whether I may not be once more on the sick list next week.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

Under the circumstances, I leave you to make my apologies to Mrs Marshall

---

1. Frank Marshall, married to the actress Ada Cavendish. See [2164] to her of 9 June 1883.

[2023] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 24 APRIL 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 337.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th April 1882

Dear Mr Chatto,

The First Volume of the collected stories is only now ready for the printer.

There is so much new writing still before me for Volumes 2 and 3, that I cannot hope to get the work done soon enough to give me time for the preparation of my new serial story. In my state of health, I must start with a good advance on publication between this time, and the end of July next.<sup>1</sup>

So, to my regret, I must put by the stories until after the publication of the new Serial.<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever WC

---

1. The new serial story is, of course, Heart and Science, due to start in the newspapers towards the end of July 1882.

2. The collection of short stories was in fact only completed five years later – see [2684] to Chatto of 9 March 1887.

[2024] TO WILLIAM A. SEAVER, 3 MAY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/8). Published: B&C, II, pp. 444–445.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

London | 3rd May 1882

My dear Seaver,

You are a man of multiform capacities. Having already contemplated you from many points of view, I now approach you as – a fountain of information.

=====

MR GEORGE DOLBY, who acted as manager and confidential agent for Charles Dickens during the novelist's last tour in America, proposes to publish all the letters Dickens wrote him on business. It is said that these epistles describe American audiences in the same vein of caustic pleasantry that pervades "Martin Chuzzlewit."<sup>2</sup>

=====

This announcement has appeared in all sorts of newspapers here – and in the U.S. The publication of the letters in England has been forbidden by Miss Hogarth (soul surviving Executor of Charles Dickens) – supported by the laws which makes [sic] her the proprietor of the copyright of the letters. The result – as we are informed in other newspaper reports – is that the book is to be published in America. And it has been further rumoured that Messrs Harper are to be the publishers.<sup>3</sup> I have written to Harper's London agents, and have heard from them in return. They have no information on the subject. Now, oh Fountain, can you spout?

(1). Is the book to be published in the U.S.?

(2) Are Messrs Harper ~~thought~~ to be the publishers?

We know that we can do nothing to prevent the American publication. But – if reprints or piracies make their appearance in England the hammer of the law is in hand – and down it comes! But we don't want to be on the look-out for Nothing. And we should be glad to hear if the letters are /likely/ to be published on the other side.<sup>4</sup>

In any case, here is a chance of hearing how you git along. After another fight with the gout I am "alive and kicking". By kicking I mean preparing a new serial story which (if all goes well with me) you will see, on your side, towards the end of July next.<sup>5</sup>

Always, my good friend, | Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC uses printed paper with the address ranged right and his monogram ranged left.

2. Pasted in the letter is the printed announcement, which can be found in numerous provincial newspapers during the later part of April (e.g., ‘Music, Art, Science and Literature’, Bath Chronicle, 27 April 1882, p. 6c).
3. In many cases (for example, in ‘Gleanings’, Birmingham Daily Post, 22 April 1882, p. 6e), the announcement WC pastes into his letter was prefaced with the phrase, ‘According to Harper’s Weekly,’.
4. In the event George Dolby’s Charles Dickens as I Knew Him: The Story of the Reading Tours in Great Britain and America (1866–1870), in narrative form but liberally citing CD’s correspondence, was published in both Britain (London: T. Fisher Unwin, 1885) and the United States (Philadelphia: J.B. Lippincott, 1885).
5. Heart and Science, serialized in New York in Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper from 22 July 1882.

[2025] TO J. C. SMITH,<sup>1</sup> 3 MAY 1882

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, III, p. 338, amended A&C3, p. 68.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | London
3rd May 1882

My dear Sir,

I have, this morning, received a proposal for the production of “Black and White” in the “Provinces”.<sup>2</sup>

Before I write to say that the right of representing the piece in the country has been already purchased, will you kindly inform me whether – under the altered circumstances mentioned in your letter of 11th February last – you see your way to beginning the country performances of “Black and White” within a definite period from the present time?

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Probably the provincial actor J.C. Smith.

2. WC’s play Black and White, from an idea of Charles Fechter, had opened in London at the Adelphi in March 1869. In 1877 Carlotta Leclercq seems to have taken it on tour – see [1692] of 1 August 1877 and [1705] of 26 September 1877, both to her. No provincial performances have been traced in 1882.

[3060] TO ROSA KENNEY,<sup>1</sup> 6 MAY 1882

MS: Berg (tipped into copy of F.G. Kitton, Charles Dickens by Pen and Pencil (2 vols; London: Frank T. Sabin, 1890–92), I, fol. p. 64). Published: A&C3, p. 54.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
6th May 1882

Dear Miss Kenney,

Pray excuse this late answer to your kind note. I am in better health now – and, this time, I hope nothing will prevent me from making one among your audience on the 15th.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Miss Rosa Kenney

---

1. Rosa A. Kenney (c. 1860–1905), aspiring actress, daughter of the dramatist Charles Lamb Kenney, who (the father) was to die only a few months later on 25 August. See [1949] to him of 29 March 1881.

[2026] TO CHARLES KENT, 13 MAY 1882

MS: Kansas (MS D11:10a/b), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 338–339.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 13th May 1882

My dear Kent,

While you are “lolling” in the lap of Nature, I am labouring under the commands of Art.

My new serial story must offer its first weekly part to readers, in “a syndicate of subscribing newspapers”, on the 22nd of next July.<sup>2</sup> When I add that “Vivisection” supplies me with one of my characters – and that “Hysteria” starts the strong interest of the story, you will understand that I am studying Physiology and writing a novel at one and the same time – and you will forgive an apology for a letter instead of a letter itself. When you come back, come here and let your healthy personal appearance show me that idleness is the whole Duty of Man. Let me also hear if there is any prospect of getting some money for poor Miss Kelly.<sup>3</sup> In short, let us have half an hour’s talk over a cigar – omitting, ~~for God’s sake, the one devilish and Questionable~~ subject of Ireland.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

The collected stories are deferred.<sup>5</sup> My new introduction threatens to fill half the book! And I dare not risk another illness by trying to write two novels together. Exercise and diluted champagne still keep the gout at its near distance.

Remember me kindly to Lord Lytton – if he is now at Knebworth.<sup>6</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esqr | Knebworth Park | Stevenage’, postmarked as dated.

2. Heart and Science.

3. On the Kelly Memorial, see [2018] to Kent of 28 February 1882.

4. The words struck out in the second half of this sentence have been partially erased on the manuscript at some point and the readings are, to some extent, conjectural. The issue of the day in Ireland was the continuing ‘Land War’ which WC was to take up in Blind Love – see Bachmann & Cox, pp. 12–20. One of the most notorious incidents had occurred on 6 May 1882 in Phoenix Park, Dublin, when two senior British administrators (Lord Frederick Cavendish and Thomas Burke, respectively Chief Secretary and Under Secretary) had been brutally assassinated by an extremist group known as the Invincibles.

5. On WC’s proposed new collection of short stories, see [2023] to Andrew Chatto of 24 April 1882.

6. Referring to the first Earl of Lytton, Edward Robert Bulwer-Lytton (1831–91), the son of the novelist Edward Bulwer-Lytton and friend of John Forster. After a successful diplomatic career, the earl of Lytton had served as Viceroy of India from 1876 to 1880. Staying in Knebworth Park (probably in one of the cottages built in the early 1850s by the Guild of Literature and Art, a charity founded by Bulwer-Lytton and CD – see Peters, pp. 96–97), Kent was within walking distance of the Lytton family residence at Knebworth House.

[2027] TO ROSA KENNEY,<sup>1</sup> 17 MAY 1882

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 32). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 339–340.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th May 1882

Dear Miss Kenney,

I saw your two scenes from “The School for Scandal” on Monday. An appointment carried me away, before I could hear the Juliet-soliloquy.<sup>2</sup>

It seemed to me that you were still under the influence of a system of Dramatic instruction which has directed your efforts a little too exclusively to the artifices and conventions of the stage. The excessive emphasis and deliberation in speaking, and the gracefully managed gestures, showed me how earnestly you had studied – but, at the same time, set up obstacles to discovery (in my case) which leave me still in the dark as to the natural abilities which have been so elaborately – (as I think, so over-elaborately) trained. I found myself wondering (first) how Miss Rosa Kenney was accustomed to speak and move in private life – and (secondly), making all the necessary allowance for the art which must present nature on the stage, I also wondered whether “Lady Teazle”<sup>3</sup> might not be brought a little nearer to nature, without losing her necessary relationship to Art? This last, is a question which, I venture to suggest, it may be worth your while to consider carefully – with a view to the future.

But I can only congratulate you (before I close my letter) on being able to act at all – in those cross-lights, on that creaking platform and with that atrocious piano perpetually in the way. To meet such difficulties without appearing to be in the least discomposed by them, deserved such “rounds of applause” as are – never heard from an assembly of ladies!

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. See [1949] to Charles Kenney of 29 March 1881.
  2. The specific performance in question has not been traced, but must be a public recitation, including two scenes from Sheridan and one from Shakespeare. Similar recitations by Kenney are announced in the Times around this period – one at the Marlborough Rooms at the end of March, and another at the Steinway Hall in June, for example. ‘Juliet’ presumably points to the balcony scene in Romeo and Juliet.
  3. The character in Sheridan’s The School for Scandal.

[2028] TO A. P. WATT, 17 MAY 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 340–341.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th May 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Thank you for your note – which relieves me of anxiety about the proofs.<sup>1</sup>

Are you likely to be near this neighbourhood – on any day in the present week – about your usual hour (2.P.M.)? Or, if not this week, early next week? If you can manage it – don’t write again, and choose your own day.

I am hard at work – and (I think) well at work.

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. Watt had arranged with the Liverpool Post, one of the provincial papers carrying Heart and Science, to set up the instalments in type early and provide copy to other papers carrying the story, after the proofs had been checked by WC. See the correspondence in the Berg Collection.

[2029] TO A. P. WATT, [20] MAY 1882<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 341.

Note: to be attached to the copy of first weekly part, when it goes to the printer.<sup>2</sup>

Please follow copy exactly

Please return copy with proofs, in each case, to the author

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.

The numbers to follow the first weekly number will be, generally, one third shorter than the first weekly number – the greater length of which is necessary in the interests of the story.

---

1. Conjectural dating from the endorsement on the verso: ‘Rec from | Mr Wilkie Collins | 22nd May 1882. | A.P.W.’. This note has been torn from what was presumably a short letter to Watt enclosing copy. Watt replied on 22 May confirming he had sent the instalment to the Liverpool Post (Berg Collection). In 1882 May 22 fell on a Monday and it seems likely that the note was posted on Saturday 20th, rather than on the Sunday or on the Monday morning.

2. Referring to the first part of Heart and Science, comprising the first four chapters of the novel, which was being sent to the Liverpool Post for serialization. WC clearly had little faith in the staff of the provincial paper and he was concerned that his manuscript was not lost. For other problems see [2031] to Watt, 1 June 1882, and Law, pp. 103–104.

[2030] TO A. P. WATT, 24 MAY 1882

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 341–342.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th May 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Many thanks for your friendly inquiries. I am rapidly getting better – after very severe pain.<sup>1</sup>

When you are next likely to be in this neighbourhood about two o’Clock, I shall be glad to see you – and, this next time, I hope no illness will prevent me from keeping my appointment.

Vy truly yours | WC

I am at my desk again today – and hope to be fit to resume work tomorrow

---

1. Watt had written to WC on 22 May explaining that he had called the previous day only to be informed that Collins was ill and unable to see him (Berg).

[3186] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 1 JUNE 1882

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C7, pp. 11-12 (misnumbered [3187]).

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | London 1st June | 1882

---

1. Clearly a signature for an autograph collector.

[2031] TO A. P. WATT, 1 JUNE 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 342.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st June 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Will you look at the enclosed cutting from the proof of my first Weekly part.<sup>1</sup> The vile paper will not even take up the printers’ ink, and it chokes the correcting pen with hairs and straws. Shall we give offence if you write to suggest pulling the proofs on better paper, paying of course the difference in expence?

Having to write to Mr Jeans yesterday I requested him (after calculating) to send you twelve revises for the future<sup>2</sup> – first sending four proofs to me. You will receive ten revises of the first weekly part.

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. Pasted to the blank third page of the letter, the cutting is from the proof of a single newspaper column printed on extremely coarse paper. Headed ‘Heart and Science Three’, indicating the third chapter of WC’s work in progress, the cutting carries seven lines beginning ‘Carmina took up the pen and set it down again with a sigh’. The opening weekly newspaper instalment of the novel comprised the first four chapters.

2. A. G. Jeans, managing editor of the Liverpool Post. See the note to [2032] to Watt of 2 June, concerning the reply from Jeans.

[2032] TO A. P. WATT, 2 JUNE 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 342–343.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd June 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Please read the enclosed.<sup>1</sup> I have telegraphed to Mr Jeans to return me the copy of the second Weekly part by today’s post.

Will you kindly see Mr Chatto, and make some arrangement with him to have the proofs set up for his magazine – payment to be made for the extra proofs (sent to newspapers) of course.<sup>2</sup> If you show him Mr Jean’s letter, he will I am sure understand that I have no time to waste, and must be sure of having my story set up without delays and correspondences as fast as I write it.

Difficulties in getting proofs are serious – only because annoyance is serious when one is writing a book, and one’s health is not good.

Always truly yours | WC
I only hesitated to do this in the first instance, being unwilling to trouble Mr Chatto

---

1. The letter to WC from A. G. Jeans, on the headed notepaper of the Liverpool Post series of newspapers and dated 1 June 1882, is bound in the volumes at Pembroke preceding the above letter, and reads as follows:

Dear Sir

I have to acknowledge receipt of your letters of the 30th & 31st inst. We did not contemplate having more than three or four weeks “copy” in type at once but I daresay we shall be able to meet your wishes. Kindly let me know how many instalments you w<sup>d</sup>. like to be in type before the story begins to appear.

I wrote Mr Watt some days ago ab<sup>t</sup> the title of the story. Of course you yourself are the best judge; but I do not think it a very happy one. I sh<sup>d</sup> not like to suggest that you sh<sup>d</sup> change it; but perhaps you will consider the matter. There is a good deal in a title.

I hope you will excuse me for speaking so freely.

I am yours truly | A.G. Jeans

Jeans had suggested to Watt in a letter of 23 May, now held in the Collins files among the Watt papers in the Berg Collection, that the title was ‘weak’.

2. Belgravia, published by Chatto & Windus, was scheduled to carry Heart and Science in monthly parts from August 1882.

[2033] TO F. C. BEARD, 4 JUNE 1882<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 343–344.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th June

My dear Frank,

Yesterday I told you I should not ask for physiological instruction in writing this book. Oh why do I rush to conclusion! This morning, a new idea has occurred to me. I am in dire want of information about the nervous consequences of a sudden fright – ending either in madness or idiocy.<sup>3</sup> If you were coming this way today or tomorrow, and can give me half an hour without inconvenience I shall be grateful.

Yours aftly | WC

---

1. Dating from the style of printed notepaper, only found from February 1878, and the unmistakable reference to Heart and Science. On 10 June 1882 WC writes to George Maclean Rose of having been ‘so busy, laying the foundation of a new serial story’.

2. Initialled and directed to ‘F. Carr Beard Esqre | 44. Welbeck Street’, stamp and postmark removed.

3. This must refer to Carmina’s breakdown after she is confronted by Mrs Gallilee in ch. 45 of Heart and Science, soon to begin its serial run.

[2034] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 5 JUNE 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 344.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th June 1882

Dear Mr Chatto,

You have done many kind things for me – but when you consented to rescue me from the provincial press which pulls proofs on the enclosed paper, and wants to know exactly how many more proofs I may require in the future between this and next month because it may be inconvenient to keep type standing you have established strong claims on my gratitude indeed! I shall send to you on Tuesday next some more chapters (in MS) to be set up – and it will be doing me another favour if the printers’ work can be done rapidly until the lost time has been regained – that is to say, until the printers have “caught me up” at chapter 8, on which I am now at work.<sup>1</sup>

Yours vry truly | Wilkie Collins

I reckon the first number in Belgravia to consist of six chapters, and to run very little over 24 pages. When these six chapters are in type please read them. My own vainglorious idea is that I have never written such a first number since “The Woman in White” – and I shall be anxious to know how it strikes you.

I am charmed with the “Bundle of Photographs” in this months number. There is a writer who can see, and who can make his readers see too!<sup>2</sup>

---

1. For the detail concerning WC’s dissatisfactions with the way the Liverpool Post carried out the task of setting up in type the instalments of Heart and Science, resulting in the request to Chatto & Windus to take over the job, see [2031] and [2032] to A. P. Watt of 1 and 2 June 1882.

2. Referring to the article ‘A Bundle of Photographs’ by Frederick Boyle in Belgravia, 47 (June 1882), pp. 453–463, about a visit to the South African Diamond Fields in 1871. Ironically WC was later to fall foul of Boyle over an alleged theft of the title of The Evil Genius – see [2761] to Andrew Chatto of 11 October 1887.

[2035] TO A. P. WATT, 7 JUNE 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 345.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th June 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

When you get the Revises of the First Weekly Part, will you kindly attach to each proof which you send to the newspapers, one of the enclosed “Notes to the Editor”?<sup>1</sup> As we are now setting up the copy in the Magazine form we cannot embarrass the printing of the story in its Monthly divisions, by references to “Weekly parts” – as it seems to me. Future Weekly parts, and “to be continued”, at the end of them, will have to be written, I suppose? Perhaps your clerk will do it – or, if more convenient, I will manage it with my “Hektograph”.<sup>2</sup>

I am beginning the 4th weekly part today, the 3rd has gone to New York.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Two copies of the note, both in the same hand (possibly that of Watt’s clerk James Baxter) but differing slightly in terms of accidentals, are bound in with the letters held at Pembroke. One reads

“Heart and Science” | First Weekly Part. | Note to the Editor

The parts of the story which follow will be generally shorter, by about one third, than the part now sent – which, it is hoped will rouse the interest of readers at the outset of the work.

The author relies on the Editor’s fellow feeling to permit no alteration of any sort to be made in his revised proofs, without first consulting him.

2. Available from the end of the 1870s, a hektograph (sometimes ‘hectograph’ or ‘chromograph’) was a device for producing multiple copies of written documents, by transferring a mirror image of the writing onto the surface of a gelatinous substance, to which blank sheets could be applied.

[2036] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 8 JUNE 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 345–346.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th June 1882

Dear Sirs,

Many thanks for the proofs of the first four chapters received yesterday evening. I now hasten to send copy for four chapters more.<sup>1</sup>

I have struck out “to be continued” on page 15 – as it does not apply to the monthly divisions of the first part in “Belgravia”. In the manuscript copy I have not added the divisions into weekly parts for the same reason. We can head the proofs sent to newspapers in writing – and so save some little trouble and expense when you kindly allow your printers to help my distribution among weekly periodicals.<sup>2</sup>

I would suggest that the first part in “Belgravia” should end with chapter VI. The next chapter is retrospective – and cannot be disconnected from chapter VIII, in which the story runs on again. Let me add, for your private information, that the weekly parts will be shorter as I promised. The first three or four parts must fix the interest in the reader’s mind – at the sacrifice of some extra work.

Vy truly yours | WC
Messrs Chatto & Windus

-
1. Of Heart and Science.
  2. See [2035] to A. P. Watt of the previous day.

[2037] TO NINA LEHMANN, 10 JUNE [1882]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Unknown. On sale: Jarndyce, 156 (December 2003), lot 124, pasted in Vol. I of The Woman in White, new edn (1860), from the library of Horace N. Pym. Published: BGLL, III, p. 346.

Saturday 10 June

Dearest Padrona,

I got up this morning – and found the gout-fiend in possession of my eye again. I may get over it with physic and care in a week or so – but there is no hope for me tomorrow. Your charming letter is my only consolation.

Ever aff<sup>ly</sup> yours | WC

-
1. Conjectural dating from the calendar and the attack of gout.

[2038] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 10 JUNE 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 346–347.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 10th June 1882

Dear Mr Rose,

I have been so busy, laying the foundation of a new serial story – and I am still, at times, so “scurvily treated” (as the old novelists say) by the gout – that my opportunities of letter-writing grow more and more limited. This is my best excuse for not having sooner thanked you for “The Prince and the Peasant.” I agree entirely in the necessity for such an act of righteous retaliation as this.<sup>1</sup> While the persons really responsible – the President and Congress of the United States – remain insensible to the disgraceful position of the nation towards literature (with the honourable example of all other civilised nations before them) retaliation is probably the one persuasive influence which they are capable of feeling. I only regret that the means of retaliation are not more formidable.

I gather from various signs that Canadian republication of English novels has suffered an inevitable check – the pages of your “Monthly” being one of my indications of the way in which the wind is blowing. But I don’t like to begin a new book without at least telling you of it by means of the enclosed proof. I am a bad correspondent and we are far apart – but I don’t forget those happy days, at Toronto – and of my two good friends at that time, the one friend who is now left to me has a value of his own – which I feel, but don’t talk about.

Let me hear (as I hope) that you have less reason to complain of your health than I have, and believe me,

always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
G.M. Rose Eqre

---

1. The work in question has not been traced but perhaps relates in some way to the publication in 1882 of The Prince and the Pauper by ‘Mark Twain’. Concerning the tensions between Twain and Canadian publishers, see the notes to [1653] to Hunter, Rose of 21 December 1876.

[2039] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 12 JUNE 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 347–348.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday, 12th June 1882

Dear Mr Chatto,

My best thanks for your kind and most friendly letter. Here is a proof of the encouragement you have given me, in the shape of more copy! If this can be at once set up, with the copy now in hand, and if I can receive my proofs not later than Friday next, I shall be able to correct them for Saturday’s American mail – and if they reach me early on Friday, I shall be also in time for the Melbourne direct mail on that day. With this advance, I shall get on without more fidgetting [sic] and hurrying, I hope. We will keep (with many thanks for your suggestions) to the present form of proof. It is far more agreeable to me than “slips” which are always slipping down the incline of my desk.<sup>1</sup> And the type (after that dreadful newspaper-proof) is perfect luxury.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. That is, regarding the instalments of Heart and Science, WC prefers Belgravia page proofs to ‘slips’ – galley proofs pulled on long strips of paper, for revision before the type is made up into pages – which Chatto had presumably suggested as more suitable for the newspapers carrying the serial.

[2040] TO CHARLES KENT, 13 JUNE 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 348.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th June 1882

My dear Kent

One word will do as well as a thousand. That morning, when I was in bed late, I woke with the gout in my eye again.<sup>2</sup> The other eye (sound so far) I must keep for my story. Ever yours
WC

If I am in bed next time – come up (if you don’t mind mounting to the top of the house).

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘Charles Kent Esqre | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. Triply underlined.

[2041] TO A. P. WATT, 13 JUNE 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 348–349.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th June 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Thank you for the prospectus, and for the note that accompanies it.<sup>1</sup> The prospectus could not be better – it is clearly expressed and worthily expressed.

As you are kindly willing to write the “Weekly Parts” and “to be continued” on the revises,<sup>2</sup> I enclose a form, or rather an additional Note, relating to the second Weekly Part only, which you will do me one more favour in copying. The German authorities are as troublesome – as only German authorities can be – in exacting the minutest formalities.<sup>3</sup>

Weekly parts 2, 3, and 4 are at Spottiswoode's.<sup>4</sup> Four proofs will be sent to me this week, I hope. In returning the proof for revise, I shall add "12 pulls of the Revise to Mr Watt." On the next page is my calculation. If I am wrong, pray tell me so – and any change shall be made. I send the corrected proofs to save time – and you will kindly follow with the duplicate Revise doing me another favour in the matter of my Australian duplicate .

Vy truly yours | WC

| Revises                                                                                                 |                      |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------|
| Country newspapers   and   one London Paper }                                                                  | 9                    |
| * Duplicate to Frank   Leslie's newspapers   New York                                                   | _____ 1              |
| * Duplicate to   H. Biers Esqre   Office of Crown Landand Survey   Melbourne   Victoria   Australia | _____ 1              |
| Revise kept for   the author                                                                                   | _____ 1              |
| Total                                                                                                      | _____ 12 Revises |

* In each of these cases the author will send a corrected proof in advance of Revise.

-
1. Watt's letter to WC of 8 June makes clear that this 'pamphlet' was a circular advertising Watt's agency which mentioned WC as a client author.
  2. As requested in [2035] to Watt of 7 June. In his reply of the following day Watt promises both to write these phrases on the proofs himself, and to send to each provincial proprietor WC's note concerning the first weekly part.
  3. The additional note is not bound into the Pembroke volumes and remains untraced, but presumably relates to the declaration 'The Right of Translation is Reserved' carried at the head of each newspaper instalment. See [1744] to Chatto & Windus of 30 April 1878 on the troubles of conforming to German copyright regulations.
  4. Printers to Chatto & Windus.

[2042] TO HUGH BIERS,<sup>1</sup> 16 JUNE 1882

MS: Private.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 349–350 (as to Henry C. Biers).

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London 16th June 1882

"Heart and Science"

My dear Biers,

By today's direct mail – registered book post – I send to you

(1) duplicate of 1st Weekly Part of my new story. Original proof sent by direct mail of June 2nd.

(2) Weekly Parts 2, 3, and 4, in corrected proof.

My work is now set up in type, by kind consent of the proprietors of the "Belgravia" Magazine, by their printers. The magazine page and divisions thus appear – but the Weekly Parts are marked. (N.B. The magazine is one of the periodicals which publish this story).

My love to you – I am too busy to write a word more.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. This is the last extant letter to WC's Australian agent – the sequence to him begins with [3177] of August 1873. Biers died in Melbourne in 1886.
  2. Pencil note in another hand by the date: 'Rec<sup>d</sup> 24.7.82'.

[2043] TO A. P. WATT, 20 JUNE 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 350–351.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
20th June 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

On the next leaf, you will find my “proof and Revise account”. With Weekly Part 5, we shall get into “straight running” I hope: i.e. – I shall send the corrected proof to Melbourne and New York – and you will send the revise. Newspaper: 10 Revises – Melbourne and New York: 2 Revises – total 12.

Talking of newspapers, I enclose a letter and a newspaper received last night. I have written to “Mr Potter” to say that his proposal is submitted to you as my agent. Perhaps your sources of information will tell us, if this last new Journal has some capital at its back?<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The Proofs corrected for Revise (Weekly Parts 1 to 4) have gone to Chatto today. Also copy for Weekly Part 5. Part 6, I begin tomorrow – with one eye again disabled by gout!

“Heart and Science”

Weekly Proof account (to guide Mr Watt in separating the Weekly Parts for the weekly newspapers)

|                |                |
|----------------|----------------|
| Weekly Part: – | Begins with: – |
| 2              | Chapter V.     |
| 3              | „ VII.         |
| 4              | „ IX.          |

Note 12 Revises of Weekly Parts 1 to 4 to be sent to Mr Watt. Of these: –

- 10 Revises to go to weekly newspapers
- 1 Revise of Weekly Parts 2, 3, and 4 to be sent as duplicates to
H. Biers Esqre | Office of Crown Land and Survey
Melbourne | Victoria | Australia
- 1 Revise of Weekly Part 4 to be sent as duplicate to

Frank Leslie’s Newspaper | New York

In these two cases, Proof and duplicate of Weekly Part 1 – and Proofs and duplicates of Weekly Parts 1, 2, and 3,<sup>2</sup> have been already sent by the author.

---

1. Watt’s reply to WC of 21 June (Berg) makes clear that the reference is to A. J. Potter’s local London weekly the South Eastern Herald (1882–1929), published in Deptford, Kent. Watt suggests that, while the paper is well established, the agreement with England may prohibit the serialization of Heart and Science in another London paper.

2. Here WC clearly intends to refer in turn to the Melbourne and New York cases.

[2044] TO JAMES PAYN, 22 JUNE 1882

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 265; B&C, II, pp. 445–446.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd June 1882

My dear Payn,

I was indeed sorry to miss seeing you when you kindly called here. Gout, calomel, and colchicum do succeed (when I am hard at work) in putting my tail down afterwards – and my way of acknowledging that humiliating circumstance is, going to sleep!<sup>1</sup> If you ever come my way again take the servant by the throat (if it is the young man) and round the waist if it is the plump parlour-maid or /the small girl/ – and, for God’s sake, step up and wake me. I got out for a walk yesterday for the first time – with a patch over my bad eye. Why does everybody, when they see you with a patch on, look as if you had personally insulted them??? Be assured, Bartlott is going to ask the question in Parliament.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. That is, the drugs he takes to alleviate the effects of gout tend to make him depressed, then send him to sleep.

2. Thus, presumably, for Sir Walter Barttelot Barttelot (1820–1893: ODNB), M.P. for West Sussex from 1860 until his death, famous for his die-hard Conservative views, stubborn resistance to Liberal measures such as the Irish Land Bill of 1881, and frequent parliamentary interventions. H. W. Lucy wrote that he was ‘one of the most impressive speakers in the House of Commons, and it is a pity he has so little to say that is worth hearing’ (Men and Manner in Parliament, London: T. Fisher Unwin, 1919, p. 145).

[2045] TO FRANCES POWER COBBE,<sup>1</sup> 23 JUNE 1882

MS: Huntington (CB121). Published: Cobbe, II, pp. 503–504; Farmer 1996, p. 370; B&C, II, pp. 446–447.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23rd June 1882

Dear Madam,<sup>2</sup>

I most sincerely thank you for your kind letter and for the pamphlets which preceded it. The “Address”<sup>3</sup> seems to me to possess the very rare merit of forcible statement combined with a moderation of judgment which sets a valuable example, not only to our enemies, but to – some of – our friends. As to the “Portrait”,<sup>4</sup> I feel such a strong personal interest in it that I must not venture in criticism. You have given me exactly what I most wanted for the purpose that I have in view – and you have spared me time and trouble in the best and kindest of ways. If I require further help, you shall see that I am gratefully sensible of the help that has been already given.

I am writing to a very large public both at home and abroad – and it is quite needless (when I am writing to you) to dwell on the importance of producing the right impression by means which keep clear of terrifying and revolting the ordinary reader. I shall leave the detestable cruelties of the laboratory to be merely inferred – and, in tracing the moral ~~result~~ influence of those cruelties on the nature of the man who practices [sic] them, and the result as to his social relations with the persons about him, I shall be careful to present him to the reader as a man not originally wicked and cruel, and to show the efforts made by his better instincts to resist the inevitable hardening of the heart, the fatal [del] stupefying of all the fine sensibilities, produced by the deliberately merciless occupations of his life. If I can succeed in making him, in some degree, an object of compassion as well as of horror, my experience of readers of fiction tells me that the right effect will be produced by the right means.

Believe me, vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Miss Frances Power Cobbe | &c &c &c<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Frances Power Cobbe (1822–1904: ODNB), writer and campaigner for Unitarian, philanthropist, feminist, and anti-vivisectionist causes, formerly on the staff of the Echo; see Sally Mitchell, Frances Power Cobbe: Victorian Feminist, Journalist, Reformer (Charlottesville: U. of Virginia Press, 2004).

2. In later letters WC uses the salutation ‘Dear Miss Cobbe’, which would be more in keeping with the addressee line at the foot of the letter here.

3. The British Library holds nearly thirty leaflets and tracts attributed to Cobbe and issued by the Victoria Street Society for the Protection of Animals from Vivisection. The reference here might be to ‘A Charity and a Controversy. An address, etc.’ (1881), or ‘The Higher Expediency. An address, etc.’ ([1880]).

4. Untraced, but presumably another tract from the Victoria Street Society.

5. Addressee line written up the left hand margin.

[2046] TO A. P. WATT, 24 JUNE 1882<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 351–352.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Saturday June 24

Dear Mr Watt,

The result does not surprise me. Let me thank you for kindly making the attempt.<sup>2</sup>

The Revises are no doubt now on your desk. They reached me yesterday evening.

Vy truly yours | WC

Perhaps it may prevent misunderstanding if you draw your pen through “August” and

“September” – for our weekly purpose Weekly part 2 is still in July.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. Dating from the calendar and the context.
  2. Presumably referring to the unsuccessful result of an attempt to ask E. A. Bartlett for permission for Heart and Science to be serialized also in the South Eastern Herald, as promised in Watt’s letter to WC of 21 June (Berg).
  3. Again referring to the serial instalments of Heart and Science.

[3061] TO JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL,<sup>1</sup> 27 JUNE 1882

MS: Boston Ath. Published: A&C3, p. 55.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27 June 1882

My dear Sir,

I have been suffering from a malady which is always lying in wait for me – the gout – and I can only hope to be well enough to have the pleasure of shaking hands with you towards the close of this week.

If you can favour me with a visit on Friday next at five o’clock, I shall be delighted to see you. If this appointment is not convenient, pray choose your own day and hour, after Monday next.

Between Saturday and Monday, I may be trying a little change of air.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

If Friday will suit you don’t trouble to write again.

Mr J. R. Lowell

---

1. James Russell Lowell (1819–91) American Ambassador to London 1880–1885, and previously editor of the Atlantic Monthly. WC was to meet him again at the dinner on 25 July 1888 at the Society of Authors – see [2863] to Little of 25 June 1888.

[2047] TO A. P. WATT, 3 JULY 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 332.

3rd July 1882

Heart and Science | Memoranda | =

5th Weekly Part begins with Chapter XI | 6th Weekly Part begins with Chapter XIII | =

Sent by author: –

Proof of fifth part to Melbourne by direct mail of June 30th

Proof of sixth part to New York by mail of July 1st.

WC

---

1. Since this memo is signed and dated by WC, and is not referred to in any of the other letters to Watt held at Pembroke or elsewhere, it was presumably sent as an independent communication.

[2048] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 4 JULY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 352.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th July 1882

Dear Mr Chatto,

If the present weekly part makes your October number too long – it will end as well with the end of chapter XV – leaving Chapter XVI to begin the November number. I calculate that if both these chapters are taken into October the number will run to 32 or 33 pages. The revised chapters XIII and XIV<sup>2</sup> only run as you will see to 22 pages.

Ever yours | WC
Andrew Chatto Esqre

---

1. Signed and directed to 'Andrew Chatto Esq | 214 Piccadilly W.'
2. The October instalment in Belgravia of Heart and Science in the end comprised only chs XI–XV.

[2049] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 5 JULY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 266; Farmer 1996, p. 371; B&C, II, p. 447.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th Jul 1882

My dear Fred,

My absence from Berkeley Square will have told you my gouty story – and my silence (when I ought long since to have thanked you for your most kind letter) only means that I am too weary of myself to write about myself. It has been a milder attack this time – and I am going to leave off my patch.

When you write to the Padrona give her my best love – and tell her to be as happy in Scotland as the happiest woman living. When she comes back to London, she will completely fulfil my aspirations, if she will let me know of it.

I have nothing else to say. My life is in my new book. Some critic said “The Woman In White” was “written in blood and vitriol.” This book is being written in blood and dynamite.<sup>1</sup>

Yours ever affly | WC

---

1. The anti-vivisection novel Heart and Science.

[2050] TO JAMES PAYN, 5 JULY 1882

MS: Morgan (MA 4500). Published: Pym, pp. 50–51; B&C, II, p. 448.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

5th July 1882

My Dear Payn,

Thank you most sincerely for “Vice-Versâ.”<sup>2</sup> If everybody who reads the book likes it as well as I do, there ought to be such a sale as will encourage the author to set to work again instantly.

Quaint humour and excellent observation of character, combined with a very rare fertility of invention, seem to me to be the main, and (in these days) the remarkable literary merits of the new writer. The schoolmaster, the German teacher, and the little girl are my favourites; and the one fault I have to find with one of these characters is, that there is nothing like enough of him – I mean the German teacher. He is not only amusing – he is sketched with such fine knowledge of human nature, on more than one side of it, that he is really interesting, and even pathetic. Being myself (as poor Thackeray used to say) “an old fiddler,” I should not have had the heart to dismiss him so speedily – as he is now dismissed – from the story.

If the writer’s next book is written without a fantastic supernatural notion as part of its groundwork, I shall anticipate a better book even than “Vice-Versâ.”

There is some monotony in the development of that queer transformation – so far as the father is concerned – due, as I think, to the limited range (thus far) of the author’s imagination. His hold on truth is already certain, but his wing is weak when he soars into the regions of grotesque fancy. In the meantime, there cannot be a doubt of it – he has a career before him.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours, | Wilkie Collins

-
1. WC uses printed green paper with his monogram.
  2. F. Anstey's popular comic fantasy Vice Versa, or A Lesson to Fathers (Smith, Elder, 1882), where a stuffy widower and his irreverent schoolboy son magically exchange bodies for a week.
  3. Anstey's next novel, The Giant's Robe (1884), a serious work concerning a stolen manuscript rather than a comic fantasy, was rather less successful.

[2051] TO A. P. WATT, 7–8 JULY 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 353–354.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th July 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Here I am again! It is quite likely that the postal result of my writing four weekly parts in each month, and of the direct mail to Melbourne only leaving twice in each month (as set forth in the annexed Memorandum) has already occurred to you.<sup>1</sup> In that case, I have only to make my excuses for troubling you – and you have the waste paper basket. If we are to guard against disaster by post, we must go by different ships.

Ever yours | WC

I have to trouble you with another memorandum – relating to the Revises of part 7 – which explains itself.<sup>2</sup>

1882 | =

Direct mail to Melbourne: | July 14th and July 28th | =

The author has sent corrected proof of Part 5, by mail of 30th June last, and will send Part 6 on July 14th. | =

Mr Watt sends duplicate Revise of part 5, by mail of July 14th next. But keeps back his duplicate Revise of part 6, to go by the mail of July 28th. In this way, proof and duplicate will never travel by the same ship.

-
1. This first memorandum is written on the third page of the letter itself, and is reproduced above.
  2. The second memorandum is found on a separate sheet of WC's monogrammed notepaper with his printed address, bound in after the letter itself in the volumes at Pembroke. It has been scored through with a single vertical line but reads as follows:

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th July 1882

Memorandum

Weekly Part 7. containing chapters XV and XVI | =

1. To write as follows on the Revise, sent to New York: –
This revise contains, on the last page, additional dialogue of some importance, added since the proof was sent. In all cases, if possible, please correct your proofs from the duplicate revise.
= | Belgravia
2. The October Monthly part takes in Chapter XV – and leaves Chapter XVI to begin the November part. You will see where to draw your pen through “to be continued”, and through the Magazine heading for November, before sending the Revises

[2052] TO CARLOTTA LECLERCQ, 10 JULY 1882

MS: Houghton (bMS Thr 467). Published: BGLL, III, p. 354.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th July 1882

Dear Mrs Nelson,

I am just recovering from another attack of gout – and I am hard at work, in spite of illness. If you will kindly arrange the matter with your friends, you will be my friend in the best sense of the word. Let it be, as you suggest, a sum for one year's right – and I will be guided (as to the amount) by what you and your friends think it right to offer under the circumstances. I well know what they risk – and I am sincerely ready to consider their interests in this matter.<sup>1</sup>

May the change of air do wonders! And may you set me an example of health! I am glad to hear you are teaching – for you understand this art as few of your [blot] [line erased] colleagues understand it in these days.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The theatrical performances in question have not been identified, but see [2068] of 12 September and [2077] of 2 November 1882, both to Leclercq.

[2053] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 13 JULY 1882

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 355.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th July 1882

Dear Mr Bentley,

A friend of mine – Mr Warren S. James – is a candidate for election at the Savile Club. If you happen to be in that neighbourhood during the present month, and will kindly add your name to the names of his “backers”, you will oblige me, and you will, I am sure, help him.<sup>1</sup> He is proposed by Mr Bickersteth and seconded by Mr Tyssen.<sup>2</sup>

You are, I hope, setting me an excellent example of health. The older I get, the more cruelly the gout treats me.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esq

---

1. WC made a similar request to Thomas Woolner – see [2054] to him of the same date. Warren Samuel James (b. 1849) was a solicitor at 30 Somerset House, Portman Square, where Henry Bartley also had his office. Neither Bartley nor WC had ever been members of the Savile Club, then located at 107 Piccadilly, but the former had presumably asked the latter to use his influence to gain support for his colleague's candidacy. George Bentley was a member of the Club from 1876 to 1894. According to Savile Club records, James was proposed on 19 June 1882 but was not elected.

2. John Joseph Bickersteth (b. 1851) and Amherst Daniel Tyssen (b. 1844) were both barristers who became members of the Savile Club in 1873. Bickersteth seems to have resigned when James was not elected.

[2054] TO THOMAS WOOLNER,<sup>1</sup> 13 JULY 1882

MS: Morgan (MA 4500). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 355–356.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th July 1882

Dear Woolner,

When you are next in the neighbourhood of the Savile Club will you kindly give a friend of mine the advantage of adding your name to the list of his “backers”? The candidate is Mr Warren S. James – proposed by Mr Bickersteth, seconded by Mr Tyssen.<sup>2</sup>

It is needless to add that you will oblige me, by helping my friend. I write instead of calling for two excellent reasons – first, I don't like to interrupt you – secondly, I am only now recovering from another attack of gout.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Thomas Woolner, Esq R. A.

---

1. The sculptor and poet – see [1519] to him of 4 March 1875. Woolner was a member of the Savile Club from 1868–70 and 1874–85.

2. See [2053] to George Bentley of the same date. Among other ‘backers’ of James’s candidacy were two Members of Parliament, Anthony John Mundella and Richard O’Shaughnessy.

[2055] TO C. A. GORDON,<sup>1</sup> 13 JULY 1882

MS: Pike. Published: Farmer 1996, p. 371; BGLL, III, p. 356.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th July 1882

Dear Sir,

Permit me to thank you for the kindness which has favoured me with a copy of your “Remarks on Experimental Pharmacology”. I am reading your work with the greatest of interest, and with a very sincere admiration of the clearness and impartiality with which the case is stated.

I am endeavouring to add my small contribution in aid of the good cause,<sup>2</sup> by such means as Fiction will permit – and I am especially obliged to you for valuable “facts” which I could never have discovered for myself

Believe me, dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

The morsel of paper enclosed will show the little I may be able to do will at least have a large audience.<sup>3</sup>

To | The | Surgeon General | C.A. Gordon, MD. C.B. | &c &c

---

1. C. A. Gordon, surgeon. His Remarks on “Experimental” Pharmacology were published in London by William Austin in 1882.

2. That of anti-vivisection.

3. Not found with the letter, but perhaps an announcement of the publication of Heart and Science as a newspaper serial.

[2056] TO A. P. WATT, 21 JULY 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 356–357.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Friday 21st July 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Will you kindly send on our one reserved set of Revises – from the beginning, to chapters XVII and XVIII inclusive – to the following address (by book post) by tomorrow’s (Saturday’s mail) [sic]?

Via United States | G.M. Rose Esqre | Messrs Hunter Rose & Co | Toronto | Canada.<sup>1</sup>

With regard to our newspaper subscribers – the 8th weekly part which you will receive this morning begins with chapter XVII – and the 9th weekly part (now at the printers) begins with Chapter XIX. It will be perhaps an additional security against mistakes to cross out in pencil the end of the 7th weekly part, which occurs on the same page (5) with our weekly beginning of part 8. I am almost ashamed to suggest this precaution. But, when I read in this morning’s Times that we have sent to Egypt a troop ship without troops – and Marines (by another ship) without ammunition – I tremble when I think of printers and Editors in the country!<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. Heart and Science was published by the firm of Hunter, Rose of Toronto in book form, though not in serial form, as George Rose’s Canadian Monthly ceased publication earlier in the year following a fire at the company (see [2060] to George Maclean Rose of 27 July 1882).

2. ‘The facts that the Orantes actually arrived here without troops and that the Marines by the Tamar came without their ammunition have excited the ridicule of foreigners’ (‘Latest Intelligence – Egypt’, Times, 21 July 1882, p. 5).

[2057] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 25 JULY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 357.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday 25th July 1882

Dear Mr Chatto,

If you will look at the end of the Revise this time – page 24 – you will see that I have deleted “to be continued”, because I now send three more pages of MS to complete the November monthly part. In the case of the weekly part, I don’t scruple to stop (as I have stopped in this case) in the middle of a chapter.<sup>1</sup> But the monthly interval is too long to admit of this way of treating the reader. If there is any editorial reason for shortening the November number of the story – then let it end with the end of Chapter XIX on page 21.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The ninth weekly instalment of Heart and Science in the newspapers ended in the middle of ch. XX.

2. In the event, the fourth monthly instalment (November) in Belgravia of Heart and Science comprised chs XVI–XX.

[2058] TO KATE FIELD, 26 JULY 1882

MS: Boston. Published: Whiting, pp. 405–406; BGLL, III, p. 358.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

July 26th 1882

Dear Miss Field,

Miss Hogarth took me to see the picture to which you refer, some months since. It was then in Bond Street. The proprietor mentioned an old friend of Dickens, who declared it to be a portrait of him. But Miss Hogarth’s opinion was unreservedly adverse. She positively refused to recognize the likeness. As for me, I had never even seen Dickens at the time when the picture was painted – and I represented the ignorant public. This is all I know of the matter – and it is, of course, for your personal information only.<sup>1</sup>

Is your “Fechter” published! And how can I get the book? Shall I write to Mr Osgood?<sup>2</sup> I ought to have asked these questions when you kindly called here. But I never do what I ought.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins.

---

1. We have not been able to identify the portrait in question.

2. Kate Field’s Charles Albert Fechter, including WC’s ‘Recollections of Charles Fechter’ – see [1934] to Kate Field of 14 December 1880. A presentation copy inscribed by Field was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 105).

[2059] TO A. P. WATT, 26 JULY 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 358–359.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

26th July 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Thank you for the letter, and the “proposal”. This makes the third application for a new novel that has reached me in the course of a week!<sup>1</sup>

To return for a moment to Australia. It has struck me that the newspapers there may want as many Revises as they can get by each mail. I will therefore send corrected weekly Parts 7 and 8, by direct mail of the 28th. And you will send by the same mail duplicate revise of part 6. By the next direct mail – August 11th – please send therefore duplicates of Parts 7 and 8 together.

When the Revises of Part 10 (now at the printers) reach you, please add to the usual written heading, “Chapter XX continued”. The place at which the insertion is to be made is marked on the enclosed page of the proof of Part 9.<sup>2</sup> The chapter runs to such a length that I have been obliged to divide it for our weekly issue.

Yours vry truly | WC

A.P. Watt Esqre

---

1. The relevant letter-book containing Watt’s letter to WC not being extant, none of the proposals mentioned has been identified.

2. The page of proof is bound into the volume held at Pembroke after the letter itself. It is double-sided, and numbered pages 23–24, though the material eventually appeared on pages 75–77 of the November issue of Belgravia. It begins ‘[Car-]mina when you leave here. My dead brother’s child ...’ and ends “‘Something wrong here; Benjulia shall tell me what it means.’”, from the middle of the twentieth chapter of Heart and Science, which was substantially revised before appearing in volume form. In addition to a number of proof corrections, Collins writes ‘See over’ at the top of page 23, and on page 24 writes ‘chapter XX’ at the top, ‘The end of Weekly Part 9.’ vertically in the right-hand margin, and a horizontal line followed by ‘Weekly Part 10 | Chapter XX continued.’ underneath the proof text, which ends around a third of the way down the page.

[2060] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 27 JULY 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Extract: Davis, p. 295 (dated 1880, p. 334 n. 24). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 359–360.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Thursday. 27th July 1882

My dear Mr Rose,

Here is a late acknowledgment of your friendly letter – but a serial story and a large correspondence are not easily carried on together – and when the day’s work is over, the day’s letters do sometimes look at me on the desk, and find me too lazy or too weary to notice them.

Your kind proposal is, of course, accepted. On Saturday last, my agent sent to you a first batch of proofs, by book-post – which have, I hope, reached you safely. Nine newspapers, and one magazine, in Great Britain and Ireland, subscribe to publish the story periodically. Add newspapers in America and Australia – in France, German and Italy – and the “traffic” in proofs becomes rather too complicated to be managed without help.

Your fire startled, and your news of the stoppage of the magazine, grieved me.<sup>1</sup> You write like a philosopher of both catastrophes – and you are entirely right. Domestic misfortunes are the only serious misfortunes. And I write with some experience of domestic anxieties – (of the irregular kind) – having a small “morganatic” family of three children, and remembering what I suffered when two of them were seriously ill.

To return, for a moment, to the magazine. If you “try again”, there are two considerations to be taken into account as I think. First, a cheaper periodical. Second, a different system of editing. As to cheapness, there is a prospect here in the autumn of a new sixpenny magazine, which it is thought will compel the shilling magazine to follow that example. You know best, whether the appeal to a larger public is possible in Canada. As to the editing, it has always (as I think) wanted variety. Too many articles of the same sort admitted, sometimes close together, into the same number. Look back at the farewell number, “Musical and Theatrical reminiscences” and “Toronto and Theatricals” – in the same issue. Two serious essays or criticisms, following each other – “Free Thought” and “Schools of Poetry”.<sup>2</sup> The general reader opens the magazine – and says “Oh, Lord! Nothing but theatricals!” or “Confound it, nothing but criticism and religion!” And it is this reader who makes a periodical “pay”! Let me add, in justice, that the farewell words are in excellent taste. A difficult task admirably performed. No more room! and posttime near!

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. There seems to be have been a fire at the firm’s premises in Toronto, while the final issue of Rose-Belford’s Canadian Monthly appeared in June 1882.

2. The final (June 1882) issue of Rose-Belford’s Canadian Monthly featured: ‘Musical and theatrical reminiscences’ by John Hector, pp. 579–582; ‘Toronto and its early theatrical entertainments’ by George M. Harrington, pp. 600–613; ‘Free thought and irresponsible thought’ by W. D. LeSueur, pp. 614–620; and ‘Two schools of modern poetry’ by J. F. Stevenson, pp. 621–627.

[2061] TO CHATTO & WINDUS,<sup>1</sup> 2 AUGUST 1882

MS: Harkness. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 360–361.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd Aug<sup>t</sup> 1882

Dear Sirs

I sent you the copy in such a hurry yesterday that I forgot to add a memorandum of some more little needs of mine, which you will find on the next page.<sup>2</sup> Excuse my giving you this additional trouble. I don’t know what “resident authority” to address at Spottiswoode’s.<sup>3</sup>

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Though there is no formal indication of the recipient, this can only be to Chatto & Windus.
  2. The second leaf has been torn away.
  3. Spottiswoode & Co. of New Street Square were then the printers of Belgravia, as indeed of other Chatto & Windus publications.

[2062] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 23 AUGUST 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 361.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23rd Aug<sup>t</sup> 1882

Dear Sirs,

I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of a cheque for £25 – for my contribution to “Belgravia” for the August month – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Chatto & Windus

-
1. Chatto & Windus paid WC at the rate of one pound per page for his serial contributions to Belgravia – see Law, p. 260 n. 18. No payment for this amount appears in WC’s bank account between 24 June and the end of December, though there are various others for similar sums from Chatto & Windus (Coutts: WC).

[2063] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 23 AUGUST 1882

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 361–362.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23rd Aug<sup>t</sup> 1882

Dear Mr Chatto,

Will you kindly submit this little story enclosed to your “Reading Editor”? The writer has been for some time employed by periodicals of the minor sort – and has aspirations in the direction of the more important magazines. It is a case in which I am interested – or I should not have troubled you.<sup>2</sup>

If the verdict is adverse, you have only to have it left in the office addressed to me – and my messenger shall bring it back, when he delivers my weekly copy. I have not been able to read the little story myself – being just now immersed in physiology, in my spare hours, in preparation for coming numbers of “Heart and Science”.

Ever yours | WC

Andrew Chatto Esq

-
1. Signed and directed to ‘Andrew Chatto Esqr | 214 Piccadilly | London. W.’.
  2. The title and author of the ‘little story’ remain unidentified; no reply to WC’s request is found in the letter-books at Reading.

[2064] TO A. P. WATT, 26 AUGUST 1882

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 449. Published: BGLL, III, p. 362.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

26th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

My Australian proof account – as a guide to your Revises – is on the other side.

In the Revises of the 13th Weekly Part delivered here last night – containing chapter XXVII – there is a vile press error at page 6 – 5th paragraph from the top, 3rd line of the paragraph – for “unexchanged” read unchanged. If there is an opportunity of making this correction, please let it be done.

I don’t know whether you are in or out of town. For your own sake, I hope you are looking at sand and sea, instead of streets and omnibuses.

Vy truly yours | WC

A.P. Watt Esq.

1882 | =

Proofs forwarded to Australia by W.C. during the present month.

|                          |           |
|--------------------------|-----------|
| Weekly Parts             | Mail      |
| 9} containing chapters   | Augt 11th |
| 10} XIX to XXI inclusive | Augt 11th |

|                         |           |
|-------------------------|-----------|
| 11} containing chapters | Augt 25th |
| 12} XXII to XXVII       | Do        |
| 13} inclusive           | Do        |

[2065] TO A. P. WATT, 31 AUGUST 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 363.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

31 August 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your letter, enclosing a cheque for £199..10.. – being the amount received (less your commission) for the first instalment of the purchase money, due from the subscribing newspapers for the right of periodically publishing “Heart and Science.”<sup>1</sup>

Believe me, vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I have also to thank you for the statement of accounts

A.P. Watt Esq.

---

1. That is, WC receives a total of £665 from the nine British newspapers serializing the novel, paid in three equal instalments (Law, p. 260 n. 18). Each instalment thus comes to £221-13s-4d, from which Watt’s commission of 10% (£22-3s-4d) is deducted, leaving a payment to WC of £199-10s. Two payments of £199-10s are recorded in WC’s bank account on 26 October 1882 and 1 February 1883, though the cheque mentioned in this letter does not appear (Coutts: WC).

[2066] TO WYBERT REEVE, AUGUST 1882

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve 1889, our copy text; Reeve 1891, p. 112; Reeve 1906, p. 459. Published: BGLL, III, p. 363 (with Reeve 1906 as copy text).

I am getting on with a new story. I am striking a blow in my new story at the wretches who are called vivisectors.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Heart and Science, which started to appear as a serial in late July. Reeve 1889 introduces the extract: ‘In Man and Wife he protested against men overtraining, and in August 1882 he writes me—’.

[2067] TO A. P. WATT, 9 SEPTEMBER 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 363–364.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Saturday 9th Sep / 82

Dear Mr Watt,

If this reaches you in time, there is one misprinted word in the Revises which reached me last night. Page 29, 5th line from the bottom. For “the jackal had raised the lion”,

Read roused the lion.<sup>1</sup>

If the Revise has been already been sent, the mistake is of no serious importance this time.

Vy truly yours | WC

If you have extra Revises by you, it may perhaps be as well if you will kindly send a second batch by book-post to Canada at your convenience.

G.M. Rose Esq. | Messrs Hunter Rose & Co | Toronto | Canada.<sup>2</sup>

Pray don’t trouble to answer this

---

1. In ch. 32 of the revised version of Heart and Science appearing in volume form.

2. Diagonally to the left of this address, in Watt’s hand, is an annotation reading: ‘Sent | 19 Sept 1882 | chaps 19 to 32 | inclusive.’

[2068] TO CARLOTTA LECLERCQ, 12 SEPTEMBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 364.

Ramsgate | 12th Sept: 1882

My dear Mrs Nelson,

I am “in retreat”, hard at work.

Will you look again at the marked passage in your correspondent’s letter? – returned herewith.<sup>1</sup> I beg to decline dealing with a gentleman, who only wants “Mr Collins’s version” (of ~~his~~ Mr Collins’s own book) to get your “business” – and who has got “Miss Bateman’s version”<sup>2</sup> (an American theft of course) to fall back upon. I sincerely appreciate the honourable feeling which has induced you to make ~~a condition~~ my play a condition of giving “your business” to this gentleman, who has his piracy all ready in his pocket. But I will have nothing to do with him.

Do you know of any theatrical company which has made Mrs Henry Wood (the authoress of “East Lynn”) a sharer in the thousands and thousands of pounds gained by theatrical people out of the literary theft of her story and characters? I have never heard of any such act of honourable restitution.

Goodbye. I write in sorrow – not in anger.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The enclosed letter has not been traced, and neither the identity of the actress’s correspondent nor the work by WC in question have been clarified – though the same matter is probably referred to in [2077] to Carlotta Leclercq of 2 November 1882.

2. Kate Bateman (Mrs Crowe; 1842–1917), Anglo-American actress who played Sarah Leeson in the 1877 adaptation of The Dead Secret at the Lyceum.

[3332] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 26 SEPTEMBER 1882<sup>1</sup>

MS: Unknown. Extract: Pall Mall Gazette, 24 September 1889, pp. 1–2, our copy text;<sup>2</sup> A&C11, pp. 13–14.

Rather more than two-thirds of ‘Heart and Science’ are completed – and I feel the want of a week’s rest. I go away to-day to the seaside.<sup>2</sup> If it is desirable to let the printers know that there will be no copy sent on this day week, will you kindly give instructions to have it done when you send the present supply? The terrible part of the story is now very near – and I want to write it with a brain refreshed.

---

1. WC writes on a Tuesday and stayed in Ramsgate more than two weeks, returning on 12 October. Our dating is based on [2069] to A.P. Watt, 26 September 1882.

2. The extract is one of twelve to Chatto published in the Pall Mall Gazette the day after WC died. They are contained in the report of an interview with Andrew Chatto by a reporter for the paper as the news of WC’s death emerged, headed ‘Wilkie Collins. Some unpublished letters and memoranda’. The other eleven letters extracted are previously recorded. This extract is introduced:

FRESH BRAIN WANTED FOR THE DÉNOUEMENT.

When it came to the dénouement Collins took a fillip of fresh air, as will be seen by the following. “Science and Heart,” the novel he refers to, turns on vivisection, of which the novelist was a vehement opponent. The doctor villain is a vivisectionist, and is suspected of cutting up his own child. If you want to know more read the book. Here is the letter: –

[2069] TO A. P. WATT, 26 SEPTEMBER 1882

MS: Pembroke.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 365.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
26th Sept 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

The 19th Weekly Part goes to the printers today (Chapters XXXIX and XL) – and I am going to take a weeks rest, before I begin on Chapter XLI.

The Revises of Part 18 complete the second third of the story. If I am away from London when you receive my second instalment from the newspapers, please pay the money to my account with Messrs Coutts & Co, 59 Strand. If I return speedily, I will of course let you know it. I leave London today. All letters will follow me.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I forget whether I did or did not ask you to oblige me by forwarding a second supply or your surplus revises to my Canadian publishers?<sup>2</sup> If I did forget, the address is

G.M. Rose Esq. | Messrs Hunter, Rose & Co | Toronto | Canada.

My last communication with Melbourne despatched weekly parts 16 and 17 on the 22nd of this month.

A.P. Watt Esq.

---

1. Bound out of order in the volumes at Pembroke, following [2011] to Watt of 8 February 1882.

2. Collins had already made the request in [2067] of 9 September 1882.

[2070] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 4 OCTOBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 365.

Ramsgate | 4th October 1882

Dear Sirs,

I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of a cheque for £22.-.- for my contribution to “Belgravia” for September 1882 – copyright and all other rights, being reserved by the author.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Again at the rate of one pound per page for the instalment of Heart and Science; recorded in WC’s account on 5 October (Coumts: WC).

[2071] TO A. P. WATT, 9 OCTOBER 1882

MS: Fales, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 366.

Ramsgate | Monday 9th Oct: 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

I propose returning to London, on Thursday next. Will you kindly give me a “look-in” at your usual time, on any day afterwards which may be most convenient to you?

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
A. P. Watt Esqre

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘A. P. Watt Esqre | 34. Paternoster Row | London | E. C.’, postmarked ‘RAMSGATE | E | OC 9 | 82’.

[2072] TO A. P. WATT, 26 OCTOBER 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 366.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 26th October 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your letter, enclosing a cheque for £199..10.. – being the amount received (less your commission) for the Second Instalment of the newspaper subscriptions for the right of periodically publishing “Heart and Science”<sup>1</sup>

Believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
A.P. Watt Esq.

---

1. Duly recorded in WC’s bank account on 26 October (Coumts: WC). Concerning the first instalment, see [2065] to Watt of 31 August 1882.

[2073] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 27 OCTOBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 366–367.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 27th October 1882

My dear Mr Rose,

I am late, in saying it – but I am indeed sincerely rejoiced to hear that your establishment has risen from its ashes to pursue its well-deserved career of prosperity.<sup>1</sup>

My only excuse for this long-delayed reply is – my story. It is the most exacting and, exciting work of fiction that I have written for many a long year past, and when the days work is done, I recoil from pen, ink and paper, and feel fit for nothing but rest. When I have said this, I know you will understand and excuse me.

By this time, you have I hope received a large instalment of proofs, forwarded by my agent. The next supply – if all goes well with me – will bring the Conclusion of the story

With kindest regards | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [2060] to Rose of 27 July 1882 concerning the fire.

[2074] TO A. P. WATT, 30 OCTOBER 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 367.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th Oct: 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Many thanks for the kind interest you have taken in this matter. It is needless to say that I decline to avail myself of the proposal.

Apart from pecuniary interests, it is a relief to find that my old friend at Leipzig can outbid the opposition after all.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Presumably referring to competition to publish a ‘Continental’ English-language edition of Heart and Science. Here ‘my old friend’ is Bernhard, Baron Tauchnitz (1816–95) of Leipzig, while ‘the opposition’ is presumably Karl Gradener of Hamburg, since a pencil annotation in Watt’s hand beneath the text of the letter reads ‘Baron Tauchnitz | Carl Gardener [sic] & Co | Hamburg’. In the late 1870s, the house of Gradener took over the publication of Asher’s Collection of English Authors, formerly issued by Adolph Asher & Co. of Berlin.

[2075] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 31 OCTOBER 1882

MS: Bodleian (MS. Autogr. d.21, f. 159). Published: BGLL, III, p. 367.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

31st Oct: 1882

Dear Sirs,

I have the pleasure of acknowledging receipt of a Cheque for £28.-.- in payment for my contribution to “Belgravia” for October – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Again at the rate of one pound per page for the instalment of Heart and Science. Duly credited to WC’s bank account on 1 November (Coutts: WC).

[2076] TO A. P. WATT, 31 OCTOBER 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 368.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

31st Oct: 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

I entirely forgot the little matter set forth in the enclosed paper, when I had the pleasure of seeing you last.<sup>1</sup>

The story is an annual contribution – written for a friend of mine in New York – who pays £50.-.- – and whose periodical is published a day or two only before Christmas Day.<sup>2</sup>

“Belgravia” has, of late years, published the story in England. But “Heart and Science” crowds me out this year.<sup>3</sup>

If there is anything further that I can explain, pray let me know.

Yours truly | WC
In great haste

---

1. The following memorandum on a torn sheet of lined paper is bound in following the letter itself in the volumes at Pembroke:

1882) Short Story for a Christmas Number (New) | by W.C. | (Private)

1. Length: not less than 16 pages of “Belgravia”

2. To be published: On Saturday December 23rd, if in a weekly periodical. In the Number for January 1883, if in a monthly periodical.*

3. Rights sold: Periodical publication only in Great Britain and Ireland. Copyright and all other rights reserved by the author.

* calculating in this latter case, on the actual publication being in December 1882.

2. E. A. Buck’s Spirit of the Times (New York) carried a Christmas tale from WC every year from 1876 to 1887 (see Gasson, p. 142). ‘Fie! Fie! Or the Fair Physician’ appeared on 23 December 1882, pp. 562–565; in Britain Watt arranged publication in the Christmas Supplement (23 December 1882) of the Pictorial World, a sixpenny illustrated weekly starting up in 1874 along the lines of the Illustrated London News or Graphic.

3. Belgravia had carried WC’s ‘The Captain’s Last Love’ in January 1877 and ‘How I Married Him’ in January 1882.

[2077] TO CARLOTTA LECLERCQ, 2 NOVEMBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 369.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd Nov<sup>r</sup> 1882

Dear Mrs Nelson,

I am working seven hours a day – and I am too completely exhausted to do anything but rest afterwards. I will consult my lawyer – and let you know the result in time for post on Saturday next. The mail of that day – (post letter before 5 P.M.) – leaves the same evening for Queenstown and the U.S.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

I see no objection to selling the American right only for £200 – (to be divided between us).<sup>1</sup>

---

1. The (theatrical) right in question has not been identified, though the work is probably the same as that discussed in [2068] to Carlotta Leclercq of 12 September 1882.

[2078] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 3 NOVEMBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Extract: Baker 2001, p. 511. Published: B&C, II, pp. 449–450.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

3rd Nov<sup>r</sup> 1882

My dear Collaborateur,

This is my first opportunity of writing to you. I have been at the seaside, sailing and fishing, in the intervals of work.

Your silence was attributed by me to the sad cause which you mention – and for that reason, I hesitated to write/ on/ ~~on~~ my side. To my mind, there is no other calamity so cruel and so hard to endure as domestic calamity. Pain and poverty are bad enough – but courage can face them. But where is the man to be found, who is not conquered by anxiety and distress at home? I hope it is needless for me to say that you have my truest sympathy – little enough to offer, but all that I have to give.<sup>2</sup>

To turn to a less painful subject.

I am now publishing – in periodicals – a new story called “Heart and Science”. Here and in America it has produced a very strong impression – and is considered (rightly as I think) a great advance on “The Black Robe.” Abroad, three Italian newspapers will publish the translation – and, in Germany, two publishers have been “bidding against each other” for the German translation. I have also had a proposal from Paris – to which I have replied that I am not now at liberty to [del] negotiate. In character and humour, I have never, as I believe, done anything like it before. I mention this, because it is a question – after you have waited so long, and have been encountered by such unexpected obstacles – whether it might not be advisable to let “Heart and Science” precede “The Black Robe”, on the chance that it may produce better terms for you under those circumstances. I will of course send to you cuttings from one of the newspapers here which publishes the work – so that you may judge for yourself.

On the other hand, after what has happened – I hesitate to ask you to take the responsibility of publishing this new book. The loss of the periodical publication is a serious loss to you – and is also the failure of an excellent advertisement for the novel in book-form. Shall I try, through my agent here, to dispose of the French right of translation – stipulating that you shall be the translator[?] If I can manage in this way to secure a French newspaper for the feuilleton – this might be an additional reason for postponing “The Black Robe”. If “Heart and Science” succeeds in the newspaper, the proprietors might be ready and willing to let “The Black Robe” follow. Will you consider this? In the meantime, – if you don't agree with me – I enclose the letter of introduction to Hachette.

Ever yours | WC

P.S. It has /just/ struck me, that Hachette might treat for the right of newspaper publication. or [sic] that you might at least try to make this right a part of your negotiation.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
  2. The domestic calamity in question has not been identified.
  3. Nearly a year later negotiations were in train with the Parisian newspaper, Le Temps; see [2201] to A.P. Watt, 16 October 1883.

[3348] WATSON BROTHERS,<sup>1</sup> 9 NOVEMBER 1882

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C12 pp. 8-9.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>
9th Nov 1882

Gentlemen,

I have repeatedly expressed my surprise at the delay which has occurred in the rendering of your account – and the first and only communication on the subject which I have received is your letter of today's date. After inquiry here, I cannot discover that any one in my house is responsible for this state of things. In defence of my own time, I am obliged to close my door on strangers who call without a previous appointment. But why your letters should be the only letters addressed to me which I have not received is a mystery which I should be glad to have cleared up. If your “Commercial Diary” or your “Letter-book” contains entries relating to the writing and posting of letters and accounts, previously addressed to me, I shall /be/ obliged if you will favour me with copies of the same.

In the meantime I enclose my cheque, with the account – which please return receipted.<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Watson Brothers<sup>4</sup>

-
1. Probably ‘Watson Bros, mine agents and sharedealers’ of 1 St Michael's Alley (Kelly, 1880). However, no specific buying or selling of shares is recorded in WC's bank account around this time (Coutts: WC). There were two other firms of the same name in London: a bookseller and stationers at 31 Minories, and builders at 5-6 Charlotte Street. The sum paid (of £90-18s, see below) seems high for either of them.
  2. WC uses printed stationery with his monogram.
  3. The cheque for £90-18s was debited to WC's account on 11 November. WC had in fact made two previous payments under the same name: £34-11s on 24 November 1879 and £7-10s-6d on 6 August 1881 (Coutts: WC).
  4. In another hand ‘Cheque on drawer’ is written above the WC monogram and ‘Wilkie Collins | Nov 9th 82’ on the otherwise blank fourth page. A number in pencil ‘84246’ above the printed address is clearly modern.

[3302] TO THE EDITOR OF THE SPIRIT OF THE TIMES, 15 NOVEMBER 1882

MS: Unknown. Facsimile: 'Wilkie Collins' System and Story', (New York) Spirit of the Times (9 December 1882), p. 525, our copy text.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C10, pp. 19–20.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 15th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1882

9.A.M. – Dear Editor, Bed at night is a capital place to sleep in. Bed in the morning is a capital place to think in. The title has just come to me, and the story shall follow.

Fie! Fie! | or | The Fair Physician.

=

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

1. After the facsimile comes this editorial comment:

The above facsimile of a note which we have just received from the greatest of living English novelists explains itself, so far as the title of the new story, written by Wilkie Collins especially for THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT, is concerned. But it is also interesting and valuable as affording a clue to the system upon which the great novelist works. He is as punctual as a clock and as exact as a railway time-table. His stories are mapped out months, and even years, ahead. So many pages a day of "copy" are produced; the novel will be finished in so many days – these are his precise calculations. Two months ago, talking with the Editor of THE SPIRIT in London, Wilkie Collins said: "I shall finish my present serial on the 15th of November, and will then begin my Christmas story for my favorite SPIRIT." The date of the above note shows that, on the very day named in this conversation, Wilkie Collins commenced his annual contribution to our columns by selecting his title. "The Fair Physician" indicates the direction which the story will take and the character of its heroine. Wilkie Collins has observed the remarkable increase in numbers, usefulness, and popularity of the lady-doctors, and he has chosen one of them, this year, as the central figure of the latest creation of his genius, and thus, as usual, leads the way to a new field for romance. It is characteristic of Wilkie Collins that, while his style has not varied for years, his characters, plots, and incidents are always as novel as the day's news, abreast with the progress of the age, and perfect reproductions of the most recent issues of the inexhaustible mint of Nature. Of all writers in the world, therefore, Wilkie Collins best embodies in fiction, and finds his most appropriate place in, THE SPIRIT OF THE TIMES.

2. WC uses printed stationery with his monogram.

[2079] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 21 NOVEMBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 369.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st Nov<sup>r</sup> 1882

Dear Sirs,

Under another cover, I send you by post the remainder of this week's copy of "Heart and Science" – so as to give the printers more time. Kindly let me have one line to say that it has reached you safely.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[2080] TO FRANCES POWER COBBE, 21 NOVEMBER 1882

MS: Huntington (CB 122). Published: B&C, II, p. 451.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

21st November 1882

Dear Miss Cobbe

Pray forgive this scandalously late acknowledgement of your very kind letter and of the terrible book which accompanied it.<sup>2</sup> I have been leading the life of a hermit – away from my friends and my correspondents – devoted wholly to my Story. The last chapters are only now in view – and I am beginning to feel the continued effort and excitement severely. When the day’s work and the hour of exercise that follow are over, I am [del] fit for nothing but my armchair and my cigar – having just life enough left in me to feel the pleasure and the encouragement which I owe to your letter.

Believe me | most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I must not do more than allude indirectly to the detestable cruelties revealed in “Bernard’s Martyrs.”<sup>3</sup> Half of my audience, at least, – if I told them a tenth part of what you know – would close the book.

Don’t believe /in/ that delusion which declares tall men to be good natured because they are tall – it is nothing but one of the results of our inveterate insular adorations of size and strength. I did my best to attack a similar prejudice about fat people in the character of “Count Fosco.”

-
1. Black engraved address ranged right, monogram ranged left, on sea-green paper.
  2. Presumably referring to the inflammatory pamphlet mentioned later in the letter.
  3. Frances Power Cobbe’s pamphlet, Bernard’s Martyrs: A Comment on Claude Bernard’s Leçons de Physiologie Opératoire (Office of the Society for Protection of Animals from Vivisection, 1879).

[2081] TO A. P. WATT, 26 NOVEMBER 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 370.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

26th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Thank you for your kind letter. I will not fail to write to Tauchnitz, and request him to make his offer – alledging [sic] as the reason, that “another proposal has been received by me” (without of course mentioning the name or the sum offered).<sup>1</sup>

I shall be again a week late in writing the final weekly part of Heart and Science – 27. There is plenty of time luckily – this Part is to be published on 20th January 1883.

Vy truly yours | WC

P.S. The “Pictorial World” story is nearly finished.<sup>2</sup>

-
1. Concerning the ‘Continental’ edition of Heart and Science – see [2074] to Watt of 30 October 1882.
  2. ‘Fie! Fie! Or The Fair Physician’.

[2082] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 27 NOVEMBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 370.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday 27th Novr 1882

“Heart and Science”

Please send on the proofs for Press and Revise. The copy for the last weekly part is not yet ready.<sup>1</sup> I have attached a note to the revise, for the information of the printers.<sup>2</sup>

WC

To Messrs Chatto & Windus

-
1. See [2081] to A. P. Watt of the previous day.
  2. Possibly [2083] the note to the publishers concerning the error in the chapter numbers of the penultimate monthly part of Heart and Science, conjecturally dated [November] 1882.

[2083] TO [CHATTO & WINDUS], [NOVEMBER] 1882<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 371.

Belgravia | Heart and Science
Monthly Part for May 1883 | =

Error in numbering the Chapters. At page 25, for Chapter LVI | read | Chapter LVII
And add a number to each succeeding chapter.

WC

The additional matter is sent herewith.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. This note gives no formal indication of the recipient or date of composition, but must be directed to Chatto & Windus (or possibly their printers), and in all likelihood dates from late November 1882. Then WC was composing the final chapters of Heart and Science and correcting the proofs of the penultimate monthly instalment, eventually published in May 1883, though the same chapters had appeared in the weekly newspaper instalments in January 1883. This may be the note referred to in [2082] to Chatto & Windus of 27 November 1882.

2. Unidentified, though presumably further copy for Heart and Science.

[2084] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 1 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 371.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st Decr 1882

Dear Sirs,

I have the pleasure of acknowledging receipt of a cheque for £26.-.- in payment for my contribution to “Belgravia” for November last<sup>1</sup> – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Again at the rate of one pound per page for the instalment of Heart and Science. Duly credited to WC’s bank account on 2 December (Coutts: WC).

[2085] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 3 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 371–372.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd Decr 1882

Dear Mr Chatto,

Can you – or can one of the clerks – tell me how and where to get the enclosed pamphlet? I want it for “Heart & Science”<sup>1</sup> – and I am so hard at work on the last chapters that I am fit for nothing but an armchair and a cigar, when I lay down my pen.

Yours helplessly | WC

P.S. If it is not as I imagine – a separate pamphlet but included in some Volume of F’s works, kindly let me know it – and I shall be able to see the book at the Athenaeum when I am released from the desk.

---

1. No response to WC’s request is found in the letter-books at Reading. Putting together the reference to ‘F’ in the postscript and WC’s comment in the Preface to Heart and Science (‘he has even contrived to make use of Professor Ferrier’), the reference is probably to an article by the specialist on diseases of the brain, Professor David Ferrier (1843–1928), such as his ‘Experiments on the Brain of Monkeys’ published in Proceedings of the Royal Society, 23 (1875), pp. 409–430. In November 1881 Ferrier had been acquitted of practising unlicensed vivisection in a case instigated by the anti-vivisection movement – see Farmer 1996, pp. 13–17.

[2086] TO A. P. WATT, 4 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 372.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th Decr 1882

Dear Mr Watt

I have mislaid my memorandum of the date at which the MSS of the Christmas story is wanted at the office of The Pictorial World.<sup>2</sup> Can you kindly inform me when I ought to send it to you? Forgive my troubling you, and believe me | Truly yours | WC

---

1. Initialled and directed to 'A.P. Watt Esqre | Literary Agency | 34. Paternoster Row | E. C.', postmarked on the following day.

2. 'Fie! Fie! Or The Fair Physician'.

[2087] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 6 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 372–373.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th Decr 1882

Dear Mr Chatto,

I intended to have written to you when I sent off the week's copy this afternoon – but this devil of a story is softening my brain. It will not<sup>1</sup> end this week. But, by next Tuesday, either I shall have knocked it on the head – or it will have knocked me. Betting even at present.

I was very sorry to miss you when you so kindly called here – with the book. It is the very thing I wanted – and I owe another obligation to your friendly kindness. It shall be returned (if it is not wanted before) with next weeks' copy.<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Written in larger letters and underlined three times.

2. The book remains untraced, but, putting together the hints in WC's previous letter to Chatto (3 December) and the reference to 'Localisation of Cerebral Disease' in his Preface to Heart and Science, it may well be David Ferrier's The Localisation of Cerebral Disease (London: Smith, Elder, 1878).

[2088] TO A. P. WATT, 8 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 373.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

I send to you by registered letter-post (under another cover) the MS of the Christmas Story.<sup>1</sup> Kindly let me have one line to say you have got it safely – for I possess no complete copy.

There was no time for me to take advantage of your friendly assistance in hastening the printers. I had to send to America last Thursday – and the story was copied in M.S. from the rough Dft.

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. 'Fie! Fie! Or The Fair Physician' – see [2076] to A. P. Watt, 31 October 1882.

[2089] TO A. P. WATT, 13 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 373–374.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1882

Private

My dear Mr Watt,

I am much obliged to Mr Gradener for his renewed offer – but I am not at liberty to accept it.<sup>1</sup> For your own information, I may add that I have heard from Baron von Tauchnitz this morning (writing to me, it is needless to say in ignorance of the amount that has been offered, and only knowing that a proposal has been addressed to me). No terms that can be offered are to be allowed to sever our literary connection.

Pray accept my thanks for the kind part that you have taken in this matter, and believe me
vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | Please keep back the next Revises (weekly part 27 – chapters LVI to LVIII) until you get the Revises of part 28 (and last) next week. We shall be obliged to add to Part 27 the first chapter of Part 28.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. See [2074] to Watt of 30 October 1882.

2. Again referring to the serial instalments of Heart and Science.

[2090] TO A. P. WATT, 15 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 267; BGLL, III, p. 374.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th Decr 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Here is the corrected proof of the Christmas story – ready for Press.<sup>1</sup> I am obliged to trouble you with it, as I don't know the address of the printers.

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. 'Fie! Fie! Or The Fair Physician'.

[2091] TO A. P. WATT, 18 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 374.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

Here is the last little worry which will be inflicted (for the present) by your fidgetty [sic] client. The note on the Revises will explain itself.<sup>1</sup> I am quite worn out – thoroughly “overworked” this time.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. The note itself has not survived, but must refer to the final serial instalments of Heart and Science, which concluded its newspaper run at the end of January 1883.

[3062] TO CHATTO & WINDUS,<sup>1</sup> 18 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Folger (Yc2885/3). Published: A&C3, p. 55.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Decr 18th 1882

Heart and Science

Weekly Part 28. (Forwarded by mail of December 16th).

If the enclosed alteration and enlargement of the concluding paragraph of the story, reaches you in time, please adopt it. Out of four different changes in the last chapter, this is the only one which has not been embodied in the proof already despatched!<sup>2</sup>

WC

-
1. See the similar notes to the firm of, e.g., 21 and 27 November 1882.
  2. Referring to the final chapter of the novel, numbered 62 in the various weekly newspaper serializations and 63 in the monthly serial in Belgravia and subsequent volume editions.

[2092] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 19 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 375.

Tuesday Decr 19th 1822<sup>1</sup>

Heart and Science

Revises please as usual on any day this week which may be convenient.

While I am sending the last revised proof, let me take the opportunity of expressing my sincere sense of the care courtesy and punctuality which have made my literary connection with you more than usually pleasant.<sup>2</sup>

Wilkie Collins

-
1. Despite WC's slip of the pen in the date line, the correct dating is secured by the calendar and the context.
  2. The last of the series of letters to the publishers of Belgravia about the proofs of Heart and Science in serial form. Although the serialization in the London monthly magazine did not end until June 1883, the proofs had to be early because the serialization in weekly newspapers (for which the printers of Belgravia were supplying copy) completed in mid-January 1883.

[2093] TO A. P. WATT, 19 DECEMBER 1882

MS: CDM (B381), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 375.

Tuesday. 19th Decr 1882

[Revise enclosed of last instalment]<sup>2</sup>

