A. P. Watt Esqr | 34. Paternoster Row | E.C.

Wilkie Collins

-
1. Postmarked 'LOND W | D7 | DE 19 | 82'.
  2. The text is close to illegible and the reading is speculative. WC may have enclosed a duplicate set of the proofs that went to Chatto & Windus on the same day, possibly for Watt to send on to Australia or America. There is no reply available from Watt, as this is one of the periods for which the Watt letter-book is not found in the Berg Collection.

[2094] TO ERNST VON WOLZOGEN, 20 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Unknown. Extract (in German): Wolzogen, pp. 17–18;<sup>1</sup> Davis, p. 229. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 375–376.

Was meine Schriftstellerei anbelangt, so habe ich vier Regeln. Zunächst: die Hauptidee. Zweitens: das Ende. Drittens: der Anfang. Die Erfüllung welcher letzteren mit der schrecklichen Schwierigkeit verknüpft ist: immer beim Anfang anzufangen. Wer das kann, der kann auch die Hauptbedingung des Erfolgs erfüllen, nämlich viertens: die Geschichte immer vorwärts schreiten zu lassen. Ich werde oft nach "meinem Geheimnis" gefragt: das ist es! Als ein literarischer Handwerker betrachtet, bin ich wohl einer der langsamsten und am meisten sich mühenden

Autoren, die je eine Feder gehalten haben. Ich verbessere wieder und wieder, bis meine Manuskripte fast unleserlich sind und arbeite am Stil mit einem, je älter ich werde, immer höher geschraubten Ideal, von dem, was ich erreichen sollte – leider weit entfernt von dem, was ich erreichen kann! Manche meiner Zunftgenossen wundern sich, warum ich mir so viel Mühe mache, in dieser Zeit des eifertigen und kritiklosen Durcheinanderlesens. Meine einzige Antwort ist, daß ich nichts anders kann. Einen nachlässig gebauten Satz im Druck stehen gelassen zu haben, würde mich für mehrere Tage ganz unglücklich machen.<sup>2</sup>

1. Introduced: 'In einem Briefe von 20. Dezember 1882 sagt er nämlich' (In a letter of December 20th, 1882 he said).
2. Translation:

As far as my writing technique is concerned, I have four rules. First, the main idea. Secondly, the end. Thirdly, the beginning. The difficulty with carrying out this last rule, is that you always have to start from the beginning! Anyone who can solve that will also be able to manage the fourth rule – you must always be able to move the story forward. People often ask me about my 'secret' and that is what it is!

I see myself as a literary craftsman and may well be one of the slowest and most methodical authors who has ever held a pen. I correct my manuscripts again and again until they are almost illegible and labour over the style, striving towards an ideal of how it should be, which becomes increasingly ambitious the older I get – but unfortunately far from what I can achieve.

Several of my fellow writers wonder why I go to so much trouble with my writing, in this age when people read so rapidly and in such an uncritical and disorderly manner. My only answer is that I cannot do it in any other way. If I allowed a carelessly constructed phrase into print, it would make me completely unhappy for days.

[3135] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 20 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C5, p. 12 (as On sale: Sotheby's (14 July 2009, LO9773, lot 66)).<sup>2</sup>

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>3</sup>

London | 20th December 1882

Dear sir,

My literary engagements will not allow me to consider the proposal with which you have honoured me.

Let me beg you to accept my excuses for this late acknowledgement of your kind letter. I have been so hard at work that I have found it impossible to keep up with the demands of a large correspondence.

Faithfully yrs<sup>4</sup> | Wilkie Collins

1. Presumably a publisher, outside London and probably outside the UK. The top few millimetres of the letter have been neatly cut off to excise the name of the recipient written top left, with WC's familiar '&c &c &c' marks also partly excised beneath. Only the final descender of the final part of the name – possibly 'g' – remains above the marks.

2. In a collection of more than 300 letters, MSs, drawings and ephemera mainly addressed to Eric Alden 'traveller, civil servant, art and theatre lover' (Sotheby's catalogue, p. 20).

3. On the standard paper of the era with the monogram to the left and the address ranged right. The watermark is rendered illegible as the letter is stuck to the page of the album.

4. The valediction may have been rethought by WC. 'Faith' is written in slightly smaller characters as if squeezed in to the left. Without it the valediction could almost have read 'truly yrs'.

[2095] TO A. P. WATT, 27 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Pembroke. Published: Watt, p. 16; BGLL, III, pp. 376–377.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1882

Dear Mr Watt,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for the amount received from "The Pictorial World" for the right of periodically publishing my story called "Fie! Fie!" – less your commission.

My literary labours are now ended for a while. In putting down my pen, I really feel a grateful sense of all that I owe to your excellent business capacity, to your conscientious devotion to the interests of your clients, and – last, but most certainly not least – to your friendly feeling towards myself.

Believe me | (with hearty good wishes)

always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

A.P. Watt Esq.

[2096] TO ADA CAVENDISH, 29 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: B&C, II, pp. 451–452.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

29th Decr 1882

My dear Ada

Nobody has seen me – except Beard.<sup>2</sup> For months, I have been shut up over my work – and now it is done, I am so completely exhausted that it is an effort to me even to write these lines. I am not strong enough to travel – there is nothing for it but rest and peace.

Yours aftly | with all good wishes | WC

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. Frank Beard, WC's friend and doctor.

[2097] TO CHARLES KENT, 29 DECEMBER 1882

MS: Wolff Collection (1356a), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Wolff, p. 260; BGLL, III, p. 377.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

29th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1882

My dear Kent,

Shall I begin by apologising?

No. You are one of the brotherhood and you are also a good friend. I will begin by sending you hearty good wishes for the year that is coming soon.

As for me, I write with a sore chest (the cold of the season), and a weak heart (the inevitable result of finishing my book). Never has any story excited me like this story.<sup>2</sup> My last day's work on it was a day of 12 hours! Add to this – no more gout so far, and there is an end of my report.

Now I want your report. When will you come, and smoke, and tell me about yourself, and about the death of our poor old actress – so soon after your kindness had brightened her last days of life.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Charles Kent Esqr | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.', postmarked as dated.

2. Heart and Science.

3. Frances Maria Kelly (1790–1882), who died on 6 December. See [2018] of 28 February and [2026] of 13 May 1882, both to Charles Kent.

[2098] TO [KATE FIELD], [1875–82]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Boston (KF 113).<sup>2</sup> Published: Whiting, p. 341 (attached to [1664] to Field of 9 February 1877); BGLL, III, p. 378.

... there is no opportunity left.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Conjectural recipient, based on the fact that the MS is found with other Field letters at Boston, and conjectural dating, within the limits of their extant correspondence.
  2. Only the closing line, valediction and signature on a fragment of paper excised from the foot of a letter for the autograph.

[3224] TO W. H. CROSS,<sup>1</sup> 1881–1882<sup>2</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>3</sup> Published: A&C8, p. 18.

I remain, Sir, faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
The gentleman to whom I refer is Count de Heussey, of the 10th Regiment of Artillery.<sup>4</sup>
To W. H. Cross Esqre

-
1. Otherwise unidentified.
  2. Dating from the greenish tint of the paper – only found in 1881 and 1882 – and the reference to de Heussey.
  3. Cut from the end of a letter.
  4. Almost certainly the brother of Robert du Pontavice de Heussey. See [1988] to de Heussey, 8 November 1881, and [2456] 14 August 1885.

[2099] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 1 JANUARY 1883

MS: Private. Published: B&C, II, p. 452.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>
London | 1st January 1883

Dear Madam,

Hardly a week passes, in my experience, without bringing me a letter which, in substance, resembles your letter. Under these circumstances, I hope you will not think me wanting in sympathy if I assure you that I have no time to look over any specimens of your work.

But I can at least be of some service to you if I can relieve your mind of the delusion (prevalent among so many writers who are beginning their career) that the influence of “powerful friends” can smooth the way which leads to literary success. No publisher is foolish enough to risk his money in publishing a work because it is recommended to him by other persons – no matter who those persons may be. The manuscript must make its way on its own merits. If it has merit, there is not a respectable publisher in London who will not be ready and glad, to open his purse and his publishing house to this author. I had no friends to introduce me – no influence of any sort to [del] smooth the way for me – when I sent my first manuscript to the publishers. It was the work of an obscure young man, left to plead for itself – and it was accepted, paid for, and published solely on its own merits. There is my experience – at your service. If you possess the abilities – and the capacity for taking pains in the exercise of those abilities – which make a writer of fiction, the way to success is clear before you. In the other case, no influence and no recommendation can help you.

Having spoken plainly – which, in such a case as this, is equivalent to speaking kindly – I have only to add the sincere expression of my sympathy with you, under the hardest /to endure/ of all anxieties.

Believe me, sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The name of the addressee, evidently an unpublished writer of fiction, is cut the from end of the letter.
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

[2100] TO A. P. WATT, 4 JANUARY 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 378–379.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th January 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

The enclosed correspondence will explain itself. Messrs Kelly & Co had previously applied to me – too late for negotiation. Some years since, Mr Kelly himself called here, and gave me some valuable information relating to the sale of his “Directories”.<sup>1</sup>

We do not publish in book-form – before April next – so as to give “Belgravia” time to absorb a little more “Heart and Science.”<sup>2</sup> When you have seen Mr Kelly or have heard from him (as may be most convenient to yourself) – if you will kindly report personally, I shall have an opportunity of speaking to you on the subject of the French Translation of “Heart and Science”.<sup>3</sup> Your time will be my time – there is nothing to hurry us in this case.

Very truly yours | WC

A.P. Watt Esq.

---

1. The correspondence with Kelly & Co. (publishers of the Post Office Directories) is not bound into the volumes at Pembroke and has not been traced, but eventually resulted in the serial publication of WC’s next novel “I Say No” in their monthly miscellany London Society.

2. The monthly serialization in Belgravia concluded only with the June instalment, while the volume edition from Chatto & Windus appeared in April 1883.

3. See [2082] of 3 November 1882 to his French translator and agent Robert du Pontavice de Heussey and [2201] to Watt of 16 October 1883, where the subject is revived.

[2101] TO KATE FIELD, 13 JANUARY 1883

MS: Boston (KF 114). Published: Whiting p. 403 (dated February 1881); B&C, II, pp. 432–433 (dated January 1881).

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

London | 13 January, 1883

Dear Miss Field,

If you [del] are in the U.S.A. – and if you ever see Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper – you will find a /serial/ story in it which may suggest indulgence to an overworked man.<sup>2</sup> If you know nothing of “Heart and Science”, I go down on both my knees and beg your pardon. I am in sober earnest, so weary after finishing my story that a sinking of the soul (and body) comes over me at the sight of a pen. As to writing letters while I am at work, – “that way madness lies”. Is there any fatigue in this weary world which is equal to the fatigue that comes of daily working of the brains for hours together? “George Sand” thought all other fatigues unimportant by comparison – and I agree with George S.<sup>3</sup>

Let me thank you for “Fechter.” The illustrations (excepting the photographed head of [del] him in “Hamlet”) are so utterly unlike, [del] and I should not have known what man they were meant for – and his old doctor here (Carr Beard) to whom I showed the book, agreed with me. This is my only objection. I think your part of the volume eminently readable – and done in an excellent spirit. Here and there, poor dear F. /– or somebody else –/ has misled you about his importance in Paris – but that is no fault of yours. And I repeat my congratulations, and my thanks.<sup>4</sup>

“Boz” rhymes (in sound) to “was”.

Oh, Good Lord! referring to your letter – I find no address. “Hotel Victoria” – that, I swear, is all. Oh, woman, lovely woman! What is a man to do, who remembers Victoria Hotels in his own country, in your country, at Naples, at Rome, and on the continent generally? Will Osgood forward? Here goes at Osgood.<sup>5</sup> Farewell.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. The serialization of Heart and Science in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper had begun on 22 July 1882.
3. Though the source of George Sand's remark has not been identified, see the similar comments on the French writer in [2337] to Paul Hamilton Haynes, 16 July 1884, and [2960] to W.G. Collings, 20 May 1889.
4. Referring to Field's Charles Albert Fechter (1882), in the 'American Actor Series' edited by Laurence Hutton. In addition to five illustrations, the volume included 'Wilkie Collins's Recollections of Charles Fechter' on pp. 154–173 (dated 18 January 1882). Field's presentation copy was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, item 196)
5. James Ripley Osgood (1836–1892), Boston publisher of Charles Albert Fechter.

[2102] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 14 JANUARY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/9). Extract: 'Literary Notes', New York Daily Tribune (14 April 1883), p. 6a.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 453–454.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 14th January 1883

My dear Winter

Am I still in time to send you my hearty good wishes for 1883? In time or not, I send them. Accompanied by apologies? No: not to a brother in the art – I can count on his indulgence surely? – long as I have been in writing.

But let me stand aside and let those two charming essays that you sent to me take the front place.<sup>3</sup> "Charming" is a wretched commonplace word – but it expresses in some degree the feeling of pleasure with which I welcome true enthusiasm in writing (as well as in feeling), in days when the tone of a clown in a circus is too frequently the tone in which personal experiences and opinions are set up in printer's types. Besides you are one of the few poets (between ourselves) who can write prose. And there is another agreeable surprise – for which I have to thank you.

The gout (to answer your friendly inquiry about my health) keeps away wonderfully, so far. And this in spite of /my/ [del] "vital power" (as the doctor calls it) having been severely taxed by my last story. When a man is "old enough to know better", he generally commits some of his most flagrant indiscretions. This new book ("Heart and Science") [del] so mercilessly excited me that I went on writing week after week without a day's interval of rest. Rest was impossible. I made a desperate effort, [del] rushed to the sea, went sailing and [del] fishing, and was writing my book all the time, in my head (as the children say). The one wise course to take was to go back to my desk, and empty my head – and then rest. My nerves are too much shaken for travelling. An armchair and a cigar – and a hundred and fiftieth reading of the [del] glorious Walter Scott (King, Emperor, President, and God Almighty of [del] novelists)<sup>4</sup> – there is the regimen that is doing me good! All the other novel-writers I can read while I am at work myself. If I only look at the "Antiquary" or "Old Mortality", I am crushed by the sense of my own littleness, and there is no work possible for me on that day.

Don't forget that I am to send you the new book – when it is a book, and has got my latest corrections. # The /story/ has been published periodically in a monthly magazine here, as well as in several weekly newspapers. The magazine doesn't gobble it all up until June next. The newspapers will have swallowed the last morsel on the 27th of this month. In this dilemma, we "split the difference", and publish in book-form in April next.<sup>5</sup>

You knew Anthony Trollope of course. His immeasurable energies had a bewildering effect on my invalid constitution. To me, he was an incarnated gale of wind. He blew off my hat; he turned my umbrella inside out. Joking apart, as good and staunch a friend as ever lived – and, to my mind, a great loss to novel-readers. Call his standard as a workman what you will, he was always equal to it. Never in any marked degree either above or below his own level. In that respect alone, a remarkable writer, surely? If he had lived five years longer, he would have written fifteen more thoroughly readable works of fiction. A loss – a serious loss – I say again.<sup>6</sup>

Goodbye for the present. Ever yours Wilkie Collins

My love to Seaver. I last heard of him with a sense of blank terror, as having refused a dinner invitation!!! Don't let him sink into an invalid!<sup>7</sup>

When you see Mr Lawrence Barrett,<sup>8</sup> remember me kindly to him. I wish I had seen more of him. Let me hear (when you have nothing to do) how you “git along.”<sup>9</sup>

---

1. Consisting of the third and fifth paragraphs of the MS letter body, it was prefaced: ‘Wilkie Collins, in a recent most interesting letter to a friend in New York (Mr. William Winter, who ventures to think that these excellent passages are too good to be kept to himself), refers as follows to his own recent novel and to his lately deceased literary comrade, Anthony Trollope:’. The paragraphs were also reprinted from the Tribune in a number of other American newspapers, including the (North Dakota) Bismark Tribune (8 June 1883), p. 3a, where the heading read, ‘Striking Letter from Wilkie Collins’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. The two essays remain unidentified.

4. Four lots of Scott were found in Puttick and Simpson’s sale of WC’s Library on 20 January 1890: Waverly Novels, illustrated edition, 48 vols, 1859 (lot 86); Prose Works, 28 vols, 1834 (lot 87); Poetical Works, 12 vols, 1833 (lot 88); and Lockhart’s Life, 10 vols, 1848 (lot 89). See Baker 2002, pp. 146–148.

5. Heart and Science, serialized in Belgravia from August 1882 to June 1883, and in a syndicate of provincial newspapers from (most typically) 22 July 1882 to 27 January 1883 (Law, p. 238).

6. Trollope died on 6 December 1882.

7. First postscript added above the printed address.

8. Lawrence Barret (1838–1891), American actor and producer who took over Irving’s Lyceum in 1884 while Irving toured America.

9. Second postscript added down WC’s left margin on the opening leaf of the letter.

[2103] TO JANE BIGELOW, 16 JANUARY 1883

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 379–380.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 16th January 1883

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

Are you capable of granting a favour to a person unworthy of your indulgence, because it is in your nature to do kind things? Yes – you are. Will you favour me by exerting your imagination?

Please suppose yourself to be a wretched worn-out man, with spectacles on his nose and a grey beard on his chin, prostrate in an arm chair, looking at a pen after eight hours use of it in the process of invention called novel-writing, and saying to himself, “In half an hour more, I will plunge [blots] (with blots) into my ink bottle again, and write to Mrs Bigelow.” In half an hour more, the man is as weary as ever – he rolls over in his chair, and says “I will write to Mrs Bigelow tomorrow.” Tomorrow comes, and brings another eight hours of scratching and scribbling, and altering and re-altering – the man wallows again feebly in his chair – and says, “Oh, merciful Heaven, why don’t I write to Mrs Bigelow?” (with blots) Is this the way in which I express my sense of her kind remembrance of me? What a brute I am!” And the weeks pass, and the months pass – and the unfortunate creature is ashamed to write to Mrs Bigelow, and has but one hope left now – that this injured lady has cast him off – and forgotten him, and has so administered the punishment that he deserves. He retires from the world as it is, and passes the rest of his time with three good-for-nothing persons in the world as it might be, named “Dr Benjulia”, “Miss Minerva”, and “Zo”.<sup>1</sup> They are known in the United States to one honest man named “Frank Leslie”,<sup>2</sup> and to many thieves who pursue their vocation under the tacit sanction of the President and Congress. And who is this man who has imprudently asked your imagination to change places with him? Dear Mrs Bigelow, he is a sincere penitent. And his name is,

Wilkie Collins.

---

1. Characters in Heart and Science.

2. Pseudonym of Henry Carter (1821–80), New York publisher who founded Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper which was continued by his widow Miriam F. Leslie (1836–1914). WC sold the paper the serial rights of The Fallen Leaves, The Black Robe and Heart and Science. On ‘Frank Leslie’, see William E. Huntzicker, ‘Frank Leslie (Henry Carter)’ in American Magazine Journalists, 1850–1900, ed. Sam G. Riley, vol. 79 of Dictionary of Literary Biography (Detroit: Gale Research, 1989), pp. 209–222; and Joshua Brown, Beyond the Lines: Pictorial Reporting, Everyday Life, and the Crises of Gilded Age America (Berkeley: University of California Press, 2002).

[2104] TO EDWARD PRITCHARD,<sup>1</sup> 17 JANUARY 1883

MS: Private (tipped into John Forster The Life of Charles Dickens (London: Chapman & Hall, 1911), II, p. 138).
Published: BGLL, III, pp. 381–382.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17 January 1883

Dear Sir,

Our friend, Mrs Edward Allen has appointed me Secretary of the Testimonial Fund.<sup>2</sup> In my official capacity, I have the pleasure of informing you that we have prepared the draft of a circular letter,<sup>3</sup> and that we thank you for allowing us to refer to you as our Treasurer.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Edw Pritchard Esqr.

---

1. Otherwise unidentified banker, possibly at the London and County Bank – see [2204] and [2205] to him of 18 and 20 October 1883.

2. The fund possibly concerned Edward Ellis Allen (b. 1822), civil and mechanical engineer of 111 Cheyne Walk, Chelsea, who had long worked as sub-editor in charge of illustrations for the trade journal the Engineer. According to his unsuccessful application to the Royal Literary Fund of 27 March 1882 (Case 2134), he was then unemployed and heavily in debt but had a wife and six children from the age of nine upwards to support. The 1882 Married Women's Property Act was by then in force, so the fund was presumably set up in the wife's name to prevent the proceeds being swallowed up in meeting the husband's debts. The 1881 Census records him as having a wife Isabella and six children, although three of them were in fact working and three at school. His older brother also lived with them (RG11 0075/113, p. 5). WC's connection to the Allen family remains obscure.

3. The circular itself has not been traced, but this must be that announcing the setting up of the Allen testimonial fund – see [2205] to Pritchard of 20 October 1883 concerning its closure.

[2105] TO ROSA KENNEY,<sup>1</sup> 23 JANUARY 1883

MS: Clarke Collection. Published: BGLL, III, p. 381.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23rd January 1883

Dear Miss Kenney,

Your kind letter finds me with a cold on the chest – and (though I am feeling better) I am afraid I shall not be well enough to go to the Theatre on Thursday.<sup>2</sup> But I have sent this morning to take places – and I will give the tickets to “a good audience”.

What I can do to help in making the benefit known among my friends shall be done. In the meantime I wish you all possible success.<sup>3</sup>

Vy truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See WC's advice to the young actress in [2027] of 17 May 1882.

2. WC writes on the Tuesday.

3. This was a special benefit matinée on 25 January at the Gaiety Theatre for Rosa's mother, the widow of the actor and dramatist C. L. Kenney (see [1949] to him of 29 March 1881), who had recently died. Sheridan's School for Scandal was performed, presumably with Rosa Kenney in the cast – see the announcement in the Times, 19 January 1883, p. 8.

[2106] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 31 JANUARY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 381–382.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

31st January 1883

Heart and Science

Dear Sirs,

Here is the first volume, thoroughly corrected.<sup>1</sup> The other two would have reached you at the same time – but my brains struck work, some days since, under a threatened attack of gout, and under the “remedies” which have I hope resisted it. I take to the book again today. In the meantime, this first Volume ends on page 97 of my MS. Vol II on page 195. Vol III on page 299. – the divisions being thus pretty nearly equal. This time, the MS is longer by about thirty pages than the MS of “The Black Robe”.

As to the book-proofs, the Tauchnitz Reprint, the French Translation, the Dutch Translation, and the proofs which I see and return for press, make four “pulls” of each proof in all. If this is too much to ask, by all means cut the calculation in half, let me have proofs for Tauchnitz, and proofs for my supervision – i.e. “pulls” in duplicate.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Many thanks for the American view of Mudies.<sup>2</sup>

I send by registered post. One line of acknowledgment, please

---

1. The copy for the first of the three volumes of the book edition of Heart and Science, published by Chatto & Windus in April 1883. WC’s extensive corrections to the serial version of the novel must have been entered on proofs of the Belgravia instalments.

2. Unidentified, there being no reference found in the Chatto & Windus letter-books to what is presumably an article published in an American periodical concerning the British circulating library system.

[2107] TO A. P. WATT, 1 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 382.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st February 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

I have the pleasure of acknowledging receipt of your cheque for £199..10.. – in payment (less your commission) of the third, and last, instalment due to me from the subscribing newspapers authorised to publish “Heart and Science.”<sup>1</sup>

Let me also thank you for the statement of accounts, and believe me

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | A.P. Watt Esqre

---

1. Concerning the first and second instalments, see [2065] of 31 August and [2072] of 26 October 1882, both to Watt. Duly credited to WC’s bank account on 1 February (Coutts: WC)

[2108] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 9 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 383.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th February 1883

Heart and Science

Dear Sirs,

Many thanks for the proofs (Vol I Sigs B & C) – received last night in duplicate.

If this supply can be doubled – i.e. two more pulls of B. & C. – and four pulls for the future of each proof you will greatly oblige me.<sup>1</sup>

Vol II – corrected for reprint accompanies these lines.

Vy truly yours Wilkie Collins

One line please to acknowledge receipt

Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Compare [2106], WC's previous letter to Chatto & Windus [2106] of 31 January, where he offered, if necessary, to accept only two pulls of each proof instead of four.

[2109] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 12 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 383.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

12th Feb 1883

I can only return my best thanks for the ticket. An attack of gout allows me no hope of being able to attend the meeting.

WC

[2110] TO ROMA GUILLON LE THIÈRE,<sup>1</sup> 16 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 383–384.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16th Feby 1883

Dear Miss Le Thièrè

A line to thank you for kindly calling. The moment I can feel sure of keeping an appointment, I will ask you to choose a day. The pain in the bad eye is, I hope, leaving me. I must not write more.

Yours truly WC

To complete my woes my amanuensis is ill!<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Roma Guillon Le Thièrè (d. 1903), Italian-born actress who made her debut on the London stage in 1865 and was in the Adelphi company in the early 1880s. She played Lady Roy in revivals of The New Magdalen at the Charing Cross Theatre in 1875 and at the Novelty Theatre in 1884. See also [1505] to Frank Archer of 24 January 1875.

2. Presumably Carrie Bartley.

[2111] TO WILLIAM J. BOK,<sup>1</sup> 17 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Fales. Summary: B&C, II, p. 454. Published: BGLL, III, p. 384.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th February 1883

Dear Mr Bok,

Thank you for your kind and hearty letter.

This reply takes with it three quotations signed, and one of my portraits with a little message on the back<sup>2</sup>

You will find a choice of many admirable photographic portraits of me, taken by my good friend Sarony (of Union Square N.Y.)<sup>3</sup> – true works of Art, sold at most moderate prices. The English photographs of me are not comparable to Sarony's.

Forgive me if I begin and end in these few dull lines. I have a merciless enemy who has been trying to kill me for years past, and whose name is Gout. I am still a prisoner in my room – so weakened by the terrible remedies employed that I cannot write for long together. Air and exercise are the two luxuries that I have to enjoy in a few days more.

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr William J. Bok

---

1. Elder brother of the publisher Edward W. Bok (see [2700] to the latter of 30 March 1887).

2. Not found with the letter.

3. Napoleon Sarony, New York photographer and dedicatee of Heart and Science – see [2132] to him of 5 April 1883.

[3136] TO WILLIAM J. BOK,<sup>1</sup> 17 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Lewis Collection (L3056). Published: as to Unidentified Recipient, A&C5, p. 12. Amended: A&C14 pp.31-32.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 17th February 1883

“Women can resist a man’s love, a man’s fame, a man’s personal appearance, and a man’s money; but they cannot resist a man’s tongue when he knows how to talk to them.”<sup>3</sup>

From | “The Woman in White” | by | Wilkie Collins

---

1. This letter is clearly one of three enclosed with [2111] To William J. Bok of the same date in which WC writes “This reply takes with it three quotations signed”. The location of the other two is not known. Although Bok presumably wanted these, and perhaps an enclosed photograph, for other people they were clearly all originally sent to him.

2. On blue/green tinted headed paper with WC’s monogram to the left with the top margin lacking 2cm above the printed address.

3. The quotation is from The Woman in White, Second Epoch, V. See, for example, The Woman in White, New Edition, Sampson Low, Son, & Co, 1861, p. 198.

[2112] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 19 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 385.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th Feby 1883

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of a cheque for £32...-.- in payment for my contributions to “Belgravia” for February 1883 – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Again at the rate of one pound per page for the instalment of Heart and Science. Duly credited to WC’s bank account on 19 February (Coutts: WC).

[2113] TO A. P. WATT, 21 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 385.

21st Feby 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

I shall be delighted to see you on either day.<sup>1</sup> Many thanks – the sight of the gouty eye is improving. If the weather will only let me get out, I hope I shall soon be “my own man again.”

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. Probably to discuss arrangements for the serial publication of the novel that would eventually be given the title “I Say No”. Judging from the opening of [2114] to Watt of 23 February 1883, the meeting must have taken place on that day.

[2114] TO A. P. WATT, 23 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 385–386.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23rd Feby 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

On reflection I think we had better entirely reserve the American “right” (to use a contradiction in terms) – and offer one or two more British newspapers as compensation.<sup>1</sup> It is barely possible that some way of cheating the cheats (with the time I have before me on this occasion) may suggest itself to me, or to some other of my American friends. In any case, I want to be free to take some course of my own in reference to my moral right in this next book, even if I have to write to the President himself!

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Referring to the serial publication arrangements for “I Say No”, where the initial British and American serial rights were sold to Kelly’s for £1,000, allowing them not only to publish the novel in their own monthly magazine, but also to sell on secondary rights to both British provincial newspapers and American periodicals. As what follows makes clear, WC’s doubt about ceding the American right stems from the hope of finding a new way of countering the lack of copyright protection for foreign authors in the United States.

[2115] TO W. M. LAFFAN,<sup>1</sup> 24 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 268; Farmer 1996, p. 372; BGLL, III, pp. 386–387.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th Feby 1883

Dear Sir,

I have been too thoroughly disgusted with the thefts committed on “Heart and Science”, during its periodical publication in the United States to make any arrangements for its publication there in book-form. Under the sanction of the President and Congress, the honest American citizen who purchased my advance-sheets for “Frank Leslie’s” newspaper was robbed of them three days afterwards, in each week, by the publication of another New York newspaper – to say nothing of other thefts committed in other places.<sup>2</sup>

However, as an act of courtesy to Messrs Harper, I very gladly send, by today’s registered book post, the corrected revises of the 1st Volume of the contemplated book republication in civilised countries.<sup>3</sup> The remaining proofs of Volumes 2 and 3 shall follow as soon as they reach me.

Believe me, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W. M. Laffan Esq

---

1. William Mackay Laffan, London representative of the New York publishing house of Harper & Brothers from August 1882.

2. Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper had paid £100 for the advance sheets of the serial version of Heart and Science – see notes to [2009] to A. P. Watt of 4 February 1882. The piracy in New York or other American papers has not been traced.

3. WC had broken off business relations with Harper & Brothers of New York around five years earlier, following a dispute over the sale of Canadian editions of his novels in the United States – see [1741] of 6 April and [1746] of 1 May 1878, both to George Maclean Rose. These plans for a single-volume edition of the novel from Harper’s seem eventually to have been abandoned – presumably because of the appearance of a pirated edition in George Munro’s Seaside Library (1883, no. 1544). The earliest newspaper serialization of the novel in Britain had ended in the middle of January, leaving plenty of time for pirates to act before the first British appearance of the novel in volume in mid-April.

[2116] TO NINA LEHMANN, 25 FEBRUARY 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Extract: Davis, p. 296. Published: Coleman, p. 269; Farmer 1996, pp. 372–373; B&C, II, p. 455.

90. Gloucester Place | 25th Feby 1883

Dearest Padrona,

The sight of your handwriting was delightful – and the sight of you will be better still. Anybody who says there is no such thing as luck – lies. Last year, I was too ill to get to you at all. This year, I am only not well enough to get out to dinner at nights. But I might come to lunch – when you have no company – if you will choose your own day and hour, and make [del] sweet allowances for Wilkie’s infirmities. For six months – while I was writing furiously, without cessation, one part sane and three parts mad – I had no gout. I finished my story<sup>1</sup> – discovered one day that I was half [del] dead with fatigue – and the next day that the gout was in my right eye.

No more of that! I am nearly well – and I pull off my black patch indoors. But I am forbidden night air – and I am so weak that I slip down in my chair towards night – like old Rogers.<sup>2</sup> But he was only eighty – I am a hundred.

With love to you particularly – and to everybody else generally
– your always affly | WC

Weak brandy and water – and no wholesome joints.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Heart and Science.

2. The reference is to the poet Samuel Rogers (1763–1855: ODNB), who lived well into his ninety-third year, though he was confined to a chair for the last five years of his life after being hit by a carriage in the street.

3. Postscript flagged with a hand with pointing index finger.

[2117] TO NINA LEHMANN, 1 MARCH 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 270; B&C, II, pp. 455–456.

Thursday | 1st March 1883

Yes, dearest Padrona, I shall be delighted to lunch at 1:30 – on Tuesday next. How long is it since I last set ungouty eyes on you? I only remember that you looked ten years younger. How many years younger are you going to look next time? Yesterday, being out for a little walk, and wearing a paletot with a hood for travelling – I heard a woman remark as I went by to another woman, “To think of a man wearing such a coat as that – at his time of life!” The question that arises is – Shall I dye my beard?

It was very nice and kind of Ernie – and how unlike the average young Englishman of today! – to remember me in that way.<sup>1</sup>

Yours my dear | affly WC

---

1. The unidentified kindness must have been on the part of Ernest Benzon Lehmann (b. 1859), one of the three Lehmann children, who had entered Trinity College, Cambridge in 1879.

[3187] TO FRANK ARCHER, 2 MARCH 1883

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C7, pp. 16–17.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

Friday 2nd March 1883

My dear Archer,

Will you kindly give me a “look-in” here – on any afternoon next week (except Tuesday) – at any time after 4.p.m. that may be most convenient to you? My inveterate enemy the gout has only just left me after another attack. I can get out, in favourable weather – but, if I proposed to call on you, I might not be able to keep my appointment. So I propose talking over the “Magdalen” here.

One line to say when it shall be<sup>3</sup>

1. Directed to 'Frank Archer Esqre | 21. Baker Street | W.', postmarked recto 'LONDON W | D | MR 2 | 83', with '13' in another hand in pencil on the recto.
2. With address ranged right and WC's monogram ranged left.
3. Archer looked in on WC on Monday 5th at 4.30 ('Diary 1883', Archer Archive). Although he was currently appearing as Faulkland in The Rivals at the Vaudeville, with matinees at the Theatre Royal on Thursdays which ran until 14 July ('Theatre Salaries and Parts', Bk. 2 pp. 100–111, Archer Archive), Archer was clearly looking ahead. In the event the revival opened at the Novelty Theatre on 5 January 1884.
4. The letter was in reply to one from Archer, a copy of which is found in the Archer Archive:

Copy | Feby 28 | 1883

21 Baker Street | W.

My dear Collins

What do you think of a revival of The New Magdalen with Miss Cavendish and myself in our old parts? Supposing of course that we can obtain a suitable management. Thoroughly well acted and presented it ought to be a great success. Miss Cavendish tells me she had been moving in the matter before she heard from me. At any rate it would be worth talking over. What do you think?

With every good wish, believe me my dear Collins | very sincerely yours | Frank Archer

Archer had received a letter from Ada Cavendish on 26 February (Archer Archive):

Dear Mr Archer,

Nothing would please me better than to re-appear in London in The New Magdalen if it could be arranged. I was about to arrange it with poor Mr Claremont when he met with that unfortunate accident, and wrote to Wilkie Collins on the subject. I feel certain that it would be a grand success. So many people have asked for it. I will see you on the subject any day you like to name.

Always sincerely yours | Ada Cavendish

[3063] TO HENRY HERMAN, 5 MARCH 1883

MS: Chicago.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C3, pp. 55–56.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. |
5th March 1883

Dear Mr Herman,

I am only now recovering from another attack of gout in the eye – and I have no choice but to thank you and Mr Flaxman,<sup>2</sup> and to make my excuses.

Even if I had been well enough to attend the meeting, my “revolutionary views” in the matter of reform as applied to the affairs of dramatic authors should have put me in the corner as the naughty boy of the party. I want all authors of really original plays to be rewarded as the French authors are, by a percentage on the gross receipts of each performance. I want authors who adapt other men's ideas, with their permission to pay half that percentage to the other men. And lastly I want a rogue who steals from a novel or a play, to be on that account ineligible by any society of dramatic authors. If any manager receives his stolen goods – that manager (for this first offence) to be forbidden for a year to play any work produced by a member of the Society. In France, these ideas have passed into established institutions. What would England say to them?

Before I close my letter let me heartily congratulate you and your collaborateur on a success which has set a most valuable example, at a time when it is most sorely needed.<sup>3</sup> With the “run” that is still before you, I may hope that my wretched health will yet allow me to see the piece.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

H. Herman Esqre

P.S. I have, of course, written to Mr Flaxman.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Tipped in at p. 138 to a copy of James T. Field, Yesterdays with Authors (Boston: Ticknor & Fields, 1882), with the bookplate of Frank O. Lowden

2. Arthur J. Flaxman (b. 1845), dramatist, barrister and campaigner for dramatic copyright (see Folger Library Yc4722, and UK census for 1871, 1891, 1901, plus birth index 1845).

3. Possibly The Silver King by Herman and Henry Arthur Jones which opened on 16 November 1882 at the Princess's Theatre, Oxford St, London (Nicoll, II p. 419).

4. The letter has not been located.

[2118] TO CHARLES KENT, 5 MARCH 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 387–388.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th March 1883

My dear Kent,

My best thanks for another proof of your friendly memory of me. I am only sorry that I went out to get my daily draught of air, before you called here. The moment I returned I read “Darnley” for the first time.<sup>2</sup> Some magnificent scenes in the piece – worthy of his best days. But the “Notes” distressed me. To trust the conclusion of such a work to such hands – seems (to adopt the Puritan point of view) nothing less than a proceeding instituted [line erased] under “a possession of the devil”. I see a Prologue, setting forth the case of “The Lady of the Villa” in action – and then a fifth act with two words instead of two pages of explanation. That clever and subtle analysis of the character of “Marsden” in the Notes, applies to the presentation of such a man in a novel. On the stage, when an audience sees a person of the drama deliberately trying to seduce his friend’s wife, they set him down (with perfect reason) as a scoundrel. Any attempt – after that – to “whitewash” him would simply puzzle the public. My presumptuous idea is, that the great man planned something of this kind – but felt on reflection that it would not do. Besides – with such noble men in the piece as “Darnley” and “Mainwaring”, a rascal is valuable on his own merits – as a striking contrast.

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esqre | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, postmarked on the following day.

2. Bulwer-Lytton’s ‘comedy, Darnley, never completed, but adapted for the stage after his death and produced by ... John Hare at the Court Theatre in 1879’ (The Life of Edward Bulwer first Lord Lytton, by his Grandson (London, 1913), II, p. 79 n.).

[2119] TO A. P. WATT, 5 MARCH 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 388.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th March 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

I have been looking at my old “agreements” and have made several technical additions to the Dft.<sup>1</sup> Can you kindly look in at the usual time, on Wednesday next? Tomorrow and Thursday, I shall not be at home.<sup>2</sup>

If Wednesday will do, don’t trouble to write again. If not, please choose your own day, after Thursday.

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. Presumably the draft of the agreement with Kelly’s for the serial publication of “I Say No”.

2. WC writes on the Monday.

[2120] TO W. F. TILLOTSON, 8 MARCH 1883

MS: Bolton (ZBEN/4/1/2). Published: BGLL, III, p. 388.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 8th March 1883

Dear Mr Tillotson,

I can thank you for your letter – and I can do no more.

The right of publishing my next novel periodically is already sold.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W.F. Tillotson Esq

---

1. “I Say No”, of which the British serial rights had already been sold to Kelly’s, with newspaper syndication organized by A. P. Watt – see [2114] to Watt of 23 February 1883.

[2121] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 9 MARCH 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 389.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 9th March 1883

Dear Mr Chatto,

I shall be delighted to see you on Monday next at three o’clock as you kindly propose.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Cha[remainder of name erased]

---

1. WC uses paper with a curious design at the bottom of the page which seems to show the top of his head in left profile.
2. To discuss WC’s copyrights – see Chatto’s letter to WC of the same date (Reading) and also [2124] to Chatto of 13 March 1883.

[2122] TO HARPER & BROTHERS,<sup>1</sup> 9 MARCH 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 271; Farmer 1996, p. 373 (both as to the Editor of Belgravia Magazine); BGLL, III, p. 389.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 9th March 1883

Heart and Science | Note to the Editor.

The end of the Second Volume of the Book-Reprint here has been altered. In order to save time, I am obliged to send the printed copy corrected of chapters 39–41, instead of the book revises.

While I am about it, I may perhaps add that there is hardly a page of the periodical publication which has not been revised, altered, abridged in one place, or enlarged in another, for the English reprint.<sup>2</sup> The “Author’s Edition” is, in this case, really the only complete Edition. As to the exact date of publication here, I will write again next week.

Wilkie Collins

---

1. The use of the phrases ‘here’ and ‘the English reprint’ indicate that the letter must be addressed to Harper & Brothers in New York (possibly via W. M. Laffan in London), and concerns their projected (though eventually abandoned) single-volume edition of Heart and Science – see [2115] to Laffan of 24 February 1883.
2. See Farmer 1996, p. 28: ‘the serial version of Heart and Science was much revised for the three-volume edition’.

[2123] TO ROMA LE THIÈRE, 10 MARCH 1883

MS: Fales. Published: B&C, II, p. 456.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>
10th March 1883

Dear Miss Le Thièrè,<sup>2</sup>

You have suffered – as I know by bitter experience – the one irreparable loss that death can inflict on us. Fifteen years have passed since my Mother died – and, when I think of her, I still know what the heartache means. Let me add my poor tribute of sympathy – as one more among the many friends who feel for you.<sup>3</sup>

Always yours most truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked ‘ROYAL [CROWN] | EDINBURGH | E. CHECKLEY | 60 BAKER STREET | W’.

2. The actress had called on WC a few weeks earlier; see [2110] to her of 16 February 1883.

3. The following extract from a biographical sketch of the actress explains something of Le Thièrè’s close relationship to her mother: ‘Roma Le Thièrè was brought up by her mother from whom she inherits her artistic talents ... On the death of her father, pecuniary circumstances made it necessary that the young girl should do something to provide for herself and her beloved mother. Her first step was to write to a valued friend, Mr. George Augustus Sala, and ask his advice. He replied, “Go on the stage,” ...’ (Helen C. Black, Pen, Pencil, Baton and Mask (London: Spottiswoode, 1896), p. 255).

[2124] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 13 MARCH 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 390.

90 Gloucester Place | W. | 13th March 1883

Dear Mr Chatto,

When you kindly called here yesterday I ought to have asked you one more question.

The sale of the copyright absolutely implies of course the same sort of sale of my books still to be published or still to be written. Can you kindly give me some idea of what the sale of the copyright of “Heart and Science” (instead of the “lease”) would be worth to your firm?

My only excuse for troubling you is that I am very anxious to see my way in this matter as plainly as I can.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I send with this corrected printed copy for Vol III, and the conclusion of Vol II in proof corrected for press.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. WC is considering whether, on the expiry on 31 March 1883 of Chatto & Windus’s lease on the copyright of thirteen of WC’s previously published novels, the right should be leased for a further seven years or sold outright to the publishers. WC considers that, if he chooses to sell outright, the same form of agreement should apply to his forthcoming works in volume form such as Heart and Science, and wants to know how much more money he should expect to get for the sale rather than the lease of the copyright. As the archives at Reading reveal, all WC’s agreements with Chatto & Windus up to this point had involved the lease of copyright for seven years rather than outright sale.

2. Of Heart and Science.

[2125] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 19 MARCH 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 390–391.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th March 1883

Dear Chatto

First (as you see) I propose that we leave off “mistering” each other.

Secondly, I have decided in favour of the seven years’ lease<sup>1</sup> – on considerations which I shall be glad to communicate, whenever you are passing this way, on any day after tomorrow (Tuesday), and at any hour which may be most convenient to you.

In the meantime will you kindly send the enclosed special correction to the printers? I assume that they have not yet begun setting up the third volume, and that there will be no “over-running”. Otherwise I will make matters right by a new correction on the proof.<sup>2</sup>

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

As soon as the proofs of Vol III can be conveniently sent, I shall be very glad to have them – and so get “Heart and Science” out of my head, before I think of my new book.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. See [2124] to Chatto of 13 March 1883.
  2. This correction in the third volume of Heart and Science has not been identified. Here ‘over-running’ refers to corrections which cause changes in the line or page breaks.
  3. “I Say No”.

[3188] TO FRANK ARCHER, 21 MARCH 1883

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C7, pp. 18–19.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

21st March 1883

My dear Archer,

I ought to have thanked you for your kind note days since. The publication day of my book is advanced – and for the present I hardly know what leisure for letter-writing means.<sup>3</sup>

Yes – the waiting policy is the right policy in the matter of “Magdalen”. My last news of Miss Cavendish – now rather old news – related a domestic misfortune – the serious illness of her maid.

I “get along”, thank you, as they say in the U.S.A. This “cruel” weather is just what I like – dry.

Yours ever | WC<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Frank Archer Eqr | 21. Baker Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 5 | MR 22 | 83’, with ‘WC 14’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. With address ranged right and WC’s monogram ranged left.

3. Heart and Science was published towards the end of May and the serialisation in Belgravia finished with the June issue.

4. Archer wrote again a week later (Archer Archive):

Copy | Mch. 28/83

21 Baker St | W.

My dear Collins

I saw the Gattis this morning who have the Adelphi Theatre and sounded them as to producing the “Magdalen” there – of course supposing – as I said to them – that you would be willing to let them have it – but they [illegible] so sanguinely of their present play and then talk of some new play to follow that no opening seems at present probable. If however everything comes to her (as much as to him) who waits the “Magdalen” need not despair. I was so glad to get a better account of you. If you can defy our Nor’Easters (why did the season take its name from the wind?) you are what ~~Shakespeare~~ Pistol would call “a lad of life, an imp of fame”

Always, my dear Collins, Sincerely yours | Frank Archer

The quote is from Henry V, Act IV, Scene 1. Apparently unknown to Archer ‘some new play’ was to be WC’s own Rank and Riches (see [2151] to Archer, 25 April 1883). Archer’s letter to WC followed one he had received from Ada Cavendish on 19 March 1883 (Archer Archive):

Dear Mr Archer

The negotiations of which I told you have not ripened into anything up to the present time, & I fear will not flower this season. I do so wish we could get the dear “Old Magdalen” done somewhere. It would be so very nice, And I do so hate an idle life. What do you think of the Adelphi – if this piece is not a go! You might see Gatti about it. I have already set an influential private friend of mine on to them about it, but if you could get a personal interview it might carry more weight. We ought not to let the matter drop if possible.

Yours sincerely | Ada Cavendish

[3166] TO W. F. TILLOTSON, 22 MARCH 1883

MS: Yale (Gimbel H1298). Published: A&C6, p. 15.

Summary: ‘A.L.s. of 22 March 1883 to W. F. Tillotson.’<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Thus in John B. Podeschi, Dickens and Dickensiana. A Catalogue of the Richard Gimbel Collection in the Yale University Library (New Haven, Yale University Library, 1980), p. 484. Yale Library could not locate this item in March 2010.

[2126] TO W. M. LAFFAN, 24 MARCH 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 272; Farmer 1996, p. 373; BGLL, III, p. 391.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
24th March 1883

Dear Sir,

Since I last wrote,<sup>1</sup> the publishers have decided to hasten the book publication here of “Heart and Science”. The new date will be the 10th or 12th of April next. The supply of proofs of Volume III will be quickened next week – and duplicates shall be sent to you as soon as they are corrected.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
W. M. Laffan Esqre

---

1. A letter from WC to Laffan from mid-March 1883 thus appears to have been lost.

[2127] TO CHRISTIAN TAUCHNITZ, 26 MARCH 1883

MS: Unknown. Published: Otto, p. 78, our copy text; B&C, II, pp. 456–457.

90, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, W., | London, March 26th, 1883.

My vocation in life is to find words for thoughts. Your kindness is, really and truly, too much for my resources – I call on my stock of words, and I find it exhausted. When you come to my age, and have in the course of nature lost some good and true friends, you will value as I do the friends who are still left. I say no more.

[2128] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 27 MARCH 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 392.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
27th March 1883

My dear Chatto

My best thanks for your letter, and for the enclosures. I will immediately look over the agreement and return my duplicate signed.<sup>1</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. The agreement for the renewal of the seven-year lease of the copyright of thirteen of WC’s previously published works, dated 27 March 1883, and found at Reading. Andrew Chatto’s letter to WC of the same date reveals that also enclosed was the payment for the renewal of the lease in the form of three promissory notes, totalling £1,000.

[2129] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 28 MARCH 1883

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 392–393.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
28th March 1883

My dear Chatto,

Here is the duplicate agreement signed by me. I suppose my signature is sufficient receipt for the Promissory Notes – especially as it occurs again at the back of the notes themselves.<sup>1</sup>

In case of your having to confer with my Executors, on the next occasion,<sup>2</sup> I may add that it is understood on my side, and on yours (as I may venture to say, after the talk we had on the subject), that our present agreement refers to publication of my works in book-form only – and leaves the right of publication, periodically, in my hands.

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Andrew Chatto Esq<sup>3</sup>

---

1. The agreement renewing of the lease of the copyright of thirteen of WC's previously published works – see the note to [2128] to Chatto of the previous day.

2. That is, should the author have died before the new lease expired at the end of March 1890.

3. On the blank third page of the letter following the signature etc. is found the following lengthy annotation in another hand:

Agreed C&W

Offered 2500£ for the entire remaining copyrights of 19 of Mr Collins' novels including the 13 contained in the agreement of this date and The Law and the Lady, "The Two Destinies" "The Haunted Hotel",

"The Fallen Leaves", "Jezebel's Daughter", "The Black Robe" on the assumption that our unexpired interest in the 6 last was worth 500£ and that our interest in the stereos &c was worth 1000£. Making the whole value of the stereos & copyrights 4000£.

Mr Collins said he would accept this offer should the demand for his new story "Heart and Science" in the 3 vol form not greatly exceed that of his last two or three stories.

In the event, WC did not sell his residual copyrights to Chatto & Windus until shortly before his death, by which time the offered price had shrunk to £1,800, though a further five works had been added to the list – see [2948] to Chatto of 2 April 1889.

[2130] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 2 APRIL 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 393–394.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd April 1883

My dear Chatto,

Shall I have duplicate copies made of "The Black Robe" agreement – applied to "Heart and Science"? And shall the date of the publication day be the 10th or 12th – or what day – of this month?<sup>1</sup> The last proofs corrected for press reached you I hope this morning.

If you have no objection I propose to occupy the fly-leaf before the title-page with an alphabetical list of my books – published by you. (See enclosed MSS). The Preface itself – which I have tried to make pleasant and readable – will be printed of course in smaller type than the text. Here, my ignorance appeals to you for directions to readers.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Proofs of the Preface shall be sent back for press by return of post.

---

1. That is, to create a draft agreement for the lease of the copyright of Heart and Science to Chatto & Windus for seven years for the sum of £600. Andrew Chatto in fact responded by himself having the agreement drafted and sending it to WC on 3 April 1883. The agreement, now found at Reading, was signed on that day (Weedon, p. 80, mistakenly says 3 March 1883), while the official date of publication of the novel is given as 14 April. Further details were a bonus payment to the author of £25 per 100 if the triple-decker sold over 1,000 copies, plus the usual limitation to volumes sold at not less than 2s.

2. WC's Preface to Heart and Science is divided into two sections, 'To Readers in General' and 'To Readers in Particular' (i.e. the critics). The proposed listing of WC's works carried by Chatto & Windus is thus seen as a further set of 'directions to readers', about which the author requires the publisher's advice. The fly leaf to each of the three volumes of the first edition indeed carried the list WC suggests here.

[2131] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 2 APRIL 1883

MS: Unknown.<sup>1</sup> On sale: Americas Antiquarium, Chicago, IL (November 2001). Published: BGLL, III, p. 394.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
London | 2nd April 1883
With Mr Wilkie Collins's compliments

---

1. Probably simply an autograph.

[2132] TO NAPOLEON SARONY,<sup>1</sup> 5 APRIL 1883

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, III, p. 394.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.
5th April 1883

My dear Sarony,

The glorious portrait has arrived quite safely.<sup>2</sup> How am I sufficiently to express my gratitude for such a generous and welcome present – ? Please look at the third page of the enclosed proof – and you will see the little [act] that I can do.<sup>3</sup>

The new book will be published here on the 14th – and a copy for you to whom it is inscribed – shall at once cross the ocean, containing all the corrections and improvements which do not appear in the pirated version in America. I am so weary with the hard work which this last novel has cost me that I must say goodbye for the present

Yours affectly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Napoleon Sarony (1821–96), celebrated New York photographer whose studio was at 680 Broadway, and for whom WC had sat during his American trip.
2. Portrait not found with the letter.
3. Referring to the dedication to Heart and Science: ‘To | Sarony | (Of New York) | Artist, Photographer, | and | Good Friend’.

[2133] TO HERRN JUSTIZRATH SIMSON,<sup>1</sup> 5 APRIL 1883

MS: Berlin. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 394–396.

90, Gloucester Place, London. W. | 5th April 1883

Sir. –

When I requested you to enlighten me, on the subject of the law of registration in Germany, under the International Treaty of Copyright, I did not trouble you with a narrative of the circumstances under which my application was made.

Since that time, a course of proceeding has been adopted, by the person who has treated with me for the right of translating my last work of fiction into the German language, which obliges me to ask once more that you will favour me with your advice.

The person with whom I have been in treaty is Mr Paul Jüngling – writing to me from 39. Behrenstrasse, Berlin.

The periodical publication of my last-written novel (called “Heart and Science”) began in the weekly newspaper called “England”, on the 22nd July 1882.<sup>2</sup> On the 31st August 1882, I sent to Mr Jüngling the first five published weekly numbers of the story, for registration in Germany. The other numbers were duly forwarded, in continuation, up to the 30th November 1882. In all these published numbers, there appeared, week by week, as part of the printed title of the story, this line: – “The Right of Translation is Reserved.”

On the 9th September 1882, I received Mr Jüngling’s first acknowledgement of the receipt of the newspapers which I had sent to him.

His letter asserted that the weekly newspaper which published the story could not be lawfully registered in Germany, in protection of the right of translation – and his decision was communicated to me in these words: “I therefore refuse to have anything to do with the registration of these newspapers”. He further declared that the registration of the second publication, in book-form (not yet issued at this date!) was the only registration that would protect his rights, and mine, in Germany.

After this experience of Mr Jüngling’s interpretation of the law, I sent no more newspapers, and applied to you for advice.

On receipt of your letter, those numbers of the story, which could still be protected by registration of the newspaper publishing it, were at once registered (in accordance with your kind suggestion), in Berlin and in Leipzig, by my friend Freiherr von Tauchnitz, of Leipzig.<sup>3</sup>

All other conditions agreed on with Mr Jüngling having been performed, on my part, the certificates of registration were today offered to him by my agent, in exchange for the purchase-money due for the right of translation – with what result, Herr Bette (the agent in question) will have the honour of informing you.

The question will then remain (seeing that Mr Jüngling’s refusal to register the newspapers placed my rights in jeopardy) whether I can offer the right of translation to another person who places no vexatious obstacles in my way?<sup>4</sup>

Failing this, what other remedy against Mr Jüngling is at my disposal?

Your valuable advice will oblige,

Your faithful servant, | Wilkie Collins

Herrn Justizrath Simson | &c &c &c | Berlin.

---

1. A legal firm in Berlin – ‘Justizrath’ is not a proper name but a title meaning ‘Advocate’, while ‘Herrn’ is the German equivalent of ‘Messrs’. (WC is perhaps unaware of this as he consistently addresses the firm as ‘Dear Sir’ – see also [2311] of 20 May and [2328] of 19 June 1884.) The particular lawyer in question may have been John Simson, younger brother of Martin Eduard Simson (b. 1810), President of the Appeal Court in Frankfurt from 1860–79 – see Georg Brandes, Levned: Et Tiaar (Copenhagen: Gyldendalske Boghandel, 1907), pp. 291–294.
2. In addition to the monthly instalments appearing in Belgravia from August 1882 to June 1883, Heart and Science was serialized in a series of provincial newspapers, plus the new London weekly England, where the story ran from 22 July 1882 to 17 February 1883. The arrangements were made by A. P. Watt – see Law, pp. 103–104, 238–239.
3. That is, Baron von Tauchnitz.
4. The letter is written on the verso of two separate sheets. Pasted on to the back of the second is a separate note – see [2180] to Paul Jüngling of 9 July 1883. The date and content of this note suggest that Jüngling continued to act as translator of Heart and Science. The 1886 German edition from the Berlin house of Janke (Herz und Wissen) bears no translator’s name.

[2134] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 7 APRIL 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 396–397.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th April 1883

My dear Chatto,

I have, of course, signed my duplicate agreement. I only wait to send it to you – until my lawyer (also my friend) gets the copies stamped.<sup>1</sup> After you have kindly undertaken the “engrossing”, the least I can do is to help the Queen to the sixpences.<sup>2</sup> A sprained ankle and the death of Brown seem to make this tribute particularly touching and appropriate.<sup>3</sup>

I am very glad to hear that you like the preface. The Pirate who has stopped Harper’s contemplated edition of Heart and Science in the U.S. by printing a 20 cent edition of his own, has just sent me £40.-.-.<sup>4</sup> Add £100 received for the periodical publication from “Frank Leslie”<sup>5</sup> and how does the Britisher look by the side of Bret Harte and Mark Twain?<sup>6</sup> What devil possessed me, when I forgot to become an American Citizen twenty years since?<sup>7</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. This must be Henry Powell Bartley.
  2. In other words, ‘Since you have prepared the copies of the agreement for Heart and Science, I must pay for the two sixpenny stamps necessary to complete the legal formalities’. The stamp used to validate legal documents, of course, carried the sovereign’s head in profile.
  3. That is, Queen Victoria is especially deserving of aid and sympathy at the present time, since she is still suffering from a sprain in her leg caused by slipping on the stairs at Windsor Castle, and John Brown, her Highland servant, has just died (see ‘Death of Mr. John Brown’, Times, Thursday 29 March 1883, p. 12). There is a minor comic character in Heart and Science, the Highland piper Donald, who may owe something to John Brown.
  4. Probably George Munro who produced the (unauthorized) first book edition of Heart and Science in February 1883 as volume 1544 in his Seaside Library – see Topp, III.
  5. Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper – see [2009] to A. P. Watt of 4 February 1882.
  6. With bitter irony Collins contrasts his own pitifully small earnings in the United States with those of best-selling American authors like Harte and Twain – see his Considerations on the Copyright Question of 1880.
  7. The allusion here escapes us, though ‘twenty years since’ might suggest a reference to the Civil War.

[2135] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 10 APRIL 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 397.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th April 1883

Dear Sirs,

I have the pleasure of acknowledging receipt of your cheque for £33.-.- in payment for my contribution to the April number of “Belgravia” (1883) – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Again at the rate of one pound per page for the instalment of Heart and Science. Duly credited on 11 April (Coultts: WC).

[2136] TO CHRISTIAN TAUCHNITZ, 12 APRIL 1883

MS: Unknown. Published: Otto, p. 78, our copy text; BGLL, III, p. 398.

90, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, W., | April 12th, 1883.

It is another bond between us – and to me, a most encouraging circumstance – to hear that your good father enters his protest too against the infernal cruelties of vivisection, and gives us the support of another illustrious name. Please say this to him, with my sincere esteem and regard. My book has been written (as we say in England) “with all my heart,” and I am indeed glad to hear that it has made such a favourable impression on you.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Heart and Science: A Story of the Present Time, recorded as published by Tauchnitz, 3 May 1883, vols 2137–2138 (Todd & Bowden, p. 329).

[2137] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 14 APRIL 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: B&C, II, p. 457.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

14th April 1883

My dear Chatto,

My best thanks for the presentation copies of “Heart and Science.” When Solomon said there was nothing new under the sun,<sup>2</sup> he was without a prophetic sense of your [del] inexhaustible resources in the matter of designs for binding. Both in colour and ornament, our “new dress”, is /such/ a striking object that the binder will help us in calling special attention to the new book.<sup>3</sup> For your sake and for mine I feel an anxiety about the success of this novel, which I have not felt about any other work of mine for years past.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins
Andrew Chatto Esq

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
2. See Ecclesiastes 1:9: ‘The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun.’ (AV).
3. ‘Light blue smooth cloth, the front cover blocked in brown at the top with a band of ivy, beneath a rule, and, in the centre, with an owl, ivy, and a heart, and, at the bottom, above a rule, a band of ivy; the back cover blocked in brown with a publisher’s monogram; the spine blocked in brown and lettered in gold beneath a rule and a band of ivy’, with ‘white and green floral end papers’ (Parrish, p. 116).
4. For reviews of Heart and Science, see Farmer 1996, pp. 329–38.

[3225] TO A. P. WATT, 15 APRIL 1883

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (May 2013). Published: A&C8, p. 18.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
15th April 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

Do you, by any lucky chance, know of an expert who can translate a German letter for me?<sup>1</sup> It relates to some law-business of mine at Berlin. I want to speak with you also on the subject of registering “Heart and Science” for the French translation. Are you not too busy to come and see me by the midday train? Choose your own day, pray.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins
A. P. Watt Esq

---

1. Watt clearly did, as it was translated almost at once. See [2140] to Watt, 18 April 1883.

[2138] TO HENRY HIGGINS,<sup>1</sup> 16 APRIL 1883

MS: Wolff Collection (1388). Published: Wolff, p. 271 (recipient unidentified); BGLL, III, p. 398.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
16th April 1883

Dear Sir,

I enclose ~~some~~ lines, which please insert in the Second Tableau – according to the marginal instructions.

Faithfully yours | WC

---

1. Theatrical copyist (b. c. 1840) who lived in Kennington, south-east London (1881 Census RG11/593, f. 102, pp. 10–11). He was copyist for WC’s new play Rank and Riches: A Play in Four Acts and Five Tableaux, which opened at the Adelphi on 9 June 1883. This is merely one (and clearly not the first) of a long series of brief letters from WC concerning this matter which continues until after the play opens. Though [2149] of 29 April is the first in which the recipient’s name is clearly stated, there can be no doubt that this is to the same man.

[2139] TO ALFRED T. WAITE, 16 APRIL 1883

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 399.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 16th April 1883

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kindness in sending me the “Herald”<sup>1</sup> – and in thus reminding me of a very pleasant interview with your contributor and his friend.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Mr Alfred T. Waite

-
1. Probably the Alfred T. Waite who attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the late 1870s and was on the staff of the Boston Herald in the early 1880s.
  2. The microfilm run of the Boston Herald to which we have had access runs out in 1879 and the issue of the paper in question has not been identified. Perhaps an article there referred back to an interview conducted with WC during his visit to Boston in 1873–74.

[2140] TO A. P. WATT, 18 APRIL 1883

MS: Ross. Published: BGLL, III, p. 399.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
18th April 1883

Dear Mr Watt

My best thanks for your speedy kindness. The Book and the Translation have both reached me.<sup>1</sup> Do me one more favour – when you have a minute to pass let me know what I owe you for the Book – and spare me the calculation of percentages which represent “Trade Price,” and require a knowledge of “compound subtraction” associated with birch rods in early life!

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins
The translation is excellent – as clear as crystal.
A. P. Watt Esq

-
1. Both book and translation remain unidentified.

[2141] TO A. ARTHUR READE,<sup>1</sup> 19 APRIL 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 400.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
19th April 1883

Dear Sir,

A man who lives by the work of his brains, lives under artificial conditions – and must have artificial help. Natural Champagne (Vin Brut) is my help. In my experience there is no tonic for the exhausted nervous system, so effectual and so harmless.

Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins
Pray forgive a hastily-written reply. I am vy busily occupied.
A. Arthur Reade Eqr

-
1. On 10 February 1882 WC had replied to a letter from Reade (author of Study and Stimulants) concerning his use of tobacco. On this occasion the enquiry seems to have concerned his use of alcohol.

[2142] TO J. G. FOTHERINGHAM,<sup>1</sup> 19 APRIL 1883

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 400.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 19th April 1883

Sir,

I request you to register in Paris, under the International Copyright Treaty between England and France, the novel called “Heart and Science”, of which I am the author, and the copyright of which belongs to me.

The First Edition of “Heart and Science” was published in London, in three volumes, on the sixteenth of this present month of April 1883. The copy sent to you for registration is a copy of this first Edition.

I remain, Sir, | faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | M. J.G. Fotheringham<sup>2</sup> | Rue Neuve des Capucines<sup>3</sup> | Paris

-
1. Paris publisher and agent.
  2. For Monsieur J. G. Fotheringham, as the house’s imprints make clear.
  3. Now known as Rue des Capucines.

[2143] TO A. P. WATT, 19 APRIL 1883

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 401.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th April 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

One word more, to say that I propose to send the book to Mr Fotheringham by today’s registered book post.

The enclosed “authority” is addressed to Mr Fotheringham. If you will kindly send it with your letter, it will I hope fulfil the formalities required by the Treaty in France.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. See [2142] to J. G. Fotheringham of the same date.

[2144] TO A. P. WATT, 20 APRIL 1883

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 401.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th April 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

With renewed thanks, here is a cheque for the books.<sup>1</sup>

Mr Fotheringham’s copy left, duly registered, by yesterday’s post.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Presumably paying for the ‘Book and Translation’ – see [2140] to Watt, 18 April 1883. A cheque for £4-10s to ‘A P Watt’ was debited on 24 April (Coutts: WC).
  2. See [2142] to J. G. Fotheringham of 19 April 1883

[2145] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 20 APRIL 1883

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 401–402.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 20th April 1883

My dear Chatto,

Thank you for three drafts on the City Bank for £200.- each – sent to me in accordance with our agreement for “Heart and Science”.<sup>1</sup>

If I hear of a chance of getting a valuable notice, I will not forget your kind suggestion. Alas! Alas! two friends who would have helped me – G.H. Lewes and John Forster – have laid down their pens for ever.<sup>2</sup>

The Italian translation – in a Roman newspaper – has been so successful that the periodical right has been sold again to two other Italian newspapers – and the book publication is accordingly deferred.<sup>3</sup> I hope we may take this a good sign in its way – for you and for me.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Chatto had enclosed the bank drafts with his letter to WC of 19 April 1883 (Reading). For details of the publishing agreement for Heart and Science, see the note to [2130] to Andrew Chatto of 2 April 1883. The first Bill on ‘City Bk discod’ for £200 was credited to WC’s bank account on 24 May, with a debit for the discount of £1-9s-7d. Two more for £200 each, both labelled ‘Chatto & Windus Note’, were paid on their due dates of 17 October 1883 and 17 January 1884.

2. Editors and journalists of great distinction, Lewes and Forster had died in 1878 and 1876 respectively.

3. Though no serial appearances of Heart and Science in Italian have been traced, see Cuore e Scienza, an authorized translation in one volume by Lida Cerracchini (Milan: Edoardo Sonzogno, Editor, 1884), a copy of which was found in WC’s library (Baker 2002, p. 95).

[2146] TO FRANCES POWER COBBE,<sup>1</sup> 24 APRIL 1883

MS: Huntington (CB 123). Published: BGLL, III, p. 402.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th April 1883

Dear Miss Cobbe,

I am not getting over my last attack of gout quite so successfully as usual – and the doctor’s order says, “Leave London and be idle”. There is my appeal to your indulgence, left to plead with you for itself.

In the preface to the book-edition of “Heart and Science” – just published – I have ventured to mention your name, first among the good friends who have helped me.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [2045] to her of 23 June 1882.

2. WC wrote in his Preface: ‘Thankfully accepting the assistance rendered to me by Miss Frances Power Cobbe, by Mrs H. M. Gordon, and by Surgeon-General Gordon, C.B., I have borne in mind (as they have borne in mind) the value of temperate advocacy to a good cause.’ (‘I. To Readers in General’).

[2151] TO FRANK ARCHER, 25 APRIL 1883

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 304 (dated April 1883). Summary: BGLL, III, pp. 404–405. Published: A&C7, p. 19.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

25th April 1883

My dear Archer,

Thank you heartily for your friendly note. I hope to write again next week and show how gladly I profit by your kind suggestion, by proposing answering for any visit to the Theatre – subject to your convenience and Mr Thorne’s.<sup>3</sup>

Miss Lingard is to play the chief part – in that new piece of mine which has been waiting for a true artist – with such special capacities as the part needs.<sup>4</sup> We have had no such actress as this lady on our stage, since – since Helen Faucit at her best.<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Frank Archer Eqr | Vaudeville Theatre | Strand | W.C.’, and initialled ‘WC’. Envelope postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | AP 26 | 83’ and verso ‘LONDON W | AP 26 | 83 | S.M.P.’, with ‘WC 15’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. With address ranged right and WC’s monogram ranged left.

3. Archer had clearly invited WC to see his performance as Faulkland in Sheridan’s The Rivals at the Vaudeville Theatre whose manager was Thomas Thorne.

4. Alice Lingard (29 July 1847–25 June 1897) played the part of Lady Calista in Rank and Riches, opening at the Adelphi on 9 June 1883. Robinson describes the opening night fiasco (p. 305).

5. Helen Faucit, Lady Martin (born Helena Faucit Saville, 1814–98) was a renowned stage actress whose career was at its height too early for WC to have seen her then, though after her marriage she did play some Shakespearian roles in London in the 1850s and 1860s (ODNB).

[2147] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 25 APRIL 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 273 (recipient unidentified); BGLL, III, p. 403.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th April 1883

Dear Sir,

Since I last wrote, I find there is a necessity for my having one of your copies of Act 4.<sup>1</sup> On receipt of this, will you kindly send it to me by registered book post – unless you happen to have any other appointment which brings you into this neighbourhood.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Rank and Riches.

[2148] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 27 APRIL 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/9), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Davis, p. 296. Published: B&C, II, pp. 457–459.

London | 90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

Friday 27th April 1883

My dear Winter

The mail of Tuesday /last/ took to The Tribune office (in three separate packets by registered book-post /addressed to you/) the first Edition of the revised “Heart and Science”. I addressed the three volumes to the office, in case of their being stopped at ~~the~~ /your/ Custom House, as three separate works – hoping that some official person might be at the “Tribune” disposal capable of “clearing,” my unfortunate little gift. Our post office authorities here tell terrible tales of duty being insisted on – unless we write “valued at not more than one dollar” in the address. And even then – if it is more than one /volume/ [~~del~~] (say a novel in three Volumes) ~~the~~ /the official/ British Intellect doubts. If “Heart and Science” never reaches you – or if it is torn to pieces [~~del~~] /which/ Proctor – astronomer and lecturer<sup>3</sup> – declares happened to some books of his) we will try the Tauchnitz Edition next, bound in one Volume.

What you kindly say of The Dead Secret has greatly pleased and encouraged me. I cried so myself over that passage [~~del~~] in writing it, that I was obliged to make a fair copy of [~~del~~] /of the page/, when I was able to compose myself.

The slip, containing Mr Bellews’ “recollections”<sup>4</sup> reminds me of days that can never come again – and raises the ghosts of many a beloved relative and friend associated with my happy early life. Submission – there is nothing for it but dogged submission to the “all-wise and beneficent Providence” who created /all living beings/ [~~del~~] to die – and to eat each other, while they live.<sup>5</sup>

Instead of resting, I am now in all the turmoil of negotiating for the production of a [~~del~~] new play of mine – (did I mention it to you?) – which has been kept waiting for an actress. Miss Lingard has taken us all by storm here; she is just the artist I want.<sup>6</sup> I saw her the other night in the very worst adaptation of Young Dumas’ Dame aux Camélias that could possibly be produced. She was badly supported – and the death-act was allowed to be far too long. But, in the third act – from the time when the father comes in to expect her to break her heart by giving up his /son,/ to the end – I have seen nothing since [~~del~~] Desclée in “Frou-frou”<sup>7</sup> so true, so passionate, so various, and so finely disciplined in the matter of Art. I am resolved to keep my piece waiting till

I can give her a thoroughly good “cast”. Then, you shall hear more – and I hope you will also read the piece in MS, and give me your critical opinion.

I am obliged to break off. Here is the copyist come for “instructions”.

Ever yours my dear friend, | WC

P.S. I have taken the liberty of giving a young Frenchman a letter of introduction to you. He is on a /an official/ mission connected with “studs” [del] and horse-breeding. [del] If you will only tell him what actors to see in his evenings – you will be kind to him and to me. As to the horses, I have given him another letter to Buck.<sup>8</sup>

All those short stories have still to be collected. It will be done one day – and they shall be your’s [sic]. I dare not publish my plays – theatrical thieves would steal them – I mean in England and in remote places – with bankrupt managers for receivers of stolen goods<sup>9</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Mr William Winter | Fort Hill | New Brighton | S. I. | U. S. America’. Signed ‘Wilkie Collins’ in lower-left corner, and postmarked ‘LONDON-W | ZX | AP27 | 83’. Endorsed in Winter’s hand, ‘Received May 9th | Wilkie Collins | Ans<sup>d</sup>’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. R.A. Proctor (1837–1888: ODNB), astronomer and author.

4. John Bellew (1823–1874), author, preacher, and orator, who made an unsuccessful American reading tour in 1871, ‘quarreled with the theater managers, and lost his health.’ He returned ‘home sick and penniless to die’ (Davis, p. 280).

5. Compare the motto of Andrew Treverton: ‘My business in this world is to eat, drink, sleep, and die. Everything else is superfluity – and I have done with it’ (The Dead Secret, 1857, Bk. III ch.1).

6. Australian actress who played the leading role in the disastrous production of Rank and Riches at the Adelphi, 9 June 1883.

7. Frou-Frou (1869) was a highly successful comedy by Ludovic Halevy and Henri Meilhac, starring Aimée-Olympe Desclée.

8. Edward Buck, editor of the New York racing paper, the Spirit of the Times.

9. WC turns the notepaper around to landscape format, and squeezes his postscript vertically down in the space beside the printed monogram and address on the opening page.

[2149] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 29 APRIL 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 274; BGLL, III, pp. 403–404. Amended: A&C11, pp. 17–18.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday, 29th April | 1883

My dear Sir,

The duplicate copies of my play which you are now making are both made for me. But the question of copying the parts – is a question for Mr Edgar Bruce.<sup>1</sup> This piece is not yet cast, and the date of representation is necessarily still unsettled. I think you had better apply directly to Mr Edgar Bruce – to know whether he wishes the parts to be copied, while you have the MSS in your care.

By tomorrow’s registered book post, I shall send you the corrected second act – to have a duplicate copy made of it.<sup>2</sup> Please keep the corrected second act, until I ask you to return it. The 1st act shall follow – when I have once more looked it over.

The 3rd act is ready at last – but it is lent to a reader. In a day or two I hope to have it returned.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Your fair copy (duplicate) of act 2. can wait with the duplicate of act 4 – for the present.

Henry Higgins Esqre

---

1. Producer of Rank and Riches at the Adelphi from 9 June 1883.

2. See [3333] to Higgins of the following day.

[2150] TO ARTHUR BLUNT,<sup>1</sup> 30 APRIL 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 404.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th April 1883

My dear Arthur,

It is needless to say that I am sorry – very sorry. But I see the obstacle in the way, and (with a very bad grace) I submit. It is some consolation to hear that the piece has produced a formidable impression on you.<sup>2</sup> When you are free, do make a memorandum “To let Wilkie know”. There will always be Doctor Downward if there is nothing else.<sup>3</sup> (What do you think of killing him, in the poisoned air? It is a tough question of construction – but it may be done.)

Many thanks for the piece. I ought to have saved you the trouble of sending it back.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Actor under the stage name Arthur Cecil – see [1641] to him of 1 August 1876.

2. This presumably refers to the script of WC’s ill-fated play Rank and Riches, in which Blunt must have turned down a leading role due to prior commitments.

3. Referring to the dubious physician in Armada, or rather in the dramatic version Miss Gwilt, the part played by Blunt in the production at the Globe in 1876.

[3333] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 30 APRIL 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 403–404 (in footnote to [2149] to Higgins, 29 April 1883). Amended: A&C11, p. 18.

By Book Post. Registered 30th April 1883 | Manuscript.

Henry Higgins Esqre | 22. Oakden Street | Kennington Road | S.E.

Wilkie Collins | 90. Gloucester Place. W.

---

1. Postmarked: ‘REGISTERED | E. 12 | 30 AP 83 | W. D. O.’.

2. Presumably containing the second act of Rank and Riches, referred to in [2149] to Higgins of the previous day.

[3369] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 30 APRIL 1883

MS: Private. Published: Gasson, p. 77; A&C13, p. 11.

30th April 1883

To

Miss Hogarth | from her old friend
Wilkie Collins<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Written on the half title of a three-volume edition of Heart and Science, 1883.

[2152] TO FRANK ARCHER, 5 MAY 1883

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Archer, p. 243; BGLL, III, p. 405, amended A&C7, p. 20.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

5th May 1883

My dear Archer,

I and my companions most sincerely thank you for a delightful evening. Pray add my thanks to Mr Thorne for his kindness – and my congratulations on his admirable performance of “Acres”. He and Mrs. Stirling are comedians in the highest and best sense of the word.

And let me not forget “Falkland” [sic]. You made the most ideotic character on the British stage (written, I am firmly convinced, in some of Sheridan's most utterly drunken moments) a gentleman in presence and manner – the victim of his own bad temper. If I had been working with you, as in the days of "Magdalen"<sup>3</sup> – I should have protested against a little hardness here and there, and a little hurry in elocution (natural enough, having such words to speak!) – and there is the beginning and the end of my criticism.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours, | Wilkie Collins.

What an excellent audience last night! – and what a delightful contrast to some other audiences at certain theatres of great pretensions which shall be nameless!

---

1. Initialled and directed to 'Frank Archer Eqr | Vaudeville Theatre | Strand | W.C.', postmarked recto 'LONDON W | AP 26 | 83' and verso 'LONDON W | AP 26 | 83 | S.M.P.', with 'WC 15' in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. With address ranged right and WC's monogram ranged left.

3. Archer had played the part of Julian Gray in the first production of The New Magdalen at the Olympic Theatre in 1873, and was to repeat the role in the revival at the Novelty Theatre in 1884.

4. WC had clearly been to see Archer in the revival of Sheridan's The Rivals on 4 May 1883. It was produced by Thomas Thorne at the Vaudeville Theatre from December 1882 and ran for over 200 performances. Thorne played the part of Bob Acres, Archer the obsessively jealous Faulkland, while Fanny Sterling Hehl (1813–95: ODNB) was Mrs Malaprop. She had also played Madame Bergman in The Red Vial at the Olympic Theatre in October 1858, where her performance was described as the play's one redeeming feature.

[2153] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 8 MAY 1883

MS: Kansas (MS D11:11). Published: BGLL, III, p. 406.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday 8th May 1883

My dear Sir,

Will you kindly let Mr Edgar Bruce have your fair copy of the first act of the play tomorrow – if possible.<sup>1</sup> If the copying is not yet finished – please complete it at your earliest convenience.

I shall send you the third act by tomorrow's registered book-post.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Please keep the corrected copy of the first act, in your possession – after the fair (duplicate) copy has been sent to Mr Bruce

Henry Higgins Eqr

---

1. Again referring to the script of the play Rank and Riches, to open at the Adelphi on 9 June 1883, with Edgar Bruce as producer.

2. See [3137] to Higgins of the following day.

[3137] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 9 MAY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 406 (in footnote to [2153] to Higgins, 8 May 1883); A&C5, p. 13.

By Book Post. Registered 9th May 1883 | Manuscript<sup>2</sup>

Henry Higgins Eqr | 22. Oakden Street | Kennington Road | S.E.

Wilkie Collins. 90 Gloucester Place. W.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Postmarked: 'REGISTERED | G 3 | 9 MY 83 | W.12. O'.

2. Presumably containing the third act of Rank and Riches, referred to in [2153] to Higgins of the previous day.

3. Contained within a rectangular box at the foot of the envelope.

[2154] TO HENRY D. PIGOTT,<sup>1</sup> 10 MAY 1883

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 406–407.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 10th May 1883

My dear Henry,

Here is my copy of The Frozen Deep. My iceberg scene is at the end of the 1st Act. Let me have the little book back – when you return the other books.

The dates are on the opposite page.

Ever yours | WC

Mrs G's cold is better – she sends kind remembrances<sup>3</sup>

The French version of “No Thoroughfare” was made by Dickens and Fechter<sup>4</sup> – and was changed in many respects from the English version. I was too busy at the time to have anything to do with it. It was not as well acted in Paris as in London. Fechter did not play in it. And I heard there was very little money made by the French piece.

The Frozen Deep

Written in 1856 | =

First performed at the house of Charles Dickens (Tavistock House) January 1857. by the amateur company | =

Performed before the Queen by the amateur company at the Gallery of Illustration Regent Street, 1857 | =

Performed in London and at some of the country Theatres (by the amateur men) for the benefit of the family of Douglas Jerrold (after his death) in 1857. The women's parts acted, on these occasions, by professional actresses. | =

Performed on the public stage at the Olympic Theatre 1866. Principal man's part (“Richard Wardour” – created by Dickens) performed at the Olympic by Henry Neville.<sup>5</sup> The iceberg effect at the end of the 1st Act was then introduced for the first time. | =

Turned into a story and read by me in public at Boston U.S.A. in 1874

---

1. Henry Drummond Smyth Pigott (1848–1927), the eldest son of Edward Pigott's older brother Henry Thomas Coward Smyth Pigott, who had died insane in 1858 at the age of only thirty-five – see [0166] to Edward Pigott, 16 May 1854. As a young man Henry D. Pigott seems to have resided with his unmarried uncle rather than his Scottish mother, Elizabeth Drummond Pigott née Nairne (see the 1871 Census, where both Edward Pigott and his nephew are recorded as resident at 28 South Bank, Dorset Square). WC was later to provide assistance to the second son of Henry Thomas Pigott, the actor James William Nairne Smyth Pigott – see [2891] to [Jim] Pigott of 14 September 1888. There is no record of WC being in contact with either of the younger siblings, John Hugh Smyth Pigott (1852–1927: ODNB), who became the leader of the Agapemonite sect and declared himself Messiah in 1892, and Maude Smyth Pigott (b. 1853), of whom little is known.

2. Stout, of large size, with two penny stamps, signed and directed to ‘Henry D. Pigott Esqr | Budleigh Salterton | Devon’, postmark illegible, but franked in Exeter on the following day.

3. Caroline Graves.

4. See Peters, pp. 288–289.

5. Henry Neville (1837–1910) played the role of Richard Wardour in Horace Wigan's October 1866 production.

[2155] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 11 MAY 1883

MS: Wolff Collection (1389). Published: Wolff, p. 271 (recipient unidentified); BGLL, III, p. 407.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
11th May 1883

My dear Sir,

I am troubling you again – with an alteration in the beginning of the 4th Act. In the first four “Scenes” as they now stand, there is too much narrative and too little dramatic action. Will you please make two copies of the enclosed new draft – one to be inserted in your copy of the 4th Act (the duplicate) – and one to be inserted in my original copy, here?

Faithfully yours | WC

[2156] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 13 MAY 1883

MS: Wolff Collection (1390). Published: Wolff, p. 271 (recipient unidentified); BGLL, III, p. 408.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday | 13th May.

My dear Sir,

When you come here tomorrow morning will you kindly bring the corrected drafts of the 2nd and 4th Acts – so that I may transfer the new corrections to them – in case of need. The 1st Act will be ready for you to take back – with all the last alterations. I told Mr Bruce it was my fault that the 1st Act parts had not been completed.<sup>1</sup>

Truly yrs | WC

---

1. Higgins was clearly performing the task of copying out the actors' parts as well as WC's manuscript – see [2149] to him of 29 April 1883

[2157] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 15 MAY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 408.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th May 1883

My dear Chatto,

I never see Reviews – and I know nothing of our book except what I see, honourably advertised for me, in the Times book column. How are we getting on?<sup>1</sup>

I am in all the turmoil and botheration of “casting the characters” in my new play<sup>2</sup> – or I should have called on you instead of writing. For the present, my time is emphatically – not my own.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Referring to the reception of Heart and Science in book form – see [2159] to Chatto of 19 May 1883.

2. Rank and Riches at the Adelphi.

[2158] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 17 MAY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 408–409.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th May 1883

My dear Sir,

Can you send me my corrected 1st act, by registered book post some day this week? I say “send” because I don't like your wasting valuable time in bringing the copy all the way from your house to mine.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | WC

Is the 4th act – with the copied new scenes – sent yet to Mr Bruce? This is all that presses.

---

1. A distance of just over four miles.

[2159] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 19 MAY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 409.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th May 1883

My dear Chatto,

Thank you for the two newspapers. The “Academy” critic has an advantage over the other one – he writes like a gentleman at any rate.<sup>1</sup>

Do you remember my predicting that Mr Murray’s title and mine would lead to confusion?<sup>2</sup> And have you noticed the “extract” in yesterday’s Times?<sup>3</sup>

I propose starting in business as a Prophet.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Chatto sends WC two recent reviews of Heart and Science. The novel was favourably reviewed in the Academy, 573 (28 April 1883), p. 290; the other ‘ungentlemanly’ review is probably that in the Athenæum, 2896 (28 April 1882), pp. 538–539, which casts doubts on WC’s mastery of the scientific and legal issues raised in the book, concluding with a jibe concerning ‘the guardianship of infants, a department of the law with which Mr. Wilkie Collins seems not to be familiar’. Both reviews are reprinted in Farmer 1996, pp. 329–331.

2. Referring to David Christie Murray’s novel Hearts, published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus in May 1883, shortly after Heart and Science.

3. Here WC attaches the following cutting from the Times of 18 May:

CHATTO and WINDUS’S NEW BOOKS (Full Lists free by post): –
WILKIE COLLINS’S NEW NOVEL,
HEART and SCIENCE: a Story of the Present Time. By WILKIE COLLINS. 3 vols, crown 8vo., at every library.
“The interest of the tale never flags; ‘Hearts’ is a bright, clever, and well-written novel, and will probably be highly popular.” – St. James’s Gazette.

WC draws two vertical lines down either side of the quoted passage from the St James’s Gazette, which is in fact the final sentence of a review of Murray’s novel, appearing on 16 May, pp. 6–7.

[3138] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY,<sup>1</sup> 24 MAY 1883

MS: Morgan (MA 7606). Published: A&C5, p. 13–14.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 24 May 1883

My dear Collaborateur,

There can be no such thing as a misunderstanding between us. When I ought to write – and don’t write – I feel sure you will excuse me for one or other of two reasons – either I am ill, or I am so busily occupied that my correspondence (even my correspondence with my friends) has fallen into arrear.

This last is the reason which now obliges me to trust to your indulgence. All my mornings are given to the rehearsals of my new play.<sup>2</sup> All my afternoons are employed in “reading” the characters in the play with the artists who are to represent them. The work this time is written in total disregard of the theatrical conventionalities – and the actors ask me to help them to embody characters which are new to them. They are so eager to do their very best for my sake that I cannot say No. The result is that my evenings are not given to my correspondence – but are passed prostrate in an armchair with a cigar and a volume of Scribe’s plays (what a master of his art!) – and my writing table is covered with unanswered letters.<sup>3</sup> In two words – when I ought to be sailing in a friend’s yacht, I am hard at work again.

It is needless to say how heartily I wish you success in Paris – and how ~~regret~~ sorry I am to be tied to London, and unable to help you. Do you know any friend of the “Great Sarah”?<sup>4</sup> and is there any chance of a change of feeling in that illustrious woman which may tell her that she has died in the agonies of poison often enough? and that a complete change in her “repertoire” might help her with the public? These are wild questions indeed!<sup>5</sup>

My kind remembrances to your brother when you next write. If I can send him any more introductions, he has only to let me know it.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC routinely addressed and referred to Robert du Pontavice de Heussey as his ‘collaborateur’, an appellation he used for no-one else.

2. Rank and Riches which was to open at the Adelphi on 9 June 1883.

3. The French playwright Augustin Eugène Scribe (1791–1861). In 1856 Collins was told by the editor of the Revue Britannique in Paris that Scribe had spoken of one of his stories ‘with enthusiasm’; see [0232] to Harriet Collins, 11 March 1856. WC refers to this encouragement in [2535] to Heussey, 15 March 1886. For WC’s copy of Scribe’s plays in 24 volumes, see Baker 2002, pp. 148–149.

4. The famous French actress, Sarah Bernhardt (1844–1923).

5. In 1880 Bernhardt played the title role in Scribe’s play Adrienne Lecouvreur, written with Ernest Legouvé, about the celebrated actress of that name (1692–1730), whose early death may have been due to poison and is depicted as a painful and lingering end in the play.

[3226] TO ARTHUR WING PINERO,<sup>1</sup> 28 MAY 1883

MS: Unknown. Extract: Dawick, p. 113. Published: Dunkel, p. 25, our copy text; A&C8, p. 19.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE | PORTMAN SQUARE, W. | 28th May 1883

DEAR MR. PINERO,

I have myself suffered so much from illness that I can sincerely sympathise with Mrs. Pinero.<sup>2</sup> If I can only feel as sure of her ability to encounter the fatigue of rehearsing as I feel of the interest which she is good enough to take in her part – I shall be perfectly satisfied.

I well remember the funny actor who interested us in those past days – and I heartily congratulate him on the position to which he has risen as a dramatic author.<sup>3</sup>

The first half of the play is beginning to “look alive.” I hope to rehearse the second half tomorrow.<sup>4</sup>

Believe me, Dear Mr. Pinero

Faithfully yours, | WILKIE COLLINS

---

1. Sir Arthur Wing Pinero (1855–1934), actor and later eminent playwright whose first part on the London stage was as Darch in Miss Gwilt, which opened at the Globe Theatre on 25 April 1876.

2. The actress Myra Holme who had acted in the Liverpool production of Miss Gwilt and whom Pinero married on 19 April 1883. WC refers to the small role of Rycroft in his ill-fated play Rank and Riches. After her illness and this experience Myra Holme did not act again.

3. Referring to Pinero himself, whose performance in the role of Darch in the London production of Miss Gwilt had first impressed WC, but who was by then best known as a playwright.

4. Rank & Riches opened at the Adelphi on 9 June 1883 but, despite WC’s confidence, ran for only six performances after a hostile reaction from the audience. Pinero recalled later

My next meeting with Collins was in connection with ... an ill-fated drama of his which was done at the Adelphi Theatre. I forget the name of it ... At the first performance I found myself standing beside the author at the back of the dress-circle. We exchanged greetings, and I noticed that, expecting a call at the fall of the curtain, he wore a large camellia in his button-hole. Everything went wrong. The audience, amused by some awkwardly phrased expressions, tittered; then, as the play advanced, broke into unrestrained laughter; and finally, enraged by an indignant protest from one of the actors, hooted the thing unmercifully ... I never saw him again ... His goodness to me, so flattering from an eminent man to a mere youth, was ever in my mind, and to this day I feel grateful to him.

This recollection is found in a letter from Pinero cited by Walter de la Mare in ‘The Early Novels of Wilkie Collins’, The Eighteen-Sixties ed. John Drinkwater (Cambridge: Cambridge UP, 1932), p. 69 note.

[2160] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 4 JUNE 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 410.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th June 1883

Dear Sirs,

I beg to thank you for a cheque for £33.-.- for my contribution to the number of “Belgravia” for May last – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.<sup>1</sup>

Let me also express my renewed acknowledgments for your kindness in forwarding to me the “Tauchnitz” copies of “Heart and Science”.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Again at the rate of one pound per page for the instalment of Heart and Science. Duly credited to WC’s bank account on 4 June (Coumts: WC).

2. The novel had recently been published in two volumes by Tauchnitz, nos 2137–2138 in the Collection of British Authors series.

[2161] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 1 5 JUNE 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 410.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th June 1883

Madam,

When your kind letter reached me, the “cast” of the play had been completed.

The incessant demands on my time just now, have allowed me no earlier opportunity of thanking you. Pray excuse this late reply.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Clearly an actress applying for a part in Rank and Riches.

[2162] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 6 JUNE 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 410–411.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th June 1883

My dear Chatto,

Have you nothing to do on Saturday evening next the 9th, and would you like<sup>1</sup>

---

I had got as far as this, when I was called away to rehearsal. I have just (2.30. P.M) returned, and received that splendid recognition in “The World” which you have so kindly sent to me.<sup>2</sup> I should be insensible indeed if I failed to be pleased and proud. Can we make it help the book? or is our case hopeless with the insensible brutes among Mudie’s customers.

To return to my “opening”. Shall I send you two Stalls for my first night, Saturday, June 9th – Adelphi 8. sharp.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC draws a horizontal line across the page at this point.

2. The weekly society paper owned by Edmund Yates, which, on 6 June 1883, pp. 5–6, featured ‘Letters to Eminent Persons. 72’ by ‘Kosmos’ (T. H. S. Escott). See [2165] to Yates of 9 June 1883. The article is basically a positive review of Heart and Science, but uses the occasion to praise WC’s virile ‘old school’ romances and attack ‘the nerveless and invertebrate dandies of the new school of fiction’, that is, of the American realists, Henry James and W. D. Howells.

3. Of Rank and Riches.

[2163] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 8 JUNE 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 411.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th June 1883

My dear Chatto,

Here are the two stalls. Will you call for Uncle Dan at the United Hotel?<sup>1</sup> Play begins at 8. sharp.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Chatto and WC's mutual friend Dan Bixby, an American agent, whom WC first met in London just before his journey to the USA – see [1373] to John Elderkin of 9 September 1873.

[2164] TO ADA CAVENDISH,<sup>1</sup> 9 JUNE 1883

MS: Bodleian (MS. Eng. lett. e.90, ff. 85–86). Published: BGLL, III, p. 412.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th June 1883

My dear Ada,

Thank you for a cheque for £50...- in part payment of the author's fees for the right of performing "The New Magdalen" in the provinces – during your past tours.<sup>2</sup>

If you will let me know in how many large towns you wish to perform this piece, during your coming tour, I will of course send you the necessary "authority" with pleasure. And if you see reason to add to the list afterwards, I can send you a second "authority". As a matter of business, it is necessary that the number of towns should be specified.

In regard to your other proposal, I must ask you to let me have (what I cannot get just now!) a little time for consideration.<sup>3</sup>

Pray forgive a hurried letter, written in the midst of worries and interruptions – and believe me

always affly yours | Wilkie Collins

Miss Ada Cavendish

---

1. Ada Cavendish (Mrs Frank Marshall; 1839–95), actress and theatre manageress. She produced The New Magdalen at the Olympic in 1873, playing Mercy Merrick opposite Frank Archer and subsequently arranged a provincial tour and staged various London revivals, at the Charing Cross and National Standard theatres in 1875 and the Novelty in January 1884. She played the lead in the 1876 production of Miss Gwilt at the Globe and took the production to New York in 1879. See [2096] to her of 29 December 1882.

2. The £50 was duly credited to WC's bank account 12 June, though no further payment from her is recorded (Coutts: WC).

3. The proposal clearly concerns the London revival of The New Magdalen in January 1884.

[2165] TO EDMUND YATES, 9 JUNE 1883

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 412–413.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th June 1883

My dear Edmund,

The writer of the letter addressed to me in this week's "World"<sup>1</sup> has claims on my gratitude, which I am really and truly powerless to acknowledge. Never before has any criticism – English or foreign – spoken with such generous recognition of all, and more than all, that I deserve. That true and fearless sympathy – offered at a time when sympathy is especially precious – so completely overpowered me, that I was obliged, in certain places, to wait till my eyes were clear again before I could read on. Pray say to this true brother in our art all that your old friend cannot, and dare not, say for himself – and add to your timely kindness one kindness more.

Always yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins
Edmund Yates Esq

---

1. The weekly society paper owned by Edmund Yates, which carried T. H. S. Escott's tribute to WC on 6 June 1883.

[2166] TO CHARLES SUGDEN,<sup>1</sup> 16 JUNE 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 413.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16th June 1883

My dear Sugden,

Pray let the word "Mr" never again be used by you or by me. Then I shall know that I have made a friend.<sup>2</sup>

One line to answer the inquiry which you so kindly made yesterday. We have caught the gout in time. I still feel those horrible remedies – Calomel and Colchicum – but they have saved my eyes.

Another line to say that I shall not forget our association as artists. The manner in which you studied that part did honour to me. And the manner in which you played it did honour to you. I shall watch your career with true interest.

Always sincerely yours | Wilkie Collins
Charles Sugden Esqre

---

1. Charles Sugden (1850–1921), the actor who played the part of the Duke in Rank and Riches – see [2178] to William Winter of 3 July 1883.

2. WC writes this paragraph vertically in the left hand margin, with to an insertion mark between 'dear' and 'Sugden' in the salutation.

[2167] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 17 JUNE 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 413–414.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday 17th June | 1883

Dear Mr Higgins,

I have already sent to you the 2nd Tableau of the First Act.<sup>1</sup> By tomorrow's (Monday's) registered book post, I shall send you the 2nd and 3rd acts. As soon as you have completed one copy of the First act (1st and 2nd Tableaux), please send it to me by book post. The rest of the piece can wait until there is one complete copy of acts 2, 3, and 4

Vy truly yours | WC

2 copies of Act II

1 copy of Act III

=

corrected Act IV to follow.

---

1. Of Rank and Riches, for which Higgins was acting as copyist. The play had already closed the previous Friday after a disastrous reception on 9 June and a run of just six performances. The copy Higgins was now engaged on seems to have been intended for E. A. Buck, the New York editor – see [2176] to him, 1 July 1883.

[2168] TO EZRA BOWER,<sup>1</sup> 19 JUNE 1883

MS: Ross. Published: BGLL, III, p. 414.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 19th June 1883

Dear sir,

I have the materials by me for writing a sequel to “The Fallen Leaves”.

Various obstacles (with the enumeration of which it is needless for me to trouble you) have hitherto prevented me from continuing the story.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr Ezra Bower

---

1. Unidentified.

[2169] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 19 JUNE 1883

MS: Private.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 414.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 19th June 1883

---

1. From the location of the date probably simply an autograph.

[2986] TO ADA CAVENDISH, 23 JUNE 1883

MS: Houghton (Harvard Theatre Collection), in extra-illustrated copy of Bancroft 1888, V, no. 2, p. 27.<sup>1</sup>
Published: BGLL, IV Addenda, pp. 403–404, amended A&C1, p. 8.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
23rd June 1883

My dear Ada,

The business letter – relating to your tour – is enclosed. The terms – to you – are £3,-,-, for each representation.<sup>2</sup> Let us consider them confidential (because I have refused to accept them in the case of proposals not made by my own original Mercy Merrick).

As to the January revival (1884) in London,<sup>3</sup> here are my “sentiments”:-

If the contemplated performances are supported by a capitalist who finds the money, I will at once send you a Draft of agreement, stating the conditions on which I will consent to ~~the~~ a new series of representations in London next year.

But – if the responsibility of the speculation is your’s [sic]; I don’t like making you answerable to me (or to my Executors?). To insist on a guaranteed “run” and on stipulated payments – with you – if the venture turned out to be less successful than we had hoped, would (as I am sure you must know, my dear) be simply impossible. And, in that disastrous case, what would my position be? After having refused over and over again to allow the piece to be prematurely revived – I should be left with a worthless dramatic commodity on my hands for years to come. This (after the pecuniary sacrifices I have made in keeping the play in my desk) is a prospect which I cannot afford to contemplate. In one word – I must be paid, and I wont say “must” to you. There it is – roughly as stated as if I was writing to a man. Will you forgive me?

I still hope to hear that the risk is not your risk.

There has been some electric disturbance in the atmosphere, which you are feeling, I suspect. Let me hear that you are better.

Always affectly yours, | WC

I have been away – or I should have written earlier.<sup>4</sup> My illness is – feeling ninety years old, and badly preserved for my age.

1. Transcribed by Susan Halpert, Reference Librarian at Houghton, to whom our grateful thanks.
2. Referring to the provincial tour of The New Magdalen with Ada Cavendish in the lead (see [2164] to her of 9 June 1883). In fact only one payment of £50, representing 16 or 17 performances at the stated rate, is recorded as received (Courtts: WC).
3. At the Novelty Theatre from 5 January 1884 – see [2266] to Frank Archer of 8 February 1884.
4. We have not been able to pin down the trip in question.

[2170] TO W. M. LAFFAN, 25 JUNE 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 275; BGLL, III, p. 415.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 25th June 1883

Dear Sir,

Pray inform Messrs Harper – with my kind regards – that Mr A. P. Watt acts with full authority from me – as my literary agent, at home and abroad. His letter, containing the expression of my gratification at renewing my literary association with Messrs Harper, has I hope by this time reached New York.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
W. M. Laffan Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. WC had broken off business relations with Harper & Brothers of New York in 1878, following a dispute over the sale of Canadian editions of his novels in the United States. See [1741] of 6 April and [1746] of 1 May 1878, both to George Rose. Watt's letter has not been traced.

[2171] TO JAMES F. RODGERS,<sup>1</sup> 25 JUNE 1883

MS: Brigham Young (Vault Mss 355, folder 46). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 415–416.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 25th June 1883

Dear Mr Rodgers,

I send you a postscript to a letter from Dickens addressed to me, and dated 24 January 1862. His letters to me are almost invariably signed in initials only.<sup>2</sup> The few full signatures that I once possessed have been devoured by ravenous collectors of autographs.

In January 1862 I was engaged in writing “No Name” – and was at a loss to find a title for my book which satisfied me. The numbers at the top of Dickens's postscript relate to a list of titles which he kindly suggested.<sup>3</sup> The title afterwards adopted was not in this list.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Mr James F. Rodgers

---

1. Unidentified, but probably an American autograph hunter.

2. Of the 169 known letters from Dickens to Collins, 125 are signed ‘C. D.’, as was the letter of 24 January 1862, and twenty-six are signed ‘Charles Dickens’. Others have no signature, doubtless cut off for autograph hunters. See also Paul Lewis, ‘My Dear Wilkie: the Letters from Dickens to Collins’, WCSJ, NS 5 (2001), pp. 3–23.

3. The Dickens postscript is also held at Brigham Young. It is published in full in Pilgrim, X, p. 21, following a letter on p. 20 to WC dated 24 January 1862 and signed ‘C. D.’.

[2172] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 27 JUNE 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, III, p. 416.

90. Gloucester | Place. W. | Wednesday | June 27th

Dear Mr Higgins,

Please let me have one copy of the 2nd Tableau by post – on or before Friday next.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins
The corrected 1st Act was returned to you yesterday

[2173] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 30 JUNE 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 416–417.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 30th June 1883

Dear Mr Rose,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of a Bill of Exchange for £40.-.- in payment for the advance-sheets of my novel “Heart and Science” – forwarded to you in Canada.<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

G.M. Rose Esq

---

1. WC’s Heart and Science: A Story of the Present Time was issued by Rose Publishing Company in 1883 in a single volume of 389 pages. It was the last of WC’s novels to be published by the Toronto firm. A copy is found in the National Library of Canada. A ‘Bill on Bosanquet & Co.’ for £40 is credited on 3 July (Couetts: WC).

[2174] TO GEORGE MACLEAN ROSE, 30 JUNE 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/3). Published: BGLL, III, p. 417.

June 30/83

Dear Mr Rose,

The acknowledgment is on the next leaf.<sup>1</sup> Let me add a line here to say that I am delighted to hear of the prospect of shaking hands with you again – in London. In August (so far as I now know) I shall be at home, and at work again. Or – if not in town – sufficiently near, to give you a hearty welcome here, on receiving a line from you, a day or two beforehand.

Always truly yours | WC

---

1. WC writes this letter in landscape format on the integral leaf of the letter to G. M. Rose of the same date.

[2175] TO CHARLES KENT,<sup>1</sup> [JUNE 1883]

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 416–417.

Don’t trouble to return this.

Mem. “Rev<sup>d</sup> John Cready” (September Cornhill).<sup>3</sup>

“Jack Tier or the Florida Reef” (Fennimore Cooper)<sup>4</sup>

---

1. These notes are found on a leaf torn from the weekly society paper, the World, 6 June 1883, pp. 5–6, containing the article ‘Letters to Eminent Persons. No. LXXII. To Mr. Wilkie Collins’ by ‘Kosmos’ (T. H. Escott). WC’s notes, however, do not seem to relate to Escott’s article.

2. Signed and directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, with no visible postmark.

3. Referring to an unsigned story ‘The Reverend John Cready’ by Grant Allen in Cornhill Magazine, 48 (September 1883), pp. 225–242, afterwards collected in his Strange Stories (1884).

4. WC routinely mis-spelled the name with a double ‘n’. Referring to the 1848 novel in two volumes by James Fenimore Cooper. For the high regard in which WC held Cooper’s work, see, for example, [2182] to Miss R—, 12 July 1883, or [2304] to Paul Hamilton Hayne, 3 May 1884. In his library WC had a 31-vol. edition of Hayne’s works (Baker 2002, p. 96).

[2176] TO E. A. BUCK, 1 JULY 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), on ruled paper. Published: Coleman, pp. 276–277; BGLL, III, pp. 417–419.

90 Gloucester Place, Portman Square | London. W 1st July 1883

Dear Buck –

The MSS copy of “Rank and Riches” was sent to you by yesterday’s mail (Saturday June 30th) – in one packet by registered book-post.<sup>1</sup> It is at the disposal of any friend of yours who may feel interested enough in the subject to look at the piece.

In the meantime, I have read with sincere pleasure the friendly words published in your number for June 16th. The writer does me justice – I venture to think – when he asserts that I should not hesitate to acknowledge a failure, if I felt that adverse judgment had been fairly pronounced.<sup>2</sup> I do not feel this. On the contrary, I declare that I, and the excellent artists associated with me, have been brutally treated by persons interested in opposing the return of an original writer to the theatre – assisted by the most ignorant and most insolent portion of the first-night audience. If I am told that this is the opinion of a (naturally) prejudiced man, I can only answer: – First, that it is also the opinion of persons present in various parts of the theatre, who saw and heard what was going on – who have voluntarily communicated their experience – and who are strangers to me. Secondly, I offer my play to speak for itself. I will submit to be judged by my own work – provided it be read by critics who have not attempted to write novels, and failed – and who have no pecuniary interest in importing their own stage-work (with or without acknowledgement) from France.

To avoid even the shadow of a misunderstanding, let me add that the trifling corrections which you will see in the MSS merely relate to matters of style. The characters and the incidents remain unaltered, since the night when the actors (the women included) were personally insulted. Adverse opinion which expresses itself by hissing on the fall of the curtain, or in the intervals between the acts, preserves some selfrespect, and therefore claims respect from its victims. But adverse opinion which expresses itself by jeering and hooting – which takes advantage of the helpless position of artists on the stage to insult them in the performance of their duty by interruption and ridicule – adopts a cowardly proceeding and commits in its results, an outrage on decency. Are no allowances to be made for an actor who refuses to submit without protest to such treatment as this?

For the rest, the withdrawal of this piece was my act. It was so admirably played – even down to the smallest parts – that I would have made my own arrangements to keep it before the public, if I could have trusted the Adelphi pit and gallery to back me. But that pit and gallery did undoubtedly help my enemies among the “first-night clique” – here and there, perhaps, out of mere mischief – but, in the vast majority of cases, out of absolute incapacity to understand a story and to sympathize with characters, which had never done duty on the stage before. The riot reached its climax in the third act – where the great situation of the piece is also a situation entirely new. With my hands tied in this way, I withdrew the play – and I now wait for a future opportunity of “applying for a new trial.”<sup>3</sup>

Always truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Presumably the copy of the play recently being made by Henry Higgins (see [2167] of 17 and [2172] of 27 June, both to him) was to send to Buck in New York. A manuscript copy of Rank and Riches is now found at the Phillips Exeter Academy in New Hampshire.

2. The following comment had appeared in the Spirit of the Times, 16 June 1883, p. 578b:

The cable reports the failure of the new play, Rank and Riches, by our esteemed contributor, the great English novelist, Wilkie Collins, at the London Adelphi, last Saturday. The reporter tells us what the pit and gallery said, and how one of the actors talked back to them; but he does not give us the story of the play, so that we can decide whether it deserved to fail, or whether it was laughed down by one of the cliques that rule the London theatres. We knew in advance that the play was a domestic drama, located in England; that it was not a dramatization of a novel; that Mrs. Lingard was to appear as the heroine; that G. W. Anson, Charles Sugden, and George Alexander were cast in it, and that it was to be produced under the experienced management of Edgar Bruce. The cable does not say whether the actors killed the play or the play killed the actors; but we are told that, in the third Act, the audience gayed the piece, and Mr. Anson made bad worse by opposing them and demanding a fair hearing for the drama. We have seen plays gayed in London, and afterwards run a couple of hundred nights. We have also seen plays, written by the London dramatic Ring, which were immense successes on the first night, and never drew a shilling afterwards. We reserve our opinion, therefore, about Rank and Riches until we hear from our impartial London correspondent, and from Wilkie Collins himself, who will be the first to acknowledge a failure, if he has really met with one.

3. Generally on the hostile reaction to Rank and Riches, see Robinson 1951, pp. 304–306, Clarke, p. 177, and Peters, pp. 402–403. The reviewer in the Times of 11 June 1883, wrote: ‘the attitude of the audience in no way justified the heated protest made against it from the stage. They came prepared to give, and did for a time give, a respectful hearing to “the great master” who appealed to them. It was not until the outrageous improbability of the characters and the story revealed itself that a single titter was raised. The want of dramatic purpose in the play – as the result of which the characters seemed to flounder aimlessly about – combined with action bordering at times upon burlesque, and a prevalence of unlucky lines, was more than the public could be expected to endure.’ (p. 12e).

[2177] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 3 JULY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, p. 419.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 3rd July 1883

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your cheque for £20.-.- for my contribution to the June number of “Belgravia” (1883) – copyright and all other rights being reserved by the author.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me, dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. Again at the rate of one pound per page, for the final instalment of Heart and Science. Credited as ‘Reed’ on 3 July (Coutts: WC).

[2178] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 3 JULY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/9). Published: B&C, II, pp. 459–460.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>
London | 3rd July 1883

My dear Winter,

A MS copy of my Play / (“Rank and Riches”) / was sent by Saturday’s mail (30th June) to E.A. Buck “Spirit of the Times” office.

At this season you are doubtless as little /seldom/ as possible in “the metropolis”. I only tell you where the piece is – and leave it /to/ your kindness to look it over for my sake, – /and to tell me what you think of it, when you/ ~~when you~~ have an hour or two to spare. We (I mean by “we” my dear good actors as well as myself) have been brutally treated. The “clique” / (“pickers and stealers” from the French – actors out of engagements through the production of my piece – critics whom I had not invited to supper)/<sup>2</sup> was assisted by ~~the~~ a pit and gallery as incapable of understanding the piece as if it had been written in Hebrew. I was fool enough to trust an “Adelphi audience” – and I have paid the penalty. With one or two generous [del] exceptions, the newspapers were more brutish and more insolent than the audience.

I am mainly sorry for poor Miss Lingard. Knowing how seriously my success and her interests [del] were bound together, I read the piece three times, to audiences of “experts” – and not one of them had the faintest forewarning of what /really/ [del] happened. I said myself, “My doubt is whether the ignorant part of the audience can follow this story.” Nobody shared my doubt. And the first Act (both Tableux included) justified their confidence – on trial. So far – all went well. In the second act the jeering and hooting began – checked by the admirable acting of Sugden and Alexander in the Scene between the “Duke” and “Cecil”<sup>3</sup> – only to break out again into yells of laughter over the great situation of the 3rd Act – (Like the rest of the piece, mind most admirably played!) I leave you to look at that situation, and to say if my work is not worthy of another trial. It is only fair to add that strangers to me, /who were/ present on the first night, have<sup>4</sup> expressed their sympathy and indignation.

For the present – good bye | WC

I hope you have received “Heart and Science”. The success of the book here has been extraordinary. “Benjulia” has matched “Fosco”. While the dramatic critics declare that I have written the vilest rubbish – the literary critics congratulate me on the production of a masterpiece!<sup>5</sup>

-
1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
  2. WC adds the insertion vertically down his left-hand margin, with the place of insertion indicated by a caret linked by a longer curving line to the beginning of the inserted text.
  3. The actors in question are Charles Sugden (1850–1921) and George Alexander (1858–1918).
  4. WC concludes the letter from this point on vertically down the left-hand margin on the final sheet of the notepaper.
  5. WC’s postscript begins above the printed address and monogram on the opening sheet of the notepaper, but after “Fosco”.’ continues vertically down his left hand margin, with a curved line linking the two parts.

[2179] TO CHARLES KENT, 9 JULY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 419–420.

90. G. P. | Monday 9th July 1883 | 10. a.m.

My dear Kent

I have just got your kind note.

Come as soon after 4 today as you can – and I shall be delighted to see you.

Ever yours WC

You were happily inspired when you wrote yesterday. I am going away later in the week.

-
1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esqre | Athenaeum Club | Pall Mall | S.W.’, and postmarked as dated.

[3167] TO CHARLES KENT, 9 JULY 1883

MS: Unknown. On sale: Bernard J. Shapero, London (2010). Published: A&C6, p. 15.

To Charles Kent | from | Wilkie Collins 9th July | 1883<sup>1</sup>

-
1. Inscribed on title page of a Tauchnitz edition of Heart and Science. Presumably given to Kent on his visit in the later afternoon – see [2179] to Kent, 9 July 1883.

[2180] TO PAUL JÜNGLING,<sup>1</sup> 9 JULY 1883

MS: Berlin.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 420.

90. Gloucester Place | London. W. | 9th July 1883

I hereby confer on Herr Juengling [sic] (of Berlin) the sole authority to translate into the German language, and to publish – both periodically, and in book form, in Germany – the novel called “Heart and Science”, of which I am the author, and the copyright of which belongs to me.

Wilkie Collins

-
1. German translator – see [1887] to him of 18 December 1879.
  2. This note is pasted onto the back of the second sheet of [2133] to Simson of 5 April 1883, which provides the context for this conferring of the right to translate.

[2181] TO CARRIE BARTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 11 JULY [1883]<sup>2</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/14). Extract: Clarke p. 169; Peters, p. 224. Published: B&C, II, pp. 448–449 (dated 11 July [1882]).

11th July

My dearest Carrie,

A word to thank you for your nice letter and for the list – which is the very thing I wanted – could not be better.<sup>3</sup>

Come – the sooner the better – and bring all the children. Good heavens! don't I like Dah, and the quiet little curlyhead?<sup>4</sup> I wish I was a baby again – with nothing to do but suck and sleep.

Don't tell anybody – I am quite mad over my new book. It is at the present writing half a dozen books, with four or five hundred characters – and full of immoral situations.<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours affly, | WC

---

1. Elizabeth Harriet Bartley (1851–1905), daughter of Caroline Graves who had acted as WC's secretary from the late 1860s and had married WC's solicitor Henry Powell Bartley on 12 March 1878. Her birth certificate gives 'Elizabeth Harriet', but by the time of her wedding she styled herself Harriette Elizabeth Laura. On the birth certificates of her daughters and in the Census of 1881 she called herself Harriette, and Harriette E. in the 1891 Census. WC always writes to her as Carrie, so here we have adopted that form throughout.

2. The dating of this letter is somewhat problematic. From the content ('Come . . . and bring all the children'), the letter seems most likely to have been written from Ramsgate not long after the birth of the Bartley's third child Evelyn Beatrice, known as 'Bolly', on 3 June 1883. On 9 July 1883 in [2179] WC informs Charles Kent that he is 'going away later in the week', but [2182] to 'Miss R' of 12 July seems to anchor him firmly in Gloucester Place. Perhaps, when writing from his holiday residence on the Kent coast, WC tended to use his printed Gloucester Place notepaper for less familiar correspondents.

3. The list has not been identified, though it might well refer to copies of serial instalments made and dispatched.

4. 'Dah' is Doris Edith, Harriet Bartley's eldest daughter, born 9 July 1879, while 'the quiet little curlyhead' is presumably the new baby Evelyn Beatrice, born 3 June 1883; see Clarke, pp. 169 and 224.

5. This can only be "I Say No" whose newspaper serialization began from 15 December 1883, and of which WC wrote to Watt on 18 October ([2203]): 'Two Monthly Parts are ready for the Printers – and a third only wants corrections – I am only keeping them back on the chance of finding a better title.'

[2182] TO MISS R[EMANN],<sup>1</sup> 12 JULY 1883

MS: Unknown. On sale: Michael Silverman (March 2002). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 420–421 (as to Miss R—
→).

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 12th July 1883

Dear Miss R[erased]

Your kind and welcome letter only reached me yesterday.

It is not easy to tell you which is my "favourite work" – I must own that I have three favourites. They are written by the three Kings of Fiction:

Walter Scott.

Fennimore Cooper.<sup>2</sup> Balzac.

And they are called:

The Antiquary.

The Deerslayer. Le Père Goriot.

There is my "Companion" of Literary Faith! Let me add my very good wishes for the success of the meeting, and believe me

Very truly yours. | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Otherwise unidentified – all but the initial letter seems to be erased on the MS. However, BL catalogues a photocopy of this letter as to Miss Remann (RP 8740/1). The inclusion of 'London' in the return address indicates an admirer in the provinces or abroad, possibly in America, who appears to want the information for a literary meeting. No woman with this surname appears in UK records. Several of an appropriate age do in the USA.

2. WC generally mis-spelled the name with a double 'n'.

[2183] TO CHARLES READE, 17 JULY 1883

MS: Noel. Published: Clareson, pp. 120–121; B&C, II, p. 460.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

17th July 1883

My dear Reade,

In clearing out a drawer filled with old letters, my hair has stood on end at the discovery of a letter of mine (addressed to you) – shuffled up with the other papers. It was a reply to a kind letter of yours telling me of your illness and asking me if I could recommend any good modern novels that you might find worth reading. How I could have missed my own letter with the others the devil, who must have possessed me, only knows. But what must you have thought of your old friend? I can only remember that you are the kindest of men, and that you will excuse the frail fellow-creature who signs himself

yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

You have lost nothing by the loss of the letter. It only acknowledged my inability to read any new novels – and referred you facetiously to the old novels that you know already.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Monogram ranged left, address ranged right. Watermark: ‘ROYAL EDINBURGH [around a crown] E. Chickley’.

2. Postscript written at an angle on the otherwise blank third page of the letter.

[2184] TO W. F. TILLOTSON,<sup>1</sup> 17 JULY 1883

MS: Unknown. Copy (presumably by a clerk of A. P. Watt): Pembroke, our copy text. Published: BGLL, III, p. 421.

99 [sic] Gloucester Place | Portman Square W 17 July 1883.

Dear Mr Tillotson,

My literary arrangements are all now made for me – with my approval, of course – by my friend and representative Mr A.P. Watt. I have accordingly forwarded your letter to Mr Watt.<sup>2</sup>

In the meanwhile I gladly set your mind at ease on a matter of fact with which I am also acquainted.

Your list of the Newspapers which published “Jezebel’s Daughter” – and all copies of the newspapers themselves which I happened to possess – were destroyed on the completion of that Novel. After the interval that has elapsed, I don’t even remember the titles of any of the Newspapers which published “Jezebel’s Daughter”

At the same time I must own that I fail to understand your claim – unless the proprietors have themselves resigned their right of Independent choice in your favor – to be the only agent through whom a Novelist can offer a contribution to a public newspaper.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To W.F. Tillotson

---

1. The Bolton newspaper proprietor and fiction syndicator, who had arranged the serialization of Jezebel’s Daughter – see [1747] to him of 4 May 1878. In arranging the newspaper serialization of WC’s recent novels, A. P. Watt was operating in direct competition with the Bolton firm.

2. Tillotson’s original letter to WC has not been traced, but, as the following paragraphs make clear, seems to have contained a complaint about Watt’s selling WC’s recent serials to provincial newspapers that were already clients of Tillotson’s. In fact, it was common for such newspapers to acquire their fiction material from a variety of sources. See Law, pp. 93–100.

[2185] TO A. P. WATT, 17 JULY 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 422.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th July 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

Here is Tillotson again!

I enclose my reply – because I will not send it to the post, without your approval.<sup>1</sup> If there is anything that does not quite satisfy you pray return the letter corrected. In the other case, please let it go to the post with your letters. It is needless to add that your negotiations have now – and always – my full approval.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | WC

The new story is almost entirely put together. As usual, the title is the one important thing still wanting.<sup>3</sup>

I am in town until Friday next.

T. (as you know) never had “Heart and Science” offered to him.<sup>4</sup> He asked for my next story to “Heart and Science” and was told that it had already been sold. He then applied for the next story to that – and received a positive (and polite) refusal.

---

1. See [2184] to W. F. Tillotson of 17 July 1883. Watt’s letter to WC of the same date, which describes Tillotson’s approaches as ‘offensive pertinacity’, confirms that the agent in fact posted the letter on to Bolton.

2. Watt was then engaged in arranging serial publication of “I Say No” in a number of British provincial newspapers (see Law, pp. 104–105), thus acting as an agent for Kelly’s, who had purchased entire British serial rights.

3. The title does not seem to have been decided until much later – see [2209] to Watt of 30 October 1883.

4. See WC’s ‘Notes for Consideration’ reproduced in the note to [1995] to Watt of 5 December 1881.

[2186] TO A. P. WATT, 20 JULY 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 422–423.

Yacht Phyllis | Ramsgate | 20th July 1883<sup>1</sup>

Dear Mr Watt,

I only received your letter, just as I was leaving the house – and I have now just time to thank you, and to say that the advertisement is all that it ought to be.<sup>2</sup> I hope it will be followed by the most encouraging results.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. ‘Phyllis’ was the steam yacht that Collins frequently hired at Ramsgate (see Peters, pp. 389–390). The present trip was of around a week in the company of Edward Pigott (see [2188] to him of 1 August 1883).

2. The advertisement itself has not been traced, but it was probably that addressed to many newspaper proprietors offering “I Say No” for serial publication from late December 1883, which cited the highly favourable appreciation of Heart and Science in the World of 6 June 1883; see the Watt papers at the Berg.

[2187] TO A. P. WATT, 27 JULY 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 423.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27th July 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

I only returned last night – greatly the better for my cruise at sea.<sup>1</sup>

By all means offer the story to Messrs Leader and Son. I have every reason to congratulate myself on my literary connection with them. My one reason for suggesting that “Heart and Science” should not be offered to them was that they had purchased for their newspaper the story which immediately preceded that work – “The Black Robe”.<sup>2</sup>

Always truly yours | WC

I won’t forget the testimonial when I have reduced my present large arrears of correspondence<sup>3</sup>

---

1. See [2188] to Edward Pigott of 1 August 1883.

2. See WC's 'Notes for Consideration' reproduced in the note to his letter to Watt of 5 December 1881. Watt had asked if WC objected to an approach to Leader's, owners of the Sheffield Independent, in a letter of 20 July (Berg). By the time WC replied, however, Watt had already offered "I Say No" to the Sheffield firm and had been informed that previously made arrangements prevented them taking up the story from December – see the correspondence in the Berg Collection.

3. See [2195], WC's second letter to Watt dated 22 August 1883.

[2188] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 1 AUGUST 1883

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, II, p. 461.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 1st Aug<sup>t</sup> 1883

My dear Ted,

Thank you most sincerely for your friendly care for my interests. The letter you propose to write cannot possibly be improved.<sup>1</sup> Well, indeed, did Pope say "the life of a writer is a warfare on earth."<sup>2</sup>

[del] I was indeed sorry to hear that I had missed seeing you. The thunder in the air yesterday had its usual effect on my nerves. I slept a stunned sleep in my chair – went to bed, and slept again!!!

Yours always aftly | WC

A capital little vessel – and a glorious time of it at sea, excepting the Saturday. Two reefs in the mainsail, and the top mast on deck, and such a sea off the Foreland!<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Since Pigott was at this time still acting as Examiner of Plays in the Lord Chamberlain's office, his letter representing WC's interests may have concerned theatrical matters.

2. Citing Alexander Pope: 'The life of a wit is a warfare upon earth; and the present spirit of the learned world is such, that to attempt to serve it (any way) one must have the constancy of a martyr, and a resolution to suffer for its sake.' Preface, Poetical Works (1717) (see Baker 2002, pp. 139–140). For WC's use of Pope in No Name see Peter L. Caracciolo in Smith & Terry, pp. 174–176.

3. On board the Yacht Phyllis; see [2186] to A.P. Watt, 20 July 1883.

[2189] TO HENRY HIGGINS, 13 AUGUST 1883

MS: Morgan (MA4500). Published: BGLL, III, p. 424.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 13th Au. 1883

Dear Mr Higgins

Will you kindly send me the name and address of the Belgian Gentleman – who will translate my German letter (received this morning) into English?<sup>1</sup>

I would, of course, have sent the letter itself to you to forward kindly – but I don't know whether you or your friend are in town or not in this holiday-making month. So I am cautious – and will write first.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The German letter was from a Dr Herrmann, while the Belgian translator was Albéric Iserbyt – see [2190] to Iserbyt of 17 August 1883.

[2190] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT,<sup>1</sup> 17 AUGUST 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Extract: Baker 2001, p. 513. Published: BGLL, III, p. 424.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th Augt 1883

My dear Sir,

I have been very busy, or I should sooner have thanked you for your letter and its enclosures.

With this you will find my answer to Dr Herrmann.<sup>3</sup> Please post the translation at once – without troubling to send it to me. In my ignorance of German, I leave it entirely to you. The address and a stamp are enclosed.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

(In haste)

Alberic Iserbyt Esqr

---

1. Albéric Joseph J. Iserbyt, then aged 22, from Mons, Belgium, who was employed at Lloyd's of London. From 1883 to 1886 he translated WC's German correspondence and also occasionally acted as his copyist. He was introduced to WC by the copyist Henry Higgins, who lived not far from Iserbyt, a step away from the Elephant and Castle in south-east London (see [2189] to Higgins of 13 August 1883). WC seems to have started writing the given name as 'Alberic', but then changed to 'Albéric'; the latter occurs more frequently and is consequently preferred here.

2. Signed and directed to 'Albéric Iserbyt Esqr | 6. Holyoak [sic for Holyoake] Road | Newington Butts | S.E.', postmark illegible.

3. WC's answer has not been traced and Herrmann remains unidentified.

[2191] TO THOMAS D. GALPIN,<sup>1</sup> 17 AUGUST 1883

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, III, p. 425.

[line of printed address erased] | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. London

17th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1883

My dear [name erased]

By today's parcel post I have the pleasure of returning the photograph, signed – with all good wishes to you and to Mrs G for the future.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Thomas [name erased] Esqr

---

1. Thomas Dixon Galpin (b. 1828), managing director of Petter and Galpin (formerly Cassell, Petter, Galpin, & Co.), printers and publishers. Despite the cancellation of the recipient's name (presumably by a later hand), the attribution is clear from the similarities to [2310] of 20 May 1884.

2. Emma A. Galpin née Parr (b. 1831), wife of Thomas Dixon Galpin and mother of his eleven children. See <www.rootsweb.com/~bccaribo/galpin.html>.

[2192] TO FANNY,<sup>1</sup> 18 AUGUST 1883

MS: Morgan (MA4500). Published: BGLL, III, p. 425.

18th Aug 1883

Thank you, My dear Fanny for the delicious pears.

If I can help you better by seeing Mr Pritchard and hearing what his experience says about that little pot of money,<sup>2</sup> I will call on him in the afternoon between 3 and 4 – on any day which he and you may appoint.

Aff<sup>ly</sup> yours | WC

---

1. Clearly a family member, possibly WC's first cousin Frances Mary Geddes (c. 1833–1902), daughter of HC's younger brother Alexander James Geddes.

2. The details remain unclear, but Pritchard may be the banker to whom WC wrote in [2014] of 17 January 1883.

[3110] TO NATHANIEL MOAK,<sup>1</sup> 21 AUGUST 1883

MS: Cornell (Trials, KF223.B59), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: Meyler, p. 164;<sup>3</sup> A&C4, pp. 25–26.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 21st August 1883

My dear Sir,

I can only trust to the kindness which has presented me with an interesting addition to my little library to excuse this late expression of my thanks.<sup>4</sup> When the “argument” reached me, I waited to write, in the hope of finding a fit opportunity to become one of your readers without much delay. But my literary labours proved to be obstacles in the way – and these at an end, my doctor prescribed a long holiday. I accepted an invitation to cruise in a friend’s yacht – and here I am on shore again, reading your pages with the greatest interest, to say nothing of the “agreeable surprise” of finding “The Moonstone” honoured by a favourable allusion, in a Court of Justice.<sup>5</sup> The mental capacity which can make itself acquainted with an immense accumulation of facts – present them one after another in their proper order, and draw from them the logical inferences, all steadily pointing in one and the same direction – is simply a matter of wonder to me. I ask myself all sorts of simple questions relating to you personally. Were you assailed by nervous misgivings – especially on the first day? Did you never feel some little mental confusion here and there? Did the appearance of the jury – their looks and ways – now and then discourage you? And in the intervals of the “argument” could you sleep when you went to bed – and eat and drink and digest, before going to bed? These queer inquiries occur to a novelist – and they are followed by a novelist’s complaint. You seize on my interest – and you don’t tell me how the terrible tale of guilt ended. I look on to the last pages and see a judge’s charge, and a medical writers’ “Views” when I want to know whether he was found guilty and hanged. The case was mentioned in our newspapers – but the end has slipped from my memory.<sup>6</sup>

With renewed thanks – and in the hope that I may be excused –

Vy truly yours Wilkie Collins

To Mr Nathaniel C. Moak<sup>7</sup>

1. Nathaniel Cleveland Moak (1833–92), a New York lawyer who left his law papers to Cornell University.
2. Tipped into Billings’ Trial 1878–1881; envelope directed to: ‘Mr Nathaniel C. Moak | &c &c &c | Albany | N. Y. | U. S. America’.
3. Misdated ‘21 August 1882’.
4. A presentation copy of Closing Argument of Nathaniel C. Moak: At Ballston Spa, October 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11 1878, on Behalf of the People in the Case of the People against Jesse Billings, Jr.: With the Charge of Hon. Judson S. Landon, Presiding Justice (Albany, New York: 1879) was in WC’s library (Baker 2002, p. 134, no. 356).
5. As quoted in Meyler’s article, Moak used The Moonstone as part of his unsuccessful closing argument for the prosecution: ‘We may safely study fiction provided we discreetly apply it, for when properly applied it is intended to faithfully represent humanity. In the story of the Moonstone, a jewel had been stolen; detectives had been sent for to ascertain who was the guilty party; a door of the room from which the moonstone had been taken had been newly painted; upon the jamb of the door was discovered a small spot from which the paint had been brushed by a passing garment; the local detectives – or in the language of my learned friend, the ‘wolves and hyenas’ of the locality – had all passed it as of no importance; the city detective, with the experience of a life-time, regarded it as an important circumstance. I cannot better give you his idea of it than by reading it, for it is an illustration by one skilled in human character, of the importance of a trifling circumstance. ... [quotation from The Moonstone] That is a circumstance related in a work of fiction, but said to have been founded on fact – on the experience of an eminent detective. ... It is these small circumstances which lead as unerringly to the guilty party, as if the finger of Providence had pointed directly to him.’ (Meyler, p. 138).
6. In fact Jessie Billings, a wealthy man from Saratoga, was found not guilty of the murder of his wife Eliza who was discovered shot in their home. His trial was called at the time the longest and most expensive criminal trial in the history of the United States. See Hollis A. Palmer, To Spend Eternity Alone: The Trail of Jesse Billings, Jr (Saratoga Springs, NY: Deep Root Publications, 1999).
7. The addressee line is written above the printed address. There is no room for it on the last sheet which is completely full, the ending of the letter being written vertically in both margins.

[2193] TO J. BIRD,<sup>1</sup> 22 AUGUST 1883

MS: Texas (Misc C. D. Morley). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 425–426.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd Augt 1883

Dear Sir,

I have forwarded your kind letter to the gentleman who manages my literary business – Mr A. P. Watt of 34 Paternoster Row

In the meantime pray convey the expression of my thanks to Messrs Clay Sons & Taylor.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

J. Bird Esqre

---

1. Unidentified, but presumably an employee of Richard Clay, Sons & Taylor, printers specializing in illustrated periodicals, then owners of the weekly Pictorial World – see [2194] to A. P. Watt of the same date.

[2194] TO A. P. WATT, 22 AUGUST 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: Watt, p. 17; BGLL, III, p. 426.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd Augt 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

The enclosed letter naturally finds its way to you.<sup>1</sup>

The one Christmas Story that I can find time to write, during the present year, is the story which will be published by my friend Mr Buck in “The Spirit of the Times” (New York). Mr Buck’s Christmas Number has always been published a few days only before Christmas Day – and the simultaneous English publication can only take place in a New Years’ Number. Last year – if you remember – you arranged in this way for the publication of “Fie! Fie!” in The Pictorial World. All Christmas numbers here are published (so far as I know) at the beginning of December. If Messrs Clay can wait, I can write to Mr Buck – and ask if there is likely to be any change in the date of publication in the U.S. this year. Any way, the right of periodical publication in Great Britain only is to be sold for not less than £50...-.- as before.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

While I am writing, I send the Testimonial.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. The document is not bound in at Pembroke. However, the letter to J. Bird of the same date makes clear that it must have been from him on behalf of the printers Richard Clay, Sons and Taylor, then owners of the Pictorial World, requesting a Christmas story from WC.

2. ‘She Loves and Lies’, WC’s annual Christmas story for E. A. Buck’s Spirit of the Times (published in New York on 22 December 1883, pp. 607–609), in the end appeared in Britain in Andrew Chatto’s Belgravia for January 1884 (see [2222] to Watt of 3 December 1883), though initially arrangements seem indeed to have been made to publish it in the Pictorial World, this time in the Christmas Supplement (see [2216] to Watt of 25 November 1883).

3. See [2195] to Watt of 22 August.

[2195] TO A. P. WATT, 22 AUGUST 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: Watt, p. 17; BGLL, III, p. 427.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd Augt 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

Testimonials are, in one respect, like prefaces – the shorter they are, the better chance they have of being read. My experience of the value of your services, since I have placed my literary affairs in your hands, may be stated in two words. When I first employed you, you were my agent. You are now my agent, and my friend.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

A.P. Watt Esq.

[3254] TO EDWARD LEAR, 25 AUGUST 1883

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C9, p. 31.

By Book Post, Registered. 25th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1883.

M. Edward Lear<sup>2</sup> | Villa Tennyson | San Remo | Italy
Wilkie Collins | 90. Gloucester Place | London. W.<sup>3</sup>

1. Envelope cover only, with fourpenny stamp franked, 'REGISTERED | A 3 | 25 AU 83 | B.D.O.', and 'R' within an oval.
2. A copy of Lear's Journal of a Landscape Painter in Corsica (1870) was in WC's Library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 127. Robinson 1951 refers to Edward Lear (1812–1888) as 'a lifelong friend of Wilkie Collins. It is however a friendship of which hardly a trace remains.' (p. 93).
3. A box has been drawn enclosing the return address.

[2196] TO FRANK MARSHALL, 21 SEPTEMBER 1883

MS: Rylands (Eng.MS. 340/56), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 427.

Frank Marshall Esqr | 8. Bloomsbury Square | W.C.
Wilkie Collins

1. Pre-paid, postmarked indistinctly: 'LONDON . W | 7 | SP 21 | 83'.

[2197] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 1 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1) Published: BGLL, III, p. 427..

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 1st October 1883

My dear Sir,

Here at last is another letter from Berlin.<sup>1</sup> Please send me the translation at your early convenience.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

1. As [2198] to Iserbyt of 3 October indicates, the letter must have been from Simson, the Berlin lawyer who represented WC's interests in his dispute with the translator Paul Jüngling (see [2133] to Simson of 5 April 1883).

[2198] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 3 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 427–428.

3rd October 1883

My dear Sir,

Thank you for the translation – received this morning.<sup>2</sup>

I enclose my answer. As my signature is Mr Simson's authority for accepting the proposed compromise,<sup>3</sup> the best way will be to send my letter to him – with the German translation on the blank leaf.

Faithfully yours | WC

Alberic Iserbyt Esqr

1. Signed and directed to 'Alberic Iserbyt Esqr | 6. Holyoak [sic for 'Holyoake'] Road | Newington Butts | S.E.', postmarked on the following day.
2. Of the letter to Simson mentioned in [2197] to Iserbyt of 1 October 1883.
3. This must refer to Simson's efforts to resolve the dispute with the translator Paul Jüngling (see [2133] to Simson of 5 April 1883).

[2199] TO A. P. WATT, 9 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 428.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday, 9th Oct: 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

I shall be delighted to see you, at the usual time, tomorrow (Wednesday) or on any other day this week which may be convenient.

Let me apologise for the late arrival of this letter. The gout has been troubling me again. After a restless night, I was allowed to sleep half through the day (today) – and it was too late to reply in time, when I woke and read my letters

Ever yours | WC

[2200] TO [A.] FULLER MAITLAND,<sup>1</sup> 10 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Kentucky (63m24). Published: BGLL, III, p. 428.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th October 1883

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to Mr Fuller Maitland, and begs to enclose a cheque for the Michaelmas Quarter's Rent

---

1. Both T. Fuller Maitland (see [0806] to him of 4 January 1868) and his son Alexander Fuller Maitland (see [2824] to him of 22 March 1888) seem to have acted as agents for WC's landlord at Gloucester Place, Viscount Portman. According to the 1881 Census, the son was then twenty-nine years old while the father was already retired, making Alexander the more likely recipient of this letter.

[2201] TO A. P. WATT, 16 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 429.<sup>1</sup>

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

October 16. 1883.

Dear Mr Watt,

I am ordered to nurse my gouty eye, if I wish to be able to use my own pen again in a reasonably short time.

A friend of mine in Paris has suggested entering into negotiations for a French translation of "Heart and Science" with the proprietor of an Anti-Vivisection periodical recently established in Paris. I am replying that I gladly entertain the idea, but I have stipulated that the negotiations shall be conducted by you on my part. Your kind assistance, now that I cannot use my own pen, will be doubly valuable to me.

I hope to send you the title of the Christmas Story in a day or two.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. My friend's name is Monsieur le Vicomte | du Pontavice de Heussey –
And the gentleman who heads the Anti-Vivisection movement is

Monsieur Cherville | of "Le Temps" Newspaper. –

You will probably hear from one or both of these gentlemen.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. In Carrie Bartley's hand, except for the signature. A pencil annotation beneath the signature reads: 'This letter – except the signature – is in the handwriting of Mr Collins' adopted daughter Mrs H.P. Bartley. | A.P.W.'

2. WC eventually sent the title, 'She Loves and Lies', in [2213] of 11 November.

3. WC had first contacted Heussey with regard to the French translation of Heart and Science in [2078] of 3 November 1882.

[2202] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 17 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 429–430.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th October 1883

My dear Chatto,

The gout is in one of my eyes, and I am forbidden to use the other. In this wretched condition will you kindly instruct your Reader to do what I cannot do – namely to pronounce judgement on a manuscript Novel. The Name of the novel is “The Cross of Mabel”. The author (accustomed to write in periodicals) is Mr Henry Turner.<sup>2</sup>

Pray don’t trouble to consider this. The MS. shall be sent to you by the author with my card enclosed as a voucher. Whatever the sentence may be I thank you before hand.<sup>3</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Apart from the signature, written in the hand of Caroline Graves.

2. The BL Catalogue has a Henry Turner who published a novel entitled Grace with Tinsley’s in the late 1870s, and a number of stories appear under that signature in Chambers’s Journal around this time. But Chatto & Windus seems never to have published his work, and the title given here does not appear on the BL Catalogue.

3. In the same file in the Parrish Collection is found an interesting letter from Caroline Graves to Andrew Chatto, dating from earlier the same year, which concerns the submission, without WC’s knowledge, of a literary manuscript which it seems possible she may even have composed herself:

9th January 1883 | 90 Gloucester Place | Portman Sq W

My dear Sir,

I hope you will not feel annoyed at my leaving with your clerk those poor verses. The writer is ambitious to appear in print and, like hundreds of others who think they have only to ask Wilkie Collins, and the affair will be at once arranged. She – of course neither asks or expects any money, only to appear in print! and that is why I took such a liberty. Kindly send them back to me or let me call for them if you do not see your way to publish (shall I say such everyday nonsense). Wilkie Collins would very properly scold me well did he know what I have done.

Believe me | dear sir | Respectfully yours | Caroline Graves

[2203] TO A. P. WATT, 18 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Pembroke.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, pp. 430–431.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th Oct: 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

Two Monthly Parts are ready for the Printers – and a third only wants corrections – I am only keeping them back on the chance of finding a better title. If you can kindly call any day next week, at the usual time, I shall be glad to see you, and to settle the title of Messrs Kelly’s story, definitely.<sup>2</sup> The M.S.S. can then be sent in.

With many thanks for your letters | Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | I am going out for a dose of fresh air today about 2 o’Clock.

---

1. Except for the signature and postscript, in an unknown hand.

2. The title of the serial story, “I Say No”, is confirmed in [2209] to Watt of 30 October.

[2204] TO EDWARD PRITCHARD, 18 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, III, p. 431.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Thursday 18th Oct: 1883

Dear Sir,

I hoped to have had the pleasure of calling on you at the bank this afternoon at the request of Mrs Edward Allen.<sup>1</sup>

May I defer the appointment until tomorrow (Friday) at 3.30 punctually? If this will be convenient pray don't trouble to write. Silence shall say Yes.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | Any other afternoon at 3. or 3.30 will do for me – if tomorrow finds you engaged
Edward Pritchard Esq

---

1. Concerning the disposition of the funds collected through the Allen Testimonial – see to Pritchard [2205] of 20 October 1883.

[2205] TO EDWARD PRITCHARD, 20 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 278; BGLL, III, pp. 431–432.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th Oct: 1883

My dear Sir,

Many thanks for the proof of our little circular. Except that I have inserted a comma, all needful corrections are already made. If your proof has gone to press, when you get my note, pray consider my proof as not received – it is too unimportant to be allowed to cause the smallest trouble.<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Edward Pritchard Esq

---

1. The circular must be that declaring the closure of the Mrs Edward Allen Testimonial Fund of which WC was appointed secretary and Pritchard treasurer – see [2104] to Pritchard of 17 January 1883. An undated draft of this in WC's hand is found in the Wolff Collection:

The Allen Testimonial

The Subscription List being now closed, we beg to inform the Ladies and Gentlemen who have kindly contributed to this Testimonial, that the total amount received for Mrs Edward Allen is ~~£121-17-~~ £123-3-00
In returning thanks to Mrs Allen we have further to add that, at her request, the subscription money has been placed to the credit of that lady's account with The London and County Bank; the whole amount being thus applied without deduction of any sort.

Edw. Pritchard / Treasurer | Wilkie Collins / Secretary

[2206] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 21 OCTOBER 1883<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 279; B&C, II, p. 461.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

Sunday 21st Oct:

My dear Fred,

Thank you heartily for your friendly letter and for the partridges. I am so much better now that I get out (in the character of Robert Macaire)<sup>3</sup> with a patch over my eye. Give my love of loves to the ~~Pardona~~ Padrona, and ask her to let me have one line to say on what afternoon this week (at 4 o'Clock or thereabouts) she is disengaged, and will let me call and see her. I am allowed to use the sound eye – and, of course, I am at work again all the morning – living in a new world of my own.<sup>4</sup>

Yours affectly | WC

-
1. Dating from the calendar
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
  3. Piratical character in the series of caricatures by Honoré Daumier (1808–1879).
  4. The fictional world of “I Say No”.

[2207] TO J. F. HAMILTON,<sup>1</sup> 22 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 432–433.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd Oct: 1883

Dear Mr Hamilton,

Here I am again – with another little contribution (from Melbourne this time) in the shape of “First of Exchange” for £35..4..3 – at 60 days’ sight.<sup>2</sup> It will arrive at maturity in time to be considered as an Australian Christmas box.<sup>3</sup>

Yes – you are quite right about the little Dutch payment. After our fierce correspondence, we have become excellent friends – and I get presentation copies of my books, not one word of which I can understand.<sup>4</sup> Not long since, I asserted the principle of recognising the author, in the case of the Swedish translations. Here, a lady was the responsible person. I wrote in a tone of tender remonstrance. Principle was recognised, and eloquence was rewarded, by a registered letter containing a £5..-.. Bank of England note<sup>5</sup>

With thanks for your kindness,

Vy truly yours Wilkie Collins

-
1. J. F. Hamilton of Coutts & Co., WC’s bank.
  2. A ‘First of Exchange’ is the first or principal copy of a bill of exchange. Several copies might be sent in case of loss in the post. Once the first is presented and honoured, the other copies are then automatically cancelled.
  3. The full amount was credited to WC’s bank account slightly more than 60 days later on 24 December, just in time for Christmas, while two Foreign Bill Stamps totalling 1s-7d were debited from his account on 29 December, perhaps as a charge for the service (Coutts: WC).
  4. Belinfante Brothers of The Hague – see [0925] of 10 November and [0928] of 18 November 1869, both to them, and [0936] to the Editor of the Echo of 30 November 1869.
  5. This incident does not seem to be recorded elsewhere and the Swedish translator in question remains unknown.

[2208] TO NINA LEHMANN, 25 OCTOBER 1883<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Published: B&C, II, p. 462.

Thursday 25th Oct:

Dearest Padrona,

Whatever you ask me to do, is done as a matter of course. I will lunch with you all – tomorrow at 1:30 – with the greatest pleasure.

N.B. Please order up a handy stick out of the hall, for your own use at lunch – (in this way) – namely, to rap me over the knuckles if you find me raising to my guilty and gouty lips any other liquor than weak brandy and water.

Always your affly | WC

-
1. Dating from the calendar

[2209] TO A. P. WATT, 30 OCTOBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 433.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 30th October 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

Immediately on receiving your very welcome message, I telegraphed the title – writing it very plainly. In case of mistakes (which some times occur where careless telegraphic copyists are concerned) I send the full title again in writing – to follow my telegram if necessary.

Vy truly yours | WC

“I Say No;” | or | The Love-Letter Answered: | A Story By |
Wilkie Collins

[2210] TO J. A. ROSIER,<sup>1</sup> 3 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), formerly laid in a copy of The Woman in White. A Drama (1871). Published: Parrish & Miller, p. 44; BGLL, III, pp. 433–434.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
3rd Nov<sup>r</sup> 1883

Dear Sir,

Your kind proposal finds me once more with obstacles in my way.

I am waiting for an opportunity of making certain much-needed improvements in the story of “The Woman in White” – as arranged for the stage – before it is again presented to the public. With this purpose in view, I have declined to avail myself of proposals to revive the piece which have already been made to me – and, for consistency’s sake, I must regretfully say No, once more.

I may add that I believe this decision to be in your interests as well as in mine. There are complications in the story, as it now stands, which the general public find it hard to follow [sic]. And to present the play successfully many more rehearsals are required (as former experience tells me) than could be conveniently arranged with only a one days performance in view.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins J. A. Rosier Esqre

---

1. Jack A. Rosier, actor, in the Adelphi company from 1881, who approaches WC with a proposal to revive the stage version of The Woman in White.

[2211] TO A. P. WATT, 5 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 434.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 5th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1883

Dear Mr Watt

I shall be glad to see you tomorrow or whenever you can find it convenient to call at the usual time.

The title was sent to Messrs Kelly on Monday last, when I promised to decide. The MS (5 weekly parts) you kindly sent to them. So far, no proofs have arrived. But I have had a letter from Mr Skerry, telling me that he was out of town when I wrote – and that he had given orders to have the copy set up. Two more weekly parts are ready (in MS) – so it is not my fault if the newspapers are kept waiting. I suppose the dreadful Christmas literature is absorbing Mr Kelly’s printers.<sup>1</sup>

Yours ever | WC

---

1. Referring to the serial publication of “I Say No”, which ran in at least seven provincial newspapers including the Glasgow Weekly Herald, 15 December 1883–12 July 1884; in the metropolitan Sunday paper the People, 16 December 1883–13 July 1884; in London Society, January–December 1884; and in Harper’s Weekly, 22 December 1883–12 July 1884. Skerry is an employee of Kelly & Co., who are to carry the novel in their own monthly magazine and provide copy for the weekly newspapers carrying the story.

[2212] TO JOHN F. PHAYRE,<sup>1</sup> 9 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins).<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, pp. 276–277; BGLL, III, pp. 434–435.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th November 1883

Dear Sir,

I send to you herewith, for transmission to Messrs Harper, corrected proofs of the first five weekly parts of my new Story (“I Say No”) – the weekly publication of which begins in the English newspapers on the 15th of December, next, and the monthly publication on the 1st January 1884 in the Magazine called “Time”. The duplicates will follow as soon as the Revises are ready.<sup>3</sup>

If the first weekly part appears to be long, Messrs Harper will perhaps remember that I always begin at some length, in order to reach an interesting point in the story at starting.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr Phayre

---

1. London representative of Harper & Brothers, on the return to New York of W. M. Laffan – see Eugene Exman, The House of Harper (New York: Harper & Row, 1967), p. 131.

2. Above the monogram and printed address are written, perhaps in Phayre’s hand: ‘Copy | send original | to N.Y.’ and ‘ackldg<sup>d</sup> Nov. 10’.

3. The weekly newspaper syndication did indeed commence on 15 December (see Law, pp. 238–239), though the monthly serialization was shifted at the last minute to London Society – see [2219] to A. P. Watt of 29 November 1883.

[2213] TO A. P. WATT, 11 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 462. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 435–436.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

You will find the title of the Christmas Story on the next leaf.

The proofs for Harper were posted to Mr Phayre on Friday night last.<sup>1</sup> I informed him that the newspaper publication of the story would begin on the 15th of December next.

Having mislaid my note of the date, I have trusted to my memory. If the 15th Dec<sup>r</sup> is the right date, don’t trouble to answer this.<sup>2</sup>

Many thanks for Trollope’s story of his life.<sup>3</sup> The early part of it is very interesting – but when he comes to his own opinions on his own books ———

Let that dash express my sentiments:

Yours truly | WC

She Loves and Lies.

You see I am taking to queer titles in my old age. (Title as originally written, accidentally blotted).

P.S. | The corrected proofs will be posted this Evening to Mr Skerry so as to reach him the first thing on Monday morning.<sup>4</sup> I will see that the corrections are all properly made before the Revises are sent to you.

Your kind letter and enclosure just received. Yes – I knew of the English translation, but not that it would appear in the Pictorial World. They had probably not made the bargain when they applied to me. I took into consideration the shortness of this story, in accepting the £50 for the English and French periodical rights. It is really an anecdote and not a story.<sup>5</sup> Many thanks. I believe I have got an entirely new idea for our Christmas story.<sup>6</sup>

More blots!!<sup>7</sup>

---

1. John F. Phayre was at the time Harper’s representative in Britain (see [2212] to him of 9 November 1883). This was

- the first of WC's new works to be published by Harper's since 1878 (see Gasson, pp. 74–75).
2. WC's memory was in fact correct – see the note to [2211] to Watt of 5 November 1883.
  3. Anthony Trollope, An Autobiography, 2 vols, published in October 1883 by Blackwood.
  4. The proofs of instalments of “I Say No”.
  5. Watt had written to WC on 10 November informing him that his ‘Love’s Random Shot’, the English version of a short story appearing in French in the special Christmas issue of Le Figaro Illustré for 1883, was announced for publication in London in the Christmas number of the Pictorial World (Berg), and suggesting that WC might be able to claim an additional £50 for granting the right. In fact in 1883 the special Christmas number of the Pictorial World consisted entirely of English translations from the Le Figaro Illustré, and ‘Love’s Random Shot’ duly appeared (pp. 15– 16, 18), alongside pieces by Daudet and Dumas filis.
  6. ‘She Loves and Lies’.
  7. WC draws a curving line to encircle large blots at the foot of the page.

[2214] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 12 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 436–437.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 12th Nov 1883

My dear Chatto,

Let me thank you for forwarding the parcel – sent to you from Sampson Low & Co – to my address.

I know you will be interested in hearing that the parcel contained a letter, asking my authority to publish a translation of my works into the Hindustanee language, for circulation among Indian readers. The translator (himself an Indian novelist) lives in Calcutta – and he is beginning his work with “The Woman in White”.<sup>1</sup> I think we may congratulate each other on our books winning such a distinction as this.

Ever yours | WC

1. In [2216] to A. P. Watt of 25 November WC writes that the translation is into the Bengali language. It has not been traced.

[2215] TO A. P. WATT, 12 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 437.

90. Gloucester Place. | W. | 12th Nov 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

On the next leaf is a document which may be useful to your clerk, before the Revises are sent to the newspapers.<sup>1</sup>

The corrected proof of the monthly parts has been sent to Mr Skerry this morning.

Ever yours | WC

“I Say No”

Division of the Monthly Parts into | Weekly Parts.

|                                                  |    |                                                                                |
|--------------------------------------------------|----|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Monthly Partcontaining chapters I to V       | I. | Weekly Part IContaining chapters I to III                                  |
|                                                  |    | Weekl Part IIChapters IV and V                                             |
| Monthly Part II.Containing chapters VI to XI |    | Weekly Part IIIChapters VI and VII                                         |
|                                                  |    | Weekly Part IVChapters VIII and IX                                         |
|                                                  |    | Weekly Part VChapters X and XI                                             |
|                                                  |    | Note The First Weekly Part is longer than usual in the interests of the story. |

---

1. Referring again to the serial publication of “I Say No”.

[2216] TO A. P. WATT, 25 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 438.

90. Gloucester Place. | W. | Sunday Nov<sup>r</sup> 25th 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

Will the proprietors of the “Pictorial World” be willing to set up my “Christmas Story” at once, and in the shortest time possible, if I send the MS to you on Wednesday or Thursday next? I shall send on MS copy to the United States by next Thursday’s mail – and a duplicate in proof ought to follow in case of accidents by sea.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

P.S. If you happen to be in communication with the Indian newspapers, it may not be amiss to tell them that my works are about to be translated into the Bengali language! The translator is at work on the Woman in White at Calcutta.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Referring to ‘She Loves and Lies’, originally intended for publication in London in the Pictorial World. Watt wrote to WC on 26 November stating that the London illustrated paper would not now have space for the story, as their Christmas number was to consist of a translation of Le Figaro Illustré which already included WC’s anecdote ‘Love’s Random Shot’ (see [2213] to Watt of 11 November 1883).

2. Though no Bengali translation of The Woman in White has been traced, Watt’s correspondence at the Berg shows that he was attempting to arrange serialization of “I Say No” in Anglo-Indian periodicals such as the Calcutta Englishman or Overland Mail around this period.

[2217] TO NINA LEHMANN, 29 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Extract: Coleman, p. 281. Published: B&C, II, p. 463.

29th Novr 1883

Dearest Padrona,

When did I ever say No – to you? I am hard, hard, hard at work – and I shall /enjoy/ the Saturday half holiday that you offer to me as I enjoy few pleasures now-a-days!

Your ever affly | WC

A boasting postscript – which you will understand. Only think! My novels are to be translated into the Bengali language and read by the native inhabitants of India!!!!<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Generally on the reception of Victorian fiction in India, see Priya Joshi, In Another Country: Colonialism, Culture, and the English Novel in India (Oxford: OUP, 2000). It is unclear whether WC understood that Bengali was only one of many local languages spoken in British India.

[2218] TO A. P. WATT, 29 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 438–439.

90. Gloucester Place. | W. | 29th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

I willingly give my consent to the transfer of the publication of my new serial story from “Time” to “London Society”.<sup>1</sup>

With regard to the suggestion that I should so lengthen or alter the story as to make it extend over a nine months’, in place of a six months’, weekly publication in the subscribing newspapers, there are reasons which do not permit me (with every wish to consult the convenience of Messrs Kelly) to make the proposed alteration.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
A.P. Watt Esq.

---

1. Time: A Monthly Miscellany of Interesting and Amusing Literature (1879–91) had been sold by Edmund Yates, the founding editor, to Kelly & Co. in August 1881. Thereafter it then tended to carry romantic fiction by the likes of Mrs Hungerford and R. E. Francillon, and the plan to feature WC's "I Say No" in 1884 was obviously intended to revive the flagging circulation. But the failure of the move to reduce the price of the magazine to sixpence in the second half of 1883 led Kelly's abruptly to sell the magazine to Boyd Montgomery Ranking at the end of that year (see VFRG, 4, pp. 2–8). Instead, they purchased the rather more successful title, London Society: An Illustrated Magazine of Light and Amusing Literature for the Hours of Relaxation (1862–98), to which they requested WC's permission to transfer the serial publication of his latest novel. (London Society was a rather pale imitation of Cornhill Magazine and also prone to romantic fiction, though famous for its lavish Christmas numbers. It had formerly been edited by Florence Marryat – see [1241] to her of 15 June 1872, etc.) However, Kelly & Co. had obviously not considered that their contract with WC also obliged them to provide copy regularly to the newspapers to which Watt had also sold on serial rights, whereas the purchase of London Society included an encumbrance in the form of a long-term commitment to employ as printers Robsons, a small firm who were not able to keep the type standing for such a lengthy period. ([2228] to Chatto of December 1883 provides a detailed explanation.) This was to provide both WC and Watt with considerable trouble and annoyance over the period of the serial publication, as the following letters demonstrate.

2. Kelly's presumably felt that the value of carrying "I Say No" in London Society would be diminished if the newspaper serialization was completed (and the volume edition appeared) while the monthly serial was still only half way through. The letter from Kelly's to Watt in which these requests must have been made has not been traced.

[2219] TO A. P. WATT, 29 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 439–440.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Thursday, Nov<sup>r</sup> 29th 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

I am sending advance-proofs of my new story (entitled "I Say No") to Melbourne, by tomorrow's mail, under circumstances of some uncertainty.

My old friend, Mr H. Biers, of the Office of Crown Lands and Survey, Melbourne, has been entrusted for years past with the management of my literary interests in Australia.<sup>1</sup> He has not written to me, on this occasion as usual – and the weekly publication of my story in English newspapers begins on the 15th of December next.

Can you kindly help me – in this state of doubt, and to save time – by obtaining the services of an agent at Melbourne, who can be communicated with by tomorrow's mail?

I would request the agent to call on Mr Biers (producing this letter as his authority), and to ascertain if Mr Biers has made the necessary customary arrangements for the serial publication in the Colony of my new story.

If, through illness, or through any other cause, Mr Biers has not made the arrangements, I can give no distinct instructions in my present state of uncertainty. I can only say that I will give a responsible person authority to receive the advance-proofs, and to negotiate for the newspaper publication of my story in Australia and New Zealand, on the customary terms of ten per cent commission.

In any case it is needless to add that I will be responsible for the expenses incurred in making the inquiry at the office of Mr Biers.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
A.P. Watt Esq.

---

1. See [3177], the first extant letter to Hugh Biers of August 1873.

[2220] TO A. P. WATT, 30 NOVEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 440.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th November 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

In the event of my friend, Mr Biers (of Melbourne) not having been able to make arrangements for the serial publication of my new serial story (entitled "I Say No") in the newspapers of Australia and New Zealand, I shall be much obliged if you will undertake to dispose of the advance-sheets to the best advantage as my representative.<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

A.P. Watt Esq.

---

1. See [2219] to Watt of the previous day, 29 November 1883.

[2221] TO CHARLES KENT, 3 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Summary: B&C, II, p. 463. Published: BGLL, III, p. 441.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 3rd Decr 1883

My dear Kent,

When I see your handwriting I shall be almost afraid to open your letters. When is the Wheel of Fortune going to turn the right way for you?<sup>2</sup> Shall we trust to "the law of chances" – and go to Monte Carlo? You to go inside (with my money in your pocket as well as yours) and break the bank – while I wait round the corner? The evening's capital, risked by the proprietor, is £4000 before the game begins. Come here, and talk of it. I am at work till 3. P.M. Then I eat and drink. Can you eat and drink at that hour? If Yes, pray choose your own day. Any day this week – except Thursday next when I must sit for a Photo – will do for me. One line to say which day it shall be, I have promised to lunch with some friends – and will not write to them till I hear from you.

Every yours affly | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.', postmarked as dated.

2. It is not clear what misfortune Kent had suffered – though see [2224] to him of 7 December 1883.

[2222] TO A. P. WATT, 3 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 441-442.

3rd Dec 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

Many thanks for your kind letter. I can only say, with perfect sincerity, that I mainly regret the trouble that I have inadvertently given to you.<sup>1</sup>

As to the matter of the Christmas Story (more worry – alas!) is it possible to get a definite reply in two days' time? I ask the question because I have thought of writing to Charles Dickens (Junr) to ask him if he can save my copyright by making room for me in All The Year Round – or in Household Words. In one word, it doesn't matter where the story appears – so long as the copyright is saved.<sup>2</sup>

Forgive me for this new worry, and believe me,

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written to WC on the same day apologizing for his failure to find an agent in Australia to deal with the question of the serial rights there of "I Say No". No Australian serialization of the novel has in fact been traced.

2. Since the Pictorial World would no longer be carrying WC's 'She Loves and Lies' in its Christmas Supplement for 1883, this would make the December appearance in New York in the Spirit of the Times the first, thus endangering copyright throughout the British Empire. Watt had written back to WC on the same day suggesting that, after a failed attempt with Longman's, it was now very late to arrange publication in January (Berg), but Andrew Chatto obviously agreed at very short notice to squeeze the story into the January issue of Belgravia (published in late December), where it appeared on pp. 285–302 – see [2223] to Chatto of 4 December 1883.

[2223] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 4 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 442.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th Decr 1883

My dear Chatto,

Your kindness has so generously relieved me of anxiety – without considering the inconvenience which it is my misfortune to have caused – that I should be insensible indeed if I did not feel sincerely grateful. Our friend, Mr Watt, has taken the copy with him this evening (after calling here) so that you may have it the first thing in the morning.<sup>2</sup> It is needless to add that whatever I can do to make the story fit the space which you so kindly offer, is heartily at your service,

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Attached to the MS on a separate sheet in what may be Chatto's hand is this note:

I say No!

Arranged with Mr Wilkie Collins that we should publish his Story when complete on the same terms as Heart & Science MS reducing the purchase money from £600 to £500 and paying an additional royalty after any copies of the vol are sold beyond the first 750.

2. 'She Loves and Lies' – see [2222] to A. P. Watt of the previous day.

[3064] TO CHARLES KENT, 6 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Parrish (5/4), envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C3, p. 56.

Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington W.
Wilkie Collins

---

1. Foolscap envelope sealed with red sealing wax carrying WC's initials, and bearing a postmark in red on the verso: 'LONDON-W | A1 | DE 6 | 83'.

[2224] TO CHARLES KENT, 7 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 443.

7th Decr 1883

My dear Kent

I sympathised with the feeling which dictated the prefatory note, and I understood and admired the language in which that feeling was expressed. But such calamity as has fallen on you leaves the most sensitive and sacred feelings in a man's nature at the mercy of mean enmities which – in his happier moments – he would have despised. In that condition, I suggested the doubt which you have taken into consideration. I too thought of your best interests in this matter seriously, after you had left here, with this result – that I believe the decision at which you have arrived to be entirely right, and the sacrifice which you have imposed on yourself to be in every way justified.<sup>2</sup>

Always affly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Initialed and directed to 'Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.', postmarked as dated.

2. The nature of Kent's 'calamity' and 'sacrifice' remains unclear, though WC's remarks may relate to Kent's The Humour and Pathos of Charles Dickens, published in 1884 without a prefatory note. WC writes on a Friday, and it seems likely that Kent had called on him either that day or earlier in the week – see [2221] to Kent of 3 December 1883.

[3139] TO JANE BIGELOW, 8 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Bigelow. Published: A&C5, p. 14.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Saturday 8th Decr 1883

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

Need I say how truly sorry I am to have been away from home when you so kindly called. Partly for health – partly for undisturbed work – I have been backwards and forwards between town and country for some months – and I only left London again a few days before the day of your visit.

Here I am again this morning – to report myself, and my neuralgias, to my doctor, and (I am afraid) to visit my dentist as well. First and foremost, however, I am entirely at your service on any afternoon which you may so kind [sic] as to appoint.<sup>1</sup>

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

(I write in great haste – smothered in unanswered letters.)<sup>2</sup>

---

1. WC clearly means to write ‘which you may be so kind’.

2. WC writes this postscript diagonally on the blank facing page, enclosed by two oversize parentheses.

[2225] TO A. P. WATT, 14 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 443–444.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14th Dec. 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

I think the Kellys have obtained my consent to transfer the story to London Society under something which is very like false pretences. They transfer me to incapable printers – and then coolly appeal to you and me to help them. I beg that you will decline undertaking that responsibility. Their agreement pledges them to set up the proofs as I may require them – and they violate their agreement in making such a proposal as they have addressed to you. I refuse to go on, on that ground.<sup>1</sup>

Pray don’t ask Mr Chatto to help these people out of their difficulty. After what he has just done for me, I could not think of making the proposal to him.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See notes to [2218], the first of two letters to Watt dated 29 November 1883.

2. Watt had written to WC on that day to suggest that either the People (the metropolitan Sunday paper carrying “I Say No”) or, preferably, Chatto & Windus (who would publish the novel in volume form), could be asked to take over the provision of printed copy of the story for the provincial and overseas newspapers. Chatto had just agreed to save the copyright of ‘She Loves and Lies’ by publishing it in Belgravia – see [2222] to Watt of 3 December 1883. Not long before, Chatto’s Belgravia had also taken over the role of providing proofs for the newspapers serializing Heart and Science, after WC complained about the poor quality of the proofs provided by the Liverpool Post – see [2031] and [2032], to Watt of 1 and 2 June 1882.

[2226] TO KELLY & CO., 15 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Unknown. Copy (in WC’s own hand): Pembroke, our copy text. Published: BGLL, III, p. 444.

90 Gloucester Place | 15th December 1883

Dear sirs,

Late yesterday evening, I received a letter from Mr Watt, informing me (on your authority) that the Printers of “London Society” were not able to set up the proofs of my new story in time for the requirements of the weekly newspapers, which have purchased from you the right of periodically publishing the work.

When I consented to your proposal that the Story should be published, in monthly parts, in “London Society” instead of in “Time” (as we originally agreed), I was not informed that the printing of my M.S. was to be transferred from your office to other persons, and I was accordingly not aware that a breach of contract was involved in that transfer – which has no doubt escaped your attention, and which I now therefore point out to you by quoting from our agreement.

“As many copies, or ‘pulls’ of the proofs – not exceeding six – of each periodical part set up in type as Mr Wilkie Collins may require in making use of the rights reserved to him in this agreement shall be furnished to him, on his application, by Messrs Kelly & Co”

I now apply for proofs of the third monthly part of the story – the MS of which was sent to you on the 6th of December last.

Believe me | &c &c | (signed) WC

[2227] TO A. P. WATT, 15 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 445.

90. Gloucester Place. | W. | 15th December 1883

Private

Dear Mr Watt,

I enclose a copy of a letter which I have this day sent to Messrs Kelly & Co<sup>1</sup>

The manner in which these people have behaved obliges me to communicate with them directly, and leaves you perfectly free to also take your own course in the matter – so far as you and they are concerned. In my opinion, we have equal reason to complain of them – for they must have kept you in the dark as to the circumstances under which the story was transferred to “London Society”, as well as me.<sup>2</sup>

It is needless to add that I should have preferred asking you to represent me as usual. But, when I don’t know that Messrs Kelly may not oblige me to write to them next by means of my lawyers, I have no alternative but to act for myself.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

A.P. Watt Esq.

---

1. See [2226] to Kelly & Co. of 15 December 1883.

2. See the notes to [2218] to Watt of 29 November 1883.

[2228] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 18 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, III, pp. 445–446.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
18th Decr 1883

Private

My dear Chatto,

Mr Kelly has consulted me, this evening, on a matter in which you and I are concerned.

Briefly, the magazine called “London Society” is now in Mr Kelly’s hands – with an encumbrance in the shape of an agreement with Messrs Robson (the printers) which gives them the sole right of printing the Magazine for a term of years still unexpired.

My new Story<sup>1</sup> is to be published monthly in “London Society” – and Mr Kelly has just discovered that Messrs Robson have not got the necessary font of type which is wanted to set up my proofs some months in advance of publication – not only for my convenience, but for the convenience of the weekly newspapers which have purchased the right of periodically publishing the story. In this difficulty he asks me if the story on which I am now at work will be published in book-form by you. I answer Yes, of course (on our customary terms) – and Mr Kelly proposed to ask you tomorrow if you will let him be your printers on this occasion.<sup>2</sup>

If you consent, he will set up the story in slips (of the type required for the republication) and will of course bear the expense of keeping the type standing, until you want it for the novel. The regular supply of my proofs in advance (now stopped for the time) will then be resumed.

I have only to add that I am not really interested in his affairs, as Messrs Kelly are bound by agreement to supply me with my proofs, and must find some other way of doing it, if it is not convenient for you to employ them as printers. You will understand, I know, that I only mention this, because I remember gratefully what you have lately sacrificed,<sup>3</sup> like a good friend, to my convenience – and I should be really ashamed to be even indirectly associated with another appeal to your kindness.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Andrew Chatto Esqre

---

1. “I Say No”.

2. For the background to this problem with the printing of “I Say No”, see [2225] and [2227] to Watt of 14 and 15 December 1883.

3. By agreeing to save the copyright of ‘She Loves and Lies’ by publishing it at short notice in Belgravia – see [2223] to Chatto of 4 December 1883.

[2229] TO JANE BIGELOW, 19 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 446–447.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 19th December 1883

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

This is to follow you home, after you have recovered from the alarms and fatigues of a winter voyage across the Atlantic – and is to tell you how really and truly sorry I am not to have had the happiness of seeing you on your last visit to the old country. Pray let me hear a little sooner that there is the hope of seeing you in England the next time you embark, and then this misfortune (for me) will not, and shall not, happen again.

Partly for my health, and partly to escape the many unwelcome interruptions from many unwelcome people, to which I am exposed in London, I have been more or less in hiding (absorbed over a new story) this autumn. Little thinking that I should hear from you, I have taken the desperate step of sometimes issuing a domestic “ukase”<sup>1</sup> to forbid the forwarding of letters and cards. If you were to see the letters I receive from strangers, asking for loans of money, appealing to me to settle domestic embarrassments, suggesting subjects for me to write about, and asking for letters of introduction, presentation copies of my books, and so on, you would not wonder that I look on letters (not addressed in handwriting I know) with an evil eye.

I have got a very odd title for the novel which I am now writing:

“I Say No”; | or | The Love-Letter Answered.

=

Harper publishes, in one of his newspapers, on “your side”.<sup>2</sup>

=

Pray let me hear about the voyage, and how you endured it – and tell me that you are in perfect health and spirits and that you are at home again. In the meantime I have your flower to console me (which is more than I deserve).

Always most truly yours | WC

1. In Imperial Russia, a published proclamation or order, having the force of law. The assassination on 13 March 1881 of Tsar Alexander II had excited renewed interest in domestic Russian politics.
2. “I Say No” was serialized in Harper’s Weekly, 22 December 1883–12 July 1884. However, in an attempt to defeat the piracy that had occurred with Heart and Science, it was published by Harper in one volume three months ahead of the Chatto & Windus three-volume London edition of October 1884. The early completion of the newspaper serialization in Britain made this essential.

[2230] TO FRANK ARCHER, 20 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 284. Published: Archer, p. 251; BGLL, III, pp. 447–448, amended A&C7, p. 21.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 20th Decr 1883.

My dear Archer,

When I consented to the “revival”, the “cast” depended on my approval. I expressly stipulated that you should be the first person to whom we applied – if we were lucky enough to find you disengaged. You will now know how glad I am to hear that I am to be helped by my old comrade.<sup>2</sup> Our chance of success depends entirely, in my opinion, on making the public understand that there is such a theatre, and on telling them where to find it.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Frank Archer Eqr | 12 Baker Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | DE 21 | 83’, with ‘WC 17’ in another hand in pencil on the recto. WC mistakes the house number which was in fact 21.

2. The New Magdalen was revived from Saturday, 5 January 1884 to Saturday, 8 March 1884 (61 performances including some Saturday matinées but with no performance on Ash Wednesday). Archer played his old role of Julian Gray. For WC’s view of his performance, see [2266] to Archer, 8 February 1884. Archer records: ‘Settled engagement Dec.17 1883. First rehearsal Dec 29. Asked £20 week, but accepted £18, 6 weeks guaranteed’. In fact it ran for nine weeks and Archer was paid £183, a rate of £3 per performance. (‘Theatre Salaries and Parts Played’, Archer Archive, Bk. 2, pp. 117–121; Bk. 3, p. 3). In the case of the original production at the Olympic, by contrast, Archer was paid £10 per week of six performances (‘Theatre Salaries and Parts Played’, Archer Archive, Bk. 1, pp. 78–85).

3. The production was at the new Novelty Theatre at 3 Great Queen Street, slightly away from the normal theatre area. The theatre had opened on 9 December 1882, closed after two weeks, re-opened as The Folies Dramatiques and then as The Novelty in 1883.

[2231] TO A. P. WATT, 20 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, p. 448.

20th Decr 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

The difficulty is set right in the future by Messrs Kelly becoming the printers of the publication in book form.<sup>1</sup>

But, as to the present – thanks to their annoying delay – Messrs Harper have only got their advance proofs up to the 12th of January – and here is Christmas coming. I could get no positive promise out of Mr Kelly when he called here on Tuesday evening – and I have written today to say that if I cannot have some of the MS in type on Saturday next, they must send it back to me – and I must go to the expense and trouble of having a copy made for Harper.<sup>2</sup>

Damn Mr Kelly!

Ever yours | WC

---

1. As requested in [2228] to Andrew Chatto of 18 December 1883, Chatto & Windus agreed to use Kelly’s as the printers of the three-volume edition of “I Say No” (published in October 1884), rather than their usual firm of Spottiswoode & Co., in order to solve the problem of providing copy of “I Say No” to the subscribing newspapers – see notes to [2218] to Watt of 29 November 1883.

2. Watt wrote back to WC on the same day to assure him that Kelly’s had promised to dispatch the required proofs by special messenger at 11 AM. on Saturday 22 December. He also sent a further letter that morning to confirm that the proofs had in fact been dispatched (Berg).

[2232] TO A. P. WATT, 23 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 448–449.

90. Gloucester Place. | W. | Sunday 23rd Dec<sup>r</sup> 1883

Dear Mr Watt,

We are running along smoothly again – thanks to your kind help. The proofs corrected for Revise will be posted to Messrs Kelly tonight. They were sent to New York by yesterdays mail.

Ever yours | WC

The division into weekly parts on the next page.

“I Say No”

Weekly Parts continued: —

|                | Chapters   |
|----------------|------------|
| Weekly Part 6. | XII. XIII. |
| “ “ 7.         | XIV. XV.   |
| “ “ 8.         | XVI. XVII  |

December 22nd 1883

[2233] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 24 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Melbourne (MS 6162/4). Published: BGLL, III, p. 449.

23 24th Dec 1883 | 90. Gloucester Place | W.

My dear Chatto,

A happy Christmas and New Year to you – and my best thanks for the presentation copies of the new editions of “The Black Robe” and “Heart and Science.”<sup>1</sup>

The Kellys have asked me about the length of “I Say No” – I have marked (on the copy) the end of the first volume. As the other two volumes are still to be written, I can only say “about the usual length.”<sup>2</sup>

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esqre

1. Presumably the two-shilling ‘yellowback’ edition of The Black Robe and the Library Edition of Heart and Science at 3s-6d.

2. Monthly serial publication of “I Say No” began in London Society in January 1884.

[2234] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 24 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 282; BGLL, III, pp. 449–450.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 24th December 1883

Dear Sirs,

Delays in the setting up of the proofs<sup>1</sup> (for which I am in no way responsible) have made it necessary for me to send you the new supply of proofs directly from myself, instead of through Mr Phayre.<sup>2</sup> I only received the 6th 7th and 8th weekly parts on Saturday last, just in time to correct them for that day's mail. They have been despatched by registered letter-post.

The duplicates will be forwarded (after Christmas) by Mr Phayre, as usual – and, for the future, I am assured that the “copy” will be set up at the proper time.

With all good wishes in the New Year,
Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins Messrs Harper Brothers

---

1. Of “I Say No”, serialized in the United States in Harper's Weekly, 22 December 1883–12 July 1884. On the cause of the delay in setting up the novel in proof for the British serialization, see [2228] to Andrew Chatto of 18 December 1883.

2. Harper's representative in London.

[2235] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & Co.,<sup>1</sup> 27 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 283; BGLL, III, p. 450.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27th December 1883

Dear Sirs,

I am very glad to hear that your observation of the habits of Englishmen in the matter of Wine-talk agrees so thoroughly with mine – and I hope that the Prospectus (or shall I venture to say our Prospectus) will find sympathising readers of my little “Social” contribution.<sup>3</sup>

I need hardly add that the gift which you are so good as to offer to me will be received with the cordial welcome which it merits – and that the compliment which you pay to me is sincerely appreciated. My “gouty constitution” obliges me (very much against my will) to be on my guard against too close an intimacy with our old mythological friend Bacchus. But I may still have the pleasure of wishing Messrs Beecheno, Yaxley & Co a Happy New Year over a glass of the Ribera Sherry.<sup>4</sup>

Believe me, dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Beecheno, Yaxley & Co

---

1. WC's wine-merchants in the City of London.

2. Signed and directed to ‘Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co | 135. Minorities | E. C.’, postmarked as dated.

3. Presumably one of WC's letters to the firm was to be cited in the firm's advertising.

4. Presumably this was the gift WC was to receive from his wine merchants. Perhaps the label refers to the Spanish painter José Ribera (1591–1652) rather than the wine region, since Ribera del Duero is in northern Spain, far from where sherry is produced in the Jerez area.

[2236] TO DORIS EDITH BARTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 28 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 4/14).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 451.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th December 1883

To Doris

from | her affectionate Godpapa | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Eldest daughter of Harry and Carrie Bartley, born 9 July 1879 and now four years old.

2. WC's note accompanies a greetings card.

[2237] TO DOUGLAS,<sup>1</sup> 28 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, III, p. 451.

90. Gloucester Place. W | London | 28th December 1883

My dear Douglas,

Thank you heartily for a token of friendly remembrance – which I value for your sake, and which I also admire for its own merits as a work of Art.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Unidentified – but probably a family name rather than a family member.

[2238] TO WYBERT REEVE, 28 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Private, pictorial card with scrap of paper. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4g; Reeve 1891, p. 119; Reeve 1906, p. 461. Published: BGLL, III, p. 451.

To | Wybert Reeve with kindest remembrances
Wilkie Collins | London | 28th December 1883<sup>1</sup>

A little bit of English Landscape, My Dear Reeve, to remind you of the old country and this old friend.

WC<sup>2</sup>

-
1. Written on the verso of a pictorial card in colour showing a group of trees in a wood with the printed message: ‘A Happy New Year | Raphael Tuck & Sons, London’.
2. This note is written on a scrap of paper accompanying the card.

[2239] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 29 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363(46)). Published: B&C, II, pp. 463–465.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

London | 29th December 1883

Here is another year coming to an end, dear Sebastian – and here is your infirm old friend still keeping alive, in deference to the interests of his Insurers in the United States. There is every temptation to die. We have not seen the sun for three weeks, in London – the plague of Christmas Cards is on the increase – my dear old four-legged friend and companion (“Tommy”) has refused to eat his breakfast this morning<sup>2</sup> – and Mr Bradlaugh has issued his one hundred and fiftieth assertion of his right to ignore God and to take his seat in Parliament.<sup>3</sup> Oh, what a miserable world to live in!

But there are moments of compensation. There is the moment in which I beg you to give my love to Mrs Sebastian – and there is the other moment in which I wish for your happiness and hers, in the year to come, with all my heart and soul and strength.

On this side of the Atlantic there is such an utter and unendurable dearth of news that we all screamed with delight when we heard (from your side) that General Grant had fallen on the “side-walk” and hurt his leg.<sup>4</sup> Not in the least from any want of sympathy and admiration for the General – but merely because we found something to read about in the English newspapers, which had actually happened. We don’t know what the German Prince-Imperial talked about with the Pope<sup>5</sup> – or what Gladstone is going to do, in February next, with the British Constitution<sup>6</sup> – or whether Henry Irving has or has not fascinated the American public.<sup>7</sup> Until last night, we were not certainly informed that Tennyson was to be made a Lord.<sup>8</sup> Now (Heaven be praised) the rise of T. is a fact which we cherish side by side with the other fact of the fall of G. I am one of the literary men who think T. is right in accepting a peerage – not as a distinction conferred on himself, but as a recognition of Literature which has its use and its value in such a country as England. Since the baronetcy conferred on Walter Scott – who ought to have been created a Prince if he had only written “The Antiquary” and “Ivanhoe” – no purely literary man has been ennobled in this country. Bulwer Lytton and Macaulay were politicians as well as writers. For these reasons,

I take off my old felt hat, and salute Lord Tennyson.

By-the-bye, I have gained my little distinction, since you last heard of me. My novels are so popular among the native races of India (who can read English) that they are to be translated into the Bengali language for the native inhabitants who want to read me. The Series is to begin with “The Woman in White.” There seems to be some promise, in this, of the stories being still alive when the story-teller is dead.

Here is the end of the paper – and there is my novel now in progress (with the queer title of “I Say No”) waiting to be continued.

I have just room left to ask for a nice long letter telling me about you and yours – and to subscribe myself your affectionate friend

Wilkie Collins

Note: Looking at the address of this letter, it has just occurred to me to ask whether I am right in ennobling you (like myself) by the title of “Esq<sup>re</sup>”. If you are an American Citizen, I have made a dreadful mistake. You are “Mr”. Or are you – “Herr German-Consul? – Oh, do tell me!”<sup>9</sup>

-
1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
  2. Tommy, WC’s Scotch terrier, features in his short story ‘My Lady’s Money’ of 1878, in which he acts as detective, and helps to unravel the mystery (Clarke, pp. 178–179).
  3. The freethinker Charles Bradlaugh (1833–1891: ODNB): ‘In 1880 Bradlaugh was elected junior Liberal MP for Northampton. He applied to substitute an affirmation for the oath on grounds of unbelief. A select committee ruled against this, so Bradlaugh asked to take the oath, which was also refused. He became a symbol of people against parliament. ... He successfully recontested Northampton in 1881, 1882, 1884, and 1885, and on four occasions pleaded his case at the bar of the house. A government bill to change the law was defeated by three votes in 1883 and not until after the general election of 1886 did the speaker overrule opposition and allow Bradlaugh to take the oath. In 1888 he secured an act to permit parliamentary affirmations.’
  4. See ‘General Grant’, Times, 28 December 1883, p. 3e.
  5. See ‘The German Crown Prince in Rome’, Times, 20 December 1883, p. 5f.
  6. See the comments on Gladstone’s position regarding hereditary peerages in ‘Lord R. Churchill in Edinburgh’, Times, 20 December 1883, p. 3c-d.
  7. See ‘Mr. Irving in Philadelphia’, Times, 6 December 1883, p. 5e-f.
  8. See ‘The Tennyson Peerage’, Times, 14 December 1883, p. 5c.
  9. WC writes his postscript up the left hand margin of the page of his final page, associating it by a pair of dotted saltires with his phrase ‘Tennyson was to be made a Lord’ in the third paragraph of the letter. According to Sue Lonoff, Schlesinger was “a German resident in Boston. . . . a diplomat (seventeen years as German consul)” (Smith and Terry, p. 46).

[2240] TO GEORGE ALEXANDER,<sup>1</sup> 31 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Private, on the verso of a pictorial card.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 452.

To | Mr George Alexander | with kind remembrances
Wilkie Collins | 31st Decr 1883

-
1. Sir George Alexander (1858–1918), distinguished actor-manager who played the part of the lawyer’s clerk, Cecil Cassilis, in WC’s unsuccessful play Rank and Riches on 9 June 1883.
  2. Showing a horizontal curved branch with blue flowers, beneath which is the printed greeting in facsimile handwriting ‘A happy New Year’. The whole is surrounded by a dark brown border within a wider blue border. See also [2238], WC’s similar note to Wybert Reeve of 28 December 1883.

[2241] TO NINA LEHMANN, 31 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 452.

31st December 1883

With Wilkie’s Love – and Kindest wishes for the year that is coming
To my Padrona

1. On a plain card of visiting-card size.

[2242] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 31 DECEMBER 1883

MS: Unknown.<sup>1</sup> On sale: eBay (12 May 2002), item 2100740034. Published: BGLL, III, p. 452.

Vy truly Yours | Wilkie Collins
London | 31 December 1883
With Mr Wilkie Collins's compliments

---

1. Probably a greeting for the New Year.

[2243] TO ISIDORE G. ASCHER,<sup>1</sup> [1883]

MS: Unknown. Extract: Author 5 (November 1894), p. 161;<sup>2</sup> BGLL, III, pp. 452–453.

Your views on the question of publication have been my views for years past. I have tried thus far in vain to induce publishers to see the advantages (to themselves as well as to literature) of effecting a reform already established in all other civilised countries. I can do nothing by myself ... I should be powerless for this plain reason, that my time and energies are wholly absorbed in writing my books. I can only wait and hope for the coming man who will give me my opportunity. The vicious circulating library system is unquestionably beginning to fail, and the recent issue of sixpenny magazines shows an advance in the right direction.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Isidore Gordon Ascher (1835–1914), American poet and author.

2. Ascher quotes this passage in a long letter to the Author headed: 'Novels at popular prices – Wilkie Collins' opinion'. Ascher claims that in 1883 he had 'a long correspondence with the late Wilkie Collins' about the price and circulation of novels. No other letters to Ascher are known.

3. Griest, p. 249 n. 60, states: 'Wilkie Collins had no doubts whatever; he flatly accused the "vicious circulating library system" of compelling the novelist to garnish his story with "interminable descriptions, dull moralisings, or tedious conversations"', which conflates WC's text with Ascher's comments.

[2244] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, [1861–83]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, III, p. 453 and IV, p. 383 (as two letters), amended A&C3, p. 69.

at 7 o'Clock] I shall be delighted to see you at dinner here – and you will meet Reade. No [formal costume] mind!

...and believe me

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Conjectural dating, between WC's first extant letter to Charles Reade and the latter's final illness in the Spring of 1884.

2. The top and bottom of the page have been cut neatly off, leaving only this fragment in WC's hand on the recto beginning in the middle of a sentence. The sections in square brackets are partially excised and remain to some extent conjectural. The valediction and the signature are on the verso.

[2245] TO G.H. PUTNAM,<sup>1</sup> 1883

MS: Unknown. Extract: (New York) Critic, 19:571 (28 January 1893), p. 52;<sup>2</sup> Sherbo 1992, pp. 196–197. Published: BGLL, III, pp. 453–455.

Have I read "The Leavenworth Case"?<sup>3</sup> I have read it through at one sitting. Need I say after that what I think of it? Yes – because I have a word to add about Miss Green's future work.

Her powers of invention are so remarkable – she has so much imagination and so much belief (a most important qualification for our art) in what she writes, that I have nothing to report of myself, so far, but most sincere admiration. ...<sup>4</sup>

Now, I get out of the pulpit and take my leave in the character of a reader. Dozens of times in reading the story I have stopped to admire the fertility of invention, the delicate treatment of incidents – and the fine perception of the influence of events on the personages of the story.<sup>5</sup>

The treatment, in Book III., of Mrs. Belden’s character shows such difficulties mastered and such truth and subtlety – it produced, in one word, such a strong impression upon me, that I looked at the chapter for the second time, and the result was renewed appreciation.<sup>6</sup> There, I found my reason for believing that Miss Green has capacities for presenting “character” which she has not yet sufficiently cultivated. In the meantime, she has my hearty congratulations on what she has already accomplished, and my earnest good wishes for the future. Very truly yours,

WILKIE COLLINS.

---

1. George Haven Putnam (1844–1930: DAB), American civil war hero and New York publisher, son of George Palmer Putnam to whom WC had written on 10 August 1869 ([0901]).

2. Cited in a letter dated ‘New York, 18 Jan., 1893’ from G. H. Putnam to the Editors of the Critic (a fortnightly literary review published in New York from 1881 and later owned by Putnam himself), where the writer states:

In The Critic for January 14th, quotation is made from a recent article in the London Spectator, the writer of which has apparently proved, to his own satisfaction at least, “the marked inferiority” of women as writers. The Spectator says: – “Speaking tentatively and with no pretence to assurance (for the problem is difficult and obscure), we are disposed to think that the faculties in which women, otherwise intellectual and cultivated, are notably deficient, are imagination and construction.”

It may be of interest to the readers of The Critic to have placed before them, for consideration in connection with the above rather sweeping conclusion, the following extract from a letter written to myself in 1883 by Wilkie Collins. The author of “The Woman in White” had certainly secured for himself full recognition on the part of the reading public on both sides of the Atlantic as a writer by no means deficient in constructive power or in imagination, and it is, I suppose, fair to assume he possessed also the capacity for judging such qualities in other writers. Mr. Collins writes: –

Following the extracts from WC’s letter Putnam adds:

Mr Collins evidently took the ground that literary and artistic productions should be judged for themselves, and without any distinction to the “age, sex or previous condition of servitude” of the producers. As a publisher, I am myself inclined to contend that this is the only legitimate method of securing an impartial and adequate judgement concerning such productions.

3. The Leavenworth Case: A Lawyer’s Story, the best-selling detective story by Anna Katherine Green (1846–1935), whose father was a New York lawyer and whose plots are noted for their logical construction and dependence on a knowledge of criminal law. Her first published work, The Leavenworth Case appeared in New York in 1878 from Putnam, but seems to have been reprinted in London only in 1884. The first of a series featuring Inspector Ebenezer Gryce as detective, the novel opens with the murder of the wealthy New York merchant Horatio Leavenworth, with all the circumstantial evidence pointing directly towards the heir, his favourite niece Mary.

4. At this point Putnam adds the following parenthetical comment: ‘Here followed certain counsels and suggestions for the author’s future work.’

5. Here Putnam inserts three asterisks, presumably indicating an ellipsis.

6. The middle-aged widow Amy Belden, whose straitened circumstances force her to earn her bread as a needlewoman and whose romantic yearnings lead her to act as go-between in Mary Leavenworth’s illicit love affair, is introduced at the beginning of the third of the four books into which the novel is divided (in chapter 26 out of 39). Though the role of narrator in the novel as a whole is undertaken by the young lawyer Everett Raymond, who falls in love with Mary Leavenworth’s cousin Eleanore, The Leavenworth Case makes some use of the style of multiple-narration WC had pioneered in The Woman in White, and Amy Belden is allowed to tell her own story towards the end of Book 3, from chapter 32, ‘Mrs Belden’s Narrative’.

[2246] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 4 JANUARY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 3.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 4th January 1884

My dear Sir,

After a long interval, here is another letter from Berlin – (on the next page) – which I shall be obliged if you will transform into an English letter, at your convenience.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

M. Alberic Iserbyt

---

1. Directed to ‘M. Alberic Iserbyt | 6. Holyoak [sic for ‘Holyoake’] Road | Newington Butts | S.E.’, postmarked as dated.

2. As [2249] to Iserbyt of 7 January indicates, the letter was again from Justizrath Simson.

[2247] TO A. P. WATT, 5 JANUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 3.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 5th January 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

Thank you for your good wishes for the New Year – which I heartily return.<sup>1</sup>

By this morning’s registered letter post, I send you the “copy”, containing more than the first third of the story. Please let me have one line to say that it has reached you safely.<sup>2</sup>

Oblige me also by tearing off the next page and giving it to Messrs Kelly – with the copy.<sup>3</sup> You will see why I ask this.

Ever yours | WC

P.S. – | Your MS. is in the binder’s hands.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Watt’s greetings were expressed in a letter to WC dated 1 January 1884, which also contained the information that the Calcutta Englishman would not after all be able to carry “I Say No” as a serial, due to prior commitments (Berg).

2. “I Say No”. The clerk J. J. Baxter acknowledged receipt of the packet on behalf of Watt in a note dated 5 January (Berg).

3. The page has indeed been torn off, and no copy survives with the letters bound in at Pembroke.

4. Presumably that of ‘She Loves and Lies’, presented to A. P. Watt on 22 January 1884 (see Gasson, p. 139).

[2248] TO FRANCES POWER COBBE, 6 JANUARY 1884

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 4.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th January 1884

Dear Miss Cobbe

Let me very sincerely thank you for your kind letter. There will be probably a republication in book form of the German translation. The Tauchnitz reprint in English is already widely circulated – and a new Edition in one volume (at a cheap price) has just been issued by Chatto & Windus.<sup>1</sup> What little I have been able to do towards helping this good cause is in a fair way, I hope, of appealing to a large audience.

I am really sorry to hear that my opinion, in the matter of the tall man,<sup>2</sup> has been corroborated, under circumstances in which you are so nearly concerned. Judging by what I hear, I ask myself which is the more difficult achievement – the discovery of the Northwest Passage<sup>3</sup> or the discovery of an honest capable and sober man?

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The library edition of Heart and Science at 3s-6d – see [2233] to Andrew Chatto, 24 December 1883.

2. See [2080] to Cobbe of 21 November 1882. WC refers to the fictional Dr Benjulia, the sadistic vivisectionist in Heart and Science, who towers ‘to a stature of six feet six inches, English measure’ (ch. 10), while the real tall individual about whom Cobbe must have complained remains unidentified.

3. A potential shipping route to the north of North America to link the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, a voyage originally attempted by explorers such as Sebastian Cabot at the end of the fifteenth century but accomplished only at the beginning of the twentieth by the Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen during the years 1903–1906.

[2249] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 7 JANUARY 1884

Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 4–5.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 7th January 1884

My dear Sir,

Thank you for the translation, and for your letter.

I enclose my answer to Herr Simson for translation.<sup>2</sup>

As this is the period of the year at which accounts are usually settled, I venture to ask whether you will allow me to pay your fee for the services which you have rendered to me, up to the present date – or whether you would prefer to wait until the correspondence comes to an end.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Alberic Iserbyt Esqr

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘Alberic Iserbyt Esqr | 6. Holyoak [sic for ‘Holyoake’] Road | Newington Butts | S.E.’, postmarked as dated.

2. See [2246] to Iserbyt of 4 January 1884. The letter to Simson has not been traced. One leaf of the folding notepaper is torn away; WC presumably writes on the third page of Simson’s original letter, folding it so as to leave his own message to the front.

[2250] TO FRANK ARCHER, 8 JANUARY 1884

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Archer, p. 251; BGLL, IV, p. 5. Published: A&C7, pp. 21–22.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>
8th January 1884

My dear Archer,

“The delightfully mild weather” unnerves me – and the form of rheumatism which moderns call “neuralgia” follows as a matter of course. On Saturday last, I was with you in the spirit – and here in the flesh.

On Sunday, Mr Charles kindly called to tell me the good news.<sup>3</sup> In this way I know that you did noble justice to your part – and that you were never more entirely and admirably the “Julian Gray” that I long imagined than on that first night of our revival.<sup>4</sup>

The problem we have now to solve is – to tell the public the way to the theatre. Every night’s audience (even if we begin badly so far as numbers are concerned) will help us towards attaining that object.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Frank Archer Eq

---

1. Directed to ‘Frank Archer Eqr | 21. Baker Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 2 | JA 8 | 84 | 9’, with ‘18’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. With address ranged right and WC’s monogram ranged left.

3. Fred Charles was described in the programme as ‘Acting Manager (for Miss Cavendish)’. See also [2258] and [2259] to Fred Charles, 18 and 20 January 1884.

4. The revival of The New Magdalen – see [2230] to Archer, 20 December 1883, where note 3 describes the location of the theatre. One way the theatre informed the public about its location was to issue a special first class underground railway ticket: ‘RETURN FROM CHARING CROSS TO NOVELTY THEATRE Opposite the Freemasons’ Tavern, Great Queen St., Long Acre, W.C., during the run of The New Magdalen’ (‘Personal criticisms, Bills, etc’, vol. 2, Archer Archive).

[3111] TO THE MANAGER OF THE NEW ENGLAND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,<sup>1</sup> 10 JANUARY 1884

MS: Unknown. On sale: Heritage Auctions (29 October 2007, lot 61388). Envelope: Lewis Collection (L1627).<sup>2</sup>
Published: A&C4, p. 26–27. Amended: A&C14, p.31.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 10th January 1884

Dear sir,

Be so good as to send the customary notification, relating to the payment of my Premium of Insurance,<sup>3</sup> due 12th February next, to my agents Messrs Naylor & Co, 6. Oliver Street, as before, and believe me,<sup>4</sup>

Faithfully yrs | Wilkie Collins

To | The Manager, New England Life Insurance Company | Boston

-
1. Presumably the same company that he writes to as the ‘New England Mutual Insurance Company’ on 5 January 1885 and 6 January 1887.
  2. With an envelope directed to: ‘The Manager | New England Mutual Life | Insurance Company | Boston | Mass: | U.S.A. | Wilkie Collins’. The signature is marked off with a curved line. The envelope has a two pence halfpenny blue stamp and two postmarks: ‘LONDON.W. | Z6 | JA9 | 84’ and ‘BOSTON | JAN | 21 | PAID’, indicating the time the postal delivery took.
  3. For details of the insurance policy that WC took out with the Boston firm before leaving the United States in 1874, see [1426] to William Tindell, 3 March 1874.
  4. In the two known subsequent letters Naylor & Co is located in New York City rather than Boston. See [2262] to Sebastian Schlesinger, 28 January 1884.

[2251] TO A. P. WATT, 10 JANUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 5–6.

10th January 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

The enclosed letter has just reached me.<sup>1</sup> You will see, by comparison of dates, that the piracy is printed and published only one day after the publication by Messrs Harper. It seems impossible to accomplish the theft with this rapidity – unless proofs are privately supplied from England. I accuse nobody – but I suggest (if you agree with me) that Messrs Kelly should be put on their guard, and that the English newspaper proprietors who have purchased the story should be discreetly informed of what has happened. There is a rogue somewhere among the printers. How to discover him when so many presses are engaged is, I fear, no easy question to answer.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. The letter, probably from John F. Phayre, Harper’s London representative (see [2254] to him of 15 January 1884), pointing out the piracy of the early instalments of “I Say No” in a Philadelphia newspaper, is not bound in at Pembroke.
  2. In addition to the London Society printers, at least half a dozen provincial newspapers were engaged in printing the story.

[2252] TO A. P. WATT, 12 JANUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 6.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
12th January 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

Thank you most sincerely – for another act of friendly service. I dismiss my view at once and forever – and gladly take the advice which you and Chatto kindly offer to me.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The reference is presumably to the piracy of the serial instalments of “I Say No” in the United States. Watt and Chatto seem to have argued that British printers could not have been involved – see [2251] to Watt of 10 January and [2254] to J. F. Phayre of 15 January 1884. No letter from Watt on this matter is found in the letter-books in the Berg Collection.

[2253] TO MABEL E. WOTTON,<sup>1</sup> 14 JANUARY 1884

MS: Fales. Summary: B&C, II, p. 465. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 6.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14th January 1884

Dear Miss Wotton,

This time I am well enough to thank you with my own hand for your kind and welcome letter. I am working hard at “I Say No” – making up for the time lost during my illness – and I am indeed pleased and encouraged when I hear that the new story is interesting you. It is all so real and so true to me (I may confess this to you, without being thought vain) that I believe the characters are living people. The other day, having to speak to one of my servants, whose name is Grace, I called her “Emily”.<sup>2</sup> I believe she thinks me a little mad and pities me with all her heart.

Will you give my kind regards to the members of your family? I am glad to think that I am, in some sort, a member of the household.

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Miss Mabel E. Wotton

---

1. Mabel Wotton became well known in the 1890s as a writer of ‘New Woman’ fiction such as A Pretty Radical, and Other Stories (1890).

2. Emily Brown, the orphaned heroine of “I Say No”.

[2254] TO JOHN F. PHAYRE, 15 JANUARY 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins).<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 284; BGLL, IV, p. 7.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th January 1884

Dear Sir,

I have done what I undertook to do in my last letter to you.<sup>2</sup>

The result of the inquiries which I have been able to institute does not justify suspicion of a dishonest use of the proof sheets of my new story in this country.<sup>3</sup>

I sincerely regret – but I cannot say that I am surprised by – the act of audacious literary robbery committed on Messrs Harper.<sup>4</sup> The wicked indifference of the government of the United States of America to obligations which have been recognised by every other civilised ~~count~~ nation was not forgotten by me, when my agent proposed the terms (afterwards accepted) for the republication of “I Say No.” in New York. Piracy was to be expected, and to be allowed for, by Messrs Harper and by myself – and piracy has taken place.

I remain, Dear sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mr J. F. Phayre

---

1. Above the monogram and printed address are written, perhaps in Phayre’s hand: ‘Copy | Send original | to N.Y.’ and ‘Ackldg<sup>d</sup> Jan. 16’.

2. We have not been able to trace this letter, probably dating from 10 January (see [2251] to A. P. Watt of that date).

3. Referring to the serial version of “I Say No”. On the question of whether English printers might have supplied copy to American pirates, see [2251] and [2252] to A. P. Watt of 10 and 12 January 1884.

4. The piracy in question was in a Philadelphia newspaper – see [2260] to Harper & Brothers of 22 January 1884.

[2255] TO A. P. WATT, 16 JANUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 7–8.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 16th January 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

Here is the “order”. Perhaps they will offer a bill at six months next? or make a mistake and pay less than £333..6..8?<sup>1</sup> If this matter is not settled at once, and settled properly – You shall have no more trouble. My lawyers shall make these brutes behave, for once in their lives, like gentlemen. No sign of the proofs yet. Shall I write them a letter insisting on having my proofs with oaths and foul language? I believe it would have the right effect. I have been hitherto fool enough to treat them like gentlemen.

Ever yours | WC

I enclose a copy of the letter sent by last night’s post to Mr Phayre<sup>2</sup>

---

1. As Watt’s letters to WC of 7 and 15 January 1884 make clear (Berg), Kelly & Co. were not only slow in making payment to Watt as WC’s agent, but also insisted on having written authorization from WC before doing so. The sum represents the first third of the sum of £1,000 Kelly’s contracted to pay for the right of serial publication of “I Say No” (see also [2290] to Watt of 3 April 1884; Peters, p. 404, and Law, p. 260 n. 20, both give the figure incorrectly as £900). Although Watt conducted the negotiations with the British newspapers also carrying the serial, their payments must have been made to Kelly’s, who purchased entire serial rights (see [2226] to Kelly & Co. of 15 December 1883). In other words, Watt was here acting as agent for both WC and Kelly’s.

2. Bound into the volume at Pembroke preceding this letter is a copy of the letter to Harper’s London agent J. F. Phayre, dated 15 January 1884.

[2256] TO A. P. WATT, 17 JANUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 8–9.

17th Jan<sup>y</sup> 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

It is barely possible – but not likely that your clerk may have made some mistake in forwarding the imperfect morsel of a proof. If no mistake has been made in your office please post the enclosed letter after you have read it – and you will understand that I am not angry with the Kellys without good reason.<sup>2</sup>

I return the Dft at 10 days – payable to the order of Kelly & Co. Why should you have the trouble of passing this money through your bank which these brutes have not earned?<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

I suppose you will acknowledge receipt to Harper’s agent?

I beg you will not hesitate to send the letter to the Kellys – if, as I assume, your clerk is not to blame. When you can spare ten minutes let us consult as to asking one of the newspapers to print for me – on payment for the extra trouble. I really cannot go on with the Kellys.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. The letter seems to have been scribbled in extreme haste and perhaps anger.

2. In Watt’s letter to WC of 17 January 1884, in acknowledgment of receipt of the cheque for his commission, Watt mentions the incompleteness of the proofs provided and criticizes the general incompetence of Kelly & Co. WC’s enclosed letter to Kelly’s is not bound in at Pembroke, and has not been traced – it seems likely that it was never sent.

3. Watt’s letter to WC also enclosed a bank draft from J. F. Phayre, the London agent of Harper’s, in payment of the first third of the £200 paid for the right to publish “I Say No” in America. Since Kelly’s had purchased entire serial rights to the story, this payment was in fact due to them. Watt asked WC to endorse the draft so that he could process it through his own bank account, but WC endorses it to Kelly’s themselves. He intends to save his agent trouble, and seems unaware that Watt is also receiving commission from Kelly’s for his work on their behalf.

4. In annoyance WC now contemplates taking the printing of the sets of proofs of “I Say No” out of the hands of Kelly’s printers and requesting one of the provincial newspapers to perform the task. As subsequent letters show, this did not in fact occur. On 19 January Watt wrote again to WC to placate him, assuring him that Kelly’s would be sending him two more sets of proofs.

[2257] TO A. P. WATT, 17 JANUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 9.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th January 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

I was sorry to miss you when you kindly called this afternoon – the messenger of good news as usual.

“Enclosed please find” (as they say in the commercial circles) my cheque for the commission,<sup>1</sup> and believe me, Ever yours

Wilkie Collins

A. P. Watt Esq.

---

1. Watt had presumably brought round the cheque from Kelly & Co. for £333-6s-8d, of which 10%, or £33-6s-8d, was due to Watt as commission. On the same day, the sum was credited to WC’s bank account and the commission duly debited. The second payment of £300 net was credited on 3 April (see [2290] to Watt of that date) and the third on 28 June (Coutts: WC).

[2258] TO FRED CHARLES,<sup>1</sup> 18 JANUARY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 9–10.

90. Gloucester Place, | Portman | Square. W. | 18th January 1884

Dear Mr Charles,

Can you send me a ticket for a Private Box, for Tuesday evening next (the 22nd) – for Miss Hogarth (the late Charles Dickens’s sister-in-law)?

I am glad to see that a matinée is going to be tried. I suppose there is good reason for suddenly abridging the advertisements over the clock, at such an early period of the revival, and with a theatre only now beginning to be known to the public?

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Described in the programme as ‘Acting Manager (for Miss Cavendish)’ at the Novelty Theatre, Great Queen Street, where The New Magdalen was revived from 5 January 1884.

[2259] TO FRED CHARLES, 20 JANUARY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 10.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th Janry

Dear Mr Charles

Many thanks for the box tickets.<sup>1</sup> I shall be glad to see you either Monday or Tuesday morning – whichever may be most convenient.

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. For the Novelty Theatre – see [2258] to Charles of 18 January 1884.

[2260] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 22 JANUARY 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 285–286; BGLL, IV, pp. 10–11.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 22nd January 1884

Dear Sirs,

Before you receive these lines, Mr Watt's acknowledgment of the receipt of the remittance which you have kindly sent will no doubt have reached you. I follow with thanks, on my own behalf.

Mr Phayre has perhaps mentioned the letter that I wrote to him – after receiving a specimen of the bare-faced robbery committed by the Philadelphia newspaper. After due inquiry I cannot find that there has been any fraudulent use made of our proofs here. While the United States Congress tacitly encourages literary theft, what hope is there for honest men? Why is the average newspaper-proprietor to be honest, when his own government does'nt set him the example by establishing international copyright? Your authors are not interested in the question. By publishing first in England, they secure their copyright. I see no hope of a change for the better – unless another man as honourable and as high-minded as Garfield is elected President. That chance will not happen, I fear, in my time.<sup>1</sup> In the meanwhile, I have an idea of “circumventing” the thieves, when you are ready to republish “I Say No” in book-form. I have just finished the 12th weekly part (out of 26 parts). If my health allows me to continue this advance, why should I not send you the concluding chapters of the story, in MS, as fast as they are written – and so give you something like a fair start?<sup>2</sup>

Believe me, dear Sirs, | Truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. James Garfield's brief presidency in 1881 was ended by an assassin's bullet. The Chace Act, granting some copyright protection in the United States to foreign authors, was eventually passed in 1891 during the presidency of Benjamin Harrison, two years after WC's death.

2. Running up the right-hand margin alongside this paragraph is a pencil annotation in an unidentified hand: 'Bully! W. Conant acknowledge'. “I Say No” was in fact published by Harper's in a single volume on 4 July 1884, three months before its appearance in Britain in October in three volumes from Chatto & Windus.

[2261] TO A. P. WATT, 22 JANUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 11–12.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
22nd January 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

Let me thank you for the cheque<sup>1</sup> – which arrived yesterday evening – and let me ask you to accept the disreputable-looking MS, to which your kindness attaches some value.<sup>2</sup>

Mingling business with pleasure, I enclose the List of Weekly parts of “I Say No” – for your next batch of Revises.<sup>3</sup> The corrected proof was sent to Kelly & Co by last night's post. There are so many changes this time, that I have directed the printers to send me duplicate Revises, and to wait until they receive a corrected revise from me, before they send you the nine “pulls” for the newspapers. In this way we shall, I hope, avoid press errors – or errors of my committing.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. As Watt's letter to WC of 21 January 1884 makes clear (Berg), this was a cheque from Chatto & Windus for £20 as payment for ‘She Loves and Lies’, published in Belgravia. No credit for this amount is recorded at this time, though there is a payment for £200 on ‘Chatto & Windus Note’ (see [2145] to Chatto, 20 April 1883). It is possible WC cashed the cheque or it was included with other credits, such as in the one for £23-17s-9d recorded on this date (Coutts: WC).

2. Of ‘She Loves and Lies’, a short story originally published in New York in the Spirit of the Times, 22 December 1883, and reprinted in Little Novels (1887) as ‘Mr Lismore and the Widow’ (see Gasson, p. 139). The note accompanying the MS survives in private hands and reads:

To my friend, | A. P. Watt:
This manuscript of one of my short stories | is presented, in

Sincere acknowledgement of his faithful devotion | To my literary interests
Wilkie Collins | 22nd January 1884

3. The following memorandum on a sheet of lined paper is bound in following the letter at Pembroke:

For Mr Watt)

21st January 1884

“I Say No”

List of Weekly Parts: contained in the Fourth Monthly part.

|                                                                                                                                                       |             |                                                                                 |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Chapter XVIII and XIX also part of Chapter XX –ending, on Slip 48, with this paragraph: “What doyou think of the Reverend Miles Mirabel now?” | }}} | 9 th Weekly Part(Published 9 th Feb <sup>y</sup> )    |
| Chapter XX ( continued ) andChapters XXI and XXII                                                                                          | }}      | 10 th Weekly Part(published 16 th Feb <sup>y</sup> )  |
| Chapter XXIII.                                                                                                                                        |             | 11 th Weekly Part.(published 23 rd Feb <sup>y</sup> ) |

[2262] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 28 JANUARY 1884

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/47). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 12–13.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 28 January 1884

Here I am again, dear Sebastian. No “Minstrel Boy” has appeared – up to this date. Either the Songs have been lost or stolen on their way here – or you have trusted to some person to despatch them by book post – who has forgotten to do so. The only way is to try again.<sup>1</sup>

I suppose you know the original Irish melody to which Moore adapted his words. Excepting “God Save the Queen” it is the most widely known “tune” in Great Britain. Anybody who can hum anything – knows the “Minstrel Boy.” Here is serious established competition against you. All the more need for me to “do my damndest” – on which you know you can depend.

Ever yours WC

This morning comes a letter from Boston – acknowledging receipt of my insurance notification (requesting the usual payment of my premiums) – and telling me that the Policies will be sent to “Messrs Naylor & Co New York”. So now my restless mind is at ease.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Sebastian Schlesinger was to become an accomplished composer of song melodies – thirty of his collections published between 1885 and 1905 appear in the BL Catalogue. The specific collection referred to here has not been identified, though Schlesinger published song collections in 1882, 1883 and 1884.

2. See [1660] to Schlesinger, 30 December 1876.

[2263] TO A. P. WATT, 30 JANUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, pp. 465–466. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 13.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30 Jan'y 1884.

Dear Mr Watt,

Many thanks for your note. I hope to send the next instalment of copy in a week's time.<sup>1</sup>

I returned the Trollope autobiography – thinking you might wish perhaps to lend it to other friends.<sup>2</sup> I am not worthy of the book – for I could not read it through. The first part I thought very interesting – but when he sits in judgment on his own novels and on other peoples' novels he tells me what I don't want to know, and I bid him goodbye half way through the journey.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Watt had written to WC on 28 January to say that he had received and sent out to Kelly's instalments 9–11 of the serial version of "I Say No" (Berg).
  2. In Watt's letter to WC of 28 January he had suggested that Trollope's autobiography, of which receipt was acknowledged in [2263] of 11 November 1883, had been intended as a gift rather than a loan (Berg).

[2264] TO A. P. WATT, 7 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 13–14.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th Feby 1884

"I Say No"

Dear Mr Watt,

I send to you by this post – registered – a supply of copy containing the larger half of the Fifth Monthly Part. If it can be set up at once, it will be a great convenience to me – and while the printers are at work, I will finish the "Part" and send it to you after this first instalment. The present part of the story has cost me some trouble – and I am "dying" to see it in print!

Ever yours | WC

One line please to say you have received the MSS safely.

[2265] TO A. P. WATT, 7 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 14.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th Feby 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

I send, under another cover, the conclusion of copy for the 5th Monthly Part. The chapter which I had thought of adding must begin the 6th monthly part.<sup>1</sup>

Many thanks for your letter. One line more to acknowledge safe receipt of slips 125 to 129 – and I shall be happy!

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Of the serial version of "I Say No".

[2266] TO FRANK ARCHER, 8 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Archer, p. 252; BGLL, IV, pp. 14–15, amended A&C7, pp. 22–23.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

8th Feby 1884

My dear Archer,

A word to tell you that no one among your audience on Tuesday night admired your performance of "Julian Gray" more sincerely than I did.<sup>3</sup> Excepting, here and there, a little tendency to hurry in the delivery of the words, your acting was the acting of a true artist throughout – admirable in its quiet dignity and reticence, in its complete freedom from stage-artifices, and in its easy faithful and subtle presentation of the character. I watched the audience narrowly from time to time, and I always saw the same strong impression produced on them – a far more valuable tribute than conventional clapping of hands. That recognition you received at the right time – viz: – when you were called. I had hoped to say this instead of writing it. But I am so busy just now that I can only get away from my desk in the evening.

Always most truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Frank Archer Egre<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'Frank Archer Egr | 21. Baker Street | Portman Square W.', postmarked recto 'LONDON W | 2 | FE 8 | 84', with '19' in another hand in pencil on the recto. WC again initially writes the house number as '12' but corrects it to '21'.
2. With address ranged right and WC's monogram ranged left.
3. On Tuesday 5 February WC saw the revival of The New Magdalen at the Novelty Theatre, Great Queen Street, which he had not been able to attend on its opening night, 5 January, due to illness (see [2250] to Archer, 8 January 1884). Archer played Julian Gray, with Ada Cavendish in her role as Mercy Merrick. On 14 February the Prince and Princess of Wales attended, with the Prince (later Edward VII) coming on stage to congratulate Ada Cavendish and say 'gracious things' to Archer (Archer 1912, p. 252).
4. On the first page of his diary for January 1884 Archer wrote (Archer Archive):

Notes on "New Magdalen"

Collins takes £25 pr week

Salary list at Novelty £75 pr week

Should do £250 pr week at least – i.e. £35 pr night

Miss Cavendish did not lose[,] Charles told me, but made about £10 (pr week?) for her services.

Charles thought Miss Harris lost between 4 and 500£

Rent of Novelty put down by Miss Harris at £3000

Miss Nelly Harris was the 'Sole Proprietress' of the Novelty theatre. At £25 per week, the run of nine weeks and a day (55 performances) would have brought WC £229. No identifiable sums from this play are found in WC's bank account at Coutts.

[2267] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 9 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 15.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
9th Feby 1884

My dear Sir,

Kindly send me a translation of the enclosed letter, just received from Berlin.

Faithfully yours | WC

[2268] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 12 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 287; BGLL, IV, p. 15.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
12th Feby 1884

Dear Sirs,

Publish my letter in your circular by all means.<sup>1</sup> It expressed my sincere opinion, and I hope it may help you to make your excellent sherry more widely known even than it is now.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Beecheno & Co

---

1. The letter in which WC praises the firm's Ribera Sherry may have been lost – unless the reference is to the final sentence of [2235] to Beecheno, Yaxley & Co. of 27 December 1883.

[2269] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 12 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 15–16.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 12th February 1884

Dear Sir,

I well remember the occasion on which I had the pleasure of meeting you – now saddened in remembrance by the death of my dear old friend.<sup>2</sup>

It is needless to add that I contribute to your collection of autographs with great pleasure.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | [erased] Eqre

---

1. The name of the addressee has been carefully removed with some form of eraser, leaving virtually no trace.

2. Unidentified.

[2270] TO A. P. WATT, 12 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 16.

90. G. P. | 12th Feby 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

The corrected proof goes to the Printers tomorrow morning – and you will have your Revises I hope in a day or two. For the future, I shall adopt your kind suggestion – and ask to have the weekly parts set up in proof as fast as they are written. It will save time in sending them to Mr Phayre.<sup>1</sup> division into Weekly Parts of the Fifth Monthly part.

Always truly yours | WC

“I Say No”

==

12th Weekly Part: Chapters XXIV | and | XXV

13th Weekly Part: Chapters XXVI | and | XXVII

---

1. J. F. Phayre, Harper’s London agent.

[2271] TO A. P. WATT, 18 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 16–17.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th Feby 1884

“I Say No”

Dear Mr Watt,

By this morning’s registered book post, I send to you, copy for another weekly part. If the Kellys will begin setting this up, I hope to have another weekly part ready in two days more – so that the two parts can be sent in triplicate proof. Excuse my troubling you again with mss so soon. I have arrived at a critical part of the story – and I am anxious to get into print as fast as I can.

Ever yours | WC

[2272] TO BELINFANTE BROTHERS,<sup>1</sup> 18 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: BNF (Nouv. Acq. Fr. 15552, ff. 112–113). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 17.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 18th February 1884

“I Say No”

Dear Sirs,

The whole novel will be of about the same length as my last work “Heart and Science”, and the other works which have preceded it.

The periodical publication here is in two forms – viz: – in a monthly Magazine, and in several weekly newspapers.<sup>2</sup> The Magazine publication will continue until the end of the present year. The newspaper publication, being at intervals of only a week, will be at an end in June or July next. The republication in book form will take place six weeks before the appearance of the last monthly part in the Magazine.

All this depends on my life! I have, at the present time of writing, barely finished one half of the work. If the Utrecht publishers do not like to run this risk (like the other publishers at home and abroad) they may have to wait another three months before they can begin.<sup>3</sup> It may take me as long as that to finish the work.

In the meanwhile, I send to you – by today’s registered book post – another revised proof, in continuation, containing chapters XXIV, XXV, XXVI, and XXVII.

Believe me dear Sirs | faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs | Belinfante Brothers

---

1. Publishers of The Hague, who had tried to serialize a Dutch translation of Man and Wife without authorization or payment back in 1869 (see [0925] and [0928] to them of 10, 18 November 1869), but had been forced to capitulate. They then became WC’s authorized publishers in the Netherlands, a position which they retained virtually to the end of the author’s life. See Payn & Collins 2004, pp. 1–8.

2. See Law, pp. 238–239.

3. Unidentified, but possibly the publishers of the nine novels by WC in Dutch translation in fourteen volumes (Gravenhage, 1877–86), found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 94).

[2273] TO FREDERICK KERR,<sup>1</sup> 21 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 18.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st February 1884

My dear Sir,

If any opportunity of forwarding your interests offers itself, you may depend on my taking advantage of it.

Your performance of “Wetzel” in “The New Magdalen” is in every respect excellent – true to Nature – subtle in “by-play” – and thoroughly artist-like in its freedom from mere stage-artifice, and its delicate sense of the value of restraint in the right place. I shall watch your progress in the future with sincere interest.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Frederick Kerr Esqre

---

1. Frederick Kerr (1858–1933), up-and-coming actor then appearing as Ignatius Wetzel, the German doctor, in The New Magdalen at the Novelty Theatre.

[2274] TO GEORGE F. ROWE,<sup>1</sup> 21 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 288; BGLL, IV, pp. 18–19.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st February 1884

Dear Mr Rowe,

I am sorry to hear of the reason which has prevented me from having the pleasure of seeing you. A walk – a perspiration – five minutes in a warm bath – fierce rubbing on coming out – are the preventive remedies which succeed best, in my case.<sup>2</sup> My health has certainly improved of late – and I was sixty years old on the 8th of last January! Here is encouragement for you, surely? Let me hope to hear a better report next time.

The newspaper slips are returned with many thanks. Just as I had done reading them a letter arrived from Winter himself – interesting and delightful like all his letters.<sup>3</sup> He tells me that he begged you to send the slips. I sincerely rejoice in Irving’s success.<sup>4</sup> Personally as well as professionally he has a special place in my estimation

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George F. Rowe Esqre

---

1. Actor, manager and playwright, who had appeared alongside WC in Used Up in 1852 – see [1019], WC’s first surviving letter to him, of 22 August 1870.

2. Presumably Rowe also suffered from gout.

3. William Winter, drama critic of the New York Tribune. No reply of around this period from WC to Winter has survived. The newspaper articles in question might include ‘Henry Irving in Brooklyn’, New York Daily Tribune (1 January 1884), pp. 4–5, concerning the actor’s performance in Louis XI at Haverly’s Theatre.

4. Henry Irving and his Lyceum Company, including Ellen Terry, were then in the middle of a triumphant six-month tour of North America – see the report on their return in the Times of 9 May 1884, p. 9f.

[2275] TO A. P. WATT, 21 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 19.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st Feby 1884

“I Say No”

Dear Mr Watt,

Will you kindly ask the Kellys to let me have me have the copy now in their hands to be set up, in triplicate proof, as soon as they can.

I cannot be sure of the end of the weekly part on which I am now at work, until I have written the weekly part which is to follow it – so to save time I will send to America as much as may be now set up – Viz: one weekly part.

Ever yours | WC

[2276] TO A. P. WATT, 25 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 19.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 25th Feby 1884 | Monday.

Dear Mr Watt,

Under another cover, I send to you copy for the 15th weekly part (Chapters XXX and XXXI).<sup>1</sup> The proofs will easily reach me, I hope, not later than Friday next.

This morning also, I send to Mr Skerry the proofs of chapters 28 and 29 (which reached me last week) corrected for Press – with instructions to send to you the usual Press-Revises.

Ever yours | WC

Chapters XXVIII and XXIX comprise the 14th Weekly Part<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Of the serial version of “I Say No”.

2. On the back of the sheet there are scribbled annotations in Watt’s hand which probably read ‘Weekly 12 + 13 | (Chap 27) | ~~Check~~ | 9 sets to follow | Kelly’.

[3011] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 26 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis Website; A&C2, p. 66.

With Mr Wilkie Collins’s compliments

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 26th February 1884

1. Comprising a rectangle of heavy wove paper of visiting card size (bearing the dated autograph itself), which is glued to a slightly larger rectangle of lighter laid paper (on which the accompanying compliments appear in WC's very small hand).

[2277] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 26 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 20.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 26th Feby 1884

My dear Sir,

I have to thank you for the last translation, and to beg you to help me again, by making a German letter of the enclosed.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me | vy truly yours | WC
Alberic Iserbyt Esqr

-
1. Initialled and directed to 'Alberic Iserbyt Esqr | 6. Holyoake Road | Newington Butts | S.E.', postmarked as dated.
2. Enclosure not found with WC's letter.

[2278] TO CARRIE BARTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 29 FEBRUARY 1884

MS: Northumberland (SANT/BEQ/4/pp162c). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 20.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Friday 29 Feb

(In great haste)

My dearest Carrie

Here is a card for you to present tomorrow.<sup>2</sup> There is no time for me to get an answer from Mr Charles,<sup>3</sup> to whom I have written. But if Box D is engaged he will do his next best for you.

Ever affly | WC

-
1. See [2181] to her of 11 July [1883].
2. For the revival of The New Magdalen at the Novelty Theatre from 5 January 1884. See also Parrish & Miller, p. 159.
3. Fred Charles, 'Acting Manager (for Miss Cavendish)' – see [2258] and [2259] to him of 18 and 20 January 1884.

[2279] TO A. P. WATT, 3 MARCH 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 21.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd March 1884

"I Say No"

Dear Mr Watt,

Under another cover I send to you copy for the 16th Weekly Part (chapters XXXII and XXXIII). I have forgotten to attach a note to the MS, asking for proofs in Triplicate not later than Friday next. Will you kindly add a line to that effect on the envelope?

Always truly yours | WC

[2987] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 4 MARCH 1884

MS: Houghton (MS Am 1603.3: Album IV).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV Addenda, p. 404.

Wilkie Collins | 4th March 1884

---

1. On a rectangular piece of card in the autograph collection of B. A. G. Fuller.

[2280] TO FRANK ARCHER, 6 MARCH 1884

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive).<sup>1</sup> Published: Archer, p. 253;<sup>2</sup> BGLL, IV, p. 21, amended A&C7, p. 23.

6th March 1884

My Dear Archer

Here is a copy of “The Woman In White” play – sent with the greatest pleasure.<sup>2</sup> As a reader, you will get a better idea of the piece if I send to you (as I do) a copy without the stage alterations. I mean to alter further (before the piece is played again) in the way of simplifying the story if possible. The great fault of the work at present is the intricacy of the story.

The one thing to remember, with justifiable pride – in the matter of the “Magdalen” – is that we have set an example in the art of the stage, which has produced a strong impression – and which was very much wanted at this time.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The letter is without an envelope and has a hand-written pencil number ‘20’ on the verso.
2. Archer introduces the letter: ‘I had never seen the dramatised version of “The Woman in White”, and I asked Collins to let me read it.’
3. ‘Published by the author’ in 1871 (Gasson, pp. 161–162), the play itself is not found in the Archer Archive.

[3349] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 7 MARCH 1884

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C12 p. 9.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 7th March 1884

---

1. Autograph for a collector. Stuck to another card on which has been written in another hand: ‘Wilkie Collins d.1889 | Author of “The woman in white” &c’.

[2281] TO A. P. WATT, 10 MARCH 1884<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 21–22.

90. G.P. | 10th March

Dear Mr Watt,

I send under another cover some more copy – wanting two or three pages for the conclusion, which will be sent tomorrow.<sup>2</sup> I have mentioned this in a note attached to the MS. – so that you may only have the trouble of sending to Kelly the envelope containing the copy – which will I hope reach you safely.

You have I trust completely recovered from your cold. I have nothing to complain of but being a little fagged with my work.

Always truly yours | WC

---

1. Dating from the reference to Kelly.
2. Of the seventeenth weekly instalment of “I Say No”.

[3255] TO MARY ANDERSON,<sup>1</sup> 13 MARCH 1884

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 17.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th March 1884

Dear Miss Anderson,

I believe devoutly in Fairy Tales. You are evidently the “Good Genius” of whom I have so often read. If you refer to Fairy Literature, you will find that nothing is too great and nothing is too little for the Good Genius. She has all London, for instance, at her feet, she has conquered the men (which is comparatively easy), and conquered the women, and received the expression of their admiration for hundreds of nights together – and yet she can kindly remember one old person who sits at an old desk telling stories. She reserves a delightful evening for him in her palace (called the Lyceum) – and, having thus fed him with hope, she completes the sum of his obligations to her by feeding him with Cake. How is he to thank her? He does’nt know how – and he trusts to her indulgence to take the will for the deed.

But on the mere mortal subject of Cake, I can speak. Years of profound study – ranging from the indigestibly elaborate and rich pudding-cake, eaten by the German Jews at religious festivals,<sup>2</sup> to the detestable English compound (price sixpence) called “Seed Cake” – have qualified me to offer a positive opinion. I describe the “Angel” variety as representing the poetry of cakes – a delicate and subtle work of art, which I hope to speak of further when I have the pleasure of calling again at Cromwell Houses.<sup>3</sup>

In the meantime, believe me, dear Miss Anderson,
Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The American actress Mary Anderson (1859–1940), born Marie Antoinette Henry, famed for her beauty. She made her debut in Kentucky in 1875, and appeared at the London Lyceum for three seasons in the mid-1880s, becoming as popular in Britain as in the USA. Mary Anderson met WC during her first London season and remained a close friend for the rest of his life. She retired early from the stage following her marriage in 1890 to Antonio de Navarro (1860–1932), a wealthy American of Basque extraction and graduate in law at Columbia College. She later became a renowned hostess at their home in Broadway, Worcestershire.

2. The German Jewish cake could be Kugel, similar to a casserole or pudding and having its origins in the south of Germany, or perhaps Götterspeise served at festive occasions.

3. Referring to Anderson’s residence in the Cromwell Road, South Kensington, which WC later refers to as ‘Cromwell House’ – see [2803] to her of 20 January 1888.

[2282] TO J. F. HAMILTON,<sup>1</sup> 13 MARCH 1884

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 22.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th March 1884

Dear Mr Hamilton,

I trouble you with a little German document called “Check”, which is to pay to my order £28..14..1, by means of an Anglo-foreign banking company. When “Check” is honoured kindly pay the money to my account, and believe me,<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

J.F. Hamilton Esq

---

1. Employee of Coutts’s bank – see [2207] to him of 22 October 1883.

2. The sum was credited that day to WC’s bank account as ‘By recd’ (Coutts: WC).

[2283] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 13 MARCH 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 22.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th March 1884

My dear Sir,

Another German letter is enclosed – to be translated into English, please, as usual.

I am glad to hear that you enjoyed your night at the play.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Albéric Iserbyt Esqr

---

1. Directed to ‘Albéric Iserbyt Esqr | 6. Holyoake Road | Newington Butts | S.E.’, postmarked as dated.

2. Presumably WC had sent Iserbyt complimentary tickets to the revival of The New Magdalen, then playing at the Novelty Theatre.

[2284] TO TRÜBNER & CO., 13 MARCH 1884

MS: Stanford. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 23.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th March 1884

Dear Sir,

Among your literary importations from the United States are you likely to have,

“The Voyage of the Jeannette. Ship and Ice Journals of George de Long.”?

(Published by Houghton Mifflin & Co of Boston).<sup>1</sup>

I want to buy the book – and I don’t know where to get it in England.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Trubner & Co

---

1. Diary of the fatal 1879 expedition of the American arctic explorer, George Washington de Long (1844–81), edited by his widow and published in two volumes in 1883. Not listed as in WC’s library at his death (Baker).

[3256] TO MARY ANDERSON, 15 MARCH 1884

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 18.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Saturday March 15th

Dear Miss Anderson,

I gratefully accept the card of admission to your box – for Wednesday next.

I wish I could say the same for Monday. Excepting Wednesday, every night next week must be devoted to protecting my literary property. Information reaches me that the wretches who live by stealing other peoples’ ideas are only waiting to see how the story of a novel which I am now publishing serially, will end, to turn it into a play.<sup>1</sup> I must turn it into a play first, and have the play acted – or be robbed.<sup>2</sup> Since I have received your kind note, my rage is terrible and my expressions correspond. I am not fit for Angel cake. I am only worthy of D—I’s Cake. Oh forgive me!

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to “I Say No” being serialised in several provincial newspapers, including the Glasgow Herald, from 15 December 1883 to 12 July 1884.

2. No dramatic version of “I Say No” has been identified.

[2285] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 15 MARCH 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 23.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th March 1884

My dear Sir,

Many thanks for the translation. My answer to the letter is enclosed. Please dispatch the translation at your early convenience and believe me

Faithfully yours | WC

---

1. Initialled and directed to 'Albéric Iserby Esqr | 6. Holyoake Road | Newington Butts | S.E.', postmarked as dated.

[2286] TO A. P. WATT, 17 MARCH 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 23–24.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th March 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

I send you the first 8 slips (172–179) of the 18th Weekly part.<sup>1</sup> The conclusion (in 2 or 3 slips more) shall follow tomorrow morning. The relaxing weather has made me slow over my work. Saturday completely beat me. I drove out, and made calls like an independent gentleman!

Any day this week (except tomorrow) I shall be here, and delighted to see you – but only on condition that you really have time to spare. If not, next week.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Of the serial version of "I Say No".

[2292] TO MARY ANDERSON, 20 MARCH 1884

MS: Navarro. Published: Anderson, pp. 151–152 (undated); BGLL, IV, pp. 27–28 (dated 6 April 1884), amended A&C9, pp. 18–19 (with MS located).

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th March 1884

Dear Miss Anderson,

I resist the temptation to call to-day – because I dare not interfere with the hours of rest, which must be especially precious to you, I am sure, after the strain laid on you by the exertions of last night.<sup>1</sup> Let me try to express my gratitude, and the gratitude of the ladies who were with me, on a later afternoon. Only let me have (literally) two lines. One line to say – I hope and trust – that you have had a good night, and are feeling better to-day; and one line to choose your own afternoon at 4 o'clock (or later, if it will be more convenient) for letting me call and make the attempt to tell you of the strong impression that your acting produced on me. I will only say now that the subtlety and delicacy, the perfect grace and feeling, of the Galatea did not in the least prepare me for the magnificent bursts of passion and power in the second character.<sup>2</sup> If I had been dropped suddenly into the box at the moment when you hear the cry in the garden, and had been taken out of it again a minute afterwards, I should have said to myself, I have seen a born artist. Perhaps the best criticism I can offer will be to report that (during the last half of the piece) my hands were as cold as ice, and my heart thumped as if it would fly out of me. With more thanks than I can express,

Always truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

The 5th of April is registered as a "Festival" in my calendar<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Anderson played the female title role of W. S. Gilbert's Pygmalion and Galatea (written especially for her) and also Clarisse in his one-act piece Comedy and Tragedy. WC writes on Thursday after seeing the performance from her box the night before.

2. WC refers to Clarisse.

3. The double bill opened at the Lyceum Theatre on 26 January 1884 and closed on Saturday 5 April 1884. As the Lyceum announcements in the Times make clear (5 April 1884, p. 10e), the final performance took place although most theatres were dark as a mark of respect for the Duke of Albany, whose funeral took place on that day. WC's postscript is taken to mean that it is her last performance with perhaps an ironic reference to the funeral of the Duke.

[2287] TO CHARLES KENT, 26 MARCH 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 24.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

26th March 1884

My dear Kent,

I am indeed sorry not to have been able to see you this afternoon. You will understand why – when I tell you that I was engaged in trying to “arbitrate” between a husband and wife – and to prevent “the case” from being taken into Court.<sup>2</sup>

Can you come tomorrow afternoon (Thursday) at 3? I have an appointment at 4. Or failing Thursday, can you come on Friday at the same hour? I am again obliged to go out on Friday – and my morning's are claimed by my work. Don't trouble to write if Thursday will do. But one line to me if Friday is preferred.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. It is not clear whose marital difficulties WC refers to.

[2288] TO A. P. WATT, 28 MARCH 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 24–25.

Friday 28th March | 10.P.M.

Dear Mr Watt,

Here is the “authority”. I ought to have remembered it – but I have now “made a memorandum”, and kept a Dft of the document for next time.<sup>1</sup>

I will, with the greatest pleasure, answer any inquiries that my good friends the Tauchnitzes – father and son – may address to me.<sup>2</sup>

The triplicate proofs of chapters XXXVIII and XXXIX have not been sent to me.<sup>3</sup> I am ashamed to give you the trouble – but can you send to these wretches on receipt of my letter and say that I must have the proofs, tomorrow (Saturday) morning, to correct for that day's American mail. If we live to get rid of the Kellys and Skerrys, we will celebrate that happy day, here, with a bottle of champagne!

Ever yours | WC

---

1. As Watt's letter to WC of 28 March 1884 makes clear (Berg), this was the authorization for Kelly & Co. to pay the second instalment of the payment for the serial rights to “I Say No” to Watt as WC's agent.

2. Watt's letter had asked permission to give WC's name as a reference in his application to Baron Tauchnitz to act as agent in London for the Leipzig publishers.

3. Of “I Say No”.

[2289] TO A. P. WATT, 1 APRIL 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 25.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st April 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

A word to thank you for your kind letter. The proofs arrived on Saturday – only in time for me to send one pull corrected, direct to Harper instead of through Mr Phayre. The delay in the delivery of my letter must be due to the Post Office. My servants “letter-book” shows that the letter was posted at the right time.<sup>1</sup>

I won’t forget to give the artist his subject in good time – but I leave the choice of him to Mr Longman – with many thanks.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. On Monday 31 March, Watt had written that WC’s letter of Friday evening, 28 March, had only arrived that morning. He also stated that Kelly’s had sent the required proofs of “I Say No” on the previous Saturday morning (Berg).

2. Referring to the illustration to WC’s story, eventually entitled ‘Royal Love’, scheduled for publication in Longman’s Magazine at Christmas 1884. In his letter of 31 March Watt had requested a subject and inquired whether WC had a ‘favourite’ artist whom he would like to undertake the work.

[3257] TO MARY ANDERSON, 3 APRIL 1884

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 19.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd April 1884

Only a word, dear Miss Anderson, to say that the pretty little box came to tell me of your kindness yesterday, at the best of all possible times – when I was dull and depressed after a long day’s work. I thought of that good fellow and his beautiful nosegay when I sent you my book yesterday – and I say, in his words, “Will you please, Miss, to accept my story?”

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[2290] TO A. P. WATT, 3 APRIL 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 25–26.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd April 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your cheque for £300.- ..- being the second instalment of the purchase-money paid by Messrs Kelly & Co for the right of publishing serially “I Say No” – less your commission of ten per cent.<sup>1</sup>

I opened the Times this morning at the report of the fire. It was a relief to see no sort of reference made to “34”, among the neighbouring buildings which had suffered.<sup>2</sup> When they rebuild let them follow the example of the wise man who had his doors made of iron.<sup>3</sup>

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

A. P. Watt Esq.

---

1. The sum was £333-6s-8d before the deduction of commission. Watt had sent the cheque with his letter of 2 April (Berg) and it was credited to WC’s bank account on 3 April, while the third instalment of £300 net was credited on 28 June (Coutts: WC). See also [2257] to Watt, 17 January 1884, concerning the first instalment.

2. Watt’s offices were then located at 34 Paternoster Row. According to the newspaper report mentioned by WC (‘Fire in the City’, Times, 3 April 1884, p. 9), the fire began at 7.30 the previous evening in the ‘basement of Messrs Pardon and Sons’ printing office, Lowell-court, Paternoster-row’, but did not spread widely owing to the absence of wind and the prompt action of, among others, the staff in the Religious Tract Society’s warehouse across the road.

3. Allusion untraced; perhaps the ‘wise man’ is simply Watt himself.

[2291] TO EDMUND YATES, 3 APRIL 1884

MS: Kentucky (63m14 no.147). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 26–27.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd April 1884

My dear Edmund,

At such a time as this, I am not sure that it is a very considerate proceeding to trouble you with letters. Let me only say that your old friend remembers old times just now with more than customary tenderness. I have read the law report in this morning's newspaper with sincere sympathy and sorrow.<sup>1</sup>

Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

Edmund Yates Esqr

---

1. As reported in, for example, the Times (3 April 1884, p. 3a–d), the previous day at the Court of the Queen's Bench saw the judgement in the criminal libel suit of the Earl of Lonsdale against Yates, on account of the following statement appearing in his weekly Society paper the World on 17 January 1883:

A strange story is in circulation in certain sporting circles concerning the elopement of a young lady of very high rank and noble birth with a young peer, whose marriage was one of affection, but whose wife has unfortunately fallen into a delicate state of health. The elopement is said to have taken place from the hunting field. The young lady, who is only one or two and twenty, is a very fair rider and the gentleman is a master of hounds.

Yates stated that he was not the author of the statement, had not seen it until it appeared in proof, and had no idea that it might be taken to refer to the Earl of Lonsdale. The prosecution, on the other hand, made much of the fact that Yates had published the statement though he could not say to whom it did apply or indeed whether it applied to anyone. Thus Yates was convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for four months, though there was a stay of execution for technical reasons. In the event Yates was incarcerated in Holloway Jail for seven weeks from January 1885. See [2406] of 10 March 1885 to Yates on his release.

[2293] TO A. P. WATT, 7 APRIL 1884<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 466. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 28.

7th April

Dear Mr Watt,

Here is the copy for this week's number complete. I have attached a note /to the MS/ asking for my proofs not later than Friday next. The last week's proofs came in excellent time. I write in wretchedly bad spirits. My dear old friend Charles Reade was dying when I heard of him yesterday. We had known each other for thirty years.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Dating from the reference to Reade.

2. Reade died on 11 April 1884 – WC implies they first met around 1854 but his first extant letter to Reade is [0421] of 4 June 1861.

[3258] TO MRS ROBINSON,<sup>1</sup> 8 APRIL 1884

MS: Private. Published: A&C9, p. 31.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th April 1884

Dear Madam,

I will vote again for Mrs Emma Baxter with pleasure<sup>2</sup> – if you will kindly remind me of my engagement as the time of the next election approaches.

Pray excuse this late acknowledgement of your letter. My literary occupations are occupying my whole time, just at present.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Mrs Robinson

---

1. Unidentified correspondent.

2. Both candidate and election remain unidentified, though the latter perhaps related to one of the societies concerned with anti-vivisection, the subject of WC's last published novel, Heart and Science.
3. WC was still occupied with the serial instalments of "I Say No".

[2294] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 8 APRIL 1884

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 28–29.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th April 1884

My dear Ted,

Thank you most sincerely for one more proof of your friendly care for my interests. I understand the "situation" perfectly. The disgraceful state of the law leaves you no alternative.<sup>1</sup> I have the prospect of double work before me to save "I Say No" from these authors. I must adapt my own novel somehow – and Mr Douglas Cox will have it performed at a matinée before the thieves find out which way the story is going to end. My last Christmas Story "She Loves and Lies" is also in danger<sup>2</sup> – I am obliged to write to some of the managers, before the thieves offer their adaptation – and all this when I am fagged under the strain of the serial story. What a life!

Caroline wrote to thank Harry for the cream<sup>3</sup> – supposing that he had sent it. She transfers her thanks – and so do the children who enjoyed it thoroughly.

Poor dear Reade – today's news seems to suggest a chance of recovery – a very poor one, I am afraid. I have known him for thirty years.<sup>4</sup> Good bye for the present.

Yours ever afftly | WC

---

1. At this time Pigott was Examiner of Plays in the Lord Chamberlain's Office, where all plays for public performance had to be licensed. It seems that he was warning WC that he had approved a play based on his work. On 12 April 1884 The New Magdalen in three acts and a prologue by H. Bedford was given a licence for performance at New Cross Public Hall.

2. Published in the Spirit of the Times (New York) on 22 December 1883. No trace of a theatrical adaptation has been found. However, A Mad Marriage by F. Harvey was licensed on 5 January for performance at the Royal Theatre, Northampton. According to Allardyce it opened there on 16 January 1884 and later at the Grand Theatre, Islington on 21 August 1885. The author is listed as Frank Harvey who is credited with thirty-eight plays opening from 1873–1898 (Allardyce, II, pp. 408–409). The play was based on WC's tale first published as 'A Fatal Fortune' in All The Year Round, 17–24 October 1874, and then retitled 'A Mad Marriage' when republished in 1875 in the second edition of Miss or Mrs?.

3. Possibly referring to Pigott's nephew Henry.

4. Charles Reade died three days later, on Good Friday 11 April 1884, at 3 Bloomfield Villas.

[3259] TO MARY ANDERSON, 9 APRIL 1884

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 20.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Wednesday 9th April 1884

Dear Miss Anderson,

I called at Cromwell Houses yesterday (having been kept in the house by neuralgia in the face on Sunday and Monday) anxious to hear news of you, and I was rewarded by the best possible discovery – that you had got away to fresh air and to scenes not set up at the theatre. Never was a holiday better deserved than your holiday. If I can only hear – when the holiday is over – that you have decided on not risking again the terrible strain of acting in those two plays on the same night I shall be quite happy. If I had the claim to advise, I should ask you (if you are not acquainted with it already) to read Scribe's charming little play called "Valérie", – the first and best of all the plays in which the chief part is a blind girl. The famous Mademoiselle Mars created the character, more than fifty years since at the Theatre Francais in Paris.<sup>1</sup> If you liked the part I cannot help thinking that there is a new triumph waiting you in "Valérie" – one of these days, when you might feel inclined to surprise as well as to delight your admirers.

Here I am at the last page of my letter – it is high time to make my exit.

Most truly yours, dear Miss Anderson. | Wilkie Collins

---

1. ‘Mlle Mars’ was the stage name of the French actress Anne-Françoise-Hippolyte Boutet (1779–1847), who played the title role in Eugène Scribe’s 1822 comedy Valérie at the Théâtre Français, best known as the home of the Comédie-Française.

[2295] TO A. P. WATT, 11 APRIL 1884

MS: Pembroke.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 29.

Good Friday 1884

Dear Mr Watt

Do you take a long Easter holiday? Or shall you be back at your place of business on Tuesday morning next? I put this “intrusive question” in the interests of my “copy”.<sup>2</sup> If you are at the desk again on Tuesday, it will go to your care (of course) as usual. If not, I will send direct to Kelly, this time.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Bound out of order in the Pembroke volumes, before [2293] to Watt of 7 April 1884.
2. Of “I Say No”.

[2296] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 12 APRIL 1884

MS: Wolff Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 30.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 12th April | 1884

---

1. Written on an oblong card, this may be a dated autograph, rather than a fragment of a letter.

[2297] TO CHARLES SANTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 15 APRIL 1884

MS: Columbia (Spec. MS Coll. Adelman). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 30.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th April 1884

Dear Mr Santley,

Only one word more to thank you most sincerely for your kind and ready compliance with my request.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Charles Santley (1834–1922), baritone, friend of CD, who had helped with settling Charles Fechter’s debts. See Pilgrim, XII, pp. 198–199.
2. WC’s request remains unidentified.

[2298] TO A. P. WATT, 15 APRIL 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 30.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th April 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

The Kellys have sent my Revises of Chapters XL and XLI today – without the final slip, numbered 126. I have written to Mr Skerry to set it right – and I only trouble you on the matter, in case the same mistake has been made in your case.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

The copy for the new part was posted to you on Monday night last. Many thanks for your note

---

1. Of the serial version of “I Say No”. Watt wrote back to WC on 16 April confirming that he also had not received slip 126 (Berg).

[2299] TO FRED CHARLES, 18 APRIL 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 31.

90 Gloucester Place. W.<sup>1</sup>

18th April 1884

Dear Mr Charles,

The Magdalen picture thanks you sincerely for your kind interest in its welfare. It hangs in its old place again – returned in safety from the theatre.<sup>2</sup>

Excepting some venomous [sic] stings of neuralgia from this damnable East wind I keep out of the doctor’s way successfully so far.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Unusually for this period, WC writes the date at the top of the blank paper and his own address at the foot of the page on which the letter concludes.

2. Though the picture in question has not been identified, the reference is to the end of the run of the revival of The New Magdalen at the Novelty Theatre.

[2300] TO JOHN F. PHAYRE, 19 APRIL 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 289; BGLL, IV, p. 31.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th April 1884

Dear Sir,

I have been already asked to write obituary notices of my dear friend Charles Reade in London periodicals<sup>1</sup> – and I regret to say I can only repeat the answer which I have already given. All my working hours are ~~give~~ devoted to “I Say No” – and, if I encroach on my hours of rest, I run the risk of breaking down (in my present state of health) before my story is completed. I have no choice but to “say No” – in this case very unwillingly.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr J. F. Phayre

---

1. Reade had died just over a week earlier – Harper’s must have asked WC to contribute an obituary article to one of their New York periodicals.

[2301] TO A. P. WATT, 21 APRIL 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 32.

Monday night | 11.45 | 21st April 1884

Dear Mr Watt

By tonight’s post, I send you the copy for the new weekly part – chapters XLVI and XLVII.<sup>1</sup> I am a day late – owing to neuralgic troubles on Saturday and Sunday. Today is a day free from pain.

Ever yours WC

---

1. Of the serial version of “I Say No”.

[2302] TO A. P. WATT, 27 APRIL 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 32.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday. 27th April 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

This week, I am in good time. The copy for the new weekly part has been posted to you tonight,<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Of the serial version of “I Say No”.

[2303] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 3 MAY 1884

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 32–33.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 3 May 1884

My dear Mr Bentley,

Thank you heartily for your kind letter. I wish I could add that I can profit by the suggestion which you pay me the compliment of making. But I am writing a Serial Story,<sup>1</sup> and recent illness has thrown me back in my work. The weekly demand of the newspapers is inexorable – and my hours of rest (the doctor says) must be strictly observed. In this case, my own feeling of fatigue at the end of the day, sides with the doctor. I am most sincerely reluctant to fail in complying with any request of yours – but I have no other alternative.<sup>2</sup>

It is a pleasure to see your handwriting again – and it will be a greater pleasure still to see you.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley, Esqre.

---

1. “I Say No”.

2. Perhaps Bentley had asked for a short story for Temple Bar.

[2304] TO PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE,<sup>1</sup> 3 MAY 1884

MS: Syracuse. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Extract: Davis, p. 298. Published: Hayne, p. 66; Coleman, pp. 290–291; B&C, II, pp. 467–468; A&C6, pp. 20–21 (with newly located MS as source text).

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 3rd May 1884

My dear Sir,

I am sure I need not tell you that your kind letter has pleased and encouraged me. You are known to me already by name – and your favourable opinion is one of the rewards of my literary career which I honestly prize.

Your estimate of the value of the last new school of novel-writing is my estimate too<sup>3</sup> We are living in a period of “decline and fall,” in the art of writing fiction. To allude to your country alone, when I read for the hundredth time “The Deerslayer” or “The Red Rover”<sup>4</sup> – and when I find myself yawning over the last new work of (let us say) Mr Blank, the enormous depth of the literary downfall in which I find myself plunged, does really astonish me. In this country, we have lately lost one of the “last of the Romans” – my dear old friend Charles Reade. I look out for the new writer, among us, who is to fill that vacant place – and I fail to see him. Like the hero of old Dumas' magnificent story (Monte Cristo), we must say to each other: “Wait, and hope.” Art, as you have no doubt remarked, is above the operation of the ordinary laws of supply and demand. The influences which produce great – and I will even say good – writers, are entirely beyond the reach of human investigation. It may be hundreds of years, or it may be only hundreds of days, before another Fenimore Cooper appears in America, or another Walter Scott in England.<sup>5</sup> I call these two – and Balzac – the three Kings of Fiction.<sup>6</sup>

I am sure I need not say that I shall receive your Poems gratefully, as one more proof of your friendly feeling towards me, and towards my stories.

Believe me with esteem and regard, | Most truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

To | Mr Paul Hamilton Hayne.

My health varies a great deal. Gout and work and age (I was sixty years old in January last) try to persuade me to lay down my pen, after each new book – but, well or ill, I go on – and I am now publishing (periodically) a new story, with the quaint title of “I Say No” which I hope may interest you when it is finished.

---

1. Paul Hamilton Hayne (1830–1886), South Carolina poet. A presentation copy of his Poems (1882) was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, item 250, p. 116); see [2337] to Hayne, 16 July 1884 for WC's acknowledgment of the receipt of this volume.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. WC refers to the realist school associated with writers such as William Dean Howells.

4. James Fenimore Cooper: the 31-volume 1872 New York edition of his novels was found in WC's library – see Baker (item 133, p. 96).

5. Amelius Goldenheart, hero of The Fallen Leaves has Scott's works in his library: ‘The writings of the one supreme genius who soars above all other novelists as Shakespeare soars above all other dramatists – the writings of Walter Scott – had their place of honour in his library’ (Book 7th ch. 2).

6. WC first used this phrase in [2182] to Miss R—, 12 July 1883, where he also named his favourite book by each. A year earlier he had admitted reading The Deerslayer ‘for the fifth time’ – [2017] to William Winter, 10 February 1882.

[2305] TO JOHN F. PHAYRE, 5 MAY 1884

MS: Wolff Collection (1358d). Published: Wolff, p. 261; BGLL, IV, p. 33.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 5th May 1884

My dear Sir,

When I sent you the proof and duplicate on Saturday last, I forgot to add a request.

When Messrs Harper reprint “I Say No” for book publication, it will be for the advantage of the story if they use the duplicates. These often contain my last corrections.<sup>1</sup>

Please communicate this suggestion when you next write, and believe me

Faithfully yrs | WC

Mr Phayre

---

1. There are annotations in several hands: ‘Copy | send original | to N.Y.’ (presumably Phayre's); and ‘Mr Conant, | I suppose the Wkly was set from the (duplicate) corrected proofs? D.A.H. | May 20/84.’ followed by ‘Yes.’ (presumably S. S. Conant's).

[2306] TO A. P. WATT, 5 MAY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 33.

Monday. | 5th May 1884

“I Say No”

Dear Mr Watt

New copy – pages 242–251 – was posted to you last night.
(In great haste) | Ever yours | WC

[2307] TO A. P. WATT, 11 MAY 1884<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 34.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday 11th May

My dear Mr Watt

I am only able to send one chapter of copy by tonight's post.<sup>2</sup> Violent fache [sic] ache and tooth ache – have stopped my pen. Please ask the Kelly's to set up at once what is sent – and I will do my best to finish the number in time.

Yours ever | WC

Copy sent of course under another cover.

-
1. Dating from the calendar and the reference to Kelly.
  2. Of "I Say No".

[2308] TO A. P. WATT, 14 MAY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 468. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 34–35.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 14th May 1884

Dear Mr Watt

I was well enough again yesterday to write Chapter LIII – and to have it posted to you last night.<sup>1</sup> So the lost time is made up again – after a fashion.

Ten days since I was startled by the enclosed paragraph. Does it really refer to my old friend, Tauchnitz – who introduced the Continental reprint to travelling readers? His son was with me about a month since (on a brief visit to England), and assured me of his father's good health. If it is the Tauchnitz I have missed the obituary notices of him which must have appeared in the papers. Can you tell me when and where and how he died – or can you refer me to the dates of any weekly paper which contains a biographical notice? I must write to his son – and I am ashamed of my ignorance, and of the trouble that I am giving you.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

The arrangement which gives you the Tauchnitz agency here – will of course remain in force?<sup>3</sup> Let me take this opportunity of thanking you for the Contemporary Review. Poor dear Reade! What a wretched bumptious ill-considered tribute to his memory. If I had been Editor how that article would have been "cut"!<sup>4</sup>

-
1. Of the serial version of "I Say No".
  2. The enclosed paragraph is not bound in at Pembroke and has not been traced, but Watt's reply of the same date reassured WC that the death in question was not that of Bernhard Tauchnitz, first Baron (who did not die until 1895), enclosing a cutting from the Athenæum of 3 May 1884 (no. 2949, p. 569) to prove the point (Berg). The paragraph reads:

The name of Tauchnitz will recall to most Englishmen the publisher of the collection of English authors for the Continent; it may, therefore, not be unnecessary to mention that the M. Karl Tauchnitz whose death at eighty-six is just announced was not connected with the publishing house of Baron Tauchnitz, but was the publisher of the little pocket editions of Greek and Latin classics which were popular even in England twenty or thirty years ago. He was a cousin of Baron Tauchnitz, but retired from business twenty years ago.

3. Watt's reply noted that he had also met Tauchnitz junior on his recent visit to London, but that the Leipzig firm seemed to prefer to deal directly with its English authors rather than through Watt's agency. Watt also took the opportunity to ask WC again to use his influence to persuade the Tauchnitzes to employ his services (Berg).
4. Compton Reade, 'Charles Reade', Contemporary Review, 45 (May 1884), pp. 707–713.

[2309] TO A. P. WATT, 19 MAY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 35–36.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday 19th May 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

Last night, (Sunday) the first part of the week's copy was posted to you, and tonight the second (and concluding part) follows by post – to reach you I hope the first thing tomorrow morning.<sup>1</sup>

I am doubly indebted to your kindness – for relieving my mind about Tauchnitz, together with the welcome enclosures<sup>2</sup> – and for sending to me this evening the interesting early numbers of Chambers.<sup>3</sup> I will take the greatest care of them. Thank your aunt sincerely.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The serial instalment "I Say No".

2. Though the enclosures are not bound in at Pembroke, Watt's letter to WC of 14 May (Berg) makes clear that this refers to the cutting from the Athenæum of 3 May (see note to [2308] to Watt of 14 May) and also to an untraced piece entitled 'The Tauchnitz Library'.

3. In his letter of 14 May (Berg), Watt had also promised to send the opening issues of Chambers Edinburgh Journal, an unillustrated weekly miscellany selling at only a penny halfpenny, commencing in 1832.

[2310] TO THOMAS D. GALPIN,<sup>1</sup> 20 MAY 1884

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 36.

20th May 1884

My dear G[rest of name erased],

The sea voyage and the change of air and scene will I hope complete your recovery. I am sure I need not add that you have my hearty good wishes for the future.<sup>2</sup>

I am very hard at work just now – and I am feeling the strain a little. In a month more, I shall be able to get some rest, if all goes well. In the meantime, I am sure you will excuse a brief acknowledgment of your vy kind letter.

At present my relations with America are all managed by the agent who sends my proof-sheets in advance to the publishers in New York. But I will not (you may depend on it) forget your friendly offer of service. Your "postal address" is registered in my book. When you are established in your new sphere of action – and when you have some spare moments – I shall always be glad of your [prosperity].

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Thomas G[rest of name erased]

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, but both the engraved address and the name of the recipient have been completely erased. There can be little doubt, however, concerning the recipient – see also [2191] to him of 17 August 1883, with the name similarly cancelled. On the last, otherwise blank, page is written diagonally across the top right hand corner 'Ans. | May 25.84.'.

2. By this time Thomas Galpin, formerly of Cassell, Petter & Galpin, seems to have retired from the publishing business and bought a controlling interest in the Western Canadian Ranching Company; in the summer of 1884 he seems to have emigrated with his family to Canada (Victoria). See <www.rootsweb.com/~bccaribo/galpin.html>.

[2311] TO HERRN JUSTIZRATH SIMSON,<sup>1</sup> 20 MAY 1884

MS: Unknown. Copy in WC's hand: Morgan (Autogr. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/20, indexed as to 'Simpson'), our copy text. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 37.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 20 May 1884

(copy)<sup>2</sup>

Dear sir,

You will, I am sure, excuse a little delay in acknowledging the receipt of your kind letter, and its enclosure, when I tell you that I am much pressed just now by my literary work.

I am indeed grateful for the friendly consideration on your part which has induced you to attend yourself to the registration of “I Say No”. But I am also ashamed that your valuable time should have been given to a matter so trifling in itself, though so seriously important to me. I have already written to Baron Tauchnitz to ask for the address of the agent whom he recommended, and you shall have his reply the moment I receive it. So far as I can now tell, the weekly publication of “I Say No” will be concluded in “The People” newspaper, either in No 143 (pub-lished here, Sunday July 6th) or in No 144 (July 13th).<sup>3</sup>

I will wait to send you any more numbers of “The People”, in the hope of sparing you further trouble by transmitting them to Baron Tauchnitz’s agent.<sup>4</sup>

Let me also thank you for the copy of Mr Jüngling’s last letter. I entirely agree that our only course is to wait – and hope.

Believe me, Dear Sir, | Yours obliged, and faithfully | Wilkie Collins
Herrn Justizrath Simson

-
1. The firm of Berlin lawyers who had assisted WC in his dispute with his German translator of Heart and Science – see [2133] to them of 5 April 1883.
  2. The original presumably went to Berlin with Iserbyt’s translation (see [2312] to Iserbyt of the same date).
  3. The serialization of “I Say No” in fact ended in the People on 13 July – see Law, pp. 238–239.
  4. “I Say No” was published in two volumes (vols 2298–2299) by Tauchnitz in November 1884 (Todd & Bowden, p. 298).

[2312] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 20 MAY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 38.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
20th May 1884

My dear Sir,

Thank you for your prompt communication of the translation. I enclose my reply for translation, if you please.<sup>2</sup> As you will see, in the letter, pressure of work makes a bad correspondent of me this time.

Vy truly yours | WC

-
1. Initialled and directed to ‘Albéric Iserbyt Esqr | 6. Holyoake Road | Newington Butts | S.E.’, postmarked as dated.
  2. See the letter to his German lawyers of the same date.

[2313] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 21 MAY 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 292; BGLL, IV, p. 38.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 21st May 1884

“I Say No”

Dear Sirs,

A line to “report progress”.

I hope to finish “I Say No” with the 30th Weekly Part, at the utmost. By the mail of Saturday last, Mr Phayre sent to you the 26th weekly part in corrected proof. The 27th weekly part is now at press. The remaining weekly parts, I hope to send to you in MSS – so as to save the time occupied by the printers, and to give you as good a start on the pirates as I can.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me, Dear Sirs | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Harper, Brothers

P.S. – Mr Phayre has, I believe, suggested to you (at my request) to reprint in book form from the Duplicate proofs of “I Say No” – which contain my last corrections.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. “I Say No” was published as a single volume by Harper’s in early July, three months ahead of the British first volume edition, and a week before the serialization ended in Harper’s Weekly – see [2337] to Paul H. Hayne, 16 July 1884.

2. See [2305] to Phayre, 5 May 1884.

[2314] TO W. V. PAULET,<sup>1</sup> 21 MAY 1884

MS: Harkness. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 39.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 21st May 1884

My dear Sir,

I am afraid I shall write a very unsatisfactory reply to your letter. But the old excuse will I hope justify me – I cannot help it.

I am not the author of “The Tale He Told to the Marines.” I don’t know who is the author. I have not got a copy of “Colonel Quagg.” And I am not able to say in what numbers of “All The Year Round” and “Household Words” those stories are to be found.<sup>2</sup>

There is a series of Negatives! The sooner I retire from your notice the better it will be for me.

The one suggestion I can offer relates to the Tauchnitz Edition of the works of English writers. A Selection of Stories from “Household Words”, and (I think) from “All The Year Round” is published in the Tauchnitz Collection<sup>3</sup> – but (here I return to my negatives) I don’t know whether the two stories of which you are in search have been included in the collection.

I am really sorry not to be able to help you.

Believe me, Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W. V. Paulet, Esquire

---

1. Unidentified correspondent with queries about stories in CD’s family weeklies.

2. George A. Sala’s story ‘Colonel Quagg’s Conversion’ appeared in Household Words (30 December 1854), pp. 459–465. We have not been able to identify ‘The Tale He told to the Marines’ in either Lohrli or Ella Ann Oppenlander’s Dickens’ All The Year Round: Descriptive Index and Contributor List (Troy, NY: Whiston Pub. Co., 1984).

3. Between 1856 and 1859 Tauchnitz published a sub-series, separately numbered as vols 1–11, entitled ‘Novels and Tales reprinted from Household Words conducted by Charles Dickens’. WC’s name is not mentioned but several of his stories are reprinted, including A Rogue’s Life in vol. 1 (Tauchnitz number 376) and The Dead Secret (vols 4 and 5, 1857, Tauchnitz vols 386 and 409). For further details see Andrew Gasson, ‘Wilkie Collins’, Cambridge Bibliography of English Literature, 3 (1999), pp. 1171–1172.

[2315] TO A. P. WATT, 21 MAY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 40.

21st May 1884

“I Say No”

Dear Mr Watt,

I hope to finish (as well as I can calculate now) with the weekly part to be published on Saturday 5th July next. You shall hear from me again when I can positively fix the date.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written to WC on 20 May asking, on behalf of the proprietors of the newspapers carrying “I Say No”, for an estimate of when the serialization would be completed (Berg).

[2316] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 22 MAY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 40.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd May 1884

My dear Sir,

Here is another letter to Herr Simson – which please translate and send to Berlin.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | WC

-
1. Initialled and directed to ‘Albéric Iserbyt Esqr | 6. Holyoake Road | Newington Butts | S.E.’, postmarked as dated.
  2. The letter to Simson has not been traced.

[2317] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 27 MAY 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 293; BGLL, IV, pp. 40–41.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W.

Tuesday, 27th May 1884.

“I Say No”

Dear Sirs,

By today’s registered book post, I send to you a first instalment of the MSS concluding the story. The instalment contains Chapters LVII and LVIII. (Weekly Part – 28).

The corrected proof of Weekly Part 27, containing Chapters LIV and LV, was sent to you by the mail of Saturday last. After the proof had been despatched, Chapter LV was divided into two chapters – making Part 27 consist of Chapters LIV, LV, and LVI. The MSS copy of Part 28 thus follows exactly on Part 27.

The remaining instalments shall be posted as soon as they are written. Weekly Parts 29 and 30 will conclude the story.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me, Dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Harper Brothers

“I Say No” | Memorandum.

Weekly part 28. (In Mss). | The heading of chapter LVIII has been forgotten.

It is: | The Accident At Belford.

W. C. | 27th May 1884

-
1. The serialization of “I Say No” in Harper’s Weekly did indeed conclude in the manner described here by WC, with instalments 27–30 appearing on 21 June to 12 July 1884.

[2318] TO A. P. WATT, 27 MAY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 41.

Tuesday 27th May | 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

I am so busy with the end of the story that I forgot to write to you, to say that the copy for the new weekly part of “I Say No” was posted to you complete, on Sunday night last.

Ever yours | WC

(In great haste)

[2319] TO A. P. WATT, 28 MAY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 41–42.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th May 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

I like the idea of trying the halfpenny public – so please accept the proposal.<sup>1</sup>
Many thanks for the magazine.<sup>2</sup> I mean to try if I can find the Christmas Story this evening.<sup>3</sup>
Ever yours | WC

-
1. There is nothing in the Berg letter-books around this time from Watt to WC, but the proposal might be related to the belated appearance of “I Say No” as a newspaper serial from 12 July 1884 in the Yorkshire evening paper, the Bradford Citizen (see Law, p. 238). This represents what WC later calls a ‘second serial issue’ (with reference to The Legacy of Cain from Tillotson, in [2882] to Andrew Chatto of 7 August 1888).
  2. Perhaps a recent issue of Longman’s Magazine.
  3. That is, the idea for what would become ‘Royal Love’, to be published in Longman’s Magazine, so that a subject could be provided for the illustrator.

[2320] TO A. P. WATT, 30 MAY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 42.

90 Gloucester Place | W. | 30th May 1884

My dear Mr Watt

My mind is so completely absorbed in the closing chapters of “I Say No”, that I must trust to Mr Longman’s indulgence to grant me a day or two of “grace”. I shall have finished the present weekly part on Sunday next – and I will set apart Monday as a day of consideration, and rummaging among my “hints” and “ideas”, in the interests of the Christmas Story – and send in a subject for the artist on Tuesday morning next.<sup>1</sup> I want to do my best – and a clear day is the one thing needful.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Referring to ‘Royal Love’, to be published in Longman’s Magazine at Christmas 1884, with a single illustration. See the enclosure in [2321] to Watt of 2 June 1884.

[2321] TO A. P. WATT, 2 JUNE 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 42–43.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday June 2 | 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

On the next leaf is the subject for the artist.<sup>1</sup>

By this night’s post, I also send the last weekly part but one of “I Say No” – rather longer than usual, and a day lost through the Bank Holiday!<sup>2</sup> I have appended to the MS a request to have the proofs sent not later than Friday next, as usual.

Ever yours | WC

Subject for Illustration.

Scene: – a dressing room in a London Theatre.

Persons: – A pretty young French woman, putting the last touches to her face before she goes on the stage to sing in an opera. Opera not mentioned in the story. The artist can dress the prima donna in any costume which he considers to be most picturesque and becoming.

Near the lady, a young gentleman making love to her. Not a commonplace “swell”. A man possessed of abilities, and connected with a family holding a position of importance socially and politically.

Third figure, in the background: – The prima donna’s dresser, waiting to continue her services, if they are required.

-
1. The illustration for WC’s story ‘Royal Love’ to appear in Longman’s Magazine. The memo on the second leaf has been detached, but is found at Pembroke, following [2323] to Watt of 8 June 1884.
  2. WC writes on Whit Monday, a Bank Holiday in England since 1871.

[2322] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 3 JUNE 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 43.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd June 1884

My dear Sir,

Another letter from Berlin, which please translate and return to me.

Vy truly yours | WC

Albéric Iserbyt Esq

-
1. Directed to ‘Albéric Iserbyt Esqr | 6. Holyoake Road | Newington Butts | S.E.’, postmarked as dated.

[2323] TO A. P. WATT, 8 JUNE 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 43–44.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th June

“I Say No”

Dear Mr Watt

By tonight’s post I send you a first portion of what will (I hope) be the last weekly part. It is possible, this time, that I may trouble you with two more portions arriving one after the other. If you are busy, pray let me know – and I will send direct to Mr Skerry.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Of Kelly & Co.

[2324] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 9 JUNE 1884

MS: Wolff Collection (1358e). Published: Wolff, p. 261; BGLL, IV, p. 44.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Monday. June 9th 1884

“I Say No”

=

I am not quite sure – owing to the loss of a memorandum – whether Pages 28, 29, 30, and 31, of the present supply of copy, may not have been already sent to you. If this should be the case, please correct the press from the pages now sent, which have had the benefit of my latest revision.

Chapter LXII begins the last monthly part. It may be a long one – but it must be the last.<sup>1</sup>

WC

Messrs Harper & Brothers

-
1. The serialization in Harper’s Weekly ended on 12 July.

[2325] TO A. P. WATT, 10 JUNE 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 44.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th June 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

Many thanks for your note.

Tonight's post takes you another batch of copy. More yet to follow!<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

One line to say you have got it safely.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Of the serial instalment of "I Say No".

2. Watt acknowledged receipt in a note dated 11 June (Berg).

[2326] TO A. P. WATT, 11 JUNE 1884<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 468. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 45.

11th June

Dear Mr Watt

The last batch of copy for this week goes to you by tonight's post. Your kind acknowledgment received.

Ever yours WC

I am beginning to wonder whether "I Say No" will ever end!

---

1. Dating from the novel.

[2327] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 17 JUNE 1884

MS: Wolff Collection (1358f). Extract: Wolff, p. 261. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 45.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Tuesday 17th June 1884

Dear Sirs,

By the mail of Saturday last I sent to you (by registered letter post) the MS copy of the conclusion of "I Say No."

By today's mail, I send a corrected proof of the last Weekly Part, as far as the end of Chapter LXV. Also a duplicate revise of the 29th weekly Part (chapters LIX to LXI).

The remainder of the last weekly part shall follow, as soon as I can get the proofs from the printers. You will probably not have room enough to publish this long last Part in one number of your newspaper. In that case, the first half published should end with the end of Chapter LXIV.

If it reaches you in time, it will be advisable (in the case of the book) to reprint – or to correct what may be already set up – from the corrected proof of Chapters LXII to LXV, sent by today's mail, which has had the benefit of my final revision. But as hours may be of importance to the interests of the book-publication in New York, there is no necessity for delay if last Saturday's steamer makes (as I hope it may) a quick passage.

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – I send to you direct, instead of sending through Mr Phayre,<sup>1</sup> in those cases only in which the proofs reach me so late that there is only time to catch the mail by posting in my immediate neighbourhood.

Messrs Harper, Brothers.

---

1. J. F. Phayre, still Harper's London representative.

[2328] TO HERRN JUSTIZRATH SIMSON, 19 JUNE 1884

MS: Texas (PN 2594 S4 1899 v.4 HRC-TA), bound into extra-illustrated copy of Clement Scott, The Drama of Yesterday and Today (London: Macmillan, 1899), opp. p. 465. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 46.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 19th June 1884

Dear Sir,

I beg to thank you for your kind letter, consenting to my proposal that you should destroy the numbers of "The People" which were in your possession at the time when I wrote.<sup>1</sup> Let me add my apologies for this late reply – caused by pressure of literary work which has allowed me no leisure time before this.

I have also to acknowledge the little account of expenses with which you have favoured me. If I remember correctly, 50 Marks were set aside, at our last settlement of expenses, for any small after-charges which might occur. Shall this sum be considered as a partial settlement of the present account, leaving the extra 2 Marks 80 to be added to any future expenses that may be incurred in communications with Herr Jüngling still possibly to come?<sup>2</sup> If you approve of this proposal, pray do not trouble to write again.

If you would prefer that the 52 M. 80. should be paid, and the 50 M. deposit reserved for future expenses, one line to say so shall be followed by a remittance by return of post.

Believe me, dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Herrn Justizrath Simson | &c &c &c

---

1. See [2311] to Simson of 20 May 1884 concerning his role in WC's efforts to register in Germany the British serial edition of "I Say No" (as published in the People) so as to protect the novel from unauthorized translation in that country.

2. See [2133] to Simson of 5 April 1883 concerning his role in the conflict between WC and the translator Paul Jüngling over the German translation and registration of Heart and Science.

[2329] TO A. P. WATT, 23 JUNE 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 46–47.

23rd June 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

I am glad to see, from the date of your letter, that the rheumatism has only paid a flying visit this time.<sup>1</sup>

The "authority" is on the next leaf.<sup>2</sup>

The last weekly part of "I Say No" has run to such a length that I requested the printers to attach a "note to the Editor" to your revises, stating that the part might be cut in two – the first half to end with the end of Chapter LXIV. I hope they have complied with my request.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. In acknowledging receipt of copy of "I Say No" on 16 June, Watt's clerk James Baxter had mentioned that his employer was away from the office due to illness (Berg).

2. The leaf has been torn off and is not found in the volumes at Pembroke, but this must refer to the authorization of the third instalment of the payment to Watt as WC's agent by Kelly & Co. for the serial rights to "I Say No", which Watt had requested in his letter to WC of 21 June 1884 (Berg). Concerning the written authority for the first and second instalments, see [2255] of 16 January and [2288] of 28 March 1884, both to Watt.

3. The British newspapers carrying the serial did in fact follow the author's suggestion, so that the final chapter and the epilogue appeared as a separate instalment.

[2330] TO A. P. WATT, 25 JUNE 1884

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 468. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 47.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th June 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

There are a few more slips still to be sent to you before the End is reached.<sup>1</sup> I corrected them, and sent them to Mr Skerry on Tuesday (yesterday). There were just three corrections – so the last Revises ought to be ready, and you have only to ask for them, when you want to send the complete Part out. But I hope they will reach you tomorrow.

I am sincerely glad to hear that you and the rheumatism have parted company. For my part, I am feeling thoroughly worn out. I must get away.

Ever yours | WC

I return the proof – in case you may want it.

---

1. Watt had written to WC that day asking if the most recently received proofs represented the final portion of “I Say No”, and thus whether the printers should add the words ‘The End’ (Berg).

[2331] TO A. P. WATT, 1 JULY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 48.

90 Gloucester Place | W. | 1st July 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

Thank you for your kind note.

Thursday at 2.15 will suit me perfectly. If the messenger will wait, he can take the picture back – when I have engraved it on my memory.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written the same day to make arrangements for WC to see the picture to be used as illustration for the story ‘Royal Love’ to appear in Longman’s Magazine. Concerning the artist, see [2367] to Watt of 14 November 1884.

[2332] TO A. P. WATT, 3 JULY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 48.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd July 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

The picture is really a little work of art – character, composition, and colour all equally good. This artist thinks for himself.<sup>1</sup> There is a promise for the future in him which, in these days of dreary conventionality, is to me delightful to see.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

A. P. Watt Esqr

---

1. Referring to the illustration for ‘Royal Love’; see [2331] to Watt of 1 July 1884.

[2333] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 4 JULY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 48.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th July 1884

My dear Sir,

I have received some more letters from Berlin – but I am not sure whether you are still in town (having unluckily mislaid your note relating to your departure.) One line please to say if I am still in time to obtain your kind services.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[2334] TO W. F. TILLOTSON, 8 JULY 1884

MS: Bolton (ZBEN/4/1/3). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 49.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 8th July 1884

Dear Mr Tillotson,

Many thanks for your letter. It reaches me too late.

The two short stories which I propose to write, during the present year, have both been already purchased.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W. F. Tillotson Esq

---

1. 'Royal Love' in Longman's Magazine (Christmas 1884) and 'The Girl at the Gate' in the English Illustrated Magazine (January 1885).

[2335] TO GEORGE COPPIN,<sup>1</sup> 11 JULY 1884

MS: Morgan (Autogrs. Misc. Engl. COLLINS/16). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 49.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 11th July 1884

Mr George Coppin having requested that an agent may be appointed to collect the fees due for performance of my play called The New Magdalen at the Theatre Royal Melbourne which began Saturday May 31st last, I hereby appoint and authorise my representative in Australia, Mr H Biers, to receive the fees due for the said performances, in accordance with the arrangement made with Mr Dampier.<sup>2</sup>

Wilkie Collins

---

1. George Selth Coppin (1819–1906), English comic actor who became a theatrical entrepreneur in Australia from 1843; at this point he was clearly at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne. The authorization is probably addressed to Coppin as manager rather than to Hugh Biers as agent.

2. Alfred Dampier (1847–1908), English-born dramatist and Shakespearian actor, popular on the Australian stage from 1872.

[2336] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 15 JULY 1884<sup>1</sup>

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 49–50.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday 15th July

Dear Chatto,

I have heard today from Uncle Dan (Bixby) that he is coming here tomorrow (Wednesday) to lunch with me at 2. If there are no obstacles in the way, do come and take your lunch with us.<sup>2</sup> I am afraid to think how long it is since I have seen you.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Dating from the calendar and the monogrammed notepaper.
  2. Around a year earlier Bixby and Chatto had together attended the first night of Rank and Riches – see [2163] to Chatto of 8 June 1883.

[2337] TO PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, 16 JULY 1884

MS: Berg. Typed transcript: Duke. Extract: Davis, pp. 63, 298 (dated 6 July 1884). Published: Hayne, pp. 67–68; B&C, II, pp. 469–471.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London. W. | 16 July 1884

Dear Mr Hayne,

In one of her letters, or her prefaces, George Sand declares that of all the wretchedest forms of mortal weariness the fatigue produced by hard work of the brain is the most complete. My otherwise unpardonable silence offers to you its only excuse under the protection of George Sand.<sup>1</sup> The last ten or twelve chapters of “I Say No” were written without rest – or intermission (except when I was eating or sleeping). And when the effort was over a more prostrate wretch could hardly have been found in all this great city than your friend. But why work at this headlong rate? you will ask. Because, at sixty years old, I have not yet learnt to control the rage that possesses me under a strong sense of injustice – or, in plain English, under a sense of the robberies committed on me, and on my American publishers, by the [del] pirates. Each weekly part of my story was stolen the day after it appeared in Harper’s newspaper – and this in a great country which recognises the rights of literary property, in the case of its own citizens! The one way of “circumventing” these wretches – and of “helping my publishers round to their money” (in our [del] commercial English phrase) was to get in advance of the printed sheets, and to send the conclusion of the story ~~in~~ to [del] Messrs Harper in manuscript, so that the republication in book-form might appear in the United States before the last weekly parts were published. By this time, no doubt, the book is stolen also. But, at any rate the Harpers have had the first of the market!

I should not have troubled you with this little grievance of mine but for one consideration. It explains the delay that has occurred on my part as one of your readers. I could look at your beautiful volume – I could feel sincerely grateful for the kindness which had made this welcome addition to my library – but I was utterly unworthy of your poems, until my mind had rested a little.<sup>2</sup> Only at the beginning of this week have I begun to read you – confining myself at first to the shorter poems. May I pick out my favourites thus far? They are, “By the Autumn Sea”, “The Dryad of the Pine”, and “Love’s Autumn”. These three represent many others in which I find true poetical feeling, expressed delightfully in truly poetical language. To my mind, this is a very rare quality in the present time. Affectation of language, and obscurity of meaning – no matter what popular names may be attached to them – always produce the same result, in my case. I close the book, and deny that the writer is a poet. He must please me, he must excite some feeling in me, at a first reading, or I will have nothing to do with him. All good poetry, I know, improves on acquaintance – but what I insist on is, a favourable impression at starting. Excepting Tennyson (in his shorter poems) I read hardly any modern poetry with pleasure. What I like in your poetry (so far as I yet know it) is – that it makes me feel, and that it has not stopped me [del] with detestable doubts whether I do, or do not, understand what you are saying to me. Shall I astonish you if I confess that I read Walter Scott’s poetry with admiration and delight – and shall I add that I believe Byron to be beyond comparison the greatest poet that has sung since Milton?<sup>3</sup> Now you know what my criticism is worth!

While I am thanking you for your Poems, let me add my thanks for your last letter, and for the enclosure. Absence from London [del] until this afternoon – and the near approach of the post hour – have not allowed me to read the “In Memoriam” today.<sup>4</sup> I shall take it with me when I return to the country, and I will with the greatest pleasure offer /it/ to one of the best of our periodicals here, as soon as you write again and give me leave to do you this little service. Let me add that [del] the sooner the permission reaches me the better it may be.<sup>5</sup>

I have never read the story by Reade which you mention.<sup>6</sup> To my knowledge, it has not been published yet in England. It will no doubt appear in the forthcoming volume of Reade's short stories. When he made use, in other cases, of French literature, he always obtained the author's permission, and paid for the right of using his ideas. In my opinion, he would have done better to trust in his own invention. He knew that I disliked the idea of his borrowing from anybody – and we never spoke of his literary relations with [del] French writers.

Looking at the pretty little engraving of your home, I wish I could see the home itself.<sup>7</sup> But I don't like to read of those sufferings and losses which you allude to with such admirable patience – and I will not trust myself even to think of your War.<sup>8</sup> There are people who still write (and even talk[]) of “the God of Battles”. What a gross injustice done to the Devil!

In what you so kindly say of my books, the reference to “Poor Miss Finch” especially pleases me. English readers in /general/ have never done me justice in the case of this story. In Germany, I hear that they go to the other extreme, and rank “Poor Miss Finch as the best of all my works, with the one exception of “The Woman in White!”

This unmercifully long letter must come to an end somewhere – and my paper suggests that it may be in this place. In saying goodbye for the present, let me beg to be kindly remembered to Mrs Hayne, and believe me,

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Excuse these wretched slips of paper. My desk is left in the country. I take what I can find, and will appear in a more respectable form next time.<sup>9</sup>

It has just occurred to me to send you a really beautiful photograph portrait taken of me by Sarony of New York – ten years since. The more recent portraits, taken in England, are nothing like so good as works of art.

---

1. See the similar comments on George Sand in [2101] to Kate Field, 13 January 1883.

2. Paul Hamilton Hayne, Poems (Boston: D. Lothrop, 1882), containing several hundred lyrics divided into Youthful Poems, Sonnets, Dramatic Sketches, Poems of the War, Legends and Lyrics, Later Poems, Humorous Poems, and Poems for Children. A digital edition is available at <docsouth.unc.edu/southlit/hayne/hayne.html>. WC looked forward to the receipt of this volume in [2304] to Hayne, 3 May 1884.

3. An eight-volume John Murray edition of Byron's Works (1857) was found in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, item 87, p. 65).

4. As [2351] to Hayne of 18 August 1884 makes clear, the reference is to Hayne's poem 'Charles Reade: In Memoriam'.

5. Hayne clearly accepted; for the unsuccessful results see [2354] to him of 15 September 1884.

6. Reference uncertain.

7. Hayne's current home was at Copse Hill, sixteen miles west of Augusta, Georgia.

8. When Charleston, South Carolina (Hayne's birthplace) was bombarded during the Civil War, he had lost all his possessions, including his home and his books.

9. WC uses plain writing paper longer and coarser than his usual printed stationery.

[2338] TO ELLIOTT & FRY,<sup>1</sup> 21 JULY 1884

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 50.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st July 1884

Dear Sirs,

For reasons with which it is needless to trouble you, I have not lately availed myself of proposals similar to the proposal addressed to me in your kind letter. I trust therefore to your kindness to accept my thanks and my excuses.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Elliott & Fry

---

1. The photographers – see [0687] to them of 25 June 1866.

[2339] TO CHARLES KENT, 21 JULY 1884

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 50–51.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st July 1884

My dear Kent,

How are you? Where are you? When will you come here and smoke another cigar?

My book is finished<sup>1</sup> – and I have now leisure time enough to remember what a terribly long time has passed, since I have seen you – and to be anxious to hear that your silence is not caused by any addition to the afflictions which had so sorely tried you when we last met.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. “I Say No”.

[2340] TO JANE WARD, 22 JULY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 51, amended A&C3, p. 69.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 22nd July 1884

My dear Jane,

I have received your letter, relating to Mrs Walters’ “share of the trust-money”.<sup>1</sup>

In such matter’s as Lucy’s disposal of her reversion, I don’t think the Trustees (or their executors) can receive as sufficient notice an informal letter, like the letter which you have written to me.

I suggest that Mr Bampton’s lawyer should address to your brother William and to myself a formal notice of the transaction by which Lucy has assigned her share of the trust-money – which can be attached to the marriage settlement for our own guidance and for the guidance of our executors.

Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

Mrs Charles Ward

P.S. | Will you kindly let me know what William’s address is – so that I can send to my co-trustee a copy of this letter.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The details are not entirely clear, but the letter relates generally to the marriage settlement of Lucy Sarah, the fifth child of Charles and Jane Ward, who was born in 1852 and on 23 January 1883 at St Martin-in-the-Fields married William Walters of Ilfracombe in Devon. Later that year, shortly after retiring from his post as senior clerk at Coutts’ Bank, Charles Ward died on 1 July 1883 at his home at 11 John Street, off the Strand, by the Adelphi of septicaemia and phlebitis (death certificate). He was aged 69. There is no record in WC’s surviving letters of the passing of one of his most intimate friends. The trustees of the 1845 marriage settlement of Charles and Jane Ward were WC and Jane’s eldest brother, William Carpenter (1818–99). Mr Bampton and his lawyer have not been identified.

2. Postscript written diagonally on the otherwise blank third page.

[2341] TO CHARLES KENT, 23 JULY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 51–52.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Wednesday 23rd July | 1884

My dear Kent,

The only part of your kind letter which disappoints me is that part of it which tells me that you have been ill. Surely, you have had your fair share (and more) of suffering of body?<sup>2</sup> (I will say nothing of suffering of mind, let us think of that as little as possible.)<sup>3</sup>

I am not sure of being at home tomorrow (Thursday). So let us say Friday afternoon at 4.30 – when I shall be indeed glad to shake hands with you again

Affecly yours | WC

I am delighted to hear that “I Say No” is a favourite at home. To confess the truth it has been a favourite of mine too.

-
1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington W.’, postmarked as dated.
  2. WC’s subsequent letters to Kent ([2348] and [2350] of 8 and 17 August 1884, plus [2375] and [2381] of 6 and 21 December 1884), all suggest that Kent was suffering acutely from sleeplessness. [2409] of 5 April 1885 speaks of Kent being ‘saved from the horror of another operation’, while in [2530] of 9 March 1886 we learn that Kent has just had an operation.
  3. See [2221] and [2224] to Kent of 3 and 7 December 1883.

[2342] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 23 JULY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 52.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Wednesday | 23rd | July | 1884

My dear Sir,

Your last kind letter tells me that you will send me your address in Belgium before you go.

Has your departure from London been – by any chance – delayed? If yes, I have received another letter from Berlin, and I will send it to you – provided of course that you have time enough to translate it.

Faithfully yrs | Wilkie Collins

[2343] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 24 JULY 1884

MS: Parrish? (found there previously but apparently mislaid). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 52.

Summary: Thanks Iserbyt for his prompt response to the translation request.

[2344] TO A. P. WATT, 27 JULY 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 53.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday 27th July 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

Here I am back again in London after a short absence – and just beginning the Longman Story at last.<sup>1</sup> In a week’s time, I hope to finish it, and to get it copied in a day or two more. Next Sunday falls on 3rd of August – then follows the Bank Holiday. Suppose I am ready on the next available day, the 5th, what shall I do with the MS, in your absence from London?

I heartily wish you a pleasant holiday.<sup>2</sup> All my plans are uncertain – except that I look forward to a cruise in a friend’s yacht a little later in the autumn.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. ‘Royal Love’; Watt had written on 25 July to ask when copy of the story would be ready (Berg).
  2. In the letter to WC of 25 July the agent stated that he would be ‘going off next week for some time’, while his reply of 28 July instructed WC to send the manuscript of ‘Royal Love’ directly to Longman’s office (Berg).
  3. WC seems in fact to have been based in Ramsgate and sailing with Edward Pigott ‘mostly on the German Ocean’ from around the end of August until the beginning of October – see [2355] to William Winter of 5 October 1884 which is still addressed from Ramsgate.

[2345] TO WILLIAM WINTER,<sup>1</sup> 29 JULY 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/9). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 53–54.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday | 29 July 1884

My dear Winter,

Are you by any lucky chance, not engaged on Thursday evening next? And, in that case, will you take “pot-luck” here at 7 o’clock?

No evening dress – and nobody coming but my old friend Edward Pigott, “Examiner of Plays.” I answer before hand for your being pleased to meet him – and he is anxious to know you.

With kindest remembrances to our good friend

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Winter, whom WC had first met in London (see [1684] to him of 18 June 1877), was clearly visiting the city once more.

[3140] TO ADA CAVENDISH, 2 AUGUST 1884

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C5, p. 15.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 2nd August 1884

Dear Miss Cavendish,

I have the pleasure of hereby granting to you – on the same pecuniary terms as those already arranged between us – the sole authority to perform my play, called The New Magdalen,<sup>1</sup> during the period occupied by your autumn tour of the present year – such authority to ~~extend~~<sup>2</sup> be only exercised by yourself personally and to extend over Gt Britain and Ireland, but not to include London.

I remain | yours | WC

---

1. Ada Cavendish toured The New Magdalen in several provincial towns during 1883 and 1884. See [2164] and [2986] to Cavendish, 9 June and 23 June 1883 for earlier terms.

2. A line following this word is deleted and the next six words inserted above.

[2346] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 3 AUGUST 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 54.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd Aug<sup>t</sup> 1884

My dear Chatto

Writing a little while since to Mr Skerry (Kelly & Co) to know when I could have a set of proofs of “I Say No” in the book-form, to send to Tauchnitz, I am informed that “Messrs Chatto & Windus have not yet decided whether they will have it worked in “Quod” or “Double”. (Good God! What do these words mean!!!)<sup>1</sup>

Kindly let me have one line to say when the decision will take place – and then I can write to Tauchnitz to tell him when he may expect my last corrections.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. As Chatto explained in his reply of 5 August (Reading), ‘Quad’ (not ‘Quod’) and ‘Double’ are technical terms (in combination with formats like ‘crown’ or ‘demy’) in printing, indicating sheet size, the latter being half that of the former. The agreement for the seven-year lease of the copyright of “I Say No” was only signed on 20 October 1884 (Reading). Also found in the Parrish Collection is the following undated memorandum, which agrees with the completed agreement:

I Say No!

Arranged with Mr Wilkie Collins that we should publish his Story when complete on the same terms as Heart & Science MS reducing the purchase money from £600 to £500 and paying an additional royalty after any copies of the vol are sold beyond the first 750.

2. “I Say No” was published by Tauchnitz in two volumes, vols 2298–2299, in late 1884 (Todd and Bowden, p. 349).

[2347] TO COUTTS & CO., 5 AUGUST 1884

MS: Coutts.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 54–55.

Messrs. Coutts & Co.

Be so good as to pay The Imperial Bank, Limited, Westminster Branch, Victoria Street, S.W., my Subscription of One Guinea, to the Incorporated Society of Authors, due on the 1st of January, 1884. – and the same amount on the 1st of January, in every succeeding year, till further Notice.

Wilkie Collins | 90. Gloucester Place | London. W.
5th August 1884

---

1. On the pre-printed form of the Incorporated Society of Authors (lettering in bold), with the additions in WC’s hand. The Society was founded in February 1884 by Walter Besant (see [2951] to him of 12 April 1889), with WC as one of the many honorary Vice-Presidents. The fullest account is found in Bonham-Carter, ch. 6.

[2348] TO CHARLES KENT, 8 AUGUST 1884

MS: Fales. Published: B&C, II, p. 471.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

Friday Augt 8th 1884

My dear Kent,

If you can, by any lucky chance, come here tomorrow (Saturday) at any time before 5. P.M. – I will give you some of my specially-prepared laudanum – a measuring glass – and “fit you out complete.[”] If not, go to Corbyn’s 86. New Bond Street (corner of Oxford Street) and present the next page.<sup>2</sup>

As to the dose – nothing but experience will decide that. Begin [del] cautiously with only twenty (20) minims i.e. drops – taken in a tablespoonful of water, just before you get into bed. Keep your night-light well out of sight – and – go to sleep – !

Yours affly | W.C

But come if you can.

You ought to have a minims measuring glass – to make sure of the number of drops.

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked ‘CROWN | EDINBURGH’.

2. See [2349] to Corbyn & Co., 8 August 1884.

[2349] TO CORBYN & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 8 AUGUST 1884

MS: Fales.<sup>2</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 471–472.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 8th August 1884<sup>3</sup>

Dear Sirs,

I have advised my friend Mr Charles Kent, who is troubled with sleeplessness, to try small doses of laudanum – beginning with 20 minims. Will you kindly supply Mr Kent with a small quantity of the same laudanum which you prepare for me – enough to try the experiment for a week or ten days – when he will be able to report the result.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Messr Corbyn & Co | 86. New Bond Street<sup>4</sup>

-
1. Pharmacists of New Bond Street, afterwards trading as ‘Corbyn, Stacy, & Co.’.
  2. Second leaf note, still attached to [2348] to Charles Kent of the same date.
  3. WC’s address and date at the foot of the letter.
  4. Addressee lines at the head of the letter.

[2350] TO CHARLES KENT, 17 AUGUST 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 472.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

17th August 1884

My dear Kent,

Your Report is a severe disappointment to your amateur medical adviser.<sup>3</sup> I shall see our old friend Frank Beard in a day or two, and shall consult him on your case. In the meantime, here is my opinion (right or wrong)

Laudanum has a two fold action on the brain and nervous system – a stimulating and sedative action. It seems but too plain to me – that your nerves are so strongly affected by the stimulating action that they are incapable of feeling the sedative action which ought to follow. Whether a considerably larger dose than any you have taken would have the right effect I dare not ask. Such a risk is not to be run except under competent medical advice.

The other alternative is – to try a smaller dose than any you have yet taken, on the assumption that your nerves are too sensitive to bear the ordinary number of drops. But defer even this /safe experiment/ till I have seen Beard. You are entirely right in dropping the laudanum after such an experience as yours. I am more sorry than I can well say at this utter destruction of all my hopes for you. But I won’t despair yet. There are other sedative persuaders to sleep besides opium. I will write you again the moment after I have seen B.

Yours affly | WC

-
1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent | Egre | 1. Campden Square | Kensington | W.’ Signed ‘WC’ in the bottom left-hand corner, and postmarked, ‘LONDON W | C 7 | AU18 | 84’.
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
  3. See [2348] to Kent of 8 August 1884.

[2351] TO PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, 18 AUGUST 1884

MS: Philadelphia. Typed transcript: Duke (dated 1886). Published: Hayne, p. 68; BGLL, IV, pp. 55–56.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London 18th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1884

Dear Mr Hayne –

No! Let us consent, on either side, to drop formal “Mr” – and begin again.

Dear Hayne,

I have been idling on the banks of the Thames – and I have only time enough (before I go away again this afternoon) to thank you for your friendly and interesting letter – and to add that I have sent your “In Memoriam” poem to Mr Chatto (of the firm of “Chatto and Windus”) Reade’s publishers and friend.<sup>1</sup> I hope to send you a favourable report in a few days – if Mr Chatto is in London (in August!).<sup>2</sup> If he is away, I may, very unwillingly, be obliged to trust to your indulgence to excuse a little delay in the arrival of my next letter. We have an African temperature here – and everybody who can get away from London has escaped.

Piles of unanswered letters are on my desk. I have just time enough to beg you to give my kindest remembrances to Mrs Hayne and to your son, and to say goodbye for the present.

Always most truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to 'In Memoriam', Hayne's elegy on the death of Charles Reade, which had appeared in the New York Independent on 17 July 1884. Hayne wrote to Margaret J. Preston on 26 September 1884, 'Wilkie Collins ... delighted with this piece, has actually sent it to Messrs Chatto & Windus, (Reade's publishers), for reproduction in some form.' (R.S. Moore, ed., A Man of Letters in the Nineteenth-Century South (1982), p. 220).

2. Chatto declined the opportunity to publish the poem – see [2354] to Hayne, 15 September 1884.

[2352] TO GEORGE EVANS,<sup>1</sup> 26 AUGUST 1884

MS: Houghton (bMS Eng 1028). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 56–57.

Ramsgate | 26 August 1884

Dear Sir,

I must beg you to excuse a reply to your letter which has been long delayed.

I have been cruising at sea, for some weeks past, and I have only today found my correspondence waiting for me at this place.

I knew John Leech for many years. I valued him as a friend – and, it is needless to add, that I most sincerely admired him as one of the really great artists of our time.<sup>2</sup> The few short letters which I received from him have been long since given to collectors of autographs. They were quite unimportant – or I should not have parted with them.

Sincerely regretting that I am not able to offer any little assistance to the work which you contemplate.<sup>3</sup>

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

George Evans Esq

---

1. One of the sons of Frederick Evans of the publishing house of Bradbury & Evans.

2. John Leech (1817–64: ODNB), illustrator and caricaturist, a regular contributor to Punch and other periodicals. On his death see [0600] to HC, 3 November 1864.

3. Untraced. Perhaps something for the twentieth anniversary of Leech's death.

[2353] TO MISS MAIRS,<sup>1</sup> 30 AUGUST 1884

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 57–58.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 30 August 1884

Dear Miss Mairs,

Readers like you are my friends. For this reason, I cannot prevail upon myself to address you formally as "Dear Madam". Will you forgive me? I venture to believe that you will – and I thank you most sincerely for your kind and welcome letter.

The passage in "I Say No" to which you allude has been possibly misprinted.<sup>3</sup> In any case, I refer to more than one great landscape painter of the English school of fifty years since. Here are the names I had in mind while I was writing:

Turner, Collins, Constable, Callcott, Danby, Linnell. I did not include Landseer, because – admirably as he painted landscape – he was greater still as a painter of animals. In this latter branch of the art, he is (in my opinion) not only without a rival in modern times, but without an equal in the centuries that are past.

Let me add, if I may speak again of myself, that I am the son of William Collins – the painter of English cottage life and coast scenery. One of his pictures – representing a woodland scene with children swinging on a gate – has been so often engraved, and the prints have been so widely circulated, that you may have met with it already.<sup>4</sup> In another way, I have the honour of being associated with English art – having been named after my father’s dearest friend, the famous painter, Wilkie.

Believe me | Dear Miss Mairs | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Unidentified American admirer.
2. Directed to ‘Miss Mairs | Irvington-on-Hudson | New York | U.S.A.’, postmarked ‘London-W | G 7 | SP 1 | 84’.
3. “I Say No” was published by Harper in New York in July 1884, some three months before publication in England, but there were also unauthorized editions like that in George Munro’s Seaside Library (no. 1856). The passage in question must be that in ch. XXXIV, ‘In the Dark’: ““Does the man live who could paint that?” he [Alban] asked himself. His memory recalled the works of the greatest of all landscape painters – the English artists of fifty years since.’ (p. 126 in the Harper edition). This paragraph remained unchanged in all the British editions.
4. WmC’s ‘Happy as a King’ was shown at the Royal Academy in 1836 and sold to Messrs W. and E. Finden for 275 guineas. WC’s father painted two further versions, one now in Tate Britain, London. The picture was widely reproduced in both the UK and USA under its own title and as The Old Farm Gate or The Woodland Gate, engraved by Cousen and by A. L. Dick. A coloured chromolithograph appeared in Francis Turner Palgrave’s Gems of English Art (London: George Routledge & Sons, 1869), p. 43.

[2354] TO PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, 15 SEPTEMBER 1884

MS: Duke. Published: Hayne, p. 69; BGLL, IV, p. 58.

Ramsgate | England | 15th September 1884

I have been for some time past, still out of the reach of letters and telegrams, cruising at sea. This, my dear Hayne, is my only excuse for not having written to you at an earlier date. Even now, I don’t write very willingly – for I am sorry to announce that I have failed to induce Chatto and Windus to publish your “In Memoriam” verses. The obstacle in the way is “a rule” which forbids them to receive any poetical contribution to their magazines which has been already published elsewhere.<sup>1</sup>

On my return to London, it is needless to say that I shall “try again” – and I sincerely hope with better success. The one difficulty in our way is that English periodicals which are worthy of you – (and I shall take care that you do not appear in any others) – seldom publish poetry for its own sake. Short verses, which fit into half pages, are I am ashamed to say, the verses most generally published. I heard one Editor – maddened by a deluge of volunteer rhymes – declare that everything that had ever been said in poetry might have been better said in prose!!! We thought it was a joke and laughed at him. The unhappy man stared indignantly, and appeared to think us an audience quite unworthy of him.<sup>2</sup>

We sail away again in a few hours – and, oh, I have so many letters to write!

With kindest remembrances. | Ever yours, | WC

---

1. Verses on the death of Charles Reade – see [2351] to Hayne of 18 August 1884. According to R.S. Moore, ‘Wilkie Collins and Richard D. Blackmore were interested in seeing the poem published in England, but the journals approached refused to print a poem already published’ (A Man of Letters in the Nineteenth-Century South, p. 218 n. 2).

2. The editor in question has not been identified.

[2355] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 5 OCTOBER 1884

MS: Clarke Collection. Published: B&C, II, pp. 473–474.

Ramsgate England | 5th Oct: 1884

Among the “things in Heaven and Earth which are not dreamed of in our philosophy[”],<sup>1</sup> there is one thing, my dear Winter, which goes by the name of “luck”. If you had only happened to be in London a little earlier in the latter half of August, your letter would have found me in town – and you would have found yourself in Gloucester Place again the next day. As it was, both your letters [del] /have been/ waiting for me here, while I was travelling at sea, wherever the winds and the tides chose to take me – and a fortnight had passed before I opened your /first/letter telling me that you were about to leave us in “a few days”. To say that I was disappointed is not to say enough – I was really distressed, for I had set my heart on spending a happy day with you somewhere – no matter where, so long as you and I were together. Come back again for God's sake as soon as you can – and I will do my best to live long enough to shake hands with you once more. That cruel institution of “the all merciful Creator” which has said Live (in one breath) and Die (in another) has left me very few friends – and I cling to those few with a desperation which you will understand more and more thoroughly with every new year of your life until you are as old (and let us hope) older than I am.

On Tuesday next I go back to London, and to work – infinitely the better for the thorough salting that I have received, mostly on the German Ocean<sup>2</sup> – and provided with a new idea for a story and a play, which occurred to me on board the yacht.<sup>3</sup> The central notion is (between ourselves) – a divorced husband and wife, who [del] (after a lapse of a few years) regret their separation. He finds that the woman who has seduced him is in no sense worth the sacrifice – and becomes a miserable man. She (passing in the world as a widow) has an offer from a sincerely religious man – hesitates (being a good woman) to marry him under false pretences – decides on telling him the truth – and is rejected with horror by her lover, who remembers his New Testament, and dare not marry a divorced woman. But these same religious principles urge him to bring the separated pair together, in the interests of their eternal welfare. He is innocently assisted by the child of the marriage (a little girl in the mother's [del] charge, who has been told that her father has been drowned at sea, by way of accounting harmlessly for her mother's position). The good friend finds out the husband – brings about a meeting – and then discovers that the woman whom he has restored to her husband, and to happiness, is the very woman whom he loved.

This a miserably bald outline – and hardly even suggests the dramatic and pathetic situations which are to be found in the story. So far as I know, the idea is new. The U.S.A is the land of divorces – and I trouble you with my small Scenario, on the bare chance that you may know, or have heard of something of the same kind which might have happened, and which might help me. Or – if I am wrong here – you might be able to discover what American clergymen would be likely to do in such a case. Would they consent to /re-/ marry the divorced man and wife? Or would they say as the Roman Catholics would say – “they never were really unmarried. That sacred connection is not to be broken by any human laws”?

Goodbye my dear friend. I will write a [del] letter better worth reading next time. In the meanwhile, Mrs Graves sends you her kindest regards – and regrets<sup>4</sup> that she has lost the opportunity of saying Goodbye.

always truly yours Wilkie Collins

P.S. – Our good and dear Mary Anderson will be the first person whom I shall call on when I get back. I am eager to hear how the Romeo and Juliet rehearsals promise for the future. It is my earnest hope that there is another triumph in store for her – if she can only be sure of really competent help from her company.<sup>5</sup>

---

1. WC misquotes Hamlet: ‘There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, | Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.’ (Act I Scene v).

2. The sea between the east coast of Britain and the continent of Europe, now known as the North Sea.

3. The Evil Genius.

4. From this point to the valediction written up WC's left margin

5. As part of a season directed by Henry E. Abbey, Romeo and Juliet was performed at the Lyceum Theatre during November 1884, with Mary Anderson as Juliet and William Terriss as Romeo. WC's postscript written in the left hand margin of the first page.

[2997] TO JAMES PAYN, 6 OCTOBER 1884

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis Website; A&C1, p. 53.

Ramsgate | 6th Oct: 1884

My dear Payn

Two questions:

1. Has “By Proxy” escaped the clutches of the ordinary Italian translator?<sup>1</sup>
2. If yes – do you care to extend the influence of that interesting story to a new circle of readers in Italian newspapers?

By far the best translator whom I have yet met with is the Italian lady who translates my books.<sup>2</sup> She is not dependent on her pen, and she follows her original conscientiously and gives herself all the time that is required for her difficult task.

On the other side, let me add, that you would be served up in daily teaspoonfuls, in a feuilleton.<sup>3</sup> Also that the translation fees are so contemptible that they are not even to be thought of, either by you or me.

I go back tomorrow to 90, Gloucester Place – after some glorious sailing. On the deck of the yacht, I read with sincere pleasure some friendly words relating to poor dear Charley and to myself, in “Literary Recollections”, which added to the delights of my holiday.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Payn’s most highly regarded novel, with the opening scenes set in the north of China. It was serialised in Belgravia from July 1877, before appearing the following year in two volumes from Chatto & Windus.

2. Presumably Lida Cerracchini, who translated both The Black Robe (as La Vesti Nere; Milan: Fratelli Treves, 1882) and Heart and Science (as Cuore e Scienza; Milan: Eduardo Souzogno, 1884). The latter volume is recorded on the title page as an authorised translation.

3. That is, serialised in a daily newspaper.

4. Payn’s Some Literary Recollections was published by Smith, Elder in 1884. There is in fact very little in the book about the Collins brothers: WC’s reaction to a book of Payn’s occupies ten lines on pp. 242–243, while a couple of anecdotes concerning CAC are found on pp. 255–228.

[2356] TO A. P. WATT, 13 OCTOBER 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 59.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th Oct: 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

Here I am again – after a good salting on board a friend’s yacht!<sup>1</sup> Is your holiday at an end, like mine? If yes, when may I hope to see you? A line to choose your own day and hour (the sooner the better) will be welcome to<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours WC

---

1. See [2355] to William Winter of 5 October 1884.

2. As there appears to be no response to this letter in the Berg letter-books, the date of the appointment remains unknown.

[2357] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 15 OCTOBER 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 59.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th Oct: 1884

My dear Sir,

Many thanks for the translation. It is quite needless to trouble you to send a reply. My only answer is that I know nothing about it – and this may go in English.<sup>2</sup> No recent work of mine can be published by any persons, but the persons who possess, and have purchased, my authorisation. My early novels may have been pirated – but no information on the subject has reached me.

Vy truly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Albéric Iserbyt Esqr | 6. Holyoake Road | Newington Butts | S.E.', postmarked as dated.
2. Neither WC's reply nor his German correspondent has been identified.

[2358] TO A. P. WATT, 17 OCTOBER 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 60.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th Oct: 1884

Dear Mr Watt,

A line to thank you<sup>1</sup> – and to announce bad news. The gout has got me in the left eye – and the old pain has returned.

When you see Chatto – at your own entire convenience – please say that the contemplated story may be shorter than usual. I have been thinking over the “Spirit of the Times” story (for Buck) and the idea seems to be too new and too strong for a mere tale. If I can I must find a new subject. You shall hear from me again the moment I have got it. In any case, my eye must be better before I can set to work. But, well or ill, it shall be done in time.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The letter from Watt to which this must be a reply is not found in the Berg letter-books, but, as the following paragraph suggests, WC's thanks presumably concern an approach to Andrew Chatto concerning English publication of 'the “Spirit of the Times” story' ('The Girl at the Gate'). In the event publication in Britain was not in Chatto's Belgravia but in the English Illustrated Magazine owned by Macmillan. Watt's reply of 21 October informed WC that the story had been sold to Macmillan for £50 and that copy was due by 12 November at the latest (Berg).

[2359] TO A. P. WATT, 22 OCTOBER 1884

MS: Pembroke, in pencil. Summary: B&C, II, pp. 474–475. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 60–61.

90, Gloucester Place | W. | 22nd Oct. 1884

(In bed)

My dear Mr Watt,

I must thank you with my own hand for the friendly exertions which have been attended with such speedy and such successful results.<sup>1</sup> The kindness which takes charge of my anxieties to such good purpose is one of the remedies which is helping me to recover my health, and which thus takes care of me as well as of my interests.

The doctor's reports, yesterday, assured me that the inflammation is steadily subsiding and that I may hope to have “got over the worst of it.” The pain is becoming intermittent and is less severe, when it does make itself felt. So I may contemplate setting to work again before the end of this month – and sending in my MS (if all goes well) by the 12th of November next. I shall “report progress” next week. Meanwhile,

Believe me | always most truly yours | WC

The new Christmas story will be of about the same length as “Royal Love”<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Referring to the arrangement to publish WC's second Christmas story in the January issue of the English Illustrated Magazine, with copy due on 12 November, as outlined in Watt's letter to WC of 21 October (Berg).
2. 'The Girl at the Gate'.

[2360] TO [A. FULLER MAITLAND],<sup>1</sup> 30 OCTOBER 1884

MS: Preston (DDX 1906 acc 7047 box 2). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 61.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30 October 1884

Dear Sir,

I beg to thank you for your letter dated the 25th of this month, and to inform you in reply that it is not my intention to continue my tenancy of the above premises and to renew the lease<sup>2</sup>

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [2200] to him of 10 October 1883. Although there is no indication of the recipient, the mode of address suggests that this must be to the agent of the Portman Estate, which included Gloucester Place, rather than to its owner Edward Berkeley, first Viscount Portman (1799–1888: ODNB).

2. The terms demanded for the renewal were apparently exorbitant. It seems then to have been common practice to negotiate the renewal of a property lease around four years in advance. WC had taken the lease on 26 August 1867 (see [0762] to HC, 24 August 1867), which apparently ended twenty years and seven months later, on Lady Day Sunday 25 March 1888 (see [2824] to A. Fuller Maitland, 22 March 1888). WC left Gloucester Place for 82 Wimpole Street in the week beginning Saturday 17 March 1888. On the move in general, see Clarke, p. 181.

[2361] TO JOHN R. WHITLEY,<sup>1</sup> 30 OCTOBER 1884

MS: Holborn. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 61–62.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30 October 1884

Sir

Pray accept my thanks for your letter and its enclosure. I accede with pleasure to your kind proposal to place my name on the list of members of The Council of Welcome.

I remain, Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

John R. Whitley Esq.

---

1. Clearly on the organizing committee of ‘The American Exhibition London, 1886’, as the stamp of receipt on the letter attests, dated ‘31 Oct 84’. In the event, the Exhibition opened in West Brompton in 1887, prominently featuring ‘Buffalo Bill’s Wild West Show’, which was attended by the Queen.

[2362] TO A. P. WATT, 30 OCTOBER 1884<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 62.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

October 30th

Dear Mr Watt

Since I last wrote I have had a relapse – and have suffered considerably. Just at this time Mr Tillotson has appeared again, I was in bed when he called the first time, and he now asks by letter if he can see me again when he is in Town next from Monday till Thursday. Will you kindly see him for me? I will in that case send him a note to say so, requesting him to write to you and propose a day.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours, | WC

PS | I have the Christmas story in my head and will dictate it if I am not better tomorrow.

---

1. Dating from Watt’s reply.

2. Apart from the signature, in the hand of Caroline Graves.

3. Watt replied on 30 October that he would be happy to meet Tillotson on WC’s behalf (Berg).

[2363] TO A. P. WATT, 31 OCTOBER 1884

MS: Pembroke.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 62–63.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

31st October 1884.

Private

Dear Mr Watt,

When I dictated my yesterday's letter,<sup>2</sup> I was in pain, and not very well able to consider the Tillotson matter in all its bearings. Today there is an intermission. I have dictated the enclosed letter, which I think will answer the purpose thus far. If you think so too, kindly close the envelope, and send the letter with your letters to the post. Between ourselves I do not wish to have anything more to do with Mr T – and this will be my view if it should become necessary to grant him a personal interview.<sup>3</sup>

With many thanks for your friendly letter,

Ever yours, | WC

---

1. Apart from the signature, written in Carrie Bartley's hand.

2. See [2362] to Watt of the previous day.

3. The enclosed letter to Tillotson remains untraced and was presumably never sent. Tillotson visited Watt's office on the morning of 6 November, and negotiations began for the Bolton firm to handle WC's next serial story – see Tillotson's letters to Watt of 4 and 6 November 1884, and Watt's letter to Tillotson of 6 November (Berg).

[2364] TO SQUIRE BANCROFT, 31 OCTOBER 1884

MS: De Coursey Fales.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Bancroft 1888, II, pp. 385–386. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 63.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

31st October 1884

My dear Bancroft,

Under any circumstances I should have read your letter with true interest and pleasure. But I am just now struck down by another severe attack of gout in both my eyes. At a time of suffering and depression, your remembrance of our old friendship is doubly precious and doubly dear to me. With all my heart, I congratulate you and Mrs Bancroft on retirement from the toils and cares of a career of management, which will be remembered among the noblest traditions of the English Stage.<sup>2</sup>

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. This is the only letter to either of the Bancrofts which is known in MS.

2. The Bancrofts announced their departure in autumn 1884: 'Mr and Mrs Bancroft beg to announce that this will be their Farewell Season. Soon after the twentieth anniversary of the opening of the Prince of Wales's Theatre on April 15th, 1865, they will retire from management' (Bancroft 1888, II, p. 392). Marie Wilton had taken over the Prince of Wales's well before her marriage to Bancroft in December 1867, when the couple became joint-managers. They had moved to the much larger Haymarket Theatre in July 1880.

[2365] TO E. A. BUCK, 3 NOVEMBER 1884

MS: Collamer, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 64.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | London

~~31 October~~ Monday | 3rd November 1884

The name of the new Story was posted to you, my dear friend, on Friday last. Here it is again.

The Girl At The Gate<sup>2</sup>

=

You see I am able to use one eye again. The other is getting steadily better – but I dare not say more, in superstitious dread of another relapse!

1. Directed to ‘Mr E. A. Buck | Spirit of the Times | 101. Chambers Street | New York | City | U.S.A.’, postmarked as dated.

2. ‘The Girl at the Gate’ was published in E. A. Buck’s Spirit of the Times, 27 December 1884, pp. 658–662. The tale also appeared in the English Illustrated Magazine, January 1885 and was reprinted in Munro’s Seaside Library (no. 2030), 17 August 1885 (Gasson, p. 69). It was republished under the title ‘Mr. Lepel and the Housekeeper’ in Little Novels (1887).

[2366] TO A. P. WATT, 12 NOVEMBER 1884

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 475. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 64–65.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

12th November 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

Here is the greater part of the story. Will you kindly tell Mr Comyns Carr that I am obliged to ask for three days more to send in the conclusion<sup>1</sup> – in consideration of difficulties in writing produced by gout in one of my eyes. I am damaging the bad eye, it seems, by using the sound eye to write – my amanuensis is ill<sup>2</sup> – and I cannot dictate to a stranger. An excellent reason for finishing by the 15th.

Ever yours | WC

By-the-bye, how has the negociation ended? Does Tillotson secure the new story?<sup>3</sup>

---

1. J. W. Comyns Carr, editor of the English Illustrated Magazine, which was to carry ‘The Girl at the Gate’.

2. Presumably Carrie Bartley.

3. Though a detailed agreement remained to be drawn up, Watt and Tillotson had indeed by then arrived at an arrangement by which Tillotson’s would pay £1,300 for British and overseas serial rights for a period of two years for WC’s new story (The Evil Genius) – see Law, pp. 238–239.

[2367] TO A. P. WATT, 14 NOVEMBER 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 65.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1884

Dear Mr Watt

Here is some more of “The Girl at the Gate”, sent under another cover. I shall finish (I hope and trust) tomorrow afternoon. But Saturday is a half holiday. If there is any great hurry at the magazine office, I will have the copy ready here at 5 tomorrow, for any messenger who may be sent. But, if not – it is better to send the last leaves on Monday morning, than on Saturday afternoon after the office is shut.

Ever yours | WC

My eye will not be well till I have done work. I am contented that it doesn’t go back

Oh! what vile illustrations to Longman’s magazine. Mr Graham’s charming picture seems to me to be infamously used in the printing. I feel for him!<sup>1</sup>

---

1. ‘Royal Love’ in Longman’s Magazine, Christmas 1884 with an illustration – see [2331] and [2332] to Watt of 1 and 3 July 1884. The illustrator was Thomas Alexander Ferguson Graham (1840–1906) – see Simon Houfe, A Dictionary of Nineteenth-Century British Book Illustrators (Woodbridge: Antique Collectors’ Club, 1978).

[2368] TO A. P. WATT, 15 NOVEMBER 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 65–66.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Saturday 15th | Nov

Private | In haste

Dear Mr Watt

Your letter received. Shall I send the conclusion to your office to be forwarded by your clerk? Or straight to the magazine? What is the address in the latter case?<sup>1</sup>

Yes – Mrs Elliot is an old friend of mine – and has published books. The one thing I cannot answer for is – whether you may or may not succeed in making a bargain for her MSS. If not I assume that you have your terms for giving your time and trouble in making the attempt? She may be relied on “to pay”.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Referring to ‘The Girl at the Gate’. Watt had written on 14 November to say that he would be out of town from the Sunday to the Tuesday of the following week (Berg).

2. Mrs Gilbert Elliot (Frances Dickinson) – see Catherine Peters, ‘Frances Dickinson’, WCSJ NS 1 (1998), pp. 20–28. There is no mention in Watt’s letter to WC of 14 November of her manuscript; perhaps the inquiry was made on the envelope or an enclosure which has not been preserved.

[2369] TO A. P. WATT, 17 NOVEMBER 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 66.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

I beg to thank you for your cheque for £45...-.- – being the payment received (less your commission) for the right of publishing my story called “Royal Love” in this years Christmas Number of Longman’s Magazine – copyright being, as usual, reserved by the author.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

A. P. Watt Esq.

The concluding copy of “The Girl at the Gate” was posted to Mr Comyns Carr last night.

I am glad to hear that the question of the serial publication of my next long story has been so favourably settled. Mr Tillotson’s proposal deserved to succeed.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Watt had sent the cheque with his letter of 15 November (Berg). The stated amount is not credited to WC’s bank account but may have been included in ‘Recd’ for £54 on 18 November (Coutts: WC).

2. Watt’s letter to WC of 14 November reveals that the failure of an approach to Macmillan’s Magazine for the serial rights of the story that would eventually be entitled The Evil Genius led Watt finally to accept Tillotson’s offer (Berg).

[2370] TO WILLIAMS & NORGATE, 17 NOVEMBER 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 67.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1884

Dear Sirs,

I beg to enclose the necessary “authority” for receiving six copies of my novel, called “I Say No,” presented to me by Baron von Tauchnitz, and sent to my address (as I hear this morning) from Leipzig.<sup>1</sup>

I remain, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs | Williams & Norgate

---

1. The Tauchnitz edition appeared in November 1884 (Todd & Bowden). The authority is not found at Princeton. For an example and for the extant letters, see [0321] to them of 24 December 1859, note 1.

[2371] TO EMILY CLUNES,<sup>1</sup> 26 NOVEMBER 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins).<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 294; BGLL, IV, pp. 67–68.

90, Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W.
London 26, November 1884

My dear Aunt.

Let me thank you for your kind letter – and let me send to you (as you kindly value my likeness) the last photographic portrait taken of me in London. The gout has been driven out of my eye at last by the Doctor – and I am able to get a little air & exercise when the November weather will let me.

I am indeed sorry to hear M<sup>r</sup> Clunes is a great sufferer. Pray give him my kindest remembrances and say that he has the sympathy of another invalid. But I must remember that I was sixty years old at my last birthday (Can you believe it!) – and I must not complain if the state of my health leaves something to be desired. M<sup>rs</sup> Graves begs that I will add her compliments.

Believe me | Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins
Marion<sup>3</sup> has only to bring the birthday book with her when she pays her next visit and my autograph shall be added to Miss Edith's collection.<sup>4</sup>

-
1. WC's maternal aunt, at this time living in Millbrook, Hampshire (Census of 1881); see [0849] to her of 28 July 1868.
  2. In the hand of Caroline Graves, including the signature.
  3. Marion is possibly Marion Gray (1825–1900), daughter of Emily's sister Catherine Esther who married John Westcott Gray. Marion never married and lived with her mother in Richmond Road, Middlesex (Census of 1881).
  4. Miss Edith remains unidentified.

[2372] TO PERRY MASON & Co.,<sup>1</sup> 27 NOVEMBER 1884

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 68.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 27th November 1884

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter, and to add that I am sincerely sensible of the confidence which you are willing to place in me.

All literary negotiations are managed for me by my friend and representative Mr A. P. Watt of 34 Paternoster Row, London. I have sent your letter to him – and you will no doubt hear from him immediately.

Let me also thank you for the specimens of the “Youth's Companion” which you have kindly forwarded to me. I am reading your pages with the interest which I must naturally feel in a literary undertaking that has achieved an extraordinary success.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | Adverting to the literary aspect of the subject proposed to me, I may remind you that the main condition of success, in relating cases of circumstantial evidence, rests on the skilful presentation of details. For this reason, where narrow limits are assigned to the writer, the difficulty of interesting the reader is very seriously increased.

Messrs Perry Mason & Co

---

1. Perry Mason & Co., of Washington Street, Boston, publishers of Youth's Companion, an American weekly paper for ‘Young People and the Family’. WC was to write three stories for the paper under the general title ‘The Victims of Circumstances: Derived from Records of Old Trials’: ‘A Sad Death and Brave Life’, 19 August 1886; ‘Farmer Fairweather’, 16 December 1886; ‘The Hidden Cash’, 21 April 1887. See The Victims of Circumstances, ed. Graham Law (London: Wilkie Collins Society, 2002).

[2373] TO A. P. WATT, 27 NOVEMBER 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 69.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27th Nov 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

Here are Messrs Perry's letter to me, and my reply, for you to send – before you kindly negotiate for me. I can do the work – but with a certain difficulty which is stated in my postscript.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Either this evening or tomorrow I shall send my life of my father to your private address.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. See [2372] to Perry Mason & Co. of the same date.

2. The postscript refers to WC's Memoirs of the Life of Wiliam Collins. The copy sent to Watt is now held in private hands. Book plates inside the rebound front boards read: 'EX. LIBRIS | A. P. WATT'. The title-page of the first volume is annotated in black ink: 'To A. P. Watt from | Wilkie Collins | April 21st | 1885'. Sewn into the first volume between pages 68 and 69, there is a note on ruled paper in black ink which reads:

Vol I. Page 69. | "The Reluctant Departure." (1815). The Descriptions of pictures Exhibited before 1823, are taken from my mother's recollections of them on the Royal Academy walls. In this case, I have evidently mistaken what she told me – and perhaps her memory may also have been a little at fault. On, and after 1823, my mother spoke (and I wrote) of what she had seen in progress in my father's studio. Her memory – in these cases (tested by old friends of my father who lived to read my life of him ) was declared to be wonderful.

27th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1884 WC

The picture was exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1815. The painting shows a young man departing for the Napoleonic Wars leaving behind his wife and baby. WC's description on p. 69 of vol. I begins: 'In "The Reluctant Departure," the incident of a mother taking leave of her child as it lies in the nurse's arms, ere she descends to a boat in the foreground, which a fisherman and his boy are preparing to push off from the shore, is treated with singular boldness and simplicity of effect'. The painting is currently owned by Birmingham Museums and Art Gallery.

[2374] TO J. M. RUSSELL,<sup>1</sup> 2 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Stanford. Facsimile: Bender. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 70.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 2nd December 1884

Dear sir,

My literary engagements are numerous, and my health has suffered from reiterated attacks of gout. For these reasons I am obliged to abstain from availing myself of such proposals as your kind letter contains – and I can only trust to your indulgence to accept my thanks and my excuses.

Believe me faithfully yrs | Wilkie Collins

J. M. Russell Esq

---

1. Unidentified, but possibly John Montague Russell (b. 1849/50) – see the List of Contributors in the Wellesley Index.

[2375] TO CHARLES KENT, 6 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 70.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th Decr 1884

My dear Kent,

The less I say of myself the better. I am just getting over another attack of gout in the eye. This was my welcome back to London, when the cruise at sea was over.

But how are you? and do you sleep better? and when will you come and tell me about it?

Yours affly | WC

---

1. Signed and directed ‘Charles Kent Eq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W’, postmarked as dated.

[3065] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 8 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (December 2006), by Signature House, Bridgeport, West Virginia, item 230052489359.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C3, p. 56.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 8th December 1884

---

1. Apparently a simple dated autograph, on a cream card with rounded corners.

[2376] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 11 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 295; BGLL, IV, pp. 70–71.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
11th Decr 1884

Dear Sirs,

A line to thank you for the cheque for 18 shillings – in settlement of the returns. On the next occasion, I will make arrangements to save you this trouble by immediately sending back the returns. In the meanwhile, I am glad to hear (for, at my age, a man’s memory does not improve) that my remembrance of your excellent wine is still to be trusted even to the colour of the corks.

Believe me faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co

---

1. Directed to ‘Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co | 135. Minorities | E. C.’, postmarked as dated.

[2377] TO A. P. WATT, 12 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 71.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 12th Decr 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

I am indeed glad to hear that our preliminaries are complete – and I must again thank you for the manner in which you have conducted a negociation of some importance to myself.<sup>1</sup> It was a lucky day – for me – when you first thought of sending me your prospectus.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I enclose the letter which puts our business relations on the proper footing – “in case of accidents”.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Referring to the negotiations for the serial publication of The Evil Genius – the details are found in correspondence in the Berg Collection. Watt had sent the agreement to WC for signature with a letter of 27 November. In a letter to Watt of 9 December 1884, Tillotson had acknowledged receipt of the agreement duly signed by WC. Watt wrote again to WC on 11 December to say that the formalities were now completed.

2. Watt replied to this sentiment in a letter of the same date, describing the day he sent his prospectus to WC as ‘the most fortunate day in my career’. WC must have in turn replied warmly in a letter of 13 December which has not been traced, but which is referred to unmistakably in Watt’s letter of 15 December (Berg).

3. This ‘business’ letter, also referred to briefly in Watt’s reply to WC of 12 December, remains unidentified, though it sounds as if it may have been an earlier version of WC’s letter appointing Watt as his literary executor – see [2665] to Watt of 1 January 1887.

[2378] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 15 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 72.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th Decr 1884

My dear Chatto,

When you kindly called here last – I think I asked you to tell me of a book-binder – and I find a memorandum mentioning “Mr Wright, Noel Street, Berwick Street”. Was this the man you recommended? and – if yes – when I employ him, may I mention your name?

Many of my books are in desperate need of binding. Alas! I don’t possess among them a Bible worth £3900. And these are “hard times” when “nobody has any money”!<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Referring to the auction of the contents of Sir John Thorold’s library at Syston Park, Grantham, Lincolnshire, which took place from Friday 12 December 1884, where a two-volume Mazarin Bible (among the first books printed from movable type by Gutenberg, also known as the Gutenberg Bible or the 42-line Bible) was sold to the rare-book dealer Bernard Quaritch for £3,900. As noted in the detailed report in the Times (‘The Syston Library Sale’, 15 December 1884, p. 7), which is probably the source of WC’s information, this then marked ‘the largest sum ever paid for any book’.

[2379] TO CHARLES KENT, 15 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 475.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

15th Decr 1884

My dear Kent,

I am indeed sorry to have missed you. Yesterday I was complaining to Beard of being obliged to go out in the middle of the day, and leave my work. He said, “Your eye is right enough now to go out when you like.” Today for the first time I used my liberty, and had left the house (only a few minutes as I gather) before you arrived. There’s your luck and mine! Don’t trust to luck again. One line to propose any day and any hour that may suit you best. I am only in “the fool’s paradise” of planning a story.<sup>3</sup> All the hard work is to come.

Yours afftly | WC

---

1. Direct to: ‘Charles Kent Esqre | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’ Postmarked : ‘LONDON W | F 7 | DE1 6 | 84’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. Referring to The Evil Genius.

[2380] TO A. P. WATT, 17 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 72–73.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th Dec 1884

My dear Mr Watt,

Hear I am once more! The enclosed letter will tell you why.<sup>1</sup> I have written to say that I am not able to receive Mr Dennis – and referring him to you as my “alter ego”. Will you kindly send him a line to say when you can see him? The Tillotson engagement, in any case, will refer this matter to the future. But it may be worthwhile to hear what the proposal is. In haste to catch the next collection

Ever yours | WC

Perhaps we ought to give Tillotson an opportunity of conferring with Mr Dennis – as a matter of courtesy. But of this you will be the best judge<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The following is bound into the volumes at Pembroke preceding WC's letter:

325, Strand, W.C. | London, Dec 15 1884

Dear Sir

I am making arrangements, in conjunction with the proprietors of the Detroit Free Press, on behalf of a Syndicate of newspapers in England, America, Canada and Australia for a series of novels by leading writers, and would be glad to see you with a view to your forming one of the number. Can you oblige me by making an appointment in London in the course of the next few days?

Yours faithfully | Robt Dennis
Wilkie Collins Esq

A very similar letter was sent by Dennis to John Maxwell, agent and husband of the novelist M. E. Braddon, also on 15 December 1884, and a copy was forwarded to W. F. Tillotson at Bolton (see Law, p. 259 n. 9).

2. Watt replied on the same day to say that he had already called on Dennis, and had given the figure of £1,500 as the sum required for the serial rights to WC's next novel, which would not be available for quite some time, but had decided against mentioning the current agreement with Tillotson (Berg). Nothing seems to have come of this negotiation.

[2381] TO CHARLES KENT, 21 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 73–74.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st Decr 1884

My dear Kent,

Beard wants to try if he cannot restore your capacity for sleep – and tells me to remind you that he is an old friend, and is therefore the right person to give you medical advice. If you will call on him, on any day before Christmas Day, between 11 and 1.30 he will be delighted to see you. If that is not convenient – then any day (between the same hours) after the Christmas holidays: i.e. any day from Monday (29th) (tomorrow week).

Yours affly | WC

As doctors are sometimes called away, during their “consulting hours”, by accidents – if you can write and make an appointment it might be all the better.

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, postmarked on the following day.

[2382] TO WILLIAM ERNEST MARSH,<sup>1</sup> 24 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 296; BGLL, IV, p. 74.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th December 1884

Dear Sir,

The work to which you allude is written by me – and the title of it is Man and Wife.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Wm Ernest Marsh Esqre

---

1. Unidentified.

[2383] TO PERRY MASON & CO., 26 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 317–18 (dated 1886 and with recipient unidentified); BGLL, IV, pp. 74–75.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 26th December 1884

Dear Sirs,

Your kind and liberal letter reaches me, at the season devoted to prodigious eating and drinking, universal congratulating and holidaymaking, and voluminous appearance of tradesmen's Christmas bills. "Business" is at a standstill, this year, until Monday next<sup>1</sup> – and I don't know (until that date arrives) whether my literary representative is in London, or out of London.

In the meanwhile, let me thank you for your letter – and let me say at once, for myself, that I should be unworthy indeed of the frank and friendly spirit in which you have written to me, if I did not feel that a favourable reception of your conditions requires no consideration on my part. They recommend themselves as perfectly just and perfectly liberal. I may possibly have a suggestion to make, when I have consulted with Mr Watt, which will be a suggestion in your interests – and, in any case, I will leave it to him (as my literary agent) to formally complete our negotiations. Let me only add, now, that I look forward to our literary association with sincere pleasure.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me, dear Sirs, | Very truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I must also thank you for your "Holiday Number." Thus far, I have only had time enough to read the really humorous little story of the two pug-dogs – and to congratulate you on the artists who contribute your illustrations.<sup>3</sup>

To | [Messrs Perry Mason & Co]<sup>4</sup>

---

1. WC writes on Boxing Day, Friday 26 December.

2. The result was the three stories entitled 'The Victims of Circumstances'. The firm had first written to WC in November – see [2373], his reply of 27 November 1884.

3. This presumably refers to the special 1884 Christmas issue of Youth's Companion – though the story of the two dogs has not been traced.

4. Name of recipient erased, but still legible.

[2384] TO JANE BIGELOW, 29 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 75–76.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 29th December 1884

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

My apology comes this time, in the shape of a small sea piece, which wishes you all happiness in the New Year, and presents an imaginary view of your yacht's white sails in the distance.<sup>1</sup>

There is sympathy between us in our pleasures – but not (heaven forbid!) in our pains. While you were kindly writing to me, I was also on board a yacht – cruising with friends, as idle and as happy as myself, wherever the wind chose to take us. We "touched" at the port of Ramsgate – and there found your letter. Soon afterwards, I returned to London. One morning I was awakened by a little uneasiness in one of my eyes. I looked in the glass and saw the xxxxxxxx gout (I am writing to a lady, and put crosses to represent the forcible expression of my feelings) – I say I saw the (blank) Gout in possession of my eye – in such obstinate possession, so often returning, that I am afraid to say positively that I am cured yet.

But, ill or well, I go on writing. Do take the trouble to order "The Christmas Spirit of the Times" (New York) – and to read a story of mine called "The Girl at the Gate". I cannot help hoping that it may interest you.<sup>2</sup>

Is it wrong to send my love to my-once-little-dear – who is now a charming young lady?<sup>3</sup> Yes it is – and therefore I send my love. I wish I was young too: but God help me, I shall be 61 years old if I live till the 8th of January next.

Goodbye, dear Mrs Bigelow. I wonder whether you will write to me again. Perhaps you have "given me up." I am nevertheless always most truly yours

Wilkie Collins

What a bad autograph! I will write a lovely signature next time.

-
1. Perhaps a pictorial card no longer found with the letter.
  2. In the story 'The Girl at the Gate', two men are in love with the same woman, one of whom agrees to marry her so that she can become a rich widow.
  3. WC's reference is to the sixteen-year-old Flora Bigelow.

[2385] TO E. A. BUCK, 30 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: B&C, II, pp. 476–477.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>
London | 30th December 1884

Dear Buck,

If you call me "Mr" Collins again, I will commit suicide – and there will be an end of my series of "Spirit" Stories.

But this is not business. I ought to have begun by thanking you for the Dft for £50...- which reached me safely yesterday.<sup>2</sup>

Have I mentioned in my recent letters that I shall be sixty one years old, if I live until the 8th of January next? Never were praises more welcome than the praises of The Girl at the Gate,<sup>3</sup> for this reason:– they tell me that my brains are not affected by the infirmities of three score and one – /and/ ~~not~~ that, I can tell you (seeing that I have just signed agreements for a new serial novel next year),<sup>4</sup> is an unutterable relief.

But Harry – our burnt Harry – I send him my love, but I cannot approve of those scars. My fixed principles have always forbidden me to become a Freemason, on the grounds that I really could not consent to take down my trousers and sit on a red hot gridiron, while the Perpetual Grand Master harangued me, sitting /himself/ on a cool bottom? What right under these circumstances, has the P.G.M. to a cool bottom? No Masonic fraternity has ever yet been able to answer that question. Let Harry try. I am partial to him – and I will listen.<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours Wilkie Collins

Corrected – in the interest of The Commentators, reading back-numbers of The Spirit five hundred years hence.<sup>6</sup>

It is generally agreed that Mr. Wilkie Collins stands quite at the head of novelists of the present day. His works are read wherever the English language is spoken, and several of them /all of them/<sup>7</sup> have been translated into German. /Also, most of them into French, Italian, Russian, Swedish, Dutch, and Danish. Cock-a-doodle doo!/<sup>8</sup> At the time of his death, the late Charles Dickens left an unfinished work entitled "The Mystery of Edwin Drood." It was Wilkie Collins who was selected to finish the novel /No! no! no! I declined to do it./<sup>9</sup> – no small tribute, by the way, to the ability of Mr. Collins. For several years past this distinguished writer has furnished us a Christmas story, and we believe we can claim the distinction of being the only American journal thus favored. "The Girl at the Gate" is the title of Mr. Collins' contribution to THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT, and, after a careful perusal, we have no hesitation in pronouncing it by far the best story with which he has ever favored us, a conclusion which we feel satisfied our readers will share. /Ah, here the writer is correctly informed!/<sup>10</sup>

-
1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
  2. Duly credited on 31 December as 'Recd' (Coutts: WC).
  3. The short story 'The Girl at the Gate', published in New York in the Spirit of the Times, 27 December 1884, pp. 658–662.
  4. The Evil Genius.

5. Harry, who has just become a Freemason, is Edward Buck's son (see [2630] to Buck of 22 October 1886); WC perhaps met both during his visits to New York in 1873–74.
6. WC adds his postscript in landscape format on the verso leaf of the letter, following which he affixes a printed paragraph (appearing in the Spirit of the Times, 20 December 1884, p. 644), which he annotates in the margins. The printed text is shown in bold face while the annotations are indicated as insertions in plain type.
7. In the left margin, with the place of insertion flagged by a caret and a curving line.
8. In the right margin, with the place of insertion flagged by a caret and a curving line.
9. In the left margin, with the place of insertion flagged by two short vertical lines next to the author's name.
10. In the right margin, with the place of insertion flagged by a curved bracket against the final sentence.

[2386] TO MR AND MRS G.W. CHILDS,<sup>1</sup> 30 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), formerly laid in "I Say No" (1884), I. Summary: Parrish & Miller, p. 117. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 76.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 30th December 1884

To | Mr and Mrs G.W. Childs, with sincere good wishes for the New Year.

Wilkie Collins

---

1. See WC's letters from [1382] of 21 October 1873 onwards to the Philadelphia publisher and his wife, whom he had met on his visit to the United States.

[2387] TO MRS PAINE,<sup>1</sup> 30 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 76–77.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th December 1884

Dear Mrs Paine,

It is indeed kind of you to think of my gouty troubles and to tell me of a means of alleviating them. Your letter will go with me abroad (at a more favourable period of the year) – and will be with me at home. For I firmly believe in the simple remedies. At present, the only complaint left in the gouty eye is weakness. I not only feel it – but I see a mysterious object – like this: –<sup>2</sup>

When the eye recovers its strength the doctor tells me that the vision will disappear.

You see into what details of infirmity your kindness has tempted me to wander! Let me withdraw myself from further observations – only waiting to wish you heartily all happiness in the new year that is now close at hand.

Believe me, dear Mrs Paine, | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Unidentified.

2. Here WC draws the outline of the 'mysterious object' – rather like a cloud or a sheep without head, legs or tail.

[2388] TO MRS WILLIAMS,<sup>1</sup> 30 DECEMBER 1884

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 77.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th December 1884

To Mrs Williams | With sincere good wishes for The New Year.

Wilkie Collins

---

1. Unidentified.

[2389] TO A. P. WATT, 3 JANUARY 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 77–78.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd January 1884<sup>1</sup>

My dear Mr Watt,

Thank you for your cheque in payment of the American purchase money for the right of publishing “Royal Love” – less commission and telegram-expenses.<sup>2</sup> And thank you also for the trouble you have taken in making the arrangements.

I heartily return your good wishes for the New Year. By way of starting auspiciously, I began the new serial story for Tillotson on New Year’s day!<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

A. P. Watt Esq.

---

1. The following references to ‘Royal Love’ and The Evil Genius show clearly that the letter must belong to January 1885. Watt’s letter to WC, twice referred to here, is not, however, found in the letter-books at the Berg.

2. In the United States ‘Royal Love’ appeared in a syndicate of newspapers arranged by Charles Taylor of the Boston Globe (Johanningsmeier, p. 61).

3. The Evil Genius.

[2390] TO THE MANAGER OF THE NEW ENGLAND MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY,<sup>1</sup> 5 JANUARY 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 78.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 5th January 1885

Dear Sir,

Be so good as to send the customary notification, relating to the payment of my Premium of Insurance, due 12th February next, to my agents, Messrs Naylor & Co (of 99 John Street, New York City) – as before.

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

The Manager of | the New England Mutual | Insurance Company

---

1. For details of the insurance policy that WC took out with the Boston firm before leaving the United States in 1874, see [1426] to William Tindell of 3 March 1874.

[2391] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 6 JANUARY 1885

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 78–79.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 6th January 1885

My dear Mr Bentley,

Let me first heartily reciprocate your friendly good wishes for the New Year – and let me next confess that your letter has (in the vigorous [sic] form of words adopted by old women) “struck me all of a heap”. There seems, so far as I can understand to be little doubt that the foreign parcels’ post may be made the means of hastening the end of the dying system of the Circulating Libraries. I see (as you see) no defence possible here in England. If anything can be done, the right course of action rests with my good old friends the Tauchnitzes, father and son.<sup>1</sup> I shall have occasion shortly to write to Leipzig on business to the son (now the active spirit in the firm) and the case shall be put to him – with your “cutting” as a text.<sup>2</sup> It is needless to add that the result shall be made known to you at once.

In the mean time, the writers of rubbish in three volumes, which Mr Mudie buys cheap, and forces on his customers, will be the writers who will not suffer – for this excellent reason that Tauchnitz will not (popular phrase again!) “touch them with a pair of tongs.”

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Christian Carl Bernhard von Tauchnitz (1844–1912), eldest son of Bernhard von Tauchnitz became second Baron and took over the firm in 1895 on the death of his father, whose partner he had been for thirty years (Todd & Bowden, p. 451).

2. The newspaper cutting is not found with the letter, but presumably discusses the ease of circumventing customs restrictions by importing the cheap Tauchnitz editions of the works of British authors through the parcel post. It is difficult to see, however, how this could be done on a scale large enough to threaten the monopoly of the circulating libraries, which still insisted on expensive multi-volume first editions of new fiction. The causes of the eventual demise of the triple-decker lay elsewhere. See the various discussions in Gettmann, pp. 256–263; Griest, pp. 209–211; and N. N. Feltes, Modes of Production of Victorian Fiction (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1986), pp. 76–98.

[2392] TO CHARLES KENT, 9 JANUARY 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 79.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th Jany 1885

“Just recovering slightly from fearful attack – am prostrate.”

There, my dear Kent, is Beard’s reply to my inquiries. While I was out yesterday, I caught a cold on my chest – nothing serious, but I stay at home today, in the hope of stopping it at once. Tomorrow, I shall, I trust, see our dear old friend, and be able to send you a more detailed report.

I hope you have not suffered for your kindness in coming here yesterday in the rain and mist.

Yours affly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, postmarked as dated.

[2393] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 10 JANUARY 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 80.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th January 1885

My dear Sir,

After a long interval, here are two more letters from Berlin. Kindly translate them for me and believe me

Faithfully yours | WC

Albéric Iserbyt Esqr

[2394] TO HENRY POWELL BARTLEY, 14 JANUARY 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/14). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 80.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14th January 1885

My dear Harry,

My calling in life is to express myself in words – but I am really and truly so dazzled and bewildered by the beauty of the birthday present which you and wife have sent to me, and so gratefully sensible of the motives which have animated you both, that I am quite at a loss how to make a sufficient acknowledgement – and I can only avail myself of the old threadbare excuse which begs that the will may be taken for the deed. When I have said that I thank you both with all my heart – my pen stops, and my best resources will afford no more.<sup>1</sup>

Affectionately yours (and her's) | Wilkie Collins
Henry Powell Bartley Esq

---

1. The nature of the dazzling birthday present escapes us.

[2395] TO HARRY D. WALLER,<sup>1</sup> 15 JANUARY 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), formerly laid in No Thoroughfare, the 1867 Christmas number of All The Year Round.
Facsimile: Parrish & Miller, opposite p. 68. Published: Parrish & Miller, p. 67; BGLL, IV, pp. 80–81.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
15th January 1885

My dear Sir,

I enclose with pleasure a letter to me from Charles Dickens,<sup>2</sup> relating to the Christmas story called “No Thoroughfare”, which he and I wrote together.

With kindest remembrances to Mrs Waller,

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Harry D. Waller Esqre

---

1. Possibly Henry D. Waller, author of History of the Town of Flushing, Long Island (New York, 1899), whom WC might have met on his US tour.

2. See CD to WC of 28 August 1867, Pilgrim, XI, p. 414.

[2396] TO J. A. ROSIER, 18 JANUARY 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 81.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
18th January 1885

Dear Sir,

I shall be glad to see you if you can call here on Tuesday next at half past three.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

J.A. Rosier Esq

---

1. The actor may have wished to request permission for a production of one of WC's stage plays – see [2210] to him of 3 November 1883.

[2397] TO CHARLES KENT, 19 JANUARY 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 81–82.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
19th January 1885

My dear Kent,

I saw Frank on Saturday. He was in his consulting room – better, but not looking at all “like himself,” and complaining of pain in his head. He was to see Dr Fenwick yesterday or today<sup>2</sup> – and I shall keep this open till I have heard the last report. In the meantime, I repeated my already countless protests against his fatal intention to starve himself – with some little effect, I hope, at the time. But his professional view of his own stomach is – poor dear fellow – a terrible obstacle in the way. “You are cursed with a sulky stomach. Bully it. Don't let it bully you.” There, when

I see him, is my cry – but you remember the “voice” that cried in “the wilderness.”<sup>3</sup>

5.15.P.M.

I have just called in Welbeck Street. There was somebody with him – so I send the servant’s report: – “Much better.”

Yours affly | WC

-
1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Eqr | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, postmarked on the following day.
  2. Frank Beard’s medical appointment was probably with Samuel Fenwick (1821–1902), author of ‘Clinical Lectures on cases of difficult diagnosis: Perforation of the appendix vermiformis’, Lancet, 2 (1884), pp. 987–990, 1039–1042.
  3. WC refers facetiously to the biblical role of John the Baptist – see Matthew 3:3.

[3396] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 19 JANUARY 1885

MS: Unknown. On sale: Brought to Book, London NW2 1JG (April 2023, #007229). Published: A&C14, p. 21.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>
London | 19 January 1885

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins<sup>2</sup>

-
1. The top part of a sheet of headed paper with monogram to the left.
  2. Apparently a signature for a collector. Loosely tipped into vol. I of a first edition of The Moonstone. At the front of that volume the bookplate of Frank J. Hogan (1877–1944) with a scrap pasted in below reading, ‘With Mr Wilkie Collins’s | Compliments./’, not associated with this letter.

[3397] TO FREDERICK JOHN FARGUS,<sup>1</sup> 24 JANUARY 1885

MS: Lewis Collection (2954), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C14, p. 22.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>3</sup>
24th January 1885

Dear Mr Fargus,

I shall be delighted to see you on Monday afternoon next at half past three o’Clock.

Pray don’t trouble to write again if this appointment will suit you. If you have some other engagement, you have only to choose any day and hour, after Monday, which may be convenient to yourself.<sup>4</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins.

-
1. This is the only known letter to Fargus (pseudonym of Hugh Conway (1847-1885: ODNB)) who died just a few months later – see [2433] to A. P. Watt, 14 June 1885, note 3.
  2. Addressed: ‘F. J. Fargus, Eqr | Grand Hotel | Trafalgar Square | W.C.’ with ‘Wilkie Collins’ signed beneath a diagonal line bottom left. The envelope bears a prepaid one penny oval pink stamp and is postmarked ‘LONDON W | 12 | JA 24 | 85’, while the stamp is cancelled ‘W | 48’. On the verso is a postmark, ‘LONDON W.C. | DM | JA 24 | 8 [5] | S.M.P.’ The Grand Hotel had opened in Trafalgar Square a few years earlier on 29 May 1880 – see The Times, 31 May 1880, p. 12f, and The Graphic, 5 June 1880, pp. 559, 561.
  3. Embossed letter heading ranged right with monogram ranged left. Watermark ‘Light Preserving paper | E & J’.
  4. Presumably WC did meet him as he clearly knew a lot about how Fargus protected his copyright in the title of a story (again see [2433] to A. P. Watt).

[2398] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 27 JANUARY 1885

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/75), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 477.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 27th January 1885

My dear Sebastian,

I wish you could have heard the shouts of welcome with which those heavenly ducks were received – I wish you could have seen the silent, I had almost said the sacred, sense of enjoyment with which those /ducks/ were eaten. Come with the ducks, next time – receive my thanks in person – and let us drink one more bottle of Old Champagne, with “gout staring us in the face”, and you and I staring back again at the gout with defiant eyes and resolute stomachs.

Yes – of course, I am glad to hear of your growing fame as [del] a composer, and of course all that I can do to obtain notices shall be most gladly done. But (a word in your ear) some of the musical critics are the most infernal blackguards that ever held a pen. The one amusing point in their characters is the inordinate hatred they bear to one another. A friend of mine /being/ at the theatre the other night, sat next to one critic, and behind another. Critic Number One went out between the Acts. Critic number Two at once cautioned my friend, “For God’s sake take care what you say to that man! He is the most abominable &c & &”. On the next occasion Number Two went out. And Number one said to my friend, “I was sorry to see you talking to that man. Beware of him. Of all the damned &c &c &c.”

Goodbye for the present, dear Sebastian | WC<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Sebastian B. Schlesinger Esq | 99. John Street | New York (City) | U.S.A.’. Postmarked ‘LONDON | 6 | JA 27 | 85 | 7’, and signed ‘WC’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. Valediction and signature inserted down the left margin.

[2399] TO PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, 28 JANUARY 1885

MS: Private. Published: Hayne, pp. 69–70; B&C, II, pp. 478–479.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

London | 28th January 1885

The bodily part of you, my dear friend, lives at Copse Hill. That I don’t deny. But the spiritual part of you, I firmly believe, crossed the Atlantic not long since – discovered that I was sorely in want of some encouragement – and sent me, not only the kindest of letters, but a tribute of poetry which I receive as one of the memorable events in my literary life – which I read with admiration – and which I shall remember gratefully to the end of my days.<sup>2</sup>

That middle-age oracle had his reasons for not speaking plain. He is one of the men whom I hate most – a discreet man. If he had been bold enough to tell the truth, he would have answered you in these words:

“Look here, Paul Hamilton Hayne! The less you say about your friend Wilkie Collins the better. His stars, for the past three months, have given him up as a bad job. He went to sea with the ridiculous idea (at his age!) of restoring his youth. He left his ship with the animal spirits of five and twenty, and the splendid complexion of the days when he was a truly beautiful baby – he returned to London – and the next morning, when he approached the looking-glass to [del] brush his hair and his beard, he perceived a red streak in his left eye. In three days more, his eye was the colour of a (cooked) lobster. The Gout-Fiend had got him. The Gout-Fiend bored holes in his eye with a red-hot needle. Calomel and Colchicum knocked him down, and said (through the medium of the doctor) ‘Wilkie, it’s all for your good’. Laudanum – divine Laudanum – was his only friend. He got better – then worse again – then better – then worse once more. If you could see him now, writing to you on a foggy London evening, you would find his eye restored at last to its right colour and to its sight, but left so weak that he is obliged to protect it from artificial light (only candlelight) with a patch. There is the sad story of W.C. – and that is why he has not written to you long ago.”

The Oracle having spoken, I may end my letter in my own proper person. Let us make believe, as the children say, that it is only the 1st of January – and let me, with all my heart, wish the happiest of new years to you, and to everyone dear to you at home. I could write much more – but I must spare the sound eye (especially after a long day’s work on the first chapter of a new novel)<sup>3</sup> and ask you to consider my letters as periodical publications, “to be continued”.

Always most truly yours, | Wilkie Collins.

I have just seen your postscript – and have just drunk a whole wine-glass full of weak brandy and water (!) to your health and to a long succession of birthdays.<sup>4</sup> Oh dear! I remember the happy time when it would have been a bottle of dry Champagne.

-
1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
  2. See Harper’s Weekly XXIX (11 April 1885), p. 234a:

SONNET.

To Wilkie Collins.

(Written on a stormy day of January, 1885.)

Now, by my faith, it seems a grewsome day
Whereon to wish for thee all fortunate things,
O genius of such weird imaginings!
Nay, ’tis not so. This dismal winter’s gray
Is lightened by thy mind’s enchanted sway,
Brightly victorious, like a fairy king’s:
The charmed Hours fly, for thou hast given them wings,
To bear our spell-bound fancies far away.
O master of lithe labyrinths of art,
Of plots’ and counterplots’ far-wandering maze,
For this our wonder greets thee, and our praise;
But since through all thine art-work and above
We feel the throbbing of thy great warm heart,
Wonder and praise are blent with reverent love.

Paul Hamilton Hayne.

“Copse Hill,” near Augusta, Georgia.

- WC reports receiving a printed copy in [2418] to the poet of 28 April 1885.
3. The Evil Genius.
  4. Hayne’s date of birth was 1 January 1830.

[2400] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 30 JANUARY 1885

MS: Huntington (HH 95). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 82.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th January 1885 | Friday evening

My dear Holman,

There is some occult sympathy between us. This very day I was thinking of you – not very long before your letter arrived.

And I too have had my troubles. A severe attack of gout in the eye, from which I am only now recovering. But more of this when we meet. Need I say how glad I was to hear from my dear old friend again? And need I add that I will be at the Studio on Sunday afternoon as nearly as possible at 2.30 (while the light is still good.)<sup>1</sup>

Yours always affectionately | Wilkie Collins

-
1. To see Hunt’s latest painting, ‘The Triumph of the Innocents’ – see [2401] and [2403] to him of 16 and 20 February 1885.

[3398] TO E. J. JOHNSON,<sup>1</sup> 30 JANUARY 1885

MS: Lewis Collection (L2946), with envelope front.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C14, pp. 22-23.

90 GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTLAND SQUARE. W.<sup>3</sup>

30th January 1885

Dear Sir,

I answer your kind letter with pleasure.

“Major Namby” is, as you rightly suppose, one of my fugitive pieces.<sup>4</sup> These have been collected, and republished in book-form, under the title of “My Miscellanies”.

This book is sold by Messrs Chatto & Windus of Piccadilly, in two editions. One (illustrated) at 3/6, and another at 2/-. The first, a library edition, is “out of print.”<sup>5</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

E. J. Johnson Esqr

-
1. Johnson has not been traced. He was not present at the address on the envelope in the 1891 Census and that address is not found in the 1881 Census.
  2. Addressed in another hand to ‘Mr. E. J. Johnson. | 10 Ethelden Road. | Shepherds Bush | – W. –’ and postmarked ‘LONDON W. | 2 | JA 30 | 85 | 11’ with a mauve Inland Revenue one penny stamp franked ‘W | 31’.
  3. Written on a single leaf of the green-blue paper WC used from 1881. This is a late example of its use. The engraved address is ranged right and WC’s engraved monogram is to the left.
  4. ‘Pray Employ Major Namby!’ was first published in All The Year Round, 4 June 1859, vol. I, pp. 136-141, and collected in My Miscellanies, first published in 1863.
  5. The Piccadilly edition of My Miscellanies was first published dated 1875 and a copy is known with a September 1883 booklist at the end. The book was also published dated 1885 and 1893. When WC wrote it may have been between printings. The two-shilling version was issued in pictorial boards, without illustrations, first published in 1877; there was a further edition in limp cloth priced at 2s 6d.

[2663] TO WYBERT REEVE, LATE JANUARY/EARLY FEBRUARY 1885<sup>1</sup>

MS: Unknown. Extract: Reeve, 1889, p. 4f, our copy text; Reeve 1891, p. 118; Reeve 1906, p. 461.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 219–220 (as one of three extracts to Reeve on WC’s health problems, compositely dated 1871–86). Amended: A&C11, pp. 17–18.

I am only just recovering from a severe attack of gout in the eyes.

-
1. Conjectural dating within the range of dated letters to Reeve, based on the remarkably similar phrase in [2400] to Holman Hunt of 30 January 1885: ‘A severe attack of gout in the eye, from which I am only now recovering.’
  2. Reeve introduces three short extracts reflecting WC’s medical problems with: ‘His health was continually bad; his letters always refer to it.’

[2401] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 16 FEBRUARY 1885

MS: Huntington (HH 96).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 83.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16th Feby 1885

My dear Holman,

A word to tell you that your letter and the MS. have just reached me.

I will carefully read and consider what you have written, from two necessary points of view. 1st you shall hear what I think of it judged on its own merits. 2<sup>ndly</sup> – what I think of it as a method of introducing your noble picture worthily to the public by whom it will be (and must be) judged.<sup>2</sup>

This shall be done immediately – and when you have received my report – we will hold our consultation and help each other. In the mean time, let your mind be at ease. We shall solve this problem together.

Always aftly yours | WC

---

1. The typed transcript found in the Holman Hunt notebooks, at Kansas, contains this postscript: ‘Your Virgin’s face haunts me I see [it] this very moment as plainly as I saw it in your picture. Nothing in modern art has ever been done that can be put on a level with it.’ This does not appear on the MS but echoes sentiments found in the final paragraph of [2476] to Hunt of 8 October 1885.

2. Referring to the MS of Hunt’s thirteen-page pamphlet from ‘Draycote Lodge Fulham’, explaining his picture ‘The Triumph of the Innocents’.

[2402] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 19 FEBRUARY 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 83–84.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th Feby 1885

Dear Chatto,

I have waited to thank you for the novel which you have so kindly sent to me until I had read it. The faults of the book – want of variety and want of compression – are redeemed by many good qualities, and especially by power and freshness. The old dalesman’s funeral is admirably imagined and thoroughly well wrought out – and the talk at the table, before the procession starts, is full of humour of the right kind, the humour that is true to Nature. I wish the scene in which the horse and the coffin are found had been worthier of the scene in which they are lost. Here, the author seems to me to evade the difficulties of his art.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Let me also thank you for your recommendation to the book binder.<sup>2</sup> I call him a master in his art – excellent workmanship in every respect, and (thanks again to you) most moderate charges.

---

1. The reference to the horse (the old mare Betsy) and coffin (containing the body of Angus Ray) identifies the work as Hall Caine’s first novel, The Shadow of a Crime: A Cumbrian Romance, set during the English Civil War. It was published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus in early 1885, following serialization in the Liverpool Mercury. WC later became acquainted with Caine – see the reference to the novel in [2822] to him of 15 March 1888.

2. See [2378] to Chatto of 15 December 1884.

[3260] TO MARY ANDERSON, 20 FEBRUARY 1885

MS: Navarro. Extract: Anderson, p. 146; BGLL, IV, pp. 86 (both incorporated in letter to Anderson of 11 March 1885). Published: A&C9, pp. 20–21.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W

20 Feby 1885

My dear Mary Anderson,

I am the most unlucky of men, and worthier of your compassion than your kindness. My heart has been running down like a clock that is out of repair – and for the last fortnight the doctor has been winding me up again. He is getting on well enough with his repairs, but<sup>1</sup> – to my bitter disappointment – I am not able to see you tomorrow night. I can only think of you, and hear in imagination the rounds of applause, and look forward to paying you a visit on the earliest afternoon that I can find next week – after the first night of The Hunchback.<sup>2</sup> I am eager to hear how the audience receive you in the old play, and to see for myself that the work and excitement are not trying your strength beyond what it will endure.

With kindest remembrances and most sincere thanks,

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The passage, ‘My heart has been ... with his repairs, but’, is inserted by Anderson (p. 146) into [2407] of 11 March 1885.

2. Referring to Anderson’s role as Julia in the revival of James Sheridan Knowles’s The Hunchback (1832) at the Lyceum Theatre from 24 February (see the brief review in the Times, 25 February 1885, p. 5).

[2403] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 20 FEBRUARY 1885

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th Feby 1885

My dear Holman,

After reading your MS., there must, as I think, be two aids to the public mind circulated in the gallery when your picture is exhibited.<sup>1</sup>

One, in pamphlet form (I suppose), and at pamphlet price, may address the cultivated persons who can appreciate those learned digressions in the direction of Scripture History and Tradition which fill so many pages in your MS – and which it is, as I believe, impossible to associate with any description of “The Triumph of the Innocents” that ordinary brains can understand. These brains represent the majority – and to them I propose offering (as a free gift included in the admission) printed page or two [sic], describing the picture, and your intentions in painting it, as clearly, as eloquently, and as briefly as possible.

A sketch of what I propose is sent with this. Steadily following your point of view, I have altered your arrangement of sentences, and, avoiding certain repetitions, have here and there (as I hope) so improved on the language as to produce an impression worthy of your work on the public mind. By all means cut out, or add, or reject altogether as the spirit moves you – and come here, and criticise me as freely as I have criticised you. If time is of importance, choose any earlier day and hour than Friday 27th. If not, I will expect you on Friday afternoon (this day week) at any time after 3 o’Clock.

Always affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

I certainly think it will be best to write whatever you may address to visitors to the exhibition in your own name and person.

Not knowing whether you have a copy of your MS, I hesitate to trust it to the post. But if you wish to have it returned, before we meet, only let me know, and it shall be posted at once, and registered.

---

1. On the MS, see [2401] to Hunt of 16 February 1885. ‘The Triumph of the Innocents’ was exhibited in Bond Street – see Hunt, II, p. 343.

[2404] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 20 FEBRUARY 1885

MS: Huntington (HH 97). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 85.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Friday 20th Feby 1885 | 6.30. p.m.

My dear Holman,

I have just got home, and just heard that I have been so unlucky as to miss you. You will receive my letter (posted at 12.30 today) this evening, I hope. Tomorrow, Sunday, and Monday, I shall be at home till 3 – if on either of those days you are passing this way.

Ever yours affly | WC

[2405] TO THE REV. JOHN A. JENNINGS,<sup>1</sup> 7 MARCH 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 85

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 7th March 1885

Dear Sir,

I regret that I am not able to return a favourable answer to your letter. I have already given permission to include “Major Namby”<sup>2</sup> in “Part 4 of Selected Readings” – published by Sweeting & Co, Dyer’s Buildings, Holborn, London (1881).<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To Revd | John A. Jennings

---

1. Irish clergyman, Rector of St Patrick's Church, Donaghpatrick, editor of a number of collections of reprinted readings for the Dublin publishers Carson. These included The Modern Elocutionist (1882) and Readings from American Authors, Humorous and Pathetic (1884). With WC's letter at Princeton is found a letter (with no address and dated only 'Wednesday') from Jennings to his publisher which reads: 'My dear Mr Carson | Kindly send to me the set of Readings mentioned in this note, as there might be something new in them. I am getting permissions, & refusals. I send you two of latter. | Yrs sincerely | J.A.J. | Please keep the letters for me, till I see you, as I may as well have the autographs'.

2. 'Pray Employ Major Namby!', first published in All The Year Round (4 June 1859), and reprinted in My Miscellanies (1863).

3. This collection of reprinted pieces is not found on the BL Catalogue and has not been traced.

[2406] TO EDMUND YATES, 10 MARCH 1885

MS: Queensland (Yates Papers, 314, Box 1/2 Cat. 88).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 86.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
10th March 1885

My dear Edmund

Hooray!

Ever yours | WC

P.S.: | <sup>2</sup>You will be overwhelmed with letters. Mine shall not bore you.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. The MS has apparently absorbed ink from another letter against which it has been stored. The text of this other letter is still partly legible in mirror image, but is in another hand and does not appear to relate to WC.

2. Here, for emphasis, WC draws a pointing finger.

3. Written on the occasion of Yates's release from Holloway Jail in March 1885; see [2291] to Yates, 3 April 1884. The Edmund Yates papers held at Queensland include a host of similar letters of congratulation.

[2407] TO MARY ANDERSON, 11 MARCH 1885

MS: Navarro. Published: Anderson, p. 146; BGLL, IV, p. 86 (both incorporating a passage from [3260] to Anderson, 20 February 1885); A&C9, p. 21.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W
Wednesday 11th March 1885

Dear Mary Anderson,

May I call tomorrow (Thursday) afternoon at 3.30? If I shall not be in the way, pray don't trouble to write. If any other afternoon at the same hour will do better – only write the day. Your time is my time. Illness – nothing but illness – has kept me away. For the last fortnight I have been (medically) intoxicated with Sal Volatile and Spirits of Chloroform; the result has been a new idea for a ghost story.<sup>1</sup> I am hard at work, frightening myself, and trying to frighten the British reader.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. 'The Ghost's Touch', published in the autumn of 1885; see [2412] to A. P. Watt, 9 April 1885, and [2432] to Anne Wynne, 12 June 1885.

2. Anderson's published version of the body of the letter reads as follows:

May I call to-morrow (Thursday) afternoon at 3.30, if I shall not be in the way? Illness, nothing but illness, has kept me away. My heart has been running down like a clock that is out of repair. For the last fortnight the doctor has been winding me up again. He is getting on well enough with his repairs, but I have been (medically) intoxicated with sal volatile and spirits of chloroform; the result has been a new idea of a ghost story. I am hard at work frightening myself, and trying to frighten the British reader.

[2408] TO WALTER W. JONES,<sup>1</sup> 12 MARCH 1885

MS: Wolff Collection. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 87.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

12th March 1885

Dear Mr Jones,

I penitently enclose the price of my dinner ticket. (P.O.O. for £1..1..-).<sup>2</sup> Why am I a day too late? Why did I not attend at the Dinner? Two questions which can be answered by one word: | Bronchitis.

Add that I am getting better, and vy truly yours,

Wilkie Collins

Walter W. Jones Esqre

---

1. Walter William Jones, Secretary of the Newsvendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution – see [0964] to him of 4 April 1870.

2. That is, a Post Office Order for one guinea; the modern postal order system was introduced by the GPO in 1881, replacing the previous Money Order scheme which had been taken over from private owners in 1838. Perhaps Caroline bought the order with part of the £10-10s she withdrew from WC's account on 11 March (Coutts: WC).

[3261] TO MARY ANDERSON, 14 MARCH 1885

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 22.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Saturday 14th March

Dear Mary Anderson,

My copyist is only now recovering, after an operation – and some of the papers of my Scenario are missing. It is all “in my head” as the children say – and I only write now to excuse myself if the Mss does not reach you quite so speedily, as I had hoped, and to trust your indulgence to forgive the delay.<sup>1</sup>

Did my cup of tea intoxicate me on Thursday? After forgetting my wretched old hat, I committed another act of stupidity in the hall. The servant who brings this, has also in charge a walking stick, belonging to one of the gentlemen at 55, which I took away instead of my own stick! If you find the Scenario “mere drivel”, when it does reach you, you will now be able to account for that circumstance.

Ever truly yours | WC

---

1. The first of several references to a projected (but eventually abandoned) historical drama by WC which was to serve as a vehicle for Anderson's acting talents (see Anderson, pp. 142–147).

[3262] TO MARY ANDERSON, 30 MARCH 1885

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 22.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W

30 March 1885

Illness again, dear Mary Anderson, – nothing but illness. Horrid neuralgic pains in the chest – produced by some nervous derangement which the doctor understands – have forbidden me the happiness of seeing you, and bringing the Scenario with me. But I have made “notes” of new situations which have occurred to me after looking over the old MS.s – and I hope soon to get to work for you in earnest, and to be able to give you some idea of the sort of play which I contemplate. Depend on my doing my best – and doing it as soon as possible.

With kindest regards to all at home.

Ever yours | WC

[2409] TO CHARLES KENT, 5 APRIL 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 87–88.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Easter Sunday 1885

My dear Kent,

Forgive this late reply to your warm hearted letter. I have been ill and we have been keeping it a secret – a nervous complication this time, which you shall hear of when we meet. I have only been waiting till our good Frank Beard has patched me up, and made me fit to shake hands with you. Can you look in here on Tuesday afternoon next, at 4 o’Clock – or later, if it will suit you better? Don’t trouble to write if this will do. If not, choose your own afternoon at about the same hour if possible, and let me hear (in two words) what the choice is. The old brandy is longing for you and there are some bundles of the 1881 crop of cigars, which demand your attention – a recent discovery.

Always yours affly, | WC

I had heard from B.<sup>2</sup> (it is needless to say) that you were improving in the matter of sleep – and were saved from the horror of another operation. I have some other news for you when you come. I have discovered that Hazlitt was (saving your presence) one of the damndest blackguards, as a literary man, that ever lived.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Signed and directed ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W’, postmarked April 6, the Easter Monday.

2. Frank Beard.

3. WC’s discovery, presumably relating to the controversial personal life of William Hazlitt (1778–1830: ODNB), has not been identified. This seems to be the only reference to the Romantic critic and painter throughout WC’s writings.

[3263] TO MARY ANDERSON, 7 APRIL 1885

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 23.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W

7th April 1885

Dear Mary Anderson,

Under another cover (by registered letter post) I send you the First Act of the piece in Scenario – because it will show what the subject is, and whether it is likely to be the sort of work in which you can feel some interest. The idea of the situation at the end of the act – three good people placed in the false position so often produced by human frailty, and eager to do what conscience and duty demand – is the idea which will be kept in view throughout the complications of the story.

Ever yours | WC

I am getting slowly better – and I am going to ask the doctor tomorrow if there is any hope for me while “The Lady of Lyons” is in the bill<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Referring to Anderson’s role as Pauline in the revival of Edward Bulwer-Lytton’s Lady of Lyons (1838) at the Lyceum Theatre from 6 April.

[3168] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 7 APRIL 1885

MS: Yale (Gimbel D75). Published: A&C6, p. 15.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 7th April 1885

---

1. A signed slip for an autograph hunter. See Podeschi, p. 268.

[2410] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 9 APRIL 1885

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/69), misdated 9 April 1888, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 479–480.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 9th April 1885

My dear Sebastian,

Only the old story to tell over again. Ill, once more! Gratefully sensible of your hearty invitation – but without the strength and the resolution to take the pen and say so. We are keeping this illness a secret, so as to prevent reports from flying abroad which might make the case out worse than it is. There is some nervous mischief, in the region of my heart, (the medical name of the region is “cardial plexus”) which every now and then produces the most terrific pain – beginning in the under parts of both arms, and then extending across the chest. After one of these attacks, “a washed-out rag” is a feeble emblem of me for the rest of the day. They have yielded to nothing but a last desperate remedy which acts by inhalation. Five drops of this tremendous elixir, on a morsel of cotton wool, put under my nose, produces a furious throbbing at the temples and a burning heat in the face – but kills the pain, literally, in an instant. Those other unpleasant effects vanish in a few minutes. The attacks are diminishing in number – and the doctor has no fear for the future. But I am obliged, for the first time in my life, to “take care of myself” – to submit to strict dieting – to abstain from fatiguing myself in [~~any way, and so on, and so on~~]. Whether – abstractedly-speaking – it is worth while to take all this trouble to keep living, when a man has turned sixty, is doubtful in the last degree. But, relatively, I have books still to write, and children to take care of – and I must go on paying those [~~inscrutable~~] American Life Insurance offices as long as I can.

There is my dreary little story – the one reply I dare send, so far, to your invitation.

Let me (before I close this egotistical letter) acknowledge receipt of your Song.<sup>3</sup> Shall I try if I can find a competent (and honest) man to review it – in a newspaper?

With love to Mrs Sebastian, and all good wishes,

Affly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Sebastian Schlesinger Esq | 99. John Street | New York (City) | U.S.A.’, signed ‘WC’ with postage stamp removed.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. Identification uncertain, though possibly The Broken Flower (London: S. Lucas, Weber & Co., 1885), with words by F. Hemans, the original German version being by H. D. Tretbar.

[2411] TO WILLIAM LANIER WASHINGTON,<sup>1</sup> 9 APRIL 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Summary: B&C, II, p. 480. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 88.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 9th April 1885

Dear Mr Washington,

I should be insensible indeed – after the compliment which your good mother has paid to me – if I did not contribute with sincere pleasure to your collection of autographs.

You ask me for “a rule of life”. One of the wisest rules that I know of was laid down by a philosopher many centuries since. He was asked by a personage of exalted rank for an axiom which should be equally useful in restraining his pride, if he remained at the height of prosperity – and in sustaining his courage if he was destined to suffer the worst that adversity could inflict. The [~~philosopher~~] wrote on the palace wall:

“This also shall pass away.”<sup>2</sup> | =

Believe me, very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Mr W.L. Washington

---

1. An autograph hunter from Pittsburgh – see [2466], an envelope addressed to him, dated 15 September 1885. Possibly William Lanier Washington (1865–1933), whose mother’s maiden name was Jane Bretney Cabell (1842–1901), and whose father (1839–1900) died in Pittsburgh.
2. Well-known motto, often cited with reference to Solomon, and quoted most famously by Abraham Lincoln in an address to the Wisconsin State Agricultural Society on 30 September 1859: ‘It is said an Eastern monarch once charged his wise men to invent him a sentence to be ever in view, and which should be true and appropriate in all time and situations. They presented him the words: “And this, too, shall pass away.” How much it expresses! How chastening in the hour of pride! – how consoling in the depth of affliction!’ See The Collected Works of Abraham Lincoln, ed. Roy P. Basler (New Brunswick, NJ: Rutgers University Press, 1953), III, pp. 481–482.

[2412] TO A. P. WATT, 9 APRIL 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 89.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th April 1885

My dear Watt,

I hope you have not been ill. My unhappy lot has been Neuralgia – savage attacks of pain, which are only now beginning to be subdued. If you have a few minutes to spare, on any day next week at your usual time, I shall be delighted to see you again – after too long a period of separation.<sup>1</sup>

The Tillotson Story (the shorter one) is finished in spite of neuralgia – and I have only to give the fair copy the necessary revision,<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. A pencil annotation above the monogram and printed address in the hand of Watt’s clerk James Baxter reads: ‘Acknowledged saying that you will be in town on Tuesday | JJB’. A letter dated 10 April from Baxter on behalf of Watt informing WC that the agent would be in Scotland until the following Tuesday is also found in the Berg letter-books.

2. Not the serial novel The Evil Genius, but the supernatural short story ‘The Ghost’s Touch’. Negotiations were conducted alongside those for The Evil Genius, and terms for the short tale were accepted by W. F. Tillotson in a letter to Watt of 5 December 1884 (Berg). It was syndicated by Tillotson’s in the Bolton Weekly Journal (26 September–10 October 1885) and other newspapers, including the Irish Fireside. It was reprinted in Little Novels (1887) as ‘Mrs Zant and the Ghost’. In the United States the story appeared in the New York Sunday Mercury on Sunday, 4 October 1885 and from Harper’s in The Ghost’s Touch and Other Tales (1885). The story was perhaps written with Anne (Nannie) Wynne in mind (see [2432] to her of 12 June 1885).

[2413] TO MARY ANDERSON, 14 APRIL 1885

MS: Navarro. Published: Anderson, pp. 144–145; BGLL, IV, pp. 89–90 (with location of MS unknown), amended A&C9, pp. 23–24.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14th April 1885

Thank you, dear Mary Anderson, for your letter. You confirm the doubt that I felt when I sent you the sketch of the first act only – as a specimen of the contemplated play – and you express so clearly your ideas of what the dramatic work should be which will attract your sympathies and enable you to do yourself justice, that I already understand what is wanted – and I am eager to consult with you on the details – to ask hundreds of questions and to try if we can together meet the one serious difficulty that I see – finding a good subject. If something could be found in American history – not connected with wars – I should like it best, because the dramatic writers of the United States have left that field free – and I could let my imagination go at a full gallop without the fear of unintentionally trespassing on the literary ground which the dramatists of Europe have so largely occupied. Some suggestive book to consult must be our first discovery, and we must look back nearly 100 years or we shall be defeated by the hideous costume of the beginning of this century.<sup>1</sup>

If I can get to the theatre, it is needless to say that I will seize the opportunity. But the weather is terribly against me. I may tell you (between ourselves) that the mischief this time is in some deranged condition of the nerves near the heart – and a very slight cause sets in action a terrific pain in the chest and the arms. But I am getting stronger, and the doctor seems to have no fear of the result – with one terrible “if” – that is to say, “if I am careful.”

Ever yours, | WC

Let me also thank you for kindly returning the Scenario – which reached me safely yesterday.

---

1. Anderson comments: ‘The play mentioned by Mr. Collins was never finished, though in one of his later letters he still expressed his usual interest in the subject’ (p. 146). See also [2481] to her of 24 October 1885.

[2414] To CHARLES KENT, 18 APRIL 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 90–91.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Saturday. 18th April 1885

Here I am late again, my dear C.K. in thanking you for your letter. An engagement to write two or three sketches for some American publishers has been put off on account of my illness<sup>2</sup> – and if I am to keep my promise (which I always mean to do) the MSS must be sent away next week – one part by next Tuesday’s and one part by next Thursday’s U.S. mail. In this mess, I am obliged to propose a distant meeting. On Friday in next week (if all goes well with me) I shall be free and idle again, and at 5 in the afternoon, I shall have got back from that airing of myself in the sunshine which F.B. recommends.<sup>3</sup> Will this suit you? F.B.’s remedies are doing their work. Threatenings of the torture in the chest have made themselves felt – and have sneaked away again, without requiring the terrific treatment of the “Amyl.”<sup>4</sup>

Yours ever affly, | WC

Do you know of a good case, not discovered by modern book-makers, of a victim to circumstantial evidence in the records of any civilised country? I am to write accounts for “young people”, in the U.S. of such cases as these (touched with my dramatic colouring).<sup>5</sup> Two cases I have got already to work on. And one more I am looking for. (N.B. I like the subject – and the mercenary consideration of so much a page, after some unexpected out-goings, has its influence. Poor humanity!)

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W’, and postmarked as dated.

2. ‘The Victims of Circumstances’ sketches – see below.

3. Frank Beard.

4. Amyl nitrite, first produced in 1857, is a volatile liquid which was used from 1867 as a treatment for angina. It causes relaxation of the muscles and a feeling of dizziness and well-being. On WC’s use of the drug, see [2512] to Paul Hamilton Hayne of 27 December 1885.

5. Perry Mason & Co., publishers of Washington Street, Boston, issued the weekly Youth’s Companion, a paper for ‘Young People and the Family’. WC’s ‘The Victims of Circumstances’ appeared there in three widely separated instalments, beginning on 19 August 1886.

[2415] To BEECHENO, YAXLEY & Co., 23 APRIL 1885

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 298; BGLL, IV, p. 91.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23rd April 1885

Dear Sirs,

Many thanks for your letter. I shall be glad to try a dozen (sample) case of the Port. And, if I can only drink some of it myself – without gouty results – I shall be happier still.

I take this opportunity of writing to enclose my cheque for the last supply of your excellent Sherry<sup>2</sup> – and remain

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co

---

1. Directed to ‘Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co | 135. Minorities | E. C.’, postmarked as dated.

2. A payment of £7-4s is recorded in WC’s bank account as to ‘Beechams & Co’ on 28 April.

[3399] TO MAXIMILIANE VON WEISSENTHURN,<sup>1</sup> 23 APRIL 1885

MS: Lewis Collection (L2901). Published: A&C14, pp. 23-24.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 23rd April 1885

Sir,<sup>2</sup>

I am much obliged to you for your kind letter.

In authorising translations of my works, it is my custom to wait until the work is complete in the form of printers’ proofs – and then to make my arrangements.

By these arrangements, I receive a Bill of Exchange on a London Banker, payable at sight, for the purchase money agreed on. I send back, by return of post, a complete set of proofs – an “authority” to translate – and a statement of the date at which the first periodical publication may begin.

When the serial publication begins in England, I also send copies of the newspaper in which the work appears, for registration in Berlin.

The only new work of mine which is now in course of completion is a short story, which will occupy not more than three weekly parts, when it is first published in English newspapers.<sup>3</sup> I have not yet arranged for foreign translations [del], as I am not yet able to fix the date of first publication here.

If you think it desirable to treat for the German translation of this little work, will you kindly write and let me know it?

My next story of the customary length – to which I understand your letter to refer – will not be first published serially, until the latter part of the present year. When it will be completed, I am not yet able to say.<sup>4</sup>

Believe me, Sir, | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins
Herrn M de Weisenthurn
&c &c &c

---

1. Maximiliane Franul von Weißenthurn (Wikidata: 1851-1931), also known as Hugo Falkner or Falconer. She had published a translation of George Gaskell’s Algeria as it is (Algerien wie es ist, 1877) and various works from French but no title of WC’s has been found. She was also a novelist in her own right (for example Frauenliebe, 1882).

2. WC wrongly assumes his correspondent is male and refers to the addressee at the end as ‘Herrn’.

3. ‘The Ghost’s Touch’ which WC had recently completed (see [2412] and [2416] both to Watt, 9 and 24 April 1885), and which was syndicated by Tillotson to appear in several newspapers in three parts from September – for details, see [2456] to Robert du Pontavice de Heussey, 14 August 1885, note. 4.

4. The Evil Genius which appeared serially from December 1885 and was published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus in September 1886.

[2416] TO A. P. WATT, 24 APRIL 1885

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 299; BGLL, IV, p. 92.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Friday. 24th April 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

Just a word to thank you for your kind letter – and to say that the Mss shall be sent to you – early in next week – with the final corrections.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. This must refer not to the serial novel The Evil Genius, as Coleman suggests, since this was still far from complete, but to ‘The Ghost’s Touch’, the short story also written for Tillotson’s (see [2412] of 9 April, [2419] of 28 April, and [2433] of 14 June 1885, all to Watt). Watt had written a detailed letter to WC on 23 April concerning the agreement with Tillotson for the story (Berg).

[2417] TO MRS L.G. DICKINSON,<sup>1</sup> 27 APRIL 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 92.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 27th April 1885

My dear Madam,

I thank you for your friendly letter – and I contribute with great pleasure to both your collections.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Mrs L.G. Dickinson

---

1. Unidentified correspondent requesting WC’s autograph.

2. The letter may also have enclosed a photograph of WC.

[3264] TO MARY ANDERSON, 28 APRIL 1885

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 24.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday 28th April | 1885

Dear Mary Anderson,

Now that you have taken leave (for the time only) of your faithful public, your faithful friend approaches and asks on what afternoon he may hope to find you at home and not engaged. After tomorrow (Wednesday), any day that you choose shall be my day, and any hour after three o’clock that will suit you will suit me.

Ever yours | WC

After some trouble, I begin to hope that I am turning the corner which leads to better health, at last.

[2418] TO PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, 28 APRIL 1885

MS: Duke. Published: Hayne, p. 70; BGLL, IV, pp. 92–93.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 28th April 1885

Let me thank you sincerely, my dear friend, for the printed copies of the sonnet which honours and encourages me – and which (far as we are apart in the body) has drawn us yet nearer to each other in the spirit.<sup>1</sup>

We have all been ailing in England during the last two months, suffering under a pestilent East wind – and we are all getting better in the milder weather that has come now. I have been following the general example – and suffering (what is new to me) excruciating neuralgic pains. The warm sun and the remedies have helped me too to get better – and I now confront my unanswered letters and my unfulfilled literary engagements.

You now know why I have been such an ungrateful correspondent – and you will understand why I am obliged to wait a little, before I can write to better purpose and at greater length. With my kindest remembrance to all “at home,” believe me most truly yours,

Wilkie Collins

---

1. ‘Sonnet to Wilkie Collins’, Harper’s Weekly XXIX (11 April 1885) p. 234; WC reports receiving a MS copy of the poem in [2399] to the poet of 28 January 1885.

[2419] TO A. P. WATT, 28 APRIL 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 93.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th April 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

I send the Mss of the short (Tillotson) Story with this note – to be forwarded as you kindly suggested.<sup>1</sup>

Perry Mason & Co shall have their second instalment as soon as I can get it done.<sup>2</sup> It may be the heat, or it may be sheer laziness – but I have not been in “fit trim” for work, for the last few days

Ever yours | WC

A line please to say that you have got the Mss safely.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. ‘The Ghost’s Touch’.

2. The second anecdote for the Boston firm’s Youth’s Companion illustrating the miscarriage of justice due to the misreading of circumstantial evidence. Watt’s letter to WC of 20 April reveals that WC had written to him the previous day (the letter appears not to have survived) with the information that the manuscript of the first tale (‘A Sad Death and Brave Life’) had been sent off to Boston that day (Berg) – the requested deadline for submission being 1 May 1885, although publication in Youth’s Companion eventually took place as late as 19 August 1886.

3. Watt acknowledged receipt of the manuscript for Tillotson’s in a note of the same date (Berg).

[2420] TO A. P. WATT, 2 MAY 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 94.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd May 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

Saving your presence, I have got the damnest fool of a servant that ever man possessed. He has been, over and over again, told that you are an exception to all rules, and are (like the doctor) to be always “shown in”.<sup>1</sup> Today he was told that I could not see strangers and he let you go! He is honest and sober – and I try to endure him. But I am so sorry – I wanted to see you about the Perry Mason business which is hanging on hand a little so far as my writing is concerned.<sup>2</sup> Let me beg you to take no notice next time of what any of the servants say. Tell them that you are always to come in, and walk up stairs then and there!

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had presumably called at Gloucester Place with the payment from Tillotson’s for ‘The Ghost’s Touch’, since a letter from Watt with the same date encloses the cheque for £135 (£150 less Watt’s commission) and the receipt requiring WC’s signature (Berg). The payment of £135 is credited to WC’s bank account on 5 May simply as ‘Recd’ (Coutts: WC).

2. The remaining tales, under the heading ‘The Victims of Circumstances’, for the Boston firm’s Youth’s Companion.

[3265] TO MARY ANDERSON, 4 MAY 1885

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 25.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W

Monday 4 May 1885

Dear Mary Anderson,

On Saturday next, at one o'clock, I will be at Boltons<sup>1</sup> with the greatest pleasure. I am so glad you have chosen this week. The doctor condemns me to leave London next week.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Unidentified, though possibly referring to The Boltons, the prestigious neighbourhood near Kensington Palace, and site of the parish church of St Mary the Boltons.

[2421] TO T. H. S. ESCOTT,<sup>1</sup> 7 MAY 1885

MS: BL (Add. 58778, f. 62). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 94–95.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th May 1885

My dear Mr Escott,

My best thanks for your letter and for the enclosure. Of course I comply gladly with your request – only asking for a little time. I don't get on, in this matter of health – and the doctor orders me to leave London. If sea air will help me, I shall soon be able to offer my contribution to "The Fortnightly Review."

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Thomas Hay Sweet Escott (1844–1924: ODNB), who had praised WC in the World (see [2162] to Andrew Chatto of 6 June 1883). Escott served as editor of the Fortnightly Review from 1882–86, when he was forced to retire through illness (see [2564] to Edmund Yates of 14 May 1886). WC seems not to have written for the Fortnightly during that period, but his contribution appears to have been published in September 1887, as part of 'Fine Passages in Verse and Prose: Selected by Living Men of Letters'. See [2748] to the Editor of the Fortnightly Review, May 1885–August 1887.

[2422] TO A. P. WATT, 10 MAY 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 95.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th May 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

My landlady at Ramsgate has let her house for a month to come – and I am still considering what I had better do next. There are also reasons why I must stay in London until the 14th, if I possibly can. Whenever you can find time to come here therefore, in the course of the next few days, I shall be delighted to see you.<sup>1</sup> I am getting better – the cold weather, of which everybody complains, is just the thing for

Yours ever | WC

I have added a new scene to Tillotson's short story. The idea struck me – after I had corrected the proofs.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Watt had written on 10 May asking if WC had already gone to the seaside, and if not, whether it would be convenient for him (Watt) to call the following week (Berg). The fourteenth birthday of WC's second daughter by Martha Rudd, Harriet Constance Dawson or 'Hetty', fell on 14 May 1885 (see Peters, p. 415)

2. Of 'The Ghost's Touch'.

[2423] TO A. P. WATT, 13 MAY 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 95.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Wednesday evening | 13th May

My dear Mr Watt,

I am obliged to go out tomorrow (Thursday) at 2.30.<sup>1</sup> But I shall be here on Friday – and again on Monday – and equally happy to see you on either day at the usual time, just as it may suit your convenience.

I am better – and the seaside is put off for a few days more.

Ever yours WC

---

1. Presumably for the birthday party of WC's daughter Hetty. Watt's communication to WC seeking the appointment seems not to have survived.

[3350] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 19 MAY 1885

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C12 p. 9.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | London | 19th May 1885

---

1. An autograph for a collector.

[2424] TO ADA CAVENDISH, 20 MAY 1885

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 96.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th May 1885

My dear Ada,

The enclosed note speaks for itself. Will you give Miss Mellon<sup>1</sup> her order for two (on Friday next),

Ever yours affy | WC

---

1. Probably a daughter of Mrs Alfred Mellon (b. 1824), who appeared in the opening production of No Thoroughfare, which ran for 200 performances at the Theatre Royal Adelphi from 26 December 1867. The daughter's first appearance on the stage was as a schoolgirl in a revival of Robertson's School at the Haymarket on Saturday 1 May 1880. See also Bancroft 1888, II, p. 218.

[2425] TO A. P. WATT, 20 MAY 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 96.

Wednesday 20th May

One line of postscript to my yesterday's letter.<sup>1</sup> The six Proof-Revises of "The Ghost's Touch" have reached me this morning.

WC

---

1. No letter from WC to Watt of 19 May 1885 has been traced, but the reference to 'The Ghost's Touch' makes it certain that the letter indeed belongs to that year. Watt had written to WC on 16 May to say that the proofs were being sent separately by book post (Berg).

[2426] TO A. P. WATT, 21 MAY 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 96–97.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st May 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

My best thanks for your ready compliance with my request – in the matter of my questions to T.<sup>1</sup> It is a great relief to me to hear that the publication of the story in a magazine is in your hands.<sup>2</sup>

Perry Mason & Co's letter is enclosed.<sup>3</sup> We have plenty of time – but I thought (or did I dream it?) that they wrote to you, altering their first plans, and hastening their day of publication. I am reckoned a good hand at mysteries – but if they did not write to this effect, why they should want the MS by the 1st of May last is a mystery which is too much for me.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours WC

---

1. Watt had written to WC on 20 May to say that he had sent a letter to Tillotson that day with questions concerning the arrangements for 'The Ghost's Touch', and expected an answer by the following Friday (Berg). (WC in fact received Tillotson's answers enclosed in a note from Watt dated 22 May.)

2. On 5 May 1885, long after the agreement had been signed, Tillotson had written to Watt requesting permission to publish The Evil Genius in a metropolitan monthly magazine (in addition to the various weekly newspapers agreed on), with a consequent deferral of the publication of the novel in volume form (Berg). On 20 May, Watt wrote to explain that, permission having been granted by WC, the arrangements would, at Tillotson's request, be arranged by Watt himself. It seems likely, however, that such a serial appearance never took place.

3. Watt's letter of 20 May also mentions an enclosed letter from Perry Mason in Boston, which WC is requested to read and return (Berg). Though this is not bound into the volumes at Pembroke and remains untraced, it must concern the further stories WC had promised to write for the Youth's Companion.

4. Watt's letters to WC of 20 April and 22 May 1885 make clear that, though the Boston firm did not intend to publish the stories until 1886, for some unstated reason they did indeed want the manuscripts by 1 May 1885 (Berg).

[2427] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 21 MAY 1885

MS: Clarke Collection. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 97.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st May 1885

My dear Winter,

Now I have got your letter, I begin to think I shall recover my health again. Come and help me on the earliest possible day at 2 o'Clock – when you will find me and my luncheon both ready for you. There shall be no party. So only let me have two words to tell me which day you choose at your own best convenience.

Ever yours | WC

Mrs Graves sends her kindest remembrances and welcomes you back.

[3112] TO WILKIE COLLINS BARR,<sup>1</sup> 27 MAY 1885

MS: Unknown. Extract: 'Literary Notes', New York Times (29 June 1885) p. 3; A&C4, p. 27.

London, May 27, 1885.

Dear Sir:

Two of your names give you a claim to my autograph, which I ought to be the last person living to dispute. But there is another reason for my writing to you. I am especially pleased to hear that you like "Armadale" – for, if I may venture to pronounce an opinion. I think "Armadale" the best book that I have written.

1. In the New York Times the extract is prefaced: ‘Wilkie Collins has written to a Lancaster boy, who rejoices in the name of Wilkie Collins Barr:’. WC’s inclusion of ‘London’ in the address line probably indicates this letter is sent abroad, so the reference to Lancaster is presumably to one of the places with that name in the USA, the largest being in Pennsylvania. No person of this precise name has been traced in US (or indeed UK) public records. However, there are some people called ‘Collins Barr’ with different first names, and in Reading, Pennsylvania the 1870 Census records a Wilkie Barr born c.1869.

[2428] TO MARION EDITH HUNT,<sup>1</sup> 7 JUNE 1885

MS: Huntington (HH 79). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 98.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th June 1885

Dear Mrs Holman Hunt,

Your kind letter finds me ailing like Holman, and about to try what sea air will do for me tomorrow. In any other case, I should have been glad to have had the opportunity of personally thanking you for your invitation. As it is, I can only ask leave to report myself (if I get better in the new air) when I return to London.

With love to Holman, and in the hope of hearing better accounts of him soon.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Marion Edith Hunt née Waugh, second wife of the painter Holman Hunt. His first wife Fanny had died in the year following their marriage in 1865, and he married her sister in 1875.

[2429] TO CHARLES J. DAVIES,<sup>1</sup> 11 JUNE 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 98, amended A&C3, p. 69.

14 Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 11th June 1885

Dear Sir,

Your letter, informing me of the proposal which the Directors of the General Theatrical Fund have honoured me by making, has been forwarded to this place. I will, with pleasure, be one of the Honorary Stewards under the Chairmanship of Mr Bancroft.<sup>2</sup> But, in the present state of my health, I fear there is but little prospect of my being able to attend the Dinner.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Charles J. Davies Esq (Secretary)

---

1. Then Secretary of the General Theatrical Fund, founded in 1845. WC had taken the chair at the Twentieth Anniversary Festival back in 1865 – see [0635] to HC of 13 April 1865.

2. Squire Bancroft had recently retired from the stage – see [2364] to him of 31 October 1884.

[2430] TO CHARLES KENT, 12 JUNE 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 99.

14 Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 12th June 1885

My dear Kent,

I have run away to the sea air – as our friend Beard says, to “oxygenise my blood”. The process is, as I imagine, beginning – and the length of my stay here depends entirely on how the process goes on. The one thing I know definitely now is, that you shall hear from me again.

In the meantime, I am doubly sorry – sorry to hear such a dreary account of your health, and sorry to know that you have not applied to our good old friend for the help which he is always ready and glad to give you. Set this right – unless Nature and Summer help you to set yourself right, which would be the best result of all.

My best thanks for the trouble you have so kindly taken about my Trials. One only has gone to the U.S.A.<sup>2</sup> The other two are waiting for the present (one of them is not yet found) while I endeavour to get on with the long serial story which is to start in the autumn (October next).<sup>3</sup> If “Finlayson”<sup>4</sup> can suggest any references to Trials (that are not too well known) without trouble to you or to him, I shall be really grateful. But if I am to occupy your time or cause any sort of worry – then I entreat you to “put it off like Doctor Drowsy’s Sermons”<sup>5</sup> to a future opportunity.

Always yours aftly | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | London. W.’ and postmarked ‘RAMSGATE | D | JU12 | 85’.

2. Referring to the first of ‘The Victims of Circumstances’ sketches, ‘A Sad Death and Brave Life’.

3. The Evil Genius.

4. Thus for W. F. Finlason, author of Reeves’ History of the English Law (3 vols, London: Reeves & Turner, 1869) among other works, legal specialist and near neighbour of Kent’s – see the notes to [2437] to Charles Kent, 26 June 1885.

5. A reference to Mrs Hardcastle in Act IV of Goldsmith’s She Stoops to Conquer: ‘You shall be married to-morrow, and we’ll put off the rest of his education, like Dr. Drowsy’s sermons, to a fitter opportunity’.

[2431] TO EMILY WYNNE,<sup>1</sup> 12 JUNE 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 495 (as to Emily and Anne Wynne).

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 12th June 1885

Dear Mrs Wynne,

I am ashamed of myself – I ought to have got well long since, having such kind interest as yours to encourage me.

In this air I really think I am beginning to recover my lost strength – and here I must remain for a little while, in training for the Banquet, and in reliance on your unwearied and most friendly hospitality. The moment I know on what date I return to London, the first letter which mentions that return shall be a letter to you.

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Emily Sarah le Poer Wynne née Goold, the widow of Henry le Poer Wynne (1836–74), ‘a promising member of the Indian Civil Service who died of cholera at the age of thirty-five’ (Peters, p. 411). She probably met WC through Frank Beard, though she was also a friend of Edward Pigott. She lived in Delamere Street, near Maida Vale, with her daughter Anne (Nannie), then twelve years old. All of the extant letters to Nannie, the last being [2835] of 27 April 1888, plus a handful of those to her mother, are published in chronological sequence with an introduction in B&C, II, pp. 491–513.

2. Directed to ‘Mrs Wynne | 4. Delamere | London W.’. Postmarked ‘RAMSGATE | JU12 | 85’.

[2432] TO ANNE WYNNE,<sup>1</sup> 12 JUNE 1885

MS: Private.<sup>2</sup> Published: Smith & Terry, pp. 34–35; B&C, II, pp. 495–496.

12th June 1885

To Miss Nannie Wynne<sup>3</sup>

In return for your flowers, dear Nannie, I have written a ghost story for you. It wants – what you never want – correction, and then it will be ready for you.<sup>4</sup>

When I have the pleasure of meeting you, at your Mama’s luncheon table, I wish to ask your advice on a matter of serious importance. Everbody tells me I ought to “take care of myself” if I wish to get well. My misfortune is that I don’t know how to take care of myself. I should like to hear what you ideas are on this subject, and whether you have ever been in the habit of taking care of yourself and (if yes) how you did it, and whether after all you found it worth your while? I am – as I take it – not more than fifty two (or three) years older than you are – and your example would therefore be of the utmost value to your faithful

Old Man.

P.S. | No – I have not written about a murder in a cab.<sup>5</sup> But if one of your young men (of whom I am jealous) should get murdered in a cab, I shall be interested in hearing of it

-
1. Anne (Nannie) Elizabeth le Poer Wynne (1873–1950), then twelve years old, who eventually married Sir Alexander Waldemar, fourth Viscount Lawrence, in 1904.
  2. Enclosed with [2431] to Nannie’s mother.
  3. Written across the top of the letter.
  4. ‘The Ghost’s Touch’, syndicated by Tilloton.
  5. It should be noted that The Mystery of a Hansom Cab, Fergus Hume’s bestselling detective story ‘about a murder in a cab’, did not appear until the following year.

[2433] TO A. P. WATT, 14 JUNE 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 100–101.

14 Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 14th June 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

Here I am, endeavouring (to use my doctor’s expression) to “oxygenise my blood” – and beginning, as I hope, to succeed. At any rate, I am beginning to feel stronger, which will do equally well for me.

Your kind letter came this morning.<sup>1</sup> And here are my replies to Mr Tillotson’s inquiries:

Some time in next month (July) I hope to send in – through you – the first third of the MS of my serial story. The sooner it can be set up after that, the better I shall be pleased. My corrections will give very little trouble this time, and will be rapidly sent to press.

As for the title, I am in my customary condition of bewilderment. It is not found yet. The moment it comes to me, Mr Tillotson shall have it.<sup>2</sup> But he knows the danger (in the present disgraceful state of our law of copyright) of publicly announcing the title before the story – or rather the first part of the story – is published. Poor Fergus copyrighted his title of “Dark Days” by writing half a dozen pages of “bogus” fiction, published on the day when the title was announced, and sold to somebody at a price named on the title-page – as a means of completing formal publication.<sup>3</sup> What does Mr Tillotson think of taking this precaution in my case? If I remember correctly, I think you were in favour of trying the experiment when we once talked of it.<sup>4</sup>

The length of my stay here will depend entirely on my health. For the present, my address is at the head of my letter.<sup>5</sup> You are, I hope, not suffering under the heat in London as I suffered before I came here. This is our hottest day in Ramsgate, so far.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Watt had written to WC on 12 June conveying Tillotson’s inquiries concerning the title of the new serial story and the time when he could expect the first third of the manuscript in Bolton. The letter also contained the information that serialization was scheduled to begin in the newspapers in October (Berg).

2. The choice was eventually The Evil Genius.

3. Frederick John Fergus, pseud. ‘Hugh Conway’ (1847–85: ODNB), author of the thrillers Called Back (1883) and Dark Days (1884), first published as Arrowsmith’s Christmas Annuals, who died suddenly of typhoid fever in Monte Carlo on 15 May 1885 (see Graham Law, “‘Poor Fergus’: On Wilkie Collins and “‘Hugh Conway’”, WCSJ, NS 3 (2001), pp. 67–72). Watt’s letter to WC of 16 May had also referred briefly to the death of ‘poor Fergus’ (Berg).

4. Watt replied to WC on the same date to say that he would contact Tillotson concerning this idea. A similar ‘bogus’ edition of The Evil Genius, a pamphlet in twenty-four pages consisting simply of the Prologue to the story, was in fact published in late 1885 to protect the title – see [2471] to Watt of 21 September 1885 and the copy held at the BL.

5. WC remained in Ramsgate until 29 June – see [2436] to Watt of 24 June 1885.

[2434] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 19 JUNE 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 101.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 19th June 1885

My dear Chatto,

I have only this morning heard (from the servants at Gloucester Place) of your visit.<sup>1</sup>

My business here is the re-creation of a battered constitution – and I am getting on fairly well with that object in view. My present idea is to return to London at the end of this month. In the mean time, my address is at the top of my letter. If you too want a little sea air – this is a delicate hint; I say no more.

I am so completely out of “the literary world” that I have only the other day (to my shame) seen your announcement of “Marino Faliero: a tragedy by ~~Lord Byron~~ – I beg your pardon – by Mr Swinburne”<sup>2</sup> When do you publish “Marmion”, “Prometheus Unbound,” and “The Ancient Mariner” by the same author?

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Andrew Chatto must have called at WC’s home after the author left for Ramsgate over a week earlier.

2. The cancellation is facetious. WC refers to Algernon Charles Swinburne’s tragedy (with the same title and theme as Byron’s of 1821) which was published by Chatto & Windus in 1885. The firm had taken over the publication of Swinburne’s verse from their predecessor in the business, John Camden Hotten.

[2435] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 20 JUNE 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 102.

14. Nelson Crescent. | Ramsgate | 20th June 1885

My dear Chatto,

Your letter and mine have crossed each other.

Let me thank you for the promissory note for £38..5.- on account of the sale of the library edition of “I Say No.”<sup>1</sup> I am very glad to hear of the improved sale – but my respect for Circulating Library readers is not increased by their preferring “I Say No” to “Heart and Science.”<sup>2</sup>

With kindest regards | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esq

---

1. Credited as ‘Chatto & Windus Note’ on 19 October, so presumably a Bill at four months (Coumts: WC).

2. Andrew Chatto had written to WC at Gloucester Place on 18 June, enclosing the bank draft covering the royalties due on sales above 750 of the three-volume edition of the novel, according to the publishing agreement of 20 October 1884 (Reading).

[2436] TO A. P. WATT, 24 JUNE 1885<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 480. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 102.

Ramsgate 24th June

My dear Mr Watt,

Many thanks for your letter.<sup>2</sup> I am getting on so well that I have arranged to return on Monday next (the 29th) – and I shall hope to shake hands with you later in the week, at your own time and convenience.

My departure is hastened by the infernal noises which make this otherwise delightful place a hell upon earth. Organs – brass bands – howling costermongers selling fish, make day hideous – and night too, up to 10 o’clock. Nobody complains but me.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the stay in Ramsgate.

2. Watt had written to WC on 23 June to say that Tillotson had agreed to produce a ‘bogus’ edition of the new serial story to protect the title (Berg).

3. Nearly thirty years earlier WC had written, in the person of a middle-aged man at the seaside with his wife, of the smells and noises which made a seaside visit no better than staying in London (‘Sea-breezes and the London Smack’, Household Words, 18 (4 September 1858), pp. 274–277).

[2437] TO CHARLES KENT, 26 JUNE 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 103.

Ramsgate | 26th June 1885

My dear Kent,

You are the best of good friends – and I am really grateful when I read Mr Finlason’s kind letter.<sup>2</sup>

On Monday next, I have arranged to return – after three weeks of steady improvement – and (thus far) no returns of the infernal torture which is called in popular English “breast-pang”.<sup>3</sup>

The destination of that precious bundle (which I am dying to open) will therefore be 90, Gloucester Place. Do come and see me as soon as you can after Monday. Choose your own day and hour – and let me have a scratch of your pen to say what day and hour it shall be.

Needless to add that the trials shall be carefully preserved and faithfully returned<sup>4</sup>

Yours always affly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | London. W.’ and postmarked ‘RAMSGATE | D | JU 26 | 85’.

2. Also in the Parrish Collection is a letter to Kent from W. F. Finlason of ‘12 Campden Hill Road | Kensington’ dated ‘June 24’. Finlason has ‘collected a number of cases containing very interesting stories’ from which ‘Wilkie Collins can, I fancy, extract plots for many novels’. He sends ‘for the most part cases which contain curious histories of human woes – turning generally upon secret, doubtful, or double marriages. It is remarkable how much of the interest of human life turns upon marriages.’ William F. Finlason (b. 1820/1) was a lawyer (Census 1891).

3. That is, angina.

4. Referring to Finlason’s notes, which he had requested be eventually returned.

[2438] TO A. P. WATT, 2 JULY 1885

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), on a postcard.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 300; BGLL, IV, pp. 103–104.

2nd July 1885

Delighted to see you tomorrow as you propose.<sup>2</sup>

WC

---

1. Directed to ‘A. P. Watt Esqre | 34. Paternoster Row | E. C.’ and postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 8A | JY 2 | B5’.

2. Watt had written to WC the same day to propose a meeting now that the author had returned to London (Berg). As [2440] to Watt of 4 July makes clear, the consultation must have concerned Tillotson’s claim that the author had sent in the first third of the manuscript of the new serial story (and claimed payment for it) too early.

[2439] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & Co., 3 JULY 1885

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 301; BGLL, IV, p. 104.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd July 1885

Dear Sirs,

I am much obliged to you for the list of Champagnes. My stock of bottles is already a large one – but I have not many half bottles. If you will kindly send to me, at your convenience, two half bottle samples of the 1874 Vin Brut, I will write again and report the result.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co

---

1. Directed to ‘Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co | 135. Minorities | E.’, postmarked as dated.

2. A note in pencil in an unknown hand on the otherwise blank third page of the folding notepaper reads: ‘We have no half bottles 1874 Brut Champagne – the only old wine is 2 11/12 dry pints 1878 dry Riesling, for which, our price to private people is 84/- p 24 pints. Have you written to him about Champ 8?'

[2440] TO A. P. WATT, 4 JULY 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 104–105.

London | 4th July 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

My lawyer has just left me. He pronounces Tillotson to be entirely in the wrong – and he advises me not to claim the return of the MS – for this reason, that I might appear to be throwing a doubt on my own absolute right to send it to him when it was ready, without any reference to the date at which it may be convenient to him to begin publishing the story.<sup>1</sup>

My lawyer will write to me stating his opinion plainly – after reading the agreement and the correspondence. And I am to send a copy of the letter to Tillotson (without comments or remarks of any kind) simply as a reply to his last submissive letter to you. How this ends you shall hear without fail.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. For the background to this dispute over the early submission to Tillotson's of the first third of the manuscript of The Evil Genius (which WC won – see [2452] to Watt of 7 August 1885), see the correspondence between A. P. Watt and W. F. Tillotson held in the Watt papers in the Berg Collection, and discussed in Law, pp. 100–114.

[2441] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 13 JULY 1885

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 302; BGLL, IV, p. 105.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th July 1885

Dear Sirs,

I am much obliged to you for sending me the two half bottle samples – but I regret to say that the wine is not dry enough for me. Old Vin Brut is the only Champagne that I can venture to drink.<sup>1</sup>

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co

---

1. A note in pencil in an unknown hand on the otherwise blank third page reads: 'We have 30dz ½ bot Brut | 1880 Vintage Carte d'Or | 89/ p 24 less 5% Dis | which we might send. Mr C need not know that it is 1880 Vintage but judge the wine on its merits'.

[2442] TO ANNE WYNNE, 15 JULY 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 496.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

15th July 1885

My lovely funny Lady,

Don't be angry with me. I only got your nice letter /on my return to London/ last night. It had followed me back from Ramsgate – and I had been idling at Margate and Westgate on Sea on my way ~~back~~ home. Ask your Mama, with my kindest remembrances, at what hour I may call tomorrow (Thursday) if I have a chance of seeing you before you go away next. This afternoon I am engaged to go to Harrow – or I should have taken my chance instead of writing.

Let me have one word to tell me the hour – and may you never have such a number of letters to answer as I now see on my writing desk!

Yours affly | WC

-
1. Directed to 'Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.', postmarked 'LONDON.W. | JY 15 | 85'.
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram watermarked 'Sight Preserving Paper'.

[2443] TO EMILY WYNNE, 16 JULY 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 105–106.

10.30. a.m. | 90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
Thursday July 16

Dear Mrs Wynne,
At 5.30 today – with the greatest pleasure.
Vy truly yours | WC

-
1. Directed to 'Mrs Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W', postmarked as dated.

[2444] TO CHARLES KENT, 17 JULY 1885

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 303; B&C, II, p. 481.

Friday July 17th

My dear Kent,
My rooms [del] are uninhabitable – new carpets – staining of floors – stinks – workmen I fly the house as soon as my work is done (in a bedroom) – and return to sleep. You shall hear from me again the moment this revolution is over – and we will fumigate the newly-carpeted premises together.<sup>1</sup>
Ever affly | WC

I address to your private residence – not knowing when you may be at the Club.<sup>2</sup>

-
1. That is, smoke a cigar together in WC's newly refurbished rooms at Gloucester Place.
  2. The Athenæum – see [2179] to Kent of 9 July 1883. WC's postscript starts beneath his signature before curling up his right margin.

[2445] TO EMILY WYNNE, 21 JULY 1885

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 106.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
21st July 1885

Dear Mrs Wynne,
These two portraits ought to have been sent to you yesterday. The printers are keeping me in trim – hard at work.
“Sarony” speaks for himself.<sup>1</sup> The other portrait was taken by the electric light. It represents a gentleman who privately preferred the light of day – and who never looks pleasant, except at your luncheon table.
My love to Nannie. I wish I were at Broadstairs too – with nothing to do.
Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. A picture of WC by the New York photographer; the second photograph has not been identified.

[2446] TO A. P. WATT, 22 JULY 1885<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 106–107.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd July

My dear Mr Watt,

Can you look in, at any convenient time to yourself, tomorrow Thursday? I shall have the corrected first third of the Mss ready by that time, I hope.<sup>2</sup>

If tomorrow will do, don't trouble to write. If not, you have only to choose your own day and hour.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Dating from the calendar and context.
  2. Of The Evil Genius.

[3141] TO CHARLES KENT, 24 JULY 1885

MS: Unknown. On sale: Sotheby's (17 December 2008, LO8411, Lot 40).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C5, p. 15.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Friday. 24th July 1885

My dear Kent,

The workmen are out of the house – and the smell of varnish is following the workmen.<sup>2</sup> Choose your own afternoon at, or after 5, next week (the sooner the better) – and come and fumigate “the Study”.

Yrs afftly | W.C.

Let me have a word to say when I may expect you – so that I may be at home.

-
1. Bound into extra-illustrated edition of John Forster, The Life of Charles Dickens, 1872–1874, Vol. III, Pt.1, p. 38. It is followed by an engraving of WC by E. Halpin based on a photograph by Elliott & Fry of 1871. The engraving was first published as a frontispiece to My Miscellanies, New York: Harper, 1874, and London: Chatto & Windus, 1875.
  2. See [2444] to Kent, 17 July 1885 for more on the refurbishing of his rooms and the plans to ‘fumigate’ them by smoking a cigar.

[2447] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 24 JULY 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/9), with associated envelope at Texas (Ms (Collins, W.) Misc TA).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 481.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | 24 July 1885

In London again<sup>2</sup>

My dear Winter,

In what part of the British Islands, I wonder, will these words find you? Not near Ramsgate or we should have heard from you, and have seen you. And not in London, of course. Soon, I shall be the only person left in Gloucester Place. But London empty, means London perfectly adapted to such work as ours. So I stay at my desk. At 8.30.p.m. there is [del] blessed idleness – and something to eat and drink – in this house. You may be passing through London. I say no more.

Mrs Graves joins with me in sending you ~~her~~ love.

Always afftly Yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Directed to ‘William Winter Esqre | New Adelphi Chambers | 12. John Street | W.C.’. Signed ‘Wilkie Collins’ in lower-left corner, with ‘To be forwarded’ added in WC’s hand at the top, and postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 4 | JY24 | 85 | 9’.
  2. Written above the monogram and printed address.

[2448] TO A. P. WATT, 24 JULY 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 107–108.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th July 1885 | 10.P.M

My dear Mr Watt

Your kind letter will no doubt be followed tomorrow morning by the book. Let me very sincerely thank you for an addition to my library which I shall really value – and which I shall read with renewed pleasure before it takes its place on my shelves.<sup>1</sup>

Having already d—d Jarrold of Norwich I am in the right state of mind to make a “sensible suggestion.” Will you kindly write by tomorrow’s post to Tillotson, telling him of the discovery which you have made – and requesting that he will not advertise the title of my new story until he hears from you again? In the mean time, when my lawyer returns to town on Monday morning I will consult him as to the propriety of setting Jarrold at defiance, on the ground (1) that the title is a quotation from a famous old song, and as a quotation is public property. (2) That any property in the quotation used as a title, which may exist, belongs to the man who first used it – the author of the play performed, (and therefore, by English law, published) in 1829.<sup>2</sup> As soon as I get the lawyer’s opinion, I will ask you (if it is quite convenient) to let me have the pleasure of seeing you here for a final decision, before you go to Melrose.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt’s letter of 24 July, to which WC’s is a reply, refers to the enclosed ‘little volume of which I spoke to you yesterday’ but the title itself remains untraced (Berg).

2. Watt’s letter to WC of 24 July (Berg) establishes that WC’s original title for The Evil Genius was Home! Sweet Home!, the title of the popular song written in 1823 for the comic opera Clari; or, the Maid of Milan, the words by the American dramatist John Howard Payne (1791–1852) and the melody by Henry Rowley Bishop (1786–1855). Which play WC refers to is not clear, though it might be Home, Sweet Home! or, the Ranz des Vaches (1829), an operatic entertainment in two acts by Isaac Pocock, which appears in the BL Catalogue, though the song itself had been published many times before that date. Among many other usages, the title had also been employed for a series of temperance tracts published by Jarrold & Sons of Norwich in their ‘Books for the Household’ series. As [2449] to Watt of the following day indicates, the title was in fact abandoned.

3. Referring to Watt’s annual summer holiday at Melrose on the river Tweed in south-east Scotland.

[2449] TO A. P. WATT, 25 JULY 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 108.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th July 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

My lawyer has “consulted counsel” – and the result is, that my poor unfortunate title must be abandoned.<sup>1</sup> You shall hear why – when I have the pleasure of seeing you.

In the meantime, I am afraid I must ask you to write again to Tillotson to say that the existing title must not be used – and that I will as soon as possible find another title, and communicate it without delay.

Let me have one line to say when I may expect to see you (and to hear what Chatto says), either tomorrow (Wednesday) or on any day after which may suit you better.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. See the note to [2448] to Watt of 24 July 1885.

2. It is not clear on what subject Andrew Chatto’s opinion was sought, though it was perhaps again concerning the title of what would become The Evil Genius, to be published in volume form by Chatto & Windus. Watt had in fact written on 24 July to say that he had called on Chatto only to find that he was out of town, but would do so again on the following day when Chatto was expected to be back (Berg).

[2450] TO A. P. WATT, 4 AUGUST 1885

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 482. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 109.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 4th August 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

A word to thank you for your kind letter, and for the enclosure.<sup>1</sup> This last suggests to me that T. has been consulting his lawyer on the subject of the agreement – and has been informed that he was bound to pay that “cash” immediately on receipt of the MS.

My lawyer doesn’t return until tomorrow (Wednesday) – when he will call here at eleven o’clock. By that day’s post, you shall hear how it ends.

I envy you your visit to Abbotsford. Last night, in my wakeful hours I was reading “A Legend of Montrose” again for the 100th time.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Presumably a letter from W. F. Tillotson to A. P. Watt, though it is not bound into the volumes at Pembroke or found among the Watt papers at the Berg. On the dispute concerning when the first payment for The Evil Genius was due, see [2440] to Watt of 4 July 1885.

2. Watt was to spend his summer holiday at Melrose, not far from Abbotsford, the home from 1811 of Sir Walter Scott, whose A Legend of Montrose appeared in 1819. On WC’s admiration for ‘the glorious Walter Scott’, see [2102] to William Winter of 14 January 1883 and Baker 2002, pp. 146–148.

[2451] TO W. F. TILLOTSON, 7 AUGUST 1885

MS: Bolton (ZBEN/4/1/4). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 109.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 7th August 1885

Dear Mr Tillotson,

I beg to enclose the receipt for your cheque, duly signed – with my thanks.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W. F. Tillotson Esq

---

1. A cheque for £300, being the first instalment of the payment for serial rights to The Evil Genius – see [2452] to A. P. Watt of the same date. This sum was credited to WC’s bank account on 7 August, marked simply ‘Recd’ (Coultts: WC).

[2452] TO A. P. WATT, 7 AUGUST 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 110.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 7th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

My lawyer’s letter has won the victory. Yesterday evening came a letter from Tillotson, enclosing a cheque for £300.

T’s letter has gone to the lawyer in an envelope addressed to you. When he has read it, I have asked him to close the envelope and send it to the post. I know how glad you will be to hear that this worry is at an end.

Will you let me know where I shall send my cheque for the commission? To the clerk at your office? or straight to your bankers to be paid to your account? Name of the clerk – or name of the bankers – all that will be wanted.

I hope you are enjoying wonderful weather and wonderful toddy, and sleeping (though it is a Hydropathic establishment) in dry sheets.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Concerning Watt's holiday at Melrose, Scotland. Here, 'toddy' refers to the drink composed of Scotch whisky with sugar and hot water: 'The lads an' lasses, blithely bent, | To mind baith saul an' body, | Sit round the table, weel content, | An' steer about the toddy' (Robert Burns, 'Holy Fair', 1786, ll. 172–175).

[2453] TO JAMES J. BAXTER,<sup>1</sup> 10 AUGUST 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 110.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th August 1885

Dear Sir,

Will you be so good as to pay the enclosed cheque for £30...- to the credit of Mr Watt's account, and to let me hear that you have received it safely?<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr James J. Baxter

---

1. Clerk to A. P. Watt.

2. Baxter acknowledged receipt of the cheque (Watt's 10% commission on Tillotson's first payment of £300) in a note of 11 August (Berg). The sum was debited from WC's account to 'A P Watt' on 12 August (Coutts: WC).

[2454] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 11 AUGUST 1885

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 304; BGLL, IV, p. 111.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th Augt 1885

Dear Sirs,

I must beg you to excuse this late acknowledgement of the last samples which you have kindly sent. Circumstances have hitherto prevented me from tasting the wine. It is undoubtedly dry, delicate, delicious champagne, with but one defect (so far as I am concerned) – it is, I fear, not old enough for my gouty constitution. But I am unwilling to give it up without a further trial. If you will send me two dozen pints, I shall be able to discover how it agrees with me, and to let you know the result.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co

---

1. Directed to 'Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co | 135. Minorities | E.', postmarked as dated.

2. Pencil note in unknown hand between the signature and the addressee line: '2790 | 2 ½ bots Carte d'Or Brut 95 37 @ 72/- p 24 | charge 44/6 p 24 to Collins'.

[2455] TO ANNE WYNNE, 12 AUGUST 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 496–497.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

12th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1885

Oh my admirable Nannie, why, why did you submit to have those teeth torn out of your nice little mouth? I protest against that cruel and furious system of curing the toothache – and, what is more, I have heard of a dentist – no! not a dentist, an Angel- – who refuses to take out teeth and who cures his patients without tearing their bones out of their jaws.

The next time you have the toothache, let me know – and I will find his address, or get it from the friend who first revealed to me the existence of this glorious creature.<sup>3</sup>

Yes – I received with pride and pleasure the delicious flowers, and I kept them alive as long as they would live, and lamented their untimely death. I am going away for a day or two to rest – and then coming back again to work, work, work, harder than ever. Let me know where you are on the 22nd of this month so that I may send you the newspaper with the Ghost Story in it – and remember me most kindly to your Mama. You are both of course away from London. Gloucester Place is a ghastly solitude, and your devoted old man leads the life of a hermit.

WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked ‘LONDON. W. | SP 15 | 85’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked ‘Sight Preserving Paper’.

3. Perhaps Dr Frank Beard.

[2456] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 14 AUGUST 1885

MS: Clarke Collection. Published: B&C, II, p. 482.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

14th August, 1885

There are some atrocious persons, my dear collaborateur, whose conduct is too bad to admit of excuses and expressions of penitence. I am one of those persons. When I remember that I have not even written to congratulate your brother on his marriage, and that I have allowed all this time to pass without thanking you for your most friendly and most welcome letter, I become an object of well-merited detestation to myself. I even begin to think that I must have deserved to suffer the merciless neuralgic pains in my chest and my arms which have tormented me in this spring and summer. Slowly, slowly I am getting the better of this new enemy, and, in that circumstance, I find the courage to trust to your friendly indulgence, and to write again – on the chance of recommending myself to your mercy. Whether you will confirm me in my conclusions, by sending me your essay on Balzac, remains to be seen. I own at once that I don’t deserve it – a circumstance which, with such a nature as yours, may actually give me a claim on you.<sup>2</sup>

If you still think of writing on Charles Dickens, only tell me what sort of information you want – and it shall be yours with the greatest pleasure.<sup>3</sup> Of course (like you) I have been working. Ill or well, I must use my brains and my pen. Later on this month, I hope to send you a short story which is to appear in many newspapers, here and in America.<sup>4</sup> Later in the year a new long story will begin to appear in the same form of publication.<sup>5</sup>

Enough, and too much, about myself. Let me “make my exit” as we say on the English stage. The stage reminds me of Dickens’s impatience of the long melodramas which I used to take him to see when we were both in Paris. The second act generally exhausted his powers of endurance. I implored him to respect the Development of Art. He generally answered “You shall tell me the story of the piece, when you get back to the hotel. I’m off for a walk in the streets”. I firmly believe he never read one of Balzac’s novels. There again the developments were too much for him! With kindest remembrances to Count de Heussey<sup>6</sup> – always most truly yours.

Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. WC records receiving and reading the article in his next letter to de Heussey, [2470] of 19 September.

3. With assistance from WC, de Heussey’s research on Dickens eventually appeared as L’Inimitable Boz: Etude historique et anecdotique sur la vie et l’oeuvre de Charles Dickens (Paris: Maison Quantin, 1889).

4. ‘The Ghost’s Touch’ was published in Tillotson’s Bolton Weekly Journal, 26 September to 10 October 1885, among other British journals, and, in the United States, in the New York Sunday Mercury on Sunday, 4 October 1885.

5. The Evil Genius, which began serialisation in Tillotson’s syndicate of newspapers in December 1885.

6. WC’s correspondent’s brother.

[2457] TO PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, 17 AUGUST 1885

MS: Duke, damaged.<sup>1</sup> Published: Hayne, p. 70; BGLL, IV, pp. 111–112.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 17th August 1885

No 1, my dear Hayne, thanks you most sincerely for your last letter, and sends my affectionate remembrances to you and yours.

No 2. encloses an excuse for not having sent an earlier reply, in the shape of a mad short-story – due to a wild idea of a new supernatural being who should neither be seen nor heard by mortals, but only felt – and whose return to earth occurs in the broad sunlight of noon. (N.B. The newspapers here and in the U.S.A. publish periodically on this present August 22nd, and on August 29th, and on September 5th. Please keep the proofs at home till these three dates have expired – or the newspapers may complain, and the copyright may be in peril).<sup>2</sup>

No. 3. Reports me, better again, and hard at work on a long serial story – and at my wits' end to find a title.<sup>3</sup>

No. 4. asks for more news from Copse Hill,<sup>4</sup> when you have really [nothing] to do, on some convenient ha[lf hour.]

And No 5 subscribes me (is [“subscribes] me” bad grammar? I only learnt Greek a[nd Latin] Grammar at school).

Your affectionate frie[nd, | WC]

---

1. A square has been cut from the lower right corner of the paper, presumably for the signature. The lost text (in square brackets) has been recovered from the published version.

2. Referring to ‘The Ghost’s Touch’, which was in fact delayed in its publication by Tillotson. It appeared in the Bolton Weekly Journal on 26 September, 3 October and 10 October 1885. For WC’s annoyance at this delay, see [2463] to A. P. Watt, 13 September 1885.

3. Referring to The Evil Genius. The original title (Home! Sweet Home!) had been abandoned due to a legal problem (see [2448] to Watt, 24 July 1885). WC suggested two options to Watt in [2462] of 7 September 1885 and the matter was clearly settled shortly after.

4. Near Augusta, Georgia, where Hayne had lived since 1866. See [2399] to Hayne of 28 January 1885.

[2458] TO EMILY WYNNE, 22 AUGUST 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 112–113.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 22nd August 1885

Dear Mrs Wynne,

My story has been divided into three weekly “parts” – in the interests of the newspapers.<sup>2</sup> But you must not be kept waiting for three weeks – so I venture to send a proof. “Venture” you will find to be no mere figure of speech when you see the vile paper, and the small type – for which pray accept my excuses. Penny newspapers (printed in the English language) all over the world, form my medium of publication this time /– and we are (and look) cheap./

I have not yet received my orders from my dear and admirable Nannie. But I understand her silence. Even her courage must have been shaken by such a photographic failure as you describe. When she recovers her energies she will write.

In the meantime, here I am at my desk – living in a “family circle” of my own creating and enjoying London in August. Visitors are out of town, street-music is out of town and Mr Mart (of Oxford Street)<sup>3</sup> sells me Nectarines cheap, because his customers have left him for the autumn.

Believe me | Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Wynne | Little Saxham Rectory | Bury St Edmunds’. From April 1885 to 1921, the incumbent of the Church of St Nicholas, Little Saxham, to the west of Bury St Edmunds, was the Rev. Henry Ingate Kilner, M.A. (1850–1935), though the connexion to the Wynne family remains unclear. Emily Wynne and her daughter seem to have stayed in Little Saxham the following summer also; see [2595] to Anne Wynne of 27 July 1886.

2. ‘The Ghost’s Touch’, published in three parts in Tillotson’s Bolton Weekly Journal and other papers from 26 September; republished as ‘Mrs Zant and the Ghost’ in Little Novels, 1887. Perhaps written for Nannie Wynne and certainly ‘presented’ to her in [2432] to her of 12 June 1885.

3. Unidentified, but presumably a greengrocer.

[2459] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 25 AUGUST 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), a pre-stamped postcard.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 113.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 25th August 1885

My dear Sir,

I have received another letter from Germany – quite incomprehensible to me. But I hesitate to send it to you as usual for translation, at this time of year, until I know whether you are (by any lucky chance) still in London, like me, when everybody is taking a holiday.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Albéric Iserbyt Esqre | 6. Holyoake Road | Newington Butts | S.E.’, postmarked the following day.

[2460] TO THE REV. RICHARD KAINES,<sup>1</sup> 26 AUGUST 1885

MS: Le Kohns. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 113–114.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 26th August 1885

My dear Sir,

I reply to your kind letter with pleasure.

Nearly one half of “No Thoroughfare” was written by me. And when the Christmas Number was published in England, my name appeared on the title page “side by side” with the name of Dickens.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The Rev<sup>d</sup> Richard Kaines

---

1. Unidentified, but perhaps the contemporary clergyman of that name from Elkton, Virginia. The address line certainly suggests a correspondent from outside London.

[2461] TO F. C. BEARD, 31 AUGUST 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 483.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 31st Aug<sup>t</sup> 1885

My dear Frank

Your letter this morning was a relief and a pleasure, both in one. Only refrain now from walking too far – and I shall expect to see you again a younger man than ever.

I am getting on fairly well – and finding the refuge from myself which I /had/ hoped to find, in my work. How closely that poor little dog had associated himself with every act of my life at home, [del] I only know now. I can go nowhere and do nothing – without missing Tommy.<sup>3</sup>

So far, there has been no return of that familiar fiend who is so good at sharpening his claws on my breast. The cooler temperature is helping me, I suppose. Here we have a drab-coloured sky and a small rain today. May you have sun and cool breezes for tomorrow! Let me hear how the shooting prospers, and how you prosper with it – and give my love to my friends at Southover.

always yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Directed to 'F. Carr Beard Esq | care of William Beard Esq | Southover | Lewes'. Signed 'WC', and postmarked: 'LONDON. W | X | AU 31 | 85 | 8'.
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
  3. WC's beloved Scotch terrier Tommy died on 28 August 1885 (Clarke, pp. 178–179, 182).

[2462] TO A. P. WATT, 7 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: B&C, II, p. 484 (incomplete); BGLL, IV, pp. 114–115.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th Sept 1885

My dear Mr Watt

Welcome back again!<sup>1</sup>

My account of myself is a little gloomy this time. I have lost the dear old friend and companion of many years – my dog.<sup>2</sup> I should not acknowledge to many people what I have suffered during his last illness and death. But I think you will understand me. No more of it now! I think of Walter Scott, when his dog died – asking the friends with whom he was to have dined that day to excuse him because “he had lost a dear old friend” – and love and admire him more than ever.<sup>3</sup>

That matter of the title too still worries me – and Tillotson wants his title this week.<sup>4</sup> Out of a dozen at least, I can only (at present) choose two as specimens

1. Forbidden Kisses.
2. The Evil Genius.

Which do you like best? Or don't you like either of them?<sup>5</sup> I was so desperate yesterday that I actually thought of calling the book:

Blank
A Novel Without a Title.

!!!!

I must wait till my doctor returns from his holiday, before I settle whether to go away from London or not. Are you very busy? The question is selfish. It only means – when can you quite conveniently come and see me?

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I. The prodigious catalogues are returned today by Parcels' delivery with many thanks.<sup>6</sup>

P.S. II. Your circular was not in your letter. Put it in your pocket when you come.<sup>7</sup>

-
1. Watt had written on 4 September on his return from his Scottish holiday (Berg).
  2. WC's Scotch terrier Tommy died at an advanced age on 28 August – see Peters, p. 286.
  3. Referring to Scott's colossal deerhound Maida, shown in the 1817 portrait of Scott by WC's godfather Sir David Wilkie, which died in October 1824; see J. G. Lockhart, Memoirs of the Life of Sir Walter Scott, Bart. (7 vols, Edinburgh: Cadell, 1837–38), VII, ch. 60.
  4. WC's original title for the novel had been abandoned on legal grounds – see [2448], [2449] to Watt of 24 and 25 July 1885.
  5. When Watt replied on 8 September commiserating with WC on the loss of his pet, he expressed a preference for the second title (Berg).
  6. Watt's letter to WC of 4 September requests the return of 'that ponderous volume I sent you' (Berg), but gives no title.
  7. Watt's letter of 4 September refers to the enclosure of the circular, presumably that advertising literary services to prospective authors, along the lines of that to which WC had himself responded back in late 1881 (Berg).

[2463] TO A. P. WATT, 13 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 115–116.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th Sept 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

That wretched creature Tillotson has forced a new annoyance on me.

The enclosed writing will remind you that he distinctly told you – in answer to enquiries which you kindly made on my behalf – that the first weekly part of the story would be published on Aug<sup>t</sup> 22.<sup>1</sup> I have arranged with my German and Dutch translators accordingly – and now I find (from your letter) that Tillotson has delayed the publication, without a word of warning to me (or to you). If the translations have been serially published my copyright is gone – entirely through this man's brutal indifference to the common claims of courtesy – or rather of his insolence in altering the date of publication without informing me of what he had done. I shall hold him responsible for any loss which I may suffer – and shall consult my lawyer when he returns to town.

I dare not trust myself to write to him. Will you kindly write – and insist on his fixing a date for the publication which I can mention to the translators – if they have not already published their translations.

I don't know how that arrangement for publishing the long story in a magazine – to which I consented as a friendly concession to Tillotson – has ended. After his conduct, I cannot think of doing such a man a kindness, and deferring my publication in book form to suit his convenience. Will you (if necessary) say to the magazine proprietor that recent arrangements compel me to make my excuses, and to withdraw from the transaction?<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

You will no doubt find the correspondence with Tillotson among your letters. The paper which I enclose please keep with your letters. It is important.

---

1. Referring to 'The Ghost's Touch'. The enclosure is not bound into the volumes at Pembroke and remains untraced, but is presumably the response WC received from Tillotson to his questions concerning the tale, which was enclosed with Watt's note to WC of 22 May. Watt had written to WC on 12 September informing him that the story had not yet appeared in the Bolton Weekly Journal (Berg); the first of the three parts in fact appeared on 26 September.

2. Referring to The Evil Genius – see [2426] to Watt of 21 May 1885. In fact the agent who was acting for Tillotson in trying to place the serial in a London magazine was again Watt. However, he had reported to Tillotson on 11 July 1885 that he had approached both Chatto & Windus (concerning Belgravia and the Gentleman's Magazine) and Charles Dickens Jr (concerning All The Year Round), and on 27 July that he had approached George Bentley (concerning Temple Bar), but that the novel had been declined on each occasion (Berg). For the originally planned publication dates, see [2457] to Paul Hamilton Hayne, 17 August 1885.

[2464] TO A. P. WATT, 14 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke, in pencil. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 116–117.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday. Sept 14

This morning copies of the Bolton Journal have arrived – announcing the appearance of the first part of the story on Sept 26th next – Augt 22nd having been the date arranged!<sup>1</sup>

WC

---

1. 'The Ghost's Touch' was indeed published in the Tillotson's Bolton Weekly Journal in three parts beginning on 26 September 1885.

[2465] TO ANNE WYNNE, 15 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Private. Published: B&C, II, p. 497.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

15th Sept 1885

Dear, and much injured, Nannie,

I have not been well – and the wretched publisher (without telling me of it) has delayed the publication of ~~the~~ your Story in the newspaper until the 26th of this month. As soon as it does appear, you shall have it – but it is cut into three weekly parts, so it will not be complete till the 10th of October.<sup>2</sup> By that time you will perhaps be in Delamere Street again – and I shall be able to bring it with me.

In the meanwhile, forgive your old man like a dear good young sweetheart – and give my kindest remembrances to your Mamma.

Ever affly yours, | WC

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked 'Sight Preserving Paper'.

2. For the originally scheduled publication dates of 'The Ghost's Touch', see [2457] to Paul Hamilton Hayne, 17 August 1885.

[2466] TO WILLIAM LANIER WASHINGTON,<sup>1</sup> 15 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), envelope only.<sup>2</sup>

Mr Wm Lanier Washington | P.O. Box 1501 | Pittsburgh | Pa | U.S.A.

---

1. See [2411] to him of 9 April 1885.

2. Postmarked: 'LONDON W | 6 | SP 15 | 85 | 12'.

[2467] TO A. P. WATT, 16 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 117.

Wednesday Sept 16th | 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

My best thanks for your letter, and the enclosures. I am glad to find that there is a grace in Tillotson which had escaped my notice.<sup>1</sup> This morning, I hear from my Dutch publishers that the translation has not yet been published.<sup>2</sup> So far, so good. When I hear from Germany you shall know – and there will then be time enough to write again to T.

You are never to come here except when business allows it. And you are always to come here when business does.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written to WC earlier on the same day to say that he had received a letter from Tillotson admitting honestly that the delay in publication of 'The Ghost's Touch' was his own fault (Berg). That letter makes clear that the enclosures WC refers to are a copy of Watt's response to Tillotson and an article by Andrew Lang from the London evening newspaper the St. James's Gazette (1880–1905). This was almost certainly 'To Sir Walter Scott, Bart.', no. 6 in Lang's 'Letters to Eminent Authors' series, which appeared on 15 September, p. 6. The series was published in volume form by Longman's in 1886 as Letters to Dead Authors.

2. Of 'The Ghost's Touch'.

[2468] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 17 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 305; BGLL, IV, p. 118.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th Sept 1885

Dear Sirs,

Assisted by friends, I have got through my little supply of your Champagne – with good results, due no doubt to the genuine dryness of the wine, which also possesses the great merit of delicacy. Thus encouraged, I shall be obliged if you will send me Six dozen half bottles of the same “Vin Brut” – and the sooner they arrive (in the present state of the weather) the more welcome they will be.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – | I take the opportunity of enclosing my cheque for the wine already sent.<sup>3</sup>

Messrs Beecheno, Yaxley & Co.

-
1. Directed to ‘Mesrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co | Wine Merchants | 135. Minorities | E.’, postmarked as dated.
  2. Here WC echoes Mr Gallilee in ch. 5 of Heart and Science: ‘isn’t a pint of Champagne nice drinking, this hot weather? Just cooled with ice ... and poured, fizzing, into a silver mug, Lord, how delicious!’.
  3. On the back of the envelope in pencil in an unknown hand: ‘Receipt sent by J. L. [indecipherable name] | 17/9/85’, followed by a series of calculations.

[2469] TO EMILY WYNNE, 18 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Private. Published: B&C, II, pp. 497–498.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

18th Sept 1885

Dear Mrs Wynne,

I have marked 1, 2, 3, the likenesses which seem to me to be best. No 1. especially is so near to being successful in the matter of expression that it rather exasperates me. But, my little sweetheart [del] is not nicely treated by the photograph. If they try again, suggest powdering her hair (especially over the forehead). It will then “print” lighter, and not look [del] like a wig. My first exclamation (when I saw one of the portraits/) was, “Oh Damn!” But I am now patient – and I shall be glad to place No 1. among my treasures, if you “reprint”.

My neuralgia is plaguing me again – and I am afraid I shall have to go away again. You are – I hope, supporting this essentially heavy weather with better success.

My love to Nannie – and my everlasting gratitude must be added, in remembrance of what she has gone through for my sake. Having a tooth out, having your hair cut, and having your photograph taken are the three great trials of this mortal life.

always truly yours | WC

-
1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked ‘Sight Preserving Paper’.

[2470] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 19 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Published: B&C, II, pp. 484–485.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

London | 19th September 1885

My dear Collaborateur,

Neuralgic troubles in my chest and my arms have been serious obstacles in the way of my correspondence lately. I can only now thank you for Le Livre, and for having given me something to read, [del] while I am [del] recovering, which has interested me in no ordinary degree. You possess a share in that rare gift – the gift of narrating – which has made the reputations of [del] so many admirable writers in your country and in mine. I have read nothing about Balzac which has interested me as your article has interested me – and that wonderful old lady’s description of him places the man before my eyes for the first time. May you find more materials – and show us Balzac in other places and among other good friends.<sup>2</sup>

I have made notes for a few pages about Dickens<sup>3</sup> – but the doctor forbids me to write anything (after my working hours are over) – he protests [del] even against work, but the new story is getting into proof, and the first weekly part is to appear late in next month<sup>4</sup> – and I tell him that I shall be writing [del] the novel “in my head” if I don’t write it on paper. Before long, I hope to send you my contribution – alas, my small contribution – and I know you will [del] forgive me in the meantime.

There is much more that I should like to say – but that too must wait till I am stronger.
Always your afftely | WC

-
1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
  2. De Heussey’s article ‘Balzac en Bretagne: cinq lettres inédites de l’auteur des Chouans’ appeared in the September 1885 issue of the Parisian bibliographical monthly Le Livre from the house of Quantin. It was reissued as Balzac en Bretagne: Cinq Lettres Inédites (Rennes: Caillière), a booklet of just over fifty pages printed on 15 October 1885.
  3. See [2470] to de Heussey of 19 September 1885.
  4. The first instalment of The Evil Genius appeared on 31 October 1885 in half-a-dozen weekly newspapers (Law, p. 239).

[2471] TO A. P. WATT, 21 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 119–120.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st Sept 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

I have not yet heard from the German translator<sup>1</sup> – and I think we shall do well to remind Tillotson of the necessity of at once securing the title.<sup>2</sup> I have made notes, for his instruction, on the next page – subject to your approval. If they will do, will you kindly write by the earliest convenient post?

I posted to Bolton the proof of the first weekly part, on the 17th of this month. No revise yet received. This looks late for Australia – unless T. has put off the publication on the 31st Oct: – or has not waited to receive the Revise marked for Press, or has made some other arrangement with Australia unknown to me.<sup>3</sup> If you mention this to T. it will be only necessary to ask “when I may expect to receive my revises.”

Ever yours | WC

Notes, relating to the method of securing the title of Wilkie Collins’s new story

=

1. The opening chapter of the story – headed “1. The Trial” – to be reprinted in pamphlet form, with the title:

The Evil Genius | By Wilkie Collins. | Tillotson & Son. Bolton.

2. The heading “1. The Trial” not to be reprinted. No other heading required – unless the opening chapter should not be considered long enough for the purpose. In that case, the headings to be Chapter I, II, and so on.

3. The title not to be advertised, until this “pamphlet-story” is published and purchased.

4. The price, I suppose, to be one shilling.

5. Duplicate proofs of the “pamphlet story” to be sent to me – so that I may add a line or two to justify the title. The proof thus corrected to be sent back by return of post.

=

Query: – Is a paper cover required? Fargus’s “pamphlet-story” has a paper cover<sup>4</sup>

-
1. Of ‘The Ghost’s Touch’ – see [2463] to Watt of 13 September 1885.
  2. Of The Evil Genius by issuing a ‘bogus’ edition, as what follows makes clear. Watt replied to WC on 22 September to say that he would be writing to Tillotson that day in this regard (Berg).
  3. Tillotson had also purchased American and colonial serial rights.
  4. Referring to Dark Days by ‘Hugh Conway’, pseudonym of Frederick John Fargus – see [2433] to Watt of 14 June 1885.

[2472] TO A. P. WATT, 29 SEPTEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 120.

29th Sept 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

Thank you most sincerely for your kind and prompt defence of my title. I shall gladly receive the copies that you have to spare.<sup>1</sup> They will be not only curiosities, but memorials of our literary association.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Of the ‘bogus’ edition of The Evil Genius. Watt had written to WC on 26 September to say that he had received twelve copies of the edition from Tillotson. To fulfil the requirements of the copyright legislation, after registering the edition at Stationers’ Hall, he had sent copies to the copyright libraries and sold one to Simpkin, Marshall & Co. The remaining copies he offered to WC. Watt’s letter to WC of 29 September confirms that six copies were duly sent by book post (Berg).

[3142] TO CHARLES KENT, 6 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Unknown. On sale: Sotheby’s (17 December 2008, LO8411, Lot 40).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C5, p. 16.

90. G. Pl. | 6 Oct: 1885

My dear Kent,

Here is a late Thank You for your kind letter. I have been drifting back a little bit in the matter of health – and a return to Ramsgate looms in the future of next week.<sup>2</sup> Add that I am still hard, hard, hard at work – and there is my excuse.<sup>3</sup>

I sent back the Trials, with the sort of letter you suggested – and when my servant got to the house he found it a solitude, not even a servant to answer the bell. Inquiring at the next house, he was told they were “all out of town”. So the Trials have returned to me – and I bide my time as the old motto says.<sup>4</sup>

How are you? Better, I hope. But you have not seen B.<sup>5</sup> We had a drink on the 4th of this month to celebrate his birthday – and wanted you. His age is fixed for the present at 59.<sup>6</sup>

Ever yrs affcly | WC

-
1. Bound into extra-illustrated edition of John Forster, The Life of Charles Dickens, 1872–1874, Vol. II, pt.,2, p. 372. With an envelope addressed to ‘Charles Kent Esqr. | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’ and postmarked ‘OC 7 85’.
2. WC writes on a Tuesday, arriving in Ramsgate on Thursday 15th October. See [2478] to Watt, 16 October 1885.
3. WC was writing both The Evil Genius, which was about to be serialised, and a short story ‘The Poetry Did It’ for The Spirit of the Times.
4. ‘The Trials’ probably refers to the accounts of cases which he borrowed from William F. Finlason – see [2437] to Kent, 26 June 1885 – for use in his stories, including the series of ‘Victims of Circumstances’ published in The Youth’s Companion in Boston and Boys Own Paper in London. See also [2430] to Kent, 12 June 1885, and note 4.
5. Probably Francis Carr Beard, currently physician to both WC and Kent. See WC’s reference to him as ‘B’ in [2530] to Kent, 9 March 1886.
6. Beard was born in 1814 and so would have been 71 on his birthday.

[2473] TO A. P. WATT, 7 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 120–121.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th Oct: 1885

My dear Mr Watt,

I have been drifting a little bit to leeward in the matter of health – and I am proposing to get another dose of sea air on Monday next, if all goes well.

A question struck me this morning: Ought we to secure a place already in some January (1886) magazine for the story which I shall no doubt be asked to write (as usual) for my American friend's Christmas Number?<sup>1</sup> Until I hear from him I can only assume that he will publish at his customary time – two or three days before Christmas day.

Ever yours | WC

By-the-bye, a lady told me an extraordinary story of having seen another lady reading “Royal Love” (the “novelette” I wrote for Longman's Christmas Number last year) in a separately-published form, like the “Called Back” form.<sup>2</sup> She must surely be mistaken – and yet she declares that it was not the magazine that this fair creature was reading. Is it worth while to inquire? or is an imported reprint the republication in question?<sup>3</sup>

---

1. E. A. Buck's Spirit of the Times of New York, which published WC's ‘The Poetry Did It: An Event in the Life of Major Evergreen’ on 26 December 1885, pp. 636–638; the story was also carried in Britain in the January 1886 issue of the English Illustrated Magazine. Watt mentions his negotiations with the editor J. W. Comyns Carr in a letter to WC of 21 October 1885 (Berg)

2. See note to [2433] to A. P. Watt of 14 June 1885.

3. Reprint untraced, but, as Watt suggested in his reply of 8 October (Berg), it seems likely to have been American.

[2474] TO EMILY WYNNE, 7 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 121.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Wednesday. 7th Oct: 1885

Dear Mrs Wynne,

My neuralgic troubles have returned, and I am ordered away again to the seaside. How disappointed I am – I won't attempt to say. But may I hope that the “Bouillabaisse” may be revived – I dare not say deferred – until I can get patched up – and return in a state not altogether unworthy of your kindness?

Nannie will tell you that I cannot get away so soon as tomorrow – and that I have proposed any time convenient to you tomorrow (Thursday afternoon) between 3 and 5 for the visit which I shall be charmed to receive.

Always truly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Le Poer Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked ‘LONDON. W. | OC 7 | 85’.

[2475] TO ANNE WYNNE, 7 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 498.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

Wednesday. 7th Oct: 1885

Alas, my Nannie, the old man is told that he must go again to the seaside, and reform the present state of his health if he can. But he has tomorrow (Thursday) still at his disposal – and at any time between 3 o'Clock and 5 o'Clock which will be convenient, he will be proud and happy to receive his young lady, and to have her photograph to comfort him in his Exile.

Signed S.O.M. | (sickly old man)

---

1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked ‘LONDON. W. | OC 7 | 85’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked ‘Sight Preserving Paper’.

[2476] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 8 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Huntington (HH 98). Published: B&C, II, pp. 485–486.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

8th October 1885

My dear Hunt,

There is but one [del] /reason/ why I don't answer your letter in person – I am /rowing/ [del] in the same boat with you, and my doctor's orders send me away to Ramsgate to be patched up. My nerves make sketches with red-hot needles under the skin of my chest – and some kind friends are reporting that my death from Angina Pectoris may be shortly expected! I too have been stethoscoped [sic] and reported weak in the heart – but no organic disease.

It is really and truly a grief to me to hear such melancholy news of you – I had hoped that you were happy healthy and idle. We have both worked too hard – And I should like to know who does'nt work too hard, excepting always the contemptible impostors in your Art and mine.

The three rules /of life/ that I find the right ones, by experience, in the matter of health, are:

1. As much fresh air as possible. (I don't get as much as I ought).
2. Live well – eat light and nourishing food, eggs, birds, fish, sweet breads – no heavy chops or joints. And find out the wine that agrees with you, and don't be afraid of it. (Here, I set an excellent example!).
3. Empty your mind of your work, before you go to bed – and don't let /the/ work get in again until after breakfast the next morning. (This is a serious struggle – many defeats must be encountered – but the victory may be won at last, as I can personally certify.)

=

One last word – and I have done preaching. If you don't find that you make better progress, under your present medical guidance, try my old friend, F. Carr [del] Beard, 44. Welbeck Street, Cavendish Square. He kept Dickens alive, he kept Fechter alive, and he is keeping me alive. The most capable, and the most honest, doctor I have ever known.

My best thanks (and the best thanks of my girls) for your kindness in sending the cards. They will go either today – or tomorrow, if the light gets worse today – and will see the finest work of sacred Art that modern times have produced. I shut my eyes – and see that wonderful face of the Virgin as plainly as I saw it in your studio.<sup>2</sup>

Always affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

I am going to Ramsgate – to what address, I am not yet [del] sure – but all letters will be forwarded.

---

1. Black engraved address ranged right, monogram ranged left, watermarked, 'Light Preserving Paper | E & J'.

2. The Triumph of the Innocents was exhibited in Bond Street (Hunt, II, p. 343).

[3143] TO A.P. WATT, 9/10 OCTOBER 1885<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection, envelope only.<sup>2</sup> Published: Lewis website; A&C5, p. 16.

A.P. Watt Esqre | 117. Alexandra Road | St. John's Wood | N.W.<sup>3</sup>

Wilkie Collins

---

1. Stamped with mauve 'postage and inland revenue one penny' stamp. Postmarked recto and verso 10 October 1885. The letter could have been written late on the 9th or early on the 10th.

2. The content of the letter is not known, but on 8 October (Berg), Watt replied thus to [2473] of 7 October:

I am in receipt of yours of the 7th inst. and I am very glad to hear you are going of [sic] on Monday. Tomorrow I intend doing myself the pleasure of running up to see you about the short story idea if this will be convenient for you. Don't trouble yourself to write if it is.

"Royal Love" [must have been] published in America in some of their cheap reprints. No one in England would dare to do so. But I will see you about this also tomorrow.

The letter in the envelope was not early enough to cancel the meeting so we can assume it took place and the letter confirmed or developed the discussion of Friday the 9th, possibly also informing Watt of WC's change of departure date, which was put back to Wednesday and then Thursday. No reply from Watt is recorded in his Letter-books in the Berg Collection, New York Public Library.

3. Where Watt lived with his wife, four children and his wife's mother and sister (Census 1881, RG11/170/87).

[2477] TO HENRY D. PIGOTT,<sup>1</sup> 13 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose), on lined paper. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 122.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday 13th Oct: 1885

My dear Henry,

I hope to start for Ramsgate tomorrow. How long I shall stay will depend entirely on how I find my favourite sea air treating me this time. If I return before the 31st – needless to say, I shall be delighted to see you, and will let you know.<sup>2</sup>

Alack-a-day the barbarous copyright laws of England, and no laws of America, force me to write a play as well as a novel this time – and have this play acted first otherwise (the story I am now writing being essentially dramatic in subject) I shall be robbed here and in the U. S. and lose (literally) thousands of pounds.<sup>3</sup> The loss I can suffer with some patience – but when I think of the pockets into which the ill-earned money goes, I am not far from going distracted – as the saying is! The double work will be soon over I hope. Three acts are done.

Ever yours | WC

N. B. When twelve different companies were all acting a stolen “New Magdalen” in the U.S. at the same time, one manager only paid me a fee. “French” (dramatic agent in New York) calculated that I lost eight thousand pounds by having published the novel, before the play.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Nephew of Edward Pigott – see [2154] to Henry of 10 May 1883.

2. In fact he left on Thursday 15 October and returned on 12 November.

3. WC was writing The Evil Genius both for serialization in weekly newspapers and in dramatic form. The theatrical version was licensed on 28 October 1885 and ‘performed’ at the Vaudeville Theatre on 30 October to secure copyright.

4. Referring to T. H. French, of the firm of Samuel French – see [1633] to him of 24 June 1876.

[2478] TO A. P. WATT, 16 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 122–123.

16th October 1885 | 14 Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

My dear Mr Watt

After one “false start”, I succeeded at last in getting here yesterday evening. Four and twenty hours have passed – and the glorious air of Ramsgate is beginning its good work already. Nearly all day I have been breathing a delicious west wind, under a cloudless sky – and the infernal neuralgic torment, renewed three times, on the day before I left London, has (so far) vanished. When you too are troubled with nervous derangements, let me recommend a Saturday to Monday at Ramsgate – and if that interval can be so managed as to take place while I am here, so much the better. I hope to be able to stay for a fortnight at least – or say three weeks, unless the weather turns against me.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I have written to tell Tillotson of my change of address – so that the remaining proofs may come here, direct.

---

1. WC uses his headed notepaper, drawing three lines through the printed address and writing the Ramsgate address above and to the left.

2. On this occasion WC seems in fact to have stayed in Ramsgate until the morning of 12 November – see [2490] and [2492] to Watt of 8 and 12 November 1885.

[2479] TO A. P. WATT, 23 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: B&C, II, pp. 486–487 (incomplete); BGLL, IV, pp. 123–124.

14 Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 23rd October 1885

My dear Watt,

In the first place, it is high time we left off “Mistering” each other. I can only account for our having continued that formal practice so long by attributing it to the “force of habit” – a stupid force in nine cases out of ten. Therefore you and I drop “Mr” – and leave him to be picked up by newer friends than we are.

The stick has arrived in perfect safety. I am indeed most heartily obliged to you for this singularly interesting gift. A stick is a familiar friend – and when that friend associates me with Walter Scott’s own plantation, I am (in some degree at least) associated with the writer of all others whom I love and admire – the greatest of novelists and the kindest and truest of men. My new stick will be my treasured possession as long as I live.<sup>1</sup>

Let me thank you also for having so successfully concluded the negotiations for the American story. The publication day in New York is, this time, Decr 26th.<sup>2</sup> So we shall be all right here. I will not forget that the MS is wanted by Nov 10th.

The strain of writing the play as well as the novel<sup>3</sup> was taken off me two days ago – and I have been in better health ever since.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Forgive the horrid blot on the 4th page. The Ramsgate ink sometimes flows a little too freely.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Watt had visited Walter Scott’s house in Abbotsford and wrote to WC on 22 October concerning the stick, which he had sent by parcel post as a present (Berg).

2. Of ‘The Poetry Did It’ for the Spirit of the Times in New York. Watt had written a second letter on 22 October confirming that the editor of the English Illustrated Magazine had also accepted the story for the sum of £50 (Berg).

3. The two versions of The Evil Genius.

4. There are several blots at the top of the otherwise blank verso of the second leaf.

[2480] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 23 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 124–125.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 23rd Oct: 1885

My dear Ted,

Carrie has sent me your kind letter. I wrote the same day to Mr Douglas Cox to send you the necessary information.<sup>1</sup> My most sincere thanks for what you have done to help me through my difficulties. The necessity of writing a play for America – and a play for “bogus” performance at one and the same time,<sup>2</sup> with the novel on my back as well, was rather more than I could endure – and the damnable “breast-pang” came back again as a matter of course. For the last two days I have been free – and there has been but one return, and that very trifling. The three acts in your possession are finished for performance in the U.S.A. The 4th is in a state of abridgement and the 5th act in scenario. They have been sent for “performance” (if I may use such a word in this connection) – and I shall only return to them at my leisure.

If the weather improves, (it looks bad enough today) I wonder whether you will be able to run down here for a day or two – or for longer if possible? The length of my stay depends a great deal upon my health – but I mean to stay here for another fortnight if I possibly can.

Let me hear what your plans are – and how your cough is. My last news of you came from Mrs Wynne<sup>3</sup> – and reported you to have distinguished yourself in the matter of “Bouillabaisse”.

Caroline sends her kindest love – nobody else with us but little Charley who “joins us”.<sup>4</sup>

Ever affly yours WC

---

1. Douglas Cox, actor-manager.
2. The dramatic version of The Evil Genius. This title (as by 'W. W. Collins') was licensed on 28 October 1885 (BL Add. 53706 f. 60) for performance at The Vaudeville Theatre, London. The date of the London 'bogus performance' to establish copyright is recorded as Friday, 30 October by Allardyce (II, p. 318); see also [3227] to E. A. Buck of early November 1885.
3. Emily Wynne – see [2474] to her of 7 October 1885.
4. WC's eleven-year-old son William Charles Collins Dawson.

[2481] TO MARY ANDERSON, 24 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 306; BGLL, IV, pp. 125–126.

Ramsgate<sup>1</sup> | England | 24th Oct: 1885

Dear Mary Anderson,

I was prepared for the very great disappointment of not seeing you, before you left us, by "Uncle Dan" (Bixby).<sup>2</sup> Having heard the bad news, I wandered away (under the doctor's orders) to this part of the English coast in search of health, any where between this place and Yarmouth. My letters found it hard to follow my zig-zag course – and, as an inevitable consequence, some little time passed before you made me happy by your kind words of farewell. And now I am writing to thank you just at this time, when my "Spirit of the Times" tells me you are going to renew your triumphs in your own United States. I don't wish you success – for I know beforehand what a loving welcome you will receive and how entirely you will deserve it. I present myself in the character of "a selfish old man" – and I wish (how sincerely no words can say!) that I may be alive to bid you welcome when you return to England.

In the meantime, I have not forgotten what you honoured me by saying on the subject of the play. My hands (and my head) are full of work – but I have got Bancroft's "History of The United States", and I mean to try if I can find a hint in that long book which may suggest something appropriate as a subject<sup>3</sup> – always excluding the "Puritans", who have been, in a literary sense, (as you say on the other side of our ocean) "played out."

Pray remember me most kindly to D<sup>r</sup> and Mrs Griffin,<sup>4</sup> and thank "Brother Joe" (if he will forgive this familiarity) for his friendly telegram.<sup>5</sup> My grateful recollection of the happy hours I have passed in your house runs away with my pen, and signs me yours affectionately,

Wilkie Collins

When you have ten minutes to spare don't forget that my address is 90 Gloucester Place. London.
W

-
1. WC was staying at 14 Nelson Crescent.
  2. Dan Bixby was a New York agent with whom WC remained friends for many years and who frequently visited London.
  3. WC never finished his proposed drama on American history (see the note to [2413] to Mary Anderson of 14 April 1885).
  4. Mary Anderson's mother and stepfather, Dr Hamilton Griffin of Louisville, a surgeon and major in the Southern army (Anderson, p. 13).
  5. Mary Anderson's brother, 'That best of friends, my brother Joe' (Anderson, pp. 17, 185).

[2482] TO E. A. BUCK, 24 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Ross, with water damage.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 126.

Ramsgate | England | 24th Oct: 1885

My dear Buck,

I am wandering about the coast, to pick up health if I can – and I have literally only a minute [in which] to thank you f[or your] letter, and to say that it shall be carefully attended to – and the dates remembered.<sup>2</sup> I have something more to say concerning my writings and myself, which must be reserved for another letter. My love to Harry – I often think of him.<sup>3</sup>

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The passages in square brackets are conjectural as the text appears to have been washed away in places.
2. Presumably concerning the arrangements for the 1885 Christmas story for the Spirit of the Times, 'The Poetry Did It', which also appeared in the English Illustrated Magazine for January 1886.
3. Buck's son, whom WC had probably met while in New York – see the references to him in [2385] to Buck of 30 December 1884.

[2483] TO CHARLES KENT, 25 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 126.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 25 Oct: 1885

My dear Kent,

Observe the address! Health and work ails keep me here for a little while longer – and our meeting is only postponed till I can write and say once more, with all my heart, welcome to Gloucester Place.

My first week here was wasted through the devilish necessity of working at the novel and the play both together.<sup>2</sup> Now that I am free from the double strain, I am beginning to get better. You – I hope and trust – are following my example.

Yours affctly | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | London. W.', postmarked from Ramsgate as dated.
2. Referring to The Evil Genius.

[2484] TO CARRIE BARTLEY, 27 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 344 (no year given); BGLL, IV, p. 127.

27th Oct: 1885<sup>1</sup>

My dearest Carrie

My best thanks for the American copy and the copy of Part 10 – both safely received. I shall soon send to you part 11. In the meantime, I have lost count of the number of copies that you have made.<sup>2</sup> Help me, like a good dear, by keeping an account of what you have done. We all wish you were coming here – and we all send love to you and the children. I am getting better, every day.

Yours ever affly | WC

---

1. Though there is no address, the letter must in fact have been directed from Ramsgate – see [2483] to Charles Kent of 25 October and [2485] to A. P. Watt of 29 October 1885, plus the reference to 'coming here' in the body of the letter.
2. Of the serial instalments of The Evil Genius.

[2485] TO A. P. WATT, 29 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, pp. 487–488. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 127–128.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 29th Oct: 1885

My dear Watt,

My only excuse for not having thanked you for your letter before this is – that I am a hunted man. Tillotson hunts me with demands for weekly parts. America hunts me with warnings to send the play (and protect my property) without delay. The doctor hunts me with unlimited directions relating to exercise and fresh air – and volunteer translators and autograph collectors fill up the intervals, and wait for answers.<sup>1</sup> I look at the boatmen here, eternally idling with their hands in their pockets, with feelings of ferocious envy.

I can only “confirm” my telegram – and add that I shall be too glad to find myself in dramatic relations with Mr Carl Rosa.<sup>2</sup> At present all I can do is to reserve the first offer of the country right of the play for this gentleman. Three acts out of five are finished.<sup>3</sup> The other two acts are, thus far, only sufficiently completed for the formal (a “bogus”) performance in London which secures my rights. Moreover, it will be necessary to consult Tillotson’s views as to the influence which the performance of the story, in dramatic form, may have on the weekly publication of the story in narrative (or novel) form. My idea is that the play might help the novel. His idea may be that the play will forestall the interest of the novel – published in weekly parts – by telling the whole story at once. Perhaps you will kindly consult T. – and so enable us to say something definite to Mr Carl Rosa, on the question of time.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

I enclose T’s last two letters to me.<sup>4</sup> His “Instalment” left by this morning’s early post. Let us hope he is satisfied.

---

1. For examples, see [2486] to Pappritz of 30 October 1885 and [2488] to Katscher of 5 November 1885.

2. Carl August Nicholas Rosa (1842–89: ODNB), impresario, manager of the Carl Rosa Opera Company. Watt had written to WC on 26 October informing him of Rosa’s approach concerning the acting rights to The Evil Genius.

3. The stage version of The Evil Genius: A Drama in Four Acts was ‘never produced except for a single afternoon performance at the Vaudeville Theatre, 30 October 1885, purely to establish dramatic copyright’ (Gasson, p. 58). The BL holds the MS at Add. 53345E.

4. Not bound in with the letters at Pembroke and untraced.

[2486] TO A. PAPPRITZ,<sup>1</sup> 30 OCTOBER 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 128.

Ramsgate | England | 30th October 1885

Dear Sir,

Your kind letter has followed me to this place.

I regret to be obliged to disappoint a gentleman introduced to me by my excellent friend Baron von Tauchnitz – but there is no other alternative. My last novel has been translated into German, and the right of translating the new work of fiction, on which I am now engaged, is already purchased.<sup>2</sup>

Pray accept the expression of my regret, and believe me,

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Herr A. Pappritz

---

1. Otherwise unidentified German translator introduced by the Leipzig publisher Tauchnitz.

2. The German edition of “I Say No” was published as Ich Sage Nein by the Central Literary Bureau (M. Warschauer) of Berlin in 1886, while The Evil Genius appeared as Der Böse Genius from the Berlin house of Janke in 1887. In neither case was the translator named – see GV.

[3227] TO E. A. BUCK,<sup>1</sup> EARLY NOVEMBER 1885<sup>2</sup>

MS: Unknown. Cited: MS letter from Buck to Augustin Daly, 8 November 1885 (Folger Y.c.2777(1), Augustin Daly Collection).<sup>3</sup> Published: A&C8, p. 20.

I am writing a new serial story which is highly dramatic – to protect myself I have had a piece on the subject formally produced in London on the 30th Octo.<sup>4</sup> The first weekly part of the story was published next day thus protecting my copyright here.

Now about America, I send you three acts of the piece finished – the 4th and last act must be re-written. Three acts out of four is a good sample for managers – Will you for the 59th time be my good friend and see what can be done. Mr Daly paid me for “Man and Wife” and he should perhaps see the new piece first....

The 4th Act shall follow as soon as I can manage it

-
1. Dating from the play production and Buck’s response.
  2. Buck writes on 8 November 1885 to Augustin Daly and WC writes after 30 October, most likely on Monday 2 November, giving Buck time to write to Daly on 8 November.
  3. Buck’s message to Daly is written on the headed notepaper of The Spirit of the Times. Buck introduces WC’s request as follows: ‘My Dear Sir, | Our friend Wilkie Collins writes me as follows, viz.’. He concludes:

Now, Mr Daly, I want to do the very best thing I can for dear old Wilkie and you can advise me – Shall I send you the three acts and do you think there is a chance of your accepting play. If not, put me on track of someone likely to want it, | Yours, | E. A. Buck

4. At the Vaudeville Theatre. No performance elsewhere, including the USA, is known.

[2487] TO A. P. WATT, 4 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 129.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 4th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1885

My dear Watt,

Thank you for your letter, and the enclosures. Your letter to T. is exactly the letter that ought to have been addressed to him.

He had already sent to me the same newspaper cutting.<sup>1</sup> I simply replied that “a formal performance of the play had taken place in London to secure my dramatic copyright” – and said no more. The performance took place on Friday, 30th October.

It will be well, I think, to refer him to what I have said – as a sufficient answer to his question – and to ask him, in plain terms, if he objects to the play being regularly performed in the future, during the period of the first appearance of the story in newspapers, beginning with the first number published on Saturday last. That is to say, during a period of six months, dating from October 31st last.<sup>2</sup>

After this time, I am free to publish in book form – and to have the play performed. It is only during the first period of serial publication (alluded to above) that we apply to him, as a matter of courtesy, to know which way his opinion inclines.

If he says (as I suspect he will say) that he objects to any performance during the next six months, as forestalling the interest of the story, we must, as it appears to me, respect his objections. But this is a future consideration.

Ever yours | WC

The weather is a little against me – but I am still getting on well.

My “views” are presented subject to your approval. If you differ on any point don’t follow my advice. I leave it entirely to your discretion.

---

1. Tillotson wrote to Watt on 2 November 1885 asking if the announcement of a dramatization of The Evil Genius was correct; the letter, containing an unidentified newspaper cutting announcing the play version, is bound into the volumes at Pembroke. Watt’s reply to Tillotson was sent on 5 November (Berg).

2. The serial publication of The Evil Genius began in a number of British newspapers, including the Yorkshire Weekly Post, on 31 October 1885 (see Law, pp. 238–239), though Tillotson’s own weekly papers, the ‘Lancashire Journals’ series including the Bolton Weekly Journal, did not begin to carry the story until 12 December. This was probably because of the shortness of the instalments submitted by Collins, since the papers doubled up the opening parts to create a serial of twenty rather than twenty-six instalments.

[2488] TO LEOPOLD KATSCHER,<sup>1</sup> 5 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 130.

Ramsgate | England | 5th November 1885

Dear Sir,

I regret to disappoint the lady whom you represent<sup>2</sup> – but there is no other alternative. Some months since, the right of translating the novel on which I am now engaged into the German language was purchased from me.<sup>3</sup>

With kind regards – and with my excuses for the delay that has occurred in answering your letter while I am travelling about this coast,

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Herr Leopold Katscher

---

1. Probably the German radical, translator of H. T. Buckle and Edward Alexander Westermarck.

2. Unidentified.

3. See [2486] to A. Pappritz of 30 October 1885.

[2489] TO ANNE WYNNE, 5 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 498–499.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 5th November 1885

Dear and admirable Mrs Collins, I hope to get back to London in a week more. To know that I burnt beautifully without popping is a great consolation to me. I am better – but still so terribly hard at work that I feel an older old man than ever. You will revive me when I see you – with your present. As yet – tell your Mama, with my kindest remembrances, – that we are keeping the Nitro-Glycerine in reserve. When I am blown up, rely on my bursting in your direction – just at lesson-time.<sup>2</sup>

I send you another newspaper, with the beginning of another story in it – and a portrait which accurately represents me crying over my separation from my young wife.<sup>3</sup>

Goodnight – it is 11 o’Clock – and bed is waiting for [del] your affectionate | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | London | W.’, postmarked ‘RAMSGATE | NO 6 | 85’.

2. We are unable to elucidate the incendiary jokes in this paragraph, which clearly respond to the content of a letter received from Nannie .

3. The letter is accompanied by a newspaper clipping featuring a picture of a rather mournful-looking WC, headed ‘MR. WILKIE COLLINS’, with ‘The Popular Candidate: among all sections and parties of South London’ printed beneath the image, to which WC adds the handwritten note, ‘Weeping over separation from his young wife’. The clipping must come from the weekly South London Press which carried the opening installment of The Evil Genius on 31 October 1885 (Law, p. 239).

[2490] TO A. P. WATT, 8 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: B&C, II, pp. 488.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 8th Nov 1885

My dear Watt

I am hard at work [del] on the /short/ story.<sup>1</sup> But the time is terribly short – and that blessed institution the British Sunday makes ~~Saturday~~ /Saturday/ evening here an evening without post – and so loses me a day in sending to my copyist.

Said [del] /copyist/ is my adopted daughter, Mrs H. P. Bartley 61. Finchley Road. She is so near ~~my~~ /your/ private residence that I have suggested to her sending what she has done to 117 Alexandra Road on Monday evening, so that you can take it with you (if you kindly will) – and send it to Messrs Macmillan, if they must have something on Tuesday. I hope to finish tomorrow (Monday) so that my copyist will finish on Tuesday when she receives [del] /my MSS/ by post. This will make me a day late. I can’t help it – being away from town.

I hope to return on Thursday next. As I have no time to correct the MS copy, I ought to see proofs. If they will not be ready before Thursday, they had better go to 90 Gloucester Place. I shall try to get away by the 10.a.m. train (to [del] save time) which reaches London at 12.

Oh, I am so tired!

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Referring to 'The Poetry Did It', the manuscript of which was due at the offices of the English Illustrated Magazine, owned by Macmillan, on 10 November, as Watt had reminded WC in a letter of 6 November (Berg).

[2491] TO A. P. WATT, 9 NOVEMBER 1885<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 130.

Monday Nov<sup>r</sup> 9

My dear Watt,

The end of the short story<sup>2</sup> goes to Mrs Bartley to be copied by tonight's post.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Dating from the calendar. The note must still be addressed from Ramsgate.

2. 'The Poetry Did It'.

[2492] TO A. P. WATT, 12 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 131.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Thursday 12th Nov 1885

My dear Watt,

Here I am at the old work shop again<sup>1</sup> – and, if you can conveniently get here tomorrow, delighted to see you at the usual time.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC had probably returned to London from Ramsgate that morning – see [2490] to Watt of 8 November.

[2493] TO DORIS EDITH BARTLEY,<sup>1</sup> 13 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 4/14).<sup>2</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 489.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>3</sup> | 13th November 1885

My dear Doris,

I was very glad to receive your letter at Ramsgate, and to see how nicely it was written. We had some very fine weather, and the sea air has done me a great deal of good. Charley was with us.<sup>4</sup> He rowed in a boat in the harbour – and he went to a place called Sandwich [sic] on a tricycle – and he eat [sic] good dinners – and he enjoyed himself very much. We came home yesterday – and a man ran after our omnibus all the way from the railway station to this house. He was poor, and he wanted to get a little money by carrying our luggage upstairs, and he did it very well, being a strong young man. He was pleased when I paid him, and I think he went away and got some beer. We hope you will come and see us soon. We send our love to you, and to Sissy, and to Bolly,<sup>5</sup> and to your Mamma.

Your affectionate godpapa | Wilkie Collins

To | Miss Doris Bartley

---

1. Doris Edith Bartley (b. 1879), eldest child of Harry and Carrie Bartley (Clarke, pp. 196–198).

2. Though Peters (p. 476 n. 22), suggests that the letter is in the hand of Caroline Graves and merely signed and dated

- by WC, it seems rather that the letter is in WC's careful hand, so as to be legible to the young Doris.
3. On WC's printed paper with his monogram.
  4. WC's son William Charles Collins Dawson.
  5. 'Sissy' is Cecile Marguerite, while 'Bolly' is Evelyn Beatrice: Doris's younger sisters (Clarke, pp. 194–199).

[2494] TO CHARLES KENT, 16 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 131.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
Monday 16th Novr 1885

My dear Kent,

Observe the address! Thank you for your kind letter – and let me have a word more to tell me when you can look in at 5 o'Clock as usual, to hear my report from Ramsgate, and to see for yourself what my favourite air has done for me. After tomorrow, any afternoon that will do for you will do for me.

Always yours afftly | WC
Frank Beard has been ill again – I am sorry to say.

---

1. Directed to 'Charles Kent Esq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.', post-marked on the following day.

[2495] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 16 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 132.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
Monday 16th Nov | 1885

My dear Ted,

Here we are again – and wanting to see you. Are you successfully resisting the November weather? and when will you come here and take pot-luck? Choose your own evening – the hour to be 8 o'Clock sharp – and let me have a line. Ramsgate has done me a world of good.<sup>1</sup> Whether I shall not lose ground again in London remains to be seen.

Caroline sends her love.
Yours always affly | WC

---

1. WC was there from 15 October, probably returning on 12 November 1885.

[2496] TO ELEANOR SELFE,<sup>1</sup> 16 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 132.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 16th November 1885

Dear Madam,

I am sincerely sensible of the good opinion which you have formed of "The Fallen Leaves" – and I only regret that I cannot acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter by a satisfactory reply. Obstacles of various kinds, which I will not trouble you by mentioning in detail, have thus far prevented me from writing the contemplated sequel to my story.

Believe me faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Mrs Eleanor Selfe

---

1. Unidentified, but presumably writing from America or the provinces.

[2497] TO A. P. WATT, 19 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke, with the monogram excised. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 132–133.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th Nov 1885

My dear Watt,

Thank you for your letter relating to Mr Carl Rosa. Quite satisfactory, I need hardly say.<sup>1</sup>

I enclose another specimen of T.<sup>2</sup> If I have not slapped his face quite sharply enough, I will ask you to take a turn at him if he writes again.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written to WC on 9 November noting that Tillotson had refused to give his permission for the play of The Evil Genius to be performed during the novel's serial run, and promising to inform Carl Rosa, the theatre impresario, of the situation. Watt wrote again on 16 November to say that Rosa was in Edinburgh and would see WC on his return to London in a fortnight (Berg).

2. The enclosed letter is not bound into the volumes at Pembroke, and remains untraced, but it presumably represents an early example of Tillotson's repeated complaints concerning the shortness of the serial instalments of The Evil Genius – see the notes to [2499] to Watt of 22 November 1885. Watt wrote to WC on the same day to say that WC's reply to Tillotson was sufficient, but regretting that Tillotson was continuing to bother WC in this way, though he had been specifically requested not to do so (Berg).

[2498] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 20 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: B&C, II, p. 544 (misdated 20 November 1887).

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

Friday | 20th November 1885<sup>2</sup>

My dear Ted,

Just a word to say that I am indeed sorry to hear that the cough has returned. You are quite /right/ to keep at home while this wind lasts. So far, Ramsgate air still keeps me in a state of preservation.<sup>3</sup> How long it will last is another matter. Beard seems to think that my destiny is to live at Ramsgate. With two houses to keep going [del] in London,<sup>4</sup> I don't quite see how I am to accommodate myself to this picture.

Let me hear (by a line) how you go on, and what you are doing to get rid of the cough. If you could only take opium! – I say no more

Caroline's love. | Ever yours afftly | WC

---

1. Black engraved type ranged right, monogram ranged left.

2. The year could easily be mistaken for 1888, though the calendar, the printed address, and the reference to Ramsgate all confirm 1885 as the correct reading.

3. WC had spent around a month in Ramsgate, from 15 October to 12 November.

4. WC's own house at Gloucester Place, and that at 10 Taunton Place, where his lover Martha Dawson resided with his three children.

[2499] TO A. P. WATT, 22 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 133–134.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday. Nov<sup>r</sup> 22

My dear Watt,

Here he is again! I cannot spare time to go to Bolton and kick his —. Will you therefore kindly write to him, on the plan of the sketch that follows?<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Mr W.C. has referred your letter of the 20th Nov to me as the person who arranged terms with other proprietors of periodicals for his latest works. In each case, the minimum limit of ten of the author's MS pages, for each weekly part, was the limit agreed on and observed, without a word of objection from proprietors or clients. The stories were afterwards republished in three volume form by Messrs Chatto & Windus – without a word of objection on their parts.

I have only to add that you cannot know to what length "The Evil Genius" will extend, until Mr Wilkie Collins has sent the last weekly part to your printers.

I remain | etc

---

1. Watt replied to WC on 23 November to say that he had written to Tillotson along the lines of WC's sketch (Berg). Tillotson had written as follows to WC on 20 November 1885, in a letter bound into the volumes at Pembroke:

I am not captious. To give satisfaction to the Clientèle is your interest and mine. If the Condition of Clause 8 is fulfilled, no blame can be attached to you; but if the average length of your former three volume Novels is represented by 26 Instalments of such length as you are supplying, then I am grievously at fault in having stipulated for the usual number of instalments into which Fiction in Newspapers is divided

Of the quality of the Story I must express myself highly satisfied; but the interest created by the admirable – shall I say hysterical divisions will only heighten the readers' aggravation of what he will justly term the scant supply.

I hasten to say, in conclusion that I shall feel very greatly relieved if you will point out to me any previous Story of yours published in such short instalments, and it will be of much service if I can refer to a 3 Vol Novel of yours which does not exceed the length in number of words to which "The Evil Genius" will attain.

The approximate word counts of WC's syndicated novels (when they appeared in volume form) is as follows: Jezebel's Daughter, 100,000 words (for Tillotson's); The Black Robe, 110,000 words (for Leader's); Heart and Science, 130,000 and "I Say No", 120,000 words (both syndicated by Watt); The Evil Genius, 110,000 and The Legacy of Cain, 120,000 words (both for Tillotson's). It is not, however, clear whether these figures support WC's contention or show that he responded to Tillotson's complaints by increasing the length of later instalments. The fundamental problem is probably related to the fact that The Evil Genius, written simultaneously as a novel and a play, relies much more heavily on dialogue than the other novels listed.

[2500] TO A. P. WATT, 24 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 134–135.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th Nov 1885

My dear Watt,

More of T. He is evidently trying what a system of small annoyance will do.<sup>2</sup> By way of self-defence, in this case, I propose to put myself under your friendly guard. In plainer words, I will forward every future letter from Bolton – unopened – to you. And you are never to be troubled by letting me know what is in the letters, excepting a case of positive necessity.

Don't answer this – you have letters enough to write already. Silence shall say Yes.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

If he writes again, and asks you to mention the titles of the novels alluded to, refer him to your previous letter – and say that the correspondence is closed on our parts<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Directed to Watt's office, postmarked as dated.

2. Tillotson wrote again to WC on 23 November 1885, enclosing a copy of a letter from New York objecting to short measure in the instalments of The Evil Genius: 'There is not enough each week to satisfy the reader'. Both Tillotson's letter and its enclosure are bound into the volumes at Pembroke.

3. Watt in fact replied on 25 November to confirm his agreement (Berg).

4. Postscript written on the inside flap of the envelope.

[2501] TO ANNE WYNNE, 27 NOVEMBER 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 499.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

27th Nov 1885

Mrs Wilkie Collins, if this weather goes on you will change your present position in life – you will be a widow. I don't object to your marrying again, but when you order your mourning cap I have to request that you will shorten those long floating streamers which I see in the young widow who is represented in the advertisements of mourning houses.<sup>3</sup> I don't like a widow who expresses grief by long streamers and by tight-lacing.

This is Friday. On Sunday (unless there is a sun and a blue sky) I have arranged to pass the day in bed – the agravation [sic] of the church bells being unendurable to me in any other than a horizontal position. After Sunday, choose your own day and hour (otherwise your Mama's day and hour) for coming here – after our long separation. If it must be as far [del] off as Thursday your sinking husband submits.

I am steeped in Devilish drugs – arsenic among them. Never, in all your experience of me, has my temper been so vile as it is now.

Je reste, Madame, votre atroce espoux,<sup>4</sup> | Vilkie<sup>5</sup>

P.S. How are the children?

-
1. Directed to 'Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.', postmarked 'LONDON. W. | NO27 | 85'.
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked 'Sight Preserving Paper'.
  3. The advertisement in question has not been traced.
  4. Valediction in schoolboy French: 'I remain, Madam, your atrocious husband.'
  5. The second half of the comic signature is in fact quadrupally underlined with a flourish.

[2502] TO A. P. WATT, 1 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 135.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st December 1885

My dear Watt

Thank you for a cheque for £45.-.-.- – being the amount received from Messrs Macmillan for my short-story ("The Poetry Did It") – less your commission.<sup>1</sup>

I have been drifting back again in health during the last dreadful month. But here is December beginning with sunshine – and I begin to hope already for better things to come.

If "The Evil Genius" will only produce the same effect on the public which seems to have been "realised" (as they say in the U.S.A) among my translators, there is a success to come. French, German, and Italian readers of the proofs all write with an enthusiasm which has taken me by surprise.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. That is, a payment of £50, less 10% comission of £5, leaving £45. Watt had sent the cheque with a letter dated 30 November (Berg). No payment of this amount appears singly in WC's bank account around this time (Coutts: WC).

[2503] TO A. P. WATT, 2 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 136.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd Dec<sup>r</sup> 1885

My dear Watt,

T. obliges me to trouble you again.

The enclosed Memorandum will explain the mistakes made, and is enclosed for your information only.<sup>1</sup> In writing to T. will you kindly put the case in the form of questions, as suggested on the next leaf? If I write T. will seize the opportunity of beginning a “correspondence.”<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

The Evil Genius

Decr 2nd 1885

Mr W.C. has today received first proofs of the 13th instalment.

Up to this date, he has not, so far as he knows, received Revises of the 12th instalment – which was corrected for Revise, and posted to Bolton, Nov 26. He has also not received more than five pulls of the revised 11th instalment, instead of the six pulls usually sent, and urgently wanted.

Will you be so good as to cause inquiry to be made in these two cases? and to direct that the missing Revises be sent to Mr Collins?

1. The Memorandum is bound into the volumes at Pembroke and reads:

|                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
|--------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 188511 th instalment. | The Evil Genius . Proof account with Messrs Tillotson & SonRevises received 25 th November, and one returned for Press same day.Only five pulls of the Revise sent, instead of six as usual. The missingRevise asked for, but not yet received (Decr 2 nd ) |
| 12 th instalment          | Proof Corrected for Revise and posted to Bolton, November 26.No revises received. Decr 2nd.                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| 13 th instalment.         | Proof received Decr 2 nd .In order to avoid confusion, the author will wait to return the 13 thinstalment corrected for Revise, until he has first until he has receivedthe 12 th instalment, revised .                                          |

2. Watt wrote to Tillotson to this effect on 2 December (Berg).

[2504] TO A. P. WATT, 2 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 137.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd Decr 1885

My dear Watt,

The evening post has brought more proofs from Bolton – and there is another mistake. Look at what I have written on the proof – and please enclose it to T. merely saying that you draw his attention to a new mistake!<sup>1</sup> Are they all drunk in honour of the election?<sup>2</sup>

1. The annotated proof was sent on to Bolton with Watt’s letter to Tillotson of 3 December (Berg), and is thus not bound into the volumes at Pembroke.

2. Since the Tillotsons were staunch Liberal Nonconformists, it in fact seems unlikely that there was prolonged celebration in Bolton over the results of the General Election held on 23 November. Although Gladstone’s party gained more seats than the Conservatives, Salisbury eventually held on to power with the support of the Irish nationalists.

[2505] TO J. SAUNDERS,<sup>1</sup> 3 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Clarke Collection. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 137–138.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 3rd December 1885

Dear sir,

It has given me great pleasure to receive the kind expression of your interest in “The Fallen Leaves”.<sup>2</sup>

I sincerely wish I could add that the Sequel is written. Severe illness, after the first story was published, prevented me from continuing it at the time. And the obstacles have followed which have, thus far, put difficulties in the way of my tracing the course of “Amelius” during his married life.

Regretting that I cannot acknowledge your letter by a more acceptable reply,
I remain, Dear sir, | faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins
J. Saunders Esqr

---

1. Unidentified, though this might be the J. Maynard Saunders to whom WC writes on 7 September 1886 ([2609]). It is probably not the novelist and dramatist John Saunders (1811–95: ODNB), whom WC is likely to have known since 1857, when ‘Uncle George or the Family Mystery’ appeared in the National Magazine, then coedited by Saunders. See [0322] to John Westland Marston of [later 1850s].

2. The Fallen Leaves, published in 1879, had the phrase ‘First Series’ on the title page and WC had indicated the possibility of a second series at the end of the novel and subsequently. Though he had made rough notes for the promised sequel, this was never in fact produced. Whether this was because of the disappointing reaction to The Fallen Leaves or illness, as he indicates here, remains unclear. See [2559] to S. Weeks, 7 May 1886.

[2506] TO A. P. WATT, 5 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 138.

5th Decr 1885

My dear Watt,

Pray don’t trouble to write about the enclosed<sup>1</sup> – excepting the case of absolute necessity. Was it Solomon who said there was an end to all things?<sup>2</sup> He was wrong. There is no end to T.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The enclosure, obviously another letter from Tillotson, is not bound into the volumes at Pembroke and remains untraced. Tillotson had also written to Watt on 3 December – see Watt’s reply of 4 December (Berg).

2. WC is perhaps thinking of the well-known passage in Ecclesiastes 3:1–8 (AV), beginning ‘To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven’.

[2507] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 7 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Bodleian (MS. Autogr. d.21, f. 161). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 138.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th December 1885

Dear Mr Chatto,

Miss Hogarth is thinking of publishing a cheap edition, in one volume, of “The Letters of Charles Dickens”. I have suggested a visit to you, before she consults any other publisher. In any case, your advice will be invaluable – and I shall indeed be glad if the interview leads to something more, and associates the first cheap edition of the Letters with your firm.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esqr

---

1. In fact the first single-volume edition of CD’s letters did not appear until 1893, published by Macmillan & Co.

[2508] TO ANNE WYNNE, 9 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 500 (as to Anne and Emily Wynne).

9 Decr 1885

The Violets, dearest Mrs, still keep their delicious scent. They are by my desk while I write – and I have been trying to get to Delamere Street, and thank you in a better way than this. But my Evil Genius has got in my way, so I write to my Good Genius. I am getting better as fast as I can – in the hope of being yet worthy of the Bullybase (that’s the way to spell it, my dear).<sup>2</sup>

But now I want to know how your Mamma is. Do write me one of your nice little letters and satisfy me about her [del] health, and tell me how she bears the cold. I delight in it – except at night when (if I go out) I find it lays its hands on my chest, and scratches me as if it was a “female”, and jealous of your devoted husband.

WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’ postmarked ‘LONDON. W. | DE 9 | 85’.

2. See the reference to bouillabaisse in [2474] to Emily Wynne of 7 October 1885.

[2509] TO A. P. WATT, 13 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 139.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1885

My dear Watt,

When I have finished “The Evil Genius” it is plain to me that I shall write a Sequel called “The Good Genius”, and that I shall request permission to put you in the foremost place in the character of my “Hero”. For the first time, for years past, I can write with a pencil which doesn’t try my temper, and I can smell the true cedar perfume when I open the box which doubles my present and my pleasure. Between what I owe to you, and to the delicious cold weather (oh, may it last!) I am beginning to feel so young again that I don’t believe I was born in the year 1824.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

[2510] TO EMILY WYNNE, 19 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 139–140.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th December 1885

Dear Mrs Wynne,

Pray forgive me for not having thanked you before this for your kind letter. The cruel change in the weather has knocked me down most effectually. I get up to write the “weekly part” of The Evil Genius which must be written – and then tumble down again, a heap of helpless mortality that sleeps badly, eats badly, and behaves badly as a correspondent. But there is surely a chance of a change for the better, after the horrors of Christmas are over – and I should be the most ungrateful of husbands if I failed to present myself to my dear little Mrs Wilkie while she has her holidays. Let me ask leave to write again in a week’s time, and propose an afternoon, subject to your approval. In the meantime I have the “pleasure of proticipation” when I think of the card that is coming.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Le Poer Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. Here ‘proticipation’ may be a neologism of Anne’s.

[3012] TO D.W. HOWLAND,<sup>1</sup> 24 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Private.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C2, p. 66.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London 28th Decr 1885

Sir,

I beg to thank you for your kind letter, and to express my regret at not being able to contribute to the work which you are contemplating. It is, I fear, one of the perversities in my nature, to dislike making speeches myself, and to feel no pleasure (excepting the cases of one or two great orators) in listening to speeches made by other persons. On the few occasions when I have spoken in public, because I felt it a duty to others to do so, I have said as little as possible, and of that little I have not preserved the newspaper reports.<sup>3</sup> Pray accept my excuses, and believe me

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
D.W. Howland Esqre

---

1. Presumably the overseas or provincial editor of a projected collection of speeches by authors or notable persons of the day, though we can find no evidence that this was published. It might well be D.W. Howland, an educator formerly resident in Calcutta, the author of “Baboo Lore” in the “Bric-à-Brac” column of the New York quarterly the Century 26:2 (June 1883), pp. 319–320.

2. On lightweight monogrammed paper with faint horizontal rules.

3. One lengthy speech by WC reported in the press was that as Chairman at the Twentieth Anniversary Festival of the Royal General Theatrical Fund, held on the evening of 12 April 1865. See [0635] to HC of the following day, 13 April 1865.

[2511] TO ANNE WYNNE, 25 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 500.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

25th Decr 1885

The prettiest and simplest Christmas Card that I have received is your’s, my Nannie. The only card I could send back yesterday was the English Illustrated Magazine containing a little story of mine.<sup>3</sup> When you will receive it – when you will get this letter that thanks you – I am afraid to think. The Post Office is overwhelmed. Two postmen and a boy this morning, in my street, for one delivery of letters. I must come and deliver myself and thank my “Mrs” in that way – on any day at which her Mama will let me come to Delamere Street, after this week. Then I can wish you both a happy New Year. Happy Christmas is impossible on such a day as this. The fog chokes your loving husband,

WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked ‘LONDON. W. | DE25 | 85’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. ‘The Poetry Did It: An Event in the Life of Major Evergreen,’ English Illustrated Magazine, January 1886, pp. 259–267.

[2512] TO PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, 27 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Unknown. Published: Hayne, pp. 70–71, our copy text; B&C, II, pp. 489–490.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. | LONDON,
Sunday 27th Dec., 1885.

“At last the cloud-battalions through long rifts
Of luminous mists retire ... the strife is done;
And earth once more her wounded beauty lifts,
To meet the healing Kisses of the sun.”<sup>1</sup>

Exert your imagination, my dear friend, and please see W.C. in his bed, reading your fine poem on the storm among the Georgian Hills, reaching the last verse, admiring the charming image in the last two lines – and then seeing through his window a dense dirty dripping London fog, extinguishing all hope of sunlight, and showing nothing but the dim dingy brick-fronts of the opposite houses. Add the dismal tinkling of church bells in a distant street, and the hoarse screeching of a boy selling Sunday newspapers – and you will be prepared to hear that I heartily wished myself in Georgia with my poet and friend. The next best thing was at least to see him in his photograph, and to feel (as I did) by instinct that it must be a good likeness – a more living likeness, to my mind, than the portrait in the Poems. I have to thank you for consolation as well as poetry, this time – and of myself I have little or nothing more to say. Good days and bad days (in the matter of health) – every week a number of “The Evil Genius” (my new serial story) to be written, whether I am well or ill – with publishers and translators waiting for it, in England and the English colonies, in the United States, in France, Italy, Germany and Holland.<sup>2</sup> “What must be done, sir, will be done,” old Doctor Johnson said, and said truly, in the last century. I hope you like Doctor Johnson. He is one of my heroes – Boswell’s Life of him is my favourite book – and (to the astonishment of some of the shallow literary men of the present time in England) I persist in thinking his “Vanity of Human Wishes,” and his “lines on the death of Robert Levett” two of the grandest poems ever written.

My best love to all at Copse Hill – and my heartiest good wishes for a happy New Year.

Affectionately yours, | WILKIE COLLINS

In the forefront, the Gout has given up trying to kill me – and fierce neuralgic pains (really “angina,” but we keep that a secret in fear of newspaper reports of my death) have succeeded the Gout. My doctor and I, and “Arsenic,”<sup>3</sup> and “Amyl,”<sup>4</sup> make a good fight of it – and, in spite of the weather, I get better.

---

1. The final stanza of Hayne’s poem ‘A Storm in the Distance [Among the Georgian Hills]’. See Paul Hamilton Hayne, Poems (1882), pp. 239–240, the volume which WC acknowledges receiving in [2337] to Hayne of 16 July 1884. The book was in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 116). The upper-case ‘K’ in ‘Kisses’ is not found in the published version, and WC’s idiosyncratic rendering of the lower-case letter may have been misinterpreted.

2. The Evil Genius was serialised in the Sydney Mail in New South Wales from 3 January to 26 June 1886; other colonial and continental appearances remain untraced.

3. White Arsenic (As<sub>2</sub>O<sub>3</sub>) was used in the treatment of gout.

4. Amyl nitrite, first produced in 1857, is a volatile liquid and was used from 1867 as a treatment for angina. See also [2414] to Charles Kent, 18 April 1885, [2661] to Anne Wynne, 23 December 1886, and [2679] to Mary Besant, 23 February 1887.

[2513] TO A. P. WATT, 28 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 140–141.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th Decr 1885

My dear Watt

The horrid Christmas Day is over –. Let me forget it – and heartily wish you a happy New Year.

By the post of Wednesday last, I sent copy of the 17th Weekly part of “The Evil Genius” to Tillotson. This completes the second third of the whole story, and claims the second payment of £300.–.– Will you kindly write to T. and ask him for that cheque which he announced as “ready” sometime since?<sup>1</sup>

Shall I see you with the coming of the New Year? And will you drink with me to our luck in ’86? and eat too if you have a better appetite than mine, and will set me an example. I live principally on dry Champagne, and on that stomach prescription of which you have a copy. Oh, for a frost!

Ever yours | WC

Oh, dear, the worthy Perry Mason & Co. They send me their publications – and I am afraid they wonder at not receiving more copy. Will your friendship help me again, and – when you have a spare ten minutes – will you tell them? 1st: that I have been ill. 2ndly: that I am not satisfied with my materials – that I have borrowed, and am borrowing Trials from friends, in the hope of finding better subjects for “young readers” than I have discovered yet. Both these statements are strictly true – and I hope they will excuse me.<sup>2</sup> While this weather lasts, it is an effort to me to write anything.

---

1. Watt wrote to Tillotson to this effect on the same day, and Tillotson sent the cheque on 29 December (Berg). The sum was credited to WC’s account on 31 December (Coutts: WC).

2. WC was late in sending further stories in the ‘Victims of Circumstances’ series to be published in Youth’s Companion – see his letters to Watt during the previous May. Watt replied to WC on 29 December to say that he had written that day to Boston to apologize for the delay (Berg).

[2514] TO EMILY WYNNE, 28 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 141.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday. 28th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1885

Dear Mrs Wynne,

In the last three days I have not stirred out of the house. I live principally on the driest Champagne, and the doctors [sic] prescriptions – and I can only express my gratitude for your kind invitation to lunch by begging to be excused.

But if I can get out tomorrow afternoon, and see the poor dear little wife before she goes away, I will most assuredly do so. My work (all in arrear of course) will keep me at my desk till three, and then I will get into the driest cab that can be found. But one thing will stop me – fog. It inflicts a choking sensation on those weak nerves in my chest. It is a relief to hear that you have got over Christmas Day, and that you have energy enough to confront (I don’t say to eat) that dreadful composition called plum pudding. My love to Nannie – and my “deep curse” on that juvenile party.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Le Poer Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked as dated.

[3144] TO ANNE WYNNE, 31 DECEMBER 1885

MS: Private, envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C5, p. 17.

Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.

---

1. Postmarked ‘LONDON . W | R | DE 31 | 85’. This envelope does not match any of the known letters to Anne Wynne or her mother.

[3066] TO THE REV. CHARLES TOWNSEND,<sup>1</sup> 5 JANUARY 1886

MS: Indiana (English Literature Mss), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C3, pp. 56–57.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 5 January 1886

Dear Sir,

I should be miserable indeed, if I did not feel gratified and encouraged on reading your friendly letter. Pray accept the few lines enclosed, and believe me,

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

The Revd Charles Townsend | &c &c &c

Count Fosco on John Bull.

“He is the quickest old gentleman at finding out the faults that are his neighbours’, and the slowest old gentleman at finding out the faults that are his own, who exists on the face of creation.”<sup>3</sup>

From “The Woman in White” | By Wilkie Collins | 5 January 1886

1. Autograph-hunting pastor (from 1883) of the First Presbyterian Church, Lansingburgh, then a small town on the east bank of the Hudson River, north of Troy, now a district of Troy itself.
2. Directed to ‘The Reverend Charles Townsend | Pastor’s Study | Lansingburgh | New York | U.S.A.’, and postmarked ‘London W | JA 5 | 86’.
3. From Marian Halcombe’s Diary entry for 17 June, Second Epoch III.

[2515] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 12 JANUARY 1886

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 308; BGLL, IV, pp. 141–142.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

12th January 1886

Dear Sirs,

The Pints of Champagne have disappeared. Will you send me six dozen more of the same “Vin Brut,” in half bottles? The Sherry also is reported to be on its last legs. Please let me have a three-dozen case (as before) – and send another three-dozen case, addressed to

Mrs Dawson | 10. Taunton Place | Park Road, Regent’s Park.<sup>2</sup> – and charge the same to my account.

I am not too late I hope to send you my best wishes for the New Year.

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

While I am writing, I take the opportunity of enclosing my cheque for the last invoice (£14 .. 18 .. 6)<sup>3</sup>

Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co

1. Signed and directed to ‘Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co | 135, Minories | E.’, postmarked as dated.
2. The address of Martha Rudd, who lived there as Mrs Dawson with WC’s three children.
3. Debited to WC’s account as ‘To pd Beechens & Co’ on 16 January (Coutts: WC).

[2516] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 15 JANUARY 1886

MS: Huntington (HH 99). Published: B&C, II, pp. 518–519.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

15 January 1886

My dear Holman

Your handwriting is always a welcome sight to me – especially when it brings better news of your health. Having relieved me so far, you startle me next by the suggestion of another journey to the East.<sup>2</sup> I believe firmly in the vigour of your constitution – but my doubt is whether the capacity for taking long journeys and encountering severe changes of climate, successfully, is not dependent on a healthier state of [del] nerves than either you or I can claim to possess just yet. That is all I have to say on this subject (which interests your old friends almost as strongly as it interests you). It is quite likely that I am wrong – and you know best. Wait a little, and let us see. I say no more.

The post which brought me your letter, brought also one of the many odd letters written to me by strangers/. The writer/ ~~complaining~~ complains of my books, in this case, for not being “sufficiently transcendental.”! She ~~informed~~ informs me that the dead are perfectly well aware of everything that goes on in the world which they have left. When I think of our old friends’ magnificence and prosperity – after receiving this expression of opinion – I think of old Mrs Millais in Gower Street, and I say to myself, How that excellent woman must be bragging about “Johnny”, in the empty air above her son’s palace at Kensington!<sup>3</sup>

As for me, I have no reason to complain, and every reason, so far, to feel hopefully. For years past, I have only been able to write, with the printers close behind me as the spur that drives me on. Every week, publishers of newspapers at home and abroad, and translators here /there/ and everywhere, wait for (and swallow up) a weekly part of my new story. I can only be equal to this strain by putting myself, [del] as poor Dickens used to say, “in training.” I lead (quite willingly) the life of a hermit – and, so far, I am equal to the work – although I feel it more now, and no wonder, considering that I reached sixty two years of age on the 8th of this month. But I dont [sic] feel any drop in the spirits which I inherit from my mother (excepting times of downright pain) – and my invention comes to my call as easily as it ever did. Now and then the “angina” (or in old English “breast-pang”) tries to come back, but does’nt succeed of late. There is my report!

You know how glad I shall be to see you and Cyril.<sup>4</sup> There is always something on the table here between 2 and 3 – if you will drop me a line first to choose your day and so ensure my not being out on a constitutional walk. I hope to finish my work towards the end of next month – and I shall come to you, if you dont [sic] get to me before that date.

Affectionately Yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Black engraved address ranged right, monogram ranged left, paper watermarked ‘Light Preserving Paper | E & J’.
  2. The artist made a total of four expeditions to Jerusalem – see Hunt. The three previous journeys were made in 1854–1856, 1869–1872, and 1875–1878, while his fourth and final visit did not in fact take place until 1892–93, after WC’s death. However, [2529] to Hunt of 7 March 1886 shows that WC believed that the artist was then about to set off on another expedition to the Holy Land.
  3. According to the ODNB: ‘In 1873 Millais bought a site on Palace Gate in Kensington and engaged the architect Philip Hardwick to build him a new house. No. 2 Palace Gate was finished in 1876 and the Millais family moved in during the early months of 1877. Designed in a truly palatial, Italianate style, the house reflected the artist’s growing wealth and social standing.’
  4. His son Cyril Benoni Holman Hunt (1866–1934), whose portrait Hunt painted in 1880.

[2517] TO ANNE WYNNE, 15 JANUARY 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 501.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

15 Janry 1886

Dear Mrs Wilkie

Your pretty violets are still alive, and looking at me while I write. If the Evil Genius doesn’t finish me first – I shall finish The Evil Genius by the end of next month – and then we will celebrate the conclusion (if your Mamma permits it) at 4. Delamere Street, and at luncheon time. I am so tired when evening comes that I am only fit to sink in my chair – and smoke – and wish I was you (with a lovely velvet dress, and a broad sash, and a charming governess to teach me!). My only comfort now is that you have gone to Mr Beard – if he doesn’t cure your [del] neuralgia I shall be disappointed indeed. For this next twenty years, my angel, ought not to know what neuralgia means.

“The Evil Genius” is waiting. Goodbye sweetheart. Remember me to Mamma. | WC

-
1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked ‘London. W. | JA15 | 86’.
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

[2518] TO CARRIE BARTLEY, 18 JANUARY 1886

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 309; BGLL, IV, p. 142.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday evening | 18th Jan<sup>y</sup> 1886

My dearest Carrie,

I am afraid you may have caught cold in the gum by walking back today, after having had that tooth out, and that a bad night may be the disastrous result. For this reason I don't send the copying by tonight's post<sup>1</sup> – because I want to be sure that you are well enough to do it tomorrow. Your mother will take the pages to you tomorrow morning after breakfast – and so we shall hear how you are – and there will be plenty of time for the copying if I turn out to be – as I hope I may be – wrong.

Always affly yours | WC

---

1. Of The Evil Genius.

[2519] TO A. P. WATT, 27 JANUARY 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 143.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27th January 1886

My dear Watt

Your letter is most welcome. I have been too long without news of you. Perry Mason & Co are not publishers but angels. Exactly what I wanted them to say is what they have said – viz. – “we don't want you till late in the year.” I will keep their letter – with the valuable memorandum in your pencil note. And, if all goes well with me, I will do my very best for Perry Mason & Co.<sup>1</sup>

It has been no slight strain on my endurance to get through my weekly task in spite of the weather. Those infernal pains in the nerves of my chest have tried more than once to take the pen out of my hand – but they have not succeeded so far. And yesterday was such a luxurious day for me, that I deserted “The Evil Genius”, and got a good walk in the sun. I am now finishing the 22nd Weekly part, and am beginning to see my way to the end. Whether I shall finish with number 26, I don't quite know yet. The moment I do know, you shall hear of it. In the meantime, whenever you can conveniently come here, you know how welcome you will be.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written to WC on 26 January enclosing a letter from Perry Mason & Co. to say that there was no urgency for the copy.

[2520] TO WILLIAM YAXLEY,<sup>1</sup> 29 JANUARY 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 143.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

29th Jan<sup>y</sup> 1886

Dear Sir,

Just a word to thank you for your letter, and to say that I shall certainly get the book.<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

William Yaxley Esq

---

1. Partner in the firm of Beecheno, Yaxley and Co., WC's wine merchants.
2. Directed to 'William Yaxley Esq | 135. Minorities | E.', postmarked as dated.
3. The book in question has not been identified.

[2521] TO ANNE WYNNE, 1 FEBRUARY 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 501–502.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

1st Feby 1886

Si carissima sposa mia, noi pranzeramo nell' Workhouse.<sup>3</sup> What am I about? I am so weary of writing English all day, that I fall into Italian. I mean we have a very nice Workhouse in this neighbourhood and we will dine there. The gruel is said to be strong, and the master won't be hard on us when we are set to breaking stones if we do it badly.

Mark my words! that round tower will tumble down. In these modern days people have lost the art of building round towers. The builder will cheat – he will make it of rubbish and cover it with stucco. But I subscribe – 12 postage stamps enclosed. Oh, you sly little hussy with your persuasive postscript, trying to wheedle me into subscribing five shillings! I regard five shillings for a round tower as ostentation – and even shocking ostentation, considering that it is a sacred question of a church. A pious person subscribes a shilling.<sup>4</sup>

With these sentiments I think it is only right now to go to bed. Having written myself into a state of headache, and finished one of the most interesting chapters in my book, let me say good night and waft you a kiss in this way<sup>5</sup> till we meet again.

My kindest remembrances to your Mamma. I am dying to see what was bought at the sale.

Always your loving | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.', postmarked 'LONDON. W. | FE 2 | 86'.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. Italian: 'My dearest wife, we will have dinner in the Workhouse'.

4. In other words, WC sent one shilling's worth of postage stamps towards the building or restoration of a round church tower, though Nannie had encouraged him to contribute five shillings. The specific church is unidentified, though St Nicholas, Little Saxham, in the rectory of which Nannie stayed in the summers of both 1885 and 1886, is one of many Suffolk churches with a round tower.

5. Here WC draws a large circle to indicate a kiss.

[2522] TO A. P. WATT, 2 FEBRUARY 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 144.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd Feby 1886

My dear Watt,

I am obliged to trouble you again in the matter of my Evil Genius, at Bolton. Please read the enclosed, and forward it.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

In haste.

---

1. The following memorandum complaining of Tillotson's inefficiency is bound into the volumes at Pembroke following WC's letter:

1886 The Evil Genius | Weekly Part 21:

First Proof received: January 26 | =

First Proof returned, corrected for Revise: January 27th | =

No Revises received up to this date: 2nd February | =

Mr Wilkie Collins has already received complaints from the Translators of irregularity in the receipt of proofs, caused by irregularity in forwarding Revises from Bolton.

However, Watt's letter to WC of the same date makes clear that the missing revises had arrived shortly after WC posted his letter. WC had then telegraphed Watt to that effect, so that Watt had no need to write to Tillotson to complain (Berg).

[2523] TO ALFRED KING,<sup>1</sup> 8 FEBRUARY 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 144–145.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 8th February 1886

Mr Wilkie Collins will be obliged if Mr Alfred King will send to him, at the above address, a copy of, “Fotheringhay and Mary Queen of Scots”<sup>2</sup>

A post office order is enclosed for 5/-

---

1. London bookseller and publisher.

2. Edward Bradley (pseud. Cuthbert Bede), Fotheringhay and Mary, Queen of Scots (London: Simpkin, Marshall, 1886). The book was in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 78).

[2524] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 11 FEBRUARY 1886

MS: Parrish (5/9/AM79-25), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 519, amended A&C3, p. 69.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 11 February 1886

My dear Winter,

I have just received “the Tribune” – and I know of the death of your son.<sup>3</sup>

In the face of the dreadful misfortune that has fallen on you, I am one of the unfortunate people who have nothing to say. The state of mind which finds relief in the “consolation of religion” is, I am sorry to own it, a state of mind unintelligible to me – and I read with wonder the neatly-arranged figures of speech by means of which Mr Curtis offers consolation, in perfect sincerity of friendship I don’t doubt.<sup>4</sup> In my experience, there is no true consolation to be found, except in the lapse of time, and the one “palliative” in the meanwhile is work. But the sore heart does feel some little relief in the sympathy of true friends. I can, in some degree, understand what you are suffering – for I have children of my own – and I feel for you with my whole heart. There is no more to say.

Always affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Mr William Winter | ~~New Brighton~~ | S.I. | New York | U.S.A.’, and initialled ‘WC’. Postmarks obscured.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. ‘William Winter’s son Arthur Elliott, age fourteen, his second child, was fatally injured while coasting down one of the hills of New Brighton, S. I., on Friday, January 15. He was alone on his sled and ran into a rock. The lad was injured internally and after suffering intense agony died yesterday morning at 11 o’clock at his home, No. 17 Third-ave, New-Brighton. The physicians had hope of saving his life up to 8 o’clock on Saturday night, but after that hour they gave him up. He was unconscious from this time until his death, which was painless and as if he had dropped into sleep. The funeral will take place on Wednesday at 2 p. m.’ (‘Death of William Winter’s Son Arthur’, New York Tribune, Monday, 25 January 1886, p. 5b).

4. See ‘Funeral of Arthur E. Winter’, New York Tribune, Thursday, 28 January 1886, p. 5e, which includes an ‘Address by George William Curtis’, the distinguished American journalist to whom a chapter is devoted in Winter’s Old Friends (1909), pp. 223–274. The address begins: ‘In this hour no spoken word avails, nor is there any present consolation for the hearts that are bowed under this sore bereavement. We are here not to try to comfort, or to argue, or to exhort, but only to take the hands of our friends in tender love and sympathy, and to say to them God bless you.’ Perhaps WC’s lack of sympathy with Curtis’s sentiments might also have been influenced by his recalling the American writer’s role in the accusations of plagiarism aimed at him in the American press six years earlier; see [3298] to the Editor of the Spirit of the Times, 29 January 1880.

[2525] TO WILLIAM CAULDWELL,<sup>1</sup> 14 FEBRUARY 1886

MS: NYPL. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 145.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 14 February 1886

Dear Sir,

Let me beg you to accept my best acknowledgements for “The Sunday Mercury.” I can well understand the long and successful career of your Journal. It is a newspaper in the best and the most welcome sense of the word – addressing, and interesting, readers of all ranks and orders at home and abroad, say, from a New York “Cavalier” in a clawhammer<sup>2</sup> to an old English author in a dressing-gown, who signs himself

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Mr William Cauldwell

---

1. William Cauldwell (1824–1907), editor and proprietor of the New York Sunday Mercury. He serialized three of WC’s novels in the paper: Jezebel’s Daughter (from 5 October 1879); The Evil Genius (from 8 November 1885); and The Legacy of Cain (from 26 February 1888).

2. That is, a claw-hammer coat, or jacket with split tails for evening wear,

[2526] TO HENRY D. PIGOTT, 21 FEBRUARY 1886

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 145–146.

London | 90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
21st Feby 1886

My dear Henry

Thank you for the asparagus – the only asparagus worth eating, to my mind, is the small green kind which you have kindly sent. Cold, with salad oil, is my way of doing justice to that delicate vegetable.

I am very glad that you like my little article in the Pall Mall.<sup>1</sup> Hard as I am at work on the end of my story,<sup>2</sup> I was so disgusted by the intellectual cant and conceit of some of those “literary gentlemen” that I really could not resist entering a small protest in a good humoured way

Let me hear when you come to London again, on what day you will swallow pot-luck. Uncle Ted dined here not long since in fine health and spirits<sup>3</sup>

With kind regards from Caroline
Ever yours | WC

---

1. In ‘Books Necessary for a Liberal Education’, Pall Mall Gazette, 11 February 1886, WC attacks reading recommendations by Sir John Lubbock and others.

2. The Evil Genius.

3. Referring to Edward Pigott.

[2527] TO ‘ALLY SLOPER’,<sup>1</sup> 23 FEBRUARY 1886

MS: Stanford. Facsimile: Bender. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 146–147.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 23rd Feby 1886

Illustrious Sir,

After more than thirty years experience in the use of his pen, the Undersigned finds himself incapable of expressing the emotions of pride pleasure and gratitude with which he has received the Award of Merit, and the permission to add to his name F.O.S. In this difficulty, he submits his heart to Sloper, and confidently leaves that true philanthropist to draw his own conclusions. At the same time, the undersigned begs to remark that the Award of Merit (with the autograph that accompanies it) is superior to all other awards in this respect – that it is useful as well as ornamental. When the Social Revolution<sup>2</sup> passes his way, W.C. will appear in his balcony – will exhibit his diploma – and will save his windows.<sup>3</sup> In the meantime visitors will be invited to view the autograph. Young people (provided with their copy books) will learn what a truly free and noble handwriting really is. And correspondents, guilty of that last and lowest form of human conceit which consists in writing illegible signatures, will be referred to the Sloper-signature, and will be instructed to follow the Sloper-example.

Illustrious Sir | your grateful servant to | command,
Wilkie Collins | F.O.S.<sup>4</sup>

To | Ally Sloper, Friend of Man | &c &c &c

---

1. Ally Sloper, ‘the first comic strip character in English’ (Sutherland, p. 543), was invented by Charles Henry Ross (c. 1842–97), writer of penny dreadfuls, and editor from 1869 of Judy, the rival to Punch. In 1875 he had published ‘The Sequel to Mr. Wilkie Collins’s Moonstone’, a rather ponderous and (to modern eyes) not very funny six-frame cartoon about Bham Jahm Poo Poo and his attempts to steal the Moonstone (Judy, or the London Serio-Comic Journal, 15 December 1875, vol. 18, p. 88). It is not known if WC had seen this, or recalled it more than ten years later when he wrote to Sloper. The character was first introduced in Judy, but achieved real fame after 1884 when Ross had sold the character to Gilbert Dalziel, son of one of the famous Dalziel brothers, who published Aly Sloper’s Half Holiday for around forty years:

Sloper was an amiable con-man, always starting get-rich-quick schemes, mingling with the quality at race meetings and evading creditors. His full name was ‘Alexander Sloper F. O. M. (Friend of Man)’, and he established a reciprocal order for distinguished readers, known as The Friends of Sloper, sending out rather gorgeous certificates entitling the holder to style himself or herself F. O. S.

(Maggs Catalogue 1309, July 2001)

2. These two words written in a larger hand.

3. A reference to placing candles in windows to deter the mob from breaking them during the passage of the Reform Bill (see [2742] to Winter, 30 July 1887).

4. There follows a pencil annotation, in a hand similar to WC’s: ‘F.O.S. Friend of Sloper!’.

[2528] TO ANNE WYNNE, 1 MARCH 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 502.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

1st March 1886

1st Excuse:

Please refer, very much-injured missus, to the Marriage [del] Service. You will find you took me “for better, for worse”. My long silence and my want of punctuality in thanking you for your [del] List of 100 books – exhibit “worse”.

I deserve to be divorced – I can only leave it to your mercy.

2nd Excuse | P. and W.

Is it possible that you want to know what this means? Let me hasten to explain:

P. and W. | mean | Pain and Work<sup>3</sup> | =

or | shall we say | I. and E.G. | Illness and Evil Genius?<sup>4</sup> | =

I begin the last weekly part today. If I live to finish it, you shall see the “better” side of me. If not, my love and goodbye, and kindest remembrances to Mamma from [del]your unfortunate

WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, signed ‘WC’ in bottom left corner, and postmarked ‘LONDON. W. | MR 1 | 86’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. ‘Pain’ and ‘Work’ written in large, bold letters.

4. ‘Illness’ and ‘Evil Genius’ written in not quite so large, bold letters.

[2529] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 7 MARCH 1886

MS: Huntington (HH 101). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 147–148.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday 7th March 1886

My dear Holman,

It is not easy to say how sorry I am to have missed the opportunity of wishing you goodbye yesterday before you start on your journey to the East.<sup>1</sup> I have been suffering from neuralgia in the chest – but I had got better, and had made all my arrangements to drive to your house when another attack came on towards three o’Clock – and there was an end of my hopes.

With all my heart I wish you, and those dear to you, a prosperous journey – a happy sojourn in the East – and a safe return to the friends who love you here. That you will come back bringing with you new and noble work, is not a matter of the smallest doubt. One has only to hope that change means health and strength – and to wait for a great result.

When the journey is achieved – and when the pen may be in your hand – tell me that you are safe and satisfied, and give me some idea (if you can) of the length of your stay in the East. Goodbye my dear old friend – and may we meet again!

Always affectionately Yours | Wilkie Collins

Holman Hunt Eqr

---

1. Ironically after this fond farewell, as subsequent letters to Hunt suggest, the artist did not in fact travel to the Holy Land in 1886, his final journey there taking place in 1892–93.

[2530] TO CHARLES KENT, 9 MARCH 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 5/4). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 148.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday 9th March 1886

My dear Kent,

I got your kind letter, in the agony of finishing my story.<sup>1</sup> Too weary even to write to you till today, when the book is finished – and the author (as we say in the U.S.A.) pretty considerably played out.

That I have heard of you from B.<sup>2</sup> and rejoiced in your recovery it is quite needless to say. My flesh crept when I heard of the operation. There is no greater coward in the presence of a surgical knife (or a black-beetle) than I am.

Come on Thursday next the 11th at the usual time – and I shall be delighted to see you. Don’t write again, if the 11th will do.

Yours affctly | WC

---

1. The Evil Genius.

2. Frank Beard.

[2531] TO A. P. WATT, 9 MARCH 1886

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 148–149.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th March 1886

My dear Watt,

The last chapter of The Evil Genius has gone to T. by today’s post. But for the weather which everybody complains of but me, I don’t think I should have got through it – without a stoppage and a rest. When can you give me a look in at the usual time – the sooner the better?

Ever yours | WC

I have got the agreement in safe keeping.<sup>1</sup> Also another American letter that I want to show you

– from a new man.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Presumably the agreement with Tillotson concerning The Evil Genius, judging by [2538], WC's next letter to Watt of 16 March.

2. Unidentified. There is no reply to WC from Watt in the Berg letter-books around this date.

[2532] TO THE PROPRIETORS OF THE PALL MALL GAZETTE, 11 MARCH 1886

MS: Holborn. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 149.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th March 1886

Mr Wilkie Collins presents his compliments to the Proprietors of the Pall Mall Gazette, and begs to thank them for a cheque dated February 27, safely received today.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. The payment for 'Books Necessary for a Liberal Education', published in the Pall Mall Gazette, 11 February 1886. No payment which seems appropriate was credited at this time to WC's bank account (Coutts: WC).

[2533] TO W. STANLEY WITHERS,<sup>1</sup> 12 MARCH 1886

MS: Manchester (Withers, I. W 823.89). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 149–150.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 12th March 1886

Dear Sir,

Pray excuse an unavoidably late reply to your kind letter.

My literary engagements so fully occupy my time, and all the rest that I can get is so necessary to the preservation of my health, that I cannot hope to be able to take advantage of the proposal which you are so good as to address to me.

"Major Namby"<sup>2</sup> will be found among a collection of my Sketches, Essays, and so on, published under the title of "My Miscellanies" by Messrs Chatto and Windus of Piccadilly, London, as one of the volumes in a cheap edition of my works.<sup>3</sup>

"Major Namby" has also been published (by my permission) in a collection intended for the use of "Public Readers".

I am sorry to say the title and the publishers name have both escaped my memory.<sup>4</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

W. Stanley Withers Esqre

---

1. W. Stanley Withers (c. 1862–1927), future Registrar at the Royal Manchester College of Music, founded in 1892. See his obituary, 'Mr. Stanley Withers: Foundation Official of the "College of Music"', Manchester Guardian (31 December 1927), p. 4.

2. First published as 'Pray Employ Major Namby!' in All The Year Round (4 June 1859), pp. 136–141, and reprinted as 'Sketches of Character: V. Pray employ Major Namby!' in My Miscellanies (2 vols, London: Sampson, Low, 1863), II, pp. 95–113.

3. The first single-volume reprint appeared from Chatto & Windus in 1875.

4. See [2405] to the Rev. John A. Jennings of 7 March 1885, where WC cites the publication as: "'Part 4 of Selected Readings'" – published by Sweeting & Co, Dyer's Buildings, Holborn, London (1881)'. The sketch also appeared in at least one (presumably unauthorized) American selection of readings: Dick's Recitations and Readings, No. 7 (New York: Dick & Fitzgerald, 1878), pp. 39–51.

[2534] TO LILLIE LANGTRY,<sup>1</sup> 14 MARCH 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 150–151.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14th March 1886

Dear Madam,

I very sincerely thank you for the kindness to which I owe some pleasant hours in this dismal month.

“Enemies” has interested me by its striking situations, and its dramatic dialogue – and the play is acted with a harmony and completeness by the artists engaged, too rarely seen, in my experience, on the English Stage.<sup>2</sup>

Permit me to add a word of congratulations on your performance of “Margaret”. The scene of the “apology” in the second act, and the scenes in the third and fifth acts, were played with a truth to Nature, and a delicacy of treatment, which I heartily admired. It also struck me that the admirable acting of Mr Fernandez<sup>3</sup> had its encouraging effect on your charming performance in the fifth act, from the time of the old man’s unexpected appearance to the close of the play. In one last word, my only disappointment yesterday was caused by the coldness of the audience.

Believe me my dear Madam, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
To | Mrs Langtry

---

1. Mrs Emily Charlotte Langtry, née Le Breton, usually known as ‘Lillie’ Langtry (1853–1929: ODNB), actress, whose portrait was painted by Millais under the title ‘A Jersey Lily’ (1877–78). In 1881 Pigott asked WC ‘to advise Lillie Langtry on her career and Wilkie responded with enthusiasm’ (Peters, p. 409). See also [2547] to Edward Pigott of 3 April 1886.

2. Enemies, adapted by Charles Coghlan from the French of Georges Ohnet, which opened at the Prince of Wales’s Theatre in January 1886.

3. James Fernandez (1835–1915), who acted with Lillie Langtry in Enemies.

[2535] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 15 MARCH 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Summary: B&C, II, p. 520. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 151.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 15th March 1886

My dear Collaborateur,

I have at last finished my story – and I am “parfaitement éreinté” – or as we say in England “dead beat”.<sup>1</sup>

Here is the only photograph of myself that I can find, which is near the date that you want. There is a portrait of Dickens in the second volume of Forster’s Life (which you no doubt know) engraved from a picture by Frith, painted in 1859. I will write and ask Miss Hogarth how a photograph of that period may be found. If we can borrow one, we shall be lucky. I have asked if one is to be bought – and the answer is “After twenty seven years” ! ! ! ! If it can be got it shall be got.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I ought to add that I had not even thought of the “Woman In White” in 1855. The book was not published – even in its first serial form – until 1859–60. Some few of my earlier stories had been translated into French at that time – and some of the illustrious French authors had read them – notably Scribe who charmed me by his kind encouragement.<sup>3</sup> But the wide celebrity of the “Woman In White” had not shone on me when I was with Dickens at Paris in 1855. We saw each other every day, and were as fond of each other as men could be. Nobody (my poor dear mother excepted, of course) felt so positively sure of the future before me in Literature, as Dickens did.

---

1. More literally, ‘completely exhausted’: referring to The Evil Genius, completed on 9 March.

2. WC helps du Pontavice de Heussey with materials for his L’Inimitable Boz, eventually published in 1889.

3. The dramatist Eugène Scribe (1791–1861) – see [0232] to HC of 11 March 1856.

[3189] TO CHARLES KENT, 15 MARCH 1886

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

15th March 1886

My dear Kent

My state of mind after reading “Doctor Jekyll and Mr Hyde”<sup>2</sup> may be described in two words:

Profound Depression.

The working-up of the mystery is, I don’t doubt or deny, very well done – with the one drawback to me of want of tenderness and absence of poetical feeling – still it is very strongly and dramatically written. But that the audacious absurdity of the explanations of the mystery, has passed muster with a large number of readers is the most deadly symptom of degradation in the public taste that I have met with. Don’t suppose that I object to the marvellous in fiction – I like it. But when I am asked to set the laws of Nature at defiance, I must have some poetical feeling to help me. The medicine-measure-glass—the powders, adulterated and otherwise – the chemist’s bill – good God, what are you made of that you can read that, and believe it? And if you don’t believe it, where is the hold of the story on you?<sup>3</sup>

I cannot tell you how obliged I am to you, for making me read the story, before I began to think of my own shilling book.<sup>4</sup> As a warning to me, it is worth its weight in gold, and more

Ever affly yours | WC

---

1. Address ranged right, monogram ranged left.

2. Robert Louis Stevenson’s Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde (London: Longman, 1886). Despite WC’s views the novella went on to be one of Stevenson’s biggest successes. It was adapted for the stage the following year and is still popular today. There is no record of any book by Stevenson in WC’s library – see Baker 2002.

3. See [2741] to Watt, 29 July 1887, for WC’s view of Stevenson’s Kidnapped.

4. WC did write a shilling book later that year, The Guilty River published by Arrowsmith for the Christmas market. See [2580] to Anne Wynne, 24 June 1886 for his ‘struggle’ and [2645] to Archer, 22 November 1886, where he refers to it as ‘a shilling book’.

[2536] TO HENRY D. PIGOTT, 15 MARCH 1886

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 152.

London | 90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday 15th March

My dear Henry

Your letter received this morning. – This afternoon Caroline called on Uncle Ted,<sup>1</sup> found him better, hoping to be well enough to start for Budleigh S. on Saturday next,<sup>2</sup> and wisely writing at the moment, to Caroline to ask for some of that strong meat jelly which we make with a French machine. He will have it tomorrow – and there is, I hope and trust no cause for anxiety now.

On the day when that number of the Spirit reaches me, it shall be sent on to you. It ought to get here – barring hurricanes and collisions – in two days more.<sup>3</sup>

The burden of my work is off my shoulders at last – and has left me desperately weary and old, and depressed. At the earliest, I cannot publish in book form before the 1st of May.<sup>4</sup> But whenever the story does appear, I want you to read it. For years past, I have written nothing that comes near it.

Ever yours | WC

Let hear [sic] beforehand when you come to London – and what day will do for dinner.

---

1. Edward Pigott.

2. Henry’s home at Budleigh Salterton, Devon – see the address on the envelope directed to him with [2154] of 10 May 1883.

3. The New York sporting paper the Spirit of the Times, which carried a Christmas story from WC each year from 1876–87. The number in question remains uncertain. The date seems much too late for the arrival of the issue of 26

December 1885, carrying WC's 'The Poetry Did It: An Event in the Life of Major Evergreen' on pp. 636–638, and it seems more likely that the article in question concerned the staging in New York of the first play by Henry's younger brother, J. W. (Jim) Pigott. The play was She Loved Him at the Lyceum Theatre, with E. H. Sothorn in the cast. The performance was announced in the 'Spirit of the Stage' columns of the Spirit of the Times on 6 March 1886, p. 178, and a review appeared in the same paper on 20 March 1886, p. 242. See also the notes to [2547] to Edward Pigott of 3 April 1886.

4. The Evil Genius was finishing its serial run in the newspapers, but in the event was not published in book form until September.

[2537] TO JAMES F. GLUCK,<sup>1</sup> 16 MARCH 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 152–153.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 16th March 1886

Dear Sir,

I remember with so much pleasure the friendly kindness of my reception at Buffalo, on the occasion of my visit (in 1873–74) to the United States, that I gladly comply with the suggestion offered to me in your letter.

As soon as possible, I will make a choice of one of my manuscripts, to be presented to the Buffalo Library – will send it properly bound to your correspondent in London<sup>2</sup> – and will write again to inform you of what I have done.

Before I close these lines, I must beg you to accept my apologies for the delay which has so long deferred my reply. When your kind letter reached me, I was suffering from illness. Arrears of literary work and of correspondence left me but little leisure when I recovered – and my first opportunity of writing to you has been the opportunity of today.

Believe me, Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

James F. Gluck Esqre

---

1. James Fraser Gluck (1852–97), lawyer and book collector, then curator of the Buffalo and Erie County Public Library in upstate New York. See [2579] to Gluck of 24 June 1886.

2. Presumably the 'Mr Stevens' mentioned in [2579] to Gluck, 24 June 1886.

[2538] TO A. P. WATT, 16 MARCH 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 153–154.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16th March 1886

My dear Watt,

Many thanks for "The Chronicles of Carlingford"<sup>1</sup> – safely received yesterday evening.

The MS of "the remaining third" of the Story was in Tillotson's hands on the 10th of this month. Thus far, he has not paid the third instalment. What do you say to reminding him of his obligations?<sup>2</sup> You will find an extract from the agreement on the next page. His perfect readiness to pay the second instalment – when he was depending on me for the continuation of the story – offers a contrast to his present backwardness in paying the third instalment – when he has got the story complete – which I only remark(!) without saying anything more(!)

Ever yours | WC

Extracted from the agreement | Clause 10 | =

..... "payments to be made as follows – Three hundred pounds in cash, on receipt by Tillotson and Son of the first third of the manuscript – Three hundred pounds in cash on receipt by them of the second third – Three hundred pounds in cash on receipt by them of the remaining third – and four hundred pounds by Tillotson and Sons' promissory note payable six months after date and dated on the day on which the last consecutive weekly instalment of the story shall be published in Great Britain, the said story beginning as already provided.”

Note The first serial weekly part of “The Evil Genius” was published on the 31st October 1885. The last serial weekly part will be published on the 1st May 1886. Promissory note therefore to be dated May 1/86

-
1. As [2672] to Watt of 25 January 1887 indicates, a two-volume edition of a part or the whole of Margaret Oliphant’s seven-novel sequence from Salem Chapel (1863) to Phoebe Junior (1876).
  2. Watt wrote to Tillotson in Bolton the same day to this effect (Berg).

[2539] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 19 MARCH 1886

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 154.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
19th March 1886

My dear Ted,

I am delighted to hear such a much better account of you today. Be very careful about draughts on the railway tomorrow. I need not remind you to sit with your “back to the horses”. And don’t forget that the “joiners work” is more carefully done in the first class carriages than in the second – and that the small unheeded currents of air, sneaking through window frames are capable of finding their way to weak bronchial tubes.

I return the enclosures with many thanks. So far as I am concerned Jim has allowed himself to be capsized by a storm in a tea-cup. My being “incensed” at his being late at lunch in the U.S.A. is one of the funniest things I have read for some time past. My love to him, and best wishes for the success of his play.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours affty | WC

Let me have two words on the day after you get to B.S.<sup>2</sup> to tell me how you feel then.

-
1. Here, Jim is the recipient’s nephew J.W. Pigott, now aged around 36 and working as actor and playwright in the United States, with the play in question being the romantic comedy She Loved Him, which had been performed at the Lyceum Theatre, New York on the afternoon of 11 March 1886. See note 3 to [2536] to Henry Pigott of 15 March 1886, and [2891] to Jim [Pigott] of 14 September 1888. We are unable to trace the enclosures – apparently concerning an unidentified incident involving Jim Pigott’s late arrival to lunch with WC in New York, when the young man would have been in his early twenties – though they might well be personal letters from Jim to his uncle.
  2. Budleigh Salterton, the seaside resort in Devon where Pigott’s nephew Henry had a house.

[2540] TO DAVID STOTT,<sup>1</sup> 19 MARCH 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 155.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
19th March 1886

Dear Sir,

Will you get for me the volume of Cassell’s Series of “The World’s Workes” which contains the “Life of Charles Dickens for Children”<sup>2</sup> – and, as time is of importance in this case, will you oblige me by sending the volume, by book post, to the address which I add on the next leaf?<sup>3</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

David Stott Esq

-
1. London bookseller and publisher.
  2. The volume WC refers to has not been traced.
  3. Sadly, the leaf has been torn off and the address lost. This may well have been a present for one of WC’s own children.

[2541] TO A. P. WATT, 19 MARCH 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 155–156.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th March 1886

My dear Watt,

Many thanks for your letter, containing Tillotson & Son's cheque for £300, payable to myself or order<sup>1</sup>

I enclose:

1. A signed receipt for the cheque.
2. My cheque for £30.-.- being your commission on the £300 cheque from Tillotson & Son
3. A memorandum, in reply to Tillotson & Son's letter addressed to yourself.<sup>2</sup> It will not (evidently) make the least difference in Tillotson's opinion. But forward it please, for all that.

I am very glad to hear that you have sufficiently recovered from your cold to be able to get to your business again tomorrow – and I address you accordingly at the office. Now that the “muggy” weather has returned, my turn for a cold will come. My dear Arctic weather has deserted me. If you hear of another expedition to the North Pole, please say that a volunteer is ready, whose name is, yours ever

Wilkie Collins

In a few days more, I hope to tackle the 4th act.<sup>3</sup> You shall hear from me again if I succeed.

---

1. Representing the third instalment of Tillotson's payment for the serial rights to The Evil Genius, and sent to Watt by Tillotson with a letter dated 17 March (Berg). Credited to WC's bank account on 20 March as 'By Recd', with the corresponding debit for the £30 commission recorded on 22 March (Coutts: WC).

2. Watt's letter to Tillotson on 20 March makes clear that WC's memorandum was indeed sent to Bolton. When Tillotson had written to Watt on 17 March enclosing the cheque for £300, he was still complaining about the shortness of the length of the manuscript of The Evil Genius (Berg).

3. Of the dramatic version of The Evil Genius.

[2542] TO ANNE WYNNE, 19 MARCH 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 503.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

Friday 19th March 1886

Here I am, my darling, – and here I shall be delighted to receive that conjugal embrace at 3 o'clock tomorrow if that hour will be convenient to you. I thought you had long since left me – and was wondering why Mrs Wilkie did not write and tell me how she liked Bath. Now I shall see her! and I am more than satisfied.

Yours always afftly, | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.', postmarked 'LONDON. W. | MR20 | 86'.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

[2543] TO MADAME JULES HETZEL,<sup>1</sup> 27 MARCH 1886

MS: BNF (Nouv. Acq. Fr. 16941, f. 559 bis). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 156.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 27th March 1886

Mr Wilkie Collins begs that Madame Jules Hetzel, and the members of the family, will honour him by accepting the expression of his sympathy, under the loss that they have suffered, and the loss that literature has suffered, by the death of Monsieur Pierre Jules Hetzel.

---

1. Wife of Pierre-Jules Hetzel (1814–86), author, editor and publisher, who had died on 17 March in Monte Carlo. Hetzel had published four of WC's works in French translation: La Femme en Blanc (1861), Sans Nom (1863), Une Poignée de Romans (Queen of Hearts, [1864]) and Armada (1867).

[2544] TO LILLIE LANGTRY,<sup>1</sup> 30 MARCH 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 156–157.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
30th March 1886

Dear Madam,

The only address on your kind letter of Saturday last was the printed address of the Theatre – and the only regret I feel is that you should have been kept waiting at the hotel. It is quite needless to add that I will most gladly avail myself of the second opportunity of having the honour of calling on you, which you are so good as to offer to me on Wednesday next at four o'Clock.

Believe me, dear Madam, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Though the addressee is not specified in the body of the letter, [2534] to Langtry of 14 March and [2547] to Edward Pigott of 3 April leave little doubt that the recipient was the famous actress.

[2545] TO DAVID STOTT,<sup>1</sup> 31 MARCH 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 157.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
31st March 1886

Dear Sir,

Will you kindly procure for me the books on the enclosed list?<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

David Stott Esq

---

1. London bookseller – see [2539] to him of 19 March 1886.
2. The list has not been located.

[2546] TO A. P. WATT, 2 APRIL 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 157–158.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
2nd April 1886

My dear Watt,

A line to thank you for your kind note. I was indeed glad to see what a recognition my poor father's genius commands even in these bad times.<sup>1</sup> I remember seeing that charming picture at the Manchester Exhibition I think. You smelt the sea air, and you saw the cloudy morning – and as Constable used to say “You were never reminded of the palette.”<sup>2</sup>

Do read T's last.<sup>3</sup> I told you he would stick to his own opinion. My reply, so far as it relates to you, tells him that “the services of my friend and agent, Mr Watt, are indispensable to me in making my literary arrangements.” As to “The Ghosts' Touch” here the answer I have given is that “my arrangements are already made.”<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Referring to WmC's painting 'The Morning Bath': there is a pencil note in Watt's hand above the monogram giving the title of the picture. Painted in 1831, the picture was exhibited at the Royal Academy and sold to Henry McConnell of Manchester for £200. On his death, McConnell's collection was sold on 27 March 1887 by Christie's, 'The Morning Bath' being bought by the dealer Agnew for £892-10s. The picture was typical of WmC's sentimental depiction of family life and shows a baby who has just been 'dipped' in the sea. WC described it as a 'most attractive and inspiring picture' (Memoirs, I, p. 344).

2. WmC was closely acquainted with John Constable (1776–1837), who had been a near neighbour when the Collins family lived in Hampstead in the later 1820s. See Peters, p. 26.

3. That is, Tillotson's response to WC's memorandum – see [2541] to Watt of 19 March 1886.

4. Presumably referring to the appearance of the short story in volume form, as periodical publication in both Britain and the USA took place in autumn 1885.

[2547] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 3 APRIL 1886

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 158–159.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd April 1886

My dear Ted,

I am indeed glad to hear such a cheering account of you – and to know that you are going into your new rooms, a new man in the matter of health.

By this time you have I hope received the "Spirits" (two in number). The best news of Jim's play seems to be that he is re-engaged at a higher salary.<sup>1</sup> The piece itself, according to Fiske's report (and he is a friend),<sup>2</sup> has, I fear, been moderately successful, and no more.

I have called on Mrs Langtry,<sup>3</sup> and have had an interesting talk with her and a very kind reception. She spoke warmly of you. The one obstacle in her way – with such intelligence and such resolution as she possesses – is (as I think, and as I ventured to tell her) the want of a master in the art to act with. Coghlan does his best<sup>4</sup> – but he can teach her nothing – and who can, in the present state of the stage? I took Caroline and Carrie to my box. – They had never seen or read "The Lady of Lyons" – were breathlessly interested in the piece, it is needless to say – but did not know that "Claude Melnotte" was speaking blank verse, in the great love-scene of the 2nd Act!!! Nobody could have made that discovery, without previous knowledge of the play.

Love to Harry | Ever yours affty | WC

If "Jim the Penman" succeeds,<sup>5</sup> and there is a morning performance, I will go and see it. Could we not go together?

---

1. The two articles in question, in the New York Spirit of the Times which WC received regularly from the proprietor, E. A. Buck, are probably the announcement and review of Jim Pigott's Lyceum play She Loved Him identified in note 3 to [2536] to Henry Pigott of 15 March 1886. The review concluded: 'We are glad to add that Mr. Pigott was also called on, and, after the performance, was reengaged by Miss Dauvray [Helen Dauvray, the Lyceum manager] for next season at an advanced salary. His play was not the overwhelming success which his friends had hoped, but it proved him to be a handy playwright to have in a theatre, and his manager rewarded him accordingly.' ('Spirit of the Stage', Spirit of the Times, 20 March 1886, p. 242).

2. Unidentified, but possibly Harrison Grey Fiske (1861–1942: ANB), theatrical editor and manager-producer based in New York.

3. See [2534] to Lillie Langtry, 14 March 1886.

4. Charles F. Coghlan, who 'acted chiefly in romantic comedy, [and] had played Claude Melnotte in a revival of The Lady of Lyons with Ellen Terry in 1875' (Peters, p. 410). Bulwer's play was frequently revived. Coghlan had also played Geoffrey Delamayn in the 1873 production of Man and Wife at the Prince of Wales's Theatre.

5. Referring to the play by Sir Charles L. Young based on the career of the forger James Townsend Saward. This opened at the Haymarket on Saturday 3 April 1886, and enjoyed a remarkable success in both Britain and America.

[2548] TO FRANK MARSHALL, 8 APRIL 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), formerly laid in The New Magdalen: A Dramatic Story (1873). Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 315. Published: Parrish & Miller, p. 92; BGLL, IV, pp. 159–160.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th April 1886

My dear Frank,

I will not ask Ada to pay me any fee for the performances at Portsmouth – and I wish her a brilliant success.<sup>1</sup>

Mr Douglas Cox is managing the negotiations which are to prevent piracy of New Magdalen from being performed (if possible)<sup>2</sup> – and I have written to him on the subject of the music (which appears to have been essential to completing the arrangement) to say that “Miss Cavendish” wants it. I requested him to have a copy made for me, and I hope it has been done.

If I go down on both my knees to Ada – with the tears rolling over my cheeks – will she send me a post-card the next time she thinks of kindly coming to see me? How am I – working at the back of the house – to know who it is who honours me with a visit? And if I say “at home to everybody who calls” reckon up (if you understand Algebra) the number of ladies and gentleman with manuscripts, the number who want introductions to publishers, the number who want advice on their affairs in general, and the number who are anxious to borrow a little money – whom I should have the pleasure of receiving,

Ever yours | WC

Another “Magdalen” piracy is threatened in another direction.<sup>3</sup> Well might Pope say, “The life of a writer is warfare on earth.”<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Ada Cavendish, actress and Marshall’s wife. The play in question may again have been The New Magdalen – see [2164] to Ada Cavendish of 9 June 1883.

2. The piracy in question here has not been traced, but Cox was an actor-manager who frequently assisted WC – see [2294] of 8 April 1884 and [2480] of 23 October 1885, both to Edward Pigott.

3. See [2549] to Edward Pigott of the same date.

4. Misquoting the line ‘The life of a wit is warfare on earth’, from Alexander Pope’s Preface to the collection of his poems published in 1717. A copy of Pope’s collected works in nine volumes (1797), was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, p. 139).

[2549] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 8 APRIL 1886

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose), in pencil. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 160.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th April 1886

My dear Ted,

Have you been asked to license a pirated version of “The New Magdalen”? by a Mr Charles Charrington? Or is no license now required for a new “adaptation” of the piece?<sup>1</sup>

It is proposed to produce this robbery at a Vaudeville matinée<sup>2</sup> – and I propose to stop it.

One line to tell me if the License has been applied for.

Ever affy yours | WC

P.S. | I enclose the “programme”. Please let me have it back again.

---

1. No such licence had been issued.

2. The Vaudeville Theatre, Strand – see [2550] to Carrie Bartley of the following day.

[2550] TO CARRIE BARTLEY, 9 APRIL 1886

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 310–311; BGLL, IV, pp. 160–161.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | W. | 9th April 1886

My dearest Carrie,

Here are the first two acts<sup>1</sup> – and here is a book nearly as thick as the Bible. May it be equally popular! Write on one side of the page only as usual – and we shall see how much room this first half takes.

My hoary blessing on you for the newspaper. “Mercy Merrick” and “Julian Gray” have just left me. I addressed a lively allocution on the subject of authors’ rights to the chief culprit and positively forbade him to play his piracy at the Vaudeville. He admitted his fault, as soon as he understood it. They looked wretched, and the lady had something in her manner which suggested to me that she had not always been an actress in small country theatres. I gave them my New Magdalen, and sent them away happy.<sup>2</sup> They are to put “by permission of Mr W.C.” on their bills. And when they find pirated versions played in their country experiences, they are to say that I mean to stop it. Whether they will, is another matter.

Yours ever affly | WC

Read this to Harry, with my love,<sup>3</sup> and say he was right. They have been playing the spurious New Magdalen at Chatham.<sup>4</sup> It is played all over the country – and none of them have the faintest notion that they are doing me any injury. Ask Canon Duckworth what God could have been thinking of when he made actors?<sup>5</sup>

---

1. WC is referring to a revision of the dramatic version of The Evil Genius (see [2556] to Carrie of 23 April 1886). The dramatic version was originally completed at the end of October 1885. The play was licensed by the Lord Chancellor on 28 October 1885 (BL Add. 53345E) and was performed formally once only at the Vaudeville Theatre in the Strand to protect copyright. But as soon as the novel was finally finished ([2531] to A. P. Watt, 9 March 1886), WC embarked on a revised version of the play, which was never in fact performed. The final version was copied by Alberic Iserbyt (see [2571] to him of 6 June 1886) and finished a couple of weeks later (see [2574] to Watt, 18 June 1886).

2. The newspaper announcement in question has not been traced, but this must be how WC learned of the new pirated production of The New Magdalen that he mentions in [2549] to Edward Pigott of the previous day. The actress playing Mercy remains unidentified, but, as the letter to Pigott makes clear, ‘Julian Gray’ is Charles Carrington. As [2810] to William Moy Thomas of 6 February 1888 shows, Carrington was a provincial actor (‘the chief culprit’) who had arranged a matinée performance of the play at the Vaudeville Theatre.

3. Henry Bartley, Carrie’s husband.

4. There were then at least four theatres in existence in the Medway port and garrison town of Chatham.

5. Robinson Duckworth (1834–1911), sub-Dean of Westminster Abbey and a close friend of Lewis Carroll – see his Occasional Sermons, ed. G. E. Troutbeck (London, 1913).

[2551] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 9 APRIL 1886

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 162.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
9th April 1886

My dear Ted,

The authors rights have been asserted – and my New Magdalen is to be played on the 15th. Mr Thorne has backed me in the best spirit – positively forbidding the matinée to take place – except with my permission.<sup>1</sup>

On Saturday 17 we meet here – at 7 – if we dont meet before. I am very glad to hear that the “new pitch” turns out to be comfortable: cheerful – it must be.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours affly | WC

---

1. Thomas Thorne was the lessee and manager of the Vaudeville Theatre. (According to the Times notice, Sophia, from Fielding’s Tom Jones, was playing at the Vaudeville in the evenings and there is no mention of a matinée on 15 April.)

2. Pigott had moved into new rooms in London (see [2547] to him of 3 April 1886), probably those at 150 Oxford Street, next door to the Princess’s Theatre, where he lived in 1891 (Census).

[2552] TO A. P. WATT, 9 APRIL 1886

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 162.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Friday 9th April 1886

My dear Watt

I shall be delighted to see you tomorrow (Saturday) between 2 and 3. Now I am not chained to my desk,<sup>1</sup> I am away at unaccustomed hours – and so unhappily missed you.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written to WC on the same day to say that had called the previous day when he was out, and wanted particularly to see him (Berg). WC was at liberty because The Evil Genius was now finished.

[2553] TO MARY FRENCH SHELDON,<sup>1</sup> 11 APRIL 1886

MS: Congress. Published: B&C, II, pp. 520–521.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup> | 11th April 1886

Dear Sir,<sup>3</sup>

My letter must begin with excuses for a long-deferred reply, as well as with thanks. The addition which you have so kindly made to my library reached me at a time when I was very busily occupied, and not very prosperously situated in the matter of health.

When “Salammbô” was first published, I read it – and (I hope it is needless to add) I was deeply impressed by the power and beauty of the work.<sup>4</sup> The one drawback to my enjoyment (as I now remember) was the sense of effort, here and there, which I have found in the writings of all the disciples (English and Foreign) of the unapproachably-great master who wrote “Old Mortality” and “Quentin Durward”. Even the admirably easy “narrative” of the elder Dumas does not, to my mind, wholly conceal this defect. It is felt, instinctively, by the average reader – and it will be, as I think, the only obstacle in the way of the success of the English “Salammbô”.

Whether I am right or wrong in taking this view, of one thing I feel sure. Your translation has honestly met, and has triumphantly conquered, the innumerable difficulties of transforming the language of France into the language of England. From the beginning of the book to the end, I admire without reserve the profound knowledge of the two languages, the delicacy of handling, and the inflexible integrity of interpretation, which you have brought to your task. Your translation of “Salammbô” has given an English book to English readers. I say this honestly, and I need say no more.

Believe me, dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

M. French Sheldon Esq

---

1. Mary French Sheldon, (1847–1936: DAB), translated Flaubert and other French authors into English. A presentation copy of her translation of Gustave Flaubert’s Salammbô (1886), originally issued in French in 1862, was in WC’s library at his death (Baker p. 106, item 201).

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. WC mistakenly assumes that his correspondent is a man.

4. No earlier comments are found in the letters on Flaubert in general or his Salammbô in particular.

[2554] TO PERCY [CARPENTER],<sup>1</sup> 12 APRIL 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 163.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

12th April 1886

My dear Percy,

Here I am again – after a long interval – some of it occupied by attacks of neuralgia, and some of it (not anticipated when I last replied to you) of writing.

Are you and William disengaged on Saturday next,<sup>2</sup> the 17th? – and will you come and dine here at 7 o’Clock? (Evening dress strictly prohibited).

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins
Mr Pigott you have met here, I think. He is coming, with his nephew<sup>3</sup> – and perhaps Mrs Graves’s married daughter, and her husband.<sup>4</sup> Nobody else.

-
1. From the tone and mode of address, the letter is clearly one of a series of letters to a family member or an intimate friend. By far the most likely possibility is WC’s cousin Percy Carpenter (1820–95), elder brother of Jane, widow of Charles Ward. There are no other known letters to Percy.
  2. This is likely to be Percy’s elder brother William Carpenter (1818–99), the oldest of WC’s cousins.
  3. Edward Pigott and his nephew Henry.
  4. Carrie and Henry Bartley.

[2555] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 22 APRIL 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 163.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
22nd April 1886

Dear Sir,

I have the pleasure of enclosing a postal order for the little account.

The Berlin correspondence has come to an end – and my only communications with Germany now refer to translations of my novels. My ‘literary’ correspondents write to me in English. I shall not forget (when the occasion presents itself) to avail myself of your kind services.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Albéric Iserbyt Esqr

[2556] TO CARRIE BARTLEY, 23 APRIL 1886

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 297 (misdated 1885); BGLL, IV, p. 164.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
23rd April 1886

My dearest Carrie,

When you come here next, bring with you the last six pages of the 3rd Act. A new idea this morning. I want to revise the two last scenes – I mean from the entrance of Catherine, in search of her book, to the end.<sup>1</sup> As I guess, six pages will include this.

How is Bolly?

Ever yours affly | WC

P.S. | I have just seen the children, and heard about Bolly. I have given Doris and Sissy a pencil each. They are writing books – as good as gold.<sup>2</sup>

-
1. Referring to the stage version of The Evil Genius, Catherine Linley being one of the principal characters. The equivalent scene in the novel – where the divorced wife Catherine returns to the hotel sitting room in search of her book and stumbles on her former husband and his lover – is found in ch. 37, ‘Mrs Norman’.
  2. Carrie’s daughters were known as ‘Dah’ (Doris), ‘Bolly’ (Evelyn Beatrice) and ‘Sissy’ (Cecile Marguerite), then aged six, four and two – see Clarke, pp. 169, 172–173. Presumably Bolly was ill at this time.

[2557] TO A. P. WATT, 28 APRIL 1886

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 521. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 164–165.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
28th April 1886

My dear Watt,

I am ashamed to say I forget some particulars of the arrangements which you have kindly made with T. in relation to the promissory note at the end of this month. My impression is that I have only to sign – and that your friendly help does the rest. But I am not quite sure.<sup>1</sup>

As to the republication of “The Evil Genius” in book form, I am in some doubt. This infernal Irish trouble and the possibility of a general election, suggest delay.<sup>2</sup> And there was some “understanding” with T. I think, about deferring the publication.<sup>3</sup> Have you half an hour to spare, at the usual time, before the end of the week? This is a helpless letter. I am (as the Doctor says) “smothered in bile,” and strictly reduced to weak brandy and water, in fear of the gout.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt wrote to WC on 28 April, and to Tillotson on both 28 and 30 April, confirming the arrangements for this final payment for serial rights to The Evil Genius (Berg).

2. A reference to the 1886 Irish tenant-farmers’ uprising following the defeat of the first Home Rule Bill. See also [2563] to Charles Kent, 11 May 1886.

3. See the notes to [2463] to Watt of 13 September 1885. The three-volume edition only appeared from Chatto & Windus in September 1886, although the newspaper serializations generally concluded at the beginning of May.

[2558] TO A. P. WATT, 5 MAY 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 165.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th May 1886

My dear Watt,

T’s Dft at six months has become ready money paid to my account (by the magic of discount) – and I have the pleasure of enclosing my cheque for your commission – £40...-<sup>1</sup>

I wonder whether you have got a fog in the City this morning – trying to choke you? If yes – you have my sympathy.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

A. P. Watt Esq.

---

1. Concerning the fourth of Tillotson’s payments as arranged in the contract regarding The Evil Genius, this time a promissory note for £400. Watt wrote to WC on the same day to acknowledge receipt of commission, which he had not expected until the promissory note became due in early November (Berg). WC’s account was credited with the £400 on 4 May as ‘Bill on Bank of Bolton’, at the same time being debited with £10-4s-11d as the bank’s charge for immediate payment, a fee of 2.56%. Watt’s £40 commission was debited on 6 May (Coutts: WC).

[2559] TO S. WEEKS,<sup>1</sup> 7 MAY 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 165–166.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 7th May 1886

Dear Sir,

Circumstances (with a statement of which it is needless to trouble you) have hitherto prevented me, I regret to say, from writing a sequel to “The Fallen Leaves”.

Let me very sincerely thank you for a letter which tells me, in the best of all ways, that my novel has interested you. Such recognition as yours does more than give me pleasure – it encourages me in the exercise of my Art.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr S. Weeks Esq

---

1. Presumably secretary or president of a Lancashire literary club.

2. Directed to ‘Mr S. Weeks Esq | Literary Club | Blackburn’, postmarked as dated.

[2560] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 7 MAY 1886

MS: Unknown.<sup>1</sup> On sale: History for Sale Catalogue (2003), doc. 27787. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 166.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
London | 7th May 1886

---

1. On card. Probably an autograph only.

[2561] TO ANNE WYNNE, 10 MAY 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 503–504.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 10th May 1886

Your pretty flowers, my angel, have not found me an ungrateful husband – they only find me dying under the dreadful English Sirocco – not knowing where to write to you on the first occasion, and doubtful of your figures on the second occasion, when I know that you /are/ at “Circus, Bath”, but when I am not quite sure whether “[lg]” (accurately copied from your writing)<sup>3</sup> means:

[lg]. Circus Bath ø | or | 39. Circus Bath.

I adopt 39, – but, oh Heavens, what will happen if I am wrong and if it ought to be “[lg]” Will the postman (not finding you at 39) tear up my letter? Or will he show it to his wife, and will she say “what a shame to disappoint the bride and bridegroom!” Do write (there’s a dear!) and tell me if it is 39, and let me hear when you are coming back again – and [~~] where Mamma is, and how she is. My languid love – I can write no more in the exhausted [reserves] in which I am now living – I cannot sign my name – but I [~~]can write 39<sup>4</sup>~~~~

your grateful | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 39. Circus | Bath’, postmarked ‘LONDON. W. | XC | MY 10 | 86’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. WC’s imitation of Nannie’s figures is difficult to reproduce typographically.

4. The number is written extremely large.

[2562] TO EMILY CLUNES,<sup>1</sup> 11 MAY 1886

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 166.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 11th May 1886

My dear Aunt,

I have read your letter with sincerely felt sorrow. The impression made on me – when I last saw him – by the good and gentle nature of your husband is still in my memory, after a lapse of years that I will not attempt to reckon up. In some degree, at least, I can understand what a terrible blank is now left in your life, and what a hard demand is made on your courage and resignation. I can only speak the truth when I say that I feel for you with my whole heart.

Mrs Graves thanks you for a message which is doubly kind at such a time as this, and begs that you will accept the respectful expression of her sympathy.

Always affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC’s maternal aunt – see [0849] to her of 28 July 1868. Her husband Deane William Clunes died on 10 May 1886 aged 83.

[2563] TO CHARLES KENT, 11 MAY 1886

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 312; BGLL, IV, p. 167.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th May 1886

My dear Kent,

Two minutes before your friendly letter arrived, I was contemplating two samples of cigars – and the thought in me was: “Why isn’t Kent here? And why hav’nt I written to him before this?” Have we been mesmerising each other? Evidently – Yes.

Shall we say Thursday next (the 13th) at about 5 o’Clock as usual? If you don’t write again, I will gladly take it for granted that Thursday will do. If the appointment is not convenient, then pray choose your own afternoon, on any later day.

Always yours affly | WC

The book-publication of “The Evil Genius” is put off till the autumn, in the hope that this most accursed Irish business will by that time be settled in one way or the other. Nobody seems to know whether there is to be another general election – or a Civil War – and your old Literature hides her diminished head.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Directed to ‘Charles Kent Eq | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. Referring to the vexed parliamentary debate on Gladstone’s first Irish Home Rule Bill. After defeating the Salisbury Government in January 1886 with the support of the Irish Nationalists, Gladstone introduced the Bill on 8 April but it was finally voted down on 16 June. Gladstone then asked the Queen to dissolve Parliament and call a General Election, held on 1 July, in which the Liberals were heavily defeated, leading to Gladstone’s resignation on 20 July. The defeat of the Bill also led to an uprising among Irish tenant-farmers. The Evil Genius eventually appeared in volume form only in the first half of September, although the newspaper serialization had ended by the beginning of May.

[2564] TO EDMUND YATES, 14 MAY 1886

MS: Kentucky (63m14/130). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 167–168.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14 May 1886

My dear Edmund,

I have heard, with most sincere sympathy for Mr Escott,<sup>1</sup> of the deplorable interruption to his active and distinguished literary career, caused by long illness.

I will gladly sign the memorial, and help this good cause by whatever means may be within my power.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Edmund Yates Eqr

---

1. The distinguished journalist, Thomas Hay Sweet Escott (1850–1924) – see [2421] to him of 7 May 1885 and [2165] to Yates of 9 June 1883. Escott’s health had broken down in October 1885 and he had travelled abroad to convalesce in March 1886.

[2565] TO THOMAS WOOLNER, 17 MAY 1886

MS: Bodleian (MS. Eng. lett. d.292, ff. 75–76). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 168.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th May 1886

Dear Woolner,

I have read your justly and subtly written estimate of my father’s genius with sincere pleasure – and without finding anything in it which could (to my mind) be altered for the better.

Let me only add that I am very sensible of the kind allusion to my father's son.<sup>1</sup>
Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. We have not been able to locate the article on WmC by Thomas Woolner, the poet and sculptor – see [1519] to him of 4 March 1875. In the 'List of Writings' at the end of Thomas Woolner: R.A., Sculptor and Poet; His Life in Letters (Dutton, 1917), p. 346, Amy Woolner includes "'William Collins": an Essay. 1886.', without offering further details.

[2566] TO ANNE WYNNE, 19 MAY 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 504.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

19 May

Dearest Dear, do you ever swear? (you know you may confess anything to your husband). If you wish to enchant me, please swear at the Irish. My poor dear story cannot be published before the autumn, because the public eye is fixed on Home Rule – General Election – and Civil War – and won't look, for the present, at any Evil Genius but Mr Gladstone.

It is not easy to say how much embracing I want. Your Mamma will tell you why it is my hard lot to be obliged to wait till next week – and why I must offer my love, and retire for this week.

WC
For Mrs Wilkie<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Le Poer Wynne | 4. Delamore Street | W.', and postmarked 'LONDON – W | 1 | MY 19 | 86'. The second paragraph of the letter ('Your Mamma will tell you ...') suggests that the envelope may also have contained a letter to Emily Wynne which has not been preserved.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked 'HIERATICA'.

3. Written prominently on the otherwise blank final page of the notepaper, a further suggestion that this note accompanied a letter to Nannie's mother.

[2567] TO EMILY WYNNE, 28 MAY 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 168.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Friday 28 May | 1886

Dear Mrs Wynne,

Your faithful novelist accepts your kind invitation, for Sunday next at 2 o'Clock, with the greatest pleasure, and begs in the mean time to send his love to his wife and to remain
ever yours | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Le Poer Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.', postmarked as dated.

[2568] TO DANIEL S. FORD,<sup>1</sup> 1 JUNE 1886

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 169.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 1st June 1886

Dear sir,

I have only waited to thank you for your letter, and for the very kind manner in which you have excused delays on my part which I regret, until I could report that I have at last begun the second of the three stories called "Victims of Circumstances."<sup>2</sup> In a few days more the Mss will I hope be on its way to Boston. I am only now well enough to get back to my desk – after some suffering from neuralgic troubles.

It is needless to add that I shall be delighted to make Mr Rideing's acquaintance on his arrival in London<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

I shall go straight on to the third and last of the stories, before I attend to any other literary engagement. In the meantime will you kindly let my agent Mr Watt (of 34 Paternoster Row London) know on what dates you propose to publish the stories, so that he may preserve my English copyright by simultaneous publication here.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Daniel S. Ford, editor of the Youth's Companion from 1866 to 1899.

2. Wilkie eventually wrote three tales under that heading for the Youth's Companion – see [2372] to Perry Mason & Co., 27 November 1884.

3. William H. Rideing (b. c. 1853), an Englishman who worked on the staff of the Youth's Companion from around 1881–1918 – see [2658] to him of 22 December 1886.

4. The first two tales only were eventually published in the Boy's Own Paper on 23 October 1886 and 26 February 1887.

[2569] TO A. P. WATT, 3 JUNE 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 169–170.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Thursday evening June 3 / 86

My dear Watt,

Here is the second story for Perry Mason & Co of Boston. Will you kindly send it to them by Saturday's mail?<sup>1</sup>

I wrote to them (in answer to a letter of theirs very kindly expressed) begging that they would let you know at what dates they preferred to publish the stories – so that we might publish simultaneously here.<sup>2</sup> If you will repeat this request when you write, it may not be amiss.

But now I am going to bother.

My copyist is nursing a child of hers, suffering from Scarlettina<sup>3</sup> – and I cannot at a moment's notice supply her place, in time for Saturday's mail. Can you get a copy made of this short Mss tomorrow (at my expense of course) – and send the copy to me, forwarding the original Mss to Perry Mason & Co? and perhaps telling them that I have no time to get a copy made, and to correct it? This – if you can manage it – will be another kindness done to yours ever

Wilkie Collins

A line to say that the story has reached you.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. 'Farmer Fairweather', the second of the stories entitled 'The Victims of Circumstances', eventually published in the Boston Youth's Companion on 16 December 1886, p. 512.

2. See [2568] to Daniel S. Ford of 1 June.

3. One of Carrie Bartley's daughters.

4. Watt replied on 4 June, acknowledging receipt and enclosing a copy of the story which he had had made on a typewriter. He wrote to the Boston firm enclosing the original manuscript of the story on 5 June (Berg).

[2570] TO A. P. WATT, 6 JUNE 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 170.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th June 1886

My dear Watt

My best thanks for your kind letters and for the copy. Everything that I can wish.<sup>1</sup>

I hope to send you the third (and last) story in time for next Saturday's mail.<sup>2</sup>

Today I write to a new copyist to present a legible version of the play – which is finished at last.<sup>3</sup> The moment I get the fair copy, I will let you have it.

You know how glad I am to see you when you have time to spare.
Ever yours | WC

-
1. Referring to the typed copy Watt had had made of 'Farmer Fairweather' – see [2569] to Watt of 3 June.
  2. Again referring to 'The Victims of Circumstances' for Perry Mason & Co.
  3. See [2571] to Albéric Iserbyt of the same date.

[2571] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 6 JUNE 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 171.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th June 1886

My dear Sir,

My regular copyist is unable to work for me, just at present, in consequence of illness in the house.<sup>2</sup> I have three acts of a play, to be copied as speedily as possible.<sup>3</sup> Can you undertake this little task? and (if yes) will you let me know when you can call here after business hours? Any day, and any time 'in the evening' up to 7 o'Clock will do for me – the earlier day that you can fix the better.

If you have never hitherto been engaged in copying plays, I ought perhaps to add that the customary remuneration for copying plays is from 7/6 to 10/- for each act.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

M. Albéric Iserbyt

-
1. Directed to 'Albéric Iserbyt Esqr | Accountant's Department | Lloyd's | E.C.', postmarked on the following day.
  2. Referring to Carrie Bartley, whose daughter was suffering from scarlet fever – see [2569] to A. P. Watt of 3 June 1886.
  3. The dramatic version of The Evil Genius.

[2572] TO A. P. WATT, 10 JUNE 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 171–172.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Thursday evening | June 10th 1886

My dear Watt,

Here is the last of the three stories for Perry Mason<sup>1</sup> – and here I am with the same petition addressed to your friendly ear. The original MS to go the U.S. – and a copy to be made please for me – like the copy which you kindly sent to me last week.

Did you wish you had never been born this morning? I did.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Let me hear what I owe you for the two copies – marvels of cheapness<sup>3</sup>

-
1. The third in the series 'The Victims of Circumstances' for Youth's Companion in Boston. Watt's letter to Perry Mason & Co. of 12 June 1886 (Berg) establishes that the story was entitled 'The Hidden Cash'. Although, unlike the first two stories in the series, 'The Hidden Cash' is not found in Richard Cutts's Index to The Youth's Companion 1871–1929, it was in fact published in the paper on 21 April 1887, p. 178.
  2. WC's mock despair seems to have been due to the temperature. Watt responded: 'I did wish this morning that I had somehow or other not to go on with the struggle for existence ... I hope you are not feeling quite used up with this weather' (11 June 1886, Berg).
  3. Watt's letter to WC of 11 June reveals that the two copies, both typed, cost a total of only 5s. 11d. (Berg).

[2573] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 11 JUNE 1886

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th June 1886

My dear Georgina,

I only heard yesterday evening from Charles Kent that you have been ill and that you are leaving (or have already left?) London for change of air. To say that I am indeed sorry, and that I most sincerely hope to hear a more cheering report from the regions of purer air, is only to tell you what you know already. While it is an effort to you to write, pray don't think of answering me. I will wait till you can tell me that you feel like yourself again.

Always affctly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Initialled and directed to 'Miss Hogarth | 70. Wynnsley Gardens | Kensington | W', postmarked as dated.

[2574] TO A. P. WATT, 16 JUNE 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 172–173.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16th June 1886

My dear Watt,

The enclosed letter will explain itself. I have written to Mr Tarver to say that you manage my literary affairs.<sup>1</sup>

It has just struck me that the Perry Mason stories might do for Mr Tarver – if the dates suit, and if the terms are sufficient. What do you think? I write of course under the impression that you have not yet decided in what periodical we are to publish “on this side”.

The play is copied – excepting the 4th act which goes to the copyist tomorrow. So I hope to send you the complete work, before Mr Rosa leaves London.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I enclose (with many thanks) the money for the type-writing copyist – in postal orders.<sup>3</sup> (N.B. I know nothing of the pecuniary position of “The Christian Million”).

---

1. Bound into the volume at Pembroke is the letter dated 10 June 1886 from W. Tarver, on the headed notepaper of the Christian Million, requesting ‘a good, highclass short serial story ... to commence about October next’.

2. Carl Rosa, the theatre impresario, relating to the stage version of The Evil Genius.

3. See [2570] to Watt of 10 June 1886.

[2575] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 17 JUNE 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 173.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th June 1886

My dear Sir,

I am sorry I was out when you kindly called with the fair copy of the three acts.<sup>1</sup>

With this you will receive the 4th Act. Please let me have the copy as soon as you conveniently can.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

I return the 3rd act – so that you may add the 4th. I am afraid I have misled you by writing “Act 3”. Please change it to Third Act – so as to conform with First Act, Second Act – and Fourth Act. On the cover the Roman numerals are of course to stand.

---

1. Of The Evil Genius.

[2576] TO JOHN R. SCARLETT,<sup>1</sup> 17 JUNE 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 173–174.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 17th June 1886

Dear Sir,

Let me very sincerely thank you for your welcome letter. I value such frank expressions of approval as I have received from you among the most highly-prized rewards of my literary life.

The enclosed cutting from my publishers' catalogue will show you that there are no less than three cheap editions of "The Woman in White" – and will also reveal me as the father of a large literary family. The novels that I have marked may possibly be in the Free Library.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

John R. Scarlett Esq

---

1. Unidentified.

2. Pasted on the otherwise blank third leaf of the notepaper is a cutting from the current listing of WC's novels available from Chatto & Windus at 3s-6d, 2s-6d, and 2s, from Antonina through to "I Say No". WC checks The Moonstone, Man and Wife, and The New Magdalen, adding the word 'London' to the running header 'CHATTO & WINDUS, PICCADILLY'. The Free Library in question has not been identified, though it is presumably an American institution.

[2577] TO A. P. WATT, 18 JUNE 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 174.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th June 1886

My dear Watt,

A word to thank you for your prompt action in the matter of "The Christian Million", and also to say that you are right (as you always are in the matter of business) to have asked that price. Whether we get it or not I am equally obliged to you.<sup>1</sup>

The copyist writes me word that he hopes to bring the 4th act here tomorrow evening. In this case, you shall have it ~~on Sunday~~ Monday morning next. Come here by all means when it is convenient to you – and when you have "named a day" with Mr Carl Rosa for hearing what he says about the play. My only fear is that he may be too busy to read it just now – but you know best. It is a good play "though I say it that should'nt"<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. As Watt's letter to WC of 16 June makes clear (Berg), he asked £350 for British serial rights or £450 for serial rights in Britain, America and Australia for a story of 40,000 words. Watt feared that this was more than the paper wanted to pay, and it seems that no agreement was reached.

2. The dramatic version of The Evil Genius, the performance rights of which WC was free to negotiate, now that the novel had finished its serial run in the newspapers.

[2578] TO A. P. WATT, 21 JUNE 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 175.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st June 1886

My dear Watt,

Here is the play at last, finally copied and corrected.<sup>1</sup> And here am I – "used up" as they say in the U.S – but

Ever yours | WC
Towards the end of this month, I hope to get to Ramsgate<sup>2</sup>

-
1. Watt acknowledged receipt of the copy of the play version of The Evil Genius in a letter of the same date, and promised that he would send it on to Carl Rosa.
  2. WC was not in fact able to do so until the third week of July, staying until the middle of August.

[2579] TO JAMES F. GLUCK,<sup>1</sup> 24 JUNE 1886

MS: Yale. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 175.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 24th June 1886

Dear Sir,

At last, my novel in manuscript (“The Two Destinies”) has been sent today to Mr Stevens<sup>2</sup> for transmission to the Buffalo Library.<sup>3</sup>

In asking you to kindly accept my excuses for the delay that has occurred, I can only plead illness as one obstacle – and the necessity of making the MSS fit for The Library, as another. The thin paper on which I write my novels has been “mounted” on strong paper so as to preserve each page – and the whole has been strongly bound. I want to make my little offering to the Library as acceptable as I can. The few happy days that I spent at Buffalo are gratefully remembered among the bright days of my life.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. See [2537] to the same recipient of 16 March 1886.
  2. Possibly the agent Benjamin Franklin Stevens – see [2923] to him of 1 February 1889.
  3. Today the manuscript of The Two Destinies is still held in the Gluck Collection at the Buffalo and Erie County Public Library.

[2580] TO ANNE WYNNE, 24 JUNE 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 504.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

24 June 1886

I write this, my love of loves, in an interval of pain. If I had been well, you would have seen me before ~~this~~ today. I am slowly getting better – and I am to go away yachting as soon as I can. But I am not quite well enough yet to be able to welcome you tomorrow. If next week will be convenient for your Mamma and you – and Mr Thomas (whom I shall be very glad to see again)<sup>3</sup> I will write once more, and report myself in good time. For this time, goodbye my angel!

WC

The shilling story is only trying to come to me<sup>4</sup> – but the cruel neuralgia gets in the way, and says “I have got him, be off!”

-
1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked ‘LONDON – W. | JU24 | 88’.
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked ‘HIERATICA’.
  3. Mr Thomas (mentioned also in [2581] to Nannie, 1 July 1885), remains unidentified, though the reference may be to a domestic pet such as a dog or a bird. [2595] to Nannie of 27 July 1886 mentions what appears to be her pet cat named ‘Lady Snagge’.
  4. The Guilty River, published in late 1886 as Arrowsmith’s Christmas Annual at a shilling.

[2581] TO ANNE WYNNE, 1 JULY 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 505.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

1st July 1886

No, dearest little wife, Beard says – “Go with another air; I can do nothing while you are in London”. I am only waiting to hear from the seaside – and to put off certain engagements with printers and publishers – and then /away/ I go, in search of health, and on the look-out for a friend’s yacht. I hope to get away by the end of this week – and I must not venture to make any appointments in the meantime – for I had a bad attack yesterday – and the pain has left me shaken today. Make my excuses to your Mamma, and to Mr Thomas<sup>3</sup> – like a good dear. I am sure they will forgive /me/ – until I come back [del] in better health and can plead for myself. You will still love me – in Suffolk – won’t you? And I shall write, from some sea port (the wind will decide which), and report my progress towards recovery. Goodbye darling for the present.

WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked ‘LONDON. W. | JY1 | 86’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked ‘HIERATICA’.

3. See [2580] to Nannie of 24 June 1886.

[2582] TO A. P. WATT, 6 JULY 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 176.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th July 1886

My dear Watt,

Many thanks for your letter, enclosing the Dft for £80.<sup>1</sup> Let me take the opportunity of sending my cheque for the commission – with these lines. My kind remembrance to Perry Mason & Co, when you write. They are pleasant people to have literary relations with – and they remind at once, by the rule of contraries, of that impudent little cad, T. I am really not only sorry but ashamed, to have troubled you to write to him. Does he “drink”? or is he a little mad?<sup>2</sup>

I shall be curious to hear about Rosa.<sup>3</sup> When you have news of him, remember that you come here to lunch (pot-luck) next time. The week after this week I hope to get to Ramsgate. Here in London – with the thermometer at 80 in my room – work is out of the question for me.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. As Watt’s letter to WC of 5 July makes clear (Berg), this was the payment from Perry Mason for the three tales in the ‘Victims of Circumstances’ series. Duly credited the next day to WC’s bank account as ‘Bill on City Bank’, with Watt’s commission of £8 debited on 8 July (Coutt: WC).

2. Watt had written to Tillotson on WC’s behalf on 1 July 1886, requesting the names of all the newspapers in which The Evil Genius had appeared, both in Britain and elsewhere, information apparently required by the French authorities in connection with the translation of the novel into French. In his letter to WC of 5 July, Watt conveyed Tillotson’s reply that WC had already been supplied with the relevant copies of the South London Press, where the serialization had been first completed (Berg).

3. Watt’s letter to WC of 5 July shows that no response had yet arrived from Rosa, although he had received the copy of the play version of The Evil Genius a couple of weeks earlier (Berg).

[2583] TO A. P. WATT, 8 JULY 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 177.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th July 1886

My dear Watt,

If I followed my inclinations I should take a return ticket to Bolton – kick an unmentionable part of T’s person – and feel that I had done my duty. As things are, I enclose a polite attempt to screw a plain statement of facts into his obstinate little head. Please read it – and, if you approve, let it go to the post with your letters.<sup>1</sup>

To turn to a pleasanter subject, let me assure you that I am gratefully sensible of the trouble that you have taken in the matter of the play – which reached me safely yesterday evening. Mr Rosa’s decision does not surprise me.<sup>2</sup> It has already been the decision of three managers in the United States – and it will probably be the decision of other managers here, if I give them the opportunity. For the present, I think of “waiting for events”, or of consulting my old friend Mr Pigott – the Examiner of plays. When I arrive at a decision you shall hear from me without fail. In the present state of the thermometer, my decision is to thank you sincerely.

Ever yours | WC

I hope to get away early in next week<sup>3</sup>

---

1. In his letter to WC of 7 July, Watt had asked whether Tillotson’s reluctance to provide the names of all the papers carrying The Evil Genius would create problems in securing the copyright of the French translation of the novel. WC’s letter to Tillotson once again requesting the information has apparently not survived, though Watt confirms that it was sent to Bolton, in his letter to WC of 9 July 1886 (Berg).

2. Watt’s letter to WC of 7 July revealed that Rosa had declined to take up the stage version of The Evil Genius.

3. To Ramsgate – in his letter of 7 July, Watt had expressed the hope that WC would soon be able to escape from town (Berg).

[2584] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 11 JULY 1886

MS: Huntington (HH 102). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 177–178.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday | 11th July 1886

My dear Holman,

Your letter – received yesterday evening – was a joyful surprise.<sup>1</sup> Living my hermit’s life, seeing (God be praised) no “Society”, hearing nothing of you, I had no idea that you were in London as well as your Exhibition.<sup>2</sup> After this confession you will understand how delighted I shall be to see you tomorrow (Monday) at 2 o’Clock to pot-luck-lunch. Later in the week I go to Ramsgate for my doses of sea-air and the work that is to follow them if all goes well with me.

Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

Your letter came too late to be answered by Saturday’s post. If my reply does not reach you tomorrow morning in good time – then let us say Tuesday at 2.

---

1. WC seems to have believed that Hunt had set off on an expedition to Jeruslaem (see [2529] to the artist of 7 March 1886).

2. Thirty-two of Hunt’s works were then on show at the Fine Art Society.

[2585] TO A. P. WATT, 13 JULY 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 178.

90. Gloucester Place | Portman Square. W.

13th July 1886

My dear Watt,

Read the enclosed – and I think you will agree with me that T. has this time excelled himself.<sup>1</sup> It is useless to answer him.

Ever yours | WC

I hope to start for Ramsgate on Saturday next.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Tillotson’s letter has not been traced, though Watt confirms its receipt in his reply to WC of the same day, in which he comments: ‘What a curiously suspicious nature he has. I wonder if he thinks the Frenchman wishes to sell novels to English newspapers!’ (Berg). A more likely explanation is that Tillotson did not want to give away a lengthy list of his major clients to Watt, who was still a competitor in the same market. On 9 April 1886, Watt had replied to an offer from Tillotson to pay him a retainer of £25 per quarter for his ‘services’, on condition that he offer his author clients’ stories to the Bolton firm rather than directly to British and foreign newspapers. Watt had refused the offer, stating that, though he had no wish to enter into conflict with Tillotson’s, his primary responsibilities were to his authors, and the market was in any case large enough for both parties.

2. On 17 July.

[2586] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 13 JULY 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 179.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th July 1886

My dear Chatto,

I want to say two words to you about the publication of my new novel.<sup>1</sup> If I call in Piccadilly between 4 and 5 o’Clock on Thursday afternoon next, shall I find you disengaged? If that appointment should not be convenient will you kindly choose your own time on Friday next? On Saturday I go away to the sea.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The Evil Genius. Also found in the Parrish Collection is the following Memo in WC’s hand:

Corrected | =

For the Reprint in book form (3 vols) to be published in September 1886, by Chatto and Windus (same terms as usual)

Printed Copy | = | The Evil Genius | = | First Volume

WC | June 29th | 1886

2. To Ramsgate, according to [2587], WC’s next letter to Chatto of 16 July.

[2587] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 16 JULY 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 179.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16th July 1886

My dear Chatto

Here is “The Evil Genius” in printed copy.<sup>1</sup> I will write again from Ramsgate.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Presumably the serial run in the South London Press, 31 October 1885–1 May 1886. The syndicator W. F. Tillotson had recently supplied WC with a copy of this – see the notes to [2582] to A. P. Watt of 6 July 1886.

[2588] TO A. P. WATT, 16 JULY 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 180.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Friday July 16th 1886

My dear Watt,

Your kind letter has just reached me. Copyright, and all rights outside Great Britain and Ireland, are mine. After this, it is needless to say that I leave the American negotiations with the greatest pleasure in your friendly hands.<sup>1</sup>

I am dying for a sight and a smell of the sea. My address at Ramsgate will be 14. Nelson Crescent as before.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

The Christmas Story will be of about the same length as “Called Back”<sup>3</sup>

I have written a “bogus” story of a dozen pages or so to be “published” so as to make sure of preserving our title – in the matter of the Christmas story.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Watt’s letter to WC of the same day requested permission to offer to Harper’s in New York advance sheets of the Christmas story referred to below, eventually entitled The Guilty River and published on 15 November as Arrowsmith’s Christmas Annual for 1886 (Berg).

2. WC leaves for Ramsgate the following day.

3. The thriller published as Arrowsmith’s Christmas Annual for 1883 which brought a brief period of international fame to its author ‘Hugh Conway’ (pseudonym of Frederick J. Fargus).

4. As with The Evil Genius, the purpose of the ‘bogus’ edition was to protect the title – see [2433] and [2436] to Watt of 14 and 24 June 1885. A copy is held in the Parrish collection – see Robert Ashley, ‘The Wilkie Collins Collection’, Princeton University Library Chronicle, 17:2 (Winter 1956), pp. 81–82; and Graham Law, “‘Poor Fargus’”, WCSJ, NS 3 (2000), pp. 67–72.

[2589] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 18 JULY 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 180–181.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 18th July 1886

My dear Chatto,

Here is my address “until further notice.”

As to the proofs – the German and Italian translations have been made from the serial proofs. There remain,

The French, The Dutch, Tauchnitz, and the proof to be returned for press – four pulls of each proof in all, I am afraid.<sup>1</sup>

Such exquisite weather here, so far! I wish you could come and smell the sea. It fairly intoxicated me, when I got here yesterday.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Of The Evil Genius, to be published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus in September. The French and Dutch translations have not been traced.

[2590] TO FRANK ARCHER, 20 JULY 1886

MS: Unknown (formerly with Frank H. Arnold).<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 300–301. Published: Archer, p. 279, our copy text; BGLL, IV, p. 181, amended A&C7, p. 24.

NELSON CRESCENT, RAMSGATE, | July 20, 1886.

MY DEAR ARCHER,

I have been sailing, and I have just found your letter waiting for me here. Send the story to this address (head-quarters for work after idling at sea), and I will read it with the greatest pleasure.<sup>2</sup> Forgive my Roman brevity in replying. My accumulated letters to answer make me wish I was the famous hermit of Prague, who never saw pen and ink.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours, | WILKIE COLLINS.

---

1. This letter is not found in the Archer Archive. All the Collins letters in the Archive have an old pencil number on the envelope (or in one case on the blank leaf of the letter). Since the preceding letter is numbered 20 and the next 22, this would have been letter 21. The MS numbering suggest there are three other letters to Collins not present in the Archive. The other missing numbers are 2, 23, and 27.

2. See [2592] to Archer, 23 July 1886, for details of the story in question.

3. See Twelfth Night, IV.ii.12–14: ‘As the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, That that is, is.’

[2591] TO MR COLEMAN,<sup>1</sup> 21 JULY 1886

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 181–182. Amended: A&C14, p. 31..

14, Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 21st July 1886

My dear Mr Coleman,

Alas! Look at the address. Since Saturday last I have been here – driven from London (in a state of nervous exhaustion) by my doctor – and with Mrs Graves to nurse me. I get on but slowly as yet having been welcomed by two thunderstorms, and finding even the delicious sea-air too hot to be easily breathed. There is no hope of my being patched up in time to join that pleasant little party. Accept my thanks and my excuses – and let me hope that you will give me another chance. I must have something to look forward to when I lose my “Bollinger” and my Schoolmistress both together and when I know it is “all my fault”.<sup>2</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Your kind invitation to our excellent uncle Dan goes to him by today’s post.<sup>3</sup> Mrs Graves will follow with her excuses tomorrow, and sends you kindest remembrances in the meanwhile.

---

1. Almost certainly George Coleman, Secretary of the Court Theatre around this time – see playbills at arthurlloyd.co.uk/RoyalCourtTheatreLondon.htm. See also [3400] to him, 5 May 1887.

2. The allusion to champagne is clear enough, but the ‘Schoolmistress’ escapes us.

3. ‘Uncle Dan’ Bixby – see [2481] to Mary Anderson of 24 October 1885 and [2336] to Andrew Chatto of 15 July 1884.

[2592] TO FRANK ARCHER, 23 JULY 1886

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Archer, pp. 279–81; BGLL, IV, pp. 182–183, amended A&C7, pp. 24–26.

14, Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 23rd July 1886

My dear Archer,

I have read the story.<sup>2</sup>

First, I lay down a general principle. Writing fiction successfully is only to be accomplished by taking enormous pains. Now for the application:

You must be very much more careful than you are at present in the matter of Style. Look at your first paragraph – and at the marks which I have made on it – and you will see what I mean. When you have seen, cut out the first paragraph. It is quite useless. The right beginning of the story is at the second paragraph.

Again! The central interest in your story is in the walk across the heath, and in what came of it. You are too long in getting to this – and the frightful consequence follows – you will be “skipped.” Also, you are a little too jaunty and familiar with the reader about your matrimonial prospects. If he once gets the idea that you are not in earnest, goodbye to the effect of your terror in the heath scene.

Once more! When you are rescued, the interest of your story is over. Fewer particulars as to the fortunes of the characters will prevent more “skipping”. In a short story – if you were Walter Scott himself – you cannot interest the reader in characters.

Now for a word of encouragement.

The incident of the dog, is excellent. It is so new and so true (as far as I know) that it throws all the other incidents into the shade. If I had been writing the story, I should have dwelt on the dog’s character in the earlier part of it, so as to interest the reader in “Nap’s” habits and doings on the ordinary occasions of his life. Said reader, puzzled and interested, would feel that something was coming in relation to that dog – would not have the least idea what it was – and when “Nap” enters on the stage and acts his grand scene, would be so amazed and interested that he would talk of the story to his friends, and “the editor” would be your obedient humble servant in the matter of future work. (N.B. – I would not describe Nap as being in his second childhood. No dog – and especially no big dog – in that condition would have rescued you. Make him old – and no more).

The other incident of the lay figure is ingenious – but there is this objection to it: it has been done before, and more than once done. Keep it by all means. I only mention my reason for giving it a secondary place in the composition.<sup>3</sup>

I will wait to offer you an introduction to a periodical, until I see what you can do on a larger canvas. The price paid for short stories by authors not yet in a state of notoriety is so miserably small that I am really ashamed to mention it.<sup>4</sup> If you think you can do something with a one volume novel, pecuniary results might be more satisfactory.

A last word of advice before I say goodbye. Study Walter Scott. He is, beyond all comparison, the greatest novelist that has ever written. Get, for instance, “The Antiquary” – and read that masterpiece over and over and over again.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

The mss returned to you by this post

---

1. Initialled and directed to ‘Frank Archer Eqr | 21. Baker Street | London | W.’, postmarked recto ‘RAMSGATE F | JY 23 | 86’ and verso ‘LONDON W. | 7 | JY 24 | 86 | J’, with ‘22’ in another hand in pencil on the recto. Archer notes in his diary on 24 July: ‘Letter from Wilkie Collins about “Perplexed in the Extreme”. Worked at revision of “Perplexed”’ (‘Diary 1886’, Archer Archive).

2. Archer had sent the story ‘Perplexed in the Extreme’ to the Graphic on 24 June but it was rejected by a letter dated 16 July. He clearly then sent the MS to WC for criticism. After making some revisions Archer sent the story with this letter to his friend F.W. Robinson, who in 1884 had begun to publish the periodical Home Chimes. Robinson replied with his own criticisms of the story: ‘It will be a difficult tale to sell ... the plot is too dramatic for most editors’, adding ‘Wilkie Collins is evidently a brick. I wonder if he had my idea about the lay-figure. Comedy sequel jars a little bit with the sensational start. But it is a very fair first tale as it stands and I shall be curious to see what comes of your revisions.’ The next day Robinson wrote: ‘I return Wilkie Collins’s letter – he is very kind ... I shall not reread those changes – I liked it well enough first go off.’ Robinson published the story in Home Chimes, NS 9, October 1886, pp. 219–234. Archer had followed some but not all of WC’s recommendations in what is a rather dull and ordinary story. (See Archer, pp. 279–282, and Journal p. 130, 132, and letter from F.W. Robinson to Frank Archer, 25 and 26 July 1886, Archer Archive).

3. At the end of the story the hero mistakes artists moving and repairing a full-size wooden ‘lay-figure’ for the abuse and murder of a living person.

4. Archer was paid £3-4s for the 16 pages (4s a page) on 4 October 1886 (Archer Archive).

[2593] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 24 JULY 1886

MS: Huntington (HH 103).<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 521–522.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 24 July 1886

My dear Holman,

A day or two before I came here, I presented your card, and saw your exhibition.<sup>2</sup>

My first impression, on entering the room, was of such a feast of magnificent colour as I had not seen since I was last at Venice. My next pleasure was to study the pictures in detail. You know so well how incapable I am of flattering anybody – least of all, a dear old friend – that I shall say freely what is in my mind. As a painter of human expression, the most difficult of all achievements in your Art, there is no man among your living English Colleagues (and not more than two or three among the dead) who is fit to be mentioned in the same breath with you. To my mind, you are a great teacher as well as a great painter. With obstacles and discouragements which I lament, you are nevertheless steadily doing good in teaching the people to see for themselves the difference between true art and false. Such a reform as this in the popular Taste works, as we both know, insensibly on the popular mind, and clears its way slowly through the thousand modern obstructions of conventionality and claptrap. But the reform does go on. I saw some people silently wondering before the picture of the Christian priest, saved from the Druids.<sup>3</sup> They consulted in whispers, and went on to the next picture. But the Priest had got them. They came back – and had another long look – and consulted again. Slowly and surely that fine work was pleading the good cause with people ignorant of the subtle beauty of it, but insensibly discovering its appeal to their sense of nature and truth. I am absolutely certain that the next Royal Academy

Exhibition will not succeed as well as usual in imposing on those innocent strangers.

I must wait till we meet again to speak of the pictures individually. If I attempt to write about them, I shall produce a book instead of a letter. Goodbye then for the present – and let me only add Mrs Graves’s thanks to mine. The exhibition was a revelation to her.

Ever yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

---

1. A pencil note on the otherwise blank final page of the letter, probably in Hunt’s hand, reads: ‘I think this may interest you to read, and you will let me have it back?’

2. Hunt’s first retrospective exhibition held in 1886 at the Fine Art Society in London, which was accompanied by the publication of a series of articles by the artist on ‘The Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood: A Fight for Art’ in the Contemporary Review, April-June 1886.

3. ‘A Converted British Family Sheltering a Christian Missionary from the Druids’ was first shown at the Royal Academy in 1850 and is now held at the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford. It was the fifth of thirty-two works in the 1886 retrospective.

[2594] TO F. C. BEARD, 26 JULY 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 183–184.

14. Nelson Crescent, Ramsgate | 26th July 1886

My dear Frank,

I have kept my report waiting for a change in the weather for the better. It came last night in the most furious deluge of rain I ever heard. Today the horrid oppression in the air has gone – and I breathe again freely. Even before this relief, I have been steadily getting better – with one or two slight returns of that pain in the chest, only worth mentioning because I must “make a clean breast of it” to my (medical) confessor. If you could only get here, by the steamer for a holiday of your own (the boats are not crowded) what a pleasure it would be! But no railway! – the road is so badly laid and the carriages are so badly hung, that if I was dying here, I would not let you know it.

The Bartley’s are within two doors of us,<sup>2</sup> and the children are in and out a dozen times a day. Ramsgate is by no means full – and a quieter set of people than usual are taking their sea air this year. (N.B. I have discovered a greengrocer who supplies me with unutterably delicious nectarines. Will that tempt you?)<sup>3</sup>

Poor old Mrs Townsend is dead, and buried, I suppose, by this time.<sup>4</sup> How does the old husband take it? Will he submit philosophically – like my Aunt Clunes (aged 80) whose husband died lately at 82. I think I told you she came to see me, and so reminded me of my poor dear mother that I was within a hairs’ breadth of bursting out crying when I kissed her.<sup>5</sup>

Goodbye for the present. My new story is knocking at my head, and saying, “Why don’t you let me out?”<sup>6</sup>

Always affly yours WC

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘F. Carr Beard Esq | 44. Welbeck Street | London | W.’, postmarked in Ramsgate as dated.

2. Carrie, WC’s goddaughter, and her husband Henry Powell Bartley.

3. WC seems to have liked the fruit – see [2458] to Emily Wynne of 22 August 1885.

4. Unidentified.

5. For another account of this visit by WC’s aunt Emily Clunes, see [2890] to Anne Linsell, 14 September 1888.

6. The Guilty River.

[2595] TO ANNE WYNNE, 27 JULY 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 505.

27 July 1886 | Ramsgate

I am only now, dearest and best of wives, beginning to get better – and I am ashamed of myself for not having written to my Nannie before this. So far, I am certain of what I say. Everything else is doubtful. I don't know how long I shall stay here – I don't feel sure that I may not accept an invitation to stay with a friend at Santa Barbara, on the coast of California (N. B. He would be glad to see my wife if she would come with me) – I don't know when I shall begin the 1<sup>s</sup> novel – and I am miserably uncertain about putting in Lady Snagge. My fear is that she might scratch my face if she found it out. Would it be well if I slightly altered the name, and called her Lady Snugge or Lady Snogge?<sup>2</sup> Doubt! nothing but doubt in my present state of mind and body! I love and adore my Nannie – that alone is certain. Tear up this letter, and I will write another when I know something more about myself. Perhaps my mind will be steadier when I begin to work again. My love to my mother-in-law. And don't show her these lines or she will regret our marriage. Tear up! tear up!

Your loving | W.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'Miss Nannie Wynne | Little Saxham Rectory | Bury St Edmunds', postmarked 'RAMSGATE | JY2[7]'. Nannie and her mother seem to have stayed in Little Saxham the previous summer also; see [2458] to Emily Wynne, 22 August 1885.

2. Lady Snagge appears to be Nannie's pet cat, though in the event she did not make any appearance in WC's shilling novel The Guilty River either under her own or an assumed name.

3. WC signs with a large florid 'W'.

[2596] TO WYBERT REEVE, 29 JULY 1886

MS: Private. Extract: Reeve 1889, p. 4g; Reeve 1891, p. 119; Reeve 1906, p. 461; Robinson 1951, p. 310. Published: B&C, II, pp. 522–523.

Ramsgate | 29 July 1886

My dear Reeve,

I have been sailing, and have come here for my letters.

The news of my poor dear old friend's death has shocked and distressed me. Another of the very few friends of my younger days now left to me has been torn away. No words of mine can sufficiently acknowledge the unremitting devotion of Biers to my literary interests in Australia, for twenty years past and more.<sup>1</sup> Always eager to make the very best possible pecuniary arrangements for me, and always successful in doing so, his labour was throughout – at his own express stipulation – a labour of love. Not very long since, I acknowledged this, most inadequately, by sending him a little present – and I had the happiness of hearing from him that this keepsake was very welcome. When you see his daughters pray tell them that I really share in their sorrow, and feel the sincerest sympathy with them.<sup>2</sup>

Let me thank you heartily for your friendly offers of help. My new novel – now shortly to be published in book-form – has appeared previously in various newspapers, and the speculator, purchasing all serial rights in England and the Colonies /(for the largest sum that I have ever received)/ managed the Australian publication himself.<sup>3</sup> So [del] I have no present interest (of the literary sort) in the book market of our antipodes.<sup>4</sup> If I have any hopeful dramatic work that promises well, it shall be sent to you. In the meantime, let me congratulate you on your success. It has been well merited, I am quite sure – and it will I hope be the predecessor of more triumphs to come.<sup>5</sup>

As for my health, considering that I was 62 years old last birthday – that I have worked hard as a writer – and that gout has tried to blind me first and kill me afterwards, on more than one occasion – I must not complain. Neuralgia, and nervous exhaustion generally, have sent me to the sea to be patched up – and the sea is justifying my confidence in it. I must try and live long enough to welcome you when you return to us.<sup>6</sup>

Pardon a stupid letter, written in a hurry. I will do better next time.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins<sup>7</sup>

---

1. Hugh Biers, WC's old friend and agent in the Australian colonies (see [3177] to him of August 1873): 'It will be learnt with regret that Mr. H. Biers, the chief draughtsman in the Lands Office died somewhat suddenly yesterday. Mr.

Biers who was 57 years of age, had been 25 years in the public service, and was well known and highly esteemed. For some time his health had not been good, and recently he had had leave of absence in consequence, but he had returned to duty, and was in his office as late as Monday last.' (Melbourne Argus, Wednesday, 16 June 1886, p. 5).

2. According to Births Deaths and Marriages Victoria, Biers married Annette Roberts in 1855 and the couple had two daughters, Annette Frances (b. 1857) and Blanche Ellen (b. 1860).

3. By way of illustrating the liberties that the actor took in transcribing WC's letters for his 'Personal Recollections', we might note that this sentence cited in Reeve 1889 reads: 'My new novel, now shortly to be published in book form, has appeared previously in various newspapers, and the speculator purchasing all serial rights in England and the colonies has given me the largest sum that I have ever received for any of my books before.'

4. For £1300 Tillotson's of Bolton had purchased both British and colonial serial rights to The Evil Genius, which appeared in Australia in the Sydney Mail (Johnson-Woods, Index, pp. 95–96). Reeve, who was resident in Australia from late 1878, had presumably offered to look after WC's literary interests there.

5. Perhaps referring to the recent success of Reeve's new comedy, Only Dust, opening at the Bijou Theatre, Melbourne, on 26 May 1886.

6. This is the last recorded letter to Reeve, who did not in fact return to Britain until December 1900, long after WC's death.

7. When the two are compared, although the substance is the same, it is clear from the form that the facsimile has not in fact been taken from the MS of this particular letter. The specific MS employed remains untraced; there is no other extant letter to Reeve with this particular valediction.

[2597] TO ERIC S. ROBERTSON,<sup>1</sup> 1 AUGUST 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 185.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 1st August 1886

Dear Sir,

I regret that I was not at home to receive you when you were so good as to call in Gloucester Place. Your card has just reached me – with my letters.

It is not as yet possible for me to say when I shall return to London. I have been suffering from illness – and my plans, at present, depend entirely on the progress that I make in the recovery of my health. If I happen to be away from Ramsgate for awhile, letters will be forwarded in the first instance to this place.

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Eric S. Robertson Esqre

---

1. Presumably Eric Sutherland Robinson, Professor of English, Lahore (Wellesley Index), author of English Poetesses: A Series of Critical Biographies (London: Cassell, 1883) and a friend of the novelist Hall Caine.

[2598] TO FREDERICK G. KITTON,<sup>1</sup> 2 AUGUST 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: B&C, II, p. 524.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 2nd August 1886

Dear Sir,

Your letter has followed me to this place.

Your kindness will I hope excuse me from contributing to the work on which you are engaged. I abstain from adopting your suggestion, out of consideration for the wishes of Dickens himself. He more than once expressed to me his dislike of being presented to public curiosity by means of "pen-portraits", and his desire to be only known to the great world of readers after his death by his books.

I remain, dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Frederick G. Kitton Esqre

---

1. Frederick George Kitton (1856–1904; ODNB), illustrator and writer, author of Dickensiana: A Bibliography of the Literature Relating to Charles Dickens and his Writings (1886) and the copiously illustrated Charles Dickens by Pen and Pencil (1890). Since the former was reviewed from spring 1886, it must be the latter to which WC here refuses to contribute.

[2599] TO ALBÉRIC ISERBYT, 4 AUGUST 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 5/1), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 185.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 4th August 1886

Dear Sir,

Your kind note has followed me to this place. Your present holiday, as I hear, has a special interest attached to it. Let me offer you my congratulations, and my best wishes for your happiness.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins
Albéric Iserbyt Esqr

---

1. Directed to 'Albéric Iserbyt Esqr | 23. Raeburn Street | The Avenue | Acre Lane | Brixton | London S.W.', postmarked in Ramsgate as dated.

2. Iserbyt writes just before his marriage to Frances Beeching on 7 August in Kennington. This appears to be WC's last letter to him. In [2807] of 3 February 1888, WC asked Frederick Lehmann to assist him with a letter in German from Berlin.

[2600] TO F. C. BEARD, 10 AUGUST 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 524–525.

14. Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 10th Aug 1886

My dear Frank

I had hoped that your letter would tell me you were able to get away from London – if not as far as this, at least to some nearer place. It is sad news indeed to hear that you are “feeling prostrate.”

As for me I have a contradicting state of things to report. All day long, I feel infinitely better – I sleep far more soundly at night – I have a better appetite – but,<sup>2</sup> in the early morning, say from 5 to 7, that damnable pain in the chest returns regularly. I have tried to circumvent it by an early breakfast in bed, without success – and what I have done to provoke it, I don't know. Take yesterday as a sample. I did no work – I went out for a little [del] walk between one and two – I went out again at three for a sail, and was on the water [del] more than three hours – I drank no champagne at dinner – I slept (only waking /once/ [del] for a few minutes) till 5 this morning. At 5:30 ~~that~~ the vile gnawing [del] began again – and, required three of those capsules before I could get rid of it. And here I am writing to you now – at 12:30 without an ache or pain to complain of, and this on the muggiest of muggy days, with the thermometer at 70 close by an open window!!!! What does your art say to this? And what sort [del] of prescription is “indicated”? /To complete this queer “case,” let me remind you that while I was in London – half dead for want of fresher air – I was entirely without the chest pain.<sup>3</sup> (N.B. Bowels kept steadily to their duty – and no medicine taken except your pick-me-up to keep my digestion in good order).

Enough of myself for the present! I wish you had been with us yesterday in the boat. We “dodged” the rain, pouring over Ramsgate, by steering in ~~all~~ every direction which showed a morsel of blue sky. It was the funniest chase – the great clouds trying to catch our little boat, and, at one time, a sea fog helping them. But we got back with dry skins nevertheless.

Let me have a line by return of post – and tell me you are feeling better.

Yours ever affly, WC<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'F. Carr Beard Esq | 44 Welbeck Street | London. W.', initialled 'WC', and postmarked 'RAMSGATE | D | AU 10 | 86'.

2. In fact underlined three times.

3. The insertion, which is indicated by a dotted saltire, is written vertically down the left margin, with the place of insertion flagged by a similar symbol, the two being linked by a wavy line.

4. Having run out of space on the final page of the four-leaf notepaper, WC writes the valediction and signature vertically down his left margin.

[2601] TO A. P. WATT, 16 AUGUST 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 186.

14 Nelson Crescent | Ramsgate | 16th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1886

My dear Watt,

Harper's offer of £15 when we have asked £50 may not be intentionally impudent – but impudent it is. No, without hesitation, exactly expresses my view.<sup>1</sup>

What do you say to applying straight to the only powerful publisher in New York, the pirate Munro. He has already sent me money of his own free will for some of my books.<sup>2</sup> We might remind him of this fact and tell him that we have received an offer from Harper which we have refused – and ask if he will offer for the early sheets (remembering the size and purpose of the story of course).<sup>3</sup> We will wait, if you like, to discuss this together. I return not later than Friday next. Perhaps earlier – for I am threatened with gout, (in the eye) and am writing to you with five grams of calomel in my unhappy stomach, and in what we used to call at school “a blue funk.”

Ever yours | WC

You shall have a line immediately on my return.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Referring to Watt's attempts to sell The Guilty River in the United States. In fact Watt had originally asked £100 (to WC, 19 July 1886, Berg). In the event, the novella was published in Harper's Handy Series (no. 105) on 3 December 1886.

2. George Munro, proprietor of the Seaside Library, which had featured unauthorized editions of most of WC's fiction (see Gasson, pp. 137–138). On the unexpected payments from Munro, see [2019] to Watt of 10 March 1882 and [2134] to Andrew Chatto of 7 April 1883.

3. The Guilty River also appeared as no. 896 in Munro's series of Seaside Library Pocket Editions (Gasson, p. 138). It is not clear if this edition was authorized.

4. In fact WC returned to London on Wednesday 18 August – see his next letter to Watt.

[2602] TO A. P. WATT, 18 AUGUST 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 187.

9.30 P.M. | 90. Gloucester Place W. | 18th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1886

My dear Watt,

Here I am at home again – with my eye under the doctor's care. He hopes to set me right again soon. We shall see.

When the story for Arrowsmith will be done I can't say. It must be done in time for publication at, or before Christmas. And when proofs reach me – corrected duplicates shall be at once sent, seriatim, to the American publisher who purchases the right – I mean without waiting until they are all collected, so as to save time. The length will equal “Called Back”.<sup>1</sup> The title is “The Guilty River” – and it represents a new idea. As yet, only the first three chapters are written – and nobody has seen them. This is all I can now think of. If there ought to be more, come here and tell me – you know how glad I shall be to see you.

The railway is in my head – and bed is the only fit place for me.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC<sup>3</sup>

---

1. See [2588] to Watt of 16 July 1886.

2. WC had presumably travelled back from Ramsgate that day by train.

3. Written in pencil in Watt's hand beneath the signature are the words ‘Cable me. | Simultaneously’.

[2603] TO A. P. WATT, 19 AUGUST 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 187.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th Augt 1886

My dear Watt,

Here – with my sincere thanks – is the document signed and witnessed.<sup>1</sup> I return it by this evening's post – instead of waiting to give it back when I have the pleasure of seeing you tomorrow – so that you may have the whole day for registering at your own most convenient time.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Probably referring to the document registering the three-volume edition of The Evil Genius at Stationers' Hall for copyright purposes.

[2604] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 29 AUGUST 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 188.

29th August 1886

Dear Sirs,

Please send the enclosed "Dedication" of "The Evil Genius" to the printers with the corrected proofs of the novel which will reach you under another cover.<sup>1</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. The printed dedication reads 'Affectionately Dedicated | To | Holman Hunt'.

[3190] TO FRANK ARCHER, 30 AUGUST 1886

MS: Unknown. Cited: 'Diary', 31 August 1886; 'Journal', p. 132 (both in Lewis Collection (Archer Archive)).
Published: A&C7, p. 26.

Summary: Enclosing a letter of introduction and recommendation to Andrew Chatto.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. The letter itself is not found in the Archer Archive, though its former presence is attested to by the missing number '23' among the numbers written in pencil on the envelopes in the archive. Archer records in his diary on 31 August 1886: 'Letter from Wilkie Collins with Introduction to Chatto'. WC's covering letter to Chatto, [2605] of 30 August 1886, is found at Parrish. Archer records: '1886 Sep 1 Called and left Monogram & introduction by Wilkie Collins. Declined Sep 6' ('Journal', p. 132). The firm, rather than Andrew Chatto, replied to Archer on 6 September 1886 (also in Archer Archive):

We return our best thanks for the favour of the perusal of the MS of your short story entitled "The Monogram" accompanied by Mr Wilkie Collins' letter of introduction and recommendation.

We regret to say however that in consequence of the present depressed state of the book market due to the recent overproduction of works of fiction, especially of stories of this length, which have been published in excessive numbers of late, we find we are reluctantly compelled to withhold from making you a proposal for the publication of it.

We return the MS herewith again thanking you for the sight of it

Yours faithfully | Chatto & Windus

[2605] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 30 AUGUST 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 188.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th August | 1886

My dear Chatto,

Mr Frank Archer, an old friend of mine, has written a short work of fiction which he had planned to submit to my judgement. In the mean time the gout is torturing me in the right eye and I must only use the sound eye in cases of absolute necessity. I am sure I have only to add that you will do me a kindness by looking at the M.S.S and by reporting the result at your convenience.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Apart from the signature, the letter is written in the hand of Caroline Graves.

2. Chatto's response to this request is not found in the letter-books at Reading. No work signed by Archer appeared in Belgravia, Chatto's house magazine (see VFRG, 14).

[2606] TO A. P. WATT, 30 AUGUST 1886

MS: Pembroke.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 188–189.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th Aug 1886

My dear Watt

I have suffered the old tortures in my eye, since I last wrote. Today there is an intermission of pain – but I am warned to give my sound eye as little to do as possible. So here I am with a petition. Will you kindly answer the two letters enclosed?<sup>2</sup> I am writing a Christmas annual in one volume – entitled “The Guilty River” – and the American right is sold.<sup>3</sup> I am suffering from illness – and cannot give particulars – and my friend and representative writes for me. Those are the points.

In spite of pain and heat, four chapters of the story are set up – you shall have them when they are corrected.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Bound out of order at Pembroke, after [2558] to Watt of 5 May 1886.

2. The two letters in question have not been traced, though one may have been an approach from the publishers J. & R. Maxwell – see [2620] to Watt of 2 October 1886.

3. To Harper's – see [2621] to James R. Osgood of 3 October 1886.

[2607] TO GEORGE BENTLEY, 2 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Berg.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 189.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 2nd Sept 1886

Dear Mr Bentley,

One word, by help of another pen, to thank you for your friendly letter, and for the interest which, you so kindly take in my recovery. There has been an improvement today and an intermission of pain, and if there is no relapse, I may hope to be on the way to recovery. I most sincerely trust that the sudden change in the temperature today has made you breathe more easily, in every sense of the word.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

George Bentley Esqre

---

1. Signature only in WC's hand, the rest apparently in that of Carrie Bartley.

[2608] TO JANE BIGELOW, 2 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Bigelow.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 189–190.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 2nd September 1886

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

I cannot tell you how sorry I was not to be able to receive you when you so kindly called here, and when the delightful odours of your flowers were a consolation to me in my darkened room. The blinded eye is beginning (rather dimly) to see again – and if no relapse takes place, the doctor seems to think that I may be making a start, at least, on the way that leads to recovery. I shall be indeed delighted to see you (I have one sound eye still left) on any day, and at any hour, which may be most convenient to yourself. I can then tell you much how much I prize the second opportunity which your kindness has offered to me.

Believe me most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

If you can favour me with one line to say when I may hope for your visit, there will be no fear of my being driven out on that occasion, by my doctor's favourite prescription – fresh air.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. In Carrie's hand, though signed by WC.

2. See [2613] to Jane Bigelow, 15 September 1886, for the date of the visit..

[3191] TO FRANK ARCHER, 7 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C7, p. 27.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>
7th Sept 1886

My dear Archer,

I am sorry to hear that we have “missed fire”.<sup>3</sup> Shall we try again? Mr Arrowsmith of Bristol (publisher of “Called Back”)<sup>4</sup> is to publish a Christmas story of mine this year.<sup>5</sup> If you will risk sending the Mss. to Bristol, I will give you a letter of introduction. Perhaps you have a rough copy – in case of accidents by post?

Ever yours | WC

Mr Arrowsmith is away from Bristol for a week's holiday. I shall hear from him when he returns. My eye is improving – and I am hard, hard, hard at work with the sound eye

---

1. Initialled and directed to ‘Frank Archer Eqr | 21. Baker Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 3| SP 8 | 86’, with ‘24’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. With address ranged right and WC's monogram ranged left.

3. Archer had clearly told him about the letter from Chatto (see [3189] to Archer, 30 August 1886, note 1).

4. Frederick Fergus (1847–1885), pseud. Hugh Conway, had achieved instant success with Called Back which sold 350,000 copies in four years. See Graham Law, “‘Poor Fergus’: On Wilkie Collins and “Hugh Conway””, WCSJ, NS 3, pp. 67–72.

5. The Guilty River.

[2609] TO J. MAYNARD SAUNDERS,<sup>1</sup> 7 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Lewis Collection, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 190 (incomplete and as to ‘J. Marquand Saunders’), amended A&C10, pp. 24–25.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>3</sup>
7th September 1886

Dear sir,

When I take up my pen, after breakfast, I take up my cigar with it. When I return to my pen, after lunch, I return to my cigar. When I do my best, in the evening, to digest my dinner (N. B. I am sixty two years old) my cigar helps me. I have only to add that I feel the most unfeigned pity for those unfortunate persons who do not smoke.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

J. Maynard Saunders, Esq.

---

1. The only candidate in the records is John Maynard Saunders (8 August 1863–1949), listed in the parish register as born in Marylebone (father John Saunders, mother Georgiana Wiggington), and in censuses as a ‘journalist’ in 1891 and 1901, and a ‘Journalist foreign editor’ in 1911.
2. Directed to ‘J. Maynard Saunders, Esqr. | 48. Francis Road | Edgbaston’, initialled ‘WC’ in the bottom left corner, and postmarked recto ‘London’ and verso ‘Birmingham | 8 September 1886’.
3. Ranged right with monogram on left, watermarked ‘Hieratica | J. S & Co.’

[3192] TO FRANK ARCHER, 9 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C7, pp. 27–28.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

9th Sept 1886

My dear Archer,

I think you had better – after sending the Mss by book post – add a letter from yourself, posted separately, to say that the Mss has been sent to Bristol, and enclosing at the same time my letter of introduction.<sup>3</sup>

J. W. Arrowsmith, 11. Quay Street, Bristol is the address. But we must wait until Mr Arrowsmith returns from his holiday trip – I think some day in next week. When I know that he is in Bristol again, I will send you the letter of introduction.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

My eye is better – but I am feeling the remedies and the regimen. Weak – weak – weak!

---

1. Directed to ‘Frank Archer Esq | 21. Baker Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 1 | SP 10 | 86’, with ‘25’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.
2. With address ranged right and WC’s monogram ranged left.
3. The manuscript of Archer’s story ‘The Monogram’.
4. WC was typically cautious of the dangers of losing manuscripts in the post.

[2610] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 9 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 190–191.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 9th September 1886

My dear Chatto,

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of Drafts from your firm at 3, 6, and 9 months for £500.- ..- for the right of publishing “The Evil Genius”, as the conditions set forth in our agreement. I also have the pleasure of enclosing a duplicate of the agreement with my signature attached.<sup>1</sup>

Business having been now attended to, my best thanks for the presentation copies of “The Evil Genius” come next – and let me add my hearty admiration of the binding. The colour is delightful, and the design is worthy of the colour. To people with any taste the book is specially recommended by my good friend and publisher before the reader opens it.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esq

---

1. The agreement, dated 8 September 1886 and leasing the copyright of the novel in all editions above 2s for seven years in return for a payment of £500, is found at Reading. Chatto had written to WC the day before enclosing the three City Bank drafts and a duplicate of the agreement. The three Bills for £100, £200, and £200 were credited to WC’s bank account on 21 September, 25 September and 28 December, all recorded as ‘Bill on City Bk discod’. The related debits were: ‘discot on £100’ of £1-2s-2d on 21 September; ‘Do. £200 (24th inst.)’ for £4-12s-1d on 25 September; and ‘Discot on £200’ for £4-10s-5d on 28 December (Coutts: WC). See [2616] to Chatto, 22 September 1886, regarding problems with these payments, perhaps accounting for slight delay with the second.
2. Chatto’s letter to WC of 8 September mentions that six early author copies of the novel in three volumes were to be sent the following day. For a description of the binding, see Gasson, p. 58.

[2611] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 11 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Huntington (HH 104). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 191.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Saturday 11th September 1886

My dear Holman,

Either today or Monday, my latest novel (“The Evil Genius”) will I hope reach you safely by Parcel Post. If you will open the first volume, and look at the page which follows the title page, you will see that I have associated my new story with my old friend by dedicating the book to Holman Hunt.<sup>1</sup>

The gout has been in one of my eyes again – and instead of cruising at sea, I have been suffering tortures on land. The pain has gone – and the eye is getting well, I hope.

Ever yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The novel was ‘Affectionately Dedicated | To | Holman Hunt’.

[2612] TO A. P. WATT, 14 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 191–192

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14th Sept 1886

My dear Watt,

I am only sorry that you should have had so much trouble about those unfortunate sketches. Let us by all means accept the £10 offer – and bring the business to an end.<sup>1</sup>

The letter of explanation (which I now return) seems to me to be a letter of prevarication – pervaded by a fine flavour of humbug.<sup>2</sup> Is it possible to beat into his stupid head that we want a little more than one day’s notice to publish simultaneously on this side?

I am getting slowly better – but the medical treatment makes me feel weak and depressed. Nevertheless I am working again.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. This must be an offer from Boys Own Paper, owned by the Religious Tract Society, for British serial rights to the three ‘Victims of Circumstances’ stories; the first two of the stories eventually appeared in that paper on 23 October 1886 and 26 February 1887 respectively. As Watt’s letter to WC of 9 May 1888 explains (Berg), Youth’s Companion, the American paper carrying the stories, published the third one at such short notice that the story was pirated in Britain by a ‘penny Journal’ (untraced) before Boys Own Paper had chance to print the story. Thus £6-14s only was eventually paid – see [2839] to Watt of 9 May 1888.

2. Bound into the volume at Pembroke is the letter from Perry Mason & Co of Boston to Watt of 2 September 1886, on notepaper headed ‘Youth’s Companion’, which, in response to a complaint from Watt, explains that the date of publication of WC’s first story in a supplement to Youth’s Companion (19 August 1886) was sent as soon as known, and that the publishers intended to fulfil their agreement ‘in its spirit as well as in the letter’.

[2613] TO JANE BIGELOW, 15 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 192.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 15th September 1886

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

Only one word more, to say that I shall be delighted to see you on Friday next,<sup>1</sup> at the hour which you kindly propose.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC writes on the Wednesday.

[2614] TO A. P. WATT, 16 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 192–193.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
16th Sept 1886

My dear Watt,

You have exactly interpreted what I meant to say – and ought to have said. It would be the merest waste of time to take any notice of the Yankee’s precious explanation. The gout must have been muddling my brains when I wrote.<sup>1</sup> At any rate this delicious cold weather is helping me. The doctor said today: “Your eye is getting well.” I tried the eye today – in his presence – and found that it could read – in a book. It must still be nursed, and protected by a shade – but the pain is gone.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Referring to Watt’s reply to the letter from Perry Mason & Co. of 2 September – see [2612] to Watt of 14 September.

[3113] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 18 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: Lewis website; A&C4, p. 27.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 18th September 1886

---

1. Presumably an autograph hunter.

[2615] TO ANNE WYNNE, 20 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 506.

Monday 20th Sept 1886

This,<sup>2</sup> dearest missus is Me. You have heard of “the torture of the D—d” I am just able to announce that the gout attacked my eye in the midst of my sailings and enjoyments of wind and sea.

After weeks of the ~~afere~~/above/-mentioned tortures the eye is recovering its colour and its sight – but oh Nannie, I am so<sup>3</sup> weak after the pain and (what the Doctor calls) “the treatment”. My nerves are in such a state of ridiculous irritability that I cannot endure the passing of vehicles in the street – and I am going away for a little quiet, to return in a week or so [~~del~~] – and then to write and tell you the result and to be fit to see my wife and my mother-in-law at last. My love, no more. Yes, one bit more of news – I have got to write a Christmas book!!!<sup>4</sup> Pleasant – my Nannie – isn’t it?

Your love, WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked ‘LONDON. W | SP20 | 86’.

2. WC draws a bearded face with an eye patch above, linking it with his first word by a vertical line.

3. In fact triply underlined.

4. The reference must be to The Guilty River, though WC had already mentioned this to Nannie in previous letters, beginning with [2580] of 24 June 1886.

[2616] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 22 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 193.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd September 1886

My dear Mr Chatto,

Are you sufficiently orthodox to believe in The Devil? I am. And you can hardly hesitate when you see two of those ill-fated bills, returning with a third informality in the date.<sup>1</sup> The date on the Stamps of the two £200 bills is the 9th Day of the month (“9”), and the written date is the 8th day of September. This, I hear (from Couatts & Co) is an informality because a bill must not be dated before the date of the Stamp which makes it a legal document. In plain English, will you kindly seize the corrective pen once more – and write 9th opposite September (I suppose with more initials – but you know best about that) – and then let me have the bills back, and we will see what happens next. In the meantime

believe me yours ever truly | Wilkie Collins

The £100 Bill has circumvented the Devil – how I have not heard. In this case, Couatts says “All right.”

---

1. Concerning the three promissory notes totalling £500 in payment for the lease of the copyright of The Evil Genius. Chatto wrote to apologize for the errors on 23 September, enclosing fresh bills without the informalities (Reading). See [2610] to Chatto, 9 September 1886, for the original receipt of these payments.

[2617] TO PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, 23 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Duke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 194.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 23rd Sepr / 1886

My dear Hayne,

Whether I owe you a letter, or you owe me a letter, I am not strong enough to be able to decide. The cruel gout has been trying, and again I am glad to say unsuccessfully, to blind one of my eyes. Today, I am free from pains – and I take up my pen in a state of anxiety about you, and all dear to you, which has hungered for news, and good news, ever since I have had the terrible story of the Earthquakes read to me from the newspaper.<sup>1</sup> That they were near you – and I am afraid near enough to be felt – I am unable to doubt. Do write, and tell me that the shock to the nerves (I had some experience of it myself, many years since, at Naples) is the beginning and the end of what you and your family have suffered.

A longer letter, better worth reading shall be written, when I am better able to do it. In the meantime, believe me,

always affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. In fact Hayne had died of a stroke on 6 July 1886. The earthquake, one of the strongest in American history, was on 31 August 1886, centring on Charleston, South Carolina, about 150 miles south-east of Hayne’s home at Copse Hill, near Augusta, Georgia. Damage there was slight. Hayne’s wife Mary replied telling WC of his death and WC’s reply, eulogizing Hayne, is [2643] to Mary Hayne of 13 November 1886.

[2618] TO MRS HEPWORTH,<sup>1</sup> 24 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 194–195.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

24th September 1886

Dear Madam,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter, and for the opportunity of reading your story.<sup>2</sup> You write with a judgement, a taste, and a knowledge of human nature which have been most welcome to me in these days of slipshod style and claptrap sentiment. As a question of Art “Roland” seems to me to be open to objection on this ground, that his character is an exception to ordinary human rules. Not one man in ten thousand would revenge himself by marrying his divorced wife again. He would consider it too high a price to pay – even for revenge. If I venture to make this objection, it is because I see such delicacy and subtlety of handling in the character of the mother, and of the lawyer who tells the story, that it is only due to you to judge you by a high standard.

The idea of my story<sup>3</sup> (which is your idea) occurred to me while I was yachting with some friends. After having distinguished myself as the laziest man on board, I was suddenly discovered to be writing with great assiduity. Everybody wanted to know what this meant – everybody was told – and everybody said, “There is a new idea if ever there was such a thing in this world.” I alone quoted Solomon’s famous assertion that there is nothing new under the sun – and Solomon and I have proved to be right.<sup>4</sup>

Believe me, dear Madam, | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Authoress who published three unsigned stories in Chambers’s Journal in 1878–79 – see VFRG, 14, p. 31. WC writes to her again on 5 April 1887 ([2704]), addressing her as ‘Dear Mrs Hepworth’.

2. ‘Twice Wooded, Twice Won’, which appeared in three parts in Chambers’s Journal (16–30 November 1878). In it the villain Roland Mornington is divorced by the ‘divinely beautiful’ heroine Claudia, but deviously marries her again as an act of revenge. The hero of the story is the barrister-narrator, Gerald Burgogne, who, with the assistance of the heroine’s mother Madame Francini, finally succeeds in winning Claudia on Roland’s death.

3. The Evil Genius, recently published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus, which also features a divorced woman marrying her former husband for a second time, though with rather happier results.

4. See Ecclesiastes 1:8 (AV): ‘The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun’. In its opening verse, the book of Ecclesiastes is ascribed to ‘the Preacher, the son of David, king in Jerusalem’, that is, Solomon.

[3193] TO FRANK ARCHER, 29 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C7, p. 28.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

29th Sept 1886

My dear Archer,

I have this evening written to Mr Arrowsmith about your story – and in a day or two I hope to be able to write again, and tell you that he is ready to receive the Mss.<sup>3</sup>

Mr A. enlarged the limits of his holiday – and I am as hard at work as a man can well be. On these grounds I know you will excuse a little delay.

Ever yours | WC

Many thanks for “Home Chimes”.<sup>4</sup> They shall ring in my leisure, when it comes.

---

1. Initialled and directed to ‘Frank Archer Esq | 21. Baker Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 10 | SP 30 | 86 | 4’, with ‘26’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. With address ranged right and WC’s monogram ranged left.

3. Of ‘The Monogram’. WC’s letter to Arrowsmith has not been traced, while that to Archer is presumably the missing letter ‘27’ in the Archer Archive.

4. No doubt issue no. 9, October 1886, in which Archer’s story ‘Perplexed in the Extreme’ appeared at pp. 219–234. See [2592] to Frank Archer, 23 July 1886, note 2.

[2619] TO JANE BIGELOW, 30 SEPTEMBER 1886

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 195–196.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Thursday | Sept 30 1886

My dear Mrs Bigelow,

I was indeed sorry when I heard that you had kindly called to say goodbye – and that I had missed seeing you. This is another of the many disappointments that I owe to my wretched health. All the night when I ought to have been asleep, I was awake – and in the morning when I ought to have been awake and happy to receive you, I was asleep. No more of my infirm self!

Will this letter find you “on board”, establishing yourself in your cabin – putting many little things in the neatest order, only to find them thrown at your head and scattered at your feet, by the first rising of wind of sea, and the first pitching of that noble steamer called by the name of that noble wine?<sup>1</sup> With all my heart, I wish you the calmest of voyages, the most agreeable of Captains, the most attentive of Stewardesses, and the most accomplished of cooks. Blessed with these advantages, the crossing of the ocean will be a luxury – and when you see “Sandy Hook” you will wonder how the time can have passed so quickly.<sup>2</sup>

In the meanwhile, let me petition for a little letter to tell me of your safe arrival, and perhaps to send me the photograph of the young lady who was once my jolly little friend – who gave me perfumes and helped me to pack my portmanteau.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Jane Bigelow sailed from Le Havre on ‘La Champagne’, arriving in New York on 11 October. See also [2758] to her of 5 October 1887.

2. Sandy Hook, New Jersey, at the mouth of the Hudson, perhaps the first sight of land on the voyage back.

3. Her daughter Flora Bigelow, who would turn eighteen on 8 October 1886.

[2620] TO A. P. WATT, 2 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 196.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd Oct: 1886

My dear Watt,

Nothing can be better than your management of the Maxwell proposal.<sup>1</sup> Let us see how “The Guilty River” gets on, before we renew negotiations. Never have I had such a fight with Time as this is. I write at 11.p.m. with proofs still to correct, after having been at work since 10.a.m. The last chapters will have to go to New York in MS. Even the printers are not quick enough! I have not broken down yet.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The nature of the proposal is unclear, though it was presumably made by the publishers J. & R. Maxwell, who made an offer in a letter to WC of 27 October 1886 – see the note to [2632] to Watt of 30 October.

2. On WC’s struggle against time with The Guilty River, see Law, “Poor Fergus”, WCSJ, NS 3, pp. 67–72.

[2621] TO JAMES R. OSGOOD,<sup>1</sup> 3 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Ross. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 197.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd Oct: 1886

Dear Mr Osgood

Many thanks for your kind note. The duplicates shall be sent as you suggest. Illness alone is answerable for this dreadful hurry. I am working twelve hours a day – and I hardly know whether I am on my head or my heels.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Osgood’s Boston publishing house had gone under in 1885, and he was by now acting as London agent of Harper &

Brothers, in place of J. F. Phayre.

2. Concerning The Guilty River, published in Harper's Handy Series (no. 105) at Christmas 1886, simultaneously with Arrowsmith's Christmas Annual. See [2620] to A. P. Watt of the previous day concerning WC's 'fight with Time' to finish his novella.

[2622] TO A. P. WATT, 6 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 197–198.

90. Gloucester Place. W | 6th Oct: 1886

My dear Watt,

I am, I hear, first to congratulate you on the birth of a son – not followed I hope by any other than the ordinary anxieties.<sup>1</sup>

In a few days I hope to send you the first half of the Christmas Book in proof (revised) for Harper. How hard I am working, no words can say. The patch is off my eye – and I hope to “pull through.”

In the meantime, Mr J.M. Farrar, representing the proprietors of a weekly journal called “Men and Women,” wishes me “to arrange with him for a story to appear in that paper.” It is needless to say that I refer him to you by this post. He interviewed me some time since for ‘The Evening News’ – and was very agreeable – and that is all I know on the subject. A specimen sent to me of “Men and Women” is not suggestive of enormous wealth possessed by the proprietors.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. A. P. Watt was already over fifty when his third son, William P. Watt, was born. All three sons were to work full time in the literary agency their father had established.

2. Men and Women: A Weekly Biographical and Social Journal appeared only between June 1886 and July 1887. Farrar was the author in 1884 of a brief biography of the American actress Mary Anderson. No agreement seems to have been reached with Farrar's impoverished periodical.

[2623] TO ANNE WYNNE, 7 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 506.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

7th Oct 1886

Yes – my angel – I thank you with all my heart for the photograph. But I wish the lights had not been so very light – and the shadows so very dark. It will be an excellent likeness of you when you are twenty five years old

You won't like this opinion – so let me retire and consider my ears boxed (which I richly deserve).

I am half way through my Christmas book – and they are going to print fifty thousand copies of that half to [del] save time. If I break down or die, [del] you will have to finish the story. I must say goodbye – the printers are waiting for me – I have no leisure time till the evening, and then I go to sleep.

Ever miserably, | WC

The [del] gout has gone. I hope you hate weak brandy and water. I do.

---

1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked ‘LONDON | OC 7 | 86’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked ‘HIERATICA’.

[2624] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 10 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Wolff Collection (1391). Published: Wolff, p. 271; BGLL, IV, pp. 198–199.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 10th October 1886

Dear Sirs,

I received a cheque for the sum which you kindly instructed Mr Osgood to pay me – and acknowledged the receipt to him, by request of his representative at his London address.<sup>1</sup>

You inform me that our arrangement for a royalty on the sales of certain novels of mine reached its limit in January 1880, and that the account has been so furnished as to include all copies sold up to the end of 1880.

But, looking at the statement of sales which you have been so good as to send to me, I observe that there are copies of each novel still on hand, dating from the year 1881. If you approve of it, I am perfectly willing to consider the former arrangements still in force, or to enter into a new arrangement. As your letter does not allude to this matter, I may be possibly making a mistake in referring to it on my side. If I have been led into error, I can only excuse it in one way. I supposed that what you considered right six years ago, you would consider right now.<sup>2</sup> While I am in the confessional I ought to add that I too forgot our old arrangement, until Mr Osgood asked me if something of the sort did not exist.

Believe me, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. Presumably the payment related to the account mentioned in the next paragraph. James R. Osgood was now acting as London agent of Harper's – see [2621] to him of 3 October 1886. The letter is endorsed by a member of staff at Harper's, 'Wilkie Collins | Oct. 10/86', with 'Answered per J. R. Osgood | Nov. 5/86. See his L-B [i.e. Letter-Book]' written above the printed address.

2. WC had fallen out with Harper's in 1878 over Canadian editions of his novels, and seems to have received no payment from the New York firm for the sales of their existing editions during much of the intervening period. WC reverts to the question of royalty payments from Harper's in [2647] to Osgood of 28 November 1886.

[2625] TO A. P. WATT, 10 OCTOBER 1886<sup>1</sup>

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 199.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
Sunday Oct. 10

My dear Watt,

I post today (in a big cover) the first portion of proofs of "The Guilty River" for the Harpers. I call it "portion" – not half – because the second half will be longer than the first, how much longer it is not yet easy to say.

I shall be delighted to see you, when you have time enough to look in here.

Ever yours WC

---

1. Dating from the calendar and the reference to The Guilty River.

[2626] TO A. P. WATT, 11 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 199–200.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
11th Oct 1886

My dear Watt,

Let us say the beginning of April.<sup>1</sup> The three thirds of the money, due on the production of three thirds of the Mss to be paid on the dates when the thirds are sent in by me – without reference to the date at which the story is published – i.e. if I send in the first third (say) in February, the first third of the money is to be paid in February – and so on.

Two volumes of the customary circulating library size will require 200 of my Mss pages.

The three volumes of “The Evil Genius” occupy 292 of my Mss pages. So this is a fair calculation

|                                          |                 |
|------------------------------------------|-----------------|
| First third of my mss will contain (say) | 67 mss pages    |
| Second third                             | 67 ” ”          |
| Third third                              | 66 ” ”   |
|                                          | 200             |
| 67 mss pages will contain                | 6: weekly parts |
| 67 ” ”                                   | 6 ” ”           |
| 66 ” ”                                   | 5 ” ”    |
|                                          | 17              |

The customary number of weekly parts occupied by a three volume novel amounts to 26. In all these cases the number here stated represent the least that I should supply.

Copyright – and every other right reserved as usual, except the serial right in Great Britain and Ireland which is sold for the £700.-.-.- There is no more that I can think of at present.

Ever yours WC

P.S. I ought to have told you today that my old friend who managed my literary business for me in Australia is dead.<sup>2</sup> So my interests are now as unreservedly as they ought to be in your hands. Considering the obstacles of distance and time, we might try the Australian market as soon as may be convenient to you. – Whether we come to an understanding with ‘Man and Woman’ or not – I shall (if all goes well with me) write the novel for serial publication somewhere, beginning with the first week in April 1887. It might perhaps be wise to wait until the Christmas book gets out to Australia and advertises me.<sup>3</sup> We shall publish (if all goes well again) in November. The question whether this would delay the negotiations too long, I leave to your discretion to decide. I don’t feel sure about it myself.

---

1. This and most of what follows is in reference to the plans for the serial publication of WC’s next novel of triple-decker length, eventually entitled The Legacy of Cain. The detail concerning the number and length of the instalments is on account of the complaints from Tillotson and his clients concerning short supply in the case of The Evil Genius. The Legacy of Cain was also eventually to be syndicated by Tillotson, rather than serialised in Man and Woman as contemplated in the postscript here.

2. Hugh Biers – see also [2596] to Wybert Reeve, 29 July 1886.

3. Referring to The Guilty River.

[2627] TO FRANK ARCHER, 12 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 311; BGLL, IV, pp. 200–201, amended A&C7, pp. 2 0.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

12th Oct: 1886

My dear Archer,

I too am disappointed. But I have had a very kind letter about it from Arrowsmith (an excellent man) which leaves no doubt that he really tried to see his way to publishing the story, and found that it was not to be done. You are I think quite right to propose sending to him a line of thanks. His letter to you merits that acknowledgement.<sup>3</sup>

It is not easy to advise you about the future – except that I am against destroying the story. I suggest putting it away – and looking at it again (with Arrowsmith’s letter in your hand) after an interval.<sup>4</sup> Also, my own idea is that the play seems likely to offer the brightest immediate prospect. First, because you have in this case stage experience to help you. Secondly, because there is not the same terrible overflow of production in the drama which there is certainly in fiction – and in that account the field seems to be more at your disposal. As to the obstacles they seem to me to be – for the present – about equal in either case.

If you have any idea for a short story, send me an outline or scenario of it, after this month – and I shall hope to be free to look it over. At present, I am still hard at work on my Christmas book<sup>5</sup> – and, woe is me, working against time. But the shade is off my eye, and, though I am feeling weary, I hope to get through my work in (say) three weeks more

Ever truly yours | WC

-
1. Directed to ‘Frank Archer Eqr | 21. Baker Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 7| OC 13 | 86 | 66’, with ‘28’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.
  2. With address ranged right and WC’s monogram ranged left.
  3. Arrowsmith wrote to Archer on 5 October asking for more time, and then responded on 11 October (Archer Archive):

I have now read your Ms. and regret I do not see my way to publishing it on my own account. In the first place it is not long enough to issue in book form and yet it is too long for the plot: it reads very well and would no doubt dramatise very well but, if you don’t mind my saying so, there are some inconsistencies in it. For instance does it not strike you that the servant Heywood is rather dragged in and then sent about her business just a little bit too much at the right moment? Other things strike me but I don’t like to say more.

Believe me you come with such a recommendation (from my friend Wilkie Collins) that I should have been only too glad if I could have seen my way to have undertaken the work. Ms. by this post.

Faithfully yrs | J W Arrowsmith.

Given the strength of Arrowsmith’s criticism it is odd that WC recommended Archer so highly. Archer did write a letter of thanks on 13 October, saying ‘your judgement in my story is, I fear, too correct’ (copy in Archer Archive).

4. The story ‘The Monogram’ was never published and Archer did not destroy it. He later sent it to other publishers including Routledge (declined 5 December 1887), Dicks (declined 27 March 1888), and Cassell’s Saturday Journal (declined 12 September 1888). The 177 page manuscript is intact in brown paper wrappers with Cassell’s Book Post label and stamps (Archer Archive).

5. The Guilty River – see the similar remarks to A.P. Watt [2622] 6 October 1886. Robinson introduces this sentence and the next – all he published – as follows: ‘It was a rushed job from the start. He did not begin writing until September, and on October 12th he told Archer ...’.

[2628] TO ANNE WYNNE, 14 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 507.

Savage Gardens<sup>2</sup> | 14 Oct 1886

Hush! My angel. Don’t mention it. I am in hiding at the above address. Your last photograph has been the cause of my dipping my hands in human gore. I have felt much pleasure in murdering two persons – 1st the miscreant who made that frightful dint (or notch) on the top of your head, exactly in the middle (see photograph). 2<sup>ndly</sup>, the still more merciless enemy who has deprived you of your waist, and has so [del] hunched your clothes up about your back that it looks like a bundle instead of a back (see photograph again). And I was the more angered, and the readier to murder, because the face in this last portrait is, beyond all comparison, the best that has been [del] done – soft, and young, and pretty, and possessing the right light and shade. And then to go and dent your head, and make your figure look like a bundle of old clothes. Look at it! Swear at it! God bless you. I remain,

The Modern Cain

– and go back to “The Guilty River”. There’s a title! And such a story, if I am not hanged before I finish it.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked ‘LONDON. W. | OC14 | 86’.
  2. A fictitious address, in keeping with the homicidal theme of the letter.
  3. The story was not in fact completed until around 4 November; see [2638] to A.P. Watt, 8 November 1886.

[2629] TO A. P. WATT, 17 OCTOBER 1886<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 201.

Sunday eve. | Oct: 17

My dear Watt

Let me snatch a moment, and the first bit of paper I can find, to thank you for kindly sending me the “Good Words” and “Health”<sup>2</sup>

“Good Words” staggered me the moment I opened it. A frontispiece illustration represents two gentleman in top boots, talking – and under it is this extract from the book illustrated: “I want her, and I mean to have her.” And this is a virtuous publication! What can I write that will be vicious enough for “Good Words”?

The illustrations are good in many cases – but not equal to the fine art of “The English Illustrated Magazine”. But a wonderful sixpenceworth. I have tried to read the opening story – oh, dear! dear!

“Health” is full of information – and full of variety. Very well done indeed – a credit to the publishers(!)

I am going to confer with Arrowsmith about our publication day.<sup>3</sup> We must give them ten days’ notice in the U.S.A. – and send shorter instalments of proofs to help them in the printing. You shall hear of the date – so as to write as soon as possible.

Good night. I am going to bed early – in the hope of a long spell of work tomorrow.

Ever yours WC

---

1. Dating from the reference to Arrowsmith.

2. Watt sends WC copies of the evangelical monthly miscellany Good Words (1860– 1906) and Health: A Weekly Journal of Sanitary Science (1883–1917).

3. J. W. Arrowsmith (d. 1913), the Bristol publisher of Arrowsmith’s Christmas Annual, which carried The Guilty River.

[2630] TO E. A. BUCK, 22 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: B&C, II, pp. 525–526.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 22nd Oct: 1886

In a tearing hurry<sup>1</sup>

My dear Buck,

Your kind letter received with joy, and the dates duly noted. Three weeks since I should have /asked/ leave to contribute my epitaph, in place of the customary story – and should have sent for the cremation society to consider the form of my Urn. Now I may hope to send you my story as usual.<sup>2</sup> Here is a chapter in my autobiography:

1886 | August: cruising at sea, and wishing we had Buck and Son on board.

September: In a darkened room. The gout in my right eye. The tortures of the damned. An engagement to write a /new/ Christmas Book, to be ready by October 30th.

October: Not dead – not blind – fastened to my desk to make up for [del] lost time. With an extra week’s allowance I hope to do it, and to be ready for you. If I break down, the best of friends and doctors (F. Carr Beard) shall telegraph. No news is [del] good news. Love to you and Harry – printers waiting – pen ink (beastly ink as you see) and paper waiting. Goodbye.

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

You invent everything in the U.S. Have you /invented ink/ ~~ink~~ that will bear the immediate application of blotting paper – and not look like this ink?<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Written above the address on WC’s printed paper.

2. ‘An Old Maid’s Husband’, WC’s 1886 Christmas story for Edward Buck’s Spirit of the Times (published 25 December, pp. 651–654); also appearing in Belgravia, January 1887; reprinted as ‘Miss Dulane and My Lord’ in Little Novels (1887).

3. WC adds the postscript vertically down the left margin on the opening page of the letter. The ink is rather blotched.

[2631] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 27 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope,<sup>1</sup> and newspaper cutting.<sup>2</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 313; BGLL, IV, p. 202.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Oct: 27th | 1886

Dear Sirs,

I am ashamed to have forgotten the invoice – for which I enclose my cheque (£8.9.-).<sup>3</sup>

In the earlier autumn I was sailing. My cruise was followed by another attack of gout in the eye from which I have just recovered. As for Champagne, to mention it is a misdemeanor.

My forgetfulness is now, I hope, excused.

Vy truly Yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co

---

1. Directed ‘Messrs Beecheno, Yaxley & Co | 135. Minories | E.’, postmarked on the following day.

2. Affixed to the otherwise blank third page of the folding notepaper is a newspaper cutting announcing WC’s ‘NEW NOVEL | THE EVIL GENIUS ... 3 vols. At every library ...’, followed by a second press cutting: ‘Recent illness, from which he has now recovered, has obliged Mr. Wilkie Collins to defer for a short time the publication of his new story for Arrowsmith’s Christmas Annual (1886) called “The Guilty River.” Early in November it is hoped that the Annual will be in the hands of the public’, with the hand-written addition in ink: ‘Daily News | Oct. 29th 1886’.

3. Beneath the newspaper cutting is a pencil note in an unknown hand: ‘Receipt only sent by JLP.C 28/ 10/86 | This note not answered by JLP.C’.

[2632] TO A. P. WATT, 27 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 202–203.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Wednesday 27th Oct: 1886

My dear Watt,

Your kind letter brings another packet of proofs on you<sup>1</sup> – duplicate (complete so far) to go by tomorrow’s mail, now despatched under another cover. Instead of troubling you again, I would have sent them straight to Harpers’ London office – but my domestic establishment is passing through a “crisis.” The faithful George, and one old woman (who would frighten away you and other friends if she answered the door) alone remain to me.<sup>2</sup> That is my sad excuse.

Ever yours | WC

Don’t think of answering this yourself – only tell the clerk to send a Mem: saying, “Duplicates received.”

---

1. Of The Guilty River.

2. Probably WC’s elderly manservant George Wells, who, according to the unreliable witness of Hall Caine, died after drinking a glass of WC’s laudanum (see Caine, p. 339). The elderly female servant remains unidentified.

[2633] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 30 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Wolff Collection (1354b). Published: Wolff, p. 259; BGLL, IV, p. 203.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Saturday. 30th October 1886

Dear Sirs,

Our British Saturday half holiday shuts up the offices, my agent’s office included, at two or three o’clock. But the mail to New York waits for me until 6 this evening when our post-letters are collected. This is one reason why I send some more revises direct.

Another reason is that I can now announce our publication day. We publish “The Guilty River” on Monday, 15th November next. As fast as the remaining chapters of the story are written, they shall be sent in proof.<sup>1</sup> If you will set up proofs as fast as they come, the simultaneous publication will be assured. Illness has thrown me back, or there would have been no hurry.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Harper & Brothers

---

1. See [2637] to Harper's of 6 November 1886. The letter has been annotated (presumably in New York) on the otherwise blank third page, opposite the reference to The Guilty River, which is flagged with a double line: 'With this enclosed pp. 115 – to long slip 113. | Nov. 9'.

[2634] TO A. P. WATT, 30 OCTOBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 204

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th Oct 1886

My dear Watt,

Here is a letter which speaks for itself.<sup>1</sup> I have written to Messrs Maxwell to say that I "request you to give it your early attention". Enclosed is a memorandum of conditions which may I hope be of some little use.<sup>2</sup>

My new revises were not ready today to reach you before your Saturday closing – so I have sent them direct to Harpers in New York, and have also told them that we publish on Monday 15th November next. It will be a "tight fit" so far as I am concerned – but I must pull through if I can. When I send you the duplicates kindly repeat the announcement of the day of publication, in case of accidents<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours WC

---

1. Bound in at the end of the second Pembroke volume, is the letter from J. & R. Maxwell, sent to WC, care of Chatto & Windus, and dated 27 October 1886. It requests a story of around 160 pages 'for a new series of 1/- novels we propose issuing', mentioning M. E. Braddon's 'Cut by the County' as the first in the series. Braddon was married to John Maxwell, the father by an earlier marriage of John and Robert Maxwell, who took over his publishing business in the mid 1880s.

2. A memorandum is also to be found in the Pembroke volume, following [2641] from WC to Watt of 10 November 1886. It reads:

Questions: –

1. At what price is it proposed to sell novels published in this series?
2. What terms do they offer to W.C.?
3. When do they want the MSS?

==

W.C. as usual reserves copyright, and sells a lease of the book for a term agreed on

Are translation and reprints to be purchased as well as the lease of the book? Or are they to be left to W.C.?

N.B. If this is a new shilling or two shilling series, I present my thanks and excuses. If five shillings is to be the price, then I am ready to be tempted

3. Referring to The Guilty River.

[2635] TO A. P. WATT, 2 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Pembroke, telegram.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 205.

Watt 34 Paternoster Row | By mail of Thursday next<sup>2</sup> | Collins

---

1. Handed in at the Blandford St West office at 12/1 PM, date stamped '2 NO | 86'.

2. Presumably referring to the sending of the last of the copy of The Guilty River. WC writes on a Tuesday.

[2636] TO SIR HENRY THOMPSON,<sup>1</sup> 3 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 205.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd Novr 1886

Dear Sir Henry Thompson,

I am indeed sorry not to be one of the guests at the Octave. My health has obliged me to give up dining out entirely. For some years, I have seen nothing of “Society” and have lived the life of a hermit.

Pray accept my thanks and my excuses and believe me

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Sir Henry Thompson | &c &c &c

---

1. Sir Henry Thompson (1820–1904: ODNB), surgeon and painter who exhibited at the Royal Academy 1865–85. From 1872 he gave ‘Octaves’ – ‘dinner of 8 courses for 8 guests at 8 o’clock’ (see Haight, VII, p. 32 n.3).

[2637] TO HARPER & BROTHERS, 6 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 5/2), formerly laid in The Guilty River (New York: Harper, 1886). Published: Parrish & Miller, p. 122; BGLL, IV, pp. 205–206.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Saturday 6th November 1886

Dear Sirs,

My English publisher (Mr Arrowsmith of Bristol) will send to you the duplicates of “The Guilty River,” to the end, by today’s mail. I hope they will reach you safely, and that you may be able to reprint (as I have ventured to suggest in telegraphing to you) from the duplicates.<sup>1</sup>

I must repeat the expression of my regret that illness has been the cause of hurry – as unwelcome to you as to me. The penalty I have paid is working twelve hours a day for the last week.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Harper Brothers [sic]

---

1. Above the printed address is added in what is presumably the hand of an employee of Harper’s: ‘Duplicates rec<sup>d</sup>. Nov. 15, at the same time as ms’.

[2638] TO A. P. WATT, 8 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 206.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1886

My dear Watt,

It has been so close a shave that there was no time for me to receive the duplicate proofs, to the end of the story, from Bristol, on Saturday last. Mr Arrowsmith sent them to Messrs Harper, complete to the end of the story<sup>1</sup> – through the Bristol post office – by Saturday’s mail (6th Novr) to New York. The preceding proofs, sent by mail of Nov 4, were only got away in time, by sending George<sup>2</sup> to Vere Street, and paying the late postage, at 7.p.m. This will give you some idea of the work. I am horribly tired – and now here is the other short story for “The Spirit of the Times” waiting for me.<sup>3</sup> But I have got two or three days rest before me, and I shall be delighted to see you. If you can drop me a line to say what day – do – and I shall be sure of not going out at our usual time. Come! and the sooner the better.

Ever yours WC

Better say – as to the enclosed letter<sup>4</sup> – that I cannot as yet pledge myself, in justice to my other engagements. Don’t you think so?

---

1. The Guilty River.

2. On 'George', see the notes to [2632] to Watt [2632] of 27 October 1886.

3. The first mention of the story that became 'An Old Maid's Husband', WC's 1886 Christmas story for Edward Buck's New York paper.

4. Unidentified, but presumably an offer of work.

[2639] TO FRANK ARCHER, 10 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, pp. 311–12. Published: Archer, pp. 282–3; BGLL, IV, pp. 206–207, amended A&C7, pp. 30–31.

10th Nov 1886 | 90. G. Pl.

My dear Archer,

Thank you for your friendly inquiries. I am like the old posting-horses in the old posting days. While I was whipped my pace was wonderful. Now we have got to our destination, my head hangs down, and my fore legs tremble.<sup>2</sup> But, considering that I was twelve hours a day at work, for the last week of my labours, I have no reason to complain of my constitution – though I was sixty two years old last birthday. "The School for Scandal" and "The Rivals" are still alive, and "Jim the Penman" has been a great success.<sup>3</sup> Moral: Don't be afraid of the 'ideotic' dirision of an audience,<sup>4</sup> – and think of the people who are sick of farces in three acts.

Ever yours | WC

"After Dark" and "The Queen of Hearts" contain my shorter and better stories. In the latter book, there is a story called "Mad Monkton" (written ages ago) which had the honour of keeping Scribe in a breathless condition. He prophesied all my later success from that little specimen, when I was presented to him in Paris.<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Initialled and directed to 'Frank Archer Eqr | 21. Baker Street | W.', postmarked recto 'LONDON W | 3 | NO 10 | 86 | 3', with 'WC 29' in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. WC had completed The Guilty River by 6 November 1886 – see [2637] to Harper's of that date.

3. The popular social comedy by Sir Charles L. Young – see [2547] to Edward Pigott, 3 April 1886. The play was prompted by the career of James Townsend Saward, a working barrister who also led a cheque-forging ring in London in the 1850s. Young's version made Jim a member of an international forgery ring.

4. WC clearly writes 'ideotic dirision' for 'idiotic derision', perhaps in reference to the reception of his own play Rank and Riches which was booed off the Adelphi stage in 1883; see Robinson (1951) for a description of the opening night fiasco (p. 305). Archer reveals that the specific reference here is to 'Her Face was Her Fortune', his own unsuccessful dramatic collaboration with Frederick W. Robinson (Archer pp. 274–275, 282). The manuscript of the three-act play True to Her Colours is in the Archer Archive.

5. The French dramatist Eugène Scribe (1791–1861) – see [2535] to de Heussey, 15 March 1886.

[2640] TO FREDERICK G. KITTON, 10 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 207–208.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th November 1886

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for the addition which you have been so kind as to make to my collection of interesting portraits and prints.<sup>1</sup>

I must also beg you to accept my excuses for this late acknowledgment of your gift. A heavy increase in my customary occupation has hindered me in keeping up with the demands of a large correspondence.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Frederick G. Kitton Egre

---

1. The picture sent by Kitton has not been traced, though it may relate to his work on Dickens by Pen and Pencil (1890)

– see [[2598] to him of 2 August 1886.

2. The rush to complete The Guilty River – see [2638] to A. P. Watt of 8 November 1886.

[2641] TO A. P. WATT, 10 NOVEMBER 1886<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 208.

10th Nov<sup>o</sup>

Here is a specimen of the muddled state of my head! I found the enclosed, put into a drawer, with heaps of letters received – and I have lost Messrs Maxwell's address.<sup>2</sup> Will you kindly supply it? and post me with your letters?

Delighted to see you tomorrow – if you can get here conveniently

---

1. The letter has no address, salutation, valediction or signature, but is bound in with the other letters to Watt at Pembroke, and the reference to the negotiations with J. & R. Maxwell clearly assigns it to 1886.

2. Presumably a brief reply to the letter from J. & R. Maxwell of 27 October 1886 (see [2634] to Watt of 30 October 1886).

[2642] TO A. P. WATT, 12 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 208.

12th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1886

My dear Watt,

I hope your absence from the office is only occasioned by the sort of feverish cold which everybody seems to be feeling in this more than November weather. Don't trouble to write if my conjecture is the right one. No news shall be good news until I see you again as well as ever.

Ever yours WC

Did I – or did I not – tell you that I am going to begin this other Christmas story for New York? I hope to send the title by tomorrow's mail.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. No letter has been traced from WC to Watt on the following day. The story was to be called 'An Old Maid's Husband' – see [2638] to Watt of 8 November 1886.

[2643] TO MARY HAYNE, 13 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Duke. Extract: Moore, p. 27. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 209.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 13th November 1886

My dear Mrs Hayne,

It is not possible for me to tell you how shocked and how grieved I was, when I opened your letter, and read the first lines which told me that your husband's silence – as my dear and welcome correspondent – was the silence of death.<sup>1</sup>

The first letter that I received from him assured me that I had to thank my books for a newly-found friend<sup>2</sup> – in every highest sense of the word, a man who had not only delighted me, but had honoured me by the expression of his sympathy. As our correspondence advanced – as I read his poems, as I saw him in his portrait<sup>3</sup> – a time came when I knew him more intimately, and valued him more truly (although thousands of miles separated us) than I have known and valued some other men, personally familiar to me in the customary intercourse of life. In some degree at least, dear Mrs Hayne, I may claim to feel for you and for your son with the heartfelt sorrow of a faithful friend. How little this seems to say! And yet, that little is all!

Let me thank you for the enclosures – read with an interest which you and your son will well understand. With love to you and to him.

Believe me, dear Mrs Hayne, | most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Wife of the South Carolina poet, Paul Hamilton Hayne. When WC had written to him on 23 September 1886 ([2617]), Hayne had already died of a stroke, on 6 July 1886.
2. See [2304] to Hayne of 3 May 1884.
3. Probably the photograph in Poems, Complete Edition (Boston: D. Lothrop & Co., 1882), which Hayne had sent to WC in July 1884 and which was in his library on his death (Baker 2002, p. 116). WC reciprocated with a portrait by Sarony. See [2337] to Hayne, 16 July 1884.

[2644] TO A. P. WATT, 21 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 209–210.

21st Novr 1886

My dear Watt,

I ought to have shown you the enclosed letter when you were here<sup>1</sup> – but my brains were (and are still) so addled with work that I don't "know which end of me is uppermost." You will see that we have time before us in the matter of Messrs Maxwell, before we need decide.

Mr Osgood is coming to me on Tuesday to say something on behalf of the Harpers – about the "royalties" on my books in U.S.A. I suppose.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I hope to send the Buck-story to New York in a week's time<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Not bound in the volumes at Pembroke, but presumably a further communication from J. & R. Maxwell.
2. James R. Osgood, Harper's London agent after J. F. Phayre.
3. 'An Old Maid's Husband'.

[2645] TO FRANK ARCHER, 21 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 312; BGLL IV, p. 210 (dated [22] November 1886). Published: A&C7, pp. 31–32.

21st Nov 1886

My dear Archer,

I have read the letter in the Athenaeum with delight.<sup>2</sup> The good man himself was here on Tuesday last to report what he had done in the way of launching "The Guilty River".<sup>3</sup> He likes the story and believes in it – and he has advertised by posters, shop cards, newspapers – and by a hundred "Sandwich Men" promenading London with "Guilty River" all over them – and this for a shilling book! A man in ten thousand – who deserves and more than deserves everything the "Novelist" has said of him. We had sold 20,000 copies between Monday and Friday last. If we can "git along" at that rate, we shall do.

I have a last arrear of other work to get rid of before the end of this month – and then the pen and the brain shall rest together.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Frank Archer Eqr | 21. Baker Street | W.', postmarked recto 'LONDON W | 7 | NO 22 | 86 | 72', with 'WC 30' in another hand in pencil on the recto.
2. See the letter headed 'A Latter-Day Miracle', dated 3 November 1886, and signed 'A Novelist', which appeared in the Athenaeum 3081 (13 November 1886), pp. 634–635. The letter praised the Bristol publisher J.W. Arrowsmith for sending the author of a shilling shocker a cheque for £100, though under the terms of the contract he and his collaborator were owed less than £40 in royalties. The anonymous novelist in question must be Grant Allen, who co-authored Kalees' Shrine with May Cotes, published as Bristol Library no. 11 in March 1886, the only collaboration that fits the timescale – see Topp, Vol VIII, p. 221.
3. WC writes on a Sunday, so Arrowsmith must have called on Tuesday, 16 November, by which time The Guilty River had clearly been published.
4. The short story 'An Old Maid's Husband', published in The Spirit of the Times, New York, Christmas 1886, and in Belgravia, January 1887. See [2648] to Andrew Chatto, 4 December 1886.

[3145] TO CHARLES KENT, 24 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Unknown. On sale: Sotheby's (17 December 2008, LO8411, Lot 40).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C5, pp. 17–18 (misdated 24 December 1886).

24th Nov 1886

My dear Kent,

Literally a word to say that I shall be delighted to see you on Tuesday next.<sup>2</sup> You have just hit the day when I hope to have shaken off all arrears of work.<sup>3</sup> Vy glad you like The Guilty River.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yrs affly WC<sup>5</sup>

---

1. Bound into an extra-illustrated edition of John Forster, The Life of Charles Dickens, 1872–1874, Vol.,III, Pt. 2, p. 318. With an envelope addressed to 'Charles Kent Esqr. | 1. Campden Grove | Kensington | W.' and postmarked 'NOV 24 86'.

2. WC writes on a Wednesday, so the following Tuesday is 30 November.

3. In fact WC was still exhausted the following week – see [2648] to Chatto, 4 December 1886.

4. The Guilty River had just been published by Arrowsmith as a Christmas story, probably on 15 November.

5. The valediction is written up the left-hand side of the paper. The whole letter shows signs of great haste.

[2646] TO F. C. BEARD, 26 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15). Published: B&C, II, p. 526.

Friday evng 26th Novr 1886

My dear Frank,

I am obliged again to send to hear about you, instead of coming myself. Between the weather and the work, I am so utterly worn out that I can hardly cross the room. On Sunday I hope to have done at last.<sup>1</sup> In the meantime, I am so eager for better news that I send George with a this. A verbal message of course – one word – “Better.”

Always affly yours | WC

---

1. Referring to the composition of 'An Old Maid's Husband' for the New York Spirit of the Times.

[2647] TO JAMES R. OSGOOD, 28 NOVEMBER 1886

MS: Wolff Collection (1392). Published: Wolff, pp. 271–272; BGLL, IV, pp. 210–211.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday ~~Oct~~: Nov | 28th 1886

Dear Mr Osgood,

I must begin by asking you to excuse a blunder of mine. On looking at Mr Watt's note, I find that Mr Tillotson has bought the serial right of publishing my next novel, not only in Great Britain and the British Colonies, but in the United States as well. If Messrs Harper feel disposed to publish the story in book-form, simultaneously with its publication in book form here, I shall be happy to send them the necessary information, and to wait their offer in the first place.<sup>1</sup>

The “account” of the sales by Messrs Harper is enclosed. You will see that it extends from October 1878 to the New Year of 1881.<sup>2</sup>

If no more copies have been sold since January 1st 1881, I have no more to say, in that case.

But if more copies have been sold during the last five years and if under those circumstances, more are likely to be sold in the future, am I to understand that my share in the profits ceases with the cessation of the royalty agreement, and with the possible transfer of the books and stock to some other publishing house? I have, it is needless to say, no complaint to make – for I am indebted to Messrs Harper’s liberal feeling in the matter of having received any profit at all. But, if the answer to my question is Yes – then, again, I have nothing to ~~pre~~ more to say.<sup>3</sup>

In any case, the transaction is, in a pecuniary sense, such a very small one that I ought to apologise for troubling you and Messrs Harper with any further correspondence on the matter.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Many thanks for the copy of Messrs Harper’s letter. The “competing editions” to which they allude have been published without my knowledge – and without my leave.<sup>4</sup>

---

1. The Legacy of Cain was syndicated by Tillotson’s in the Leigh Journal and Times, 17 February–29 June 1888, and other British provincial newspapers; it also seems to have appeared in a number of American newspapers – see Law, pp. 238–239. Harper’s issued a single-volume edition in early July 1888, well before the English three-volume edition from Chatto & Windus.

2. See [2624] to Harper & Brothers of 10 October 1886.

3. Harper & Brothers seem in fact to have paid no further royalties – see [2666] to A. P. Watt of 5 January 1887.

4. Referring to the many American pirated versions of WC’s fiction in the United States, which were serious rivals to Harper’s authorized editions. The Legacy of Cain, for example, also appeared in New York in Lovell’s Library (no. 1176), probably just before the Harper edition – see Gasson, p. 93.

[2648] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 4 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 211–212.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Saturday Decr 4th | 1886

My dear Chatto,

Here is the new (short) story.<sup>1</sup>

I am ashamed to send you such an original MS as this. But I have been writing in such a hell of hurry that my copyist has only had time to get ready for the American market – and I am so dead tired that I can hardly sign myself

Ever yours | WC

---

1. ‘An Old Maid’s Husband’, published in Britain in Belgravia in January 1887, as well as in New York at Christmas 1886 in the Spirit of the Times; reprinted as ‘Miss Dulane and My Lord’ in Little Novels (1887).

[3169] TO JAMES F. GLUCK,<sup>1</sup> 7 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Private. Published: A&C6, pp. 15–16.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 7th December 1886

My dear Sir,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter (dated 22nd November last) which reached me a few days since. Let me also thank you for paying me the compliment of placing my portrait in front of my work.<sup>2</sup> In making my offering to your library, I add one more to my many pleasant associations with Buffalo at the time of my visit to the United States.

Post office authorities do occasionally commit blunders – very few blunders, all things considered. That I failed to receive your first letter is due, beyond all doubt, to some misadventure of this sort.

Believe me, my dear sir, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Mr James F. Gluck

1. James Fraser Gluck (1852–97), curator of the Buffalo and Erie County Public Library, New York.
2. The MS of The Two Destinies which WC had donated to the library. See his letters to Gluck, [2537] of 16 March 1886 and [2579] of 24 June 1886.

[2649] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 7 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5), envelope in Wolff Collection.<sup>1</sup> Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, pp. 314–315; BGLL, IV, pp. 212–213.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th December 1886

My dear Fred,

I have received a notice from the Athenaeum Club that you are likely to be brought forward at next year's Ballot – an interval of 15 years having elapsed since you were proposed!

I ought also to add that your proposer K.D. Hodgson is now “the late” Mr Hodgson.<sup>2</sup>

If you decide to stand for election, you must find another proposer, one month before the day of Ballot. Ballots begin in February next – and go on through each succeeding month to July. You will put the new proposer's name (as I suppose) on the official extract from the Candidates' Book – and send it (with correction of the wrong address) to the secretary with your signature attached. I enclose the extract by an afterthought. The effort of interpreting the Rules, having ended in imbecility – temporary, let me hope.<sup>3</sup>

If you decide to withdraw your name from the Candidates' book, before the election, you have only to write to me to that effect, and I will send your letter to the Secretary.

This is all I can make out from the rules of the Club (sent to me). For years past I have not entered the doors of the Athenaeum. The ghosts of my dead friends haunt every room – and I have not the courage to face them.

Ever yours | WC

I ought to have written to you a week since – But need I say it? Of course, I have been ill. Come here and consult, if I can help you in any way.

-
1. Signed and directed to ‘Frederick Lehmann Esqre | 15. Berkeley Square | W.’, postmarked as dated.
  2. Referring to Kirkman Daniel Hodgson (1814–79), former governor of the Bank of England. See [2678] to Lehmann of 21 February 1887.
  3. The last two sentences of the paragraph are a later marginal insertion.

[2650] TO A. P. WATT, 7 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 213.

Tuesday Dec<sup>er</sup> 7th /86

My dear Watt,

Why did you not get a medical certificate to say that you were an invalid immersed in the Bath waters? I am indignant when I hear of that cruel interruption to a pleasant holiday. Never mind! In time you will be a miserable old creature like me – exempted from jury service when you have become perfectly imbecile on turning the corner of 60 years old.

I am paying the penalty of my hard work – wretchedly weak – sleeping badly – and so on. But always glad to see you when you can come.

Ever yours WC

The copy went to Chatto on Saturday last<sup>1</sup>

-
1. See [2648] to Andrew Chatto of 4 December.

[2651] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 10 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Summary: B&C, II, p. 526. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 213–214.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th Decr 1886

My dear Ted,

Of course, Wednesday, 22nd of this month – if Henry is not engaged.<sup>1</sup> Caroline has written to tell him of the change – and has asked him to answer. If Yes is the reply, you will hear no more – and silence means 22nd at 7. If he cannot come on the 22nd he is then asked to name the first convenient day afterwards, and then you shall hear from me again. Try and keep yourself free until we hear from Henry – for I should be sorry indeed if we lost you through the change

I am getting better thank you – but certain symptoms in the neighbourhood of the heart, warn me to remember for the future that I am too old for writing against time at the rate of twelve hours a day. There is some damnable perversity in me that wont feel old, after years of ill health. I have not even learnt to be discreet. “God help us all, God help me too, I am – God knows as helpless as the devil can wish.” So says Byron.<sup>2</sup> So says,

Yours ever afftly | WC

I was truly glad to hear that you liked “The Guilty River”.

---

1. Henry Pigott, Edward’s nephew.

2. ‘God help us all! God help me too! I am, | God knows, as helpless as the devil can wish’, The Vision of Judgement (1822), stanza XV.

[2652] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, [11] DECEMBER 1886<sup>1</sup>

MS: Unknown. Photocopy: Princeton University Library (Lehmann Family Papers, CO746, Box 121), our copy text. Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 316 (dated 12 December 1886); BGLL, IV, p. 214.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday evening – which is it? 12th? or 19th? In either case, my dear Fred, how unlucky! On every fairly fine day I am obliged to get what air and exercise I can before sundown. As to the night, no rules would stop me. But, at this time of year, I have twice tried my luck after dark – and twice the night air has driven me back with the devil’s red-hot teeth gnawing at some little bundle of nerves, between my heart and my chest, which have been all out of gear for months past.

What are you going to do next Sunday? If you are in town, let me come to you – as early as twelve o’clock, if you have engagements in the afternoon. Let me have an hour with you in the library. One line to tell me what hour will do – and I am, as they say among the old-fashioned people, “yours to command”.

WC

My best love when you write to Cannes. Tell me their address, and I will send them a little Christmas book that I have been writing<sup>2</sup> – just to show that the old wreck has not foundered yet.

---

1. The dating is a best guess, based in part on the limitations of the Sunday postal service. WC has clearly just received a note from Lehmann inviting him to dine ‘on Sunday’, the date unspecified. [2653] to Lehmann of 14 December 1886 is clearly a response to a renewed invitation to lunch on Saturday 18 December.

2. The Guilty River, the Arrowsmith Christmas annual for 1886 – to be sent to Nina Lehmann and the children on holiday in Cannes.

[2653] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 14 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 215.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14th Decr 1886

My dear Fred,

Thank you for your letter. Saturday next at 1.30 – with the greatest pleasure.

When my Fred mentions oysters – he never was more happily inspired in his life. And when I add that I am allowed to drink two glasses of dry Champagne – “now, and then” – I offer a statement which does equal honour to my doctor and myself.

Ever yours | WC

[2654] TO A. P. WATT, 15 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 527. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 215–216.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15th Decr 1886

My dear Watt,

A word to thank you for “King Solomon’s Mines” – which reached me this morning, before I had got out of bed. When I saw the “bloody” map (oh I am not swearing!) which decorates the beginning of the book – I foresaw a day’s delight, in spite of the weather.<sup>1</sup> More, when I have read the story.<sup>2</sup>

My congratulations on your “flitting” to Paternoster Square. I shall certainly, I hope, see the new offices – and make my bow, at the same time, to your neighbour, the finest church in the world (externally speaking).<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Oh, I forgot something yesterday – like you. Will you let me know the date on which you received the last letter from those “Youth’s Companion” people?<sup>4</sup> They have asked me to write for them again – and in saying No, I want to say Why. Do they treat other Englishmen as they have treated us? They are not Watt’s “Companion” or Collins’s “Companion”. To which they might answer: Neither Watt nor Collins are “Youths.”

---

1. Watt sends WC a copy of H. Rider Haggard’s best-selling adventure novel, first published in one volume from Cassell in 1885 (found in WC’s library, Baker 2002, p. 114). Opposite the title page there was a folded paper map, intended to reflect that in the story written in blood on a scrap of linen.

2. See [2665] to Watt of 4 January 1887.

3. A. P. Watt’s Literary Agency had just moved up the road from 34 Paternoster Row to 2 Paternoster Square, both addresses being adjacent to St Paul’s Cathedral.

4. Perry Mason & Co. of Boston – see [2612] to Watt of 14 September 1886 for the cause of his annoyance.

[2655] TO A. P. WATT, 19 DECEMBER 1886<sup>1</sup>

MS: Pembroke.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 216.

Sunday 19 Dec

My dear Watt,

Just a word to say that I shall be delighted to see you tomorrow (Monday). Yesterday – when I unluckily missed you – I was lunching with an old friend whom I had not seen for years.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

In great haste

---

1. Dating from the calendar.

2. Bound out of order in the volumes at Pembroke after [2380] to Watt of 17 December 1884.

3. Frederick Lehmann – see [2652] and [2653] to him of 11 and 14 December 1886.

[2656] TO MARIE DICKENS,<sup>1</sup> 21 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Canterbury (with MS of No Name). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 216.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st December 1886

Dear Mrs Henry Dickens,

Let me trust to the kindness which has invited me to dinner to accept the miserable excuse of ill health if I am absent from your pleasant table. For months past, neuralgic troubles have forbidden me to encounter the night air. I must submit to my disappointment as patiently as I can – and I must hope that Sunday’s weather will let me pay my visit in the afternoon.

With many thanks, believe me, | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Marie Thérèse Louise Roche (1851–1940), granddaughter of the pianist Ignaz Moscheles and niece of the painter Felix Moscheles. She married CD’s son, Henry Fielding Dickens (1849–1933), on 25 September 1876.

[2657] TO A. P. WATT, 21 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 217.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st Dec 1886

My dear Watt,

Under another cover, I send back the two agreements:<sup>1</sup>

In the new agreement:

1st Clause. “Weekly newspapers” added – see the old agreement.

3rd Clause: “Not later than January 1888”, added, so as to secure first publication in that month, at the latest.

9th Clause cut out.

10th Clause [del] cash payments, on the plan of the old agreement. But the three deliveries of the Mss are so timed as to occur on the dates at which the proposed bills would fall due. The fourth payment at 4 months date – as in the old agreement.

I should like to be free to publish in book form in September 1888 – if I saw a good opening – but I don’t insist on this of course.

Ever yours | WC

I have been interrupted by visitors.

Tomorrow, I will write about “King Solomon”.<sup>2</sup> Arrears of correspondence are in my way today.

---

1. As the correspondence from W. F. Tillotson in the Berg Collection makes clear, this refers to different drafts of the agreement with Tillotson’s for the serial publication of The Legacy of Cain, which appeared in the newspapers from February 1888 and in volume form in November of the same year.

2. WC in fact only returns to Haggard’s novel in [2665] to Watt of 4 January 1887.

[2658] TO WILLIAM H. RIDEING,<sup>1</sup> 22 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 217–218.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd December 1886

Dear Mr Rideing,

This otherwise inexcusably late acknowledgment of your kind letter has one claim on your indulgence. I have been suffering from illness – precious time has been lost in consequence – literary engagements in arrear have claimed all my time as soon as I could attend to them – and my correspondence has been inevitably neglected. There is my plea for pardon.

Messrs Perry Mason & Co have made it – no doubt unintentionally – not at all easy for me to write for them again.<sup>2</sup> They exercise the right of deciding on the date at which they publish my contributions in the United States – and my representative, Mr Watt, has stipulated that they shall give me sufficient notice of that date to enable me to publish simultaneously in an English periodical, so as to preserve my copyright here under the English law. In the case of my first story, and again in the case of my second story, this notice only reached Mr Watt a few days before the date of your publications in the U.S. It is quite needless to remind you that simultaneous publication in an English periodical is simply impossible, under these circumstances. We can only save my copyright by treating my short “circumstantial” stories as if they were books, and registering them at Stationers’ Hall. In all my experience of American publishers, I have never before been placed in such a difficulty as this – and I cannot consent to encounter that difficulty in the future. If Messrs Perry Mason & Co will follow the example of other American publishers, and arrange beforehand with me what the date of publication shall be on both sides of the Atlantic, I shall be happy to write for them again. In any other case, I can only thank you, and refrain from availing myself of your proposal.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me, very truly yours | Wilkie Collins
William H. Rideing Esqre

-
1. An Englishman on the staff of Daniel S. Ford’s Boston weekly family paper, the Youth’s Companion.
  2. On the conflict with Perry Mason & Co. over the dates of publication of WC’s three tales entitled ‘The Victims of Circumstances’, see Graham Law’s edition of the stories, Wilkie Collins Society, June 2002.
  3. In the event, WC wrote nothing further for the Youth’s Companion.

[2659] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 22 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/51). Published: B&C, II, pp. 527–528.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

London | 22nd December 1886

My dear Sebastian,

Besides being a thorough good friend, are you by any chance also a Wizard?

I have just written a little book.<sup>2</sup> Yesterday, I was making out a list – a small list of special friends to whom I proposed to send copies, and had put down your name. This led to an unspoken soliloquy. “Does [del] S. owe me a letter? or do I owe S. a letter? If it is my fault (and it well may be) that I have /heard/ nothing of him for some time – then I shall be ashamed to write – the book shall go first as a peace-offering, and my long-due letter shall follow at an auspicious moment.[”] Having arrived at this mean resolution, the servant interrupted me, bearing birds – the birds were canvas-back ducks – and the card was Sebastian’s card! Is this a coincidence? or a supernatural proceeding? I rather hope it is the latter, and that I shall see you at table today sitting opposite to me carving the duck – in the spirit – and drinking [del] not my champagne, but yours – the only good dry champagne I tasted when I was in Boston, Mass: In any case, you know that I am not unworthy of your delicious gift – and you know that I thank you in more than the ordinary sense of those much-abused words.

Here is an end of all that I have to say about myself. Will you write and tell me something about yourself? Are you still true to the Muse of Music? (I forget her Pagan name).<sup>3</sup> And do you still preserve your rosy complexion? And do you feel any older since we last met, twelve years ago? If I live until the 8th of January next I shall be 63 years of age. After that announcement, the sooner I take my leave the better.

Yours aftly | Wilkie Collins

I take this opportunity of writing to the firm about my insurances in U.S.A.

By the way, I assume that 20 West 26th Street means New York. Personally, as well as commercially you have done with Boston Mass – have you not?<sup>4</sup>

-
1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
  2. The Guilty River, published as Arrowsmith’s Christmas Annual.
  3. The Nine Muses were Greek goddesses, the daughters of Zeus and Mnemosyne; Euterpe was the muse of music.

4. WC's 1885 letters to Schlesinger also seem to have been direct to a New York address, 99, John Street.

[2660] TO KING, BAILLIE & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 23 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 219.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 23rd December 1886

Dear Sirs,

I was writing to you this evening – when your letter (postcard) arrived just as I had finished the date. The birds reached me, in excellent condition, yesterday – and I have written to Mr Schlesinger by today's mail.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs King, Baillie & Co

---

1. Liverpool shipping agents.

2. Directed to 'King, Baillie & Co. | Batavia Buildings | Hackins Hey | Liverpool', postmarked on the following day.

[2661] TO ANNE WYNNE, 23 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 507–508.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>
23rd Decr 1886

Yes, dearest, I am glad to hear you are going to do me honour in the character of a Dresden Shepherdess.<sup>3</sup> Bring me back a tender lamb – and I will receive him with gratitude and garlic (stuffing).

I am so glad to hear from you (I also hear from the excellent B.)<sup>4</sup> that Mother-in-law is setting me such a good example of recovery. I try to imitate ~~Emi~~ her with some little success – but that infernal pain comes back again every now and then. I don't want to be obliged to go away suddenly – so I still wait before I show myself in Delamere Street, until I and my familiar devil have parted company. Yesterday I was free. This morning I had some red hot scratches again, and had to sniff at my "Amyl" (N.B. This is not the Christian name of another wife). It is only a glass capsule).<sup>5</sup>

My best thanks for the drawing. When it gets cooler, I shall jump off that bridge and swim in the lovely water and dry myself among those noble ruins. My love to you both.

Ever affly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.', postmarked 'LONDON. W | DE23'.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. Presumably Nannie was to attend a Christmas fancy dress party.

4. This must be Frank Beard, medical adviser to the Wynnes as well as WC.

5. Amyl nitrite, used in the treatment of angina.

[3194] TO FRANK ARCHER, 27 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C7, p. 32.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>
27th December 1886

My dear Archer,

I most heartily reciprocate your friendly good wishes.<sup>3</sup>

If I had been well enough, I should have called to say this instead of writing it. But days like yesterday try my weak nerves, and bring back the neuralgia.<sup>4</sup> And when I go out today, the doctor insists on a walk out and a walk in – to be followed by bathings and rubbings and restings. So I must wait a little longer and get better as fast as I can.

I wish you all possible success in the new play, and as good a part as you had (if I may say so) in the “Magdalen”<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I am not even thinking yet of another book. What virtue on my part!!!

-
1. Initialled and directed to ‘Frank Archer Eqr | 21. Baker Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | X| DE 27 | 86 | 6’, with ‘WC 31’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.
  2. With address ranged right and WC’s monogram ranged left.
  3. Presumably Archer had written with Christmas greetings.
  4. The Times reported that the weather in London on 26 December was cold but very humid with a temperature of 40°F (4.5°C) and humidity of 97% (Times, 27 December 1886, p. 5b). WC did not mind cold but liked it dry.
  5. For much of 1886 Archer recorded 33 weeks of no income while he was ‘occupied in collaborating with F.W. Robinson.’ But on 14 December he had been engaged by E. Russell and G. F. Bashford to play the lead part of Sir Baldwyn Calvert in Henry Arthur Jones’s comedy Hard Hit, which opened at the Haymarket Theatre on 17 January and ran until 22 March. He was paid £10 a week (‘Theatre Salaries and Parts’, Bk. 3, pp. 37–44, Archer Archive).

[2662] TO ROMA LE THIÈRE, 29 DECEMBER 1886

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 219.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
29th Decr 1886

Dear Miss Le Thièrè,

I must ask you to excuse me if I plead for a little delay. Illness has tried me severely – and now that I am beginning to recover, I am under medical orders to try change of air, and to be as completely idle as possible in mercy to my “nerves.”

Reciprocating your good wishes for the new year,
vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Directed to ‘Miss Le Thièrè | 39. Mount Street | Grosvenor Square | W.’, postmarked as dated.

[2664] TO A. P. WATT, 1 JANUARY 1887

MS: Unknown. Facsimile: Compton-Rickett, p. 118, our copy text.<sup>1</sup> Published: Pall Mall Gazette, 5 October 1889, p. 7;<sup>2</sup> Watt, p. 18;<sup>3</sup> B&C, II, p. 528.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>3</sup>
1st January 1887

I desire that my friend and literary representative, Mr A.P. Watt, of 2 Paternoster Square, may act as my literary Executor, and that his advice may be accepted as representing my literary interests and wishes, in regard to the copyrights of my books which may remain to be sold after my death, by my other executors.

Wilkie Collins

-
1. The caption to the image reads, ‘Facsimile of letter attached to the will of Wilkie Collins’.
  2. The Pall Mall Gazette introduces the letter thus:

MR. WILKIE COLLINS'S LITERARY EXECUTOR.

A statement having appeared that Mr. Hall Caine was to act as the literary representative of Mr. Collins, we are enabled to say that there is no foundation whatever for such a rumour. The following memorandum, in Mr. Collins's own writing, forms a kind of informal codicil to his will:—

3. The published letter is headed, ‘To the intense regret of all lovers of fiction, Mr. Wilkie Collins died on the 23rd of September 1889. Attached to his Will was the following memorandum in his own handwriting:—’.

4. Monogram ranged left, black engraved type ranged right.

[2665] TO A. P. WATT, 4 JANUARY 1887

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, pp. 529–530. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 220–222.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th January 1887

My dear Watt

Here I am again, reiterating my thanks for “King Solomon’s Mines” – after having read the book.<sup>1</sup>

If you ever read the “notices of the press” attached to advertisements of new novels, you will find that the crop of great geniuses now engaged in writing fiction amounts at a fair average to seven or eight in a week. Of the great work thus produced (owing I suppose to some perversity in me which I am at a loss how to cure) I am a thoroughly unworthy reader. I don’t care two straws for the characters to which the great geniuses introduce me – and I see through and through the “breathless interest” of their stories (when there is any story) before I am at the end of the first volume. Let me honestly confess it, my frame of mind was not hopeful when I opened “King Solomon’s Mines.”

To my wonder and delight the book seized me at once, and held me fast straight through to the end. I found myself reading the work of a man, possessing imagination, invention, sense of dramatic effect, respect for truth to nature, and – in an inferior degree as yet – an eye for character. Here I find room for improvement in Mr Haggard, and I will try to explain myself.

To my mind, our author is strong in the conception, and weak in the development, of character. “Allan Quatermain” is, as the lawyers say, a case in point. He is supposed to be the writer of the story, and he begins in his own character. But as he goes on, he is set aside and replaced by Mr Haggard himself.

If you look again at the earlier pages of the book, you will find Q. writing in harmony with his own character, as described by himself – a sensible man whose native good sense has made use of his opportunities, within his limits. Quaint humour and capacity for observation are in him (again within limits) – but, by his own confession, he is without literary cultivation. On that side of him an ignorant man.

Now look on to page 72 and you will find this uncultivated elephant hunter exhibiting a highly trained admiration of the beauties of nature – and actually expressing that admiration in a skilled and eloquent English style. I will copy one sentence, and you will see what I mean. “... we lay down and waited for the moon to rise. At last about nine o’clock up she came in all her chastened glory, flooding the wild country with silver light, and throwing a weird sheen on the vast expanse of rolling desert before us, which looked as solemn and quiet and as alien to man as the star-studded firmament above”.

Here – and in dozens of other places to which I might refer if I had no respect for your time – is surely Mr Haggard’s poetical feeling, and Mr Haggard’s skilled handling of English, pouring miraculously from Mr Quatermain’s pen. I fancy I hear Q., intent on improving himself, asking for explanations: “Excuse me sir, but when you say ‘chastened glory’, do I understand you to mean it was a fine bright moon? And would you mind telling me whether ‘weird sheen’, is a thing or a person or a place? I am with you, sir, heart and soul, when you say ‘alien to man’. That’s a cut at the Hottentots and they richly deserve it.”

The defect which I have tried to indicate is the only obstacle that I can now see in Mr Haggard’s way. If he will be on his guard against this – and if he will not let publishers tempt him to lead his readers too often over the same ground – I believe he has the ball at his foot, and I shall be rejoiced to see him kicking it to good purpose.

I am still idling, as the doctor bids me. Last night, an idea knocked at my head. Answer: Not at home.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [2654] to Watt of 15 December 1886.

[2666] TO A. P. WATT, 5 JANUARY 1887

MS: Pembroke.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 222–223.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

January 5 1887

My dear Watt

I have just discovered a letter of mine dated the 1st of this month – and thanking you for your kind new year’s gifts – huddled away, God knows how, among a mass of Christmas and New Years’ cards in my “Answered Letters” basket. What must you have thought of me, when you found the receipt of the book not even acknowledged!

Looking into “She”<sup>2</sup> I am sorry to see that Mr H. is trying a South African mystery again – and, worse still, that he is falling back again on the character in “Solomon’s Mines” in Longman’s Magazine.<sup>3</sup> This is of course between ourselves. If you have received my yesterday’s letter about “Solomon’s Mines” you will see that I have ventured on a little hint. Too late I am afraid, now, to prevent him from undermining his own reputation.

The enclosed letter explains itself.<sup>4</sup>

The meanness of the Harpers doesn’t promise us much for the book publication. They won’t repeat their generosity (?) in giving me royalties on the sales of my earlier writings – said Royalties amounting for five years to eleven pounds and some shillings!!! Will you see Osgood nevertheless? – he is a good fellow, and before I heard from him this morning of Harpers’ decision, I had told him that the book-publication of Tillotson’s story was all I had to sell in the U.S.A.<sup>5</sup>

If I don’t hear from you to the contrary, I will write to Osgood tomorrow or next day to say Yes.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Bound out of order in the Pembroke volumes, preceding [2801] to Watt of 10 January 1888.

2. H. Rider Haggard’s She: A History of Adventure was serialized in the Graphic from 2 October 1886 to 8 January 1887, before appearing in a single volume from Longman at the beginning of 1887. A copy of this was found in WC’s library (Baker 2002, p. 115).

3. The narrator-hero of King Solomon’s Mines, Allan Quatermain, returns in a novel of that name serialized in Longman’s Magazine from January 1887.

4. The letter itself is not bound into the Pembroke volumes and has not been traced, but must be from J. R. Osgood, as agent of Harper’s.

5. The Legacy of Cain – see [2607] to Osgood of 28 November 1886.

[2667] TO THE MANAGER OF THE NEW ENGLAND MUTUAL INSURANCE CO.,<sup>1</sup> 6 JANUARY 1887

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 223.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 6th January 1887

Dear Sir,

I beg that you will kindly send the customary notice, relating to the payment of my premium due on February 12th next, to my representatives, Messrs Naylor & Co, 99 John Street, New York City.

Believe me, faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

The Manager of | the New England Mutual Insurance Cy

1. See [2390] to the company of 5 January 1885.
2. Above the address is a date stamp in red ink: 'JAN 17 1887'.

[3114] TO GEORGE S. J. OLIVER,<sup>1</sup> 6 JANUARY 1887

MS: UCLA (Bound Mss Coll 170/70), tipped into a copy of The Guilty River.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C4, pp. 27–28, amended A&C5, pp. 20–21.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 6 January 1887

Dear Mr Oliver,

My gratitude is yours for the very interesting photographs which you have so kindly sent to me – and for the period of the year at which you have been happily inspired to favour me with your gift. Snow and sleet on one day – a raw thaw on another – and a fine hard “black” frost on ~~the a another~~ third occasion, which promises to cure the neuralgia troubles produced by the first two varieties of weather, and then fails to keep its promise by developing again into thaw – which is the modern winter climate of England.<sup>3</sup> Thanks to you, I now turn my back on the miserable view out of window [sic], and live at Santa Barbara, and waltz with my juvenile grace and alacrity in that primitive and picturesque ball-room.<sup>4</sup> Dana has now (as you will not be surprised to hear) become a precious fragment of antiquity to me. I shall not be surprised to hear of “baffling calms” experienced by sailing vessels off Cape Horn.<sup>5</sup> May I beg you to present my compliments to that interesting old lady? I envied Dana his opportunities when he first told me about her.<sup>6</sup>

The last photographic portrait of me accompanies these lines.<sup>7</sup> Better portraits were taken by the admirable Sarony when I was in New York city – but that was twelve years since,<sup>8</sup> and I am bound in honour (as the saying is) to offer you my likeness as I am now – in my 63rd year!<sup>9</sup>

In the intervals of illness, I have been writing a little Christmas book, called “The Guilty River”. This also goes to you (despatched by registered book post) with my kindest wishes for a happy new year.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
George S. J. Oliver Esqre

---

1. This must be the Boston businessman George Stewart Johnnot Oliver (1831–1904), a graduate of Harvard College in 1851, reported in the 1902 edition of Names and Addresses of Living Bachelors and Masters of Arts, and of the Holders of Honorary Degrees of Harvard University to be a resident of Santa Barbara, California. After retiring in 1880, Oliver and his wife, Frances Alsop née Dabney, seem to have lived in the Mission Canyon on a nine-acre homestead called ‘Rocky Nook’.

2. Presumably the copy mentioned towards the end of the letter.

3. The Times reported sleet, snow, mist and darkness in London on that day (Friday, 7 January 1887, p. 6e).

4. Presumably Oliver had sent photographs of the striking scenery, dotted with sandstone boulders and oak trees, surrounding his home in the Mission Canyon.

5. Presumably Oliver’s letter to WC made reference to Richard Henry Dana Jr, also a native of Massachusetts, whose Two Years Before the Mast: A Personal Narrative (New York: Harper, 1840) describes ‘the sailing of the brig Pilgrim, on her voyage from Boston, round Cape Horn, to the Western coast of North America’ (opening of ch. 1), with destination at the port of Santa Barbara. Nearly forty years earlier WC had corresponded with R.H. Dana Sr concerning WmC’s Memoirs. In [0073], WC’s last letter to Dana Sr of 17 June 1850, he had written: ‘I have read “Two Years before the Mast”, and read it with great delight – it is a most entertaining and most original book; and is deservedly popular in England, among all classes of readers.’

6. Perhaps the ‘interesting old lady’ is a fanciful reference to the Pacific Ocean.

7. Not found with the MS. Photographs by Lock & Whitfield and Bassano are known from the 1880s.

8. In fact it was 13 years since WC was in New York.

9. WC was to become 63 in two days time on 8 January.

[2668] TO A. P. WATT, 6 JANUARY 1887

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 530. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 223.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th Jan<sup>y</sup> 1887

My dear Watt

Here are a few more of the quill pens – please accept them. I tell the Stationer to also enclose his card.

By this time you have got Osgood's forgotten letter – and my excuses.<sup>1</sup> The worst ills of life – after rheumatic gout or poverty – are letters.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC has belatedly forwarded Watt a letter from J. R. Osgood, Harper's agent, presumably in reply to [2467] of 28 November 1886.

[3013] TO NAYLOR & CO.,<sup>1</sup> 10 JANUARY 1887

MS: Lewis Collection, tipped into a copy of Thomas F. Madigan's Word Shadows of the Great: The Lure of Autograph Collecting (New York: Frederick A. Stokes, 1930).<sup>2</sup> Published: Lewis website; A&C2, p. 67.

90. Gloucester Place | London. W | 10th January 1887

Dear Sirs,

In case of accidents by mail, I write to say that my signed receipt to the Manhattan Insurance Company was sent to you by registered letter post on Saturday last.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The letter must be to Messrs Naylor, who held WC's life insurance policies first in Boston and then (from early 1884) in New York – see [2262] to Sebastian Schlesinger, 28 January 1884. For details of the policies with both the Manhattan Insurance Company and the New England Mutual Insurance Company, see [1426] to William Tindell, 3 March 1874.

2. The letter has been trimmed and has an impressed stamp bottom left, that of Harold E. Harris, Notary Public of New York County. Facing the letter is a 'Certification of Genuineness', notarized by Harris and signed by Madigan. In the book, Madigan notes that '[c]ollectors for years to come will probably never suffer for want of' the letters of prolific Victorian correspondents such as Browning, Ainsworth, Reade, and Collins (p. 217).

[2669] TO ANNE WYNNE, 15 JANUARY 1887

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 508.

Saturday Jan<sup>y</sup> 15 | 1887

My Lamb,

Shall I find you and Mama at home if I call at 3 on Monday next?

If Monday presents a snow storm and a hurricane – then Tuesday at 3, when it is sure to thaw.

Your loving | WC

If the answer is Yes, don't trouble to write.

---

1. Directed to 'Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street W.', postmarked 'LONDON | JA15 | 87'. Letter on plain paper watermarked 'KENT'.

[2670] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 18 JANUARY 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 319; BGLL, IV, p. 224.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th January 1887

My dear Fred,

Yesterday's delicious dry frost has set me on my legs again – and therefore I want to lunch with you again. May I come next Saturday at 1:30? Or the Saturday after next, if that date is more convenient? One line to say. No preparations please in either case. Your grub is my grub – and I am yours affly

WC

I have had the kindest of kind letters from the Padrona – and a photograph of the boy. Jolly boy.<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Guy Colin Campbell, Lehmann's first grandson – see [2674] to Nina Lehmann of 2 February 1887.

[2671] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 19 JANUARY 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5), on a plain card. Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 320; BGLL, IV, p. 224.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 19 Jany 1887

Sunday next at 2 will do just as well for me, my dear Fred. Many thanks.

I was out, trying to oxygenise my blood, and rebuild my constitution, when Martin called.<sup>1</sup>

Yours affly | WC

---

1. The Lehmanns' servant Martin (Lehmann, pp. 173, 223, 233). See also [2970] to Fred Lehmann of 3 September 1889.

[3228] TO ARTHUR LOCKER,<sup>1</sup> 18 JANUARY 1887

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C8, pp. 20–21.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | LONDON. W.

18th January 1887

Dear sir,

I enclose the best recent photographic portrait that I possess.

The full length by Sarony was taken at New York twelve years since.<sup>2</sup> After that fine specimen of photographic art and photographic printing I have contrived to avoid sitting again for a full length.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Arthur Locker Esq

P.S. Height | 5 feet 6 inches<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Arthur Locker (1828–1893), editor of The Graphic 1870–1891 (ODNB). WC had not corresponded with him since their disagreement over the censorship of The Law and The Lady in 1875 (see [1507] to Tindell, 28 January 1875).

2. In fact WC was in the USA from September 1873 to March 1874. This error may at least argue for the image being taken in 1874 rather than in 1873.

3. The postscript is written on the otherwise blank third sheet. This is the only known reference by WC to his exact height.

[2672] TO A. P. WATT, 25 JANUARY 1887

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, pp. 530–531. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 224–225.

90. G. P. | 25th Jan<sup>y</sup> 1887

My dear Watt

If you ever feel inclined to lend me a book again, check the benevolent impulse, and say to yourself, “I can't trust that man.” The Parcel Post takes back to you – after a most inexcusable delay – those two books of Mrs Oliphant's which you so kindly trusted to me.<sup>1</sup> I found them this morning buried under heaps of other books. Mea culpa – mea maxima culpa.<sup>2</sup>

I must talk to you about “She” the next time you give me a look-in (nearly time now – is it not?) In the meanwhile “She” is better written than the “Mines” – but it has not got the movement in the story and the variety of situations in “King Solomon”. And I doubt the effect on the stupid reader (a most important person, unhappily, to please) of the lady who is 2000 years old.<sup>3</sup>

I have been thriving in my idleness – until I am tired of it. My pen is consequently in my hand again, revising no less than 15 short stories of mine for republication! Some of them I had actually forgotten myself.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Margaret Oliphant’s The Chronicles of Carlingford – see [2358] to Watt of 16 March 1886 thanking him for sending the books.

2. ‘My fault, my most grievous fault’ (Latin); citing the General Confession in use in the Roman Catholic Church.

3. Concerning H. Rider Haggard’s recent novel. At the time of his death WC possessed four of Rider Haggard’s novels (Allan Quatermain, Jess, King Solomon’s Mines, and She), though no works by Oliphant are recorded (Baker 2002, pp. 113–115).

4. Little Novels, published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus in May 1887, is a collection of WC’s short stories first appearing in periodicals over the decade from 1875 to 1884, including the series of Christmas stories for the Spirit of the Times. In the end the collection featured only fourteen tales (for details, see Gasson, pp. 97–98).

[2673] TO HARRY QUILTER,<sup>1</sup> 28 JANUARY 1887

MS: Huntington (HM 32310). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 225–226.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th January 1887

Dear Mr Quilter,

Such a letter as yours cannot be compared with the letters which I receive from readers in general – it is, in the plainest of plain truth, an event in my literary life. I may venture to say for myself that your generous sympathy has not found its way to an ungrateful man. In the intervals of discouragement which are within the experience of every one – perhaps especially within the experience of those among us who live habitually in worlds of their own imagining – your letter will be at once a refuge and a remedy. It will have a place of its own among the possessions which I most value – and will be strictly reserved for my own reading. No more, until we meet.

Will you choose your own most convenient day next week, or any afternoon at three o’clock? And will you let me have – literally – one line to say which day it shall be. I will only add, the sooner the better.

Always most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Harry Quilter (1851–1907: ODNB), literary editor, journalist, artist and art critic, who founded the Universal Review in May 1888. Quilter tried unsuccessfully to organize a memorial in St Paul’s Cathedral to WC after his death.

[2674] TO NINA LEHMANN, 2 FEBRUARY 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Extract: Ellis, p. 51; Robinson p. 312; Davis, p. 300. Published: B&C, II, pp. 531–532.

90. Gloucester Place | London. W. | 2nd Feby 1887

Oh what a wretch I am, dearest Padrona, to be only thanking you now for your delightful letter – and for that adorable photograph of the boy. I may tell you what I told his father – when I had the pleasure of meeting him at Berkeley Square – that I must be introduced to your grandson at the earliest possible moment after his arrival in England. I brought away with me after our luncheon such an agreeable impression of Sir Guy Campbell that I must repeat my congratulations to Nina on her marriage.<sup>1</sup> There was but one drawback to my enjoyment when I found myself in those familiar rooms again – the dreadful word “Dead” when I asked after dear little “Buffles.”<sup>2</sup>

If you were only at the north of Scotland – say Thurso – I would rush to you by steamer, and become young again in the fine cold air. But when I think of that fearful French railway journey, and of the /southern/ [del] climate of Cannes, I see madness on my /way/ to the Mediterranean, and death in lingering torments on the shores of that celebrated sea. We have had here – after a brief Paradise of frost – the British Sirrocco. Fidgets, aching legs, gloom, vile temper, neuralgic troubles in the chest – such are the Conditions under which I am living, and such the obstacles which have prevented my writing to you long since. “The Guilty River” (I am so glad you like it) has I am afraid had something to do with the sort of constitutional collapse which I have endeavoured to describe. You know well what a fool I am – or [del] shall [del] I put it mildly and say ‘how indiscreet’? For the last week, while I was finishing the story, I worked for twelve hours a day – and galloped along without feeling /it/, like the old post horses, while I was hot. Do you remember how the /fore/ legs of those post-horses quivered, and how their heads drooped, when they came to the journey’s end? That’s me, Padrona – that’s me.

Good God! is “me” grammar? Ought it to be “I”? My poor father paid ninety pounds a year for my education – and I give you my sacred word of honour I am not sure whether it is “me” or “I”[.]

After this, the commonest sense of propriety warns me to remove [del] myself from your observation. I have just assurance enough left to send my love to you and Nina and Guy Colin, and to remind you that I am always affectionately yours

Wilkie Collins

-
1. On 30 April 1884 Nina and Frederick Lehmann’s only daughter Nina (b. 1861) had married the soldier Sir Guy Theophilus Campbell, 3rd Baronet Campbell (1854–1931), and their son Guy Colin was born on 31 January 1885.
  2. ‘Buffles’ was the Lehmanns’ ‘favourite Skye terrier’ (Lehmann, p. 74).

[2675] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 4 FEBRUARY 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Extract: Baker 2001, p. 511. Published: B&C, II, pp. 532–533.

90. Gloucester Place | London. W. | 4th Feby 1887

My dear Collaborateur,

I have been away from London, trying to find air that I can breathe. A few days of frost here, at the beginning of January, were succeeded by our damp relaxing British Sirocco. To me, the unnatural mildness of this winter season, ~~means~~ /all over England, means/ nervous relaxation of the most intolerable kind – and if I was ten years younger I would go away again, to Greenland this time – and thrive in the Arctic frosts.

So for this bad reason I have been long in thanking you for [del] “Le Livre,” and long in reading your article on Goldsmith.<sup>1</sup> I am delighted with it. It is even better than your article on Dickens<sup>2</sup> – more animated, more various, more subtle in treatment. You are the only French Man of Letters – mind, I say this seriously – who understands England and the English. And, because I mean this, you will find on the next ~~slip~~ /morsel/ of paper, some corrections of trifling slips – to /be noted/ before you republish your contributions to “Le Livre”.

The dramatic end to the article is so good that I don’t like to suggest doubts about it. But Forster told me that “Northcote” was not to be depended on – and Forster’s account of “She Stoops to Conquer” takes Goldsmith to the Theatre – makes him alarmed by hearing a solitary hiss, and [del] repeats Coleman’s [sic] abominable insult to Goldsmith: “Don’t be afraid of a squib, Doctor, when we have been sitting these two hours on a barrel of gunpowder!”<sup>3</sup>

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

-
1. ‘Les tribulations d’un chef-d’oeuvre’, de Heussey’s article on Goldsmith, appeared in Le Livre for January 1887.
  2. ‘Charles Dickens à Paris d’après sa correspondance et des documents inédits’, de Heussey’s two-part article on Dickens’s visits to Paris, appeared in the seventh volume of Le Livre for 1886.
  3. The anecdotes concerning Goldsmith by James Northcote (1746–1831) are scattered throughout Memoirs of Sir Joshua Reynolds (2 vols., 1813–15), while John Forster’s The Life and Times of Oliver Goldsmith was published in two volumes in 1848, with the anecdote reported by WC concerning George Colman Sr (1732–94) found in Book IV Chapter 15. Three of Goldsmith’s works were found in WC’s library when he died (Baker 2002, pp. 112–113).

[2676] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 14 FEBRUARY 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Published: B&C, II, p. 533.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

14th Feby 1887

My dear Collaborateur,

I have got just five minutes before post time – and I employ /them/ to thank you for your kind letter. I leave the proof of “Magdalen” in perfect confidence to you – and I look forward with true interest to receiving a copy of the play when it has received your [del] last correction and has become a published work.<sup>2</sup>

I most sincerely envy you a first reading of Boswell’s wonderful book – the greatest biographical work that has ever been written.<sup>3</sup> I am constantly dipping into it, to this day. As for the great “Taine” [del] /we/ take the liberty of laughing at him in England.<sup>4</sup> I have even heard him called – it is almost too terrible to mention – called: | “An Ass”

Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

Have you /read an English/ novel called “King Solomon’s Mines”? (Tauchnitz Edition 1. Volume).<sup>5</sup> In its way, a very clever book.

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. Madeleine, par R. du P. de Heussey, piece en quatre actes, dont un prologue, d’apres Wilkie Collins (Paris: Paul Ollendorf, 1887) was reviewed in Le Livre, vol. 8 (July, 1887), p. 357. A copy of de Heussey’s translation was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, item 254).

3. A copy of the five-volume seventh edition of Boswell’s Life of Johnson (1811) was found in WC’s library at his death (Baker 2002, item 46, p. 81).

4. Hippolyte Adolphe Taine (1828–1892), celebrated French author.

5. Published February 1886; see Todd and Bowden, 2386, p. 358.

[2677] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 14 FEBRUARY 1887

MS: Huntington (HH 105). Published: B&C, II, p. 534.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 14th February 1887

My dear Holman,

Come on Wednesday next,<sup>1</sup> as you propose, and you will find us delighted to see you. We have got the surest of all good things – a good ham in the house. So keep an appetite for any hour in the evening that you like best. I should be quite happy in the prospect of seeing you – but for that visit to the doctor. Bring me word that he has dismissed you (professionally speaking), and I shall be quite satisfied. My state of body has come to “a pretty pass” – I rejoice in the easterly winds!!!!

Ever aftl<sup>y</sup> yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The letter is written on the Monday.

[2678] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 21 FEBRUARY 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 323 (dated 21 July 1887); BGLL, IV, pp. 226–227.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 21st Feby 1887

My dear Fred,

The gout has been threatening me in the eye again – and the remedies which we hope will succeed this time in keeping it down have so weakened me that I have hardly breath enough to get upstairs to bed. Help me to get over the disappointment of being here waiting for the doctor’s afternoon visit instead of voting at the Club,<sup>1</sup> and let me have a word by early post to tell me (I hope and trust) that you have been elected.

Yours affly, | WC

---

1. Club records show Lehmann was indeed elected to the Athenæum in 1887, proposed by Daniel Hodgson Kirkman and seconded by WC – see [2649] to Lehmann of 7 December 1886.

[2679] TO MARY GARETT BESANT,<sup>1</sup> 23 FEBRUARY 1887

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 321; BGLL, IV, p. 227.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23rd February 1887

My dear Mrs Besant,

It is really a hard trial to my resolution not to comply at once with the suggestion contained in your most kind and friendly letter. I have been so weakened by the terrible remedies which will alone deliver me from gout (in the eyes) that a new trouble has come upon me – neuralgia in the chest. I can only write this letter by inhaling “Amyl” which gets straight to my brains before the pain<sup>2</sup> – but does nothing to cure me. By the end of this month (if not earlier) I am ordered away to the sea-side – when to return it is impossible for me to say.

Pray forgive this letter, all about myself. But I have it at heart not to say no to You – without showing that I have no other alternative.

Believe me | most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Née Barham (d. 1904), wife of Walter Besant (1836–1901: ODNB), novelist and founder of the Society of Authors.
2. On WC’s use of amyl nitrite, see [2414] to Charles Kent of 18 April 1885.

[2680] TO A. P. WATT, 25 FEBRUARY 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 227–228.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th Feb<sup>y</sup> 1887

My dear Watt

Let me first thank you for your friendly letter.

Yesterday – after having tried it the day before and failed – I found myself strong enough to get half an hour’s walk. Wholesome fatigue, and a better night’s rest followed. – If this only goes on, my heart will get stronger, and I shall be able to try the sea air. Three days since my legs trembled under me when I walked across the room!

Can you get here next week – in the early part of the week, if possible? – without any neglect of business that claims attention? If there is any obstacle of this sort, tell me when I can (conveniently to you) call at the new office, and I will gladly do so. I want to see you again – and I want to consult you about a proposal which I have received.<sup>1</sup>

I have also to report that I have succeeded in bringing Perry Mason & Co to their bearings (as we say at sea). A letter from their manager informs me that they propose to publish my third little story in their “issue of April 21st” and promises a similar notice for any new contributions.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Will you kindly look at the Tillotson agreement, and tell me when the first third of the MS – and the first third of the payment – falls due? Some time in Sept: I think.<sup>3</sup>

1. Probably a request for a serial novel from the radical Sunday newspaper the Weekly Dispatch, which began to carry serial fiction the previous year – see [2690] to Watt of 15 March 1887.
2. ‘The Hidden Cash’, the third tale in the series ‘The Victims of Circumstances’, did indeed appear in the issue of Youth’s Companion for Thursday 21 April 1887, though WC made no further contributions to the paper.
3. In line with the contract with Tillotson’s for The Legacy of Cain (Bodleian MS Eng. Misc., f. 395/1), WC sent the first portion of copy on 30 September and received the first payment the following day – see [2756] and [2757] to Watt of 30 September and 2 October 1887.

[3195] TO FRANK ARCHER, 28 FEBRUARY 1887

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C7, p. 33.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 28th Feby 1887

My dear Archer,

I tried today to call on you, on my way home – but I was too tired to manage it. The gout has been threatening, and has been beaten back by the doctor – but the remedies employed have so weakened me that I am contemplating a retreat from London. You shall hear of me again before that time. In the meanwhile, the “Man and Wife” revival is only among the possibilities so far. My terms are sent in – and I am waiting to know what comes of it.<sup>2</sup>

I hope you have got a good play this time, as well as a good part.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Frank Archer Eqr | 21. Baker Street | W.’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 7 | MR 1 | 87 | 62’, with ‘Wilkie Collins W.C. 32’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. Man and Wife was revived at The Haymarket from 29 March 1887, immediately following Archer’s run in Hard Hit. See [3193] to Archer, 27 December 1886.

3. Archer was engaged to play the part of Algernon Beltravers in Christina by Mark Ambient and Percy Lynwood at the Prince of Wales’s Theatre for a single matinée on April 22. He received a fee of £13-13s, out of which he spent £9-10s on his costume. In 1888 the play ran at the Olympic from 8 March to 28 April; this was Archer’s last dramatic part earning him a total of £106 (‘Theatre Salaries and Parts’, Bk. 3, pp. 44–52, Archer Archive).

[2681] TO A. P. WATT, 1 MARCH 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 228–229.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 1st March 1887

My Dear Watt,

I return “The Security of Literary Property” – with thanks. Admirably done, with a power which is all the stronger because it is power moderately exercised. I, for one, am grateful to the writer.<sup>1</sup>

More neuralgia on this damp morning! Who was the born idiot, in ancient times (calling himself a philosopher), who said that “Pain was no evil”?<sup>2</sup> I wish I had lived in that country, and had been able to change nerves with him,

Ever yours | WC

On reflection, I am sure I was hasty in suggesting May as the date for beginning that story.<sup>3</sup> Three months later, ought to have been the limit.

---

1. Three public meetings of the Society of Authors were held on 2, 9 and 16 March 1887 at Willis’s Rooms. At the first meeting, Walter Besant gave a paper called ‘The Security of Literary Property’, of which Watt must have had an advance copy (see the report headed ‘Society of Authors’, Times, 3 March 1887, p. 6c-d). The entire proceedings were published later that year by Field & Tuer as The Grievances Between Authors and Publishers (see Bonham-Carter, p. 134).

2. Reputedly the Stoic, Posidonius of Rhodes (135–151 BC), to Pompey the Great.

3. Presumably referring to the negotiations with the Weekly Dispatch – see [2686] and [2690] to Watt of 11 and 15 March 1887.

[2682] TO A. P. WATT, 2 MARCH 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 229.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 2nd March 1887

My dear Watt

With many thanks I return the Quarterly Review and the three Athenaeums by this afternoon's Parcel Post. At breakfast time, I was lazy – and read the Grand Literary Row in the intervals of buttered eggs and Quince jam.<sup>1</sup> My private opinion is that these wretched creatures are completely saturated with self-conceit. Among many other reasons for being grateful to you, I am now grateful for a good laugh. Here is the mortal “triangular Duel” in “Midshipman Easy” over again. Mr Collins, Mr Gosse, and Mr Swinburne all shoot at each other in turn. “Shot for shot,” as the gunman says in the original duel, “and damn all favours.” The one serious part of it, is the sickening manner in which they talk of their private friendships, and reproach each other with their obligations to each other's “hospitality.” Thank you again.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt sends copies of the prestigious review magazines, Murray's Quarterly Review (1809–1967) and the weekly Athenaeum (1828–1921). For an account of ‘the Grand Literary Row’ provoked by John Churton Collins's attack on Edmund Gosse in ‘English Literature at the Universities’, Quarterly Review (October 1886), see Ann Thwaite, Edmund Gosse (London: Secker & Warburg, 1984), pp. 277–297.

[2683] TO A. P. WATT, 3 MARCH 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 229–230.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 3rd March 1887

My dear Watt

Let me thank you for a cheque for £21...- drawn by Messrs Chatto and Windus, in payment for a short story of my writing which appeared in the “Belgravia” Magazine for January last.<sup>1</sup>

Your letter reached me yesterday, shortly after I had written to you,

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | Let me also thank you for kindly searching the catalogue – and for the good news of the title being still unappropriated.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. ‘An Old Maid's Husband’.

2. Presumably concerning the search for a title for the forthcoming collection of short tales – see [2694] to Andrew Chatto of 22 March 1887, in which the possibility of ‘Little Novels’ seems to be first mentioned.

[3370] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 7 MARCH 1887

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C13, pp. 11-12.

7th March 1887

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Written on the front and top third of a bifold letter folded into three. Possibly enclosed in an envelope for a correspondent who wanted his autograph. The date is written under the valediction.

[2684] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 9 MARCH 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 230.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th March 1887

My dear Chatto,

Do you feel inclined to return to the question of re-publishing my shorter stories in book-form?<sup>1</sup>

I had made up my mind (as I think I said when you kindly called here) to try the experiment of cheap serial publication – and to be “the responsible person” in the matter of money if the venture failed. But I have since that time become (like the Great Dogberry) “a fellow who hath had losses”<sup>2</sup> – and the chance of possibly increasing them causes in me that form of pecuniary terror which shrinks from “selling out.” So I resign myself once more to 3 Vols crown 8<sup>vo</sup> and the damnable despot Mudie – and you are of course the first person who hears of my change of front.

I have been suffering from neuralgia – and a foggy day brings the pain back again. Do you mind giving me a look-in here – when it is really quite convenient? And will you let me have a line to say which day and which hour you choose? It will be sure to suit me.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. A project that had been postponed five years earlier – see [2023] to Chatto of 24 April 1882.

2. The constable in Much Ado About Nothing – see IV.ii.85. It is not, however, clear what pecuniary losses WC himself is referring to.

[2685] TO ANNE WYNNE, 10 MARCH 1887

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 508–509.

90 Gloucester Place | London. W. | 10th March 1887

I am proud of my wife. Her account of the earthquake is the best that I have read yet.<sup>2</sup> She is also a little angel who thinks of her husband and sends him a nice [~~del~~] box of flowers – when other women might have been prostrate under the shock, and have thought of nothing but the state of their nerves. Mia sposa adorata, brava! brava!<sup>3</sup>

But I had heard of you and your mother through Knox.<sup>4</sup> He sent a copy of the earthquake part of Mama’s letter to Pigott, and Pigott sent it to me and I sent it back to Pigott with a prophecy – Viz: – that the excitement of being earthquaked would shake you both up and do you good – and that the Riviera air would [~~del~~] /also do/ you good if you rushed into the street in the costume of a late Queen of the Sandwich Islands – a hat and feathers and nothing else.

Am I to encourage my wife and my mother-in-law in the vice of gambling? In the name of Hypocrisy I protest – and refer you to the next page. Of many gambling superstitions which I once knew, it is the only one that I now remember.

My love (and congratulations on her improved health) to mother-in-law. I adore you. I have no more to say.

WC

The Numbers-Dodge<sup>5</sup>

Take the three last and highest numbers on the board: (I mean the Roulette table):

|                   |           |     |    |
|-------------------|-----------|-----|----|
|                   | 34,       | 35, | 36 |
| Add them together | 34        |     |    |
|                   | 35        |     |    |
|                   | 36 |     |    |
|                   | 105       |     |    |

Divide the product by your age:

|               |
|---------------|
| 13/105/ 8 and |
| /104/  |
| 1 over        |

1st Moral: | Try your luck by dividing your stake and placing it on the two numbers 8 and 1.

2nd Moral: | The chances against [del] the ball stopping on either of those two (or of any two numbers) are, in the case of each number, 37 to 1 against you!

-
1. Directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | Hotel Beau Sejour | La Condamine | Monaco’, with initials ‘WC’ in lower left corner. Postmarked ‘LONDON | MR10 | 87’.
  2. Bussana Vecchia, a small village in northern Italy near Genoa, was destroyed by an earthquake on 23 February 1887.
  3. Italian: ‘My adored wife, well done, well done!’.
  4. Alexander A. Knox, author of The New Playground, or Wanderings in Algebra (1881); see [1947] to him of 11 March 1881.
  5. This postscript is found separately on the third page of WC’s notepaper.

[2686] TO A. P. WATT, 11 MARCH 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 231.

11 March 1887

My dear Watt

I too have heard nothing whatever. They seem to be slow in making up their minds.<sup>1</sup> Or – did we give them the chance of selling to other newspapers, like Tillotson? If they make objections – query, whether it would be wise to do this? I am not very sure. We ought to consult about it perhaps. If there is any bargaining tried, you could easily claim time to consult with me. In the meanwhile, we may as well wait a little longer, I think. Many thanks to you for your letter. My mind has been away from the matter, absorbed in making new books. The foggy mornings bring back my neuralgia – but I get over it as the day advances.

Ever yours | WC

You will be amused to hear that a famous trotting stallion in the U.S. has been called “Wilkie Collins”. A printed pamphlet sent to me, records his virtues, and says “Wilkie Collins covers mares at $75 dollars each”!!!<sup>2</sup>

-
1. As [2690] and [2720] to Watt of 15 March and 16 May make clear, this and what follows refers to the (eventually fruitless) negotiations with the radical Sunday paper the Weekly Dispatch over a planned serial story by WC.
  2. The career of the trotting stallion was also widely covered in the sporting paper received weekly by WC, the New York Spirit of the Times, which on 12 June 1886 had reported: ‘Gen. R L. Howard writes us from Howard Stock Farm: “Wilkie Collins is in splendid health, and is doing all the stud business he can attend to.”’ (p. 633).

[2687] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 12 MARCH 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 231–232.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 12th March 1887

My dear Chatto,

Your kind letter, and the copy of the other letter reached me last night. It then struck me that the date (1882) of the last letter – must be advanced, in some postscript, to 1887 in justice to your seven years’ lease of the book.<sup>1</sup> You and I of course understand what we both mean. But suppose my “Exors” reckoned the lease of the short stories from 1882???<sup>2</sup>

I shall have to see my lawyer on Monday or Tuesday about an agreement for one of my plays which is to be shortly revived at the Haymarket Theatre<sup>3</sup> – and I will ask him to suggest the terms of a postscript to my copied letter, which will in few word set things right in a legal as well as a friendly point of view.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. The collection of WC’s more recent short stories, for which an agreement was reached with Chatto & Windus on 1 February 1882 – see [2007] to the firm of that date.
  2. The executors under WC’s will; the three question marks are WC’s.
  3. Man and Wife revived at the Haymarket from 29 March 1887.

[2688] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 15 MARCH 1887

MS: Reading.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 232.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 15th March 1887

My dear Chatto

If you will instruct one of your clerks to copy the “Postscript” on the next leaf, on the back of my original letter – leaving the day of the month to be filled in when you know what the publication day will be – and if you will then send the document to me, I will sign it – and set matters right in the proverbial “twinkling of an eye.”<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I ought to have said that the lawyer confirms my view – as set forth in my last letter,<sup>3</sup> and sanctions my postscript (inspired by Colchicum and Potash)<sup>4</sup>

Postscript

Circumstances, for which I am responsible, having delayed the publication of my short stories in book-form, as contemplated in the second paragraph of my letter to Messrs Chatto and Windus dated 1st February 1882, I hereby confirm in every respect what I have therein written, and I further desire that the seven years’ lease of the right of publication, ceded to Messrs Chatto and Windus, shall be newly dated from the [space] day of April 1887.

Wilkie Collins

-
1. Since this letter constitutes the extension of a legal agreement, it bears an embossed sixpenny stamp, dated 23 March 1887. There is an annotation in another hand in pen diagonally in the top left-hand corner which reads ‘6<sup>d</sup>’, plus an illegible pencil annotation beneath the date.
  2. The postscript, with slight variations in the accidentals and with the space for the date still blank, was indeed copied on to the back page of [2005] to Chatto of 1 February 1882.
  3. See [2687] to Chatto of 12 March 1887.
  4. Like quinine and laudanum, colchicum and potassium iodide were medications WC was taking to check the symptoms of gout.

[2689] TO HARRY QUILTER, 15 MARCH 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 233.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | Tuesday 15th March 1887

Dear Mr Quilter,

I shall be delighted to see you at 4 on next Thursday afternoon, and to help and advise to the best of my ability. The gout, and the doctor, and I, have been fighting “a triangular duel”<sup>1</sup> – and as I hope and believe my eyes have escaped this time. The remedies have ravaged me until I answer to the description of herself sent to me by a lady the other day – “I am all soul” – and therefore in a fine condition to help a brother-writer who is aground.<sup>2</sup> In the meantime I congratulate you on having established relations with Arrowsmith – the best and truest man I have met with in these later years.<sup>3</sup>

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Harry Quilter Esq

-
1. WC employs the same phrase in [2682] to Watt of 2 March 1887.
  2. The nature of the problem faced by Quilter (to whom WC first wrote on 28 January 1887 – see [2673]) has not been clarified.
  3. This must be J. W. Arrowsmith, publisher of The Guilty River, though there is no trace of Quilter’s work being issued by the Bristol firm.

[2690] TO A. P. WATT, 15 MARCH 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 233–234.

15th March 1887

My dear Watt

On Thursday next (as I calculate) the Editor of the Dispatch will have kept us waiting a fortnight for an answer. Will you write to Henry Dickens mentioning what has happened – saying that you have communicated with me – and that I entirely agree with you in interpreting this otherwise unaccountable silence as meaning refusal of our terms. You therefore beg that your letter may be received as intimating our withdrawal from the negotiations.

This will be sent to the Editor and may teach him a lesson in politeness<sup>1</sup>

In great haste | yours ever | WC

---

1. This signals the end of the negotiations with the Weekly Dispatch over a projected serial story by WC. The editor in question was the Aberdonian William Alexander Hunter (1844–98: ODNB), formerly Professor of Roman Law at University College London and now MP for Aberdeen. On the recommendation of John Morley, Hunter replaced H. R. Fox Bourne as editor of the Dispatch in early 1887. Shortly before, CD's sixth son, the barrister Henry Fielding Dickens (1849–1933), had taken over the running of the paper as trustee under the will of the late Ashton Dilke – see The Recollections of Sir Henry Dickens, K. C. (London: Heinemann, 1934), pp. 24–25.

[2691] TO NAPOLEON SARONY, 19 MARCH 1887

MS: Folger (1758 Yc588/1a–b). Published: B&C, II, pp. 534–536.

90. Gloucester Place | London. W | 19th March 1887

My dear, my wonderful Sarony!

The photographs came here yesterday. If they had arrived a week earlier they would have found me too completely weakened and depressed (by gout and its remedies) to even open the box. As it is, they have arrived exactly at the right time – when I am enjoying another of my intervals (they are never more) of something which is a near approach to health. No more of my infirmities – the subject /now is/ [~~] Sarony's triumph.~~

Other men's hands at sixty six years /~~] old/~~ are beginning to fail them in the matter of drawing. Your hand is improved. In your artistic handling of the Nude there is now more firmness, more knowledge, more power. And this development takes place when you are within four years of seventy, /and/ when you have passed the day in the labours, the wearisome worrying [~~] labours sometimes, of the photographic Studio. Wonderful, and I add, sympathetic man!~~ For I too think the back view of a finely-formed woman the loveliest view – and her hips ~~and her bottom~~<sup>1</sup> the ~~bes~~ most precious parts of that view. The line of beauty in those quarters enchants me, when it is not overladen by fat. Some of the best examples of your capacity as a draughtsman are too strongly developed for my taste. My beau ideal is the “Venus Callipyge”<sup>2</sup> – holding up her robe, and looking over her shoulder at her own divine back view. From the small of her back to the end of her thighs, she has escaped the detestable restorers – and my life has been passed in trying to find a living woman who is like her – and in never succeeding. After this, you will understand that my three favourites, of the Nude Series, are the girl with closed eyes floating past the moon – the girl reclining with transparent lace over part of her body, and more lace on her head – and last (and most charming to me) the girl entering her bath-room. She has the fineness of line which approaches my Venus – and the pose of the figure and the drawing of the figure are really admirable. No man but a born artist could have done it. Bravo! bravo! [~~] carissimo Sarony!~~ And I repeat my cry, in turning to the other drawings – which I call the Series of charmers accommodated with /clothes./ [~~] The action of the girl who is pouring water out of a bucket./ ~~en~~ The graceful lady with the /nosegay/ ~~flowers~~ in ~~her~~ /one/ hands, and the fingers of the other occupied in the divination by flowers. And the sweet young creature holding a [~~] tazza<sup>3</sup> and~~~~ looking at it seriously and thoughtfully. ~~It is~~ This last /is/ as graceful as a figure by Stothard<sup>4</sup> – and far better drawn. I must stop somewhere in my catalogue, or you will begin to regret ~~me~~ having ~~been~~ sent me this delightful present. But there has been one omission. The ferocious [del] profile, with the broad hat and the enormous ruff, meditating schemes of vengeance which make me rejoice in remembering that 3000 miles divide me from the U.S.A. [del] also reminds me that I am without Sarony in the character of Hungarian Count. I ought to be [del] satisfied, I know, with the delightful photos of Mrs Sarony. But do remember that I have never seen you [del] with decorations, and with a sword by your side.<sup>5</sup>

As for your portraits of me, I dare not ask any more. The glorious photo which I send with this shall be registered – I am in such terror of it's [sic] being lost. One more copy is all I possess. When ladies find their way in here, and want my photograph, I open my repository, and try to put them off with some of the later photographs done of me in England. They all discover other photos hidden underneath – all say, “What have you got there?” – all [del] snatch out Sarony, and flatly refuse to take any other portrait. I tried to save one copy of the other day from /a/ [del] comic actress who was here. She had got the /photo/ ~~face~~ face downwards – I seized her hand – and said, “For God's sake don't look at that; it's something indecent!” She instantly answered: “Then, I must certainly look at it!” – and so got the portrait.

I think I must send to you – ~~by book~~ book post – the three last portraits done of me in England. If you can see any resemblance between them – and, excepting the profile, any /vague/ sort of likeness to me – it is more than I can do. If they prove nothing else, these odd productions do plainly show that photography is not a mechanical art – but does depend like other arts on the man who exercises it.

I make my exit – with a hundred things more to say. My recent illness has left heaps of unanswered letters, and arrears of literary work – and Time flies faster than ever. When you receive the photos by book post, you will discover how damnably ~~sly~~ sly I am in sending them. “Poor Wilkie! I can not leave him with such wretched portraits as these. Though he is 13 years older since I ‘took him’, he must have a few more of “my likenesses.” That is the idea – and the commentary is, “Fie, for shame!”

ever yours (in the Blessed Bonds of Bohemia) Wilkie Collins

---

1. The phrase is firmly deleted, though it remains unclear whether by WC himself or by a later censor.

2. The Venus Kallipygos or Callipygian Venus – literally Venus with beautiful buttocks – is a renowned Greek statue in the Museo Nazionale di Capodimonte in Naples showing a young woman pulling up her robes to turn and admire her own bottom. Grinstein (2003) suggests the young WC saw it there during the family holiday in 1837, but there is no evidence for this and it is unlikely given that in the 19th century it was held in a restricted room.

3. A shallow, ornamental bowl with handles (Italian).

4. Thomas Stothard, R.A. (1755–1834: ODNB), illustrator, historical and portrait painter, noted for his female figures.

5. See WC's description of the photograph which he calls ‘Portrait of Field Marshall Sarony in Uniform’ in the ‘Catalogue Raisonné’ accompanying [2727] to Sarony of 4 June 1887.

[3014] TO B. E. JOSEPH,<sup>1</sup> 21 MARCH 1887

MS: Yale (Tinker 717). Published: A&C2, p. 67, amended A&C6, p. 19

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 21st March 1887

Dear Sir,

I am indeed greatly obliged to you for your kindness in copying, and sending to me, the interesting letter by Sir Walter Scott which it is your good fortune to possess. It will be kept by me, among the letters that I most highly value.<sup>2</sup> As a writer, and as a man, Scott is (to my mind) one of the most admirable and perfect characters that has ever conferred honour on Literature. More than thirty years' study of the art of writing fiction have convinced me that he is, beyond question, the greatest novelist that this country – or any other country – has produced.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me, dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

B. E. Joseph Esqre

---

1. Unidentified.
2. The letter in question also remains unidentified.
3. Compare the similar phrasing in [2800] to J. A. Stewart of 8 January 1888.

[2692] TO BRAM STOKER,<sup>1</sup> 21 MARCH 1887

MS: Leeds. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 234.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 21st March 1887

Dear Sir,

I accede with pleasure to your kind suggestion that I should add my name to the Honorary Committee of the Westland Marston Testimonial Fund.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me, faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

The Secretary | Provisional Committee

---

1. Sir Henry Irving's secretary and touring manager from 1878.
2. John Westland Marston (1819–90), LLD, dramatist and poet – see the fragment [0322] to him of [later 1850s]. On 1 June 1887 Henry Irving and his company gave a Testimonial Matinée at the Lyceum Theatre with a revival of Byron's Werner. There had previously been unsuccessful attempts to secure for Marston a government pension. See Archer, pp. 220, 290.

[2693] TO A. P. WATT, 21 MARCH 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 234–235.

90. G. P. 21st March 1887

My dear Watt,

I waited to acknowledge the receipt of your excellent letter (copy), until I had heard from Henry Dickens. The enclosed arrived on Saturday evening – and brings the affair to a satisfactory conclusion – that is to say a courteous conclusion.<sup>1</sup>

As for the Editor, he is (properly speaking) an object for compassion. So far as the laws of politeness are concerned, his education has evidently been neglected. Let us lament over our erring brothers (N.B. my father's mother was a Scotchwoman).<sup>2</sup>

I don't like to boast. But, on this delicious day, I believe my age to be – not 63 – but 36.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Henry Dickens's letter has not been traced, but it presumably indicated that the Weekly Dispatch was not interested in a story from WC on the terms demanded. Serial stories had begun to appear in the Dispatch in 1886 and, initially at least, tended to be of a markedly radical tendency.
2. Referring to W. A. Hunter, whom Henry Dickens later described as 'an excellent editor' (Recollections, p. 24). WC remarked to Watt on a number of occasions on the rudeness of the Scots (see [2747] of 22 August 1887, for example) – despite the fact that the agent himself hailed from Glasgow.

[2694] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 22 MARCH 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 235–236.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd March | 1887

My dear Chatto,

I am very sorry to have missed you.

After inventing about 20 Titles – one worse than the other – I had gone out to make a last effort by roaming the streets. The result will be found overleaf. Some of your titles are I think very good – but there seems to be this objection to all of them, that they don't describe a collection of stories (as it seems to me). They are titles for a complete novel. I shall keep them – in case of having good reason to look at them again.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

1. Drawing-Room Stories.<sup>2</sup> | =
2. Little Novels.<sup>3</sup> | =
3. Mrs Zant And The Ghost: And Other Stories.<sup>4</sup> | =

I think with you that this last is the best title, after all. But I add the result of my walk – to show that I have tried to do something, and to thank you for kindly helping me!

-
1. The list of titles suggested by Andrew Chatto has not been traced.
  2. The three potential titles and WC's comment are written on the third page of the folding notepaper, opposite the signature.
  3. The title finally selected – see [2696] to Chatto of the following day.
  4. 'Mrs. Zant and the Ghost' is the revised version of 'The Ghost's Touch', originally syndicated by Tillotson's in autumn 1885.

[2695] TO A. P. WATT, 22 MARCH 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 236.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday 22nd March | 1887

My dear Watt

This day week (the 29th) is the first night of the revival of "Man and Wife."<sup>1</sup> Will you have two seats for that night? or for any night afterwards?

There was but one thing to do with the Editor's letter – and that thing I have done. It is in the wastepaper basket.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. The revival at the Haymarket.
  2. Unsurprisingly, the belated reply from the editor of the Weekly Dispatch has not been traced.

[2696] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 23 MARCH 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 236–237.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23rd March 1887

My dear Chatto,

I have more faith in your opinion than in mine.<sup>1</sup> My head is full of two new stories, which float about in my brains – one uppermost at one time, and one at another<sup>2</sup> – and really the titles don't get a fair chance. In a clearer state of mind, I should have seen that "Mrs Zant and The Ghost – and other stories" was too long. As it is, I only see this, when you help me. Let us then decide on

"Little Novels" | by | "Wilkie Collins"

And if it should turn out that some damnable female writer has already got this title, let us stick to it nevertheless.<sup>3</sup> It is not a celebrated title and there is the grand point.

Ever yours | WC

When the proofs get as far as that, look at the little story called "Royal Love". As a delicate little bit of miniature painting, I call it a good stroke of work in its way.<sup>4</sup>

-
1. Chatto had written to WC on the same day to say that he liked the title 'Little Novels' (Reading).

2. Presumably the two serial stories mentioned in [2714] to A. P. Watt of 26 April 1887, The Legacy of Cain and 'Iris'.
3. For another example of WC's animus against women novelists, who are blamed for writing so prolifically that all available titles are used up, see [2755] to A. P. Watt of 28 September 1887.
4. First published in the Christmas number of Longman's Magazine in 1884, 'Royal Love' eventually appeared under the title 'Mr Medhurst and the Princess' when reprinted in Little Novels.

[2697] TO A. P. WATT, 25 MARCH 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 237.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th March 1887

(In haste)

My dear Watt

Here are the last two places left in the Theatre.<sup>1</sup> I should have liked you to be nearer the stage – but I was barely in time to get what I enclose. One line to say that the ticket has reached you.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. For Man and Wife.

[2698] TO FRANCES POWER COBBE, 28 MARCH 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 237–238.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th March 1887

Dear Miss Cobbe,

I have waited, in the hope of being able to thank you personally tomorrow for your kind letter and for the ticket. But the change in the weather which is so welcome to everybody else, seems to have been a little too sudden for me. Old aches and pains have returned – and I am driven away from London to try what a little country air will do for me. Pray accept my most sincere wishes for a great success tomorrow.<sup>1</sup>

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The event on 29 March for which Cobbe sends WC a ticket has not been identified, though it may well be a speech on an anti-vivisection platform. In fact, WC does not seem to have left London around this time. The day in question saw the opening of Man and Wife at the Haymarket, though WC did not attend – see [2699] and [2701] to A. P. Watt of 29 and 30 March 1887.

[2699] TO A. P. WATT, 29 MARCH 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 238.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

29th March 1887

My dear Watt,

You are more than kind when you give me new books – you always give them at the best of all possible times. The “present delightful change in the weather” has relaxed my wretched nerves – and the neuralgia plagues me from time to time. For the first night in my life, I am not going to the theatre to follow the fortunes of one of my own plays.<sup>1</sup> Mr Haggard's new book – under such circumstances as these – is doubly welcome and claims thanks doubly repeated.<sup>2</sup> The little “Dickens” Memoir interested me, it is needless to say, before I opened the pages. Last night, I just looked at them – and arrived at the conclusion that “Frank T. Marzials” does not wear trousers – but petticoats.<sup>3</sup>

I hope you will be sufficiently amused tonight to make your pilgrimage to the theatre worth while. As fast as a cab can get here, when it is over, I shall hear what fate has befallen Mrs Brown Potter and yours ever<sup>4</sup>

WC

---

1. Man and Wife, revived at the Haymarket. WC sends Watt the tickets in [2697] of 25 March 1887, though Watt could not in fact attend, while WC writes to Watt on 30 March 1887 ([2701]) informing him that the play was kindly received.

2. As [2701] to Watt of the following day makes clear, this is Jess, serialized in the Cornhill from May 1886 to April 1887, and now published in a single volume from Longman. A copy of the second edition was found in WC's library (Baker 2002, p. 114).

3. WC was wrong in thinking that the author of the brief Life of Charles Dickens (London: Walter Scott, 1887) – Sir Frank Thomas Marzials – was a woman.

4. The married name of Cora Urquhart (1858–1936), the American actress starring in the revival of Man and Wife – see [2710] to her of 22 April 1887.

[2700] TO EDWARD W. BOK,<sup>1</sup> 30 MARCH 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 239.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

March 30th 1887

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my best acknowledgement for the proposal with which you have honoured me.

When I visited the United States, some years since, circumstances allowed me no opportunity of being presented to Mr Ward Beecher<sup>2</sup> – or of hearing him on the platform or in the pulpit. At the later time of his visit to England, ill health obliged me to withdraw myself from all social engagements. In this disadvantageous position I must not attempt to contribute to a Memorial which (as I understand it) takes the form of a personal tribute. I can only ask you to kindly accept my excuses.

Believe me, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins
Edward W. Bok, Esq.

---

1. Edward William Bok (1863–1930), editor, writer and philanthropist. The son of Dutch immigrants to the USA in 1870, he worked first for the publishers Henry Holt and then for Scribner's. He edited the Brooklyn Magazine from 1884–87, founding the Bok Syndicate Press in 1886. He later edited the influential Ladies Home Journal (1889–1919).

2. Henry Ward Beecher (1813–87), well-known Congregational minister and author, based in Brooklyn, New York. Bok published the privately printed Henry Ward Beecher Memorial in 1887.

[2701] TO A. P. WATT, 30 MARCH 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 239–240.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th March 1887

My dear Watt,

Your letter of yesterday and my letter of the same date thanking you for Jess and Dickens have crossed each other. I am sorry indeed to hear of the cause which prevented you from going to the theatre last night. My reports (coming from persons present) tell me that the old play and the new actress were very kindly received by a crowded audience.<sup>1</sup>

Come by all means, and be sure of your welcome. Alas! the lovely weather relaxes my [illegible word] nerves, and lets in the neuralgia held back while the keen easterly winds were making everybody else miserable.

I hope Mrs Watt and your son found their evening at the theatre a fairly pleasant one.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Cora Urquhart (Mrs Brown Potter) in the opening night of the revival of Man and Wife.
2. Since Watt was not able to attend the opening night due to indisposition, the tickets were used by his wife and one of his two older sons.

[2702] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 31 MARCH 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 240.

Certainly. Let the alteration suggested be made.

Wilkie Collins

March 31st

---

1. WC's note is written across the letter from Chatto & Windus to which it is a reply. On Chatto & Windus's italic headed notepaper, the original letter (a carbon copy is found in the letter-books at Reading) refers to the three volumes of Little Novels and reads as follows:

214, Piccadilly | London W. 31 Mar. 1887

Dear Sir

Will you kindly say if we may transpose the stories in the way suggested by our printers in the enclosed note, in order to make the volumes of about equal thickness. If you agree, it will only be necessary to return their note with your approval endorsed upon it.

We enclose some further proofs,

Yours truly Chatto & Windus | [illegible initials]

Wilkie Collins Esq

[3266] TO MARY ANDERSON, 5 APRIL 1887<sup>1</sup>

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 25.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W

Tuesday evening 5th April

Dear Mary Anderson,

I have just got back to London again – something the better for change of air – and hoping that you may not have left town yet. I am told that you are on your way to the country to produce a play at Easter! Am I right in disregarding this tremendous piece of news? And, if I am, will you tell me on what afternoon I may hope to see you if I call at the hotel? Any hour that will not be inconvenient to you will be a delightful hour to me.

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Year based on the calendar and the reference to Easter which was the following weekend.

[2703] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & Co., 5 APRIL 1887

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 322; BGLL, IV, pp. 240–241.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th April 1887

Dear Sirs,

I have been so closely occupied with literary engagements which have fallen into arrears through illness, that reports from the wine cellar have been received one day, and forgotten the next. How long there has been no Ribera Sherry for the lucky people who can drink it, I will not attempt to calculate. It will be more to the purpose to ask you to kindly send me another supply – i.e. six dozen, divided into three dozen each of the two customary seals.

Believe me, Dear Sirs, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Beecheno, Yaxley & Co

---

1. Initialled and directed to ‘Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co | 135. Minorities | E.7’, postmarked on the following day.

[2704] TO MRS HEPWORTH,<sup>1</sup> 5 APRIL 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 241.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th April 1887

Dear Mrs Hepworth,

Pray forgive a late reply to your kind letter. I have been ill – and arrears of literary work (to say nothing of correspondence) have little mercy on me, now that I am better.

Let me thank you first for the newspaper cutting – most interesting to me.<sup>2</sup> It is already taken care of among my special treasures of that kind.

As to my letter to you, by all means make use of it. I am only afraid that you overstate the influence which it is likely to have. In any case, it express [sic] my sincere opinion of your story. And let these hurried lines add my cordial good wishes for your success.

Believe me, vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [2618] to her of 24 September 1886. Mrs Hepworth must have written to WC, requesting permission to use his praise of her story ‘Twice Wooed, Twice Won’ as a testimonial when submitting work to periodical editors.

2. Not found with the letter and untraced.

[2705] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 6 APRIL 1887

MS: Unknown. On sale: James Pepper Rare Books, June 2002.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 241.

Very truly yours, Wilkie Collins, 6th April 1887

---

1. ‘On a piece of paper approximately by 2¼ x 3½ inches. Traces of former mounting on back’. Probably a simple autograph.

[2706] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 7 APRIL 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 242–243.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 7th April 1887

“Ah, blessés de la vie! afin de nous guérir,
Trempons nos coeurs dans la lumière!”<sup>1</sup>

My dear Collaborateur,

Even my trumpety troubles – only more nerve-pain, more doctor, more drug – find consolation in your father’s noble poem. And “Pourquoi pleurer?” is my motto too.

Here enclosed are the signed dedications – which those two ladies do indeed well deserve.<sup>2</sup>

“Madeleine” arrived this morning – both copies in perfect order. Let me not only thank you – but express my admiration of the manner in which our play has been produced. Type and paper both delighted your old friend the moment he looked at them. Thus far, I have only been able to read the preliminary address to the Reader.<sup>3</sup> Bravo! bravo! Just the right tone to take – just the right resistance to make to commonplace opinion, which is no opinion at all – for it refuses to think for itself. Stick to your last word, “Je t’ai!” It expresses strong emotions – and is entirely right. Let us protect our ~~pure~~ poor Madeleine from the profane hands of the commonplace French dramatist – no! not dramatist – playwright!

The dedication that you suggest, only adds one more to my many obligations to your friendship. Need I say how gladly I accept it?<sup>4</sup>

There is much more to say – but it must be said in another letter, when I have read more of your father’s poems, and when I have also read Madeleine. Power is the quality which has most impressed me in the poems so far – and a remarkable union of force and simplicity in the expression of ideas which can only be achieved in poetry by a true poet. Of the luxury which it has been to me (as a foreigner) to read French which does not constantly drive me to my dictionary, – and which I don’t find there when I consult the dictionary – I leave you to judge.

Affectly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. ‘Oh, we who are wounded by life and need to be made whole, let us drench our hearts in the light!’ These lines conclude the poem ‘Pourquoi pleurer?’ (‘Why shed tears?’) by the recipient’s father, Count Hyacinthe-Désiré du Pontavice de Heussey, a copy of whose Oeuvres complètes, published in two volumes in 1887, must have been previously sent to WC (Baker 2002, p. 117). The poem in question is the third poem found in the first volume.

2. The dedications have not been located and the ladies remain unidentified.

3. The French edition of Madeleine (Paris, 1887), de Heussey’s play based on The New Magdalen, begins with a prefatory note ‘Au Lecteur’ – see [2676] to de Heussey of 14 February 1887.

4. Not published in Madeleine and untraced.

[2707] TO HARRY QUILTER, 7 APRIL 1887

MS: Huntington (HM 32311). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 243.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th April 1887

Dear Quilter,

I too have been ill – and I am only slowly mending. So you have my sincerest sympathy. Don’t work! In that state of your head, it is a risk, and you will not do yourself justice. If the cause is congestion – exercise and perspiration are the remedies – a walk, a bath, a rub-down. But if nerves are to blame – I dare not advise. In the matter of nerves, every man is a law unto himself.

Your opinion of the acting is, I find, the general opinion. I have not yet dared to go and see my play.<sup>1</sup> When we meet I shall have something to tell you about the best dramatic teaching in England – patiently pursued, and yet thrown away.

Yours ever | WC

Two more things to say. The devil is pinching the nerves in my chest while I write – and completely stupefies me. 1st thing: –

Let us drop the formality of “Mister” in writing, I beg.

2nd thing

No “Contemporary Review” has arrived up to this time (11.45.A.M.)<sup>2</sup>

---

1. This must refer to the revival of Man and Wife at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, from 29 March 1887.

2. Quilter had been a regular contributor to the Contemporary Review from 1882. His ‘Decline of the Drama’ appeared in the issue for April 1887, pp. 547–560.

[2708] TO COURTLANDT PALMER,<sup>1</sup> 14 APRIL 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 244.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

14th April 1887

Dear Mr Palmer,

Many thanks for your kind note. I am not quite sure of being in town for the next few days. But if you can honour me with a visit on Tuesday afternoon next at 4 o’Clock, I shall be very glad to see you. If this appointment should not be convenient, pray choose any later afternoon at 4 o’Clock which may be most agreeable to yourself – and favour me with a line to say when I may hope to receive you.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Mr Courtlandt Palmer

---

1. Probably the New York free-thinker Courtlandt Palmer (1843–88), graduate of the Columbia Law School in 1869, founder of the Nineteenth Century Club in 1882, and at this time treasurer of the American Secular Union. He was obviously staying in London – see [2711] to Felix Moscheles of 25 April 1887.

[2709] TO NAPOLEON SARONY, 21 APRIL 1887

MS: Iowa. Extract: Joline, p. 149; Smith & Terry, p. 46. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 244–245.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 21st April 1887

Dearest Sarony

It has come – it is safe – I am unpacking it myself – I write a line to you – and then I leave my letter and discover a new feature – and then I go back to the desk with my head full of beauty – and then I return to the packing-case.<sup>1</sup> Ha! I have got her – the loveliest of women going into her bath – the living Venus – the exquisitely designed frame to put her in – ~~at~~ both safe and uninjured, exactly as they were packed under the superintendence of the most generous of all generous friends.

I have been away from my letter again, deciding in what light to put her. “Jour à gauche”.<sup>2</sup> I will remove two works of art to make room for her – no! I will first send for the “frame-maker” and have her protected from the London atmosphere under glass.

Oh, Damn! here is the servant asking if I have any letter for the post. “Ten minutes to six, sir.”

If I am not posted by six, Sarony won’t know that his magnificent present has reached me safely. – Ha! I hear a young lady helping to arrange the pictures – she screams – has any accident happened? No only the “lovely red-edged heroic portrait of W.C.”<sup>3</sup> I scream next at one of the charming portraits of Mrs Sarony<sup>4</sup> – “Five minutes to six, sir.” – This is not a letter, my friend – it is hysterics in writing. The letter<sup>5</sup> shall follow – Ten thousand thanks a revoir [sic] – your grateful,

WC

---

1. Referring to a photograph by Sarony – see no. III in [2727] to him of 4 June 1887.

2. ‘With the light coming from the left’ (French).

3. A reference to the photographic portrait of Collins also sent by Sarony – see [2721] to Andrew Chatto, 19 May 1887, when he seems to have ordered a supply. Some photographs had Sarony’s address running vertically in red ink.

4. See [2727] to Sarony, 4 June 1887.

5. That is, [2727] of 4 June 1887.

[2710] TO CORA BROWN POTTER,<sup>1</sup> 22 APRIL 1887

MS: Unknown. Published: Washington Post (2 May 1887), p. 1e,<sup>2</sup> our copy text; BGLL, IV, pp. 245–246.

DEAR MRS. BROWN POTTER: Last night I saw your performance in “Man and Wife” for the first time.<sup>3</sup> Let me sincerely thank you for an impersonation of Ann Sylvester which has shown me a living woman as I had imagined her – a gentle, sensitive, trustful nature, rising with the demands on it to a patience that suffers, nobly, and a resolution that confronts self sacrifice with unshrinking courage, sustained by love and gratitude. These are present in the poor governess as you have understood her, and as I understand her. In voice and look, in manner and in movement, you present it. Your conception of character is not with equal success throughout, but always with an unaffected truth to nature which I admired, and with unconventionalities in which I rejoiced. Experience, which has valuable lessons still in store for you, will enlarge your resources in that department of your art, beset with difficulties, which is called by play.<sup>4</sup> In the meantime, do not let yourself be discouraged by the obstacles which human stupidity, in its malicious form, tries to put in your way. Personally, you may set envy at defiance; intellectually, you have the supreme advantage of possessing a true vocation for your art. With the most sincere good wishes for your future, believe me, ever yours,

WILKIE COLLINS.

---

1. Née Mary Cora Urquhart (1857–1936), strikingly beautiful daughter of a wealthy New Orleans family, who had married the rich New York coffee broker James Brown Potter in 1877. Known for her spirited recitations at social gatherings, she first acted professionally in London in 1887, returning to America later the same year to set up her own company. Her dramatic talents were not always as highly evaluated as they are here by WC. Oscar Wilde commented: ‘With regard to Mrs. Brown-Potter, as acting is no longer considered absolutely essential for success on the English stage, there is really no reason why the pretty bright-eyed lady who charmed us all last June by her merry laugh and her nonchalant ways, should not – to borrow an expression from her native language – make a big boom and paint the town red’ (‘The American Invasion’, Court and Society Review, 23 March 1887). Long after her retirement from the stage, she wrote her reminiscences, The Age of Innocence and I (1933). See also Gerald Bordman (ed.), The Oxford Companion to American Theatre (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1984), p. 108.

2. Headed ‘Wilkie Collins Warmly Congratulates Mrs. Potter.’, with the dateline ‘LONDON, May 1.’, the letter is introduced simply, as follows: ‘Mrs. J. Brown Potter has received the following letter from Wilkie Collins, dated April 22, 1887.’

3. The revival of Man and Wife opened at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, on Tuesday 29 March 1887, with H. Kemble as Sir Patrick Lundie, E. S. Willard as Geoffrey Delamayn, and Charles Collette as Bishopriggs.

4. WC presumably means ‘by-play’ or stage business.

[2711] TO FELIX MOSCHELES,<sup>1</sup> 25 APRIL 1887

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 246.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th April 1887

Dear Mr Felix Moscheles,

Mr Courtlandt Palmer called here a few days since,<sup>2</sup> and said that you might kindly invite me on Thursday next. I can only ask you (as I asked Mr Palmer) to accept my thanks and my excuses. This evening, I leave town – and I have no prospect of returning so soon as Thursday.<sup>3</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Felix Moscheles, painter and long-standing acquaintance of WC. See [0672] to him of 10 April 1866.

2. See [2708] to Palmer of 14 April 1887.

3. This appears to be a diplomatic excuse as WC was correcting the last of the proofs for Little Novels.

[2712] TO ALFRED NUTTING,<sup>1</sup> 25 APRIL 1887

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 247; Lewis website.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th April 1887

Dear Sir,

Pray oblige me by conveying the expression of my thanks to the Council of your Association. I am very sensible of the compliment which is implied in your kind suggestion. But I must beg you to excuse me if I fail to profit by it – for reasons which only relate to myself.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Alfred Nutting Esq.

1. Alfred Nutting (b. 1867) was in 1891 Assistant Secretary to the British and Foreign Correspondent Association (Census RG12/478, f. 12). The Association is otherwise untraced.

[2713] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 25 APRIL 1887

MS: Houghton (Autograph File C), with signed photograph.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 247.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 25th April 1887

My dear Sir,

Pray accept the few autographs which collector's [sic] have still left in my possession – and let me add the sincere expression of my sympathy.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. This letter is from the collection of Evert J. Wendell, an autograph collector who left much material to the Houghton Library in 1918. The letter may well be addressed to him.

2. Of WC looking down at a table with his left hand on his cheek.

[3115] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 25 APRIL 1887

MS: Unknown. On sale: Dominic Winter (22 July 2008, lot 426);<sup>2</sup> International Autograph Auctions (3 April 2011, lot 505). Published: A&C4, p. 29.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 25th April 1887

---

1. Presumably an autograph collector.

2. Part of an album of autographs.

[2714] TO A. P. WATT, 26 APRIL 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 247–248.

26th April 1887

My dear Watt

Will you kindly put the address on the enclosed, and let it go with your letters to the post?

I have lost the address of a novelist whose publisher is Blackwood – and to whom I ought to have written long since. And I don't know Blackwood's address. Helpless, – isn't it?<sup>1</sup>

Tillotson's story is so far off that my perverse brains won't get to work at it. They are busy on another story – which won't do for Tillotson. Then what is it good for? God only knows!<sup>2</sup> The mild weather is at the bottom of all this.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC's letter to the unidentified Blackwood's author remains untraced.

2. 'Tillotson's story' is The Legacy of Cain, of which the first portion was due in Bolton at the end of September 1887, while 'another story' must be the shorter serial outlined in [2719] to Watt of 8 May. This was 'Iris', which recycles some episodes from the play Rank and Riches, but was eventually abandoned (an incomplete manuscript is found in the Berg Collection), though portions of it were in turn recycled for use in WC's final novel Blind Love (see Peters, pp. 427–428; and Bachman & Cox, pp. 36–38, 425–429).

[2715] TO A. P. WATT, 28 APRIL 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 248.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th April 1887

My dear Watt

Just a word more to say that I mean to take your sensible advice – and to begin tomorrow. As soon as I can calculate length, and probable time of publication, I will write again – and propose a meeting here.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I am sorry Mr Haggard wrote that letter to The Times.<sup>2</sup> Oh, the merits of silence!

---

1. Referring to the plans for the composition and serial publication of the story 'Iris', as detailed in [2719] to Watt of 8 May 1887.

2. Haggard's letter, retaliating to press accusations of plagiarism, appeared under the heading 'Mr. Rider Haggard and His Critics' in the Times, 27 April 1887, p. 6.

[2716] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 28 APRIL 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 248–249.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th April 1887

Little Novels

My dear Chatto,

The last proofs corrected for press, will reach you by this post under another cover.

I have decided to let the stories speak for themselves – no preface, no dedication. Will you kindly direct the printers to send me proofs of the "Contents". I want them to appear on the next page to the title page – and to be all presented (in the case of each volume) on that page. No turning over – so that the reader, on opening the book, will see all my new titles (in each volume) at a glance.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

P.S. | Two ladies have written to me asking when "a one volume edition" of "The Evil Genius" is likely to appear. If you have decided – one line to mention the date. If not yet – don't trouble to answer me.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. For a list of the contents of each volume with WC's new titles, see Parrish & Miller, pp. 123–124.

2. The Chatto & Windus single-volume 'Piccadilly' edition of the novel appeared in early April 1887 (see Topp, III), and had already been published when WC wrote. In the margin to the left of the postscript, in what is probably Andrew Chatto's hand, is written '6 copies sent'. Receipt of the volumes is acknowledged in [2717] to Chatto of the following day.

[2717] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 29 APRIL 1887

MS: Kansas (MS D 11:12). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 249.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

29th April 1887

My dear Chatto,

Another word, to thank you very sincerely for "The Evil Genius" in its new form and its new dress – always a welcome dress to me for it presents my favourite colour.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to the first single-volume edition of the novel, the 'Piccadilly' edition bound in green cloth – see [2716], C's request to Chatto of the previous day.

[3400] TO MR COLEMAN,<sup>1</sup> 5 MAY 1887

MS: Lewis Collection (L2866). Published: A&C14, pp. 24–25.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th May 1887

My dear Mr Coleman,

Human happiness and I have parted company, for the present. Smell gone, taste gone, all the teeth left in my head aching, – and, if there is a Jubilee exhibition of Secretions-of-Mucus-among-the-bronchial-tubes, soon to be opened, the Gold Medal of that “excellent institution” will be mine.<sup>2</sup> To this condition the weather has reduced me.<sup>3</sup> That I should be turned out of the theatre on Saturday next for disturbing the performances by blasts from the nose, yells from the chest, and profane language in the intervals, does not admit of a moment’s doubt.<sup>4</sup>

But I am too grateful for your kindness to resign the hope of seeing Mrs John Wood<sup>5</sup> in the new play.<sup>6</sup> If I may write again next week, I shall hope to report myself in a fitter state to enjoy the hospitality of the Court Theatre, on any future Matinée which you may appoint.

In the meantime, with Mrs Graves’s kind regards and with my most sincere congratulations on your recovery,

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

I am very glad to hear that you like “The Guilty River”.<sup>7</sup> The foreign translators report that the title is untranslatable – I accept this as a compliment to The English Language.<sup>8</sup>

---

1. See [2591] to him, 21 July 1886.

2. Queen Victoria’s Golden Jubilee of 50 years on the throne was celebrated on 20 June 1887. See [2729] to A. P. Watt, 16 June 1887.

3. The weather at this time was cold – around 50F (10C) with southeast winds and rain, and heavy mist the day before this letter was written (weather reports in the The Times 2, 3, 4, May).

4. No extant letters around this time mention this illness.

5. WC clearly rated Mrs. John Wood as an actress – see [0903] to W. P. Frith, 16 August 1869. Born Matilda Charlotte Vining (6 November 1831) she married John William Wood in early 1848 and was known as Mrs. John Wood for the rest of her career. She and John went to the USA in 1854 where she was renowned as a burlesque and comic actress and managed two theatres in New York and San Francisco before returning to England in July 1866 (Era, 29 July 1866, p. 10b). She had been separated from her husband for some time when he died in Canada in 1863. Her London debut was on 12 November 1866 (Era 18 November 1866, p. 10). She went on to manage several theatres and act comic parts until 1905. She died on 11 January 1915 in Birchington-on-Sea leaving £19,700. She had borne three children but only one, Florence, survived, dying in 1943. See ‘The Late Mrs. John Wood’, Era, 20 January 1915, p. 9 and public records. Matilda was a cousin to George J. Vining who played Fosco in the drama The Woman in White from October 1871 to January 1872 when he fell ill. He subsequently fell out with WC when he took the play on tour and wanted to shorten and amend it (see [1225] to George Vining, 17 April 1872).

6. The reference to the ‘new’ play is slightly puzzling but presumably refers to Dandy Dick by Arthur Wing Pinero which had opened at the Court Theatre more than three months earlier on 27 January 1887; Mrs. John Wood was performing in it as Georgina Tidman. It ran for 171 performances until the 22 July when the theatre was demolished. It then ran for a further seventy-five nights at Toole’s Theatre (www.gutenberg.org/files/40700/40700-h/40700-h.htm#Intro and Wikipedia). The short accompanying play, The Nettle by Ernest Warren, was by no means new – it was first played at the Court on 13 October 1886 and accompanied all the performances there of Dandy Dick (Allardyce II, p. 614).

7. Published in the second half of November 1886 as Arrowsmith’s Christmas Annual and reissued in March 1887. See Gasson, p. 72, and Publishers’ Circular 1886, pp. 1466, 1480, and 1887, p. 255.

8. Although the English editions all have ‘The Right of Translation is Reserved’ on the front wrapper or title page, no foreign editions in book form are known. There were, however, Dutch and Swedish serializations in 1887 where the title was translated as ‘At the River’ and ‘The Secret of the River’ respectively (bibliographic information from Andrew Gasson).

[2718] TO ISAAC TARREY,<sup>1</sup> 7 MAY 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 249–250.

London | 90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th May 1887

Dear Sir,

In compliance with your kind suggestion, I have the pleasure of enclosing the latest photographic portrait that has been taken of me.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Isaac Tarrey Esq

---

1. The 1841 Census records two people of this name resident at Jewry Wall Street, St Nicholas, Leicester, a man of 20 in the stocking industry, and his six-month old son, both are possible recipients.

[2719] TO A. P. WATT, 8 MAY 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 250.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Sunday, 8th May 1887

My dear Watt,

My answer to Mr Rogers is, of course, to refer him to you.<sup>1</sup> Can you give me a look-in at the usual time – either tomorrow or Tuesday? If not, I have sketched terms and time on the next leaf. But if we can consult so much the better – provided always that it is perfectly convenient to you.

Ever yours | WC

Estimate of the Story<sup>2</sup> | =

1. To run through not more than 15 weekly parts
2. 1st weekly part to be published not earlier than August or later than September next – so that the serial publication may end in December next. Otherwise, we shall be getting into Tillotson's way, with his story
3. Terms to be calculated in proportion to Tillotson's terms for the twenty-weeks serial
4. MS to be divided into three parts, and paid for on delivery of each of the three parts
5. All serial rights to be sold, in any weekly newspaper, anywhere, published in the English tongue – as in Tillotson's case. Copyright republication in book form immediately on conclusion in serial form, and foreign translations reserved.

---

1. Probably referring to an approach from Edmund Dawson Rogers of the National Press Agency, which acted as a fiction syndication agency from as early as 1874 – see [1187] to him of 18 January 1872.

2. The novel 'Iris', which was eventually abandoned.

[2720] TO A. P. WATT, 16 MAY 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 251.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16th May 1887

My dear Watt

I cannot tell you how delighted I am with the little picture. In the drawing, the sentiment, the pose of the figure, the girl is simply exquisite – and it is only fair to add that the frame is worthy of the picture. Thank you most sincerely. I will re-arrange the prints in the drawing room – and our charming girl shall have the best light. To my mind, she is younger than the other model.<sup>1</sup>

I shall look with pleasure to your visit tomorrow. Here have been two gentlemen (the Weekly Dispatch and the Rogers syndicate) asking me to write for them – and then wanting me cheap.<sup>2</sup> I have hopes of the third effort, under your superintendence,<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The print in question has not been identified.

2. Referring to the failure of recent negotiations with the Sunday newspaper and the National Press Agency.
3. Unidentified.

[2721] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 19 MAY 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 251–252.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

19th May 1887

My dear Chatto

Let me thank you for the presentation copies of “Little Novels” which you so kindly sent a few days since.<sup>1</sup>

I am not sure whether you do, or do not, take some interest in photography. A new supply of the portrait enclosed has just reached me from New York – thanks to Sarony’s kindness.<sup>2</sup> As a work of photographic art, it is generally pronounced to be beyond the reach of any similar work here – and on that account I slip it into my letter. Of the likeness (once remarkable) the less now said the better! I was thirteen years younger, when I sat to Sarony in New York.<sup>3</sup> What one of your authors was – will be the right description of it.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Published in three volumes by Chatto & Windus in mid May 1887.

2. See [2691] to Sarony of 19 March, where WC mentions that he is running short of copies of his own portraits.

3. A number of images taken of WC by Sarony in New York in late 1873 or early 1874 have been posted at the Lewis website; see also the frontispiece to BGLL, III.

[2722] TO A. P. WATT, 20 MAY 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 252.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20th May 1887

My dear Watt

I have just read your welcome letter – and I say with the sentinel in Hamlet, “For this relief much thanks”.<sup>1</sup> To have settled the doubt about Tillotson will administer a spur to my progress with the story.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Francisco in Hamlet, I.i.80.

2. Perhaps this means that Watt has confirmed when the first instalment of copy of the longer serial story is due in Bolton, so that WC can concentrate more closely on ‘Iris’, the shorter serial story.

[2723] TO JANE BIGELOW, 1 JUNE 1887

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 252.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

1st June 1887

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

I had planned and hoped to present myself among your other friends yesterday. But I am hard at work again – and when five o’clock came, I was so tired that (to own the truth) I really could not get out of my chair. Pray accept this miserable excuse (in consideration of its being the true one) – and let me hear that your indulgence will lead you this way to forgive me, at your own good time.

Always truly yours W.C

[2724] TO ANNE WYNNE, 1 JUNE 1887

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 509–510.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

1st June 1887

Welcome back again, sweet Mrs Wilkie and Mrs Wilkie's mother! Here we have had neuralgia in place of earthquake terrors – I have been taking forced holidays with my excellent friends Opium and Quinine, until all my literary work has fallen into arrear – and now I am obliged to perform the detestable act of penance called “making up for lost time”. Next week I hope to be able to ask on what day I may come, and hear of your gambings and gaities – the more shocking you have been in the poisonous atmosphere (morally, my dear, poisonous) of Monaco, the more interested I shall be. This week I am the galley-slave chained to his oar.

Your loving | WC

Just going out to get some “useful information” wanted for my new story.<sup>3</sup>

-
1. Direct to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, with partly illegible postmark as dated.
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked ‘HIERATICA’.
  3. Probably his next novel The Legacy of Cain which appeared as a serial from mid-February 1888.

[2725] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 2 JUNE 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 253.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd June 1887

My dear Chatto,

Let me thank you for two Drafts (at 4 & 6 months) on The City Bank for £150...- each<sup>1</sup> – being the payment agreed on for a seven years' lease of the right to publish: “Little Novels”, dating from the 27th of May last, and including all forms of book-publication selling to the public at any prices not below two shillings per copy.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Andrew Chatto Esq

P.S. Business being settled on the other leaf, I must congratulate you on your conversion to the 40th article of Christian Faith (strangely left out of the Prayer Book): as follows – “That Person who doth not believe in Holidays ought to be taken of the whole multitude of the faithful as an Heathen and Publican – unless he be openly reconciled by a visit to Black Gang Chine<sup>3</sup> (or any other place) – a drinking of good liquors – and rounds of amusement of every kind, indulged in without scruple.”<sup>4</sup>

Years since, I paid a visit to some friends staying at that pretty place. After two days passed in a state of perpetual cold sweat and constant temptations to commit suicide, I retreated (in tears) from the climate of the Isle of Wight, and got hold again of Life on the sands at Ramsgate<sup>5</sup>

-
1. The first draft was paid in to WC's bank account at once as ‘Chatto & Windus' note discod’, with a debit of £3-14s-4d also on 2 June for the early payment. No record regarding the second draft is identifiable (Coutts: WC).
  2. The agreement concerning Little Novels is set out in [2007], WC's second letter to Chatto & Windus of 1 February 1882, and amended in [2688] to Andrew Chatto of 15 March 1887. Chatto enclosed the bank drafts with his letter of 1 June 1887 (Reading).
  3. Long a famous scenic spot on the Isle of Wight, now the site of a fantasy park.
  4. In his postscript WC responds playfully to the news (communicated in Andrew Chatto's letter of the previous day) that the publisher has at last taken a holiday, on the Isle of Wight. He parodies the language of ‘The Articles of Religion’ in the Book of Common Prayer, commonly known as the ‘Thirty-Nine Articles’, which detail the points of doctrine adopted by the Church of England in 1571.

5. WC mentions visits to the Isle of Wight in [0241] to CAC of 26 June 1856 and [0369] to HC of 22 August 1860, though it is unclear whether either of these is the trip referred to here.

[2726] TO JOHN BIGELOW,<sup>1</sup> 3 JUNE 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13).<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 254.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

3rd June 1887

Dear Mr Bigelow

The neuralgia has returned – and I am obliged to use another hand in writing to you. My nerves are declared by the doctor to be all out of order – and he forbids paying visits or receiving ~~visitors~~ visits for some time to come. Pray present my excuses and my thanks to Mrs Boulton<sup>3</sup> and continue to forgive me if you can.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The American lawyer was obviously in London with his wife – see [2723] and [2736], the brief notes to Jane Bigelow of 1 June and 10 July 1887.

2. Except for the valediction and signature, in the hand of Caroline Graves.

3. Unidentified.

[2727] TO NAPOLEON SARONY, 4 JUNE 1887

MS: Private, with the associated ‘Catalogue Raisonné’ found at Folger (1758 Yc588/2a–d). Published: B&C, II, pp. 536–539 (as two separate letters).

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 4 June 1887

My dear Sarony, with this you have my impressions of some of the photographs – sincerely expressed. The only lines in your letters that I don’t like are the lines which tell me of your eyes. After what I have suffered in that part of me, my sympathy with you is not easily expressed in words.

With best thanks to Mrs Sarony and with love to you. Ever yours afty | WC

I will write to Mrs Brown Potter about sitting for you.<sup>1</sup> She was cruelly treated here, and she is cruelly treated in your newspapers in the U.S. After seeing her in my play, I say she has a decided vocation for the actress’s art.

I lead the life of a hermit – see no Society – go to no clubs. For years, I have not met Irving – and I can only describe myself as being “acquainted with him.” But I admire him as artist and man.<sup>2</sup>

90. Gloucester Place | London. W. 4th June 1887<sup>3</sup>

Sarony:

=

(Catalogue Raisonné: Works presented to W.C. Selections only – for want of room and time).

Preliminary Notice:

This catalogue has been delayed on its way to New York by a shattering of the writer’s nerves, accomplished (1) by writing too many books. (2) by taking debilitating remedies for gout. (3) by the unexampled ferocity of the British spring. Result: the malady called (when I was a boy) “tic-doulourou” – described at the present time as “Neuralgia”. Remedies: Laudanum, quinine, and devilish obstinacy inherent in the character of the patient.

=

No I Portraits of Mrs Sarony. All admirable specimens of the Art. Three of them simply exquisite: namely (– in their order of merit) – 1. In a dark dress – the right hand holding a fan – the left hand resting on the hip. If I cannot have a portrait by Reynolds or Gainsborough, give me this. 2: [del] In a light dress, with a striped parasol tucked jauntily under the left arm, and a face which says: “Here I am, perfectly dressed to go out – and here is that wretch, Sarony, telling /me/ that it has just begun to rain!” No 3. In another light dress, with trimmings of white fur, and a lovely left arm. Pose, excellent – and drapery most happily arranged. Pray present my compliments and congratulations to Mrs Sarony. And one question to conclude: Say, on your “solemn soul” – will these photographs fade, if they are framed, and hung in a good light?

No II Portrait of Field Marshall Sarony in uniform. A faithful likeness – with (to a peaceable man of letters) a terrifying side to it. When we go to war, on the subject of the Fisheries<sup>4</sup> – I don’t know anything about the question in dispute – but remember this: I fight on your side. Don’t hurt me with that horrid [del] /sword/ and put me behind you when the battle begins.

=

No III. The Girl at the Bath. I offer the flattest contradiction that the laws of politeness will permit to what you have written about her in your letter. Down with Diana! down with the ideal! Titian’s Venus has just come out of her bath – and Sarony’s Venus is just going into her bath, and is by far the most charming woman of the two. She is now in her beautiful frame, exhibited in the best light in my front study. [del] Everbody who sees her, admires her. The other day, a professional artist called on me. Mentioning no names, at first, I asked what he thought of it. “Admirably drawn – the action excellent. Who did it?” I put another question before I answered. “The man who did that,” I said, “is, as I think, a born-artist. Am I right?” “Of course, you are right – there can be no doubt about it.” I then ~~said~~ revealed your name. His amazement (judging you of course by photographers in general) was a sight to see. And now, shall I tell you who he was? My dear old friend:

Holman Hunt

No IV. The draped darling in Profile. She holds a tazza on a pedestal, and looks at it thoughtfully. Here is another anecdote. A friend of mine, literary agent to me, and to many other English writers,<sup>5</sup> saw Venus entering the bath! “I have got a charming work by Sarony”, he said, “sent as a specimen to some publishers here. Let me offer it as a present”. Needless to add that I said yes, with enthusiasm. The work arrived in the neatest and nicest of little frames, and proved to be “The draped darling” – an enlarged copy, beautifully printed in light brown tints. In short, looking like a chalk drawing by an old master. Let the anecdote be followed by a confession. F. Carr Beard, the old friend and doctor of Charles Dickens; the old friend and doctor of Charles Fechter; and the old friend and doctor of yours truly, saw my draped darling, placed in a chair opposite to me while I was at work. It literally enchanted him; there was no getting /him/ away from it. He wanted to send to New York, and buy a copy of it. I felt that I could hardly allow the devoted friend who keeps me alive to do this – and I made him a present of the smaller duplicate which I possessed – thanks to your kindness. Am I forgiven?

No V. Miss Rehan.<sup>6</sup> A grand and striking photograph. But – between ourselves – I find I don’t love Miss Rehan. Too much jaw, too much mouth, too little nose. Fine eyes I admit – but no gaiety in them, and no delicious depths of tenderness in them. I have seen ugly women – with the charm of expression – whom I should prefer. I ought to add that I never saw Miss Rehan or the other members of Daly’s Company when they were in England. The gout had got me at that time.

No VI The birth of Venus. Another glorious picture. In respect of the delicious roundness of the limbs, the softness of the flesh, the exquisite “half lights” playing on the figure, a feast for the eyes in the strictest sense of the words.

No VII

Sarah Bernhardt. Most interesting art-records of a great actress. How valuable they will be when you and I and Sarah have taken our departure for that “other world”, of which we know nothing, and in which surely there will not be not room enough for us all – unless spirits pack easily, like clothes in a big portmanteau. The large portrait of Sarah (front face) seems to me to be sadly suggestive of the wear and tear of her life. You have noticed no doubt, as I do, that there is a suspicion of /coming/ paralysis in [del] one of her eyes which is conspicuously smaller than the other, and over which the upper lid droops lower than in the eye which is in the best state of preservation.

Other Numbers. Must be reserved for another occasion. Let the present Catalogue end with the affectionate expression of the compiler’s gratitude.

-
1. The married and stage name of the American actress Cora Urquhart (1858–1936).
  2. The reference seems likely to be to the actor Henry Irving – see, for example, [1902] to Bram Stoker of 2 February 1880.
  3. The document occupies four sheets, with the numbers ‘1’ to ‘4’ encircled by a curving line, centred at the top of each sheet.
  4. Concerning the Anglo-American fisheries dispute of 1887, see the Times, 7 January (p. 13a), 31 March (p. 3d), 4 June (p. 5e), and 4 June (p. 7d).
  5. Referring to A.P. Watt.
  6. Ada Rehan (1857–1916), the great Irish-American actress, Augustin Daly’s leading lady.

[2728] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 8 JUNE 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 254.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th June 1887

Dear Messrs Chatto & Windus

Let me heartily thank you for your kind remembrance of me on Jubilee Procession Day<sup>1</sup> – and let me hasten to leave at your disposal the two seats which you have been so good as to reserve for me. I shall not be in London on the 21st.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. For WC’s attitude to the Jubilee, see the following letter to A. P. Watt.

[2729] TO A. P. WATT, 16 JUNE 1887

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 539. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 255.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

16 June 1887

My dear Watt,

A word to thank you for your kind letter. You are one of the few people who never forget a duty or a kindness.

I don’t know which I am most weary of – the Jubilee or the heat.<sup>1</sup> I think of going away for a few days to the neighbourhood of Harrow. With the thermometer at 74 in my study, literary work is hard work indeed – and the longing to get drunk on champagne checked by the abject fear of gout, represents, as I think, one of the saddest personal grievances of the present time.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Referring to the celebrations for the fiftieth anniversary of the accession to the throne of Queen Victoria in June 1837.

[2730] TO THOMAS DIXON SPAIN,<sup>1</sup> 23 JUNE 1887

MS: BL (Add. 45918, f. 80). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 255.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 23rd June 1887

Mr Wilkie Collins hopes that Mr Dixon-Spain will kindly excuse him if he returns the tickets unsigned. While he respects the sincerity of members of Temperance Societies, he is not able to associate himself with the opinions which those societies represent.

---

1. The evangelist – see [1449] to him of 16 May 1874.

[2731] TO MISS BURT,<sup>1</sup> 25 JUNE 1887

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 255–256.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 25th June 1887

Dear Miss Burt,

I thank you very sincerely for your friendly letter.

The kind manner in which you write of “Armadale” cheers and encourages me.<sup>2</sup> To you I may make the confession that I have always considered this novel to be the best that I have written.

Believe me, dear Miss Burt,

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Unidentified fan, perhaps writing from the United States or the provinces, given WC’s addition of ‘London’ to the address line.

2. In an interview published shortly before this letter was written, Collins is quoted as saying of Armadale: ‘It is by far the best thing I have ever written, and in my own opinion, no other book of mine can compare with it’ (Cassell’s Saturday Journal, 5 March 1887, pp. 355–356).

[2732] TO EMILY WYNNE, 25 JUNE 1887

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 510.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

25th June 1887

Dear Mrs Wynne,

I am only well enough to thank you for your kind letter today. My nerves are still – if I may use the striking American expression – “unscrewed”. My temper is vile, and if anybody opens the door suddenly I start as if a cannon has been fired off behind me. The other day, I was “taken out for a drive” – a thing I loathe when I am in health. On this occasion it was remarked that I was “silent and subdued”. The truth is that I was frightened out of my wits every time the coachman turned a corner.

Perhaps the idiotic Jubilee has something to do with it. Any way, I am doing my best with my dear old friend’s medical help, to get better; and to find myself at your table again at last.

I must trust to you to make my peace with my wife. My humility is very great. If she is getting tired of me I will put no difficulties in the way of a divorce. But while I am in a condition to send this message I beg to offer my love, and to make my apologies.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Directed to 'Mrs Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.', postmarked 'LONDON W | JU25 | 87'.
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

[2733] TO A. P. WATT, 28 JUNE 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 256–257.

90. G. P. 28th June 1887

My dear Watt,

My unlucky nerves have (as they say in the U.S.A.) “come unscrewed”. In plainer words, I start when anybody opens the door – lose my temper at trifles – am frightened (in the most cowardly sense of the word) if I get into a cab, when the driver turns corners – and so on, and so on. The doctor and Hypophosphates are picking me up again. But when I shall be capable of enduring the dreadful noises of a train in motion still remains to be seen. In the meantime – N.B. – my tail is not put down.

Thank you for your letter, and for the pains you are kindly taking in the matter of my intermediate story. Yes – let us try Scribner, as you suggest.<sup>1</sup> My idea is that these American magazines all stand committed to the new American school of fiction<sup>2</sup> – and that my way of writing represents the abomination of desolation in their eyes. We shall see what S. says. In the meantime – received or not received, nerves or no nerves – I stick to my work – and am, Ever yours,

WC

---

1. As his letter to WC of 27 June shows (Berg), Watt is still trying to find a periodical outlet for the projected shorter serial story ‘Iris’, this time suggesting an approach to the new American monthly Scribner’s Magazine (1887–1936), after a rejection by Harper’s.

2. Referring to the new school of realism represented by writers such as W. Dean Howells or Henry James. WC seems to have been correct in his idea, as nothing came of Watt’s approach.

[2734] TO A. P. WATT, 1 JULY 1887

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, pp. 539–540. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 257.

90. G. P. | 1st July 1887

My dear Watt

Let me thank you for another token of your friendly remembrance. Mr Haggard’s new book has arrived today<sup>1</sup> – with an appropriate African temperature to receive it – and I shall be again indebted to you for some hours of enjoyment when relief from myself is especially acceptable. My tonics – after succeeding at first – have turned traitors, and deserted me – and have to be “cleaned out of me” to use the medical phrase. The result is that I cannot work for the present. But next time I write, I hope to send you a better report, and to be getting on again. In the meanwhile I have been reading “Guy Mannering” again for the 50th time at least. That wonderful book was written in six weeks! What a set of pigmies we are, by comparison with Scott!<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Presumably Allan Quatermain, serialized in Longman’s Magazine from January to August 1887, and appearing in a single volume from Longman around this time. A copy was found in WC’s library (Baker 2002, p. 113).

2. WC had also expressed his admiration for Scott in [2450] to Watt of 4 August 1885.

[3067] TO PERCY WILLIAM BUNTING,<sup>1</sup> 4 JULY 1887

MS: Chicago. Published: A&C3, p. 57.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday 4 July 1887

Dear Sir,

I only received your letter yesterday evening, owing to a mistake on the part of the letter-carrier, who delivered it at the wrong house.

If you can favour me by calling here on Wednesday next between three and four o'clock, I shall be very glad to see you.

If this appointment suits you, pray do not trouble to write again. If not, in that case, I beg that you will choose your own later afternoon at the same time.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Percy William Bunting Esqre

---

1. Sir Percy William Bunting (1836–1911), social reformer, editor of the Contemporary Review from 1882 until his death.

[2735] TO JAMES JENKINSON,<sup>1</sup> 4 JULY 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 257–258.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 4th July 1887

Dear Sir,

I only received your kind letter yesterday evening, owing to a mistake on the part of the postman who left it at the wrong house.

I regret to say that I must beg my good Birmingham readers to accept my excuses, as well as my thanks. The state of my health does not permit me to accept public engagements of any kind.

Believe me, dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

James Jenkinson Esqre

---

1. Unidentified correspondent from Birmingham, who seems to have invited WC to speak in that city.

[2736] TO JANE BIGELOW, 10 JULY 1887

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 258.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Tuesday July 10 1887

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

Let me thank you for your kind letter, and say that I shall be delighted to lunch on Thursday next at one o'clock.

I am not able to dine out. Present bedtime 10 o'clock – and a skilfully designed tonic to be swallowed an hour before bedtime.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[2737] TO PIERRE BERTON,<sup>1</sup> 18 JULY 1887

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 258.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th July 1887

Dear Sir,

My delay in thanking you for your kind letter will I hope appear to be excusable when I add that I am suffering from illness, and that I am only now able to write and offer my apologies.

I hope to be soon well enough to write again and propose a day when I may have the pleasure of becoming personally acquainted with you.

Your excellent father lives in my memory as a friend whom it was an honour and a happiness to know. I sincerely admired him as an artist, and I felt the truest regard for him as a man.

Believe me, dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Monsieur Pierre Berton | &c &c &c

---

1. Paris-born Pierre Berton (b. c.1842) of 128 Ashley Gardens, Westminster, was described in the 1891 Census as a Dramatic Author (RG13/95, p. 4). The identity of his father, clearly an artist or actor known to WC, remains untraced.

[2738] TO RICHARD ROGERS BOWKER,<sup>1</sup> 18 JULY 1887

MS: Bowker. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 259.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th July 1887

My dear Sir,

Your kind letter finds me suffering from illness. I must trust to your indulgence to let me wait a little, and write to you again when I may be well enough to have the pleasure of receiving you.

In the meantime, pray accept my thanks.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

R. R. Bowker, Esquire

---

1. Richard Rogers Bowker (1848–1933: ANB), New York editor, bibliographer and publisher. Founder of the Library Journal and the American Catalogue. He came to England in 1880 to launch the London edition of Harper's New Monthly Magazine, and in 1890 became first vice president of the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of New York. The purpose of his intended call on WC remains unclear.

[2739] TO JAMES R. OSGOOD, 18 JULY 1887

MS: Bowker. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 259.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

18th July 1887

Dear Mr Osgood,

I am suffering from illness, and I have been reluctantly obliged to ask Mr Bowker to let me wait a little and write again when I may have the pleasure of receiving him.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | W. C

---

1. See [2738] to Bowker of the same date.

[2740] TO A. P. WATT, 27 JULY 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 259–260.

90. Gloucester Place | 27th July 1887

My dear Watt,

The heat has quite overpowered me – and so seriously interfered with my capacity for work that I am not yet half way through the story.<sup>1</sup> I must now return to T's story so as to be in time for the September delivery of Mss.<sup>2</sup>

The enclosed arrived this morning.<sup>3</sup> Here is just what we want – if the people will pay, and if T. does not prohibit a serial publication which would end with the end of the year – that is to say two months before his serial publication begins. I have finished 5 weekly parts of the story, reckoning each part at 12 of my Ms pages instead of the usual ten. Ten more weekly parts will end the story. If the matter can be managed, I do not object to lowering the price, if that stands in the way, to £600. In the other event – let me first thank you for the trouble you have so kindly taken with the American magazine, and beg you to make no more efforts (seeing how your hands are tied by the T. story) to sell my work serially.<sup>4</sup> Let us try the book-form next, and let us have a consultation together in the first place.

I am feeling a little better since the change for the better produced by the delicious rain.
Ever yours | WC

---

1. The fifteen-part serial story ‘Iris’.

2. The Legacy of Cain.

3. As Watt’s letter to the firm of 27 July makes clear (Berg), the approach was from the firm of Messrs A. S. W. Elliot, Wholesale Stationers & Printers, Crown Street, Glasgow, who were starting a new periodical (untraced). Watt enquired whether the periodical was weekly or monthly and offered serial rights to ‘Iris’ for £600 to begin as early as September. The price was presumably far too high, as he seems to have received no response.

4. Watt had written to WC on 25 July to say that Scribner’s Magazine was not able to accept the story, but offering to try elsewhere.

[2741] TO A. P. WATT, 29 JULY 1887

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 540. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 260–261.

90. G. P. | 29 July 1887

My dear Watt,

Let me report the safe arrival yesterday of “Kidnapped” and “The P.M. Gazette” – and let me very sincerely thank you.<sup>1</sup> Yesterday was one of my bad days – I was not able to work – and I read “Kidnapped”. The first half of the story is well imagined, and very strongly and characteristically written. It greatly interested me. But the “Flight in the Heather” is prolonged to the utmost limits of (my) human endurance. The narration being written by Mr David in his own proper person, we know positively that he must have escaped – and that seems to me to be a reason for not prolonging the Flight. Mr Balfour at “Shaws” and Mr Balfour on board the Brig kept me with my cigar extinct in my mouth. I discovered that it had gone out and lit it again with great deliberation in the early part of “The Flight”.

Ever yours | WC

The paragraph about Mr Haggard in the P.M. Gazette seems to me to have a personal motive at the bottom of it.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Watt sends WC copies of R. L. Stevenson’s popular romance Kidnapped (serialized in Young Folks from May to July 1886, and published in one volume from Cassell in the same year), and (presumably) the 18 July 1887 issue of the London evening paper the Pall Mall Gazette (1865–1923). The latter carried a review of Haggard’s Alan Quatermain (p. 3).

2. In its final paragraph, the review of Haggard’s novel remarked on the petulance of tone of the author’s response to the recent allegations of plagiarism.

[2742] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 30 JULY 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 5/9). Published: B&C, II, pp. 540–542.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

London | 30th July 1887

My dear William Winter,

When I saw your handwriting, before I opened your letter – I dare not look back at the letter itself, for the date [del] would be a reproach to me that I have not courage enough to encounter – I [del] [sinfully] took it for granted that you were coming to England, and had written to tell me when to expect you. The more gratefully I felt the affectionate terms in which you had written (when I read the letter itself) the more sorry I was to know that the hope of seeing you must be (for the time) given up. After the terrible affliction that has struck at you,<sup>2</sup> the one alleviation that I can believe in is change of place – for this simple reason that it means (in some degree at least) change of mind. In the greatest misery of my life – the death of my mother – sympathy added a pang to the heart-ache, work was only a remedy while the pen was in my hand. Nothing helped me in the smallest degree but travelling. Even if you cannot travel as far as England, I should be relieved about you if I heard that you were travelling too.

As for me, I have been, and I am still, completely unnerved by the heat. I know, my dear friend, what it is to be a coward. The last time I was driving out, I was sick with fright every time the coachman turned a corner. The doctor says “Leave London”. When I think of the railway noises, I feel, as I felt on the first occasion (God knows how many years /ago!/ [del]) when I had to make a speech in public. Night-walking in quiet neighbourhoods is the system of treatment that I follow. As for the daytime, I stand committed to work – a new serial story and places engaged for it in the newspapers. “Sir” said the great Sam Johnson, “What must be done will be done.” You know that quite as well as I do. Ill or well, I work – and, strange to say, I don’t find any signs of wear and tear in my imagination, though I was 63 years old on the 8th of January last!

Has anybody told you that “The Jubilee” was an outburst of ~~public~~ Loyalty? I tell you that it was an outburst of Fear and Cant. In my neighbourhood, ~~we~~ there was a report that we should have our windows broken if we did not illuminate. In the year 1832 when I was 8 years old, my poor father was informed that he would have his windows broken if he failed to illuminate in honour of the passing of the First Reform Bill. He was a “high Tory” and a sincerely religious man – he looked on the Reform bill and the cholera (then prevalent) as similar judgments of an offended Deity punishing social and political “backslidings”. And he had to illuminate – and, worse still, he had to see his two boys mad with delight at being allowed [del] to set up the illuminations. Before we were [del] sent to bed, the tramp of the people was heard in the street. They were marching six abreast (the people were in earnest in those days!) provided with stones, and with their officers in command. They broke every pane of glass in an unilluminated house, nearly opposite our house, in less than a minute. I ran out to see the fun, and when the sovereign people cheered for the Reform Bill, I cheered too. Fifty five years later, I heard of the windows being in danger again, and illuminated again (on a cheap scale which accurately represented the shabby nature of my loyalty). This time, the people had no interest in the affair. The roadway in this street had been mended with granite fragments, which might have tempted a few mischievous lads here and there to “have a shy” for mischief’s sake. [del] In that case, my pictures might have been damaged. Nothing of this sort happened – and nothing could exceed the contemptible ugliness of the draperies in balconies hereabouts, and the wretched arrangements of dirty looking flags. Everywhere the people behaved well – and that was the one creditable circumstance in connection with the Jubilee. The “South Kensington Gang” are going to build an “Institute[”] on their own ground, if they can get the money<sup>3</sup> – and the parsons want to set up a new club and call it “A Church House”.<sup>4</sup> In that, the Jubilee has ended. And, like the Jubilee, I come to an end too.

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

Mrs Graves [desires] her kindest regards. Pigott is out of town. You were quite right about The Guilty River. It was spoilt for want of room.

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. Clearly the reference is again to the untimely death in a sledging accident of Winter’s fourteen-year-old son – see [2524] to him of 11 February 1886.

3. Referring to the Imperial Institute (the predecessor of the Commonwealth Institute), which was established in 1887 in commemoration of Queen Victoria’s Golden Jubilee to carry out research into the Empire. Only the Queen’s Tower (now part of Imperial College, London) survives from the original structure designed by Thomas Colcutt and built in South Kensington between 1887 and 1893. The phrase ‘South Kensington Gang’, common in the British press at this time, seems to have originated as the title of a series of articles in the weekly Financial News during March and April 1887, which included specific accusations of corruption and jobbery regarding the major exhibitions on Healtheries (1884) and Inventions (1885) held in South Kensington, of which the accounts were not yet available to the public.

4. Referring to the Corporation of The Church House, founded in 1888 as a permanent commemoration of the Jubilee. Situated in Dean's Yard, close to the Palace of Westminster and Westminster Abbey, it became the national administrative headquarters of the Church of England.

[2743] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 3 AUGUST 1887

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/71), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 542.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

London | 3rd August 1887

My dear Sebastian,

How many months have passed since I last heard from you? It was a melancholy letter telling me of domestic calamities which are, of all calamities (as I think) the hardest to endure.<sup>3</sup> My reply went back to you at once.<sup>4</sup> I could only offer ~~to~~ /to you/ the sympathy of an old and true friend.

But there was a cheering side to your letter. You told me that there was a prospect of seeing you in England in July – and I suggested that you should write again, and let me know at what date to expect you? Early in the month? or late?<sup>5</sup> From that time to this, [del] you have been on one side of a gulp [sic], and I on the other – the gulph called “Sebastian’s Silence.”

What /cause/ has left me without news? Not more trouble I hope and trust. Perhaps illness? In that case my sympathy is doubly yours – for I have been, and shall remain, wretchedly out of health. The heat of this summer has completely unnerved me. As one example of what I mean – I am still in London, because I am unable to endure the noises inevitably associated with travelling by railway.

But after all perhaps you are only lazy? In any case, and wherever this letter may find you, let me have a word of news, and let it be good news.

Yours aftly | Wilkie Collins

Sebastian Schlesinger Esqre

---

1. Directed to ‘Mr Sebastian Schlesinger | 99. John Street | New York (City) | U.S.A.’, initialled ‘WC’ to the bottom-left and ‘To be forwarded.’ in the top left-hand corner, with postmark ‘LONDON | AUG [?] | 87 | 4’.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. According to Smith and Terry, p. 47, Schlesinger’s wife ‘had discovered his infidelity’ with a Mrs Sherman, leading to a break-up in their marriage.

4. WC’s reply has not been traced.

5. Schlesinger seems eventually to have come to England only in the spring of 1888; see [2847] to him of 31 May.

[2744] TO EMILY WYNNE, 5 AUGUST 1887

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 261–262.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th August 1887

Dear Mrs Wynne,

I hear from our friend (and medical adviser)<sup>2</sup> that you and Nannie are in London – but soon going away again. I am getting better at last, and shall indeed be glad to pay my long-deferred visit. Sunday, Monday or Tuesday /next/ – whichever may be most convenient to you – will do for me. And your hour will be my hour.

My love to my excellent wife. I hope she has been taking care of the children and not allowing them to overheat themselves.

Always truly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Le Poer Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. Frank Beard.

[2745] TO CARRIE BARTLEY, 6 AUGUST 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/14). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 262.

90. Gloucester Place. Portman | Square | 6th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1887

My dear Carrie,

Here is the last of the copying, for the present.<sup>1</sup> When Alice came yesterday I was in my bedroom,<sup>2</sup> unable to get down stairs to the strong box in which the Mss are kept. When are you coming to receive your fee? And when do Mrs H. Bartley and family leave for the seaside? Au revoir – I must get to my work.

Ever affly yours | WC

---

1. Possibly of the early serial instalments of The Legacy of Cain.

2. Alice was presumably a servant of the Bartleys – four domestics were listed at the Bartleys' residence in Finchley Road at the time of the 1891 Census.

[2746] TO A. P. WATT, 8 AUGUST 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 262–263.

90. G. P. | 8th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1887

My dear Watt,

I have only waited to thank you for “The World”<sup>1</sup> in the hope of hearing some news of the Glasgow Firm. Apparently we have discovered another case of North British superiority to the laws of courtesy, to match the case of the Scotch Editor.<sup>2</sup> Pray don't trouble yourself any further about this matter. I am sorry to think how your time has been needlessly wasted already.

You were right in thinking that Edmund's loss appealed to my sympathies.<sup>3</sup> I remember how I suffered when I lost my dear old dog-friend – and I can feel for him.<sup>4</sup>

I am in time I hope to wish you most heartily a pleasant holiday. I hope to get away myself in a week – most likely to Margate if I can find quiet there.<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. As the following paragraph suggests, Watt must have sent WC the current issue (3 August 1887) of the society weekly the World (1874–1922).

2. In other words, Messrs Elliot of Glasgow (see note to [2740] to Watt of 27 July 1887) have been slow in replying, reminding WC of the discourtesy of the Scottish editor of the Weekly Dispatch (see [2693] to Watt of 21 March 1887). WC writes in reply to Watt's letter of the same day, in which Watt notes ‘No word from Glasgow yet!’ (Berg).

3. At the end of the ‘What the World Says’ in the World for August 1887 (p. 16), there is an announcement by the editor, WC's old friend Edmund Yates, of the death of his ‘constant companion for ten years ... my old colley-dog Nelly’. The paragraph concludes with a sentiment that would inevitably have reminded WC of the death of his own dog: ‘Those who have undergone similar trouble will feel for me. She was only a dog, but there are very few human beings whom I loved as much.’

4. See [2462] to Watt of 7 September 1885 on the death of WC's dog Tommy.

5. Watt's letter of 8 August gives the information that he will be staying with his family near Sevenoaks for a time. WC himself only manages to get to Margate and go cruising at sea after 22 August.

[2747] TO A. P. WATT, 22 AUGUST 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 263.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd August 1887

My dear Watt,

Thank you for your letter. I am indeed sorry that you should have had the trouble of writing three times to those Glasgow savages. Pray don't waste even a thought on them now.<sup>1</sup>

May you enjoy an idle time and a long time in that pretty part of the country.<sup>2</sup> As for me, I am getting better – and am hoping to be at Margate this week.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I too write in haste. Arrears of letters as well as arrears of work.

---

1. Watt had written on 22 August to say that he had continued trying to get a response from the Glasgow firm of Messrs Elliot (Berg).

2. Watt's letter of the same day was written during a brief trip up to town from the Sevenoaks area, to which he returns.

3. This time WC seems to have been cruising out of Margate until almost the middle of September – regarding his return, see [2749] to Bok and [2750] to Metcalf, both of 14 September.

[2748] TO THE EDITOR OF THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW, [MAY 1885–AUGUST 1887]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Unknown. Published: Fortnightly Review, NS 42:249 (September 1887), pp. 436–437, our copy text;<sup>2</sup> BGLL, IV, pp. 264–265.

Fortunately for myself, I have what is called 'a Catholic taste' in literature. When I think of the immense variety of high achievement which literature presents, I am unable to understand the state of mind which can prefer any one passage, or any one writer. If I had the strength and the time I should be capable, I am afraid, of overwhelming you with fifty favourite passages, taken from the great poets of the world, which equally excite my admiration, and equally delight me. Let me only quote as examples of what I mean: (1) the 4th Scene in the 3rd Act of Lear. (2) Byron's 'Address to the Sea,' in the 4th Canto of Childe Harold. (3) Walter Scott, Canto II., stanzas 28 to 32, in The Lord of the Isles. (4) Gray's Elegy, excepting 'The Epitaph,' which, I venture to think, is not quite worthy of that great poem. (5) Dryden's Ode on St. Cecilia's Day. (6) Pope's Elegy to the Memory of an unfortunate Lady.

Here are six passages, from English poetry alone, representing modes of thought and forms of expression so entirely differing one from the other that it seems to me to be absolutely impossible justly to compare them. In each example I see equally, and admire equally, the mind of a master. And if you asked me to sacrifice one of my six passages I should be incapable of arriving at a decision, and should be driven to ask for an appeal to the laws of chance!<sup>3</sup>

---

1. As [2421] to him of 7 May 1885 suggests, T. H. Escott, who edited the Fortnightly Review from November 1882, seems to have commissioned WC to write this piece; however, Frank Harris (1856–1931) formally took over the editorship from July 1886 following Escott's prolonged illness (Wellesley Index). It remains unclear to which editor the letter was submitted, but the dating is likely to fall within the range given here.

2. No address, date or signature is given, but the extract is prefaced by the phrase 'Mr. Wilkie Collins writes –'. It appeared as part of the series 'Fine Passages in Verse and Prose: Selected by Living Men of Letters' which appeared in four parts from August to November 1887, pp. 295–316, 430–454, 580–604, 717–739. Each part included comments and selections from at least ten authors. Matthew Arnold, Thomas Hardy and Eliza Lynn Linton were among those cited in the first article in the series. Among those featured along with WC in the second were: Frances Power Cobbe, Edmund Gosse, 'Vernon Lee', 'Ouida', Olive Schreiner, A. C. Swinburne and J. A. Symonds. According to the first article in the series (p. 295), the authors had been requested to supply 'the one passage in all poetry which seems the finest, and also the one passage in prose which appears of its kind the best'. Like WC, many who responded took exception to the terms of the exercise. Those like William Morris who refused to respond seem often to have objected to citing brief passages out of context.

3. It is unclear whether WC failed to select favourite prose passages or whether he made selections but these were passed over by the editor.

[3068] TO PERCY WILLIAM BUNTING, 4 SEPTEMBER 1887

MS: Chicago. Published: A&C3, pp. 57–58.

Margate 4 Sept 1887

Dear Mr Bunting,

Your kind letter and Mr Cabel's stories have just found their way to me.<sup>1</sup> After recovering slowly here (onshore) I have tried cruising at sea next, and making a more rapid progress towards recovery. We have sent ashore for letters – and I am now able to thank you at last.

I have only had time (before sending this to the post) to read two of Mr Cabel's stories. Very much better, to my mind, than any modern American fiction that I have read – excepting only Bret Harte. Excellent observation of character – as far as character can be observed within narrow limits – and descriptions which have the merit of making the reader see what the writer sees – these, so far as I may judge at present, are Mr Cabel's merits. The only noticeable defect that I can see is that the conscientious hard work does not conceal itself as it ought. If "Old Creole Days"<sup>2</sup> is a first work, the author has probably learnt this last secret of his art.

Pray don't suppose that I forget my promise to write for the Review. I hope to report myself again when I am able to conquer arrears of work that have accumulated during my illness.

Believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Percy Wm Bunting Eqre

---

1. The Louisiana author, George Washington Cable (1844–1925: ANB) – WC misspells the name consistently – was invited in 1887 by Bunting to write for the Contemporary Review. He replied on 23 June 1887 that he had been travelling in the southern states and was planning to write an account which he would send to Bunting. The letter is also held at the University of Chicago. Cable's 'The Negro question in the United States' appeared in the March 1888 issue of the Contemporary Review, pp. 443–468.

2. Cable's collection of short stories Old Creole Days was published in 1879 and presumably sent to WC as an example of the author's work.

[2749] TO [EDWARD W.] BOK,<sup>1</sup> 14 SEPTEMBER 1887

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 265.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
London | 14 September 1887

My dear Mr Bok,

I have been out of reach of all of my letters, cruising at sea – and I am only now able to thank you for your kind reply. Yes – I hope to send you "How I write my books" so as to reach you on the 15th of October.<sup>2</sup>

Pray forgive a very hurried letter. My arrears of correspondence have accumulated without mercy while I have been sailing.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. All the letters addressed to 'Mr Bok' from [2700] of 30 March 1887 onwards, whether carrying the addressee line 'To Edward W. Bok' or not, seem likely to be addressed to the younger brother Edward rather than to the older brother William, to whom WC wrote in [2111] 17 February 1883.

2. Originally published in both the Globe and the Manchester Guardian (26 November 1887), and reprinted as a letter in B&C, II, pp. 545–547. The MS is at Huntington (HM 33791).

[2750] TO L. S. METCALF,<sup>1</sup> 14 SEPTEMBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 265–266.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
14th September 1887

Dear Sir,

I must beg you to forgive this late reply to your kind letter. My letters have all been waiting for me on shore, while I have been cruising at sea.

Arrears of work as well as arrears of correspondence oblige me to trust your indulgence in the matter of time. I shall be glad to write for The Forum on the terms which you propose – when my mind is more free to consider the subject which will most favourably employ my pen, and to arrange definitely the time at which my contribution will be likely to reach you. In two words, may I write to you again?<sup>2</sup>

Believe me | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
L.S. Metcalf Eqre

-
1. Loretta Sutton Metcalf (1837–1920: Library of Congress Catalogue), American journalist, editor of the Forum, a New York monthly founded in March 1886.
  2. In the event WC never contributed to the magazine – see [2881] to Metcalf of 7 August 1888.

[2751] TO THE REV. GEORGE BAINTON,<sup>1</sup> 23 SEPTEMBER 1887

MS: Parrish (4/13/AM82-73). Extract: Bainton, pp. 89–91. Published: B&C, II, pp. 543–544. Summary: BGLL, IV, p. 266, amended A&C3, p. 69.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>
London | September 23rd 1887

Dear Sir,

Let me first acknowledge the debt that I owe to your friendly letter. A reader like you encourages and rewards a writer like me. I gratefully feel that you have a right to all that I can tell you, in relation to the methods which have formed my style.

After some slight preliminary attacks, the mania for writing laid its hold on me definitely when I left school. While I was in training for a commercial life – and afterwards when I was a student at Lincoln’s Inn – I suffered under trade and suffered under law with a resignation inspired by my endless engagement in writing poems plays and stories – or to express myself more correctly, by the pleasure that I felt in following an undisciplined imagination wherever it might choose to lead me. I produced, it is needless to say, vast quantities of nonsense, with an occasional – a very occasional – infusion of some literary promise of merit. But I did not think my time was entirely wasted – for I believe I was insensibly preparing myself for the career which I have since followed.

My first conscious effort to write good English was stirred in me by the death of my father – the famous painter of the coast scenery and cottage life of England. I resolved to write a biography of him. It was the best tribute that I could pay to the memory of the kindest of fathers. “The Life of William Collins R.A.” was my first published book. From that time to this, my hardest work has been the work that I devote to the improvement of my style. I can claim no merit for this. When I first saw my writing presented to me in a printer’s proof, I discovered that I was incapable of letting a carelessly constructed sentence escape me without an effort to improve it.

The process by which my style of writing is produced may be easily described.

The day’s work having been written, with such corrections as occur to me at the time, is subjected to a first revision on the next day, and is then handed to my copyist. The copyist’s manuscript undergoes a second revision, and is then sent to the printer. The proof passes through a third process of correction, and is sent back to have the alterations embodied in, what is called “The Revise”. The Revise is carefully looked over for the fourth time, before I allow it to go to “Press”, and to preserve what I have written to my readers. My novels are published serially, in the first instance. When they are reprinted in book-form, the book-proofs undergo a fifth, and last revision. Then at length my labour of love comes to an end – and I am always sorry for it. The explanation of this strange state of things I take to be that honest service to Art is always rewarded by Art.

Enough, and more than enough by this time, of me and my writing. I can only hope that this long letter may be of some little use to you in the object that you have in view.

Believe me, Dear Sir, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
The Rev<sup>d</sup> George Bainton

---

1. Rev. George Bainton (1847–1925), Congregational minister from Coventry, compiler and editor of The Art of

Authorship (1890), subtitled ‘Literary Reminiscences, Methods of Work, and Advice to Young Beginners, Personally Contributed by Leading Authors of the Day’. In common with other authors, WC had supplied reminiscences without realising that they would be published – posthumously in his case. WC’s unwitting contribution consisted of the above letter which, except for the first and last paragraphs, was published in full, though with punctuation changes. The letter appeared in the section devoted to ‘Methods – Conscious and Unconscious’, prefaced by the following remarks:

Wilkie Collins, whose death has left a sad blank in the ranks of present-day writers of fiction, was an author of special power. There is moral tonic in his books, stimulating thought, fine and persuasive appeals to the imagination, as well as marvellous plot and weird incident. His strikingly dramatic stories are clothed in language as simple and direct as it is strong and beautiful. The uniform fascinating grace and ease of his diction ceases to surprise us when we read with what minute and painstaking care it is produced. He says,

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

[2752] TO SYDNEY SMITH,<sup>1</sup> 23 SEPTEMBER 1887

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 324; BGLL, IV, p. 266.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
23rd September | 1887

Dear Sir,

I very sincerely admire Mrs Inchbald’s “Simple Story”<sup>2</sup> – but I have never written an essay on that subject.

I alluded to the book, as an admirable novel well worth reading, among other books which I recommended to the general reader, in a letter published in the Pall Mall Gazette of February 11th 1886.<sup>3</sup> This may possibly have led to the report that I have written an essay on the subject of The Simple Story.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Sydney Smith Esqr

---

1. Unidentified.

2. The 1791 romance by Elizabeth Inchbald (1753–1821). A copy of Elizabeth Inchbald’s edited two-volume The British Theatre (1806–1809) was in WC’s library at the time of his death (Baker 2002, p. 121).

3. ‘Books Necessary for a Liberal Education’, Pall Mall Gazette (11 February 1886), p. 2: ‘Read, my good public, Mrs Inchbald’s ‘Simple Story,’ in which you will find the character of a young woman who is made interesting even by her faults – a rare triumph, I can tell you, in our Art’.

[2753] TO A. P. WATT, 25 SEPTEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 267.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
Sunday 24th 25th Sept | 1887

My dear Watt,

Here I am again after Margate and some cruising. – Pray come at your usual time as soon as may be convenient.<sup>1</sup> I have been wondering whether you were or were not in town – and had decided that your holiday was only to end with the end of this month, having I suppose received my erroneous information from a dream. If you can bring a title with you for Tillotson’s story you will be doubly welcome.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written to WC on 23 September to check if he was back from Margate (WC had in fact returned by 14 September) and to arrange a meeting to discuss the publication of ‘Iris’, the shorter serial on which WC was then working. Watt wrote again on 27 September to say that he would call the following day (Berg).

2. Perhaps it was Watt who suggested the title The Legacy of Cain – see [2755], WC’s following letter to him of 28 September.

[2754] TO WILLIAM E. DOUBLEDAY,<sup>1</sup> 28 SEPTEMBER 1887

MS: Nottingham (M 11296). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 267.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 28th September | 1887

Dear Sir,

I am sincerely glad to hear that I have so many readers in Nottingham – and I contribute with pleasure to your collection of autographs.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Wm E. Doubleday Esqre

---

1. Unidentified fan from Nottingham.

[2755] TO A. P. WATT, 28 SEPTEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 267–268.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28 Sept 1887

My dear Watt,

My best thanks for both your letters.<sup>1</sup>

I am afraid the other story (still to let) will not stretch to 20 weekly parts. Let us say 15 weekly parts, otherwise £750. Deducting America and Australia and making allowance for the smaller number of parts there, we should let The People offer £600, or less. Will this not tempt them?<sup>2</sup>

If we make the first offer to Tillotson the same terms in proportion – (£750) and the same concessions, except that I want to republish, so as not to come into collision with The Legacy of Cain – that is to say to publish before or after that book.<sup>3</sup>

I am indeed glad to hear that no lady has got the “Legacy” – and I am additionally thankful to you for this relief. I remember the “Mark of Cain.” It appeared a few years since in All The Year Round – and has disappeared again as completely as we could wish.<sup>4</sup>

I hope the 15 weekly parts will not make the negotiation more troublesome to you. If it can be managed it will certainly be easier to me. If not, we must meet when you come back from Scotland and talk it over again.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt wrote to WC twice on 28 September 1887, following their meeting together on the same day, the first letter to confirm that the title ‘The Legacy of Cain’ was still available, and the second concerning the negotiations for the serial publication of ‘Iris’ (Berg).

2. Watt’s second letter of 28 September says that the London Sunday paper the People, which carried “I Say No” from late 1883, is interested in a serial of not less than twenty instalments, for which Watt wants £750 for British serial rights only, plus an extra £250 if American and Australian rights are included (Berg).

3. In other words, another possibility considered by both Watt and WC is to offer ‘Iris’ to Tillotson first.

4. That is, as confirmed by Watt’s first letter of 28 September, he has checked that the title ‘The Legacy of Cain’ has not been previously copyrighted, as feared, by one of the myriad lady novelists that the ageing WC was so scathing about (in, e.g., The Black Robe, Book 5, ch. 5). Andrew Lang’s thriller The Mark of Cain, mentioned by Watt in his letter, was in fact first published by Arrowsmith’s Bristol Library in 1886.

[2756] TO A. P. WATT, 30 SEPTEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 269.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th Sept 1887

My dear Watt,

A word more to thank you for “Atalanta”.<sup>1</sup> I have read Mr Lang’s article with great interest, and cordially agree with every word he writes about Scott – except that I don’t think that he does justice to “Redgauntlet”. It seems to me to be among the greatest of those great works, and I for one wish it was twice as long as it is. My good wishes go with Mr Lang’s effort to improve the tastes of modern young ladies. But my fear is that he will be the voice of one crying aloud in the wilderness. If he succeeds, “Atalanta” will be ruined. Oh, what stuff!

The first five parts of the story have gone to T. today – after 7 hours continuous work.<sup>2</sup> I am going to bed.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. With his first letter of 28 September (Berg), Watt had sent the opening (October) issue of the new monthly Atalanta: Every Girl’s Magazine (1887–98), featuring Andrew Lang’s appreciation of ‘Sir Walter Scott’, pp. 50–54.

2. The first quarter of The Legacy of Cain, which the contract with Tillotson’s bound WC to send to Bolton by the end of September.

[2757] TO A. P. WATT, 2 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Pembroke, damaged.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 269–270.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | Sunday | 2nd October 1887

My dear Watt,

Mr Tillotson acknowledged receipt of the Mss – and sent the cheque – yesterday evening.<sup>2</sup> He also suggested that I should write to you, while you are [with him tomorrow giving you instructions to negotiate with him for the German translation of “The Legacy of Cain”]. This, I am quite free to do, having not accepted other proposals. Hitherto my terms for German translation have been no more than £80.-.- and for this I sell the right of serial translation and of republication in Book form, in the German language.<sup>3</sup>

Wishing you a pleasant visit to Scotland<sup>4</sup>

[valediction and signature excised]

---

1. At the foot of the second page the valediction and signature have been torn away, removing several lines on the other side. What must be the lost text (here in square brackets) is found in an annotation in minute writing in another hand, possibly that of Watt’s clerk James Baxter.

2. Relating to the first portion of the serial The Legacy of Cain.

3. Tillotson agreed to pay £80 for the German translation rights of The Legacy of Cain, on top of the total £1,000 due for the serial rights (see Bodleian MS. Eng. Misc., f. 395/1).

4. Watt was to travel north on the Tuesday and return early the following week (see his letter to WC of 3 October 1887, Berg).

[2758] TO JANE BIGELOW, 5 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Bigelow. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 270.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 5th October 1887

Dear Mrs Bigelow,

I wish you calm seas, bright sunshine, and pleasant fellow-voyagers. And when you arrive at New York may you not return, as I have returned, to find yourself smothered in unanswered letters. Cruising at sea is the most delightful holiday that I know of – until it comes to an end. Then the British Post Office reminds you that this is a miserable life – the British quarter-day saga “opens your pockets” – and the British Publisher “waits, dear Mr Collins, for the continuation of that story”. I wish I was Mrs Bigelow – that is the moral of it.

Being onboard “La Champagne”,<sup>1</sup> I venture to suggest an amusement for you. Wait till dinner time, and then ask everybody at the table (beginning with the Captain of course) if he, she, and they know who invented Champagne? I don’t mean the Department – I mean the delicious wine which we all love. Unless I am very much mistaken, you will be the one distinguished person who has heard of that benefactor to his species. His name was Perignon – he was a Benedictine Monk – and he officiated as cellarman in a monastery, when he made his immortal discovery in 1688. There! For once in a way, a man who can only write fiction presents himself, on taking leave, as a Master of Fact.

Once more, bon Voyage!
Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. A 7,087-ton steamer launched in 1885 by the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique. The previous year, Jane Bigelow had made the voyage back to New York on the same vessel – see [2619] to her of 30 September 1886.

[2759] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 7 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 271.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | October 7th 1887

My dear Collaborateur,

I have been twice away from London – collecting such stores of health as that old friend the sea can still offer to me. In the interval when I was here last, your kind letter had not arrived – and I only now find it on my return. What must you have thought of my silence! I must not stop to ask – for it is close on the post time. Let me make my excuses, and inquire (1) whether you have given up all hope of me, and have already supplied yourself, in some other way, with our “God Save”?<sup>1</sup> (2). If I can still get you the music – then to which address shall I send it: To St Briac? Or to Rennes (Rue Fougères)?<sup>2</sup>

Forgive me for giving you this additional trouble – but it is as long since as September 10 since you wrote. I will lose no time after I hear from you

Yours afftly | Wilkie Collins

I address to Rennes – in case you may have left St Briac

---

1. Presumably du Pontavice de Heussey had requested a copy of the music to ‘God Save the Queen’, recognized from the eighteenth century as the English national anthem.

2. In other words, was de Heussey still by the sea at Saint-Briac-sur-Mer, on the northern coast of Brittany, or had he travelled the fifty miles to the city of Rennes?

[2760] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & Co., 10 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 271–272.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th October 1887

Dear Sirs,

I have the pleasure of enclosing my cheque for the little account (£7.4.-)

Does my memory deceive me? or do I correctly remember the announcement, in your last letter, of a discovery of Vin Brut (in Pints) which might suit me? In this last case, please send me a few Pints as samples – say half a dozen. My requirements are only two in number (1) That the wine shall be as dry as dry can be. (2) That it shall be as old as 1880. In other words that I shall be able (if I like it) to drink it at once.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

1. Initialled and directed to ‘Messrs Beecheno, Yaxley and Co | 135. Minorities | E.’, postmarked as dated.

[2761] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 11 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 272.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th October 1887

My dear Chatto,

My best thanks for your kind disclosure of the theft of our title. Let us hope that it is an ignorant, and not an imprudent, theft.<sup>1</sup>

I have written to Mr Leng by today’s post – a good-tempered remonstrance, I need hardly say.<sup>2</sup> But there is something in his name – I agree with Mr Shandy that there is a great deal in a name<sup>3</sup> – which does not encourage me. I can only hope that I shall turn out to be wrong. You shall hear what answer I receive the moment I get it. In the meantime, I have had a copy taken of my letter – in case of necessity.

Ever yours | WC

I have also to thank you for kindly forwarding a presentation copy of a novel from the author.<sup>4</sup> By-the-bye, I think I have got a good title for my next novel: | The Legacy of Cain:

This is of course a secret

---

1. Andrew Chatto had written on the previous day (Reading) to inform WC that the serial novel Her Evil Genius by Frederick Boyle (1841–93) was then being announced as forthcoming in the Sheffield Weekly Telegraph. (It eventually appeared as a serial from November 1888, and later in three volumes from Chapman & Hall in 1891.) Chatto and WC regarded this as an appropriation of the title of WC’s The Evil Genius, published just over a year before in three volumes by Chatto & Windus.

2. C. D. Leng (1861–1921), editor of the Sheffield Weekly Telegraph and manager of its syndication agency ‘The Editor’s Syndicate’ (see Law, pp. 119–122).

3. See the narrator’s remarks in Laurence Sterne’s The Life and Opinions of Tristram Shandy (1759–67), Book 1, ch. 19. There was a copy of Tristram Shandy (1783) and a copy of his five-volume Works (1823) in WC’s library at the time of his death (Baker 2002, p. 153).

4. Unidentified.

[3267] TO MARY ANDERSON, 13 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, pp. 25–26.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W

Thursday Oct: 13th 1887

Dear Mary Anderson,

I have only now returned, and have read your kind letter with but one regret. – I wish I had received it before I left London. I have promised to spend the afternoon of Sunday next with some friends – and they live too far away from your place of residence, in this overgrown wilderness of houses, to give me a chance of making my apologies at Kentucky tea time.

Before I make my exit in the character of a penitent, I will venture on “a broad hint”. Perhaps you may be at home on some other Sunday?

No more at present from
yours affly | Wilkie Collins

[2762] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 13 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 273.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

13th October 1887

My dear Chatto,

Mr Leng, as you will see, answers politely and refers us to the author.<sup>1</sup> We now wait for events – and “Mr Boyle”.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. A copy of Leng’s reply to WC is found in the Parrish Collection:

Copy | (From) C.D. Leng | Weekly Telegraph | Sheffield
Oct<sup>br</sup> 12th 1887

Dear Sir

I have sent your letter to the author of “Her Evil Genius” and you will no doubt hear from him in a few days. It will make no difference to us if the title is changed.

I shall be glad to hear from you at any time when you have a story to offer for newspaper publication.

Yours very truly | (Signed) C.D. Leng

To | Wilkie Collins Esq | 90 Gloucester Place | Portman Sqre W.

2. For Boyle’s reply see [2766] to Andrew Chatto, 20 October 1887

[2763] TO A. P. WATT, 13 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 273.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Oct: 13th 1887 | Thursday

My dear Watt

Only a word to say that I shall be delighted to see you tomorrow. But if business gets in the way, any other day will do for me except Saturday and Sunday next – when I shall not be at home.<sup>1</sup> Ever yours

WC

---

1. Watt had written on 13 October to ask if the following day was convenient for him to call on WC (Berg).

[3268] TO MARY ANDERSON, 17 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 26.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W

October 17th 1887

Dear Mary Anderson,

I am in the doctor’s hands again. Nerves shattered, and neuralgia at regular intervals. A prisoner in the house all day yesterday, instead of going out to lunch. This is only to thank you for your kind letter and to ask leave to write again before Sunday next. I still hope to be at your luncheon table – if Destiny, Determination, and Doctor will help me.

Yours affly | Wilkie Collins

[2764] TO ANNE WYNNE, 17 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 510–511.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

17th Oct 1887

I hear, Dearest Nannie, of Mama’s illness. Tell her of my sympathy and my hope that she is already (with the help of the best of doctors) on the way to recovery. Let me hear about her. Do you know what the word “Seedy” means? The word Seedy means Me.

I must go on with my work. My love offers itself. WC

-
1. Initialled 'WC' in lower left corner and directed to 'Miss Nannie Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | W.'. Postmarked 'LONDON. W. | OC17 | 87'.
  2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram, watermarked 'HIERATICA'.

[2765] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 20 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 325; BGLL, IV, p. 274.

90. Gloucester Place | W. | 20th Oct: 1887

Dear Sirs,

I ought to have thanked you before for the little cheque for 17/8 which you kindly sent to me.

The Champagne is delicious. I will ask you to send to me, at your early convenience, six dozen pints.<sup>2</sup> I resist the temptation to order more, because, excellent as the wine is, it is not quite dry enough for my gouty necessities.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co

-
1. Directed to 'Mess<sup>rs</sup> Beecheno, Yaxley & Co | 135. Minorities | E.', postmarked on the following day.
  2. On the back of the envelope in pencil in an unknown hand: 'M<sup>r</sup> Yaxley better answer this note and send his Invoice direct to W. C.'.

[2766] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 20 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 274–275.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

20 Oct: 1887

My dear Chatto

Many thanks for your suggestions. I have written to Mr Leng today – enclosing a copy of Mr Boyle's very unsatisfactory letter to me.<sup>1</sup>

We have no remedy. The Law of England does not recognise any right of property in the title of a book. No right of that sort is secured by registration at Stationers' Hall. This is the reply to my inquiries. Perhaps there is some flaw in the integrity of the copyright act.<sup>2</sup> I have no time to find out. A trade-mark is protected.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. A copy of Boyle's letter to WC is found in the Parrish Collection:

The Standard | Editorial Offices Shoe Lane | Fleet Street | London E.C.
Oct 14. 1887

Dear Sir

Messrs Leng have forwarded a letter you addressed to them about "Her Evil Genius." That work begins to appear, as a serial, in November /88. It will not be published as a volume until the latter part of 89, when, as at present advised, I shall restore the more aesthetic title originally designed, which Messrs Leng thought unsuitable to their public.

Under these conditions I can not see what injury can be done to your volumes published in 86–7. They will have established themselves, I trust before mine intrudes

I am grateful to you for many pleasures, and I inscribe myself very heartily –

Yours most sincerely | (Signed) Fred Boyle

2. The 1842 Copyright Act (5 & 6 Victoria c.45) – see Catherine Seville, Literary Copyright Reform in Early Victorian England: The Framing of the 1842 Copyright Act (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1999), where the wording of the act itself is reproduced in Appendix III. WC was presumably unaware that in 1853 Matilda Anne Mackarness had published Influence; or The Evil Genius, or that in 1856 William Bayle Bernard, who had dramatized No Name for WC, had published The Evil Genius, an original comedy in three acts, which opened at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, on 8 March 1856 (Allardyce, II, p. 259).

[3269] TO MARY ANDERSON, 21 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 26.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st Oct: 1887

Dear Mary Anderson,

There is luck for some people – but there is none for me. I must be ungrateful for your kindness – and trust to you to pity and forgive me. The neuralgic pains still try me, and they are connected in some way with a weak state of my heart. The doctor is not alarmed about it – but he insists on complete rest and quiet. I am too much depressed to say any more. My love at home.

Yours affly | WC

[2767] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 23 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 275.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

23 Oct 1887

My dear Chatto,

Here is a copy of Mr Leng's answer.<sup>1</sup> You will see that he has taken us in – and, being placed face to face with his own declaration, he too shuffles, and pairs off with Mr Boyle. I have decided not to accept unreservedly the legal opinions which declare that there is no remedy – and to put the question of defending my title to the test. I shall consult my lawyer as to the propriety of writing to Mr Leng to tell him that I will not submit to have my title coolly taken from me, without an attempt at least to stop it.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. A copy (initialled 'CRS') of C. D. Leng's reply to WC is found in the Parrish Collection:

From C. D. Leng | Weekly Telegraph | Sheffield | Oct 21st 1887

Dear Sir

The title which Mr Boyle selected first, for his story, was not in our opinion, a good one for newspaper publication. We asked him therefore to give us a new title, and he selected "Her Evil Genius." When I said it would make no difference to us if the title were changed, I should have added, so long as the new title is a good one.

Yours truly | (signed) C D Leng
Wilkie Collins Esq | 90 Gloucester Place | Portman Sqre | W

[2768] TO A. P. WATT, 24 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Pembroke.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 276.

90, Gloucester Place | W. | 24th Oct: 1887

My dear Watt,

Here are the dates for the short story for America, received from Mr Buck (Spirit of the Times): –<sup>2</sup>

Title by Nov 20
MSS by Decr 10
Date of publication in
New York, Decr 24

=

N.B. I have exhausted my store of notepaper.<sup>3</sup> Isn't it nice and cold?

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Like most of the subsequent letters to Watt, the MS bears Watt's stamp on the front, here: 'RECEIVED | 25 OCT 87 | ANS. 25 Oct 87'.

2. 'The First Officer's Confession'. To the left here a pencil annotation in Watt's hand reads 'Leng?', probably indicating that Watt was thinking of selling British serial rights to the story to Leng and Co., the owners of the Sheffield Telegraph who were by then also in the fiction syndication business (see Law, pp. 118–122). WC in fact refused to countenance this proposal – see [2776] to Watt of 4 November 1887.

3. Explaining why the letter is on a loose leaf rather than on WC's usual headed notepaper. WC must have obtained or located a new supply by the following day.

[2769] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 25 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 276–277.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th Oct: 1887

My dear Chatto,

Many thanks for your telegram. If the people who have stolen our title get the chance of registering first we have “not a leg to stand on”. Therefore please register The Evil Genius at Stationers' Hall, the first thing tomorrow morning. I mean to take legal proceedings.

Ever yours Wilkie Collins

P.S. Please let me have one line to tell me that the registration has been accomplished.

2nd Postscript<sup>1</sup>

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th Oct: 1887

The enclosed “Bogus book” was I believe entered at Stationers Hall to protect the title.<sup>2</sup> It is doubtful if that result will follow – because it is a Bogus Book. If they say at Stationers Hall, “The book is already registered” it will I suppose be necessary to tell them that only the first chapter of the book has been registered – and that we must register the complete book to get our legal remedy. WC

---

1. This postscript is written on a fresh sheet of WC's printed paper and redated.

2. Concerning the nature of the bogus book, see [2471] to A. P. Watt of 21 September 1885.

[2770] TO A. P. WATT, 26 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 277–278.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

26th Oct 1887

My dear Watt,

Pray make your mind easy about that misunderstanding with Tillotson. It really hurts me that you should write of feeling distressed about a difference of opinion in a matter of dates in which I hold you blameless. To own the truth I am relieved to hear that I do not stand committed to an engagement so long ahead as 1889. As to 1890, the pen would drop out of my hand if I attempted to sign an agreement bearing such a date as that. My answer to Tillotson is (in regard to 1890) “Thank you – No”.<sup>1</sup>

If there is any continued difficulty about the short story, let us remember Chatto's kindness, and give him the story on his own terms, in time to take its place in his January number for 1888.<sup>2</sup>

If the 15 part story can be placed in Macmillan's magazine, I shall be greatly pleased – I would even make some sacrifice in the terms to get into a monthly periodical of that good standing next year.<sup>3</sup>

Come here whenever you can – you are always welcome. In February next I shall be driven out of Gloucester Place. I am also going to law (I am afraid) against some people who have pirated the title of “The Evil Genius”.<sup>4</sup> Well, Byron's Philosophy is my philosophy – “Whatever sky's above me, here's a heart for every fate”.<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Watt had met Tillotson in Bolton on 4 October on his way to Scotland, had understood from that meeting that Tillotson agreed to take WC's next serial story (either 'Iris' or a full-length novel) for early 1889, and had communicated this to WC. Later Tillotson insisted that his offer was in fact for early 1890, two years after the commencement of The Legacy of Cain (Watt's letters to WC, 3 and 25 October 1887, Berg).

2. Concerning the British periodical publication of 'The First Officer's Confession', written for Edward Buck's Spirit of the Times in New York. Watt replied on 26 October that, if his recent approach to the Sheffield Independent (owned by the syndicators Leader & Sons) was unsuccessful, he would offer the story to Chatto for Belgravia (Berg). The story eventually appeared in neither, but rather in Bow Bells.

3. Watt's letter of 25 October (Berg) had suggested that Macmillan's 'would not be indisposed to consider' the serial 'Iris' for their English Illustrated Magazine, though nothing came of the idea. (The reference is not to the superior Macmillan's Magazine, as Peters assumes, p. 420.)

4. Concerning WC's eventually unsuccessful efforts to take legal action against Leng & Co., which had announced plans to syndicate Fred Boyle's serial novel Her Evil Genius in 1888 – see the sequence of letters to Andrew Chatto beginning with [2766] of 20 October 1887.

5. From Byron's short lyric 'To Thomas Moore' of July 1817.

[2771] TO A. P. WATT, 26 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 278.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

26th Oct 1887

In great haste

My dear Watt,

Here are the book and the form filled in, and signed – except the date of first publication of first serial weekly part in February next, which I don't know. Will you kindly help me by inserting it? <sup>1</sup> I am glad to hear you are coming soon.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had replied immediately to [2770], WC's earlier letter of this date, thanking WC for his kind understanding of the Tillotson confusion (Berg). He had also enclosed a form for WC to complete concerning the registration for copyright purposes at Stationers' Hall of the serial edition of The Legacy of Cain, which was to begin its run in the newspapers in the third week of February 1888 (Law, p. 238).

[2772] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 27 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 278–279.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27th Oct: 1887

Dear Sirs,

A line to thank you for your letter, and for your kindness in offering me an opportunity of obtaining some more of the excellent champagne, under conditions which I sincerely appreciate.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Beecheno, Yaxley & Co

[2773] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 27 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 279.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

27th Oct: 1887

My dear Chatto,

My best thanks for your kindness – and for your advice, which I shall certainly take in regard to not registering for the second time.<sup>1</sup> We are going to take a legal opinion on our chances, immediately.

Ever yours WC

---

1. That is, entering The Evil Genius for a second time at Stationers' Hall. No letter from Chatto offering this advice is found in the letter-books at Reading.

[2774] TO TILLOTSON & SON, 28 OCTOBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 279.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 28th Oct: 1887

Dear Sirs,

I thank you for your letter, and for the Revises – both received today. You will, I hope, receive another instalment of my story on Tuesday next.<sup>1</sup> Illness has delayed me or there would have been two instalments.

My arrangements for the Italian translation have been completed. The French translator has the right of first refusal, after he has read the first five instalments. If we fail to come to terms, you shall be informed that I am free to negotiate for the French translation, before I answer my other proposals.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Tillotson & Son

---

1. The Legacy of Cain.

2. In the event, only the German translation rights were sold to Tillotson's – see [2870] to A. P. Watt of 10 July 1888.

[2775] TO [EDWARD W.] BOK, 2 NOVEMBER 1887

MS: Parrish (4/13/AM89-31). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 280 (with MS unlocated), amended A&C5, p. 21.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 2nd Nov: 1887

Dear Mr Bok,

Let me thank you for the cheque for $50 – and say how glad I am to hear that you like the little article.<sup>1</sup>

Pray excuse a [poor] reply. I am so pressed by my literary engagements that (in our English vulgar phrase) “I hardly know whether I am on my head or my heels.”

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

I shall be glad to see my article in one of your newspapers as you kindly propose.

---

1. ‘How I Write My Books’; see [2749] to Bok of 14 September 1887.

[2776] TO A. P. WATT, 4 NOVEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 280–281.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1887

My dear Watt,

I want to show you that I am not capricious in refusing to write for Mr Leng. If we had had time yesterday I should have shown you the copy of correspondence, made (and marked) by my lawyer. The one thing that I regret is that I should not have told you of the affair before you kindly opened negotiations, in my interest with Mr Leng.<sup>1</sup> The other paper appears in a Syndicate of American newspapers on the 27th of this month. Whether any English newspapers will care to publish it, I don't know.<sup>2</sup> If the offering of it involves any trouble, beyond writing a letter or saying a word – away with it into the waste paper basket!

Come again, soon! | Ever yours | WC

---

1. Explaining that the dispute over the title of Fred Boyle's serial novel syndicated by Leng & Co. (of the Sheffield Telegraph) was the reason why WC did not wish to do business with the Sheffield firm. Watt had written to C. D. Leng on 1 November 1887 offering him 'The First Officer's Confession' for £50 (Berg), presumably after refusals by both the Sheffield Independent and Belgravia (see the note to [2770], WC's first letter to Watt of 26 October 1887). At the same time Watt had offered Leng the next full-length serial by WC, to begin in early 1889. He wrote again to Leng soon after his meeting with WC on 3 November to withdraw the offer.

2. Concerning 'How I Write My Books: Related in a Letter to a Friend', for which Watt arranged publication in Britain in both the London Globe and Manchester Guardian on 26 November 1887. In America the article was carried by the Bok Syndicate – see [2775] to [Edward W.] Bok of 2 November 1887.

[2777] TO A. P. WATT, 8 NOVEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 281.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1887

My dear Watt

Yes – money is money – and even £5..5.. is not to be despised. But I am ashamed that you should have had the trouble of offering the thing.<sup>1</sup>

Only too glad to see you, as soon as you can come. If all goes well with me, I shall receive you next year in Wimpole Street. I have found a nice upper part of a capital house.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Concerning payment for 'How I Write My Books' from the Globe, as Watt's letter to WC of the same date makes clear (Berg).

2. 82 Wimpole Street, where WC moved during February 1888. Watt had written that he would like to call 'in a day or so' (Berg).

[2778] TO A. P. WATT, 9 NOVEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 281.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

9th Nov 1887

My dear Watt

Here I am again – enclosing a proposal from a new and improved "Bow Bells".<sup>1</sup> I have written to thank them and to say that the affair is in your hands.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. A new series of the popular penny weekly Bow Bells, published by the firm of John Dicks, began on 6 January 1888. Watt arranged to meet Henry Dicks, the current owner and a son of John Dicks (1818–81), on 10 November (see Watt's letter to WC of 9 November, Berg). Watt wrote to WC on 11 November to say that Dicks had agreed to take 'The First Officer's Confession' for £40. The first issue of the new series duly featured the story prominently on its front page.

[2779] TO A. P. WATT, 11 NOVEMBER 1887

MS: Ross. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 282.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th Nov

My dear Watt,

Bravo! You have done wonders.

Come either tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon – or on Monday morning whichever you like best

Ever yours | WC

I shall be at home tomorrow till 4.P.M.

[2780] TO A. P. WATT, 17 NOVEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 282.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

17th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1887

My dear Watt,

Here is the proof corrected. I suppose there is no fear of any mistake being made at the Globe Office about the day of publication – Saturday the 26th Nov<sup>r</sup>?<sup>2</sup> I thought of writing it on the proof – but hesitated in fear of giving offence. Editors are (sometimes) as we say in Scotland, “kittle cattle”

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Bound out of order in the Pembroke volumes, after [2776] the letter to Watt of 4 November 1887.

2. Of 'How I write My Books'. Watt had enclosed the proofs with a letter of 15 November (Berg).

[2781] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 21 NOVEMBER 1887

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 282–283.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

21st Novr 1887

My dear Chatto,

“The Evil Genius” piracy ends with sulky submission on the part of the proprietor and inventor of the title.<sup>1</sup> Since I last wrote to you a skilled lawyer has been searching among Cases and Reports, and has discovered such a mass of contradictory decisions, and such revelations of stupidity, that the one hope for me if I had persisted in asserting legally my plain moral right, would have been (if I had failed to get an “injunction”) to apply for a new trial – and that failing, to go to the House of Lords. The lowest estimate of expense was £2000. A luxury reserved for rich men is not a luxury for me. So the thieves have it their own way<sup>2</sup> – and I swallow my sense of wrong, and find it stick in my throat. When I tell you that a judge, in a bygone [sic] case, actually declared from the bench that the discovery of a title for a book was not an effort of invention, you will understand my motives for “caving in”, apart from the question of money. If literary men were not the most disunited body to be found on the face of the Earth, they would subscribe to set the present disgraceful state of the law of title-copyright, fairly and properly on its right footing. As it is – good night and God bless you.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. That is, WC himself – see the notes to [2766] to Chatto of 20 October 1887.
  2. C. D. Leng of the Sheffield Weekly Telegraph and Fred Boyle, author of Her Evil Genius.

[3401] TO EMILY WYNNE, 1885-1887<sup>1</sup>

MS: Private, envelope only.<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C14, p. 26.

Mrs Wynne | 4. Delamere Street | Westbourne Square
Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from the long correspondence between WC and Emily Wynne and her daughter Anne, before they moved to Carlisle Mansions in November 1887 – see to her [2764] of 17 October 1887, directed to the old address and [2782] of 28 November 1887, to the new.
2. Just the cut front survives. Only five of the 42 known letters are unaccompanied by an envelope. This envelope front does not appear associated with any of them. The address is slightly different from others and so may have been written early in the series if not before the first known, which was [2431] to Emily Wynne, 12 June 1885.

[2782] TO ANNE WYNNE, 28 NOVEMBER 1887

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 511.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>
28th Novr 1887

Yes, dearest Nannie, you may well be proud of the new address. Grand! Grand!<sup>3</sup>

I am so hard at work that I don't know whether I have got my head on my shoulders or off. I am strictly shut off from every human being – even my wife. It is dreadful – and this new story is more dreadful still. You shall hear again when I have a spare few minutes – and you shall box my ears at the first opportunity for I gave George those fatal orders. In the meantime I love and adore you.

WC

I hope Mama is in glorious health in the new “flat”

---

1. Initialled ‘WC’ in lower left corner and directed to ‘Miss Nannie Wynne | 85. Carlisle Mansions | Victoria Street S. W.’. Postmarked ‘LONDON. W | NO29 | 87’.
2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
3. Carlisle Mansions was and is an elegant five-storey apartment building close to Westminster Cathedral and Victoria Station.

[2783] TO NINA LEHMANN, 28 NOVEMBER 1887

MS: Private.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 548.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>
28th Nov 1887

Dearest Padrona

I am so hard at work that I don't [sic] know whether I stand on my head or my heels. But I never did – and never will – say No to You. The work shall be cast aside – and I will have a delightful holiday at your luncheon table.<sup>3</sup>

ever aff<sup>ly</sup> yours | WC

---

1. The letter is found with a note from Fred Lehmann, dated 28 November 1887: ‘My dear Pym | Here is Wilkie’s reply to my wife’s invitation to lunch on Thursday next 1st Dec at 1<sup>30</sup> Miss Dickens & Miss Hogarth will be here on that occasion, and don't you fail us. Ever faithfully yrs F.L.’, with the accompanying envelope directed to ‘H. N. Pym | Foxwold | Brasted | Sevenoaks | Kent’, and postmarked ‘LONDON-W | 74 | NO28 | 87’. There is also an annotation on the third page of WC's letter in Frederick Lehmann's hand: 'Lunch at 15 Berkeley Sq. | Thursday 1st Dec '87 | 1<sup>30</sup> p.m'.

2. Monogram ranged left, address in black capitals ranged right. Paper watermarked '[H]IERATICA'.

3. This lunch was the occasion when Horace Pym gave WC the details of the Von Scheurer Fraud which formed the basis of the plot of Blind Love – see [2785] to Pym of 5 December 1887.

[2784] TO A. P. WATT, 2 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 283–284.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd Dec<sup>r</sup> 1887

My dear Watt,

Under another cover I send to you copy of the story for “Bow Bells”.<sup>1</sup> I have pinned some instructions to the MSS. which please look at by the light of your experience, in case I have made any mistake. Publication day in New York – December 24th.

Ever yours | WC

I have heard such a true story – confided to me alone – and with the material in it for a grand book!<sup>2</sup>

---

1 ‘The First Officer’s Confession’, published in New York in the Spirit of the Times on 24 December 1887, and in London in Bow Bells on 6 January 1888.

2. The Von Scheurer insurance fraud – see [2785] to Horace N. Pym, 5 December 1887.

[2785] TO HORACE NOBLE PYM,<sup>1</sup> 5 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Private (formerly held by the heirs of Horace Noble Pym).<sup>2</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 320. Published: Pym, pp. 40–41; B&C, II, pp. 548–549; Bachman & Cox, p. 422.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>3</sup>

London | 5th December 1887

My dear Mr Pym,

Let me heartily thank you for the kindness which has given me such an admirably clear and complete abstract of that interesting story. My one regret is that I am not able to begin making use of my materials at once. But a new serial story, which is to begin in February next,<sup>4</sup> claims all my working hours, and forces me to make the most of my time before the weekly publication begins.

How the law disposes of the two surviving conspirators – and especially what becomes of the interesting “Julie” – will probably appear in the newspapers. In any case, I shall keep a wary eye on the foreign news in The Times. In the case of the romantic – or I ought to say, the dramatic events, your skill in telling (and writing) a story has left nothing wanting.

A visit to your house is, thanks to your friendly invitation, something pleasant to anticipate when I am a little less rigidly chained to my desk. As I get older I find it more and more difficult (in the matter of literary workmanship) to please myself. By comparison with my late “colleague” Anthony Trollope – with his watch on the table, and his capacity for writing a page in every quarter of an hour<sup>5</sup> – I am the slowest coach now on the literary road, and holidays grow more and more like those “angels’ visits” recorded by Poet Campbell.<sup>6</sup>

Once more thanking you, believe me | Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – When I wrote my Life of my Father I was not personally acquainted with Dickens. Determining to make the book pay its expenses beforehand, if the thing could possibly be done, I published by subscription. Dickens (who knew my father personally, as well as by reputation) was one of the first subscribers. So my first book found its way into his library<sup>7</sup> – and I am indeed glad to hear that it has its resting-place in your library now.

1. Horatio (Horace) Noble Pym (1844–1896), lawyer, friend of Dickens and the Lehmanns.
2. Letter sold at Sotheby's (London), 23 April 1996, lot 32, 'The Library of Horace N. Pym' auction. For the events surrounding this letter, see Horace N. Pym, A Tour Round my Book-Shelves (1891), pp. 31–44. Pym 'told ... [WC] of an insurance fraud perpetrated in Germany. A dying man, bearing a sufficient likeness to the perpetrator of the fraud, was substituted for him so that he could collect on a large life-insurance policy. ... It was a story of doubling bound to appeal to him' (Peters, p. 428).
3. WC uses printed paper with monogram.
4. The Legacy of Cain.
5. The posthumous appearance of Trollope's An Autobiography in two volumes in 1883 had contributed greatly to this image of his clockwork methods of composition.
6. 'Like angel-visits, few and far between': Thomas Campbell, Pleasures of Hope (1799).
7. Memoirs of the Life of William Collins (2 vols, 1848), from CD's library, was also on sale as lot 31 at the 'The Library of Horace N. Pym' auction.

[2786] TO FRANK ARCHER, 5 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Archer, p. 300; BGLL, IV, p. 284, amended A&C7, pp. 33–34.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>
5th December 1887

My dear Archer,

Forgive this late reply to your kind letter. I have been away – a fugitive from worries and a victim to work. For the next month to come I must be chained to the desk – (with intervals of exercise) or I would gladly propose a day for accepting your friendly invitation. In the meantime, I have an hour's rest between 4 and 5, when a friend is always welcome. Can you kindly look in on Wednesday afternoon next? and keep me company with a cigar? If Yes, don't trouble to write. If No, pray choose your own afternoon later, and let me have one line to say which day.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Directed to 'Frank Archer Eqr | 21. Baker Street | W.', postmarked recto 'LONDON W | 1 | DE 5 | 87 | 48', with 'WC 33' in pencil in another hand on the recto.
  2. With address ranged right and WC's monogram ranged left.
  3. WC writes on the Monday and Archer did indeed visit him on the Wednesday. Archer records in his diary: 'Spent an hour or so with Wilkie Collins this afternoon at his house' (Diary entry, 7 December 1887, Archer Archive.). In his autobiography Archer comments: 'There is no other reason for giving the letter which follows, except that it was the last communication I ever received from him, and led to a pleasant chat we had together two days afterwards at his own home'. There follows a lengthy description of the views expressed by WC during that conversation (pp. 301–304).

[2787] TO JAMES PAYN, 5 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 285.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
5th December 1887

My dear Payn,

I am really ashamed not have [sic] returned "The Touchstone of Peril" before this.<sup>1</sup> Since you came to me (when are you coming again?) I have had to perform a literary match against Time backed by neuralgia and I only won it the end of last week.<sup>2</sup> My head was too much muddled to remember anything. And now I am clearer and better, I am yours

penitently and | affly WC

-
1. The Touchstone of Peril: A Tale of the Indian Mutiny by D. H. Thomas, pseud. R. E. T. Forrest (London: T. Fisher Unwin, 1886), presumably lent to WC because of its associations with The Moonstone.
  2. Referring to 'The First Officer's Confession' – see [2784] to A. P. Watt of 2 December 1887.

[2788] TO A. P. WATT, 5 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke, damaged.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 285–286.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

5th December 1887

My dear Watt,

Let me acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter enclosing your cheque for £8..8.- being the sums received by you from The Globe and The Manchester Guardian for my article called, “How I Write My Books”.<sup>2</sup> I must once more thank [you sincerely for the trouble you have not] hesitated to take in this matter.

Needless to add that I shall be delighted to see you tomorrow. If “Bow Bells” does not get on, it looks to me as if Dicks will get off.<sup>3</sup> This will be a sorry return for all that you have done towards completing the negotiations. But we won’t take the gloomy view yet. Like the Sunday school children in the hymn:

[remainder of letter excised]

---

1. The bottom of the leaf has been cut off in an ‘L’ shape, presumably for the signature on the verso, removing the ending of the letter and nearly two lines of text from the first paragraph. The words in square brackets there represent a conjectural restoration.

2. Five guineas from the London paper and three from the Manchester one.

3. Watt’s letter to WC of 11 November had suggested that, in addition to ‘The First Officer’s Confession’, Henry Dicks might also accept the serial ‘Iris’ to begin in April 1888 (Berg). In fact the negotiations proceeded much more slowly than anticipated – see Graham Law, ‘Last Things’, WCSJ, NS 1 (1998), pp. 50–58. Here WC suggests that, if the new series of Bow Bells is not successful, Dicks will withdraw from the negotiations.

[3069] TO PERCY WILLIAM BUNTING,<sup>1</sup> 6 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Chicago. Published: A&C3, p. 58.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W. |

6th Decr 1887

My dear Mr Bunting,

I was indeed sorry to have missed you when you kindly called today. A headache of the sort called “splitting” had driven me out to get the nearest approach to fresh air that London can offer. The truth is that I have been working a little too hard – and I am going away tomorrow to get some days of idleness, and to breathe the country freshness or dampness whichever it may be.

I need hardly tell you – but I will tell you – that I well remember that I am to be one of your contributors. The obstacle in my way is – as I think I mentioned when I last had the pleasure of seeing you – a new serial story. It begins in February next – and I am not yet as far in advance as I ought to be. In other words, I must still trust to your indulgence – and deserve it, if I can, by accepting no other proposals for an article, until I can redeem my pledge to you.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Sir Percy William Bunting (1836–1911), social reformer, editor of Contemporary Review from 1882 until his death.

[2789] TO EDWARD PIGOTT, 10 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 286.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th Decr 1887

My dear Ted,

Between work in arrear and letters in arrear I am too late to thank Henry at Budleigh Salterton for a dinner invitation.<sup>1</sup> He travels to London today. Give him please my note of (inevitable) excuse, when you see him. I am afraid you are not much better (in health) than I am.

What is your report of yourself?
Always yours affy | WC

---

1. Edward's nephew Henry Pigott, who had a residence at the seaside town in Devon. See [2536] to him of 15 March 1886.

[2790] TO A. P. WATT, 11 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 286.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

11th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1887

My dear Watt,

Let me thank you for a cheque for £36...- being the sum received from the proprietors of "Bow Bells" for the use in that periodical of my story called "The First Officer's Confession" – less your commission.<sup>1</sup>

I am getting on fairly well. A little more frosty weather is all I want.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

A. P. Watt Esq.

---

1. In other words, John Dicks & Co. paid £40 for the story. No cheque for this amount appears in WC's account (Couatts: WC), so it may simply have been cashed.

[2791] TO A. P. WATT, 12 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 287.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

Monday 12th Dec<sup>r</sup>

N<sup>o</sup> 2<sup>1</sup>

My dear Watt,

Here is a Postscript to last night's letter – written at midnight, when I was half awake and half asleep, and too stupid to thank you for "One Traveller Returns".<sup>2</sup> What must you have thought of me!

I am not quite sure that I understand the book. It seems to me (so far as I have yet read) to be a very learned narrative of the conversion of the Druids to Christianity. Do we, however, feel any interest in Druids? I would rather congratulate the authors than answer the question. I sit at their feet guiltily conscious that I should never have shown their patience in collecting remote information.

As to the cover, my morbid mind delights in that wonderful incomprehensible gilt creature hovering on the top of the mountain. Little as it is, I declare it to be a new ghost – and (right or wrong) I admire the imagination which designed it – and I thank you (and our friend Chatto) for the ghost as well as the book.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Indicating that the letter is a form of postscript to the letter dated 11 December 1887.

2. Novel by David Christie Murray and Henry Herman, published in one volume by Chatto & Windus in 1887.

[3070] TO CHARLES KENT, 17 DECEMBER 1881–87

MS: Parrish (5/4).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C3, p. 59.

Mr WILKIE COLLINS | 90, Gloucester Place, Portman Square. W.
17 Dec<sup>r</sup>

With my love | WC
To Mr Charles Kent. | 1. Campden Grove

---

1. On a small printed visiting card, which provides the conjectural dating limits.

[2792] TO A. P. WATT, 20 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Summary: B&C, II, p. 549. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 287–288.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
20th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1887

My dear Watt,

Thank you for the form – which I return signed and witnessed. Being not quite sure whether I ought to date the document today – or on the day of publication in Bow Bells – I trust to your kindness to fill in the other blanks.<sup>1</sup>

On Sunday last I very nearly put a premature end to “The Legacy of Cain”. In other words, I went out for a walk – and in two minutes the detestable raw air caught my heart, or my lungs, or both – I staggered back as nearly suffocated as a man could well be. And I am a prisoner at home – better, but ordered to go upstairs backwards – and only hoping to get to work again tomorrow. The doctor’s stethoscope reports that my heart is answering to the medical call on it. So all’s well that ends well.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Concerning the registration for copyright purposes at Stationers’ Hall of the periodical publication of ‘The First Officer’s Confession’.

[2793] TO EMILY WYNNE, 22 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Private, on plain visiting card, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 288.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 22nd Dec 1887

My dear Mrs Wynne,

I am only now able to thank you for your very kind letter. A direful mingling of spasm suffocation and neuralgia has committed an unprovoked assault on me. My health (such as it is!) is coming back again – but I am not yet allowed to leave the house.

The deed is done, in the matter of my future living place. Finding no flat to suit me in this neighbourhood (which agrees with me better than the riverside climate) – and having solemnly vowed never to take another house – I have taken refuge in the upper floors of 82. Wimpole Street, having the whole place to myself excepting only the dining rooms. I may move next [del] month. I must move in February.<sup>2</sup> I am glad to hear that you are so comfortable. My love to Mrs Wilkie.

Always truly yours Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Mrs Le Poer Wynne | 85. Carlisle Mansions | Victoria Street | S.W.’, initialled, and postmarked as dated.
2. In the event WC seems to have moved in the March – see [2822] to Hall Caine of 15 March 1888. Wimpole Street is in the Harley Street area of central London, on the Howard de Walden Estate. The archives of the Estate reveal that at 82 Wimpole Street WC was to become the sub-tenant of the distinguished dental surgeon Joseph Walker, who had taken the lease of the house on 5 October 1886. Walker was a resident of 22 Grosvenor Street and perhaps used the ground floor at Wimpole Street for his practice.

[2794] TO A. P. WATT, 28 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 289.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

28th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1887

My dear Watt,

I am still confined to the house – and the work has been getting on badly through my illness. At the end of this month the second delivery of copy which the agreement binds me to send to Tillotson will only extend to the 9th weekly part, instead of the 12th. Shall I write to Tillotson about this? or will you? And shall I send what is done to Bolton? I hope to finish part 9 tomorrow or next day. With my habits it is terrible work writing, without my customary exercise. It will be the end of January, I am afraid, instead of the end of December before part 12 is sent in. In itself, an advance of 9 numbers before the first number is published is amply sufficient – but what will Tillotson say?. I am writing at this moment with neuralgic pains – and I sadly want a word of advice.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt seems to have written to Bolton explaining the situation and W. F. Tillotson seems to have responded sympathetically.

[2795] TO MARY ANDERSON, 30 DECEMBER 1887

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 289–290.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

30th December 1887

Dear Mary Anderson,

Your friendly remembrance of me was indeed welcome. To you and to all dear to you I wish the happiest of happy New Years.

I have not written to you for the worst of all possible reasons – I could only have repeated this weary old story of my weary old health. Engagements even with my dearest friends are risks which I dare not run, because I am quite uncertain of being able to keep them when the time comes. A weak heart and shattered nerves attack me at one time and leave me in peace at another in their own cruelly capricious way. For the last ten days, I have been a prisoner in the house. But I am an obstinate old man – and I don't despair yet of getting well enough to see Mary Anderson, not only in her "Mount" at South Hampstead,<sup>1</sup> but – mad as the dream appears to be – on her stage at the Lyceum.<sup>2</sup> In the meantime I hear of your success, and rejoice in it with all my heart.

Always affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. – | If the Parcel Post is faithful, I have ventured to send three volumes to represent me, containing some "Little Novels" – now first collected in book-form.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Anderson's London residence from the late 1880s was Mount Waltham, Netherhall Gardens in South Hampstead, then the residence of many painters (see Anderson, pp. 240–241).

2. Mary Anderson was appearing in her own adaptation of The Winter's Tale, playing the parts of both Hermione and Perdita. The initial reception was unenthusiastic, but the play eventually ran for 164 nights.

3. The collection of fourteen stories published by Chatto & Windus in May 1887.

[2796] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 2 JANUARY 1888

MS: Huntington (HH 106). Published: B&C, II, p. 550.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

2nd January 1888

My dear Holman,

For the worst of all possible reasons, I am late in thanking you for your kindest of kind letters. Two weeks' imprisonment in the house, with the doctor for Gaoler, and no certainty yet of a day of deliverance – there is my dismal story, and the [del] hateful obstacles which will /[del]/ prevent me from making my bow to the Majesty of Misrule.<sup>2</sup> Add to this that I must get well enough, later in this month, to move into another house, and you can form an opinion of the auspicious manner in which the New Year is beginning for me. May it be a prosperous and a happy New Year, my dear old friend, to you.

Always yours aftly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Black engraved address ranged right, monogram ranged left.

2. Hunt had presumably invited WC to festivities on Twelfth Night (either 5 or 6 January), traditionally governed by the ‘Lord of Misrule’.

[2797] TO HENRY D. PIGOTT, 2 JANUARY 1888

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 290–291.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

2nd Jany 1888

My dear Henry,

Rather to my relief (for there is a direful risk in lending pictures for show) the application to me for the picture came too late. The small space of the Grosvenor Gallery was completely filled – and the collection, I am told is very incomplete.<sup>1</sup>

The Bay of Naples, from the Caves of Ulysses at Sorrento, Vesuvius on the horizon. Painted out of doors in 1838 by William Collins, R.A.<sup>2</sup>

=

Still a prisoner in the house – Heart now stronger, now weaker – an alarm of Gout yesterday, not confirmed today.

Caroline sends love | Ever yours | WC

---

1. The exhibition at the Grosvenor Gallery was ‘A Century of British Art’, opening on 2 January 1888. See the lengthy review in the Times of that date, p. 8, where it was explained that the century in question was ‘from the time to Hogarth to that of Turner and Constable’ but that the space available was rather small.

2. This is a reference to the finished oil sketch then owned by WC. The oil painting made from this sketch was exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1841 and is better known under the title ‘Scene from the Caves of Ulysses, at Sorrento’. The original sketch for the painting was kept by WmC and came into WC’s hands in 1867, shortly before the death of HC. Then WC and CAC ‘tossed for the pictures’ – see [0748] to HC of 11 May 1867. To WC’s surprise, CAC chose the ‘upright Sorrento’ while the ‘sea-Sorrento’ (the painting in question here) fell to WC and remained in his possession until his death. See WC’s own description in Memoirs, II, p. 107; Baker 2002, pp. 171–173; and the image posted at the Lewis website.

[2798] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 3 JANUARY 1888

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/49). Published: B&C, II, pp. 550–551.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

London | 3rd January 1888

My dear Sebastian,

When a man begins the New Year badly, is he justified in ~~the~~ wishing prosperity and happiness to one of his best friends? or does he spread the infection of his ill-luck? If you will promise to take the Scotch way of protecting yourself against fatality, I will wish you the happiest possible New Year. Put your right hand, under the table, and knock that under-part of the table three times, with the knuckle of your forefinger. This done, you are a [del] safe Sebastian. If you laugh, and don’t do it, you may be a Sebastian who will live to repent of his own rashness.

What is the matter? I hear you inquire.

Towards the end of 1887 I went out on a damp day, and was seized with a sort of neuralgic spasm which nearly suffocated me. It all but stopped the payment of my Insurance premiums – and the doctor /is/ ~~to~~ afraid to let me go out again just yet. However he won't let me write to the Cremation Society /telling them/ to light my fire and reduce me to harmless ashes – so I suppose I have not done wrong to write a business letter to Messrs Naylor & Co, requesting them to kindly pay my premiums as before.

But I have not done with the list of my misfortunes yet. As soon as the doctor will let me go out, I must move into another house. The lease here has expired, and the terms asked for allowing me to renew it are so [del] enormous that I have no choice but to go. Add to this that I am in the middle of a new serial story which will begin ~~in English~~ in newspapers, published in the English language, all over the world, in February<sup>2</sup> – and there is the story of my life, up to the present time.

And how is music getting on? Are you writing an Opera? Are you going to hear Verdi's "Othello": in the U.S.? An astonishing effort, I am told, for a man of 75. In this barbarous city – the largest in the world – Mr Carl Rosa is hesitating to risk six weeks performances of his opera company. In Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, and so on, he draws great audiences. Here, they won't come to him. Hallé's experience is the same.<sup>3</sup> When he wants to revive some unfairly neglected music, he tries his experiment at Manchester – not in London.

In Literature and Art there is nothing new [del] on this side of the Atlantic. The best novel recently [del] written by a new man is "King Solomon's Mines". [del] Have you read it? or don't you care about novels? A very clever book – of its kind – I say.

This is a dull letter – but what can I do, cut off /from/ my walking exercise? Return me Good for Evil, and send me a brilliant letter. In any case, believe me,

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. The Legacy of Cain, syndicated by Tillotson's.

3. Charles Hallé (1819–1895: ODNB), pianist and conductor who, in 1857, founded the Hallé Orchestra, Manchester.

[2799] TO HARRY QUILTER, 8 JANUARY 1888

MS: Huntington (HM 32312). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 291.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th January 1888

My dear Quilter,

It is not easy to tell you with what interest I have read your article,<sup>1</sup> and how gratefully I feel the generous spirit in which it is written. Your knowledge of my books, and the critical insight which is the result of that knowledge, have so completely discovered my method of writing fiction, that I more than doubt if I could have explained myself (in the literary sense) as you have explained me. I am conscious of having done some things in my Art by instinct, for which you have found the reason.

In two words, I am proud and happy. Proud to have been the subject of such criticism as yours, and happy – at my age, when death has robbed me of many friends – to have found a friend who fills one of the vacant places in my regard.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Presumably a draft of 'A Living Story-Teller: Mr. Wilkie Collins', later published in the Contemporary Review, 53 (April 1888), pp. 572–593. See [2826] to Quilter, 11 April 1888.

[2800] TO J. A. STEWART,<sup>1</sup> 9 JANUARY 1888

MS: Fales. Summary: B&C, II, p. 552. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 291–292.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 9 January 1888

Dear Sir

My literary work and my correspondence are seriously in arrear owing to illness. I must trust to your indulgence to excuse a reply written in a hurry.

Besides, the expression of my opinion in regard to writers of fiction and their works, will lose nothing by being briefly stated. After more than thirty years' study of the Art, I consider Walter Scott to be the greatest of all novelists, and "The Antiquary" is, as I think, the most perfect of all novels.<sup>2</sup>

Faithfully yours Wilkie Collins

J. A. Stewart Esq

---

1. Unidentified.

2. Generally on WC's admiration for Scott, see: P. Caracciolo, 'Wilkie Collins and "The God Almighty of Novelists"' in Smith & Terry, pp. 168–178; and Baker 2002, pp. 146–148.

[2801] TO A. P. WATT, 10 JANUARY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 292.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th Jan<sup>y</sup> 1888

My dear Watt,

I have been wretchedly ill – but I am beginning to get better, in spite of the detestable foggy vapour bath which is our present false pretence for weather. Yesterday, I got out for a while, and felt the better for a little exercise. Today, I am going to try if I can get to work again.

My best thanks for your friendly care of my interests. Don't forget that you will always find me here till 3 o'Clock. After that (when the wind is not in the East) the Doctor drives me out into the streets.

Ever yours | WC

[3229] TO 'ANTONIO',<sup>1</sup> LATE 1887-EARLY 1888<sup>2</sup>

MS: Unknown. Extract: 'Today's Tittle Tattle', Pall Mall Gazette (4 October 1889), p. 6; A&C8, p. 21.

Setting aside the first and foremost difficulty of illness which has obliged me to defer answering your kind letter for a whole month, I see two other difficulties in the way of my recommending books to 'young men'. In the first place I am not the right person to offer literary advice of this sort. Except when I was forced to do it at school I never remember reading a book because I had reason to suppose it would instruct me. If a book interests me I go on with it. If it fails to interest me (no matter who may have written in, or how many editions it has gone through) I very respectfully shut it up. In the second place, I don't know how to pick out three books from the vast mass of literature at home and abroad, which presents books equally worthy of being specially chosen. If I had health enough and time enough to do it, I should find it easier to recommend 300 books than three. In asking you, therefore, to excuse this late reply I must also ask you to let my apologies cover a confession of incompetence.

---

1. The extract is introduced thus:– 'When I read the mournful news that Wilkie Collins had passed away, writes "Antonio" in the Christian Commonwealth, I immediately looked up a bundle of old letters containing some interesting communications from the great novelist. Nearly two years ago I happened to be conducting a discussion on the "Three Best Books for Young Men," and Mr. Wilkie Collins was invited to give his opinion. This was his genial reply:–'. It has not been possible to trace the publication of the letter extract in the Christian Commonwealth, a weekly London paper starting up in 1881.

2. Dating from reference to a discussion conducted 'nearly two years ago'.

[2802] TO THE EDITOR OF THE CRITIC,<sup>1</sup> 19 JANUARY 1888

MS: Unknown. Published: (New York) Critic, 9:216 (18 February 1888), p. 85, our copy text; Sherbo 1992, p. 196; BGLL, IV, pp. 292–293.

90 GLOUCESTER PLACE, PORTMAN SQUARE, W., LONDON,
19 Jan., 1888.

MY DEAR SIR –

I am recovering from an attack of illness and most of my letters are written for me by another hand. But I must personally thank you for the very remarkable and interesting story which you have so kindly sent to me. The incident marked with a blue pencil is so dramatic and (to me) so entirely new, that I really hope to find an opportunity of making use of it. In that case it is, I trust, needless for me to say that the yet unwritten story will find its way across the Atlantic to express its sense of obligation to you as it best may.<sup>2</sup> Believe me, very truly yours,

WILKIE COLLINS.

---

1. See [2245] to G. H. Putnam of [1883] concerning this New York literary paper. The editor prefaced WC's letter with this explanation:

– Over a year ago there appeared in the local columns of the Newark Sunday Call a story which contained facts stranger than fiction. In the course of the narrative the reporter wrote: 'What a great plot for a novel Wilkie Collins would find in such an incident, if his imagination could only have conceived it, and he be presumptuous enough to solve a mystery by employing a fact so wildly improbable!' Recently a copy of the paper was sent by the writer to Mr. Collins, and the following letter has been received in reply:

The extract was followed with:

Mr. Wilkie Collins is about to leave the house in Gloucester Place, London, which he has inhabited for twenty-one years, in consequence of his lease having expired. He has taken a house in Wimpole Street. Besides the usual household gods, he has a large and valuable library to move, and a number of invaluable pictures. The gem of his collection is the Bay of Naples, by William Collins. Sir Robert Peel offered the painter 5000 guineas for it, and on that being refused, vainly requested him to name his own price.

2. The story itself has not been traced and it is not known if WC used it.

[2803] TO MARY ANDERSON, 20 JANUARY 1888

MS: Unknown. Extract, Robinson 1951, pp. 308–309. Published: Anderson, pp. 146–147, our copy text; BGLL, IV, pp. 293–294.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

January 20th 1888

Mr Terriss,<sup>1</sup> dear Mary Anderson, is not Romeo. I am Romeo – because I am in sympathy with you. At the time when, by my calculation, you must have been writing your nice little note, I was asking myself at what time in the afternoon I should be most likely to find you at home and disengaged if I put my patch on my weak eye and called at Cromwell House. When may I climb the area railings, with my umbrella in one hand and my guitar in the other, and hope to see Juliet in the balcony (well wrapped up)? In plain English, will you choose the day and the hour of the afternoon when I shall not be in the way, and ask your brother to send me just a line, which I shall be only too happy to obey? Over and over again I have thought of writing, and have put it off in the hope of being well enough to speak for myself. At last there is nothing the matter but weakness and certain vagaries of the optic nerves, which persist in seeing a pattern of their own making, as black as black lace, in this form:

[Here follows drawing.]<sup>2</sup>

It might be prettier, might it not? I think it is a reptile of the pre-Adamite period.

With kindest remembrances to my kind friends at home,

Always yours affectionately, | Wilkie Collins.

---

1. William Terriss, born William Charles James Lewin (1847–97), the actor who played Romeo to Mary Anderson's Juliet in the popular production of Shakespeare's play at the Lyceum from the autumn of 1884. See the review in the Times, 3 November 1884, p. 8a.
2. The editorial intervention is Anderson's.

[2804] TO A. C. ALEXANDER,<sup>1</sup> 25 JANUARY 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 294.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

25th January 1888

Dear Sir,

I gladly accede to the proposal with which you have favoured me to place my name on the list of the Committee for raising a fund for Doctor Charles Mackay<sup>2</sup> – and I very sincerely hope that the result will relieve a writer of conspicuous merit and of high character from all further anxieties of a pecuniary nature.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

A. C. Alexander Esqre | L.L.D.

---

1. Unidentified.
2. Charles Mackay (1812–89: ODNB), Scottish poet and journalist, former editor of the Illustrated London News (1848–59).

[2805] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 25–26 JANUARY 1888

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/73), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 294–295.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

London | 25 January 1888

My dear Sebastian,

This letter will be presented to you by Mr Alfred Ward, son of one of my oldest and dearest friends – now dead. For nearly a year past, he has acted as my secretary, and has performed his duties to my entire satisfaction.<sup>2</sup>

If you will kindly give him such words of advice as may occur to you, when you have heard what his object is in visiting the United States, you will do me one more among many acts of kindness.

My fidgetty [sic] nature is wondering why I have received no acknowledgment from “Messrs Naylor & Co” of the repeated letters which I have addressed to them on the subject of the payment of my premiums of life insurance in New York and Boston, due Feby 6th and Feby 12th next. What does this silence of the firm mean? What does your silence mean? Not illness, in this last case, I hope? Relieve the anxiety, pray, of

yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

26th. The best of all acknowledgments just announced as on its way here from Liverpool – the canvas back ducks.<sup>3</sup> I will write again. WC

---

1. Signed and directed to ‘Sebastian Schlesinger Esq | Messrs Naylor & Co | 99. John Street | New York City’; across the top is written ‘Forwarded by Mr Alfred Ward’, with ‘Madison Avenue Hotel’ added beneath in another hand.
2. Alfred Ward, son of Charles Ward, who had died of cancer in 1883. Apart from this statement, there is no direct evidence of Ward's role as WC's secretary. It is also strange that WC does not mention that Alfred is the younger brother of Frank Ward, who had worked under Schlesinger in Boston in the early 1870s.
3. The canvasback duck (Aythya valisineria) is a large North American diving duck, still hunted for food. At the winter holiday season Schlesinger seems regularly to have sent gifts of this kind to WC from the United States – see [2398] to Schlesinger of 27 January 1885, for the first instance.

[2806] TO HENRY D. PIGOTT, 26 JANUARY 1888

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 295.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

26 January 1888

My dear Henry

Thank you for your kind letter. Come by all means to pot-luck on Saturday next at 7.30 sharp.

I got out today in spite of the cold wind – and without any ill result.

Ever yours | WC

I have written to ask Uncle Ted to come too.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Pre-paid, directed to ‘Henry D. Pigott Esqr | Hotel Windsor | Victoria Street | S.W.’, postmarked on the following day.

2. Edward Pigott.

[2807] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 3 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 314 (correctly dated); Davis, p. 302 (misdated 3 March 1888). Published: Coleman, p. 330; B&C, II, p. 552 (both misdated 3 March 1888).

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

3rd Feby 1888

My dear Fred,

Are you still in this dismal London? If Yes – then be still the best of good fellows and do me a favour. I have received a letter from Germany – handwriting and language impenetrable mysteries, though both the names are known to me. Will you ask the clerk at your office who knows German to translate for me?<sup>2</sup>

After a month’s confinement to the house (nervous seizure) – I am soon to be turned out of the house. Half my furniture has gone already – I live in a dressing-room. The new house is at 82 Wimpole Street. On, or before the 25th (when my lease expires) I must be moved – perhaps /in/ the van, unless the weather improves. Dont [sic] you “wish you were me?”

My love to the Padrona – wherever she may be

Yours afftly | WC

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. See [2808] to Lehmann of the following day for the details.

[2808] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 4 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5). Typed transcript: Texas. Published: Coleman, p. 326 (recipient unidentified); BGLL, IV, p. 296.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

4th Feby 1888

My best thanks. Here is the letter.<sup>1</sup> N. B. – “Simson” is the excellent lawyer whom I employed, two or three years since in the attempt to gain my fees for German translation from “Jungling”.<sup>2</sup> As well as I remember, half the sum which J. had promised to pay was recovered by S. Behold the circumstances!

WC

1. That is, the letter in German referred to in [2807] to Lehmann of the previous day.
2. Thus for the German translator Paul Jüngling with whom he had been in dispute – see [2133] to the lawyer Simson of 5 April 1883.

[2809] TO A. P. WATT, 4 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 296–297.

90. Gloucester Place. W. | 4th Feby 1888 | 11.15.a.m.

My dear Watt,

The agreement just received, and returned signed. Everything is – what everything invariably is when I am lucky enough to be associated with you – entirely right. I have only to say once more – thank you!<sup>1</sup>

Here is a specimen of the pleasure of moving. This is the only morsel of paper I can find to write on.<sup>2</sup> Never mind – I am keeping free of that dreadful pain, and the troubles of moving are the merest trifles now.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The agreement – in the event never fulfilled – with Henry Dicks for the serial publication in one of the firm's periodicals of a novel in twenty parts by WC for the sum of £1,000. The date of commencement of publication was specified as the beginning of September 1888, but an accompanying letter from Dicks already suggested that this should be delayed until after the end of the parliamentary session. The documents survive in the Watt Archive at UNC – see Law, 'Last Things', WCSJ, NS 1 (1998).

2. WC writes on a long and unevenly shaped sheet of rather rough paper.

[2810] TO WILLIAM MOY THOMAS,<sup>1</sup> 6 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, pp. 327–328; BGLL, IV, pp. 297–298.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th February 1888

Dear Mr Moy Thomas,

The barbarous copyright law of England declines to protect my play on “The New Magdalen” subject. I was ignorant enough, in those days, to publish the novel first – and to let the play follow instead of preceding it. Any larcenous rascal possessed of a pot of paste and a pair of scissors can steal my novel for stage purposes – as things are.<sup>2</sup>

But your correspondent is not altogether wrong.<sup>3</sup> Some time since, I discerned that a country actor had “adapted” the novel – without my permission and indeed without my knowledge. But he was rash enough to advertise a morning performance of the stolen goods at the Vaudeville Theatre. I at once wrote to Mr Thorne to state my case – and received an answer which it is needless to say was the letter of a gentleman.<sup>4</sup> Mr Thorne recognised my moral right by forbidding the performances at his theatre – unless I gave permission. I had the actor and the “leading lady” before me, and addressed them in a “lively allocution”.<sup>5</sup> The places being already taken at the theatre, they threw themselves on the poor author's mercy, and I allowed them to give their performance – on the condition, of course, that they played my own dramatic version. But for Mr Thorne, they might have set my “rights” at defiance.

This is, I hope, not a very incoherent letter. I write surrounded by the horrors of moving. On the 25th of this month I go to 82 Wimpole Street – and shall not move again, I hope and trust, until the last move of all.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

W. Moy Thomas Esqre

---

1. Now working principally as a drama critic, but still active in the struggle for authors' rights – see [1517], WC's earliest letter to him of 1 March 1875.

2. On the absence of legal protection for novelists from unauthorized dramatizations of their work, see Copinger, 3rd edn, pp. 378–385.
3. Judging by the parallels between this letter and [2812] to the novelist Hall Caine of 8 February 1888, Thomas’s correspondent might have been Caine.
4. Thomas Thorne, actor-manager at the Vaudeville Theatre, The Strand, which opened in 1870.
5. See [2550] to Carrie Bartley, 9 April 1886.

[2811] TO A. P. WATT, 6 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published BGLL vol. IV, p. 298.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

6th February 1888

My dear Watt,

You are my Good Genius. I knew absolutely nothing of the appearance of that story in the “Weekly Scotsman” until you kindly sent me the newspaper.<sup>1</sup>

The story was originally written for my friend in New York, and published in England by Tillotson some years since. Here he is – as you will perceive – asserting his serial rights in perpetuity in any newspaper which will buy the story of him. Would you mind writing to ask him, whether he has re-published the story in The Scotsman, and whether he proposes any written permission from me to assert a serial right of publication in all English newspapers for all time to come as long as the copyright lasts? I may have forgotten details – but if the matter is put in this way, we shall guard ourselves against a too triumphant reply.

T. has had the 10th instalment – has set it up in proof – and got his proof corrected for revise. I am working at N<sup>o</sup> 11.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I am expecting your “Little Novels” in a day or two.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. On Saturday 4 February 1888, WC’s ‘The Devil’s Spectacles’ was published in the Edinburgh Weekly Scotsman, which had just begun to appear in an enlarged edition containing a number of short and serial stories, many supplied by Tillotson’s Fiction Bureau in Bolton. The story was originally published in the Spirit of the Times on 20 December 1879. Tillotson’s purchased the British serial rights for £35 in 1884 and the story appeared in the Bolton Weekly Journal and other newspapers on 20–7 December of that year. There were a number of similar ‘misunderstandings’ between authors and publishers at this period concerning the extent of serial rights – see Law, pp. 164–170.

2. Referring to the serial version of The Legacy of Cain.

3. Referring to the presentation copy of the one volume Little Novels published by Chatto in 1887, now held in the Bradley Room at the library of the Houston Baptist University. On the title page WC writes: ‘To A. P. Watt from | his friend | Wilkie Collins | 9th February 1888’.

[2812] TO HALL CAINE,<sup>1</sup> 8 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Manx (9542 GMFD 73), with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Extract: Bookman (August 1901), pp. 319–320. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 299.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th February 1888

Dear Mr Hall Caine,

I am sure I may trust to your kindness to excuse this late acknowledgement of your letter, when I tell you that I am suffering the domestic agonies of moving from one place of abode to another. I had hoped to get to the new house tomorrow – but the devil who lies in wait for persons in my condition has raised obstacles which will probably keep me here, in a less than half-furnished abode, for another fortnight. If you don’t object to a room without a carpet or a curtain, I can declare myself still possessed of a table and two chairs – pen and ink – cigars – and brandy and water – and I shall be delighted to see you, and to give you all the information that in me lies, if you let me have a line to say when I may expect you. In the meantime, let me warn you that the stupid copyright law of England allows any scoundrel possessing a pot of paste and a pair of scissors to steal our novels for stage purposes – unless we have ourselves produced our story on the stage, before the publication of the novel. But for the honourable conduct of Mr Thorne (of the Vaudeville Theatre) the pirated “New Magdalen” would have been played in spite of me. More of this when we meet.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Thomas Henry Hall Caine (1853–1931: ODNB), later knighted, novelist who was born in Cheshire but spent much of his childhood on the Isle of Man, the home of his father. He had resided with Dante Gabriel Rossetti for over a year before the latter’s death in 1882. Caine probably wished initially to consult WC on the business of dramatizing his own recent novel, The Deemster (1887), but soon became a close friend (see Allen, pp. 189–191). WC’s presentation copy from Hall Caine of The Deemster was in his library at the time of his death, with Caine’s The Shadow of a Crime (Baker 2002, pp. 84–85).

2. Pre-paid, directed to ‘Hall Caine Esqr | Aberleigh Lodge | Bexley Heath | Kent’, postmarked on the following day.

[2813] TO A. P. WATT, 8 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 300.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

8th Feby 1888

My dear Watt,

I most sincerely hope that the liver-trouble will prove to be only a passing annoyance – and I direct to the office with cheerful anticipation of finding you at the helm as usual.

As for me, I am at the disposal of the devil who presides over moving. Since I last wrote, my bath here is to be moved with the rest of the furniture – and set up with pipes and cisterns – in connection with a new “range” bought today. Result, a fortnight’s hammering at the new house – and a continued residence at Gloucester Place – for work I must, and work I can not to an accompaniment of hammers. I have written to Mr Hall Caine to tell him first what to expect, and then to ask him to choose his own day for coming here. With two chairs and a table – cigars – brandy and water – and pen and ink – and desperation, much may be done.<sup>1</sup> You will be as welcome as ever if you come my way.

Don’t trouble about writing to T. – if you are pressed by business and not feeling quite well. It is a shame to bother you about such things now.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. See [2812] to Caine of the same date.

[2814] TO ANNE WYNNE, 8 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 511.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>2</sup>

8th Feb 1888

Dearest and best of Mrs Wilkie Collinses, I have just got two chairs and a bath – and a desk and pen and ink – and cigars and brandy and water – and plenty of physic – and that is all. I am dieted without mercy – I dare not eat with you or drink with you – my recovery depends on still “taking the greatest care of myself”, and my serial story begins on the 18th of this month and is only half done. To complete my wretchedness, my bath is to be taken away from me and set up in the new house – new cistern and paper – and a new “range”. In the interval I remain [del] not only your loving and bedevilled, but also your dirty,

WC

My love to Mama

---

1. Initialled 'WC' in lower left corner and directed to 'Miss Nannie Wynne | 85 Carlisle Mansions | Victoria Street S. W.'. Postmarked 'LONDON. W. | FE9 | 88'.
2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

[2815] TO EDWIN H. BAVORSTOCK,<sup>1</sup> 10 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 300–301.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10 Feby 1888

Dear Sir,

It is simply impossible for me to take advantage of the opportunity which you are so good as to offer. The house to which I am about to remove is smaller than the house that I leave – and I cannot hope to find wall-space enough in my new residence to accommodate the works of Art which are already crowded in this house. I can only therefore thank you.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

To | Edwin H. Bavorstock Esq

-
1. Unidentified, but perhaps an art dealer.

[2816] TO WILLIAM MOY THOMAS, 10 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 329; BGLL, IV, p. 301.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

10th Feby 1888

Dear Mr Moy Thomas,

Only a word to say that I am very glad to hear that you propose to turn my fragments of personal experience to such good account. The excellent example set by Thorne deserves to be made generally known.<sup>1</sup>

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. We have not been able to trace where, or indeed whether, Thomas made use of WC's experience as referred to in [2810] of 6 February, though this is likely to be in connection with his role in the Association to Protect the Rights of Authors.

[3334] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 20 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Unknown. On sale: International Autograph Auctions (16 August 2017, lot 171). Published: A&C11, p. 14.

20th February 1888

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins<sup>1</sup>

-
1. On a small piece of paper for an autograph collector, with the date written after the valediction.

[2817] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 21 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Unknown. On sale: James Pepper Rare Books, June 2002.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 301.

Very truly yours, Wilkie Collins, 21st February 1888

-
1. 'On a piece of paper approximately by 4 by 6 inches. Traces of former mounting on back.' Perhaps merely an autograph.

[3303] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 24 AUGUST 1867 TO 24 FEBRUARY 1888

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C10, p. 20.

90 Gloucester Place | Portman Square | London

Wilkie Collins

---

1. On a small square of yellowed paper glued to an album sheet presumably for a collector. Dated from WC's residence at Gloucester Place, probably from the earlier part.

[3335] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 24 AUGUST 1867 TO 24 FEBRUARY 1888<sup>1</sup>

MS: Private. On sale: Michael Treloar Antiquarian Booksellers, Adelaide (auction, 10 December 2017, lot 6).<sup>2</sup> Published: A&C11, p. 14.

90, Gloucester | Place | Portman Square | London

Wilkie Collins

---

1. Dating from WC's residence at Gloucester Place, probably from the later part.
2. On a small piece of card, the handwritten name is in fact on a line above the handwritten address. Sold with a card dated 29 December 1884 from Robert du Pontavice de Heussey, which is probably not associated with it.

[2818] TO CHARLES KENT, 7 MARCH 1888

MS: Unknown. On sale: David J. Holmes Autographs, PA, Catalogue (1992). Summary: B&C, II, p. 466 (misdated 7 March 1884). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 301–302.

90 Gloucester Place, Portman Square, 7th March 1888

I am indeed sorry to hear such a melancholy report of your health. In a few weeks more you will be well enough, I hope, to come and smoke our customary cigar in the new house – and 82 Wimpole Street will by that time be fit to receive my old friend. I am now between the two houses ... I began this year badly with a severe nervous attack – but recovered and have kept my ground since. The new story is no easy one to write – but, so far as I can hear, it seems to be easy to read. Twelve weekly parts out of twenty are done. I hope you will like it when it comes out in book form.<sup>1</sup> Let me hear how you get on.

---

1. The Legacy of Cain, syndicated by Tillotson's from mid-February – see Law, p. 239. The book, dated 1889, was published in three volumes in November 1888.

[2819] TO CORNELIA STRONG,<sup>1</sup> 7 MARCH 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 302.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th March 1888

Dear Madam,

Your kind letter finds me lost in the confusion of moving from one house to another. There is no time to think of a “sentiment”. Everything that I ought to write to you is packed up, and is gone to the new house. Let me trust to your indulgence, and believe me,

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Miss Cornelia [N.]<sup>2</sup> Strong

---

1. Unidentified fan.
2. The initial is difficult to decipher and might be ‘N’ or ‘P’.

[2820] TO A. P. WATT, 7 MARCH 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 302.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

7th March 1888

My dear Watt,

On receipt of the 12th weekly part of the story, Tillotson returned his cheque for the second payment of £250..-.- and I have the pleasure of enclosing a cheque for your commission: £25..-
..-<sup>1</sup>

Still here!!! and heartily sick of it. But there is some hope of getting to 82 Wimpole Street, at the end of this week.

I get along, as we say in the U.S., pretty slick – and I hope you don't know by this time that you possess such a thing as a liver.

Ever yours | WC

Just a line to say that the cheque has reached you.

---

1. For the second portion of The Legacy of Cain. The payment was credited to WC's account as 'Recd. £250' on 6 March and the commission cheque to Watt debited on 9 March (Coumts: WC).

[2821] TO CARRIE BARTLEY, 14 MARCH 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/14). Published: Baker 2001, p. 505; B&C, II, p. 553.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

14th March 1888

My dearest Carrie,

I only venture to write to you when the worst that affliction can do has been done – and, even now, I ask myself what I can write to you that is worth reading.

With my way of thinking, I cannot honestly suggest topics of “religious consolation”. And no man, let him feel for you as he may – (and I have felt for you with all my heart) – is capable of understanding what a woman must suffer who is tried as you have been tried. The fate of that poor little child<sup>2</sup> – after making such a gallant fight for its life – is something that I must not trust myself to write about. My sorrow is yours and my sympathy is yours. For the rest, Time is the only ~~consolation~~ consoler.

When you can leave the other children, do come here. My love to you and my love to them.

Always affectionately yours, | Wilkie Collins

We hope to get to 82 Wimpole St next week.

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. Carrie's fourth daughter, Violet Clara, born 3 January 1888, who died on 5 March 1888 after suffering whooping cough for 14 days (GRO birth and death certificates; see Clarke, pp. 180, 225).

[2822] TO HALL CAINE, 15 MARCH 1888

MS: Manx (9542 GMFD 74). Extract: Bookman (August 1901), pp. 334–335; Caine, pp. 334–335; Sherbo 1993, p. 351. Published: B&C, II, pp. 553–554 (incomplete); BGLL, IV, pp. 303–304.

Early in next week: | 82. Wimpole Street. W.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

15 March 1888

Dear Hall Caine,

(Let us drop the formality of “Mr” – and let me set the example because I am the oldest.)

I have waited to thank you for “The Deemster”, until I could command time enough to read the book without interruptions.<sup>1</sup> Let me add that the chair in which I have enjoyed this pleasure is not the chair of the critic. What I am now writing conveys the impressions of a brother in the art.

You have written a remarkable work of fiction – a great advance on “The Shadow of a Crime”,<sup>2</sup> (to my mind) – a powerful and pathetic story – the characters vividly conceived, and set in action with a master hand. Within the limits of a letter, I cannot quote a tenth part of the passages which have seized on my interest and admiration. As one example, among many others which I should like to quote, let me mention the chapters that describe the fishermen taking the dead body out to sea in the hope of concealing the murder. The motives assigned to the men and the manner in which they express themselves show a knowledge of human nature which places you among the masters of our craft, and a superiority to temptations to conventional treatment that no words of mine can praise too highly. For a long time past, I have read nothing in contemporary fiction that approaches what you have done here. I have read the chapters twice, and, if I know anything of our art, I am sure of what I say.

Now let me think of the next book that you will write, and let me own frankly where I see some room for improvement in what the painters call “treatment of the subject.”

When you next take up your pen, will you consider a little whether your tendency to dwell on what is grotesque and violent in human character does not require some discipline? Look again at the “Deemster”, and at some of the qualities and modes of thought attributed to “Dan”.

Again – your power as a writer sometimes misleads you, as I think, into forgetting the value of contrast. The grand picture which your story presents of terror and grief wants relief. Individually and collectively, there is variety in the human lot. We are no more continuously wretched than we are continuously happy. Next time, I want more of the humour which breaks out so delightfully in old “Quilleash”. More breaks of sunshine in your splendid cloudy sky will be a truer picture of nature – and will certainly enlarge the number of your admiring readers. Look at two of the greatest of tragic stories – Hamlet and the Bride of Lammermoor, and see how Shakespeare and Scott take every opportunity of presenting contrasts, and brightening the picture at the right place.

I believe you have not – even yet – written your best book. And here you have proof of my sincerity

always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The Deemster (London: Chatto & Windus, 1887), set on the Isle of Man, was the work which made Caine’s name as a novelist. A presentation copy was found in WC’s library (Baker 2002, p. 85).

2. The Shadow of a Crime (London: Chatto & Windus, 1885) was Caine’s first novel, and initially appeared as a serial in the Liverpool Mercury where the author was then employed as a journalist. A copy of the novel was also found in WC’s library (Baker 2002, p. 85) – see the comments on it in [2402] to Andrew Chatto of 19 February 1885.

[2823] TO W. H. BARNES,<sup>1</sup> 17 MARCH 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Summary: B&C, II, p. 555. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 304–305.

82. Wimpole Street | W.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE, W.<sup>2</sup>

17th March 1888

Dear Sir,

Pray accept my excuses for this late reply. Your kind letter has reached me in the midst of the confusion which accompanies a change of residence. I am sincerely glad to find that I may number you among the friendly readers of my books to whom I am indebted for encouragement which I highly value.

When I was thinking over the subject of my book, I heard of an unhappy lady suffering from some disease of the blood which produced a terrible deformity in the face. She was invariably veiled – and she uniformly refused to say why (naturally enough as it seems to me). I purposely introduced incidents and surroundings in “Miss Dunross”<sup>3</sup> which would prevent my fictitious character from presenting any resemblance, in details, with the personage who had served me (in the painter’s phrase) as a model. The name of the disease, and nature of the deformity, my informant refused to reveal.

The second edition of “The Evil Genius” is published in one volume – and the price is three shillings and sixpence.<sup>4</sup> But the London booksellers sell the work at a discount of threepence in the shilling – and the price is thus lowered to two shillings and ninepence.

Believe me, dear Sir, | Faithfully Yours | Wilkie Collins
W.H. Barnes Esqre

-
1. Unidentified, though this might just be William Horatio Barnes, of the New York publishing house W. H. Barnes & Co., author of The Supreme Court of the United States (Washington: W. H. Barnes & Co., 1877).
  2. WC uses his old monogrammed notepaper, drawing four slanting lines through the old address, above which he writes the new.
  3. In The Two Destinies (1876), the hero, George, ‘is nursed back to health by the mysteriously disfigured Miss Dunross to whom he confides his story’ (Gasson).
  4. The Chatto & Windus ‘Piccadilly’ edition, bound in green cloth.

[2824] TO A. FULLER MAITLAND,<sup>1</sup> 22 MARCH 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 305.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.

22nd March 1888

Dear Sir,

I beg to enclose my cheque for the quarter’s rent, ending Lady Day 1888,<sup>2</sup> and being my last payment on the expiration of my lease of 90. Gloucester Place. The keys of the house, I shall have the pleasure of sending you on Saturday next.

On, and after, tomorrow (Friday 23rd) my address will be
82. Wimpole Street. W.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Alex. Fuller Maitland Esqre

-
1. See [2200] of 10 October 1883 to Maitland, agent for WC’s landlord Lord Portman.
  2. That is, 25 March. The cheque for £43-17s-6d was debited to WC’s bank account on 4 April (Coutts: WC).

[2825] TO A. P. WATT, 8 APRIL 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 306.

82. Wimpole St | W
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

8th April 1888<sup>1</sup>

My dear Watt,

I have been hoping to hear that you had got over your cold – and I send this to your office, trusting that it will find you at business again. Let me have just a word to tell me that you are well again, in spite of the cold weather.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Still on WC’s monogrammed Gloucester Place notepaper, with the printed address lines erased.

[2826] TO HARRY QUILTER, 11 APRIL 1888

MS: Huntington (HM 32313), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 555–556.

82. Wimpole Street W. | 11th April 1888

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~<sup>2</sup>

“If you please, sir, I dont [sic] think the looking glass will fit in above the bookcase in this house.” – “Your father’s lovely little picture can’t go above the chimney-piece. The heat will spoil it.” “Take down [del] the picture in the next room, and try it there.” “But that is the portrait of ~~my~~ your grandmother.” “Damn my grandmother.” “If the side-board [del] is put in the front dining-room, we ~~+~~ don’t know where the cabinets are to go.” “I am sorry to trouble you, but I miss three books out of the library catalogue – Forsters [sic] Life of Goldsmith, and Lamb’s Essays and Leigh Hunt’s Essays.<sup>3</sup> Do you think they have been stolen?” “Here is the man, sir, with the patterns of wall-paper.” “What on earth is to be done with the Story of Cupid and Psyche – ten big photographs and no place to hang them in.” “How will you have your bed put? against the side of the wall, or standing out from the wall?” “I say, Wilkie! when you told Marian and Harriet that they might help to put the books in their places, did you know that Faublas and Casanova’s Memoirs were left out on the drawing-room table?”<sup>4</sup> “I beg your pardon, sir, did I understand that you wanted a lamp in the water-closet?” “Do take some notice of the cat, he’s fond of you, and the workmen are frightening him out of his senses.” “When will you see Mr Bartley about the dilapidations at Gloucester Place?” “[del] Dear Sir, we are sorry to notice irregularity in the supply of copy lately. [del] Please excuse our writing to you on this subject. We must not keep the colonial newspapers waiting for their proofs. Yours, &c &c”

=

My dear Quilter,

Do the domestic circumstances reported above excuse me for not having written sooner. Oh, surely, yes?

I have had one happy half hour since I established myself in the new house – and I owe it to You. Your generous Review – seen in print – has added to the pride and the gratitude and the delightful sense of encouragement which I felt when I first read it in MSS.<sup>5</sup> I have been inclined to doubt whether it was worth while to have lived to be 64 years old. After reading that article, I am quite satisfied that it was worth while. Childish, is’nt it? But it is so, nevertheless.

My workshop is ready to receive you, and eager to receive you. When will you come and tell me how the new Review is getting on<sup>6</sup> – and try another cigar, and some more tea? Don’t bother to write more than one line (literally) to choose your day and hour.

Yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to ‘Harry Quilter Esqre | The White House | Chelsea | S.W.’, initialled ‘WC’, and postmarked ‘LONDON | D 1 | AP 11 | 88’.

2. WC draws three vertical lines through the old address on his monogrammed paper, above which he writes the new one and the date. He moved from 90 Gloucester Place on 23 March.

3. None of these items seem to have been among WC’s books when he died (Baker).

4. Marian and Harriet are the daughters of WC and Martha Rudd, then aged 18 and 16, of too tender years to be perusing works considered salacious like the trilogy (1787–90) concerning the love life of the Chevalier de Faublas by Jean-Baptiste by Louvet de Couvrai (1760–97), and the extensive Mémoires de Jacques Casanova de Seingalt, dating from the same period.

5. Quilter’s ‘A Living Story-Teller: Mr. Wilkie Collins’, Contemporary Review 53 (April 1888), pp. 572–593.

6. Quilter was editor of the new illustrated monthly Universal Review, whose first issue appeared in May 1888 and last in December 1890.

[2827] TO PERCY WILLIAM BUNTING,<sup>1</sup> 12 APRIL 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 306.

82 Wimpole Street | W
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

12th April 1888

Dear Mr Bunting,

I am blinded with dust, covered with dirt, and lost to literature for the time being. Please notice the new address – and let me assure you that I don't forget your kind readiness to receive me as a contributor, when I have got a few days in which I can think of something better than hanging pictures and prints, arranging books, planning furniture, and contending with the British workman.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Percy W<sup>m</sup> Bunting Esq

---

1. Percy William Bunting (1836–1911), editor from 1882 to 1911 of the Contemporary Review. In the event WC did not contribute to the periodical.

[2828] TO A. P. WATT, 12 APRIL 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 307–308.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.<sup>1</sup>

12th April 1888

My dear Watt

Many thanks for Mr Dick's letter which I return.<sup>2</sup>

The next story will be written in the third person. As to the title, I have not thought of it yet – and I should hesitate to publish it, under any circumstances. Any literary pirate who took a liking to it might steal it with impunity. I have already had one of my titles stolen – and the law declines to protect me, unless I can prove actual loss in money from the robbery.<sup>3</sup> This – in the case of the title of a book, not yet written – would be impossible. Mr Dick is probably not aware of this disgraceful state of the law. I see no objection to having this reason for withholding the title publicly stated in the preliminary notice, and to adding that my new story will be founded on the facts of a remarkable case recently related in the newspapers, in a very imperfect way. Details, of the strongest dramatic interest, that have never been published are in my possession, and will form the groundwork of the novel – suggesting not only incidents but characters.<sup>4</sup>

I cannot think it desirable to add any further particulars to the preliminary announcements. A “Synopsis” of the coming story would be simply offering ideas to certain writers who would not hesitate to make use of them. I am not a new writer, with my way still to make – and readers know what to expect of me when they see my name. You think so I know – and you are entirely right.

Ever yours | WC

I note that September is the time to bear in mind.

P.S. | Ask Mr Dicks, with my compliments, not to forget that “Rob Roy” and “David Copperfield” were written in the first person singular. And – if I may mention it – “The Woman in White” as well.

---

1. This must in fact be from 82 Wimpole Street, though WC forgets to erase the old printed address.

2. Henry Dicks's letter has not been traced, but presumably expressed the hope that WC's forthcoming serial novel for the firm of Dicks and Co. would not be written in the first person, as the short story ‘The First Officer's Confession’ had been.

3. Referring to The Evil Genius and the conflict with C. D. Leng the previous year.

4. By this time WC seems to have abandoned work on the manuscript of ‘Iris’, and the serial story he contemplated writing for Dicks was later to be given the title ‘The Lord Harry’ – see [2870] to Watt of 10 July 1888. The ‘remarkable case recently related in the newspapers’ – the Von Scheurer insurance fraud of 1883–84 – is discussed in [2785] to Horace N. Pym of 5 December 1887 (see Gasson, p. 154, and Bachman & Cox, p. 39).

[3402] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 16 APRIL 1888

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay, 2 February 2021, #293975848947. Published: A&C14, p. 26.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 16th April | 1888

---

1. In the format of a signature for an autograph hunter.

[2829] TO A. P. WATT, 19 APRIL 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 308.

82. Wimpole Street. | W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

19th April 1888

My dear Watt,

Can you come to me tomorrow or Saturday, at your own time of course? Chatto has made me a proposal for buying my books (copyright) – and I want very much to consult with you about it.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I wont go out till I hear from you – so as to be sure of not missing you.

---

1. See [2832] to Watt of 24 April 1888.

[2830] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 23 APRIL 1888

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 308–309.

82. Wimpole Street | W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

23rd March 1888

My dear Chatto,

First let me thank you for your proposal relating to my copyrights.

I must not venture to dispute an estimate of the value of these books which proceeds from your experience. Let me only say that I hope – if all goes well with me – to occupy the interval, before the present lease of “The Woman in White” and the other most popular novels expires, in trying if I cannot improve their value and copyrights by present and future work. My ambition in this respect keeps within reasonable limits – how reasonable you will see when I acknowledge that I should have closed with your proposal if you had said £2,500 instead of £2,000.<sup>1</sup>

As it is, I beg to accept the other proposal to pay £250 for a seven years’ lease, dating from this month, of the right of publishing the five books called The Two Destinies, The Haunted Hotel, The Fallen Leaves, Jezebel’s Daughter, and The Black Robe, on our customary terms as to the selling prices.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me, dear Chatto | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Let me also thank you for your kind present of “Herr Paulus” and “The Passenger from Scotland Yard.”<sup>3</sup>

Andrew Chatto Esq

---

1. Five years earlier Chatto & Windus had offered £2,500 for the sale (rather than the lease) of WC’s residual copyrights (see note to [2129] to Andrew Chatto of 28 March 1883), though the author was forced to accept only £1,800 when he eventually made the sale (see [2948] to Chatto of 2 April 1889).

2. WC’s stamped receipt (also dated 23 April 1888) for the sum of £250, by a promissory note falling due on 26 July 1888, is also found at Reading. It constitutes the agreement for the renewal of the lease on these five novels, all first published in book form by Chatto & Windus between 1876 and 1881. (On the letter there is an ink annotation in another hand diagonally across the upper left-hand corner, which reads ‘See receipt for 250£ bill due July 26. 88’.) The Bill was credited to WC’s bank account on 8 August, with another for the same amount, both entered as ‘Chatto & Windus’ note | disco<sup>d</sup>.’, with a single corresponding debit for £6-8s-1d of the same date, implying that this Bill was not discounted while the one which was not due until later was (Coutts: WC).

3. Referring to two novels published by Chatto & Windus in 1888: Walter Besant’s Herr Paulus, a satire on spiritualism in three volumes (in WC’s library, Baker 2002, p. 80), and H. F. Wiber Wood’s The Passenger from Scotland Yard, a detective story in a single volume.

[2831] MARIAN DAWSON TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 23 APRIL 1888

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 331; BGLL, IV, p. 309.

82. Wimpole Street
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
23rd April 1888

Dear Sirs

Mr Wilkie Collins as the above address will tell you has changed his place of residence. In the worry and confusion of moving he finds it very difficult to attend to his correspondence. I am requested to thank you in his name for your kind letter, and to add that he sincerely appreciates your liberal decision not to charge the new tax in regard to the champagne which you are so good as to reserve for him.

I am dear sirs | for Mr Wilkie Collins

Your’s [sic] obediently | M.D.

Messrs Beecheno, Yaxley & Co

---

1. Directed to ‘Mess<sup>rs</sup> Beecheno, Yaxley & Co | 135, Minorities | E.’, postmarked on the following day.

[2832] TO A. P. WATT, 24 APRIL 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 310.

90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.
24th April 1888<sup>1</sup>

My dear Watt,

Chatto called here yesterday with the £250.- for the five books at 3 months sight.<sup>2</sup> The purchase of the copyrights waits (for a while) the event of my being able to make them more valuable by my two new novels, The Legacy of Cain, and the story for Dicks.<sup>3</sup> In that case, Chatto will reconsider his offer. At present, his limit remains – £2000.<sup>4</sup>

Let me thank you again for your advice. I have not a doubt that I have acted wisely in following it.<sup>5</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. In fact from 82 Wimpole Street – WC forgets to erase the printed address.

2. For details, see the agreement with Chatto of 23 April 1888, now at Reading.

3. Referring to ‘The Lord Harry’.

4. In the event, WC sold the remaining rights to all his available novels to Chatto for £1,800 – see the agreement of 2 April 1889 at Reading.

5. If Watt’s advice was to delay accepting Chatto’s offer in the anticipation of an increase in the value of WC’s residual copyrights, it may not have been wise to follow it.

[2833] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 26 APRIL 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 310–311.

82. Wimpole Street | W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
26th April 1888

My dear Chatto,

If readers of the novel are in doubt which is The Evil Genius, the writer of the novel is sure of his Good Genius and declares that the name of that guardian angel is Chatto. It is really very kind of you not only to recommend three interesting novels to me but to make me a present of the novels themselves. I owe you doubled thanks.<sup>1</sup>

Little Lord Fauntleroy I save for the “bonne bouche”.<sup>2</sup> But I have begun on “Mr Potter”.<sup>3</sup> The scenes in Alexandria are admirably written – I have got no farther as yet. I wonder whether Mrs Burnett knows that she has given to her charming little boy the name of the last ~~woman~~ man to be hanged for forgery in England?<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The letter-books at Reading do not seem to contain the communication from Chatto accompanying the three novels, in which he presumably mentions readers' uncertainty about the meaning of the title The Evil Genius. WC had previously referred to A. P. Watt as 'The Good Genius' in [2509] of 13 December 1885.

2. That is, WC will save until the last the single-volume novel Little Lord Fauntleroy (London: Frederick Warne, 1886), by Frances Eliza Hodgson Burnett (1849–1924: ODNB).

3. Probably Mr. Potter of Texas, by Archibald Clavering Gunter (London: Samuel French, 1888). The third novel WC received from Chatto cannot be identified.

4. The banker Henry Fauntleroy (1785–1824), hanged for forgery on 30 November 1824. WC had written a short story based on the life of the forger, 'A Paradoxical Experience', Household Words (13 November 1858), reprinted in The Queen of Hearts as 'Brother Morgan's Story of Fauntleroy'.

[2834] TO EMILY WYNNE, 27 APRIL 1888

MS: Private, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 512.

82. Wimpole Street W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~<sup>2</sup>
27th April 1888

My dear Mrs Wynne,

The horrors of moving (not over yet), and the dire necessity of writing against Time, have been a little too much for me together. And when several thousand patterns of wall-paper (intended to replace a paper in the dining-room which influences my eyes every time I look at it) presenting every variety of hideous ugliness, arrived one after the other in interminable series, my power of endurance gave way, and I became one mass of yellow green Bile from head to foot. I am slowly, slowly getting better under a system of physic and diet (on which I will not dwell) which makes the bare idea of a delicious lunch something maddening to contemplate. Let me thank you for the moment, and engage to write again when my novel is off my mind,<sup>3</sup> and my appetite has returned. In one word, when I am worthy of your hospitality. I must be capable of enjoying my position when I am once more in your house.

Always truly yours | WC

---

1. Directed to 'Mrs Le Poer Wynne | 85. Carlisle Mansions | Victoria Street | S. W.'. Postmarked 'LONDON. W. | AP27 | 88'.

2. WC uses his old printed paper with monogram, watermarked 'HIERATICA', and draws four vertical lines through the old address, above which he writes the new one.

3. The Legacy of Cain.

[2835] TO ANNE WYNNE, 27 APRIL 1888

MS: Private.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 512–513.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~<sup>2</sup>
27th April 1888

Dearest Mrs Wilkie,

Don't bully me. Mother-in-law will tell you that I am already prostrate. Besides, I don't approve of your conduct since I have been away. I hear you have got tall. Have you forgotten that I am short? News has also reached me that you [del] have got a waist. Have I got a waist? And, greatest disappointment to me of all, I am positively assured that your back hair is on the top of your head. My back hair hangs on my shoulders. I have not had my hair cut for the last four months entirely to please you. A good wife follows her husband's example. What right have you to [del] /hide/ the top of your head from Me. I have a right to see (and, if I like, admire) the top of your head. There may be one excuse for you. Are you getting bald on the top of your head? If that is the case, I pity and forgive you. When I come to see you, I will bring with me "Mrs Allen's Hair Restorer" and rub it in myself. But don't allude to "Galantine and Truffles" – your mother, your excellent mother, will tell you why.<sup>3</sup> With all your faults, I love and adore you.

WC

For the Missus<sup>4</sup>

-
1. Enclosed with [2834] to Nannie's mother of the same date.
  2. WC uses his old monogrammed paper and draws four vertical lines through the printed address, above which he writes the date but not the new address.
  3. A coarse, rich duck paté, not to be mentioned to one recently 'one mass of yellow green Bile from head to foot'; see [2834] to Emily Wynne of the same date.
  4. Pencil note in WC's hand, upside down at the bottom of the last page of the letter. This is the last surviving letter to Nannie.

[2836] TO HALL CAINE, 1 MAY 1888

MS: Manx (9542 GMFD 75),<sup>1</sup> with envelope.<sup>2</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 556–557.

82. Wimpole Street | London. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~<sup>3</sup>
1st May 1888

Dear Hall Caine,

I am really and truly ashamed of myself for having allowed weeks to pass without thanking you for /your/ friendly and welcome letter. The strain of writing a serial story (with the newspapers /weekly/ publication not far behind me) I am used to. But when to this is added a fight, in this new house, with every form of decorative bad taste which the average Englishman can stick on the walls and paint on the doors and drag up the staircase – then the test of endurance becomes heavy in the case of a man who numbers four years on the wrong side of sixty, and my old friend the Doctor has been here in his professional as well as his personal capacity. But I am better again now – and my workshop is comfortable, and I have my pictures and books round me. Whenever you are in London with time to spare, pray come and see me. You wont [sic] interrupt me if you find me at my desk. As to my hours, I begin at 10 or 11. A.m. and go on sometimes till 3 or 4 in the afternoon. At any time between 3 and 5, you will be welcome with open arms. After 5. I get out. But if you find yourself free at ~~an~~ earlier hours than these, do not hesitate to come in. I want to hear about [del] /your/ play. In my own case when I have had plays produced, I take refuge in the dressing-room of one of the actors, and wait for my fate, stupefied with incessant smoking. There is no hope of my being able to take the place in your box which you so kindly offer to me, in my present state of health. And it is fortunate for you that I shall not occupy one of the chairs in the box. A first night – and especially a friend's first night – is no enjoyable occasion to me. The malice of enemies and the stupidity of fools, among the audience, and the "stage-fright" behind the curtain, are tests which my nerves are not strong enough to sustain. When your play is successfully started on a long run, I will try to get well enough to go and enjoy it.

In the meantime, and for the present only, goodbye.
always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
If there is any hope of my seeing you this week, I have just remembered that Saturday is the only day on which I shall not be at home.

-
1. Cream machine-made paper with indistinct watermark, engraved monogram ranged left, address ranged right. On the verso is written in Hall Caine's hand: 'This was Wilkie's answer to my invitation to share my box on the night of the production of the play founded on The Deemster. H.C.'
  2. Directed to 'Hall Caine Esqr | Aberleigh Lodge | Bexley Heath | Kent' and initialled 'WC'. Postage paid envelope, with pink and white oval stamp 'ONE PENNY', postmarked 'LONDON.W | X | MY 1 | 88'. (Envelope misclassified by Manx National Heritage as associated with [2822] to Caine of 15 March 1888 (9542/74)).
  3. Written above the printed heading through which WC draws four vertical lines.

[2837] TO MANDEVILLE B. PHILLIPS,<sup>1</sup> 9 MAY 1888

MS: Ross. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 311–312.

82. Wimpole Street. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
9 May 1888

Dear sir,

Let me thank you for so kindly sending me the delightful report of the proceedings at the Westminster Police Court.<sup>2</sup> I should have been sorry indeed to have missed the revival of Captain Wragge.<sup>3</sup> His diary seems to suggest that he has improved in audacity since the time when I had the honour of presenting him to public notice. In his case, the “feelings of a parent” overpower me – and I hope he may be leniently treated by the law.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Mandeville B Phillips Esqre

-
1. This must be the journalist Mandeville Blackwood Phillips (b. 1848), a resident of Willesden at the time of the 1881 Census.
  2. We have sadly been unable to trace the ‘delightful report’, perhaps the handiwork of Phillips himself.
  3. The charming rogue who helps Magdalen Vanstone in No Name.

[2838] TO HENRY D. PIGOTT, 9 MAY 1888

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 312.

82. Wimpole St. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
9th May 1888

My dear Henry,

The dining-room has neither got the carpet down nor the paint dry. You don't know what the British Workman is. When we can dine in the room is more than I know.

But are you free at 2 o'Clock on Saturday? and will you take some lunch with me in my study? Let me have a line to say if this will do. I am finishing my story – dreadfully fagged.<sup>1</sup> If I don't break down I shall have done in 10 days.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. The serial run of The Legacy of Cain in the newspapers continued until the end of June.

[2839] TO A. P. WATT, 9 MAY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 312–313.

82. Wimpole Street. | W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
9th May 1888

My dear Watt,

Many thanks for the cheque. I am sorry you should have had so much trouble about it. We will have nothing more to do with those people.<sup>1</sup>

Oh, dear! the Legacy of Cain story will run to a 21st weekly part. I am now half way through the 20th part – and feeling terribly fagged.<sup>2</sup> The worries with the new house are not over yet – the dining room still to be made habitable. This added to the strain of the writing is a little too much for me. You shall hear when I have finished the work – unless the work finishes me.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. As Watt's letter to WC of the same date makes clear (Berg), this is the payment of £6-14s for the publication of WC's 'The Victims of Circumstances' in the Boys' Own Paper, issued by the Religious Tract Society. In the end 'those people' published and paid for only two of the three stories – see [2612] to Watt of 14 September 1886, n. 1. This cheque does not appear as a credit on WC's account and may simply have been cashed (Coumts: WC).

2. The agreement with Tillotson specified a novel in twenty parts. Most of the newspapers carrying the serial eventually published it in twenty-one parts, though Tillotson's own Bolton Weekly Journal doubled up the final two instalments to keep it in twenty parts concluding on 30 June 1888.

[2840] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 16 MAY 1888

MS: Folger (654 Yc588/4). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 313.

82. Wimpole Street. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
16th May 1888

My dear Winter,

I heard the other day from Pigott that you were in England – and I am now delighted to hear from you that you are in London. You and your son must lunch somewhere (must you not?) – then choose your own day, and come here at 2 o'Clock. No "company". Neither you nor I can endure that. I am out of health like you – a miserable infirm wornout old devil, victim of having to move and write at the same time. But let us not give in. We must still (in the slang of the fine old days of British Prize-fighting) "toe the scratch, and come up again to time, groggy, heavily punished, but, to the astonishment of the whole Ring, not beaten yet."<sup>1</sup>

Yours affly | WC

Let me have one line to say on what day I may expect to welcome you and your son – so that I may make sure of not being out walking for health on the very day when you come.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. For an early example of WC's use of boxing slang see [0343] to Wills of 5 May 1860.

2. On the final leaf of the letter, and presumably dating from after WC's death, there is added in Winter's hand: 'From my dear friend Wilkie Collins. "When comes there such another?"'.

[2841] TO HARRY QUILTER, 18 MAY 1888<sup>1</sup>

MS: Huntington (HM 32314). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 314.

82. Wimpole Street | W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
18th May

My dear Quilter,

If I am alive the article shall be written – and, what is more, written by the end of the month.<sup>2</sup> My idea is – to classify the different varieties of novel readers, discovered by means of my personal experience – the letters written to me – the things said, in my hearing, by persons who were not aware that I was present – the people I have seen reading my books in the same carriage on railway journeys &c &c &c. If I have got any brains left, I think I can make this funny, in a quaint way.

Your article on the Academy is excellent. The Zola article very well written but (to me) dull. I say the same of the “Martial” article – learned, very good poetry, but I don't quite see, and I don't think he sees, what he is driving at. I am delighted to hear that you have started to your satisfaction.<sup>3</sup> The Times notice (the only one I have seen) is likely to be attractive to the general reader, and to help the work.<sup>4</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Dating from the first issue of Quilter's new international monthly magazine, the Universal Review, published by Swan Sonnenschein at 2s-6d, which appeared on 15 May 1888.

2. ‘Reminiscences of a Story-teller’, Universal Review (June 1888), pp. 182–192, one of WC's rare autobiographical pieces. WC had intended to submit it for the opening issue but was now determined to have it ready for the second.

3. Referring to articles in the first issue of the Universal Review (May 1888): Quilter himself on the Royal Academy, Eliza Lynn Linton on Zola, and A. W. Verral on the Roman epigrammist.

4. The Times notice, describing the new periodical as ‘if not brilliant, eminently readable’, appeared on 17 May 1888. A whole page of advertising had been taken out in the Times of 17 May 1888, clearly at considerable expense.

[3371] TO MESSRS TILLOTSON & SON, 22 MAY 1888

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C13, p. 12.

82. Wimpole Street | London. W.<sup>1</sup>
22nd May 1888

Dear sirs,

Copy [deletion] for the last weekly part of The Legacy of Cain / (21st)<sup>2</sup> was sent to you by yesterday's post.<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Tillotson & Son

---

1. Handwritten address.

2. Squeezed between the two surrounding words.

3. The story was initially intended to be over 20 parts but WC had written to Watt when he was half way through the 20th part to say that the story “will run to a 21st weekly part” ([2839] of 9 May 1888). This letter confirms that was how it was written. However, its first publication in the Leigh Journal & Times covered only 20 issues, 18 February to 30 June 1888 although it then ran in 21 parts in several other Tillotson periodicals (Law 2000, p. 239).

[2842] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 23 MAY 1888

MS: Texas, envelope only.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 314.

Messrs Beecheno, Yaxley & Co | 135. Minories | E.C. WC

---

1. Postmarked ‘LONDON-W. | [S2] | MY23 | 88.’, probably enclosing the cheque for £14-9s-3d debited to WC's bank account as ‘Beechens [sic] & Co.’ on 26 May (Courtts: WC).

[2843] TO ALEXANDER GRAY,<sup>1</sup> 26 MAY 1888

MS: Whitton Collection. Extract: Whitton, p. 24. Published: B&C, II, pp. 557–558.

82. Wimpole Street | London. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~<sup>2</sup>
26 May 1888

My dear Alexander,

Your welcome letter arrived just at the right time to be a relief to me, when the innumerable worries of getting into a new house, and the necessity of feeding the newspapers with [del] their [del] weekly allowance of “The Legacy of Cain”<sup>3</sup> were trying my powers of endurance together. I finished the last chapter of the story (which will be published in the first week of July) on Whit Monday<sup>4</sup> – and now I am able to attend to my correspondence, and to thank you for your letter.

When I visited the United States in 1873-74 – and met with a reception from friendly readers which I shall remember gratefully as long as I live – I had hoped to see San Francisco and to become personally acquainted with your wife and your children. But I am one of those unfortunate people who are unable to sleep in a railway carriage, and whose nerves suffer under the noise and vibration of railway travelling. I arrived at Chicago (from New York)<sup>5</sup> in such a state of exhaustion that I alarmed the landlord of my hotel. “What can I do for you?” that worthy man asked. I answered. “Let me have a bottle of the driest champagne you have got in your cellar – and then let me go to bed.” How many hours I slept, I don’t now remember. I was informed that they opened my door, from time to time, and looked in to make sure that I was alive. After this experience, the terrible journey to San Francisco daunted me – and to the great amusement of my American friends I wasted a whole week, in resting at one place and another, on my way back to New York.

Marion often calls here,<sup>6</sup> and is the benevolent fairy of my existence who brings me blessings in the shape of new-laid eggs – rarities not always attainable in London, no matter what price you may give for them. Do not let me mislead you into supposing that your sister keeps fowls. Her landlord takes that responsibility, and Marion takes the eggs.

I hear with sincere pleasure that you are happy in your wife and children. A man who suffers under domestic misery is, as I think, the most unhappy of men. With good children and a good mother, the other troubles of human life are all more or less endurable.

As for me, I gave up, what is called “Society” some years since, in the interests of my health, sadly tried by /the/ reiterated tortures of gout in the eyes. I live in retirement (with a few old friends still left) – devoted to my art.

With kindest remembrances to all at home, believe me,
Ever truly yours Wilkie Collins

---

1. Alexander Gray (1819–1910): WC’s cousin, the son of his mother’s sister Catherine (1796–1882) and John Westcott Gray (1786–1878). Alexander was born in Bath, grew up in Salisbury and left England in the early 1850s for Australia, finally settling in California (Whitton, pp. 14–15).
2. WC writes the new address and deletes the printed address with four vertical lines.
3. The Legacy of Cain was serialised in 21 weekly parts in a number of provincial newspapers ending on or around 7 July (Law, p. 239)
4. Whit Monday was five days earlier on 21 May.
5. Letters at the time indicate that Collins reported the great fatigue of travel but in fact did not journey direct from New York to Chicago but went via Buffalo and Sandusky, Ohio. He arrived in Chicago in time to read on 16 January 1874, leaving on Monday, 19 January and travelling slowly back to New York.
6. Alexander’s younger sister Marion (1825–1900).

[2844] TO HARRY QUILTER, 29 MAY 1888

MS: Huntington (HM 32315). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 315.

82. Wimpole Street | W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE, W.~~
29th May 1888

Dear Quilter,

What I can do will be sent to you I hope on Saturday next. It will be a short article<sup>1</sup> – for I am “physically incapable” (as the doctors say) of writing a long one. And whether it will be fit for the Review or the waste paper basket I won't venture to say. Never was anything so damnably unlucky as your wanting me just at the time when work has worn me out. However, I try to be amusing and egotistical. Completely wanting in dignity comes by nature.

A nice contribution!

Ever yours | WC

I will send the copy to 7. Savile Row.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. 'Reminiscences of a Story-teller' for the Universal Review.

2. The address of the Scientific Club, of which Quilter was presumably a member.

[2845] TO W. F. TILLOTSON, 30 MAY 1888

MS: Bolton (ZBEN/4/6/26). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 315–316.

82. Wimpole Street, London | W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

30th May 1888

Dear Mr Tillotson,

Let me thank you for your friendly letter.<sup>1</sup> "The Legacy of Cain" has not been an easy story to write – and the troubles of moving have laid a little additional weight on the strain of it. But I have born the fatigue better than I had ventured to anticipate. The new house has I think helped me. Wimpole Street is a haven of rest compared with Gloucester Place. There is no mews at the back of this house – in other words no organs, no crashing carriage-wheels, no noisy children, no hideous Salvation Army celebrations, nothing in short but the silent storehouses of the tradesmen in Wigmore Street. My irritable nerves consider themselves to be in The Garden of Eden.

I enclose the receipt for the third £250 with thanks – and I will not forget what you kindly tell me relating to the last £250.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

The Revise of weekly part 21 corrected for proof goes to the firm by today's [sic] post.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. See [2846] to A. P. Watt of the same date.

2. Tillotson paid £1,000 in four instalments for the serial rights of The Legacy of Cain (see Bodleian MS. Eng. Misc., f. 395/ 1). The £250 was credited to WC's bank account simply as 'Recd' on 31 May (Coutts: WC).

3. The final weekly part of The Legacy of Cain.

[2846] TO A. P. WATT, 30 MAY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 316.

82. Wimpole Street. W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

30th May 1888

My dear Watt,

This day is marked with white chalk. I have just corrected for Proof the last weekly part of "The Legacy of Cain" – and last night I received the third £250...- with a friendly letter of congratulation from Mr Tillotson. My cheque for your commission enclosed (£25...- ) will I hope reach you safely.<sup>1</sup>

But I am not yet your enviably idle friend. A little article for Mr Quilter's new review (the 2nd number) is in course of manufacture on my desk.<sup>2</sup> After failing him for his first number, and after his generous notice of my books in the Contemporary Review,<sup>3</sup> I must spur the jaded horse – and the horse doesn't like it.

When will you come and drink a drappie<sup>4</sup> to the luck of the new story? Tell me your day so that I may not miss you through performing an act of virtue – I mean a constitutional walk.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. The payment of £250 was credited to WC's bank account on 31 May as 'Reed', with the corresponding cheque to 'A P Watt' for his commission of £25 debited on 1 June (Coutts: WC).
  2. 'Reminiscences of a Story-teller'.
  3. 'A Living Story-teller'.
  4. A little drop (of whisky or similar), Scots, perhaps recalling the chorus from 'Willie brewed a peck o' maut' (1789) by Robert Burns: 'We are na fou, we're nae that fou, | But just a drappie in our ee'.

[2855] TO MARY ANDERSON, 31 MAY 1888

MS: Navarro. Extract: Anderson, p. 147;<sup>1</sup> BGLL, IV, p. 321 (misdated 12 June 1888). Published: A&C9, p. 27.

82. Wimpole Street. W.

31st May 1888

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

Dear Mary Anderson,

I am so completely "out of the world" that I only knew you were still at South Hampstead when Willie Winter told me the good news.<sup>2</sup> My weak heart has taken a turn in the right direction – I am much better, and I shall be delighted to dine with you as you kindly propose on Sunday next at 7.30.<sup>3</sup>

Since I last wrote, my lease at Gloucester Place has expired – and my landlord, the enormously rich Lord Portman, asked such exorbitant terms for allowing me to continue to be his tenant that I confronted the horrors of moving in my old age – and here I am in another house (82. Wimpole Street) and in a much quieter place of abode.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Anderson introduces her short extract from this letter with, 'Not long before his death he was compelled to leave his house in Portman Square, where he had lived for years. On this event he says:'
  2. Anderson's London postal address from the late 1880s was 'Mount Waltham, Netherhall Gardens, South Hampstead, N.W.'.
  3. WC writes on a Thursday, so Sunday 3 June.

[2847] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 31 MAY 1888<sup>1</sup>

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/37). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 317.

82. Wimpole Street

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

31st May

My dear Sebastian,

Only a word to say that Saturday next at 8 will do delightfully well. Of your amazing news about yourself, I will only say – "Hooray!" – and wait for particulars.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours WC

-
1. Dating from the cancellation of the printed address.
  2. Presumably the news that Schlesinger will be resident in London.

[2848] TO A. P. WATT, 31 MAY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 317.

82. Wimpole Street. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
31st May 1888

My dear Watt

I shall be delighted to dine with you at your Club on June 18th at 7 o’Clock as you kindly propose.<sup>1</sup>

Last night, I posted a letter to you (at the office) announcing the completion of “The Legacy of Cain” and enclosing a cheque for commission on the third payment. You will find it I hope on your return. May you have a “high old time” in Paris!<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Probably the National Liberal Club, Trafalgar Square; see [2908] to Watt of 17 December 1888.
  2. The purpose of Watt’s French trip is uncertain. Watt’s son A. S. Watt had replied to [2846] of 30 May to the effect that his father was out of town. Presumably this letter was sent to Watt’s residence in Alexandra Road. Watt himself responded to both letters on his return from Paris on 6 June (Berg).

[2849] TO HARRY QUILTER, 2 JUNE 1888

MS: Huntington (HM 32316). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 318.

Saturday June 2
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~<sup>4</sup>

Dear Quilter,

I will try – but pray don’t count on it – I have got that cursed pain in my chest again – but I will try, and you shall hear by telegram if I fail. If I succeed the copy shall speak for itself.<sup>2</sup> Very glad to hear that you are content.

Ever yours | WC

-
1. WC cancels the old address but does not write in the new one.
  2. ‘Reminiscences of a Story-teller’ must have been still incomplete. The date of publication was officially on 15 June.

[2850] TO HARRY QUILTER, 2 JUNE 1888

MS: Huntington (HM 32317). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 318.

Saturday morning | June 2

My dear Quilter,

The copy has gone to you by registered letter post this morning. I am too completely exhausted to be able to find a title – and must ask you to help me.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours [excision]

-
1. The title ‘Reminiscences of a Story-teller’ was then presumably created by Quilter.

[2851] TO HALL CAINE, 6 JUNE 1888

MS: Manx (9542 GMFD 76), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 318–319.

82. Wimpole Street. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
6 June 1888

Dear Hall Caine

I was indeed sorry to have missed you when you kindly called here. I was driven out by the Doctor. The strain of my work, this time, still makes itself felt after the work is done – and the remedies are air and (moderate) exercise. To be followed by the sea, I suppose, when I can stand the infernal noise and vibration of railway travelling.

I am afraid, after what you said when we last met that you may be leaving, or may have left, home. But if there is still some delay, and if you have occasion to come to London again – why not come between 1 and 2 at luncheon time, and take your lunch here? Or if you have an engagement I am [right] at your service at any time before 1, that may be convenient. Or – 3rd suggestion – tell me by telegram when to expect you at any time in the afternoon (after 2) and I will take care to be at home. I want very much to know if the reception of your play has satisfied you.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to 'Hall Caine Esqr | Aberleigh Lodge | Bexley Heath | Kent', postmarked on the following day.

2. Ben-my-Chree, dramatization of The Deemster, which had opened at the Princess's Theatre on 17 May – see [2896] to Caine of 25 October 1888.

[3071] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 8 JUNE 1888

MS: Parrish (5/11/AM18505).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C3, p. 59.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 8th June 1888

---

1. On an oblong card with rounded corners – presumably a simple autograph.

[3270] TO MARY ANDERSON, 9 JUNE 1888

MS: Navarro. Published: A&C9, p. 27–28.

82, Wimpole Street. W.

9 June 1888

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

Dear Mary Anderson,

If your letter was not so entirely kind, I might have been almost sorry to receive it. A more delightful evening I never remember than my evening at Mount Waltham.<sup>1</sup> Your friends are charming (as all your friends ought to be) – and my one regret was that I was obliged to go away at too early an hour.

For the last three days the heavy London air has reminded me that I have nerves – and the doctor insists on my going away at once to the sea. There is nothing the matter with me but “fidgets” – do you know what they are? I hope not! – and starting at chance noises. A week or two of sailing will set that right, and I shall not fail to report myself when I come back. I want to see you and your delightful house on a fine summer's day.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Anderson lived for several years at Mount Waltham, Netherhall Gardens, in South Hampstead. Her marriage to Antonio Fernando de Navarro on 17 June 1890 took place at a Roman Catholic chapel nearby.

[2852] TO BENJAMIN BRYAN,<sup>1</sup> 9 JUNE 1888

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 319.

82 Wimpole Street. W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

9 June 1888

Dear Sir,

I beg that the Committee will accept my thanks for the invitation with which they have honoured me, and will be so good as to also accept my excuses.

The present state of my health does not permit me to attend public meetings – and I am about to leave London for the purer air of the sea.

I am, dear Sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Benja<sup>n</sup> Bryan Eq | Secr<sup>y</sup> Victoria Society

---

1. From about 1883 Benjamin Bryan was the secretary of the Society for the Protection of Animals Liable to Vivisection (founded by Frances Power Cobbe in 1875), and editor of its periodical the Zoophilist. It was popularly known as the Victoria Street Society.

[2853] TO MIRIAM F. LESLIE,<sup>1</sup> 9 JUNE 1888

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 319–320.

82. Wimpole Street. W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

9 June 1888

Dear Mrs Frank Leslie

I hope you have kindly attributed my otherwise inexcusable absence and silence to the right cause – illness. Work, and the worries of moving, have been together too much for my nerves. When the letter with which you have honoured me arrived here, I had been sent away from London by the doctor, and had been warned not to let my correspondence follow me. A few days since, I returned feeling better, and hoping to make my excuses personally. The air of London has thrown me back – the doctor is in the house again – and I must return to the sea for another week at least.

Is there any hope of your making a longer stay in England this time? And, if there is, does my disappointment give me some excuse for asking to hear of it? In any case, believe me

Always truly Yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Miriam F. Leslie (1836–1914), American widow of the engraver and publisher ‘Frank Leslie’ (born Henry Carter; 1821–80).

[2854] TO [FRANCIS] BENNOCH,<sup>1</sup> 12 JUNE 1888

MS: Huntington (BE 2). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 320.

82. Wimpole Street. W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

12th June 1888

Dear Mr Bennoch,

I have just returned from the country (9 p.m.) and found your friendly letter waiting for me.

My lease expired at Gloucester Place in February last – and the enormously rich Lord Portman (my landlord) asked such exorbitant terms (through his agent of course!) for permitting me to renew the lease that I had no alternative but to confront the miseries of moving. At the same time, literary engagements compelled me to write in the midst of every imaginable interruption, with the printers waiting for me week after week. The result has been utter fatigue (called “nervous exhaustion”) and the necessity of getting away from London, to rest in purer air. I am only here on business, and must go away again tomorrow or next day. Under these unlucky circumstances, I know I may trust to your kindness to accept my excuses as well as my thanks. When I get back again in better health, I shall hope to call in Tavistock Square,<sup>2</sup> and make my apologies personally. In the meantime believe me

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Probably Francis Bennoch (1812–90), author of Poems, Lyrics, Songs and Sonnets (London: Hardwicke & Bogue, 1877), many of whose papers are found at Huntington.
2. We have not been able to connect Bennoch to Tavistock Square.

[2856] TO A. P. WATT, 12 JUNE 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 321.

82. Wimpole Street
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
12th June 1888

My dear Watt,

Your welcome and generous present of Dr Macdonald's books has just arrived quite safely.<sup>1</sup> Let me sincerely thank you for pleasant evenings now sure to come.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Revd George MacDonald (1824–1905: ODNB), poet and novelist, a friend and early client of Watt's. As WC's following letter to Watt shows, one of the books was the novel The Marquis of Lossie, first published in 1877. Five works by MacDonald, including The Marquis of Lossie, were in WC's library at his death (Baker 2002, pp. 130–131).

[2857] TO HENRY POWELL BARTLEY, 13 JUNE 1888

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 321–322.

82. Wimpole Street. W
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
13th June 1888

My dear Harry,

I have just signed a cheque for the amount of dilapidations at Gloucester Place.<sup>1</sup> If Mr Jenkinson will kindly let me repay the loan (by cheque of course) during the second week in July next, he will make me and my balance at my bankers easier.<sup>2</sup>

Affectionately yours | Wilkie Collins

Henry Powell Bartley Esqr

---

1. Probably the £200 debited from WC's account to 'H P Bartley' on 14 June (Coutts: WC).
2. W. Jenkinson lent WC £200 on 17 November 1885. Interest was paid annually to Jenkinson – £9-13s-4d on 18 November 1886 and £9-14s on 3 December 1887, while the loan itself was repaid with the final £8 interest on 13 July 1888 (Coutts: WC). The rate of interest was thus about 4.83% – perhaps 11½d in the pound.

[3072] TO THE REV. GEORGE BAINTON,<sup>1</sup> 13 JUNE 1888

MS: HSP (Gratz Collection 10/28). Published: A&C3, pp. 59–60.

82. Wimpole Street | London, W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
13th June 1888

Dear Mr Bainton,

I am about to trespass on your kindness for a little information of which I stand in need, under these circumstances.

My new novel, called "The Legacy of Cain" is published serially in weekly newspapers here, in the Colonies, and in the United States.<sup>2</sup>

One of the characters is a Minister of the Wesleyan Methodist "persuasion."<sup>3</sup> He is a married man, whose wife has borne him no children, during the first seven years of their married life. He adopts an infant, from merciful and Christian motives, who is the daughter of a woman, hanged for the murder of her husband.

If the helpless orphan is to be happy in after-life, the infamy of her parentage, by the mother's side, must be strictly concealed. She must be taken for his child. He is within two days of being transferred to a new "circuit", in a distant place, when he adopts the child, and his wife willingly assists in helping the pious fraud. All the necessary precautions are taken – no suspicions are excited among the new congregation – and the child's future is so far safe.

There is the situation in the serial story.

But one of my readers, a lay member of the Wesleyans and a "circuit steward", writes to tell me that a Wesleyan Minister must attend the "district meeting" – must give in on a paper schedule the names of his children, the place of their birth &c, &c, – and receives from the "circuit steward" six guineas annually for each of his children. This curious domestic inquisition would make it simply impossible for the Minister in my story to keep the adoption of the child, and the parentage of the child, a secret without being guilty of conduct quite unworthy of his position and his character.

I see no way out of this difficulty, but to alter the religious denomination to which my "Minister" belongs, before the story is republished in book-form.

You will now anticipate the inquiry which follows: Is there any such rule, as the Wesleyan rule, in the Nonconformist church system? or ought I to call it the Congregational church system? or the Independent church system?<sup>4</sup> Pray forgive, and enlighten, my ignorance.

If a Minister, in your position, is not obliged to supply a list of his children to the constituted authorities, and is left to bring them up on his own sole responsibility, then another question follows: Under which circumstances can a Nonconformist minister leave the town in which he performs his clerical duties, and remove to another place and minister to a new congregation?

I ought perhaps to add that the Minister in the novel is supposed to have married a lady with a fortune of her own. Also that her state of health might make it necessary for him to take her to the seaside for change of air after he had left the scene of his duties, and before he removed to a new sphere of action. This latter event is not necessary to the conduct of the story, unless it might be required in the interests of probability.

Pray excuse this long letter – and, if I am giving you any trouble, and ignorantly making an undue demand on your time, do more than forgive me – take no notice of me, and you will be appreciated and understood by

Yours very truly | Wilkie Collins

The Revd George Bainton

---

1. See [2751] to him of 23 September 1887.

2. The Legacy of Cain was syndicated by Tillotson both in Britain and overseas, but neither the colonial nor American venues have been traced.

3. Reverend Abel Gracedieu.

4. Gracedieu becomes a Congregational Minister in the book edition.

[2858] TO THE REV. GEORGE BAINTON, 15 JUNE 1888

MS: Illinois. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 322.

82. Wimpole Street. | London. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
15th June 1888

Dear Mr Bainton,

Let me most sincerely thank you for invaluable help to me in my little literary difficulty, rendered so readily and so kindly that it is doubly welcome. All that I wanted to set my book right, I have now got. My minister will be a Congregationalist minister when the story is republished in volumes<sup>1</sup> – later in the year, for literary reasons.

Let me also say that I have read the “Lecture” with admiration of the truly Christian Spirit in which it is written. When you say “the Church consists of those who love Christ, and who love each other,” you set the great principle of religious liberty on the right foundation.<sup>2</sup>

With renewed thanks, | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to the Reverend Abel Gracedieu in The Legacy of Cain; in the serial version syndicated by Tillotson’s, he was throughout described as a Wesleyan Methodist. WC presumably wrote to Bainton asking for help in this matter.

2. Bainton’s lecture has not been traced.

[2859] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 15 JUNE 1888

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/39). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 323.

82. Wimpole Street. W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

15th June 1888

My dear Sebastian,

Next Sunday I am entirely at your service, and I will call on you at St James’s Chambers at 7.30,<sup>1</sup> as you kindly propose.

Ever yours WC

---

1. Schlesinger’s temporary residence in London – see the address on the envelopes with WC’s letters to him from [2877] of 27 July to [2886] of 10 September 1888.

[2860] TO A. P. WATT, 15 JUNE 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 323.

82. Wimpole St

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

15th June 1888

My dear Watt,

I have made a discovery about that picture of my father’s lately sold – thanks to your kind letter. In the List of his works under the date of 1835 you will find a picture thus described: “Welsh Peasants crossing the Sands to market.” Purchaser: “R Colls Esq.” Price: “115gs.” This picture was afterwards called “Barmouth Sands”, when it was sold by auction some years since – and it has been now, as I don’t doubt, sold again.<sup>1</sup>

The other “Barmouth Sands” sold in 1843 I believe I remember. It was only a sketch.

Ever yours | WC

I have read “The Marquis of Lossie” with great interest. Some admirable scenes in it, and strongly-drawn characters. He is so good, as a novelist, that I wish he made fewer appearances as a preacher, in the pages of a work of fiction.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Watt’s letter about WmC’s picture is not found in the relevant letter-book at the Berg. Watt was reporting the sale of ‘Barmouth Sands’ at Christie’s on 2 June 1888 for £1,050. The original picture, correctly described by WC, was renamed ‘Barmouth Sands’ and then sold by Christie & Manson in May 1879 for £1,700. It is now owned by the Guildhall Art Gallery in London. The second version of ‘Barmouth Sands’ referred to was painted in 1843 for a Mr Hogarth, who paid just £35. It is very unlikely it was this picture that had fetched £1,050, since the prices fetched by WmC’s pictures declined towards the end of the century.

2. The novel by George MacDonald – see [2856] to Watt of 12 June 1888.

[2861] TO EDWIN ASHWORTH,<sup>1</sup> 16 JUNE 1888

82. Wimpole Street | London. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
16th June 1888

Dear Sir,

The memoir of my life in “Men of the Time” has been corrected by me, and may be depended on for facts and dates.<sup>2</sup> The “Lives” which have appeared in various periodicals are founded on this authority for the most part – with the critical opinions of the writer added. I have been moving into a new house – and (my papers not being yet arranged) I am unable to refer you to the dates of any of these publications.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. are the publishers of
No Name | Armadale | and | After Dark

=

The whole of my works, with these three exceptions, are published by | Messrs. Chatto & Windus.

=

I am, dear Sir, | Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins
Edwin Ashworth Esqre

-
1. Unidentified, but perhaps simply an autograph hunter. Internet searches reveal similar letters to a man of this name from other writers (e.g. Walter Crane of 16 December 1894, or Tom Gallon of 2 July 1903).
  2. Attached to the letter at Texas is a proof slip of the entry for WC from Men of the Time: A Dictionary of Contemporaries, ed. Thomas Humphry Ward, 12th edn (London: Routledge, 1887).

[2862] TO HALL CAINE, 22 JUNE 1888

MS: Manx (9542 GMFD 71), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 324–326.

82. Wimpole Street | London. W. | 22nd June 1888

Dear Hall Caine

I have read the article in the “World” – thanks to your kindness in sending me the paper – and it seems to me to be very well done, and pitched in the right tone in all its allusions to you. Of the friendly motive which has associated me with you, I will only say that it adds to my reasons for specially remembering the lucky day (for me) when I became personally acquainted with you. Whether I deserve what is said about me is quite another thing – but I can try to deserve it.<sup>2</sup>

I ought to have thanked you for your pleasant proposal – or better still I ought to have said “thank you”, personally at Aberleigh Lodge. But I have been caught in a trap set by my own ignorance. One of the characters in the story which Tillotson is publishing serially is a Methodist Parson (favourably presented). Among the correspondents who send us their opinions by post, a Methodist, in an official position, informs me that I am entirely wrong in respect to certain rules and regulations of Methodism, and that my parson’s proceedings, as they now appear, are simply impossible. A second dissenting (clerical) reader, attached to another “persuasion” is very kindly helping me to set this right, before the publication in book-form<sup>3</sup> – and the result is that I am obliged to read every word of my novel over again, and insert corrections, and cut out allusions to Methodism, and so on. The doctor insists on my going to Ramsgate to get some sailing – you tempt me to come and see you – and here I am with my nose to the proverbial grindstone, obliged to plead for delay.

Is there not some chance of your being in London, (while I am tinkering my unlucky story) before you become St John in the wilderness?<sup>4</sup> I can answer for desolate Orkney – a wilderness without even the compensation of locusts and wild honey.<sup>5</sup> It would be the act of a good Samaritan if you would come here and interrupt me – and more merciful still if you decided to take your luncheon here before you go back, and telegraphed [your] day and hour.

I must return to my Methodist parson. He is particularly disagreeable to me, I find, in this hot weather.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Initialled and directed to 'Hall Caine Esqr | Aberleigh Lodge | Bexley Heath | Kent', postmarked as dated.
2. See 'Celebrities at Home. No. DLXII. Mr. Hall Caine at Aberleigh Lodge', in Edmund Yates's society paper the World, 20 June 1888, p. 6. In the middle of the second paragraph the interviewer learns that senior novelists:

... try to outvie one another in the heartiness of their welcome to a newcomer. Mr. Wilkie Collins, for instance – and your host's face glows with pride as he speaks of the veteran – has been to him far more than a literary sponsor: has discussed his plots, criticised the points of Ben-my-Chree one by one, coached and praised, and warned and exhorted him; and as Mr. Caine tells you all this he does not fail to remind you that Collins was the friend of Dickens and Thackeray and Victor Hugo, the correspondent of Dumas, and one who chose his own line in fiction and stands facile princeps in it. In constructing the play great deference was shown to the judgement of Mr. Wilkie Collins, who thinks it marvellous that no preceding playwright had thought of utilising on the boards the Oath of Purgation.

There then follows a slightly garbled quotation ('More breaks in your splendid clouded sky will be a truer picture of Nature, and will certainly increase the number of your admiring readers') from [2822] to Caine of 15 March 1888. The article concludes: 'As soon as possible he [Caine] hopes to get away from the distraction of visitors to some quiet spot – Sark or Orkney, he is not sure which – there to work out a plot with which his mind is in labour, and about which he has had many conversations with his mentor, Mr. Wilkie Collins'.

3. The Rev. George Bainton; see [2858] to him of 15 June 1888.
4. Caine and his wife were planning a visit to the northern Scottish islands and Iceland.
5. Collins had visited Orkney with WmC in 1842.

[2863] TO JAMES STANLEY LITTLE,<sup>1</sup> 25 JUNE 1888

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 326.

82. Wimpole Street. W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

25th June 1888

Dear Sir,

I accept with pleasure the proposal with which the committee have honoured me – that I should be one of the Stewards on the occasion of the forthcoming public dinner to Mr Russell Lowell.<sup>2</sup>

I am, Dear sir, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

I have recently changed my place of residence. Will you give directions kindly to have my address changed to | 82. Wimpole Street. | W.

Jas Stanley Little Esqr

---

1. James Stanley Little, executive secretary of the Society of Authors (1887–78).

2. This was a 'dinner for American authors in recognition of their efforts to induce the US Government to pass an International Copyright Act. The dinner duly took place at the Criterion restaurant on 25 July 1888' (Bonham-Carter, p. 142; see also [2876] and [2880] to A. P. Watt, 25 and 30 July 1888.) WC was seated on the top table next to Frances Hodgson Burnett. James Russell Lowell (1819–91), recently appointed American Ambassador in London, was an American poet and essayist, editor of the Atlantic Monthly from 1857 and the North American Review from 1864. For a full account of the dinner, see Andrew Gasson and Paul Lewis, Wilkie Collins and the Dinner at the Society of Authors, 25 July 1888, Wilkie Collins Society, London, March 2007.

[2864] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 27 JUNE 1888

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 327.

82. Wimpole Street | London | 27th June 1888

My dear Sir,

I am only today able to acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter and to assure you that

I contribute with pleasure to your daughter's collection of autographs.
Believe me | V<sup>ery</sup> truly yours | Wilkie Collins

[2865] TO A. P. WATT, 29 JUNE 1888

MS: Pembroke, in pencil. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 327.

82, Wimpole Street. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
June 29th 1888

My dear Watt,

I am so charmed with my pretty little pencil that I set ink at defiance, and thank you for my welcome present with the present itself.

If Monday next will suit you at the usual time, I shall be delighted to see you. On Tuesday – if the weather is fine, I am going to the Crystal Palace. On Wednesday, I am entirely at your service, if Monday should not be convenient. In short, any day but Tuesday will do for me. The sooner you can come the more welcome you will be. If you have time for lunch, remember that lunch is here.<sup>1</sup>

Since that delightful dinner, I have been in wonderful health for me.<sup>2</sup> My doctor came the next day to look after me – and discovered a model of “manly vigour”!

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written to WC on 27 June asking to see him about ‘a new story in the wind’ (Berg). He replied on 30 June to say that he would come on the Monday at two o’clock.

2. The dinner at Watt’s club on 18 June to which WC accepts an invitation in [2848] of 31 May 1888. Perhaps the pencil was presented on that occasion, as there is no reference to it in the relevant Watt letter-book in the Berg Collection.

[2866] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 30 JUNE 1888

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 328.

82. Wimpole Street. W. | Saturday evening
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
June 30th 1888

My dear Holman,

I have returned from an absence in the country for a few days – and I ought to be, and am, ashamed of myself for not having told you my new address. The miseries of moving, and, added to them, the strain of having to write against time, are my only excuses.

I shall be away in the early part of next week – but I shall be indeed glad to become personally acquainted with Mr Theodore Watts if Thursday next or Friday next will suit you both<sup>1</sup> – say in the afternoon about five o’clock. In the morning, I have work to do – and in the evening proofs to look over. But pray do come, and bring Mr Watts with you, on one or other of the afternoons that I have suggested – and let me have one line (literally one) to say whether it shall be Thursday or Friday.

Yours always affly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Theodore Watts-Dunton (1832–1914: ODNB), literary critic. WC writes on Saturday, so is proposing 5 or 6 July. Perhaps Hunt preferred the Friday – see [2868] to Quilter, 5 July 1888.

[3146] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 2 JULY 1888

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (ended 3 February 2009, #370151307046). Published: A&C5, p. 18.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 2nd July 1888

---

1. Apparently to an autograph hunter.

[2867] TO HARRY QUILTER, 3 JULY 1888

MS: Huntington (HM 32318). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 328.

82. Wimpole Street | W.
3rd July 1888

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

Dear Quilter,

I have just got back again – after a few hours in the country. Can you, by any lucky chance, come tomorrow (Wednesday) between 4 and 5? I only suggest the time because I am obliged to go out at 6 o’Clock. Don’t trouble to write again, if you are able to come, luckily for me, on this short notice.

Ever yours | WC

[2868] TO HARRY QUILTER, 5 JULY 1888

MS: Huntington (HM 32319). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 329.

82. Wimpole Street W.
5th July 1888

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

Dear Quilter,

Did you get my letter, asking if you could come here for some tea and talk on Wednesday afternoon last? I directed to Warwick Lane.<sup>1</sup> The charming damp weather has not made your cold worse, I hope. Will you try again and pick your own afternoon next week? Tomorrow and Saturday, I am not free. Let me hear from you somehow.

Oh, that article by Mr Haweis! Oh, dont let him write in that sort of English again! My stomach has not recovered it yet.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The offices of Quilter’s Universal Review were at 24 Warwick Lane, near St Paul’s Cathedral.

2. ‘The Parson, The Play, and the Ballet: A Tract for the Times’ by Rev. Hugh Reginald Haweis (1838–1901: ODNB), in the Universal Review (June 1888), pp. 248– 64.

[2869] TO S. S. McCLURE,<sup>1</sup> 7 JULY 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 329.

82. Wimpole Street | London. W. | 7 July 1888

Dear Sir,

I well remember that you favoured me by calling here, and that we spoke of certain short papers which I might write for you when the state of my health and the claims of previous engagements permitted of it.<sup>2</sup> But I have no recollection of any discussion between us, relating to pecuniary terms. As your cheque for ten pounds has been sent to me under a misapprehension, I beg to return it herewith – cancelled in case of accidents by post.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | I ought perhaps to have added that all pecuniary arrangements are referred to me by my literary representative, Mr A. P. Watt of 2 Paternoster Square<sup>3</sup>
Mr S.S. McClure

-
1. Samuel Sidney McClure (1857–1949), publisher and founder of the first American newspaper syndicate.
  2. Perhaps in March 1887, when McClure came to Britain and visited W. F. Tillotson in Bolton (Johanningsmeier, p. 53).
  3. The postscript is written at the foot of the third blank page.

[2870] TO A. P. WATT, 10 JULY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 330.

82. Wimpole Street. W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
10th July 1888

My dear Watt,

Let me thank you for a cheque for £301..5.- in payment of Tillotson's last instalment of the purchase money for the serial right of "The Legacy of Cain" – less your commission – and of the purchase money for the right of German translation of the novel<sup>1</sup> – and let me add how sincerely sensible I am of the kindness which has considered me in this matter, as on every other matter.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

I think I have got a shorter and a more familiar title for the Dicks Story:

The Lord Harry.

This relates to the current saying "By the Lord Harry" – and is also appropriate as being the name of the chief male character in the book. What do you think?<sup>2</sup>

A.P. Watt Esq.

-
1. Watt's letter to WC of the same date enclosing the cheque explains this otherwise unaccountable sum (Berg). Tillotson's paid a total of £330 – £250 as the fourth instalment of the purchase money for the serial right of The Legacy of Cain, plus £80 for the German translation rights. Watt did not claim his 10% commission on the payment for translation rights, but deducted £3-10s for bank charges incurred in discounting Tillotson's promissory note, and 5s outstanding for the copyright registration of 'The First Officer's Confession'. Thus the total deductions came to £28-15s. The net sum of £301-5s was thus credited to WC's bank account as 'pr. Lr' on 11 July (Coutts: WC).
  2. As [2874] to Watt of 18 July makes clear, the earlier, longer title must have been 'His Money? or His Life?'

[2871] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 12 JULY 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 330–331.

82. Wimpole Street W.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
12 July 1888

My dear Chatto,

General Mitchell (of 92. Elgin Avenue Maida Vale) has written a little book called, "Strange Stories of the Service", containing some curious (and true) specimens of the manner in which minor military affairs are carried on at the war office – told mostly in the form of anecdotes. He writes in military periodicals and is the author of the article on "Fortifications of England" in the Universal Review for June last.

Will you oblige me by letting the General call on you with his manuscript at any time most convenient to yourself – and by sending him a line (to 92 Elgin Avenue) to appoint your own day and hour? I ought to add that he will undertake to supply some illustrations to his work.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. General Charles Mitchell, whose Strange Stories of the Service, or, The Crown and the War Office. By General Touch-'Em-Up. Illustrated by C. M. was eventually published by Remington in 1895. Given the reference to the Universal Review, Mitchell may have been introduced to WC by Harry Quilter.

[2872] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 12 JULY 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Extract: Baker 2001, pp. 511–512. Published: B&C, II, pp. 559–560.

82. Wimpole Street | London. W. | 12 July 1888

My dear Collaborateur,

Please notice the above address. I feel penitently that I ought to have written to you weeks since – and there is my excuse!

After 20 years residence in Gloucester Place, I have been driven into encountering the horrors of moving by the expiration of my lease, and by the exorbitant terms asked me for renewing it by the agent of my landlord, an enormously rich nobleman named Lord Portman. He asked me to pay, for the right of continuing to live in the house no less a sum than twelve hundred pounds – to say nothing of other merciless stipulations. In our choice English phrase I determined to “see him damned first” – and here I am in a much quieter situation and in a much nicer house, beginning domestic life again at the age of 64 (alas!). Let me add that the dire necessity of moving presented itself while I was publishing a new serial story in /weekly/ newspapers in Great Britain, Australia, Canada and the United States, and that I had to supply this large public with their weekly allowance of fiction all through the confusions and interruptions and hammerings of workmen incident to shifting from one house to the other. How it is that I am not in a lunatic asylum I don’t understand. The excitement and worry have, however, taken another form – they have set my invention boiling. My head is so full of a new story and new characters that I have got what Balzac used to call “a congestion of ideas,” and am actually obliged to relieve myself by beginning another book. There is my autobiography presented to my dear and good friend.

There is a sympathy in our destinies as well as in our sentiments. You too have suffered the peine forte et dure of moving, [del] and you too have been working against obstacles – I am sure to good purpose. The prospect of reading your “Dickens” is something that I look forward to with delight.<sup>1</sup> The little that I have read of what is new in contemporary literature here is not encouraging to my tastes. I want to be interested – and I wait for you. I shall follow you in December with the first publication in book-form, of the serial novel to which I have alluded already, “The Legacy of Cain.” The first serial issue ended on the 7th of this month. But there is to be a second serial issue – and so the book publication must be deferred.

Pray take care of your health. The one part of your letter which I was sorry to read is the part of it which alludes to your illness. Here, we have had cold weather of which there has been no example for the past sixty years. It strings up my nerves, and keeps me well. But your lungs must be sensitive, after that attack – and distrust of the season (if your summer is like ours) will be the wisest of all distrusts until the warm weather comes.

always your affectionate friend | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to de Heussey’s L’Inimitable Boz (Paris: Quantin, 1889).

[2873] TO JOHN TURNER,<sup>1</sup> 13 JULY 1888

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), our copy text. Published: Coleman, p. 333; BGLL, IV, p. 331.

82, Wimpole Street, | London, W. | 13th July, 1888.

Dear Sir,

Two stories of mine have been published for the first time in “The Graphic”. One was the novel called “The Law and the Lady”,<sup>2</sup> and the other was a Christmas story called “Miss or Mrs?”<sup>3</sup>

A third work of mine called “My Lady’s Money” appeared in a Christmas number of “The Illustrated London News”.<sup>4</sup>

These stories were all published in this way some years since. I am not able to give you the exact dates. They are republished in book form and in cheap editions by Messrs Chatto and Windus.

I remain, Dear Sir, | Faithfully yours, | WILKIE COLLINS.

---

1. Unidentified.

2. Serialized in twenty-four parts from 26 September 1874 to 13 March 1875.

3. In the Christmas number, published on 13 December 1871.

4. In the Christmas number, published on 12 December 1877. WC’s final novel Blind Love was also to appear in the Illustrated London News from 6 July to 28 December 1889. Generally on fiction in the two illustrated papers, see VFRG, 29.

[3073] TO JAMES STANLEY LITTLE,<sup>1</sup> 18 JULY 1888

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>2</sup> Published: Lewis website; A&C3, p. 60.

82. Wimpole Street. W. | 19th July 1888

Dear Sir,

I beg to enclose a postal order for 10/6 for a ticket for the Dinner to American Men and Women of Letters on the 25th of this month.<sup>3</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Jas Stanley Little Esq Secy

---

1. Secretary of the Society of Authors – see [2863] to him of 25 June 1888.

2. Mounted and framed, alongside a print of the full-length photographic portrait of WC taken by Herbert Watkins in May 1861.

3. Of course no record of a debit of 10s-6d is found in WC’s bank account though £20 was taken out this day marked ‘House’ from which the Postal Order may have been purchased. WC attended the dinner – see his description of it in [2880] to Watt of 30 July 1888.

[2874] TO A. P. WATT, 18 JULY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 332.

82. Wimpole Street. W. | 18th July 1888

My dear Watt,

The first weekly part goes to you by tonight’s letter-post. It is, I suspect, longer than the appointed number of words – but being the first number, it must make its effect. You can honestly say that more of it is in the rough. Also – if Mr Dicks is alarmed at the Irish nature of the story, it may be well to say that “the Prologue is the only Irish part of it.”<sup>1</sup> The story runs on English ground, and sometimes goes abroad. I have added the first title thought as a sub-title, thus:

The Lord Harry: | His Money? Or His Life?

This will help me I think with the class of reader whom I am likely to address in the present case.<sup>2</sup>

The horrible thunderous weather is trying my nerves, and getting in the way of my work.

Ever yours WC

---

1. The Irish prologue to ‘The Lord Harry’ survives in Blind Love, the title under which it was eventually published. As a radical, Dicks might have been expected to be upset by the anti-nationalist slant of the story’s opening.

2. The agreement with Dicks left open the periodical in which the serial would be published, but the likeliest venues were Bow Bells and Reynolds’s News, both papers aimed principally at a proletarian readership.

[3230] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 19 JULY 1888

MS: Unknown. On sale: (2011).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C8, p. 22.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins | 19 July 1888

1. Although the details of the sale have been lost, the editors have an image of the item which is the typical format of a signature for a collector.

[2875] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 21 JULY 1888

MS: Houghton (Typ.805LN4.76.(B)).<sup>1</sup> Published: Noakes, p. 178; Sue Lonoff, ‘Sex, Sense, and Nonsense’ in Smith & Terry, p. 37;<sup>2</sup> BGLL, IV, pp. 332–333.

The Second Part of “Mr and Mrs Discobolos” was written by my old friend Edward Lear at my suggestion.<sup>3</sup> So far as I know, it has not been published<sup>4</sup>

Wilkie Collins

21 July 1888

1. Inscription in a copy of Edward Lear, Laughable Lyrics: A Fourth Book of Nonsense Poems, Songs, Bothan, Music, etc. (London: R. J. Bush, 1877). Lear wrote to James Fields on 15 October 1879: ‘Bye the bye, the only attempt at Nonsense I have lately made has been, – at the instigation of Wilkie Collins, – to conclude the History of Mr. and Mrs. Discobolos.’ (Edward Lear, Selected Letters, ed. Vivien Noakes (Oxford 1988), p. 253).

2. Lonoff (in Smith & Terry, p. 37), introduces the note with these words: ‘If in 1885 [sic for ‘1985’] you had been to the exhibit of Edward Lear’s work at the Royal Academy, you would have seen a copy of his Laughable Lyrics opened to reveal this inscription:’. A formatting error at the beginning of Lonoff’s essay increases the confusion by giving the impression that these words form part of WC’s inscription.

3. Lonoff discusses the friendship of WC and Lear, suggesting it may have begun when WC was only fourteen (p. 37). For the last few years of his life Lear had lived at San Remo and died there in January 1888. One letter from Lear to WC, directed from San Remo on 19 April 1885, is also found at Houghton (MS Eng 797). Another dated 7 March 1886, is found in Noakes, ed., Edward Lear, Selected Letters, p. 279.

4. As Lonoff notes (p. 49 n. 1), the second part of the poem appeared in the Quarterly Review (October 1888).

[2876] TO A. P. WATT, 25 JULY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 333.

82. Wimpole Street. | W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

25th July 1888

My dear Watt,

Your friendly kindness has completed my little collection of sticks with a really beautiful specimen. In colour form and lightness it is admirable and complete from the inscription at the top to the ferrule at the bottom. And it is useful as well as ornamental for it is of exactly the right length for me, and will associate my “walks abroad” with my good and true friend. Even this glorious day is brightened by your gift.

Ever yours WC

I wonder whether I shall meet you tonight at the Authors’ Society Dinner at the Criterion to the American writers in London? It won’t be like your dinner – worse luck!<sup>1</sup>

1. Collins was to serve as steward at the banquet held by the Society of Authors in honour of American authors in recognition of their efforts to put pressure on the US government to pass an act recognizing international copyright (see [2863] to Little of 25 June 1888). Here ‘your dinner’ refers to that at Watt’s club on 18 June to which WC accepts an invitation in [2848] of 31 May 1888. There is no record of any reply from Watt in the relevant letter-book, though he seems not to have attended the Authors’ Society Dinner – see [2880] to him of 30 July 1888.

[2877] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 27 JULY 1888

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/79), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 334.

82. Wimpole Street. W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

27 July 1888

My dear Sebastian,

I am indeed most sincerely glad to hear a more cheering account of yourself. Like me, you have an elastic nature. Troubles knock us down – but we get up again (like well-trained pugilists) fresher than ever.

On Sunday August 5th (Bristol Hotel 7.45) I shall be delighted to enjoy another of those delightful dinners.<sup>2</sup> The date exactly falls in with my plans – for afterwards (if all goes well) I must take my “morganatic” family to the seaside.<sup>3</sup>

Yours affectly WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Sebastian Schlesinger Esq | St James’s Chambers | Duke Street | S.W.’, postmarked as dated.

2. Possibly the Bristol Hotel, Burlington Gardens.

3. See [2885] to Schlesinger, 26 August 1888.

[2878] TO MRS MORRIS P. FLINT,<sup>1</sup> 30 JULY 1888

MS: Lewis Collection, damaged.<sup>2</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 334–335.

82. Wimpole Street | London. W. | 30 July 1888

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

Dear Madam,

I have been moving into a new house. Many things have been lost – letters among them – and I have found it a hard task to ke[ep] up with the deman[ds] of a large correspondence.

Unfortunately for me, you do not mention the subject of the unanswered letter to which you allude. I cannot say whether it ever reached me, or whether it has been lost, or whether it was laid aside to be answered at the first convenient time, and forgotten in the confusions and worries of moving from one house to another. The only letters from my readers which I deliberately lea[ve] without a reply are requests for autographs which are not accompanied by a stamped and directed envelope – and other requests which invite me to read manuscripts and find publishers for them. In every other case, I answer my letters – and I may say for myself that I am incapable of knowingly neglecting to thank a lady when she is so kind as to write to me.

If you think it worth while to let me know what the nature of your first letter was, the reply shall be sent to [yo]u by return of mail. In the meantime, I can only express my regret.

Believe me, dear Madam, | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Mrs Morris P. Flint

---

1. Unidentified fan.

2. The text in square brackets represents the conjectural restoration of characters which have been lost on account of a hole through both leaves of the folding notepaper.

[2879] TO [CARL] ROSA,<sup>1</sup> 30 JULY 1888

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie’s, New York, Doheny Collection (1 February 1988), lot 484; similar item in American Book Prices 1987–1988, p. 46, but dated ‘22 September [1869?]’. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 335.

Summary: To ‘my dear Rosa’ concerning a payment to the Slade Fund and other matters.

---

1. Probably Carl August Nicholas Rosa (1842–1889: ODNB), impresario, manager of the Carl Rosa Opera Company.

[2880] TO A. P. WATT, 30 JULY 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 335–336.

82. Wimpole Street. W. | 30th July 1888

My dear Watt,

So far as I know or can remember, every one of my books has been translated into German – except the book which I am now beginning.<sup>1</sup>

Between the weather, and the speeches (on the 25th) I have been getting on badly with my work. The Authors' Banquet had everything in its favour – a wonderfully good dinner, excellent champagne – permission to smoke – and (so far as my experience went) delightful guests. All spoilt by that damnable product of British stupidity and conceit – after-dinner speeches. The one pleasant exception was Russell Lowell's address – but he would have done better if he had talked a little less about himself, and had sat down a little sooner. As for the others, I will only say this. If I had ventured to take my lovely new stick with me (but I was afraid of losing it in the waiting-room), I should have sent a waiter for that weapon – should have gone behind each of the other speakers and have broken his head when he sat down again – and have appeared before the magistrates the next day with the greatest pleasure as a benefactor to my species.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. There is no record of Watt's original inquiry in the relevant letter-book.

2. For another account of the dinner, see Bonham-Carter, pp. 142–143. See also the Times, 26 July 1888, p. 6e, for a full version of Russell Lowell's address.

[2881] TO L. S. METCALF, 7 AUGUST 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 336.

82. Wimpole Street | London. W. | 7th August 1888

Dear Sir,

On the arrival today of the August number of The Forum,<sup>1</sup> permit me to repeat my excuses and the sincere expression of my thanks.

My only contribution to an English periodical, written since you first honoured me by expressing a wish that I should become one of your writers,<sup>2</sup> has been a little article for the ~~May~~ June number of my friend Mr Quilter's new "Universal Review". In this case, circumstances obliged me to write on the eve of publication, while the press was waiting for me – and it was simply impossible to send you a proof in advance, so as to secure simultaneous publication in The Forum.<sup>3</sup>

Since that time I have been obliged to begin another serial story – under the necessity of keeping ahead of the serial publication later in the present autumn. Through the serious interruption of a move into a new house (please note the address at the top of this letter) I am all in arrears – and leisure time is an incident in my life which is now unknown to me. If I trouble you with this long letter, pray attribute it to my wish to show you that I am not forgetful of your kindness, and believe me,

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Various issues of Metcalf's periodical were found in WC's library (Baker 2002, p. 110).

2. See [2750] to Metcalf of 14 September 1887.

3. See [2849] and [2850] to Harry Quilter both dated 2 June 1888.

[2882] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 7 AUGUST 1888

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 337.

82. Wimpole Street. W. | 7th August 1888

My dear Chatto,

Before I leave London,<sup>1</sup> I want to make some arrangement for the publication in three volume form, and in other forms as usual, of my last novel “The Legacy of Cain.”

The story is completely revised and corrected for book publication. The first serial issue in newspapers ended on the 7th of July last.<sup>2</sup>

But Mr Tillotson reserves the right of publishing a second serial issue in newspapers – and, under the terms of the agreement, the book publication cannot take place until Thursday, December 6th next.<sup>3</sup>

This is, I suppose, a good time for the novel – but it is a bad time for me. The expenses of my “move” have proved to be considerably larger than I had anticipated – and my balance at Coutts’s is diminishing. If we sign an agreement at once for the usual £500 – and if I deposit the book ready for publication with you – am I entirely “out of order” if I venture to propose a promissory note of yours for £250/ (say) at nine months, which my bankers would place to the credit of my account under discount. This would leave an interval of four months after the publication of the book before the note became due – and the payment of the second half of the purchase-money might be arranged so as to suit your convenience. Let me have one line to say what you think of this,<sup>4</sup> and believe me

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. WC was in Ramsgate by 26 August – see his letter to Sebastian Schlesinger of that date.

2. Most newspaper serializations of The Legacy of Cain traced ended on 7 July 1888, though in W. F. Tillotson’s own Bolton Weekly Journal the last instalment in fact appeared on 30 June 1888 – see Law, p. 239.

3. WC’s contract with Tillotson’s for The Legacy of Cain is now held at the Bodleian (MS. Eng. Misc., f. 395/1). The only ‘second serial issue’ traced of The Legacy of Cain is that in the daily Staffordshire Sentinel from 30 December 1889 – again see Law, p. 239.

4. Andrew Chatto must have responded immediately and positively to WC’s proposal. At Reading is found a receipt signed by WC on 7 August 1888, and stamped on 10 August, which itself constitutes the legal agreement concerning the publication of The Legacy of Cain. It specifies two promissory notes for £250, due on 11 February and 11 May 1889, as payment for a seven-year lease on the volume rights of the novel, with all other terms and conditions identical to those for The Evil Genius. The first payment seems to have been credited to WC’s bank account simply as ‘Recd’ on 6 March, while the second is probably the £250 credited on 31 May, also simply as ‘Recd’ (Coutts: WC).

[2883] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 8 AUGUST 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 338.

82. Wimpole Street W. | 8th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1888

My dear Chatto,

Here is the printed copy<sup>1</sup> for the republication in book form of
The Legacy of Cain
– now, thanks to your friendly kindness, your property.<sup>2</sup>

The numerous corrections will I hope sensibly diminish the printing expenses – besides improving the book.

Ever yours | WC

I have no copy of the corrections. Let me commend them to the safe keeping of the safe!

---

1. Presumably the printed instalments from one of the newspapers carrying the novel as a serial, perhaps Tillotson’s Bolton Weekly Journal.

2. See the note to [2882] to Chatto of the previous day.

[2884] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 9 AUGUST 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 338.

82. Wimpole Street W. | 9th Aug<sup>t</sup> 1888

Dear Sirs,

I am afraid I cannot accept your suggestion – and worse still, I must ask you to kindly send me proofs in triplicate. Two sets for the foreign translations – and the third set to be looked over by myself. Carefully as the printed copy has been corrected, I cannot be sure that I have not made any mistakes. The proofs will be at once returned for press.<sup>1</sup>

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins
Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. In acknowledging receipt of the copy of The Legacy of Cain on 8 August 1888 (Reading), Chatto & Windus had proposed printing the book edition of The Legacy of Cain from the corrected serial version without submitting proofs to the author.

[3231] TO MARION HALCOMBE TAYLOR, 11 AUGUST 1888

MS: Unknown. On sale: Owen & Barlow (2013).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C8, p. 22.

Marion Halcombe Taylor | 11th August 1888 | Wilkie Collins

---

1. An inscription inside a small Book of Common Prayer. The facing page is signed ‘Elizabeth R Taylor’. No trace of either person has been found.

[2885] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 26 AUGUST 1888

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/45), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 560.

26 August 1888

My dear Sebastian,

Wilkie Collins, of 82 Wimpole Street has disappeared from this mortal sphere of action, and is replaced by | William Dawson | 27. Wellington Crescent | Ramsgate

=

In plain English, I am here with my “morganatic family” – and must travel (like the Royal Personages) under an alias – or not be admitted into the respectable house now occupied by my children and their mother. So – if there is any more news from America – address W. Dawson Esq. for the next fortnight. I shall be, after that, in London again, so far as I now know.

My only excuse for not having written before this, or having “dropped in on you”, as they say, at your chambers, is my new novel.<sup>2</sup> It is a tough job this time. I have been nowhere and have seen nobody and am nothing better than the slave of my pen – the most agreeable slavery that I am acquainted with.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Directed to ‘Sebastian Schlesinger Esqr | St James’s Chambers | Duke Street | London. S.W.’, postmarked ‘RAMSGATE | C | AU26 | 88’, and initialled ‘WC’.

2. The serial novel then known as ‘The Lord Harry’, which eventually became Blind Love.

[3403] TO EDGAR F. GLADWIN,<sup>1</sup> 7 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Lewis Collection (L2962). Published: A&C14, pp. 26-27.

Ramsgate,<sup>2</sup> England.
7th September 1888

My dear Sir,

Let me first ask you to excuse this late reply to your kind letter. I have been away from my correspondents – in happy idleness – breathing the pure sea-air. This is my first opportunity of writing to you.

In the matter of International Copyright with America, the first thing to do is (what I am sure you do) to look the question honestly in the face.

The law of the United States recognises a right of property in the work of the literary man, so far as the interests of its own citizens are concerned – and deliberately denies that right, in the case of the literary men of all other countries. This (to speak with all due respect) is not worthy of a great nation – and the blame now rests with the national Congress. International Copyright is not a question of the commercial interests of publishers, printers, and paper-makers – or of the high or low prices of books – it is a question of national honour, and the national honour is in the hands of your Legislature. There are no readers who have such a true interest in literature, and such a sincere respect for literature as [del] American readers. These excellent friends of ours are not fairly represented when they are compelled by their legislature to buy books which owe their existence to a fraud on the author.

With sincere regard, | believe me, | vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
P.S. | My address has lately changed | to 82 Wimpole Street, London | W.
To | Mr Edgar F. Gladwin

---

1. Edgar Franklin Gladwin (16 August 1863 to 13 April 1915) was a bank clerk first in New York then in Reno, where he died aged 51 of 'severe indigestion'. What his interest was in international copyright remains a mystery, but there are no other candidates of that name in US census and other records. WC's article 'Considerations on the Copyright Question' had been published in June 1880 in The International Review, New York, so the letter is not a direct response to that. However, in 1888 there was a very active debate in the US on an international copyright Bill – the Chace Bill – which the senate approved but the House of Representatives rejected, and WC is clearly referring to that in the letter. It shows that WC kept up with that debate and was willing to engage on it with correspondents who were otherwise unknown to him.

2. The last known letter sent from Ramsgate.

[2886] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 10 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/77), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 339.

82. Wimpole Street W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

10 Sept 1888

My dear Sebastian,

I returned on Friday evening last<sup>2</sup> – all the better for the sea air. On Saturday, my luck ended. Torturing neuralgia in the face – from that time to this. Pray tell me if your children have returned in good health. I keep those letters carefully, to tell you what I think of them.<sup>3</sup> I can write no more.

Yours ever aftly | WC

---

1. Initialled and directed to 'Sebastian Schlesinger Esq | St James's Chambers | Duke Street | S.W.', postmarked as dated.

2. WC wrote on the Monday and had thus returned on 7 September.

3. Neither the children's journey nor the letters has been identified, though perhaps the latter related to Schlesinger's marital problems. WC refers to Schelsinger's daughters in a later note, tentatively dated [November–December 1888].

[2887] TO [A. S.] WATT,<sup>1</sup> 12 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 339.

82. Wimpole Street. W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

12th Sept 1888

Dear Mr Watt,

By today's registered book post I send to you some more copy of my new Story – for Mr Dicks.<sup>2</sup>

Please let me hear that the packet has reached you safely.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Though there is no hard evidence, the formality of the salutation and valediction suggest strongly that this letter is addressed not to A. P. Watt, whom WC seems to have believed then to be still on holiday from the office (see [2889] to him of 13 September 1888), but to his eldest son, already active in the business.

2. 'The Lord Harry' – the amount of copy is specified in the following letter to Watt [2889], 13 September 1888.

[2888] TO CHATTO & WINDUS, 13 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 339–340.

82. Wimpole Street W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

13th Sept 1888

Dear Sirs,

I have returned from the sea<sup>1</sup> – and I hear nothing of the proofs of “The Legacy of Cain.” Let me remind you that when you wrote to me suggesting that the book might be set up in type, (while the printers had nothing to do) without sending the proofs to me for correction this time, I replied thanking you, and giving reasons why it would be necessary for me to see the proofs, and to have some of the proofs reserved, to be sent to the translators.<sup>2</sup> I have not the least wish (it is needless to say) to hurry the setting up of the copy, so long before the date of publication. Any time that will suit you will suit me. I only want to know that I shall receive the proofs.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me dear Sirs | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. I write under difficulties – with an attack of neuralgia in the face!

Messrs Chatto & Windus

---

1. WC in fact returned from Ramsgate on Friday, 7 September – see [2886] to Sebastian Schlesinger of 10 September 1888.

2. See [2884] to Chatto & Windus of 9 August 1888.

3. Below the erased address is a pencil annotation in an unknown hand which appears to read ‘Ans?’.

[2889] TO A. P. WATT, 13 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 340–341.

82. Wimpole Street. W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

13th Sept: 1888

My dear Watt,

I am very glad to hear such cheering report of you and your holiday. I wish I could imitate you. The sea has been as entirely my good friend as ever. But my return to London has ended badly what had been well begun.<sup>1</sup> Neuralgia in the face, and an abscess [sic] in the mouth, have tried my philosophy severely. Today, at last, there is a change for the better. The abscess [sic] has melted away – and the neuralgic pains are slackening – and I may hope to get to work again in a day or two. Talking of work, that packet which you have kindly sent to Mr Dicks contained not the second weekly part only, but the third and fourth as well. We are nearer to the first instalment of the purchase-money than you thought.<sup>2</sup>

When will you look in – next week? – and tell me about your travels, and have a little “drink”?<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC was in Ramsgate from around 26 August to 7 September – see his letters to Sebastian Schlesinger. Watt's letter to WC of 13 September explained that he too was now back from holiday (Berg).
2. The agreement with Dicks (now held in the A. P. Watt & Co. Records (#11036), Wilson Library, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill) specified that the first third of the payment would be made when the first third of the manuscript was submitted. See Graham Law, 'Last Things', WCSJ, NS 1 (1998), pp. 50–58.
3. Watt only responded on 18 September (Berg), apologizing that he had been out of town for the weekend and was extremely busy with arrears of work due to his holiday.

[2890] TO ANNE LINSELL,<sup>1</sup> 14 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 334 (with recipient unidentified); BGLL, IV, p. 341.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.<sup>2</sup>
London | 14th September | 1888

Dear Annie,

You have my sincerest sympathy. The death of your good mother leaves another blank in my life.<sup>3</sup> She was happily associated with pleasant remembrances of the time when I was a boy – and with one recent recollection. She came to luncheon at the house which I have now left, on the occasion of a visit to London, and was doubly welcome – for her own sake and for the sake of the recollection of my own dear mother which she called up the moment I saw her again.<sup>4</sup>

I ought to have thanked you for your kind letter before this. But I am only now getting the better of some neuralgic trouble in the face.

Yours always truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Ann[e] Elizabeth Deane Linsell (b. 1841), WC's cousin – the eldest daughter of HC's youngest sister Emily. She married Francis Linsell on 7 October 1863 and had four children (1881 Census).
2. At long last WC has ordered some new personalized notepaper, with the monogram to the left and the address ranged right.
3. WC's maternal aunt Emily Elizabeth Guest Clunes née Geddes (c. 1805–88), who had married Deane William Clunes in 1839. She died on 5 September 1888.
4. For another account of this visit, see [2594] to Frank Beard of 26 July 1886.

[2891] TO JIM PIGOTT,<sup>1</sup> 14 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 341–342.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W. | London | 14th Sept 1888

My dear Jim,

Just a word to say that if I can find an opportunity of trying to serve you, I will not fail to make use of it. Neuralgia in the face, with the charming accompaniment of an abscess [sic] in the mouth, ~~have~~ has taken the pen out of my hand for the last week. But these are trumpery sufferings by comparison with the horrid discovery that you announce. I am really grieved to hear of it. Are there no preventive measures? and is it useless to consult – with that view – any of our specialists in London? Sir Henry Thompson is the great authority here.<sup>2</sup>

My love to Henry | Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. In the light of the valediction, this must be the actor James William Nairne Smyth Pigott (1850–1918), younger brother of Henry Pigott and nephew of Edward Pigott, who in 1883 had played the part of the Earl of Laverock in WC's ill-fated Rank and Riches, and who more recently had been working as an actor and playwright in America (see the notes to [2539] and [2547] to Edward Pigott of 19 March and 3 April 1886). Nothing specific is known about the serious illness referred to in this letter; however, if Lycett is correct concerning the cause of death of Jim's father, Henry Pigott (see note 1 to [0166] to Edward Pigot, 16 May 1854), it seems possible that Jim had recently learned that he was suffering from congenital syphilis.
2. Sir Henry Thompson, surgeon, specialist in the genito-urinary tract; see [2636] to him of 3 November 1886.

[2892] TO GEORGE E. GOURAUD,<sup>1</sup> 24 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Unknown. Typed transcript: Edison Papers, Rutgers University, our copy text. Extract: Picker, p. 120.
Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 342–343.

82 Wimpole Street. | London W. | 24th September, 1888.

Dear Sir,

I sincerely appreciate the compliment which is implied in the invitation with which you have honoured me. Mr Edison's [sic] fame has been nobly gained. His place in history is already secured, and his landmark set up on the territory of Science.

But, in the present state of my health, I fear there is little hope of my being able to profit by this opportunity which you have been so good as to offer me of investigating the most wonderful invention of our time. I have been already away from London (which is my only excuse for this late reply), trying what a purer air will do for me – and I shall probably be far away from Little Menlo next month.<sup>2</sup>

Pray accept my apologies as well as my thanks, and believe me,

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins.

Colonel Gouraud.

-
1. The American George Edward Gouraud (1841–1912: Times obituary, 20 February 1912), a Civil War hero, who in 1887 joined Thomas Alva Edison in setting up the Edison Phonograph Company.
  2. Gouraud had bought a house in Beulah Hill, Upper Norwood, in South London and named his new home Little Menlo after Edison's original laboratory at Menlo Park, New Jersey. He invited celebrities there to record their voices on the new invention. This letter shows that WC was unable to accept. See <www.theirvingsociety.org.uk/phonos.htm> and Picker, pp. 116–125, for more on Gouraud's success in adding eminent people such as Browning and Tennyson to his Library of Voices.

[2893] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 24 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Fales. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 343.

82. Wimpole Street. W.

~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~

24th Sept: 1888

Dear Sir,

I am indeed very sincerely obliged to you for having added one more to the curious fragments of experience which have marked the course of my literary life. The complete resemblance between the story told in the letter to the Daily Telegraph, the other day,<sup>1</sup> and the story told in “No Name,” more than a quarter of a century since, is quite as strange a coincidence as you supposed it to be. From beginning to end the plot of “No Name” is entirely imaginary.

Believe me, dear Sir, | Vy truly Yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. We have been unable to trace the specific story in question, but it is likely to be found among the many letters to the editor in the long-running correspondence on the question ‘Is Marriage a Failure?’. Almost three columns were devoted to this debate in the Daily Telegraph every day virtually throughout the months of August and September 1888. In all around 27,000 letters were sent to the editor, and many of those published were reprinted in Is Marriage a Failure? ed. Harry Quilter (London: Swan Sonnenschein, n.d.).

[2894] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 24 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Unknown.<sup>1</sup> On sale: eBay (21–28 September 2004), by ‘bashworths’, Provo, Utah, item 2271744478.
Published: BGLL, IV, p. 343.

Wilkie Collins. | London | 24th September 1888

---

1. On a small rectangular piece of card. Presumably an autograph scrap only.

[2998] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 24 SEPTEMBER 1888

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C1, p. 54.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
82 Wimpole St | London | 24th September 1888

---

1. On a small rectangular piece of card. Presumably an autograph scrap only.

[2895] TO A. P. WATT, 5 OCTOBER 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 343–344.

82. Wimpole Street.
~~90, GLOUCESTER PLACE, | PORTMAN SQUARE. W.~~
5th Oct 1888

My dear Watt,

Your kind letter finds me recovering – and returning to my work, after a deplorable interval of lost time. Neuralgia in the face, complicated by an abcess [sic] in the mouth – infernal pain – imprisonment in the house – revolt of the liver as the consequence of want of exercise, and a narrow escape of jaundice – there is the narrative of my life since I returned from Ramsgate. Any day next week, when you may be able to spare the time, I shall be delighted to see you. Mrs Watt’s health has I hope improved after her holiday in Scotland.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written on 4 October to say that he had been out of town in order to run up to Scotland to bring his wife home, and also to express concern about ‘a somewhat alarming statement’ in the World concerning WC’s health (Berg). In the gossip columns of Edmund Yates’s society weekly (‘What the World Says’, 3 October 1888, p. 14), appeared the following comment: ‘I am sorry to hear that Mr. Wilkie Collins is somewhat severely indisposed’.

[2896] TO HALL CAINE, 25 OCTOBER 1888

MS: Manx (9542 GMFD 77), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, p. 561.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.<sup>2</sup>
London 25 October 1888

My dear Hall Caine,

My best thanks for the photograph. The only objection to it that I can discover, is no doubt felt by your friends – the likeness is “over-printed,” and the result is a dark-haired man. And perhaps the light was allowed to fall a little too strongly on your face when you sat – and the reflected light in the pupils of your eyes comes rather wildly. Making these small allowances the likeness seems to me to be excellent, and the position of the figure well managed.

I am not at all surprised to hear of the success of “Ben-my-Chree” in the country. The average London audience is the stupidest audience in England. In the country towns (especially the great towns) the superiority of intelligence is really remarkable. I heartily congratulate you on the result of your dramatic venture – after your play escaped from its place of confinement in the hideous Princess’s Theatre.<sup>3</sup>

When you are next in London you will find me, as I hope and believe, here – and [illegible] to see you again. I was at Ramsgate, not Broadstairs – and so we missed seeing each other. My illness was painful (neuralgia, complicated by an abscess), but ~~not~~ never serious.

Shall I make a dreadful confession? I am at work again – hard at work – furiously at work – nearly a third of the way through a new story. I will tell you all about it when we meet. In the meantime, an indignant (and devoted) friend has discovered a very good reason for the obstinacy of the ancient novelist in refusing to let go of his pen. “I’ll tell you what it is, Wilkie, you are a cunning fellow and [del] a clever fellow, and you contrive to hide it from most people – but I<sup>4</sup> tell you, seriously and positively, You’re mad!” This is my only excuse for being just as incapable (when a story comes to me) of resisting the temptation to write it, as I was forty years since!

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Directed to ‘Hall Caine Esqr | Castlerigg Cottage | Derwentwater | Keswick’, initialled ‘WC’, and postmarked ‘LONDON.W | X | OC 25 | 88’ and, on the reverse, ‘KESWICK A | OC 26 | 88’.
  2. Engraved black monogram ranged left and printed address ranged right; white laid paper with no visible watermark.
  3. The Ben-my-Chree (‘The Girl of My Heart’) was the play by Hall Caine and Wilson Barrett based on Caine’s novel, The Deemster, which opened in London at the Princess’s Theatre on Thursday, 17 May 1888 to good reviews, and ran successfully in the provinces from early August.
  4. In fact underlined three times.

[2897] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 6 NOVEMBER 1888

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/83), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 344.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

6th November 1888

My dear Sebastian,

The infernal fog and damp have completely unnerved me – and the neuralgia has nailed me again. Add to that I am obliged to write against time or break my agreement – and the net result (as they say in trade) is that I am too weary when evening comes to hold up my head. But for this, you would have heard from me last week – for it is your turn to dine with me and I want very much to present the children to you. I am indeed sorry not to be your guest (for as you know, I always enjoy dining with you) – and it is a real disappointment to miss meeting the charming Mrs Sherman again.<sup>2</sup> But I am not fit for social engagements – I can only ask you to forgive me.

Ever yours WC

-
1. Initialled and directed to ‘Sebastian Schlesinger Esq | 8. Wilton Place | Belgrave Square | S.W.’, postmarked on the following day. Schlesinger, now London agent of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, was resident in London at this address until after WC’s death.
  2. Schlesinger had separated from his wife and gone to live with ‘Mrs Sherman’. See Sue Lonoff, ‘Sex, Sense, and Nonsense’ in Smith & Terry, p. 48.

[2898] TO A. P. WATT, 9 NOVEMBER 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 345.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

9th Nov 1888

My dear Watt

I shall be only too glad to dine with you, and to become personally acquainted with Mr Rider Haggard, if you will kindly let me wait awhile until I can get the better of neuralgic troubles inflicted on me by this delicious weather. The moment I find myself likely to enjoy what I know will be a delightful evening, you shall hear again.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Watt had written on 6 November that Haggard had expressed an interest in meeting WC (Berg).

[2899] TO A. P. WATT, 13 NOVEMBER 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: (London) Bookman, vol. 23 (October 1892); Sherbo 1993, p. 352; BGLL, IV, pp. 345–346.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

13th Nov<sup>r</sup> 1888

My dear Watt,

My best thanks for your letter and the enclosures. You have achieved a masterly success with our proprietors.<sup>1</sup> If I could spare you as a friend (which I cannot possibly do) I should recommend the Government send you to the United States as diplomatic representative in place of Lord Sackville.<sup>2</sup>

I enclose (1) cheque for your commission and (2) the receipt duly signed.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

I am getting better – as fast as the weather will let me.

P.S. – I am not quite sure, on reflection, whether my cheque is right or wrong in respect of the shillings and pence. If wrong you will forgive and enlighten me, and we will set it right next time.

---

1. WC had sent instalments 5–7 of ‘The Lord Harry’ on 12 November with an accompanying letter that seems not to have survived, though Watt’s acknowledgement of the same day is found in the Berg collection. In a second letter dated 12 November, Watt reported that he had already handed over the copy to Henry Dicks’s brother and obtained a cheque for the first third of the payment.

2. Sir Lionel Sackville-West, second Baron Sackville of Knole (1827–1908: ODNB), British envoy to Washington who was recalled to London on 30 October 1888, following a scandal connected with the upcoming presidential election.

3. Watt had sent WC Dicks’s cheque for £333-6s-8d, representing the first third of the purchase money mentioned in the agreement, while WC quite correctly sent Watt a cheque for £33-6s-8d, representing his commission (see Watt’s acknowledgement of 14 November, Berg). The signed receipt was for John Dicks & Co. The payment must have been credited on 14 November as ‘Recd’, with the commission to ‘A P Watt’ debited on 15 November (Coutts: WC). See also [2941] to Watt, 7 March 1889, for what eventually happened to this agreement with Dicks.

[2900] TO MRS LINSELL,<sup>1</sup> 23 NOVEMBER 1888

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 346.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W. | London

23rd November 1888

Dear Mrs Linsell,

It is more than kind on your part to have remembered me at the season of Quinces. It was a consolation as well as a pleasure to receive your welcome present yesterday evening. I had been making inquiries relating to that delicious fruit among the London greengrocers – and had been informed that there was “a failure in the crop.” I leave you to imagine how sincerely I thank you.

Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Probably the mother-in-law of Anne Linsell, a cousin of WC’s, who (judging by the address line) must have lived outside London – see [2890] to Anne Linsell, 14 September 1888.

[3336] TO CARRIE BARTLEY, 6 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Unknown. On sale: Michael Treloar Antiquarian Booksellers, Adelaide (auction, 10 December 2017, lot 5)<sup>1</sup>.
Published: A&C11, p. 14.

6th December 1888

From | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Written in ink at the head of the dedication page of a first edition of The Legacy of Cain. The book was dedicated to Carrie Bartley under her married name of Mrs Henry Powell Bartley, in acknowledgement of what the author owed ‘to the pen which has skilfully and patiently helped me, by copying my manuscripts for the printer'. Her calling card has remained with the volumes as they passed down through her family.

[2901] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 6 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/81), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 346.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

6th Dec 1888

My dear Sebastian,

If you are by good luck disengaged on Monday next the 10th, do come and take pot-luck here at 8. My old friend Mr Pigott and his nephew are coming, and perhaps an excellent country parson of the old English type who is well worth meeting.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

-
1. Directed to 'Sebastian Schlesinger Esq | 8. Wilton Place | Belgrave Square | SW.', postmarked on the following day.
  2. Unidentified, though this might be the Rev. George Bainton – see [2858] to him of 15 June 1888.

[2902] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 7 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 317. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 347.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

7th Decr 1888

My dear Chatto,

Let me thank you for the presentation copies, so kindly sent the day before publication.<sup>1</sup> Five and twenty years ago, I should have felt tolerably sure of the reception of "The Legacy of Cain." Today, I dont know that I may not have aimed over the heads of the present generations of novel-readers. For your sake, and mine, I will hope.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

My hand and pen have slipped, and made a long-tailed C.<sup>2</sup>

-
1. According to the agreement, the official date of publication of the three-volume edition of The Legacy of Cain was 6 December 1888. One copy of the triple-decker remained in WC's library (Baker 2002, p. 92).
  2. The postscript is added beneath and to the left of the signature, where the 'C' is indeed unusually elongated.

[2903] TO WALTER S. SICHEL,<sup>1</sup> 11 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Clarke Collection. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 347.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

11th December 1888

Dear Sir,

Your kind letter has been forwarded to me from the house that I have left to the house that I now occupy.

I can, and do, thank you for your proposal – but, I regret to say, that I must add my excuses. My literary engagements will employ me during my working hours, throughout the new year which is now close at hand. I can only offer you my best wishes for the success of your efforts.

Faithfully yours, | Wilkie Collins

Walter S Sichel Esq.

-
1. This must be Walter Sydney Sichel (1855–1933), barrister and author on matters legal and literary, though the nature of his proposal to WC remains unclear. One of Sichel's earliest publications seems to have been an article on 'The Wit and Humour of Lord Beaconsfield' in Macmillan's Magazine, 44:2 (June 1881), pp. 139–148.

[2904] TO A. P. WATT, 12 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 348.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

12th Decr 1888

My dear Watt,

By today's Parcel Post, I send to you with great pleasure a copy of "The Legacy of Cain."<sup>1</sup>

Let me also report myself (helped by the blessed change in the weather to cold) very much better – and actually bold enough to have promised to dine with friends on Friday next and Monday next. This means a sly hint that I have the hope of meeting Mr Rider Haggard – whenever it may be quite convenient to you and to him, either this year or next year.<sup>2</sup> This sounds like a long "note of preparation", but 1889 will be telling us we are getting older with terrible rapidity.

When I have written one more weekly part, I shall be halfway through the new story. Never before have I accomplished such an advance on the press as this is!<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | WC

P.S. | Your letter just received. I will send one of my presentation copies to Tillotson<sup>4</sup>

---

1. WC had acknowledged receipt of his presentation copies in [2902] to Chatto of 7 December.

2. See [2898] to Watt of 9 November.

3. Concerning 'The Lord Harry', still being written for Dicks.

4. Watt had written on 11 December requesting a copy of the novel on behalf of W. F. Tillotson of Bolton (Berg).

[2905] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, [12] DECEMBER 1888

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/85), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 348–349.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

13th Dec 1888

My dear Sebastian,

Your kind letter reaches me too late. I have already promised to dine on Monday next with another friend.<sup>2</sup> For the first time, I must ask you to accept my thanks and my excuses

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Initialled and directed to 'Sebastian Schlesinger Esq | 8. Wilton Place | Belgrave Square | SW.', postmarked: 'LONDON. W | Z 4 | DE12 | 88'. The content of the letter makes it unlikely that WC wrote twice on consecutive days; Schlesinger's habit of preserving his envelopes also supports this. Therefore we judge that WC was probably in error with his dating. Given that WC probably entertained Schlesinger on Monday 10 December (see [2901] to him of 6 December), the most likely scenario is that Schlesinger wrote with thanks and a counter invitation on 11 December, and WC responded with this letter on 12 December.

2. That is, with Henry Pigott on Monday 17 December. See [2907] to him of that date.

[2906] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 14 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 349.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

14th December 1888

Dear Chatto,

Pray accept my thanks for your kind letter, and for a cheque for £19.5.- on account of sales of the 3 volume edition of "The Evil Genius" – a pleasant revival of my recollections of that book.<sup>1</sup>

Let me also thank you for the cutting from "Truth" – a kind little notice. That I echo your friendly good wishes with all my heart need not be said.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. As is made clear by Andrew Chatto's letter to WC of 13 December 1888 enclosing the cheque (Reading), the sum represents a 5s royalty on each of the seventy-seven copies of the novel sold above the agreed threshold of 750. The £19-5s was credited that day to WC's bank account as 'Recd' (Coutts: WC).

2. Chatto's letter makes clear that the reference is to a brief but positive review of The Legacy of Cain in the weekly Truth of Saturday 8 December 1888.

[2907] TO HENRY D. PIGOTT, 17 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 349.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

17th Dec 1888

My dear Henry,

On referring to your letter, I find no dinner-hour mentioned for our feast this evening. Shall I "strike an average" between 7 and 8 – and assume that the hour is 7.30? Don't trouble to write – there will not be time. But if you have fixed 7. sharp – then I beseech a telegram. If the time is 8 – never mind. I will be with you half an hour too soon.

Ever yours | (with a cold in my teeth) | WC

[2908] TO A. P. WATT, 17 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 350.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

17th Dec<sup>r</sup> 1888

My dear Watt,

I accept your friendly invitation for 2nd Jan<sup>y</sup> 1889 (National Liberal Club – at 7 o'Clock) with the greatest pleasure – and certainly in evening dress.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Tillotson has got his book. He sends good wishes and thanks – and (you will hardly believe it) he is so good as to add: "The story in its serial issue has given me satisfaction."!!<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Watt had written on 15 December to invite WC to meet H. Rider Haggard (Berg).

2. Watt responded later with a warning: 'I hope you are not committing yourself to him [Tillotson] in any way ... I have had some very curious agreements of his put into my hands by authors for whom I have declined his addresses' (29 December, Berg).

[2909] TO BERNHARD TAUCHNITZ, 22 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Unknown. Published: Otto, p. 79, our copy text; BGLL, IV, p. 350.

82, Wimpole Street, London W., | Saturday, December 22nd, 1888

Here I am again! This time, I report the safe arrival of my dearly-loved Tauchnitz Edition of The Legacy of Cain,<sup>1</sup> on Thursday last.

Let me beg you to accept my best thanks for this welcome gift – and for the friendly kindness which has helped the latest of my literary offspring to reach its anxious parent.

With sincerest good wishes to you and to your son for the New Year that is coming, believe me, etc. etc.

---

1. Tauchnitz published The Legacy of Cain on 13 December 1888, probably from advance sheets of the Chatto & Windus edition which was published in London about a week earlier (vols 2554–2255, Todd & Bowden, p. 382).

[2910] TO THE REV. GEORGE BAINTON, 29 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Yale.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 350–351.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
London | Saturday, 29th Decr 1888

My dear Mr Bainton,

Let me thank you for your kind wishes, and heartily reciprocate them.

And let me ask you to accept a copy of the book (“The Legacy of Cain”) which owes a debt of obligation to your kindness for valuable information received by the author.<sup>2</sup> The novel has been dispatched to you today by registered book post. I send the “Tauchnitz” Edition, in two volumes, (which I am allowed by the custom-house to import for my own use) – the copies being exhausted in the bound edition in three volumes.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Accompanied by a note on a separate sheet in WC’s hand: ‘By Book Post Register. | 29th Decr 1888 | To | The Revd George Bainton | Coventry | From Wilkie Collins | 82. Wimpole Street | London. W.’.

2. WC changed the denomination of his minister from Wesleyan Methodist to Congregationalist. See [2858] to Bainton, 15 June 1888.

3. Both editions appeared that December. WC must have already exhausted his six author’s copies of the three-volume edition.

[2911] TO ROBERT DU PONTAVICE DE HEUSSEY, 29 DECEMBER 1888

MS: Parrish (Box 4/19). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 351.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
London | 29th December 1888

My dear friend,

The best way in which I can thank you for your kind and delightful little letter is to send my last new book to speak for me. By yesterday’s registered book-post, I dispatched to you “The Legacy of Cain” in the Tauchnitz Edition. May it help to tell you how gratefully sensible I am of your fine friendship, and how sincerely I wish you the happiest of happy new years.

Always yours affectionately | Wilkie Collins

[2912] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, [NOVEMBER–DECEMBER 1888]<sup>1</sup>

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/91). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 351–352.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
Friday

My dear Sebastian,

Corneille, Pope, and Shelley will do, I think. Your daughters are so delightfully determined – and reason with such vigour – that they terrify me. I am now for giving them whatever they ask for.<sup>2</sup>

I must write to you again. A blue pill is in me – my head is completely muddled – and this damnably mild weather completely unnerves me.

Ever yours WC

---

1. The use of the ‘Wimpole Street’ printed notepaper limits the date of composition to October 1888 at the earliest. The reference to ‘this damnably mild weather’, implying unseasonably mildness, suggests a winter date. It recalls WC’s references to the effect of the weather on his ailments in [2899] and [2904] to A. P. Watt of 13 November and 12 December 1888 – in the latter he reports himself rather better, ‘helped by the blessed change in the weather to cold’.

2. Perhaps referring to requests for books as Christmas presents. WC mentions letters from Schlesinger’s children in [2886] to Schlesinger of 10 September 1888.

[2913] TO [GEORGINA WELDON],<sup>1</sup> [31 DECEMBER 1888]<sup>2</sup>

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

From Wilkie Collins | With all Kind | Wishes

1. Georgina Weldon née Thomas (1837–1914: ODNB) was an amateur soprano and proponent of musical reform, who during the 1870s lived at Tavistock House (CD's former residence) with her husband William Henry Weldon. She became celebrated for her campaign against Victorian lunacy laws following her husband's unsuccessful attempt in 1878 to have her confined to an insane asylum, which she exposed in How I Escaped the Mad Doctors (1879). (The most reliable account of her life remains Edward Grierson's Storm Bird: The Strange Life of Georgina Weldon, London: Chatto & Windus, 1959). In the early 1870s she had worked closely with French pianist and composer Charles-François Gounod (1818–93), and the two performed together at Ada Cavendish's charity matinée at the Olympic Theatre on Saturday, 28 June 1873, alongside WC who gave a rendition of 'A Terribly Strange Bed' in preparation for his reading tour of North America (see [1354] to Wybert Reeve, 26 June 1873). In her My Orphanage and Gounod in England (London: 1882), p. 78, Weldon recounts an anecdote illustrating the duplicity of the agent Stefan Poles (see [1376] to him of 11 September 1873), which suggests that she and Gounod visited WC at home on at least one occasion in the mid-1870s:

What hours and hours that Rafael Tugenhold, otherwise known as Stefan Polès, made me lose! He, too, was going to make Gounod's fortune! He who had never been an agent in his life, got himself introduced as such by a young communist, Camille Barrère; telling us that he came from Mr. Wilkie Collins, who begged Gounod to write some music for "The New Magdalen" proposing Gounod should receive half the author's rights.

Gounod made haste to read and go and see the piece. If I had been with him I should have written to Mr. Wilkie Collins to know whether he [Polès] was making a fool of me. But Gounod was flattered: half the author's rights tempted him as cheese tempts a rat, and without seeing the absurdity of the position, he regretted not being able to accede to the gracious request of Mr. Wilkie Collins. It was not until I saw the piece two months later that I understood all the ridicule of the thing!

Later on we heard at Wilkie Collins's that Rafael Tugenhold ... had been to Mr. Wilkie Collins, and had told him that Gounod was so charmed with his piece that he was most anxious to write the music for "The New Magdalen".

Georgina Weldon's annotation to this letter (see note 3 below) suggests that her acquaintance with WC continued beyond the mid-1870s. At the end of 1888, Weldon was still resident in London at 58 Gower Street, though in September of the following year, around the time of WC's death, she was to leave for a long exile in a French convent to write her memoirs. It thus seems quite possible that the kind wishes expressed in this note were addressed to Weldon herself.

2. Conjectural dating based on WC's new printed notepaper, with monogram ranged left, address ranged right, and the message in the style of a New Year's greeting – see [2240–2242] for similar greetings at the end of 1883, for example.

3. Although this appears to be written in large letters in WC's hand, a note has been added in a different hand: 'This is Mrs Graves' hand (I think) Not Wilkie Collins' – | It is Wilkie Collins' writing paper | G.W.'. A light pencil note below that in a third hand reads 'Georgina Weldon's hand'.

[3337] TO HON. SECRETARY, COUNCIL OF WELCOME FOR THE AMERICAN EXHIBITION, 1884–1888

MS: Private. Published: A&C11, p. 15.

FORM TO BE FILLED UP BY MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL OF WELCOME,<sup>1</sup> AND RETURNED AS PER ADDRESS ON BACK HEREOF.

Do you approve of the Establishment of the suggested Club?* Yes No
Are you prepared to become a Member, if the Club is formed?***

Name Wilkie Collins

Address 90 Gloucester Place | W.

*Please fill in "Yes" or "No."

HON. SECRETARY,
COUNCIL OF WELCOME FOR THE AMERICAN EXHIBITION,
VICTORIA MANSIONS, | LONDON, S.W.<sup>2</sup>

-
1. WC had accepted the offer to be on the Council of Welcome for the American Exhibition which took place after a year's delay at Earl's Court in 1887 (see [2361] to John R. Whitley, 30 October 1884). It is not known if the Club whose establishment is referred to here was ever formed.
  2. Return address on the verso, with cancelled postage stamp.

[3338] TO [CARRIE BARTLEY], 1888

MS: Lewis Collection. On sale: Michael Treloar Antiquarian Booksellers, Adelaide (auction, 10 December 2017, lot 4).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C11, p. 15.

Wilkie Collins 1888

---

1. Written in ink as the entry for 8 January in The Charles Dickens Birthday Book, sold by Timothy Iredale, the great grandson of Elizabeth Harriet Graves. Other entries concern the Bartley family and their relatives. The date and the context imply that this was also to Carrie Bartley, perhaps when he presented her with The Legacy of Cain (see [3336] ~~to her~~, 6 December 1888).

[2914] TO HENRY D. PIGOTT, 1 JANUARY 1889

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 352.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
London | 1st January 1889

My dear Henry

You have done well to leave London. For the last four days, choking fogs and bone-shivering damps. To day I have got out for the first time since last week – and today my wretched nerves are the better from a little exercise. I hope Bath has helped you as our first fogless afternoon has helped me.<sup>1</sup>

I have one of Mrs Knox's nice warm-hearted letters today.<sup>2</sup> Among other pleasant things she tells me that she has got for me two dozen of that good brandy we had at the dinner. When may I expect you to come and drink some of it? The frost may be coming at last judging by the temperature.

Ever yours | WC

I am very glad to hear that the notices of my "Legacy" are of the right sort.<sup>3</sup> Caroline sends her love.

-
1. Perhaps Pigott was staying with relatives – the Pigotts hailed from the West of England.
  2. Possibly the wife of Andrew Alexander Knox – see [1947] to Knox of 11 March 1881.
  3. The Legacy of Cain.

[2915] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 4 JANUARY 1889

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/89), on printed notecard, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 353.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
4th Jan<sup>y</sup> 1889

My dear Sebastian,

A pleasant surprise indeed to find that you have come back<sup>2</sup> – and, oh, to what weather! In the last 10 days I have only been twice out of the house. The fog-damp has brought back my neuralgia torment in the chest – and, much as I should like to dine with you, I dare not accept that pleasant engagement, for I have no hope of being able to get out at night so soon as Sunday next.<sup>3</sup>

It is like your kindness to propose to send for some more ducks – but I don't like to think of your taking that trouble over again, and your running the risk perhaps of more thievery. Let me come instead, when I can get hardened to the winter, and eat a British duck with you.<sup>4</sup>

Yours ever | WC

I shall be writing by tomorrow's mail to report myself still alive for the life insurance in U.S.A. Your successors are, I take it for granted, still addressed as Naylor & Co 99. John Street, New York City.<sup>5</sup>

-
1. Initialled and directed to 'Sebastian Schlesinger Esq | 8. Wilton Place | Belgrave Square | SW.', postmarked on the following day.
  2. Perhaps from a trip to the Continent.
  3. WC writes on the Friday.
  4. For background on the American canvasback ducks, see [2805] to Schlesinger, 25–26 January 1888.
  5. Where Schlesinger used to work. The 1891 Census shows Schlesinger's occupation to be 'Agent Philadelphia Railway Co.'

[3339] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT,<sup>1</sup> 8 JANUARY 1882–8 JANUARY 1889

MS: Unknown. Copy in another hand: Lewis Collection.<sup>2</sup> On sale: Waverly Rare Books, Falls Church, Virginia (auction, 8 June 1987), with attached letter in a lot of three. Published: A&C11, p. 16.

8th January<sup>3</sup>

A man of high intelligence – however he may misuse it, however unworthy he may be of it – has a gift from Heaven. When you want to see unredeemed wickedness look for it in a fool.<sup>4</sup>

(signed) Wilkie Collins

Extract selected by the author.

-
1. Attached with stamp edging to [3313] to F. G. Whitelocke, 21 April 1859.
  2. The date and the signature are in red ink, the rest in black, but none of the document is in WC's hand.
  3. Assuming this date – WC's birthday – is accurate, the document cannot date from earlier than 1882 and could be any year from then to that of WC's death.
  4. Referring to Father Benwell, The Black Robe, Book the Fifth, Chapter IV. This chapter was first published on 26 February 1881 (Law, 'Wilkie in the Weeklies: the Serialization of Collins's Late Novels', Victorian Periodicals Review, 30:3, Fall 1997, p. 247).

[2916] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 9 JANUARY 1889

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/87), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 353–354.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

9th Janry 1889

My dear Sebastian,

On the day when I got your letter (enclosing Mr Dwerryhouse's letter)<sup>2</sup> I sent to the next door neighbours to make inquiry. They declared that no box of game addressed to me had been delivered at 83. Wimpole Street. If it had been sent, they would have at once sent it to me, as they had done in other cases of misdelivered letters and so on. There is their answer.

I agree with Mr Dwerryhouse that it is improbable that these people have confiscated the box and eaten the birds.

Where is the book which was signed when the box was delivered if it was delivered? If Mr Dwerryhouse will tell me at what London terminus to make inquiries I will send there – not by means of a man, who may be trifled with – but by means of a woman who is not to be trifled with – who will insist and persevere – and take advantage of the "privileges of her sex", and bother the authorities till they will wish they had never been born, and get a look at the signed book – if the signed book exists. My own belief is that the box was stolen at the terminus and that the birds are in the belly of "a most respectable person" in the employment of the authorities.

Ever yours | WC

I am getting better today – and hoping to dine with you on the 19th.

-
1. Directed to 'Sebastian Schlesinger Esq | 8. Wilton Place | Belgrave Square | SW.', postmarked as dated.
  2. Possibly from William Dwerryhouse, a commission merchant in Liverpool (Census 1881, RG11 3650).

[2917] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 15 JANUARY 1889

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/83), monogrammed card, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 354.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

15th January 1889

My dear Sebastian,

The ducks have just arrived – looking perfectly beautiful. At least your kind intentions have not been frustrated this time by thieves and idiots.<sup>2</sup> My thanks – my best thanks. Now do one more kind thing for me. Tell me what is the dinner hour on Saturday next – and let me feast my eyes punctually on the lovely American.<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours WC

-
1. Directed to 'Sebastian Schlesinger Esqr | 8. Wilton Place | Belgrave Square | SW.', postmarked on the following day.
  2. Schlesinger must have had sent another brace of ducks to replace those which had gone missing – see [2915] and [2916] to Schlesinger of 4 and 9 January.
  3. Mrs Sherman, with whom Schlesinger was living, and whom WC had met the previous autumn – see [2897] to Schlesinger of 8 November 1888, and Lonoff in Smith & Terry, pp. 47–48.

[3271] TO THE REV. GEORGE BAINTON, 15 JANUARY 1889

MS: Georgia (Hargrett Rare Books, PR5485.A1 1886).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C9, pp. 31–32.

82, Wimpole Street. | London W. | 15 January 1889

Dear Mr Bainton,

It is not easy to tell you with what pleasure and what encouragement I have read your most welcome letter. Oh, if I had more readers like you! describes my frame of mind when I had folded up your letter.

For you know as well as I do what are the two least important things in the book – the character of Eunice, and the writing of her dream.<sup>2</sup> This last is – so far as I know – entirely the product of my own imagination. I may tell you why I write doubtfully when I am alluding to the product of my invention. It has been one of my strange experiences to receive letters from readers of my works who ask if I have not founded my story – or sometimes part of my story – on events which have actually happened. Those events are next related by way of courteous excuse for writing to me – and I have found to my amazement that my imagination has been, unconsciously, following the course of incidents which have actually happened in the knowledge of persons absolutely strangers to me. As “The Legacy of Cain” becomes more widely read, I may possibly hear that the truth has been prompting me in ways too mysterious for human discovery. If this does happen you shall be the first friend who hears of it.

I confess to having thought the success of “Jekyll and Hyde” a discouraging sign of deterioration in the public taste.<sup>3</sup> The earlier part of the book is ingeniously and powerfully written. As the end approaches the literary treatment begins (to my mind) to fail. And when we are told that a powder purchased of a chemist is an agent in a supernatural transformation of body and soul, the author’s audacity seemed to me to go the length of insulting his readers. Of the many persons who asked me what I thought of the story, and to whom I said what I have said here, not one understood me.

Believe me, dear Mr Bainton,
Always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Letter inserted into a copy of the first English edition (1886) of The Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde by Robert Louis Stevenson; details courtesy of Patrick Scott and the late Dr G. Ross Roy.

2. Eunice Gracedieu, spiteful daughter in The Legacy of Cain. See the following letters to Bainton: [3072] of 13 June 1888, and [2858] of 15 June 1888, in which WC asks for and acknowledges Bainton's advice; and [2910] of 29 December 1888, where WC sends him a copy of the book published in November 1888.

3. See [3189] to Charles Kent, 15 March 1886, in which WC expresses similar views on The Strange Case of Doctor Jekyll and Mr Hyde.

[2918] TO [EDWARD W.] BOK,<sup>1</sup> 15 JANUARY 1889

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 355.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

London | 15th January 1889

Dear Mr Bok,

Not a line of my "Reminiscences" has been written, or even thought of. Publishers have suggested that I should write of my own life – and if I live long enough to have a little leisure time, I may possibly try the experiment. As things are, the hours that I can devote to work will be fully occupied for some time to come. And perhaps it may not be amiss to add that we have had (to my mind) more "Reminiscences" latterly published in England than are really wanted. It will soon become a distinction not to have written ones [sic] autobiography.

My only literary news of myself is – that I am half way through a new serial story, which is partly founded (this time) on events that have really happened.<sup>2</sup>

With hearty good wishes for the new year,

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. See [2700] to the same recipient of 30 March 1887.

2. What would eventually become Blind Love, based on the Von Scheurer insurance fraud, and serialized in the Illustrated London News.

[2919] TO A. P. WATT, 23 JANUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 355–356.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

23rd Jan<sup>y</sup> 1889

My dear Watt,

I have been suffering again (under the fogs) – but I am able to work again.<sup>1</sup>

With these drawbacks and with my slow rate of progress as a writer, I am afraid we shall have to ask for an extension of time, in regard to my next novel.<sup>2</sup> Can you come here, at the usual time on any day this week (if possible) most convenient to yourself? – and have one of our special consultations?

Ever yours | WC

On Saturday night last I was the object of collision (in a four wheel cab) – smashed glass flying all over me – the cab tipping over – and I flying out of the uppermost door like a young man of 20. Not a morsel of the glass touched my face or my hands – and I landed on the pavement without a bruise. But next day's work went badly.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. Watt had written on 21 January with a sympathetic inquiry, since he had not heard from WC since before Christmas.

2. Referring to the agreement (signed in July 1888 – see Watt's letters to William Ingram of 5 and 10 July 1888, Berg) to write, for £1,000, a twenty-six part serial to begin in the Illustrated London News from the beginning of July 1889. The extension was not in the end necessary because of the deferral of the agreement with Dicks – see [2941] to Watt of 7 March 1889.

3. WC (who writes on a Wednesday) was returning from a dinner at Sebastian Schlesinger's – see [2920] to Schlesinger of the following day.

[2920] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 24 JANUARY 1889

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: B&C, II, p. 562 (incorrectly sourced as Houghton).

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.<sup>1</sup>

24th January 1889

My dear Sebastian,

Your copy of “The Legacy of Cain” has been sent to you by today’s Parcel Post.

I am again under the doctor’s care – indigestion and gouty disturbances, and strict abstinence from all the good things at your table only too necessary. You will forgive my absence, I am sure.

Returning from that delightful dinner of yours I had a narrow escape of some serious consequences. Turning from Wilton Place into the Knightbridge Road,<sup>2</sup> my four-wheel cab collided with some vehicle. A frightful smash of broken glass – a turning round of cab and horse – a twist over of the cab just as I jumped out of it. My coat covered with broken glass – but my face and my hands untouched. I did not feel it much at the time – but I fancy it has given me a shake, and stirred up the gout. But there are no bad symptoms, so far – and the enemy has been met in time. I must however be careful – and alas! – I must be absent from feasts and felicity.

Ever yours | WC

One line to say if the book has reached you. I think of the /lost/ canvas-back-ducks,<sup>3</sup> and take “a pessimist view” of the fate of parcels.

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. That is, just after leaving Schlesinger’s residence at 8, Wilton Place, on the south side of Hyde Park, on the cab journey north to WC’s home at Wimpole Street.

3. See [2915], [2916] to Schlesinger of 4 and 9 January 1889.

[2921] TO JAMES PAYN, 28 JANUARY 1889

MS: Private, on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 356.

28th January 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Payn,

There is such a thing as Luck – and I am one of the representatives of the man who tries to find it and fails. When you kindly called yesterday I was the victim of a neuralgic attack in the chest which completely prostrated me. Hours of pain, and the only remedy, at last, a dose of laudanum measured by table spoonful. After another milder attack last night (and more laudanum!) I have I hope and trust got over it. But my misfortunes don’t end here. I wrote to you about three weeks since, asking you to forgive me for not having long since told you of my change of address, and suggesting that you might pardon me personally on a Sunday afternoon. My letter (addressed to [Webster] Place) must, I fear, have miscarried.<sup>1</sup> Are you likely to be passing this way next Sunday, or any Sunday after, about 3 or 4 o’Clock? I don’t deserve another call – but that is the very reason why my old friend will remember me. I don’t like to think of the time that has passed since we met.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

I was 65 on the 8th of this month – and I am actually writing another novel!!!<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The reading of the address here is doubtful. Payn and his family had lived at 43 Warrington Crescent in Maida Vale for many years, but by this time Payn himself seems to have resided principally at his West End club. No Webster Place has been located in the London maps and directories of the period. It is possible that WC had misread Payn’s notoriously bad handwriting.

2. This is WC’s last surviving letter to Payn, who was about six years his junior.

[2922] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 29 JANUARY 1889

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/41), on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 357.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

28 29th Janry 1889

Best and kindest of good friends, thank you for the delicious bird.<sup>1</sup> It comes just in time, after an attack of neuralgia – [stopped by luck].<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. On this occasion perhaps not canvasback ducks, which seem to come as a brace.

2. The note is hastily written and we cannot be confident of the transcription here.

[2923] TO B. F. STEVENS,<sup>1</sup> 1 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Lewis Collection, on a printed card. Published: Lewis website; BGLL, IV, p. 357.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

1st February 1889

Dear Sir,

I beg to thank you for your letter. The proposal with which you favour me has been sent to the friend (and representative) who manages my literary business – Mr A. P. Watt, of 2. Paternoster Square – who will reply on my behalf.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me, faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

B.F. Stevens Esqre

---

1. Benjamin Franklin Stevens (1833–1902), American founder of B. F. Stevens & Brown Ltd, a despatch agency for the USA. At this time his office was at 4 Trafalgar Square (Kelly's Post Office Directory, 1890).

2. See [2924] to Watt of the same date.

[2924] TO A. P. WATT, 1 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 357–358.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

1st Feby 1889

My dear Watt,

I return by today's Parcel Post the book which you kindly lent to me. Pray dont think that I have handled it carelessly, judging by appearances. The rottenness of Messrs Harpers' paper cover defies careful handling. Tinder is solid by comparison.<sup>1</sup> My impressions as a reader are: – Regret that I am not an innocent young lady at school, instead of a wicked old wretch suffering from neuralgia, and wanting an exciting story. Let us say that I have been “edified”, and drop it there – with thanks to you for showing me what sort of fiction they want in the ‘Lustrated paper’.<sup>2</sup>

Here is another American proposal.<sup>3</sup> I have told Mr Stevens that his letter has been sent to you. Does “prior publication in the United States” mean that I am to sell my English copyright – or rather sacrifice my English copyright? I shall be curious to know what sum they would offer me for such an act of resignation as this!

Ever yours | WC

---

1. The book published by Harper's has not been identified.

2. Presumably referring to the pictorial journal Harper's Weekly.

3. See [2923] to B. F. Stevens of the same date.

[2925] TO A. P. WATT, 5 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke, in pencil. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 358.

82, Wimpole Street | 5th Feby 1889

My dear Watt,

I have refused a proposal to translate – and am quite free now. The German right is therefore entirely at your disposal – I am glad that it is taken under your friendly care.<sup>1</sup>

Here I am a prisoner in my bedroom – with bronchitis, by way of a change. It is not a very bad attack so far – but I am obliged to keep out of the cold air on the staircase. Am I not a lucky fellow???

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written on 4 February to inquire if he was free to offer the German translation right to WC's next novel 'The Lord Harry', the price being £80, the same as that for The Legacy of Cain, which had been sold to Tillotson's. No German translation of The Legacy of Cain has been traced, but Blinde Liebe was issued by the Stuttgart house of Deutsche Verlags-Anstalt in 1890 – see GV.

[2926] TO W. F. TILLOTSON,<sup>1</sup> 7 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Unknown. On sale: 2009 Maggs catalogue 1427, no. 36. Extract: BGLL IV, p. 359. Published: A&C5, p. 21.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W. | [7th Feby 1889]

Dear Mr Tillotson

Let me thank you for your kind letter, and assure you that I am sensible of the compliment which is offered to me by your renewed proposal.

Illness confines me to my room, and leaves me no alternative but to repeat my excuses. While I am behind hand with work that must be done I must not venture to undertake work that may be done.<sup>2</sup>

[Vy truly yours] | Wilkie Collins

---

1. This is WC's last letter to Tillotson, who died suddenly at home on 19 February at the age of only forty-four, shortly after contracting pneumonia following his return from a trip to New York – see [2936] to A. P. Watt of 20 February 1889.

2. Perhaps Tillotson had asked WC for a story for Christmas 1889.

[2927] TO A. P. WATT, 7 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke, on a printed postcard.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 359.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
7th Feby 1889

My dear Watt,

I am mending very slowly, and still confined to my room. The enclosed has arrived from Hungary; you will see that it is a piracy of the "Legacy of Cain." I am afraid we have no remedy, but the thing ought perhaps to be shown to our friend with whom we are negotiating.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Except for the date, valediction, and signature, written in the hand of WC's elder daughter Marian.

2. The 'friend' negotiating for (presumably) the German translation right to 'The Lord Harry' remains unidentified, but in August Watt sold the right to what had by then become Blind Love through the NOPS Electrotpe Agency for £60 – see Law, 'Last Things', WCSJ, NS 1 (1998), p. 53. Watt replied on 9 February that he would try to stop the piracy, but doubted that it would have any bearing on the issue of German translation.

[2928] TO HALL CAINE, 10 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Manx (9542 GMFD 78), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 359–360.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

10th February 1889

Dear Hall Caine,

I am indeed glad to hear that all those obstacles and difficulties are set at rest – and I wish you with all my heart a great success on Tuesday next.<sup>2</sup>

My room still holds me, a most unwilling prisoner. I must submit as patiently as I can to two disappointments – to being absent from your box on the first night, and to losing the opportunity of being presented to Mrs Hall Caine.<sup>3</sup> All that the weather can do to keep back my recovery it does do.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Here is a memorandum to tell you about the little cigars.

Name: “Young Ladies”

Merchant. Messrs Van Raalte & Sons | Piccadilly | Circus

Packed in boxes | holding 100 each.

Same as those supplied to Wilkie Collins

“Love and Madness” is a true story. It is alluded to in Boswell’s “Johnson.”<sup>4</sup>

Pray let me hear after Tuesday if you are satisfied. Here is a letter, all postscripts! I have been taking Ether – and am “fuddled”!

---

1. Directed to ‘Hall Caine Esqr | Aberleigh Lodge | Bexley Heath | Kent’, postmarked on the following day.

2. The play Good Old Times, about the Australian penal settlements, by Hall Caine and Wilson Barrett, opening at the Princess’s Theatre on Tuesday 12 February 1889 at 7.45 PM. See the review in the Times of the following day, p. 5f, and also Allen, p. 192.

3. Mary Alice Caine née Chandler, then aged about 20, who had lived with Caine since 1882 when she was 13 and married him secretly in Scotland in 1886 at the age of 17, when Caine was 33 (Allen, pp. 153–154, 184).

4. The story of the murder of Martha Ray, lover of the Earl of Sandwich, by the young clergyman James Hackman, as recounted in Herbert Croft’s Love and Madness (1780), which makes extensive use of fictional letters between the lovers. According to James Boswell’s Life (1791), Samuel Johnson strongly disapproved of the book’s mixing of fact and fiction.

[2929] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 11 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Coleman, p. 335; BGLL, IV, pp. 360–361.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

11th February 1889

Dear Sirs,

During my illness some of the many letters I receive were mislaid – and yours has been, I regret to say, among the number. It has been recovered today – and I write at once to thank you, as well as to make my excuses, and to beg that you will send the 6 dozen pints of Champagne (which I shall gladly receive) to this house.<sup>2</sup>

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co

---

1. Directed to ‘Messrs Beecheno Yaxley & Co | 135. Minories | E.’.

2. Annotation above the monogram: ‘72 pints | inv<sup>d</sup> 30/12/87’.

[2930] TO A. P. WATT, 11 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 361.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

11th Feby 1889

My dear Watt,

Let me beg you not to take the trouble of writing to the Hungarian vagabond.<sup>1</sup> This would be indeed putting your kindness to bad use. My object in sending you the specimen (forwarded to me) was to ascertain if the interests of the German translation would be in any way affected by the Hungarian piracy. If there is no fear of this, let us dismiss the matter. We are unprotected in Austria–Hungary.

Pray come here as soon as it may be convenient. “I am kept in” as we used to say at school – but always glad to see you.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. See [2927] to Watt of 7 February 1889.

[3196] TO S. S. MCCLURE,<sup>1</sup> 12 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay, 20 February 2011, #130486573341, located Peterborough, New Hampshire, USA.
Published: A&C7, pp. 44–45.

82. WIMPOLE STREET | LONDON. W.

12th Feby 1889

Dear Sir,

I am confined to my room by illness – and I have forwarded your kind letter to my friend Mr A.P. Watt (of 2. Paternoster Square) who represents me in literary affairs, and to whom I beg to refer you on this occasion.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

S. S. McClure Esq

---

1. S. S. McClure, American publisher and syndicator; see [2869] to him, 7 July 1888

2. See [2931] to Watt, 12 February 1889.

[2931] TO A. P. WATT, 12 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke, on a printed card.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 361.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

12th Feby 1889

My dear Watt,

Just a line to say that I have found the Ingram agreement on my table, and that it shall be returned to you, with the Mss, on Saturday.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours [signature excised]

I have written to Mr McClure to say that I am ill and to refer him to my friend and representative. His letter is enclosed.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. With the foot cleanly cut away to excise the signature.

2. The agreement with the Illustrated London News, then owned by William and Charles Ingram. Watt’s reply to WC of 13 February reveals that he had accidentally left two agreements (presumably also that with John Dicks & Co) at the house when visiting on 12 February (Berg).

3. See [2869] of 7 July 1888 to S. S. McClure, founder of the American fiction syndication agency known as the Associated Literary Press – see Johanningsmeier, ch. 3.

[2932] TO A. P. WATT, 13 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke, on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 362.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
13th Feby 1889

My dear Watt,

Our letters have crossed. I send you the two agreements by today's registered letter-post – which is better than keeping them till Saturday here.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. See [2931] to Watt of the previous day. Here, WC writes on the Wednesday.

[2933] TO A. P. WATT, 14 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke, on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 362.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
14th Feby 1889

My dear Watt,

I have had an attack of angina this morning – not one of my very bad attacks, but enough to incapacitate me for working today, and so to delay finishing the weekly part.

I must ask for a day or two more before you communicate with Mr Dicks.<sup>1</sup> You shall hear of my progress on Monday.

Ever yours | WC

Many thanks for the “Book-Buyer”. Some separate proofs of the portrait have been sent to me from America.<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Presumably to inform him that the second third of the story was completed and the second payment thus due.

2. See [2934] of 19 February to Edward W. Bok, though the portrait in question remains untraced.

[2934] TO EDWARD W. BOK, 19 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: Lewis website; BGLL, IV, pp. 362–363.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
London. | 19th Feb. 1889

My dear Mr Bok

The copies of “The Book Buyer” which you have so kindly sent to me, together with the impressions of the portrait taken on specially fine paper, have reached me when the kindness of my friends is doubly valuable – that is to say, when I am confined to my room by illness.

I can only congratulate you (and myself) on the artistic manner in which the engraving has been executed. It is a delicate, refined, and lifelike reproduction of an excellent photograph – and is the best portrait of myself, from the graver's hand, that I have yet seen.

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

To Edward W. Bok Esq.

---

1. Written in the hand of Carrie Bartley and signed by WC.

[2935] TO A. P. WATT, 19 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke, in pencil on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 363.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
19th Feby 1889

My dear Watt,

My best thanks – better this morning. But not well enough yesterday to write.

Ever yours | WC

[2936] TO A. P. WATT, 20 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke, on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 363.

20th Feby 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Watt,

I have been able to get to work again today – and I hope to send you the complete second third of the MS. before the end of this week.<sup>1</sup>

I hear a report of the death of Tillotson (of Bolton). Is this our man?<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Of 'The Lord Harry' for Henry Dicks.

2. Shortly after returning from a business trip to New York, W. F. Tillotson contracted pneumonia and died suddenly at home on 19 February 1889 at the age of only forty-four, leaving more than £30,000 in his will; see the obituary notices in the Journalist of 22 February and 6 March 1889.

[2937] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 25 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Private, on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 363–364.

25th Feby 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Sebastian,

What has become of you for weeks past? You are not, I hope, still confined to the house of illness like me? It is nigh on a month since I have had fresh air and exercise. No more now! I must go on (luckily for me) with my work.

Affly yours | WC

[2938] TO A. P. WATT, 25 FEBRUARY 1889

MS: Pembroke, on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 364.

Monday 25th Feby 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Watt,

One of my servants is away, in attendance on a sick mother. Another is subject to fits. Can you kindly send a careful messenger here, at your own time tomorrow (Tuesday) for the second third of the story? <sup>1</sup> My "luck" is so dead against me that I am afraid of Parcel Post. A loss of the MS, and delay in re-copying, would mean delay in the payment which I view with horror!!!

I am getting on fairly well – and cudgelling my brains in search of the new story.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Of 'The Lord Harry' for Henry Dicks. Watt had replied on 21 February to [2936] of the day before, to say that, since he would be out of town from Friday to Monday, it would be better to wait until the Tuesday to send the manuscript (Berg).

2. The new serial for the Illustrated London News, due to commence in July, and for which subjects for the illustrator would soon be urgently required.

[2939] TO A. S. WATT, 1 MARCH 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 364–365.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

1st March 1889

Dear Mr Watt,

I am suffering so severely from the weather that I am only now able to thank you for the cheque from Mr Dicks, and to enclose my cheque for your father's commission. I sincerely hope that he is getting well again.<sup>1</sup>

I have also the pleasure of enclosing the receipt signed. It is needless to say that I shall be interested in hearing at what date it is proposed to begin the serial publication of "The Lord Harry"<sup>2</sup>

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

Please let me hear that the cheque has reached you safely.

A.S. Watt Esq.

---

1. A. S. Watt had written on 26 February to say that his father was now ill and to acknowledge receipt of the copy of 'The Lord Harry'. He had written again on 27 February enclosing the cheque from Henry Dicks for £333-6s-8d, the second instalment of the payment for 'The Lord Harry', credited to WC's bank account on 28 February. WC sends a cheque for £33-6s-8d, representing the 10% commission, duly debited from his bank account on 2 March (Coumts: WC). A. P. Watt himself acknowledged receipt of the cheque on his return to work on 1 March (Berg).

2. The old date at the end of 1888 having been passed over, a new date had presumably not yet been fixed. In his reply of 1 March A. P. Watt promised to meet Dicks as soon as possible and settle the question of the date of commencement of the serial (Berg).

[2940] TO A. P. WATT, 3 MARCH 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 365.

Sunday 3rd March 1889 | 82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Watt,

I am – most unwillingly – sorry to disappoint you. For a month, now, I have not been out of the house – and while this weather lasts, I have no prospect of getting my customary air and exercise. The result is that I cannot do my work regularly – and the doctor confirms me in the conviction that close application, week after week, to work will break me down. In Mr Ingram's own interests we must ask him to let my story be deferred – and I must, when I do get out, stick to "The Lord Harry", and finish that. Pecuniary necessity obliges me to look to the serial publication in this autumn – so that the book may come out during the present year.<sup>1</sup> Don't suppose that I am not able to think and invent. This disappointment is the more severe because I have got a really admirable idea for the new book. It is another "Moonstone" – and yet as different from the old "Moonstone" as one book can well be to another.<sup>2</sup> But the regular application to carrying out my inventions day by day is what I cannot do in my present state of nervous prostration. Will you come and see me as soon as you can? It is a hard trial of fortitude to write this.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. In the event there was no need to defer the serial for Ingram, since, as [2941] to him of 7 March indicates, Watt seems to have succeeded in putting back the arrangements with Dicks so that 'The Lord Harry' could serve as the story for the Illustrated London News.

2. This idea for a new Moonstone was of course never carried out.

[2941] TO A. P. WATT, 7 MARCH 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 366.

7th March 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Watt,

You are not a man – you are simply an angel. I was just thinking of the "Synopsis", and making up my mind that I would infinitely prefer writing a novel to writing a Synopsis, when your delightful letter arrived, and was read with feelings of gratitude and relief which your friendly kindness will understand, I am sure.<sup>1</sup>

Was I not right when I declared you to be a born diplomatist? No other man would have felt that inspiration. The names of Talleyrand and Watt are now united in my mind. As for your dialogue, I shall ask you to help me with the last third of “The Lord Harry”.<sup>2</sup>

No more nonsense! You have done me the greatest of services – you have made my mind easy.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written on 4 and 5 March, called on the 7 March, and written again the same day (Berg). The upshot was that, since Henry Dicks had yet not taken any steps to sell WC’s ‘The Lord Harry’ on to other journals, he was happy to forego publication and accept WC’s next novel instead – a novel that, of course, was never written. William Ingram of the Illustrated London News had then agreed to take ‘The Lord Harry’ for publication in the second half of 1889, and to write a cheque for £666-13s-4d, to cover the payment for the first two-thirds of the story already purchased by Dicks. (The first payment from Dicks of £333-6s-8d had been credited to WC’s bank account on 14 December 1888, with the £33-6s-8d commission paid to Watt on 15 December (Coutts: WC). Regarding the second payment, see [2939] to A. S. Watt of 1 March 1889.) WC was thus no longer under pressure to produce a synopsis of a new story for the Illustrated London News, from which the illustrator could draw appropriate subjects.

2. In his letter of 7 March Watt had reproduced in detail his conversation with William Ingram, commenting: ‘From the preceding attempt at dialogue you will see that whatever I am good for, I could not at any rate write a novel!’. The following paragraph makes clear that the request to Watt for assistance in the composition of the final part of the serial is made in jest.

[2942] TO THOMAS DE WITT TALMAGE,<sup>1</sup> 8 MARCH 1889

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: B&C, II, pp. 562–563.

8th March 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.<sup>2</sup> | London

Dear Doctor Talmage

The winter climate of England in the /year/ 1889, has tempted gentlemen of British birth, who have reached the wrong side of sixty, to regret their nationality, and to envy the happy lot of the African savage, who lives under a nice warm sun, and has never heard of brochitis and neuralgia. In these morbid sentiments pray find my excuse for a shamefully late acknowledgment of your kindness. I should be insensible indeed if I did not take the first opportunity which illness has conceded to me of heartily thanking you for the magnificent addition which you have made to my library. [del] If I failed to feel the compliment to myself which is implied by your gift, I should be travelling blindfold along “The Pathway of Life.”<sup>3</sup>

It would an act of presumption, on my part, if I attempted to write critically of such a book as your’s [sic]. But I may be allowed to mention the impression produced on me by what I have read, thus far. Your work is especially interesting to me in this respect – that it reveals the secret of the widely-extended influence which you exercise over those who hear you and read you. In the pulpit and out of the pulpit, the man who knows what to say, and how to say it, is a man in a thousand – so far as my experience extends. Turn to what pages I may, I find this rare gift in useful action all through your volume – and I especially value the frank and friendly tone in which a large-minded and tolerant Christianity [del] addresses itself to readers of all ways of thinking. The wise words which tell married people how to bear with each /other,/ and to help each other, under the trials and troubles of their lives – and, again, the admirable pages which prove that the conditions of happiness do not depend on social position – are among many other examples that I might quote of your value as a teacher of the people who never forgets that he is always the peoples’ friend.

I might well say more than this – but six weeks of imprisonment in the house interfere a little, I find, with the free movement of my old friend the pen. When I have asked you to accept the congratulations on the completion of your work, my letter – such as it is! – reaches its end.

Believe me, vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins
The Revd. | T. De Witt Talmage. D.D.

---

1. Thomas De Witt (or, DeWitt) Talmage (1832–1902), minister of the Reformed Church famed for oratory, whose The Pathway of Life. A Book for the Home was published at Richmond, Virginia by B.F. Johnson & Co. in 1889.
2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.
3. Curiously, the volume was not found in WC's library at his death (Baker).

[2943] TO A. P. WATT, 9 MARCH 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 367.

9th March 1889
82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Watt,

Here is a letter overlooked while I was ill, with my answer to it. Some smart practice on the part of the late Tillotson may possibly be involved here.<sup>1</sup> If you think it worth while to investigate the matter – then let my letter please go to the post. In the other event – the waste-paper basket.

But I have a little more good news to tell, relating to “The Lord Harry”. The first weekly part was counted for me last night – and proved to contain no less than six thousand words! The parts that follow, mostly fill the same number of pages – so here is more work done already than we ever bargained for. Instead of 13 weekly parts, we shall have 15 or 16, by my reckoning.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Has the late T. been selling to America – not only the serial rights of my story – but the right of republication in book-form? At present, we don't even know whether “The Legacy of Cain” is, or is not, the novel alluded to

---

1. Bound in the Pembroke volumes preceding [2939] to A. S. Watt of 1 March, is a typed letter dated 26 February 1889 and signed W. Balestier (Charles Wolcott Balestier (1861–91), publishing agent) on behalf of the New York publisher Lovell, to whom Tillotson had sold advance sheets of an unnamed novel (in fact The Legacy of Cain). Lovell offered ex gratia royalties on the sales of his edition of the novel once the payment to Tillotson had been cleared. WC's complaint here and in the postscript was strictly unjustified, since the agreement gave Tillotson the unconditional right to sell advance sheets of the novel in the United States.

2. WC was now beginning the task of reworking the existing copy of ‘The Lord Harry’ for serialization in the Illustrated London News. On 8 March Watt had written to WC enclosing the manuscript of the first thirteen instalments, which he had received back from Henry Dicks (Berg), and which needed to be revised according to the rather different serialization requirements of the Illustrated London News. The Dicks agreement had specified twenty instalments of 5,200 words, whereas the Ingram agreement required twenty-six instalments of at least 4,000 words.

[2944] TO NUNN,<sup>1</sup> 12 MARCH 1889

MS: Norfolk (UPC 269 Box 643 X 7), on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 368.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
12 March 1889

Dear Nunn,

I have been confined to the house by illness – and I am still a prisoner, needless to say that I would otherwise have gladly voted for your friend.

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Neither Nunn nor the election in question have been identified.

[2945] TO A. P. WATT, 19 MARCH 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

19th March 1889

My dear Watt,

Yes – better[,] thank you, because I am able to get out for a walk. Working hard at the revision of the Mss – which is a far more troublesome affair than I had anticipated. But I shall have three more weekly parts ready in the present week – making six parts in all, delivered to the “News” in advance of the date mentioned by the agreement.<sup>1</sup>

If you are not too busy to spare me half an hour at our usual time, I want very much to consult you about the sale of my copyrights. Your advice will be invaluable to me.<sup>2</sup>

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC continues to rework the existing copy of ‘The Lord Harry’. Watt had written on 18 March, inquiring after WC’s health and wanting to know when to expect more instalments for the Illustrated London News.

2. Watt replied on 20 March, promising to call about the matter on either Thursday 21 or Friday 22 March (Berg). Another meeting was arranged concerning the matter on Saturday 30 March (see Watt’s letter to WC of 29 March, Berg). See [2950] to Watt of 5 April concerning the results of the consultations.

[3015] TO [COUTTS & CO.],<sup>1</sup> 1875 -22 MARCH 1889<sup>2</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>3</sup> Published: Lewis website; A&C2, p. 68.

Pay to the order of | Naylor & Co | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The order to pay is most likely to have been made through WC’s London bankers.

2. The period during WC’s American life insurance policies were held by the firm of Naylor & Co. in the United States (see [1422] to Charles Ward of 27 February 1874). WC’s bank account records the earliest payment on 9 April 1875 and the latest on 22 March 1889 which specifies the date range (Coutts: WC).

3. On a torn scrap of tissue-paper; this may be a carbon copy from a company letter-book rather than the original manuscript.

[2946] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 27 MARCH 1889

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/95), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 563–564.

27th March 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.<sup>2</sup> | London

S. E. B.<sup>3</sup>

The one gleam of good fortune left to brighten my damnable Destiny is accurately described in those three letters, encircled by a pen and ink halo. I have never recovered my six weeks of confinement to the house. Saturated with bile – racked by neuralgia (in the face, this time), I am incapable of taking advantage of one more of those many acts of kindness on your part, which I shall remember gratefully to the end of my days. This morning, there is a cloudless sky – a splendid sun – and I have as much chance of “finding the longitude” or “squaring the circle” as I have of going out for a drive. And with a pretty woman too!<sup>4</sup> A handkerchief covers my right [del] cheek – an abscess is forming in my [del] mouth, [del] which contains hot laudanum and water, and is dumb to the utterance of Love. Add to this that I am obliged to put off writing one of my two proposed novels, and to sell my copyrights<sup>5</sup> – and you have me complete, with one subject of consolation, which ends – as it has begun – my letter:

S. E. B.

Let me see you as soon as you return – and let us get drunk together.<sup>6</sup>

---

1. Directed in Harriet Bartley’s hand to ‘Sebastian B. Schlesinger, Esq. | Orisons End | 29 King Street| S’ James’s| London’, though the address has been erased and ‘45 Albert Gate | S.W.’ written diagonally beneath in WC’s own hand. The postmark is illegible.

2. Printed address with monogram.

3. WC writes these enigmatic initials, clearing intended to indicate Schlesinger himself, in large Gothic letters and circles them with a looping line, repeating the device at the foot of the second page.

4. Presumably Mrs Sherman.

5. See [2941] to A.P. Watt of 7 March 1889 and [2948] to Andrew Chatto of 2 April 1889.

6. WC doesn't sign his letter, and this postscript is written diagonally across the third page.

[2947] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 27 MARCH 1889

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 369.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

27th March 1889

My dear Chatto,

After signing agreements with proprietors of periodicals to write two new works of fiction, failing health has obliged me to postpone the fulfilment of one of my engagements.<sup>1</sup> This means, of course, a present loss of money – and I find myself obliged to sell my copyrights.

I am – as I hope I need hardly say – sincerely anxious to transfer my rights to you and to your firm. When you wrote to me, some little time since, you kindly proposed to purchase my copyrights. After due consideration, I estimated their value at a rather higher price than the price offered by you.<sup>2</sup>

Before I mention the subject to anyone else, will you allow me to open our negotiation, and to ask if there is any chance of our agreeing in the matter of terms?

I should add that nearly two thirds of my new novel are now completed, and that the work will make its serial appearance in the “The Illustrated London News”, in July next, on the conclusion of Mr Rider Haggard’s story.<sup>3</sup> This novel I should propose to include in the sale of my copyrights.<sup>4</sup>

Believe me | always truly yours | WC

Andrew Chatto Esqre

---

1. See [2940] and [2941] to A. P. Watt of 3 and 7 March 1889.

2. See [2830] to Chatto of 23 April 1888.

3. Cleopatra, running from 5 January to 19 June 1889 – see VFRG, 29.

4. Andrew Chatto seems to have responded to WC’s proposal by calling round at Wimpole Street the following day. At Reading there is a memorandum signed by Andrew Chatto on 28 March 1889 of an offer to WC of £1,800 for residual rights to his published novels, plus £500 for those to the new novel.

[2948] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 2 APRIL 1889

MS: Reading. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 369–370.

2nd April 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Chatto,

I am willing to accept the £1800 which you offer for my copyrights, on this condition – that the method of payment can be altered, in my interests. As I now understand the terms of payment offered by you, when you kindly called here the other day,<sup>1</sup> I should be kept waiting until January next before I received the complete sum of £1800. Circumstances will not permit me to give such long credit as this.

The following is the arrangement that I propose:

Payment to be made in three promissory notes for six hundred pounds each, at three months, four months, and six months dates.

Will you consider this, and let me know the result at your earliest convenience?<sup>2</sup>

With regard to the novel on which I am now engaged, I wish, on further consideration, to withdraw it from our negotiation until it is finished – and then, it is needless to add, to offer you the first refusal of the work, if you buy my copyrights<sup>3</sup>

Believe me | always truly yours | Wilkie Collins
Andrew Chatto Esq

---

1. See the note to [2947] to Chatto of 27 March 1889.

2. Andrew Chatto must have responded promptly and positively to this suggestion. The formal agreement, dated 2 April 1889 and now found at Reading, follows the method of payment suggested by WC in spirit if not to the letter. (There were six bills at £300 rather than three at £600, which gave WC more flexibility in discounting them, and the due dates were as requested.) On 3 April ‘2 Bills discounted’ totalling £600 were credited to WC’s bank account on 3 April, with a corresponding discount payment to Couatts of £8-9s-4d on the same date (Couatts: WC). The agreement concerns the sale of WC’s residual interests in twenty-four works from Antonina to The Legacy of Cain. See the transcript at BGLL, IV, Appendix B, p. 399.

3. The formal publishing agreement with Chatto & Windus for the novel that would soon be known as Blind Love was in fact completed only after WC’s death, by A. P. Watt as his literary executor. Dated 30 September 1889 and now found at Reading, it sold the copyright of the novel (with the usual reservations) for £500.

[2949] TO GEORGINA HOGARTH, 2 APRIL 1889

MS: Illinois. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 370–371.

2nd April 1889
82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Georgina.

My only apology for not having written to you before this is, that I have had a relapse – and have been again confined to the house. I am hoping to get out again for a little while to-day.

Your former interview with Mr Chatto had – I am ashamed to say – escaped my memory when I last wrote.<sup>1</sup> It will be, I feel sure, quite useless to address any second proposal to him – with the obstacle of Mr Chapman’s statement of accounts in the way.

I have consulted my friend and literary agent, Mr Watt, in your interests. He is kindly willing to try how far his experience may be able to help you (making no charge for his services), if you will send to him a copy of the “Letters”.

There are, if I remember correctly, two editions of the Letters<sup>2</sup> – it might be as well in this case to send a copy of each edition, if copies remain on hand of each edition – and it will be certainly advisable to make Mr Watt confidentially acquainted with the present state of the sale as related in Mr Chapman’s letter to you.<sup>3</sup>

Believe me my dear Georgina | Always affly yours | Wilkie Collins
The address is: | A. P. Watt Esqre | 2. Paternoster Square | E. C.

---

1. WC’s previous letter to Georgina Hogarth has not been traced, but [2507] to Andrew Chatto of 7 December 1885 mentions the arrangement of the original interview with CD’s sister-in-law.

2. The Letters of Charles Dickens, edited by Georgina Hogarth and Mamie Dickens, had originally appeared in 1880 from Chapman & Hall in two volumes, covering the years 1833–56 and 1857–70. A third volume of additional letters from 1836 to 1870 was issued in 1882. In the same year the same publishers issued a new edition with all the letters in chronological order, in two volumes uniform with the Charles Dickens Edition of his works. The edition in three volumes was found in WC’s library (Baker 2002, p. 100).

3. The sales were clearly poor. In the event, the first single-volume edition of CD’s letters did not appear until 1893 from Macmillan.

[2950] TO A. P. WATT, 5 APRIL 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 371–372.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
5th April 1889<sup>1</sup>

My dear Watt,

By this morning's registered book post I send to you weekly parts 7, 8, and 9 of "The Lord Harry."<sup>2</sup> I am late – but at 2 o'clock every day (just when I want to go on working) I am hunted out for health and exercise, and the weekly parts, this time, have required more re-writing than I bargained for.

You will be glad, I know, to hear that your excellent advice about the copyrights has been answered with complete success. Chatto came in on the second of the month, with the promissory notes at 3, 4, and 6 months. We signed and shook hands – and my bankers have got my Notes, and the 3 months document is discounted already.<sup>3</sup> Nothing remains to be done but to thank you most heartily for your friendly help and good will to

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The letter in fact bears Watt's stamp on the back: 'RECEIVED | 4 APR. 89 | ANS.', but there seems no reason to distrust WCs dating of the letter here.

2. Watt had acknowledged receipt of parts 5 and 6 on 26 March, and acknowledged receipt of this new batch on 5 April (Berg).

3. See the agreement with Chatto of 2 April 1889, at Reading, confirming the purchase of the residual copyrights on twenty-four of WC's novels for £1,800.

[2951] TO WALTER BESANT,<sup>1</sup> 12 APRIL 1889

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 372.

12th April 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Walter Besant,

I gladly sign the petition – and I most sincerely hope that a pension so well deserved will be a pension granted.<sup>2</sup>

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Walter Besant (1836–1901: ODNB), novelist, founder of the Society of Authors in 1884 and editor of the Author from 1890, who on WC's death was to complete his unfinished serial Blind Love.

2. Referring to the proposal to provide a Civil List pension for Lillie Rice née Dickinson, widow of James Rice (1844–82: ODNB). Rice collaborated with Besant on a series of novels, including Ready-money Mortiboy (1872) and The Golden Butterfly (1876). Lillie had married Rice in Dublin at the age of sixteen, and his untimely death left her a widow with a ten-year-old son at the age of only twenty-seven. A memorial petition had recently been submitted, requesting a Civil List pension for her.

[2952] TO A. P. WATT, 12 APRIL 1889

MS: Pembroke, on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 372–373.

Friday 12th April 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Watt,

I had to send to Coutts's today – so I took the opportunity of saving you trouble and sent copy to the Illustrated News office by the same messenger. They have now got weekly parts 10, 11, 12, and 13 – the first half of the MS. I have also returned three weekly parts, in proof, corrected for press. So we are well in advance – and I am going to take a day or two of rest. Weekly parts 14, 15, 16, and a beginning of 17 are the surplus (between ourselves) left by my over-writing of the original MS.<sup>1</sup> Some of the parts reached close on 7000 words!!! Nothing that I have sent in is shorter than 4000 and some parts reach 5000 – so I hope the proprietors will be satisfied.<sup>2</sup>

Excepting those two foggy days I have got out regularly – and tomorrow I am off (weather permitting) at 1.30 – to get the best of the day, and dine out on oysters.

Ever yours | WC

1. Since the serial was completed by Walter Besant from the nineteenth instalment onwards, this implies that WC produced little new copy for the story after the beginning of March.
2. Recalling Tillotson's complaints of short supply in the case of The Evil Genius, WC makes sure that all the instalments are above the contracted quantity of 4,000 words. The eking out of copy of WC's last and finally uncompleted novel was clearly a desperate business.

[2953] TO BEECHENO, YAXLEY & CO., 25 APRIL 1889

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 336. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 373.

25th April 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

Dear Sirs,

I have the pleasure of enclosing my cheque for the excellent Champagne with which you have supplied me (£13..7..-).

With thanks for your kind interest in my health, which I am glad to say is improving,

Believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

Messrs Beecheno, Yaxley & Co

-
1. Debited to WC's bank account on 29 April as 'Beecheno & Co' (Coutts: WC).

[2954] TO WALTER BESANT, 25 APRIL 1889

MS: Texas (Ms Letters, W. Collins). Published: Coleman, p. 337; BGLL, IV, pp. 373–374.

25th April 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Walter Besant,

The enclosed letter (relating to Mrs Rice) reached me this morning.<sup>1</sup> If I remember correctly, my signature to the memorial happened to be the first which would catch the eye of an official person in a hurry – and under this mistake Mr W. H. Smith's answer has been sent to me.<sup>2</sup>

I have not written to Mr Maude to point out the error that has been committed,<sup>3</sup> because I am only one of the literary men who wish well to the cause and show it by signing their names. You are our leading spirit and our director in this matter – and yours is the pen to represent us at "10 Downing Street."

If you ever hear who the "Legislator" was who closed the pension list against novelists and their widows ("unless historical"!!!) my idea is to apply to him for his photograph. A portrait of a person taking so high a rank on the list of mischievous ideots<sup>4</sup> would be an object of interest to

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Referring to Lillie, the widow of James Rice, Besant's former – see [2954] to Besant of 25 April 1889.

2. William Henry Smith (1825–91: ODNB), son of the railway newsagent, from 1868 Conservative MP and, from 1886, First Lord of the Treasury and Leader of the House of Commons under Lord Salisbury. As First Lord of the Treasury (a post normally occupied by the Prime Minister), Smith was then the occupant of 10 Downing Street rather than the Prime Minister, Lord Salisbury.

3. Charles J. Maude, one of two private secretaries to Smith as First Lord of the Treasury (see the Times, 15 January 1887, p. 9d).

4. The Times report on the fifth annual dinner of the Society of Authors (6 July 1889, p. 6e) included the following remarks: 'Correspondence has been carried on between the Society of Authors, Mr. W. H. Smith, and Mr. Gladstone with regard to the administration of Civil List pensions. It appears a few months ago an appeal was made to the First Lord of the Treasury that a certain person might be placed on the Civil Pension List. Mr. Smith replied, writing to Mr. Wilkie Collins as a representative of the applicants, that there were regulations against the grant of pensions to writers of novels (unless historical). Mr. Gladstone was then consulted, and he replied that he knew of no such rule. The society at their next meeting passed a resolution protesting against the exclusion of any class of literary, scientific, or artistic production from a claim on the Royal beneficence, and urging that the regulations governing the administration of the fund should be made public.’

[2955] TO A. P. WATT, 25 APRIL 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 374–375.

25th April 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Watt,

Here is a proposal which seems to me to be a little deficient in the matter of “ready money”. From my present French translator I get £60...- when the translation has been published in a Parisian newspaper. The only drawback is that a long, long time elapses before the translation appears. I hear nothing as yet of the serial appearance in French of The Legacy of Cain.

Is it desirable, do you think, to stipulate for a payment of money as a guarantee of good faith – mentioning that I am in the habit of receiving a cheque for the right to translate into French? [erasures and blots] The terms to remain otherwise as M. Rosez suggests? Or would it be wiser to thank him, and say that my engagements with translators will not permit me to profit by the proposal? I have only written to M. Rosez to say that my literary affairs are entirely in your hands – and that I have sent his letter to you.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | WC

Bless me with your advice!

Excuse the blots

---

1. A. S. Watt replied on 26 April to the effect that his father would be out of town until the following Tuesday, 30 April. A. P. Watt himself wrote on 1 May advising that Rosez’s offer to translate WC’s recent fiction into French should be rejected (Berg). See also [2956] to Andrew Chatto of 2 May. WC’s letter to Rosez has not been traced.

[2956] TO ANDREW CHATTO, 2 MAY 1889

MS: Parrish (Box 4/17), on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 375.

2nd May 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Chatto

If M. Rosez will apply to Hachette & C<sup>ie</sup> Paris, he will find 18 volumes of French translations of my books and “Je Dis Non” among them – (published in 1888) – and will not trouble you again, I hope, as volunteer translator. The same day which brought me your note,<sup>1</sup> brought a note from a German Female Doctor wanting to translate “Heart and Science” (already translated of course!). I felt inclined to adopt a religious point of view in my answer, and tell her to “go to hell”. But even when a woman is a doctor, she is a woman still. I will therefore give you a sentiment: Hooray for the privileges of the sex!

Ever yours | WC

P.S | As to M. Rosez’s terms – I received (between ourselves) £60.- for the right of translating “I Say No” into French.

M. Rosez wants to translate the book I am now writing – and offers 75 percent on the publishers’ profits! What a liberal Rosez!

---

1. Andrew Chatto had written concerning Rosez’s approach on 1 May 1889 (Reading). In offering to translate WC’s fiction into French, Monsieur Rosez had written not only via WC’s publishers but also directly to the author himself – see [2955] to Watt of 25 April 1889.

[2957] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 2 MAY 1889

2nd May 1889
82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.<sup>1</sup>

My dear Sebastian,

Welcome back to London! You have had a delightful holiday I am sure – with only one drawback. The dear delightful dirty old houses in the Jews' Street at Frankfurt have been tumbled down by Time and Government in these later years.<sup>2</sup> I say (what nobody ever says) “Alas!”

No – my dear friend – there is nothing surprising in that letter. I have said it to you, I have written it to you – She never has, and never will forgive you.<sup>3</sup> You now have her own acknowledgment of that state of mind in this last letter. I hope and trust you have not answered it. And, what is more, I advise you not to write to her again. Decide on a certain yearly allowance to be made to her – paid quarterly. Write on that occasion to announce your decision – and show the Dft of your letter to your lawyer, before you let me look at it. You will very likely receive a penitent letter – perhaps a “heart-~~rending~~” letter. Don't answer! If you feel softened, look at the letter which I return herewith – ~~and~~ and say to yourself – “There's her mind, stripped for my private view.” I have had between 40 and 50 years experience of women of all sorts and sizes. You have the result.<sup>4</sup>

I am afraid I shall not be in the right state of stomach and liver for that supper on the 12th. But pray come here before it, ~~if~~ if you can. A note or telegram to say when – and I shall not be out trying to walk off Bile, Bile, Bile – when you come here. Your time is my time.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. WC uses a printed postcard with his monogram, above which he writes the date.

2. The Frankfurter Judengasse, as featured in Jezebel's Daughter (1880), see Gasson & Baker, pp. 192–194.

3. That is, Berthe Schlesinger, who had discovered her husband's relationship with Mrs Sherman.

4. Schlesinger seems generally to have followed WC's advice – see [2958] to him of 4 May 1889.

[2958] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 4 MAY 1889

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363(71)). Published: B&C, II, p. 565.

4th May
82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.<sup>1</sup>

My dear Sebastian,

In your place, I should begin my letter with the paragraph on the 2nd ~~page~~ page: “Hitherto, I have taken Louise into Consideration &c”<sup>2</sup>

What you have written before that, ~~only~~ only tells her that she ~~shall~~ has succeeded in stinging you. You say yourself, “I dont wish to discuss that.” Then why discuss it? Never answer an angry woman – when you do not possess the advantage of being a woman yourself. The rest of the letter seems to me to be excellent – just what was wanted.

I write giddy with bile. I wrote this time in a hurry.

Ever yours | WC

The income you propose to settle on her is almost lavish in its generosity – over £700 a year(!) I shall be curious to see in what tone she writes to you, after that.

---

1. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

2. Louise remains unidentified, though this may well be the given name of Shlesinger's lover, Mrs Sherman; Shlesinger's wife was named Berthe, and his two daughters Lily and Berthe.

[2959] TO HALL CAINE, 20 MAY 1889

MS: Manx (9542 GMFD 72), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 376.

20th May 1889
82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W. | London

My dear Hall Caine,

Forgive this late reply to your friendly letter. I am hard at work – with ill health against me, and nothing but native obstinacy in my favour. When the pen is laid down, enter the doctor: “Go out! Why are you not getting air and exercise.” He is quite right about air and exercise, and out I go. In a wholesome state of fatigue, I return – and look at arrears of letters, and feel the importance of answering them, and get no farther than that. Some of my happiest hours in the afternoon are hours passed in “deliberate neglect of the duties of life”. So come here when you are next in London, and tell me what you are doing. And let me hear when, by note or telegram, so that I may be sure of not missing you. Is it a new play? Or a new novel? I am sorely in want of a new novel to read which shall be also a work of art.

If Mr Campbell will kindly give me a little time I will gladly write and make an appointment with him.<sup>2</sup> I have made a memorandum of his address – and I only wait until I can be surer than I feel now of the capacity to keep an appointment. Yesterday I had six hours of what is medically called “nervous indigestion” – without the consolation of knowing that I had deserved it.

Ever truly yours, | Wilkie Collins

-
1. Initialled and directed to ‘Hall Caine Esqr | Aberleigh Lodge | Bexley Heath | Kent’, postmarked as dated.
  2. Unidentified, but perhaps a physician.

[2960] TO W. G. COLLINGS,<sup>1</sup> 20 MAY 1889

MS: Illinois. Extract: Davis, p. 302 (as to ‘W. S. Collins’, p. 335 n. 40). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 377.

20th May 1889
82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W. | London

Dear Sir,

My evidence on the subject mentioned in the letter with which you have honoured me is soon stated.

I have been writing novels for the last five and thirty years, and I have been regularly in the habit of relieving the weariness which follows on work of the brain – declared by George Sand to be the more depressing of all forms of mortal fatigue – by dry champagne at one time, and by brandy and water (old Cognac) at another. If I live until January next, I shall be sixty six years old – and I am writing another work of fiction. There is my experience.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

P.S. | Pray excuse an unavoidable delay in writing this reply.

W.G. Collings Esqr

-
1. Unidentified, though we should note a similar reply to a query from Collings by George Meredith on 5 May 1887, who suggested that ‘the notion of drinking any kind of alcohol as a stimulant for intellectual work, can have entered the minds of those only who snatch at the former that they may conceive a fictitious execution of the latter’ – see Letters of George Meredith, ed. William Maxse Meredith (London: Constable, 1912), II, p. 396. Note also the earlier request to WC from A. Arthur Reade (see [2016] to him of 10 February 1882), who also required information on the use of stimulants.

[2961] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 24 MAY 1889

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/41), on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 377–378.

24th May 1889
82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Sebastian,

There seems to be fatality in the way of my dining with you. After that delightful drive had done me the greatest good, and had given me a sound night's rest, the thunderous heat of yesterday afternoon completely prostrated me. When I telegraphed to you, I was on the sofa with a blinding headache, and a sensation of sickness which made the bare idea of eating dreadful to contemplate. I had no alternative but to disappoint myself and to fail you. You will let me try again when Pigott dines with you? (if I am alive at the time).

Let me thank you for the album of your songs. Charmingly got up! Some of the illustrations so pleased me that I wanted to know the artist's name. His initials did not satisfy me.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours WC

---

1. Presumably Schlesinger's collection of compositions, An Album of Eight Songs (London: S. Lucas, Weber & Co., 1889). The songs are: 'The Sleepy little Sister'; 'Play while you play'; 'The Song of the Night' by J. Buckham; 'The Woodcock and the Sparrow' by A. Brennan; 'My little Sister'; 'Seven' by E. V. Blake; 'Wake, Darling, wake!'; and 'My fairest Child' by C. Kingsley. The illustrator has not been identified.

[2962] TO HENRY D. PIGOTT, 13 JUNE 1889

MS: Huntington (Pigott Coll. Box 3, loose), on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 378.

13th June 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Henry,

Delighted to see you and Uncle Ted on Tuesday 18th to pot luck – hour 8. I will ask Sebastian to join us.<sup>1</sup> Dont [sic] speak of the weather. I cannot allude to it without swearing.

The lobsters have arrived in the sweetest state. I begin to believe you are not Henry Pigott, but a "fairy Godmother".

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Sebastian Schlesinger.

[2963] TO A. P. WATT, 15 JUNE 1889

MS: Pembroke, on a printed card. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 378.

Saturday 15th June | 82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Watt – No, my dear Good Genius, my best thanks for your good news – and for the friendly remembrance of me which has produced that good news. My mind is at ease now in the matter of the illustrations<sup>1</sup> – and this at a time when my liver is troubling me again, and my rate of work is suffering accordingly. Come here at your own time – and be doubly welcome.

Ever yours | WC

---

1. Watt had written on 14 June to say that the distinguished illustrator G. A. Forestier would provide the drawings for the Illustrated London News (Berg). Several letters from WC to Watt from around this time appear to have been lost. The relevant Berg letter-book shows Watt writing many letters to WC, to most of which WC seems to have responded. The topics raised include: changing the title of the serial from 'The Lord Harry' to 'Blind Love', following a complaint from the Illustrated London News that the former 'savours of swearing' (3, 6, [8?] and 11 May); the preparation of a brief paragraph describing the new serial for provincial newspapers like the Newcastle Weekly Chronicle and Weekly Scotsman which had purchased the right to carry the story from the Illustrated London News through Watt (20, 23 and 25 May); signing a petition (3 June); and signing the form registering the serial publication of Blind Love at Stationers' Hall (19 June).

[2964] TO MRS BEIT,<sup>1</sup> 21 JUNE 1889

MS: Parrish (Box 4/13). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 379.

21st June 1889
82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

Dear Mrs Beit,

Let me beg you to accept my best thanks for your kind letter.

I accept with the greatest pleasure the invitation with which you have honoured me for Sunday the 30th, at 8 o'Clock.

Believe me, dear Mrs Beit | most truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Possibly Laura Beit, the mother of the unmarried financier and philanthropist Alfred Beit (1853–1906: ODNB), who was born in Hamburg and made his fortune in the diamond fields of South Africa. Beit made his headquarters in London in July 1888.

[2965] TO WILLIAM WINTER, 27 JUNE 1889

MS: Folger (1057 Yc588/5a–b), on a printed card, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 379.

Thursday 27th June
82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Winter,

I am doubly sorry. Sorry to hear that you are ill. Sorry to miss you tonight. An old friend wants me, and I said Yes, on the chance that my other old friend could choose some other day than Thursday. I assumed that you were dining, supping, visiting – and that I should have to wait my turn while the popular and healthful Willie Winter was enjoying his London. Do come tomorrow (Friday) – and if there is anything in the way of invalid diet that you want, let us hear and we will supply it. Excepting Sunday evening next,<sup>2</sup> I have no engagements – so choose your day once more, if Friday will not unhappily do. I will make no more engagements till I see you.

Affly yours | WC

N.B. Some good champagne for invalids in this house.

---

1. Initialled and directed to 'William Winter Esqre | Haxell's Hotel | Strand | W.C', postmarked as dated.
2. See [2964] to Mrs Beit of 21 June.

[2966] TO WILLIAM HOLMAN HUNT, 28 JUNE 1889

MS: Huntington (HH 108). Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 379–380.

28 June 1889
82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

Dear Holman,

The heat has driven me away from London for some days – and I am only now able to thank you for your letter.

I am longing to see your picture – but I must ask you to make my excuses to Mrs Holman Hunt on the 6 July. In the week that follows this date I shall be in London again, if all goes well with me – and then I will write again, and ask on what day I may see "May Morning".<sup>1</sup>

Affly yours | Wilkie Collins<sup>2</sup>

---

1. The religious allegory 'May Morning on Magdalen Tower', completed and exhibited in 1890.
2. A pencilled note in an unknown hand on the integral leaf observes: 'Three days before last illness'. WC suffered a stroke on 30 June.

[2967] CARRIE BARTLEY TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 7 JULY 1889

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/99). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 380.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
7th July 1889

Dear sir

The opportunity of telling Mr Collins you had called offered itself; and he was very pleased, and when you come again he would like to see you.

Yours faithfully | H. Bartley

[2968] CARRIE BARTLEY TO MARY ELIZABETH BRADDON,<sup>1</sup> 21 JULY 1889

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 380–381.

82. Wimpole Street. | Cavendish Square | July 21. 1889

Dear Mrs Maxwell,

Wilkie bids me send you a few lines to say he thought it so kind of you to call and inquire after him. He is certainly stronger in himself – but the Paralysis has affected his brain I grieve to tell you; and I beg you kindly not to mention this sad circumstance as we hope it is not generally known. It is a terrible shock – to see such a wonderful genius struck down in an instant. He is more composed than he was – he talks so – a kind of “reminiscences” and it makes your heart ache to see & hear him.

I shall have the pleasure of writing again shortly to inform you of Wilkie’s progress – I know he will wish such an esteemed friend as yourself to hear.

Believe me | Yours sincerely | H.E. Bartley (nee Graves)

---

1. The novelist Mary Elizabeth Braddon, under her married name. Braddon’s touching reply to this letter is found at Texas – see Peters, p. 429.

[2969] TO A. P. WATT, 26 AUGUST 1889

MS: Pembroke.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 565–566 (incomplete); BGLL, IV, p. 381.

26th August 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

My dear Watt

My daughter’s hand thanks you with all my heart for your most welcome and friendly letter.<sup>2</sup> Your good son’s help has been rendered to me in the kindest manner.<sup>3</sup> My good friends encourage me to get better, and the doctor is content with my progress. Pray tell Walter Besant that his ready and valued help has been offered to a grateful brother in the Art<sup>4</sup> – and let me sign myself now that I can write a little again,

Yours afftly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Apart from the valediction and signature, letter written in the hand of WC’s elder daughter Marian. A pencilled note at the top of the letter in A. P. Watt’s hand reads: ‘The last letter from my friend’.

2. Not found in the letter-books at the Berg.

3. A. S. Watt, who has consulted with Walter Besant.

4. On Besant’s willingness to complete Blind Love, then running in the Illustrated London News, see Peters, pp. 429–30.

[2970] TO FREDERICK LEHMANN, 3 SEPTEMBER 1889

MS: Parrish (Box 5/5), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Davis, p. 303; Baker 2001, p. 510. Published: Robinson 1951, p. 322; B&C, II, p. 566.

3 Sept 1889

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.<sup>2</sup>

My dear Fred,

A word to report myself to you with my own hand. I am unable to receive Martin today,<sup>3</sup> for the reason that I have fallen asleep – and the doctor forbids the waking of me. Sleep is my cure he says – and he is really hopeful of me. Don't notice the blots<sup>4</sup> – my dressing-gown sleeve is too large – but my hand is still steady. Goodbye for the present dear old friend – we may really hope for healthier days.

My grateful love | to the best and | dearest of Padronas.
Yours ever affly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to 'Frederick Lehmann Esqre | 15 Berkeley Square | W.' and postmarked 'LONDON W | 4 | SP 3 | 89 | 9', with the signature 'Wilkie Collins' encircled in the bottom left corner.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. The Lehmanns' servant – see [2671] to Lehmann of 19 January 1887.

4. The first page of the letter is indeed heavily smudged.

[2971] TO SEBASTIAN SCHLESINGER, 7 SEPTEMBER 1889

MS: Houghton (fMS Am 1363 v.1/97), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: B&C, II, pp. 566–567.

7th Sept: 1889 | 82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.<sup>2</sup>

My dear Sebastian,

Where are you? How are you? When shall I hear from you again? when shall I see you again? Here is my report declaring myself with my own hand on the way to recovery, after the calamity that fell on me some time since. I am well looked after. Two good nurses[,] the doctor who is curing me – and my two daughters to see it and help.<sup>3</sup> I [del] /want you/ to see my children – why you will easily guess.

Good bye, old friend,<sup>4</sup>
Yours aftly, | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Directed to 'Sebastian Schlesinger Esq | 8. Wilton Place' in WC's hand, with no stamp or postmark, so presumably delivered by the hand of a servant.

2. WC uses printed paper with his monogram.

3. That is, Marian and Harriet.

4. A prophetic close: WC died the morning of Monday 23 September 1889.

[2972] TO F. C. BEARD, 21 SEPTEMBER 1889

MS: Parrish (Box 4/15), in pencil in an extremely feeble hand, with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: Peters, p. 43; B&C, II, p. 567; BGLL, IV, p. 382. Extract: Baker 2001, p. 508. Facsimile: Clarke, p. 185; B&C, II, p. 315; Baker 2001, p. 507.

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.
Sept 21

I am dying old friend<sup>2</sup>
WC

They are driving me mad by forbidding the [hypodermic]<sup>3</sup>

Come for God's sake

I am too wretched to write<sup>4</sup>

---

1. Directed to 'F. Carr B' in WC's hand, with 'Wilkie Collins's last effort' added beneath in another hand.

2. 'Wilkie died at 10 a.m.' on Monday 23 September 1889 (Peters, p. 431; citing Caroline's note in WC's diary). Beard's son, Nathaniel, wrote in 1894: 'Only a few months ago my brother and I lighted upon the last thing he ever wrote: a small fragment of notepaper with the words "I am dying – come if you can," faintly and almost illegibly pencilled on it ... He died an hour or two afterwards ...' (Beard, p. 326). The reference must be to the note here.

3. 'The first letter of this word is clearly "h", the second probably "y". The remainder is indecipherable. WC had been taking hypophosphates (see [2733] to A. P. Watt of 28 June 1887). "Hypodermic" is another possibility, or the powerful sedative hyoscine' (Peters, p. 431 n.). The postscript is written on a separate leaf.

4. WC turns the sheet to landscape format to add this final line across his left-hand margin.

LETTER FRAGMENTS OF UNKNOWN DATE with identified recipients first.

[3197] TO CARRIE BARTLEY, 1878–1889<sup>1</sup>

MS: Lewis Collection. Published: A&C7, p. 45 (as to Carrie Graves).

To | H. E. Bartley | from | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Clearly written after Carrie Graves married Henry Bartley on 12 March 1878.

[3075] TO HENRY GRAY,<sup>1</sup> UNKNOWN DATE<sup>2</sup>

MS: Buffalo HS. Published: A&C3, p. 61.

technically speaking, in a false position.

Affcly yours | Wilkie Collins

Henry Gray Esq

---

1. Presumably Henry Gray (1823–1898), the sixth child of WC's maternal aunt Catherine Esther Geddes (1796–1882). See Whitton, p. 15.

2. A scrap torn from a letter for the signature. It is accompanied by a MS note 'Autograph of Wilkie Collins (author of the "Woman in White" &c) given to me by his cousin H. Gray Esqr – May 10, 1890. E. Henson. London'. Henson remains unidentified.

[3116] TO HENRY GRAY,<sup>1</sup> UNKNOWN DATE<sup>2</sup>

MS: Graham Heath.<sup>2</sup> Extract: A&C4, p. 29. Amended: A&C12 p. 17.

... wisest plan that could have been adopted under the circumstances. If the little assistance I ...<sup>3</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins

Henry Gray Esqre

---

1. Probably Henry Gray (1823–1898), the sixth child of WC's maternal aunt Catherine Esther Geddes (1796–1882). See Whitton, p. 15, and [0696] to Harriet Collins, 8 July 1866.

2. A scrap torn from a letter for the signature. Beneath the four lines in another hand is written 'B. 1825 author' and separately 'Entered (Williams)'.

3. The assistance remains unknown but it is probably related to [3075] to Henry Gray of unknown date. Both may date from the one known meeting of WC and Gray referred to in [0696] to Harriet Collins, 8 July 1866.

[3170] GUY ROSLYN,<sup>1</sup> [1870]-1889<sup>2</sup>

MS: Penn State (Box 1 Folder 179). Published: A&C6, p. 16.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins<sup>2</sup>

Guy Roslyn Esqre

---

1. Identity uncertain. Though the name has not been found in contemporary census records, it appears as an authorial pseudonym on the title pages of a number of works published from the 1870s. These include: Daphnis the Unfaithful: A Poetic Romance (London: Hotten, 1870), where the author is described as 'A Minor'; and George Eliot in

Derbyshire: A Volume of Gossip about Passages and People in the Novels of George Eliot (London: Ward, Lock, and Tyler, 1876), from material originally serialized in London Society, and with an introduction by George Barnett Smith (1841–1909: ODNB). In his ODNB entry on Smith, without offering evidence, the founding editor Colin Matthew claims, ‘As Guy Roslyn he published verse, and George Eliot in Derbyshire (1876)’. However, contemporary sources (including the first volume of Celebrities of the Day, ed. S. E. Thomas (London: Poole, 1881), pp. 255–260, and Men of the Time: A Dictionary of Contemporaries, 11th edition (London: Routledge, 1884), p. 536) agree that ‘Guy Roslyn’ was the nom de plume of Joshua Hatton (1850–1920), poet and journalist, younger brother of the more successful newspaperman and novelist, Joseph Hatton (1841–1907: ODNB). The Hattons hailed from Chesterfield, Derbyshire, while Smith was a native of Ovenden, Yorkshire.

2. Conjectural dating based on the first appearance of the literary pseudonym in question.

3. A scrap cut from the end of a letter for the autograph.

[2973] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Texas (Misc F. Dannay).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 383.

In great haste

With Mr Wilkie Collins’s compliments

(see (inside))

---

1. Written on a leaf of plain paper, neatly torn from what may have been a sheet of folding notepaper, perhaps accompanying an autograph that has been excised. The hand is rushed and difficult to date with any certainty, but perhaps belongs to WC’s middle decades.

[2974] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Wolff Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 383.

... line please by return of post

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Undated fragment, cut roughly from the foot of a letter, with no text on the verso. The style of the hand and signature might suggest a date around WC’s middle decades, the informal tone a note to a close male friend like Charles Ward.

[2976] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 383–384.

Believe me | Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Only the valediction and signature on a rectangle of paper cut neatly from the foot of a letter for the autograph. The hand appears to date from WC’s later decades.

[2978] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 384, amended A&C3 p. 69.

... at all satisfy me. I enclose a portrait of a member of your firm which I met with accidentally
– ....

Pray forgive a very hasty letter, written to catch the mail, and believe me (in the pleasant expectation of soon seeing you), truly yours

Wilkie Collins

---

1. A rectangle cut neatly from the foot of the page. On the recto five lines of text, beginning and ending in the middle of a sentence. On the verso only the closing lines, valediction, and signature. The content suggests a letter to a colleague in North America and the hand appears to date from WC's later decades.

[2980] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Parrish (Box 4/11).<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 384.

old ballads pamphlets and things of that sort. Don't trouble yourself about it. I only write in case you might know of the right man to apply to.

Yours ever | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Fragment of letter beginning in the middle of a sentence. Half of the notepaper has been torn away, leaving only the final page of what may have been originally a three-page letter. The valediction suggests a letter to an old friend, and the hand appears to date from WC's later decades.

[2981] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: BGLL, IV, p. 385; Lewis website.

...shall be sent to you as soon as they are set up.

Yours truly | Wilkie Collins

---

1. A fragment cut from a letter for the autograph and heavily mounted, with traces of a watermark visible. The body text – occupying four lines with nothing on the verso, thus suggesting an original letter of either a single page or three pages – probably refers to page proofs, and may concern advance sheets for an overseas publisher such as Harpers's in New York or Hunter, Rose in Toronto. The hand and the signature also suggest a dating from WC's later decades.

[3016] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C2, p. 68, with the MS then in an album of autographs, location unknown.

... interest,

and believe me | Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Apparently cut unevenly from the end of a letter for the autograph. Judging by the hand and signature, this is likely to date from WC's later decades.

[3076] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Unknown. On sale: Christie's, 5 June 2007.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C3, p. 61.

and believe me | very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Undated fragment torn from the foot of a letter for the signature; the hand suggests WC's later decades.

[3171] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Yale (Gimbel H1299). Published: A&C6, p. 16.

Summary: “COLLINS, WILKIE.... A. Sig. to an unknown correspondent. This signature apparently was cut from a letter.”<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Thus in John B. Podeschi, Dickens and Dickensiana. A Catalogue of the Richard Gimbel Collection, (New Haven, CT: Yale University Library, 1980), p. 484. Yale Library could not locate this item in March 2010.

[3199] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (280584787306), November 2010.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C7, p. 45.

Believe me faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Undated fragment from the foot of a letter for the signature. Set beneath WC's monogram, both stuck independently to a pictorial card for display purposes.

[3232] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay (2011).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C8, p. 22.

your obedient servant | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Apparently cut from a letter. Mounted with [3208] to Unidentified Recipient, 27 November 1866.

[3304] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C10, p. 20.

... accept my best thanks, and believe me,
vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Apparently cut from the end of a letter.

[3305] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C10, p. 21.

... of being ...

... you in the exercise of your art. Let me...
always truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. On two sides of a fragment cut from the end of a letter

[3307] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C10, p. 21.

... months past. But, even in the face of illness, I am an obstinate man – and I don't yet give up the hope of improving an acquaintance which I remember with sincere pleasure.

Believe me | Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. The final leaf torn from a three-page letter.

[3308] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C10, p. 21.

Very truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Possibly the end of a letter, though it is very neat and could be simply a signature for an autograph hunter.

[3309] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C10, p. 22.

With Mr Wilkie Collins's Compliments

---

1. On a small piece of white paper. Distinct from [3310].

[3310] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Unknown. On sale: eBay, 4 April 2015, #261827255053.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C10, p. 22.

With Mr Wilkie Collins's Compliments

---

1. On a small piece of yellow paper. Distinct from [3309].

[3372] TO UNIDENTIFIED CORRESPONDENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C13, p. 12.

Wilkie Collins

---

1. A small piece of paper apparently cut from a note or a letter. There is a curved line above the signature, while three letters above it form part of a word the middle letter of which seems to be 'a'. Pasted onto the front free endpaper of Vol. III of a first edition of No Name. See also [3354] and [3355] above.

[3373] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C13, p. 12.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins

---

1. Apparently cut from a letter. Pasted onto an album page which also contains a signature of Edmund Yates cut from a letter and a signed note from Walter Besant addressed to 'My dear young lady' which is dated 14 October 1884.

[3404] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Unknown. Sold: darvickautographs (eBay, 14 August 2021, #124829723563). Published: A&C14, p. 27.

Vy truly yours | Wilkie Collins<sup>1</sup>

---

1. A cut signature possibly for a collector. In another hand an elaborate small 'H' top left and between the two lines the number 'I-101'.

[3405] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Private. Published: A&C14, p. 27.

Wilkie Collins | 90. Gloucester | Place | Portman Square | London<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Written on a small piece of ribbed paper with no other marks or context. Found with a letter from Robert du Pontavice de Heussey but possibly not associated with it.

[3406] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection (L2993). Published: A&C14, p. 28.

Wilkie Collins<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Signature only cut from the end of a letter with a hint of the tail of a 'y' above the 'k'. In another hand below it the word 'Author' in an oval.

[3407] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Lewis Collection (L2984). Published: A&C14, p. 28.

yourself [over] [others]
– and devote yourself as much as you can to your work.<sup>1</sup>

Ever yours | Wilkie Collins<sup>2</sup>

---

1. Text from the verso of the scrap which has been cut from the end of a letter and is glued to a heavy piece of paper.
2. The cut end of the letter. 'Ever yours' was a valediction WC mainly used to close friends and relatives.

[3408] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Unknown. Sold: stagememories (eBay, 15 March 2022). Published: A&C14, p. 28.

Faithfully yours | Wilkie Collins<sup>1</sup>

---

1. A signature apparently cut from the end of a letter stuck to an album page with five others.

[3409] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

MS: Unknown. On sale: Paul Fraser Collectibles (SKU: PT1273, November 2021). Published: A&C14, p. 28.

Wilkie Collins<sup>1</sup>

---

1. Signature cut from the lower left of a blue envelope, with the trace of possibly an 'M' upper right, typical of the style WC used when sending copy to publishers. Vendor says it was purchased in the early 1990s from the collection of Bristol autograph collector Stanley Waits.

END OF SEQUENCE OF LETTERS

A series of letters between those around WC when he could not speak for himself, from the onset of his final illness until a few weeks after his death.

[X001] CARRIE BARTLEY TO A.P. WATT, 30 JUNE 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 387.

82. WIMPOLE STREET | W. | Sunday June 30. 1889 | 5.30 p. m.

Private

Dear Mr Watt

I have sad news to give you – which I am sure will grieve you. Our dear Wilkie was taken very seriously ill this morning about 10. o'clock – the whole of his dear left side is paralysed. My mother sent for me at once – and as soon as we have been able to collect ourselves I thought I would write to you. At present, his work seems to be well completed up to next October – I am now copying the 18th Weekly Part.<sup>1</sup> Mr Beard is now here – and he thinks the muscles are relaxing a little – but oh we are in such sad grief. He is light headed at times – and does not know how ill he is.<sup>2</sup>

If there is anything I can do about the writing you will communicate it; I shall not part with any writing I have in my safe keeping, except to you.

My own address is – | 61. Finchley Road.

If – which God grant! – that dear good man rallies – how happy shall we all be!

Yours faithfully | The Amanuensis | (Mrs Henry Bartley)

Alexander P. Watt Esq<sup>re</sup>

---

1. Of Blind Love as published in the Illustrated London News.

2. The next day Carrie wrote to Hall Caine: 'Mr Beard remained with him at night – and his condition is very sad – but we hope he is not in pain. He is conscious at intervals, but the oppression on his chest seems suffocating.' (cited in Clarke, p. 184).

[X013] * CARRIE BARTLEY TO HALL CAINE, 1 JULY 1889

MS: Berg (Z-10342).<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C12 pp. 9-10.

Private

82, WIMPOLE STREET. | W.

July 1st 1889

Dear sir

I grieve to tell you that dear Mr Wilkie Collins is suffering from severe illness. Yesterday – about 10. o'clock a.m. he had a bad attack of pain in the heart, and paralysis of the left side. Mr Beard remained with him all night – and his condition is very sad – but we hope he is not in pain. He is conscious at intervals – but the oppression on his chest seems suffocating.

I take upon myself, with the doctor's permission, as dear Wilkie's adopted daughter and amanuensis to open his letters. I thought it best not to telegraph under the circumstances.<sup>2</sup>

I am, | Yours faithfully | H. E. Bartley | (Mrs H.B)

---

1. With an envelope marked 'Immediate' directed to 'W. Hall Caine Esq<sup>re</sup> | The London Library | S. James's Square | S.W.' postmarked 1 July 89 and with the signature of WC surrounded by two lines squaring off a box at the bottom left of the envelope.

2. Presumably to prevent news of his illness from leaking out via the telegraph office.

[X002] CARRIE BARTLEY TO FRANK ARCHER, 11 JULY 1889

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 321; BGLL, IV, p. 388.
Published: A&C7, p. 35.

82. Wimpole Street | Cavendish Square | July 11. 1889

Dear Mr Archer

I am truly sorry to have to give a very bad account of dear Wilkie. We are terribly anxious. Dr Fenwick comes to consult with Mr Beard again to-day. On Sunday week he was attacked by paralysis – and his brain is now what we fear for. He knows all of us, but he cannot command his wonderful imagination. We are so miserable! My mother and a Nurse alone let him see them, though I am down here to answer his letters and write to his friends and wait upon the sick room. (I am his adopted daughter and Amanuensis – Mrs Graves’s married daughter.) He had a restless night and is weaker. Mr Beard says the Paralysis left his heart more affected by it than ~~he~~ we thought.

I will send you a line in a day or two. Our dear one has so many kind friends it is a hard task to keep them posted in news.

Believe me | Yours faithfully | H. E. Bartley

---

1. Directed in HEB’s hand to ‘Frank Archer Esq<sup>re</sup> | The Lower Farm | Hambledon | Nr. Godalming. | Surrey’, postmarked recto ‘LONDON W | 7 | JY 12 | 89’ and verso ‘GODALMING | B | JY 12 | 89’, with ‘Mrs Bartley 34’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

[X003] CARRIE BARTLEY TO FRANK ARCHER, 13 JULY 1889

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Extract: Robinson 1951, p. 321; BGLL, IV, p. 388.
Published: A&C7, p. 35.

July 13. 1889

The dear patient is weaker – because he gets no sleep at nights. But he has taken a little nourishment – and so we keep on hoping.

H.E.B.

---

1. A postcard directed in HEB’s hand to ‘Frank Archer Esq<sup>re</sup> | The Lower Farm | Hambledon | Nr. Godalming. | Surrey’, with ‘Mrs Bartley 34’ in another hand in pencil on the recto.

[X004] CARRIE BARTLEY TO A.P. WATT, 5 AUGUST 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 388.

82. Wimpole Street | Cavendish Square | Aug: 5 1889

Dear Mr Watt

If it would be quite convenient, I should like you to call at my house 61. Finchley Road tomorrow evening on matters of business. Mr Collins has rallied again today very satisfactorily, but I stayed here until 12 last night and the doctor, for we feared every moment would be his last. It was a most heartrending day – he took no nourishment or anything for 26 hours.

Believe me | Yours sincerely | H.E. Bartley

[X005] FRANCIS CARR BEARD TO A.P. WATT, 17 AUGUST 1889

MS: UNC (A.P. Watt Archive, Folder 6.3.). Published: BGLL, IV, p. 388–389.

44, Welbeck Street, | Cavendish Square, | W. | August 17/89.

Dear Mr Watt

With regard to the condition of Mr Wilkie Collins. It is with much regret I inform you that he is absolutely incapable of finishing the present number of his work within the next three or four weeks.<sup>1</sup>

Very faithfully yours | F Carr Beard FRCS

---

1. The nineteenth serial installment of Blind Love, scheduled to appear in the Illustrated London News on 9 November 1889. WC had completed the story as far as ch. 48, the second of the three that would form that installment.

[X006] CARRIE BARTLEY TO A.S. WATT, 18 AUGUST 1889

MS: Pembroke. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 389.

Martwell's Hotel | Brighton | 18. Aug: 1889

Dear Mr Watt

It would be a good idea, would it not, for someone to make a copy of the Notes in the Black Book,<sup>1</sup> so that it could be restored to Mr Collins's basket and so save him worry if he missed it. Of course, someone on whom you could rely. It would not take long. I made the first copy from which this book is copied – but unfortunately it was not preserved. What do you think? Is my plan possible?

Hoping you keep well in hot London this glorious day.

Believe me | Yours most sincerely | H.E. Bartley

---

1. The synopsis of Blind Love, now held at Texas – see Bachman & Cox, pp. 44–45 & 430–436. A.S. Watt had written to Carrie on the previous day asking for the notebook for the writer taking over the composition of the story: 'My Father proposes that I should ask Mr Besant to do it. You know Mr Hall Caine is in Iceland and therefore out of the Question.'. On 19 August Watt wrote in response to Carrie's note: 'I called yesterday at Wimpole Street and saw Mr Collins himself. He gave me the black book and also full directions as to the continuance of the story. I think your plan is a good one, in case the Book should be lost in any way. And I had already begun to copy it myself.' (Watt Letter-books, Berg).

[X012] CARRIE BARTLEY TO FRANK ARCHER, 24 SEPTEMBER 1889

MS: Lewis Collection (Archer Archive), with envelope.<sup>1</sup> Published: A&C7, p. 36.

61. Finchley Road | S. John's Wood | Sep: 24. 1889

Dear Mr Archer

My news is so sad. I could'nt write to you before it has all been so miserable. Our dear has left us – at 10.35 yesterday morning. We are so sad. He died so peacefully & so quietly – and his face is beautiful with such a calm expression. Poor dear Wilkie. – We bury him on Friday next at Kensal Green at noon.<sup>2</sup>

Please excuse my short note – and thanking you for your kind letter – (which I read to him – when I received it).

I am | Yours faithfully | H. E. Bartley

---

1. Directed in HEB's hand to 'Frank Archer Esq<sup>re</sup> | The Lower Farm | Hambledon | Nr. Godalming. | Surrey', postmarked recto, 'LONDON N.W. | 3 | 24 | 89' and verso, 'GODALMING | D | SP 24 | 89', with 'Mrs Bartley 36 & last' in another hand in pencil on the recto.

2. Archer notes in his diary on 23 September, 'Heard this evening of poor Wilkie Collins's death which took place this morning', and on 27 September, 'Wilkie Collins buried today K. Green.'. Archer kept a collection of press cuttings relating to WC including two obituaries (Daily News and Daily Telegraph, 24 September 1889), a paragraph about his death being reported in France (Daily Telegraph, 26 September 1889), two accounts of his funeral (Daily News and Daily Telegraph, 28 September 1889), reports of the attempt to get a memorial at St Paul's Cathedral (Daily Telegraph, 4 and 5 October 1889) and on probate of his will (Daily Telegraph, 26 October 1889). All these items are found in the Archer Archive.

[X007] HENRY POWELL BARTLEY TO A.P. WATT, 24 SEPTEMBER 1889

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 389–390.

Henry P. Bartley | *Solicitors
30 Somerset Street. | Portman Square. | London W. | 24 Sept 1889

My dear Sir,

Of the sad news that M<sup>r</sup> Wilkie Collins is no more you are already acquainted.

M<sup>r</sup> Beard last evening mentioned to me that you were desirous of knowing how to deal with the money in your hands received on account of “Blind Love”. If you will send me your cheque, on behalf of the executors of whom I am one, and as Solicitor to the Estate, a proper discharge shall be sent you.

There are many matters connected with my dear friends literary possessions with reference to which your valuable assistance will be gratefully received, and I may incidentally mention that in a memorandum the deceased expresses a wish that you will kindly act as his literary executor.<sup>1</sup>

The funeral is to take place at Kensal Green at noon on Friday leaving Wimpole Street shortly after 11. A formal invitation will be sent to you.

I am, Dear Sir | Faithfully yours | Henry Powell Bartley

A. P. Watt

---

1. See [2664] to Watt of 1 January 1887.

[X008] GEORGE REDFORD<sup>1</sup> TO CARRIE BARTLEY, 25 SEPTEMBER 1889

MS: Parrish. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 390–391.

Cricklewood N.W. | September 25, 1889

Dear Mrs. Bartley,

I was pleased to hear from you though it was such a grief to lose our dear old Wilkie. I wrote to your mother before I knew of his death, having heard that he was not so well.

I am so grateful to think that I saw him and had such a delightful (though touched with sadness) chat with him one evening when I called . . . . . I thought then he would pull through, he was so strong, and intellectually quite himself as far as [it] went. He said as he grasped my hand with all his old warmth “you see, I’m all right – feel my arms” – but I had hard work to hide my eyes lest he should see what I really dreaded. Then he said in the most cheery tones let’s have a cigar – a small one – and Caroline brought the box and we each took one and she lighted them, and so enjoyed this last of smokes together! And long as I live shall I remember with joy and gratitude that last parting – so genial – so like his generous own nature – now as I recall it the tears drop from my eyes. I fancy this was a privilege that few had besides me, and I’m sure to none was it happier or more valued. Well – now we must be content with our memories – so it must be with the dearest some time – Alas!

If I’m well I shall go to stand around his grave. I don’t write to her – for one should be alone in those hours of grief and mourning but I will ere long and sometime speak to her<sup>2</sup> of [indecipherable words]

Sincerely, | George Redford

P.S. Do you know that when you were a little girl, I witnessed his signing his will.<sup>3</sup>

---

1. George Redford (1816–1895) – see [0549] to him August 1863.

2. Carrie’s mother, Caroline Graves.

3. See [0922] to William F. Tindell of 5 November 1869.

[X009] WALTER BESANT TO ANDREW CHATTO, 2 OCTOBER 1889

MS: Wolff Collection (1348a). Published: Wolff, p. 257; BGLL, IV, p. 391.

12 Cayton Crescent, Hampstead | Oct 2, 1889

My dear Chatto

I have written to Mr Quilter. Are you going to publish 'Blind Love'? If so I want to write a preface stating my share in the book. I hoped to keep this a secret but I saw it stated in the World yesterday that I had finished it & in justice to Wilkie Collins & myself too I should like to give the real facts of the case.<sup>1</sup>

Very sincerely yours | Walter Besant

---

1. See the paragraph on Blind Love signed by 'Atlas' in the World, 2 October 1889. A preface by Besant, explaining his part in the composition of the novel, duly appeared in the first and subsequent editions issue by Chatto & Windus and some US editions.

[X010] CARRIE BARTLEY TO HORACE NOBLE PYM, 4 OCTOBER 1889

MS: Private. Published: BGLL, IV, pp. 391–392.

82. Wimpole Street | Cavendish Square | W. | October 4. 1889

Sir

I beg to enclose you the Notes which you kindly sent to dear Mr Wilkie Collins as Miss Hogarth thought you would like them.<sup>1</sup> So I forward them in the envelope just as they were left, and I feel sure the notes in such precious handwriting will have special value.<sup>2</sup> I may add that the story which Mr Collins wrote on your Notes, is now running in the Illustrated London News.

I am, sir | Faithfully yours – | H.E. Bartley. (Mrs)
(Mr Wilkie Collins' adopted daughter and Amanuensis.)

---

1. The notes prepared in late 1887 for WC by Horace Pym concerning the Von Scheurer insurance fraud, which were used in the construction of Blind Love. See the facsimile in Gasson (p. 127) and the transcript in Bachman & Cox, pp. 417–22. See also [2783] to Nina Lehman of 28 November 1887 and [2785] to Pym of 5 December 1887.

2. Referring to WC's annotation on the envelope in question: 'The Facts relating to the Insurance Fraud Case, written for me by Mr Pym. – W.C.'

[X011] CARRIE BARTLEY TO A.P. WATT, 4 OCTOBER 1889

MS: Berg. Published: BGLL, IV, p. 392–393.

61. Finchley Road | N. W. | October 4. 1889

Dear Mr Watt

Enclosed I send you a list of the Mss as far as I have found any.<sup>1</sup> I have quoted dear Wilkie's written wishes as to the unpublished short stories.<sup>2</sup> I have for you a volume which I have selected with difficulty as he wished certain friends to have "a volume" in remembrance of him. I find a book with notes in his own hand & I have selected it for you, feeling you would value it more on that account. You will understand I have had a difficulty, as there are so few single volume books of any special merit in all his library. I trust you may find it interesting notwithstanding. I send it with my note.

Mr Hall Caine appears to be inclined to again advertise himself at our beloved Wilkie's expense. Have you seen the Globe of tonight?<sup>3</sup> I have taken the liberty of writing to him to correct a few mistakes. How much Wilkie would have disliked such newspaper notoriety! I like too the infantile manner in which Mr H Caine "forgets who introduced him to Mr Collins!" Small man & small mind but an immense SELF! I feel so much inclined to tell him Wilkie's cruel qualification as to his capabilities of finishing the book. "Hall Caine is the only man who could attempt it – he knows my method of working – but I don't believe could do it only you see my name would pull him through.” I hear he was paid £20 for tonight’s work. A very practical illustration of the use of a good friend like Wilkie – to make money by him! Mr Hall Caine and I are antipathetic!

Forgive my long letter, | and Believe me | Yours faithfully | H.E. Bartley<sup>4</sup>

---

1. WC’s remaining literary manuscripts which Watt eventually prepared for sale by auction at Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge on 18 June 1890, where they fetched over £1300.

2. Also found in the Berg collection is a note in WC’s hand dated January 1887, concerning ‘The Devil’s Spectacles’, ‘Love’s Random Shot’ and ‘Fie! Fie! Or, the Fair Physician’: ‘These stories have served their purpose in periodicals, but are not worthy of republication in book form. They were written in a hurry, and the sooner they are drowned in the waters of oblivion the better. I desire that they shall not be republished after my death.’ All of these had been excluded from Little Novels, published in March 1887, and were first reprinted in Thompson.

3. Caine’s unreliable ‘Personal Recollections’ of WC in the London evening paper were repeated in his autobiography (Caine, pp. 327–343).

4. A number of later letters from Carrie to Watt have survived. Two, of 24 January 1890 and 18 February 1892, record her thanks for mementoes of WC. Others from the turn of the century – 21 December 1898, and 8 and 11 July 1901 – chart the decline of her fortunes after her husband had wasted her legacy and abandoned her before his death in 1897. (The 1898 letter is found among the Watt papers at the Berg; the others are in private hands).

DELETED LETTERS

From time to time it becomes clear that two letters in the database are identical or that one letter which has been listed separately in fact forms part of another. These eleven letters are deleted from the database and are listed here for reference purposes.

[0100] TO [J. T. MARSH], [14 DECEMBER] 1851

Originally published: BGLL, I, pp. 53–54 as a P.S.

It is now combined with [0099] to J. T. Marsh, [13 December] 1851

Deleted in digital project.

[0229] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 1855

Originally published: BGLL, I, p. 133.

It has now been combined with [0105], to Newton Crosland.

Deleted: A&C3, p. 62.

[2975] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

Originally published: BGLL, IV, p. 383.

It has been combined with [2244] to Unidentified Recipient, [1861–83]

Deleted A&C3, p. 69.

[2977] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

Originally published: BGLL, IV, p. 384.

It has been combined with [1195] to Unidentified Recipient, [January 1872].

Deleted A&C3, p. 65.

[2979] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

Originally published: BGLL, IV, p. 384.

It has been COMBINED WITH [2978] to Unidentified Recipient, Unknown Date.

Deleted A&C3, p. 69.

[3097] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, [EARLY APRIL] 1872

Originally published: A&C4, p. 19 as an extract found in the Chicago Tribune.

The extract is part of [1203] to C.S Carter, 27 February 1872 which was originally published in B&C, II, pp. 351–352.

Deleted A&C8, p. 25.

[3184] TO WYBERT REEVE, OCTOBER 1878

Originally published: A&C7, p. 42.

The extract has been identified as a garbled vesion of [3042] to Wybert Reeve, published in A&C3, p. 48.

Deleted in digital project.

[3198] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, UNKNOWN DATE

Originally published: A&C7, p. 45.

It has now been identified as a duplicate entry for [3016] to Unidentified Recipient, Unknown Date, published in A&C2, p. 68.

Deleted in digital project.

[3223] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 1 JUNE 1882

Originally published: A&C8, p. 17.

This entry has now been identified as a duplicate entry for [3186] to Unidentified Recipient, 1 June 1882, published in A&C7, p. 43 (wrongly numbered there [3187]).
Deleted: A&C14, p. 33.

[3294] TO UNIDENTIFIED RECIPIENT, 18 AUGUST 1877

Originally published: A&C10, p. 14.

It has now been identified as a duplicate entry for [3253] to Unidentified Recipient, 18 August 1877, published in A&C9, p. 31.

Deleted: A&C11, p. 21.

[3306] TO CARRIE BARTLEY, 1878–1889<sup>1</sup>

Originally published: A&C10, p. 21 (as of Unknown Date).

This entry has now been identified as a duplicate entry for [3197] to Carrie Bartley, published in A&C7, p. 45.

Deleted: A&C14, p. 33.